Conference attempts to end war in Cambodia

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Nearly 20 nations, including the United States and Soviet Union, begin an international conference Sunday aimed at ending a conflict in Cambodia that the warring factions appear unable to resolve.

After three days of meetings to prepare for the conference, the four Cambodian factions agreed only on seating arrangements for their representatives and on the quality of a catered lunch.

Left for the international conference to tackle are the monitoring of Vietnam's military pullout from Cambodia; the shape of an interim Cambodian government; and the future role of the Khmer Rouge, ousted from power after the Vietnamese invasion in 1978.

On the eve of the meeting, Secretary of State James A. Baker III ruled out participation of Khmer Rouge leaders in any future government.

As the delegates confer, the clock will be running in Indochina. Vietnam has reiterated that no matter what happens in Paris, it will withdraw its remaining forces by the end of September.

This would leave the pro-Hanoi government in Cambodia facing alone the Khmer Rouge and two non-communist allies on the battlefields.

Those optimistic about peace point to two years of lower level talks and note a softening of positions by the Soviet Union, which backs Vietnam and Cambodia, and by China, the chief arms supplier to the Cambodian guerrillas.

Pessimists say outside powers, pressing to end the war, may merely paper over differences and that the killing will continue.

After prolonged wrangling, the four Cambodian factions agreed last week that Cambodia will be listed as a single entity at the conference but with four sub-delegations seated at the table. Sharp disagreement persisted on virtually every other issue.

"It's like a car that reaches the edge of an abyss and cannot continue its journey," said Prime Minister Hun Sen of Cambodia one day last week.

The previous day, resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk said he and Hun Sen had agreed on nothing except the excellence of the catered Cambodian lunch.

Hun Sen rejects the idea of Khmer Rouge participation in any interim government, saying it would try to grab power and launch another reign of terror. The communist ultras killed hundreds of thousands of Cambodians in a radical revolution before being ousted.

Sihanouk is in uneasy alliance with the Khmer Rouge guerrillas, describing them as "monsters" but maintaining that excluding them from an interim government would increase chances for more fighting.

A U.S. policy paper for the conference said Washington would continue to support Sihanouk as the transition leader if he believed Khmer Rouge "elements, not leaders" should have an interim role.

Sihanouk and his allies favor a strong United Nations presence to monitor the Vietnamese withdrawal, the disarming of the warring sides and the supervision of general elections. Hun Sen and Vietnam oppose major U.N. participation unless the Cambodian seat in the United Nations, now held by Sihanouk's coalition, is vacated.

Hun Sen and his Vietnamese backers separate the internal and international aspects of the Cambodian problem and say each can be dealt with separately. Sihanouk and his supporters, including non-Communist Southeast Asia and the United States, want a comprehensive solution.

"I don't see prospects for an accord between Sihanouk and Hun Sen in Paris," said Southeast Asia expert Michael Leifer of Britain recently. "I've come to the dismal conclusion that some kind of civil war is inevitable."

A number of other western Cambodia scholars who met recently in Thailand concurred, noting the increasingly confident Cambodian government has yet to test its military mettle against the guerrillas.

There will be 20 delegations. One will represent the U.N. secretary-general.

Cambodia and 17 other nations account for the remaining delegations. In addition to the United States and Soviet Union, other nations attending are China, Japan, Vietnam, Britain, India, Thailand, Australia, Brunei, Canada, Laos, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore, and co-hosts France and Indonesia.

Friday night competition tough in White Deer Rodeo events

By SONNY BOHANAN
Staff Writer

WHITE DEER — Thursday's cowboys and cowgirls proved tough to beat on Friday as only two new leaders emerged during the second night of the 30th Annual White Deer Amateur Rodeo.

Stephen Batton of Mobeetie and Rick Furnish of Guymon, Okla., moved into first place in their respective events with one performance remaining in the three-day competition.

Batton roped and tied his calf in 12.91 seconds Friday to take over the top spot, formerly held by Perryton's Kyle Dudley. Dudley plunged to third place in calf roping when his 13.87-second finish was again bested by Shawn Uselding of Canyon, who posted a time of 13.53.

The 66 marker posted by Thursday's saddle bronc leader, Shawn Wright of Canadian, couldn't stand up to Friday's bronc riders, and Wright slipped to third place. Furnish spurred his way to the forefront with a score of 76, while Justin Lane of Stratford held on tight for a 69-point, second-place ride.

Friday was an off-balance night for the bareback broncs. Two of the horses fell to the arena floor, and one of them, ridden by Justin Swires of Lefors, broke its front leg. Swires came back to post a 68 during a ride for a share of fourth place.

But none of the bareback riders challenged Kenny Smith of Portales, who is still the man to beat after his 81-point effort Thursday. Carr Vincent of Amarillo scored 73 points atop Jack on Friday to catapult into the runner-up spot.

"It didn't feel like the horse kicked very hard," Vincent said. "One judge gave me a 20 and the horse a 17, and the other judge gave me a 19 and the horse a 17."

Since the judges score both the stock and the rider, the cowboy is at the mercy of the draw. Bull rider Kelly Wright of Canadian drew a runner, Yellow Fever, on Friday and salvaged a score of 70 out of the ride.

"He started out fine," said Wright, who is tied for fifth place, "but then when he went to the fence, he made a beeline for the other end of the arena."

Brent Herbsalshimer of Fritch paced Friday's bull riders with a 71, although it left him in only fourth place. Spearman's Jason Harris still leads that event with a 78.

Two new team roping pairs took over second and third places on Friday. Frank Bridwell and Butch Nicholson finished in 9.09 seconds, while Mark Stamps and Danny Glasgow of White Deer clocked in at 12.03.

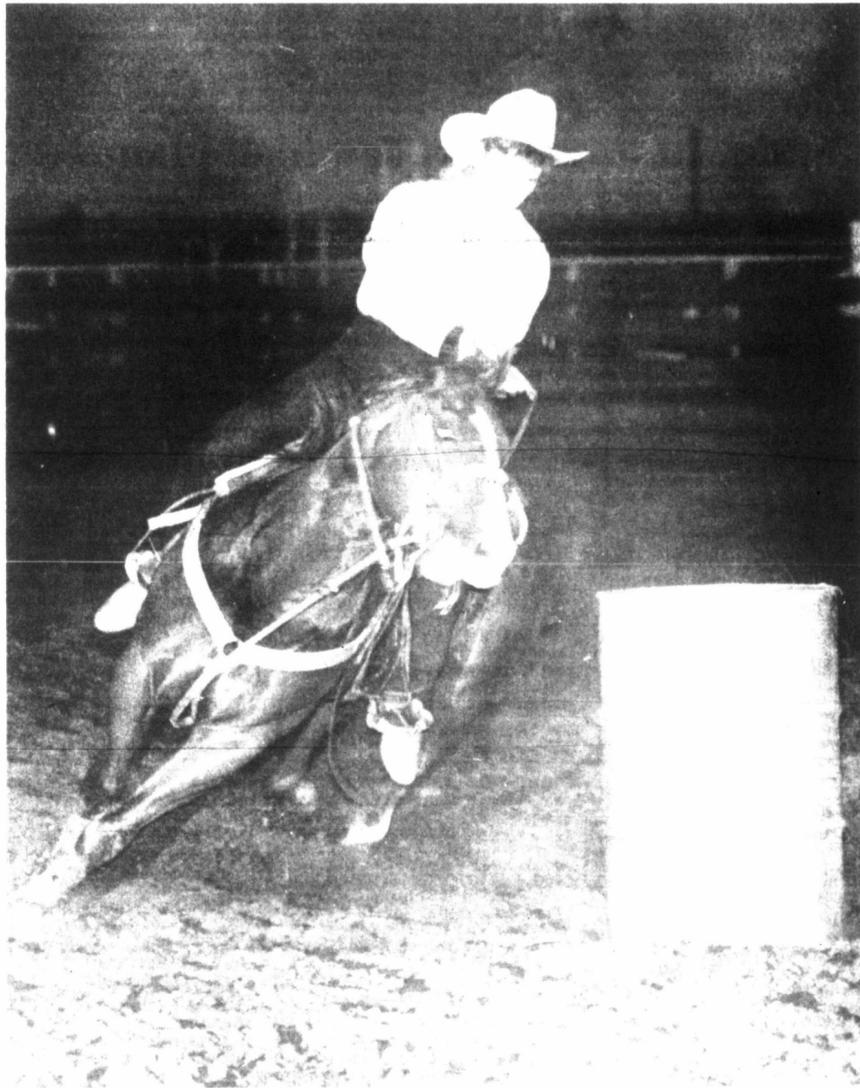

Friday's barrel racers were without the benefit of automatic timing, and their times were on the average a second slower than Thursday's contestants. Kimberly Cloud of Elk City, Okla., who covered the clover-leaf course in 17.984, was the only rider to break 18 seconds Friday.

Saturday's performance was still under way at press time. Final results will appear in Monday's edition of The Pampa News. Following is a list of the top finishers after two nights of competition.

Barebacks: 1. Kenny Smith, Portales, 81 points; 2. Carr Vincent, Amarillo, 73; 3. Bobby Adcock, Canadian, 72; 4. (three-way tie) Justin Swires, Lefors; Shawn Wright, Canadian, and Jimmy Cleveland, Hollis, Okla., 68.

Calf Roping: 1. Stephen Batton, Mobeetie, 12.91 seconds; 2. Shawn Uselding, Canyon, 13.53; 3. Kyle Dudley, Perryton, 13.87; 4. Jerry Fulgham, Clovis, N.M., 14.62.

Firefighters battling more wildfires in three Western states

By GEORGE GARTIES
Associated Press Writer

Wildfires forced 1,000 people from their homes the Sierra Nevada foothills of California Saturday, and in Idaho, the National Guard was alerted to prepare to join the battle against dozens of timber blazes.

In all, more than 34,300 acres of brush, grass and timber were scorched by a flurry of wildfires being battled by 7,200 firefighters in three Western states.

In California, about 1,000 people, including 150 nursing home patients, were kept from their homes Saturday by a wildfire that consumed 3,000 acres of grass and brush above Fresno on the edge of the Sierra National Forest. Five structures were destroyed Friday.

Efforts of 1,500 firefighters to contain the blaze were hampered by temperatures expected to top 100 degrees and by rising wind that threatened to spread the flames, said Lt. Bob McDonald of the Fresno County Sheriff's Department.

The fire was started Friday by man or machinery, he said.

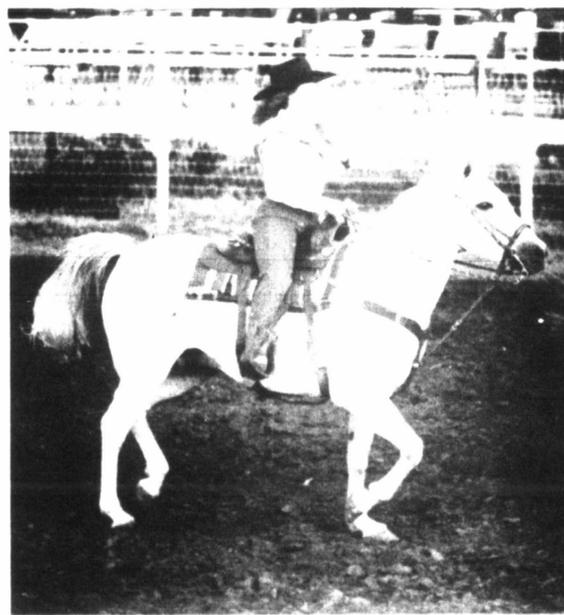

"At night we have down-canyon winds, and in daylight up-canyon winds, so a fire can start turning up on you," said Larry Blow, a California Department of Forestry spokesman.

A line of bare earth was cut around 40 percent of the fire by midday Saturday, and more than a dozen aircraft dumped water and fire-retardant chemicals on the blaze.

People were evacuated from the New Auberry, Meadow Lakes, Alder Springs, Bald Mountain and Jose Basin, said California Department of Forestry spokesman Dave Akers.

In Idaho, dozens of small blazes touched off by lightning earlier in the week were joining into huge forest fires Saturday.

More than 3,000 firefighters joined the battle, and Gov. Cecil Andrus declared an emergency, putting the National Guard on notice that troops could be called in to help.

Jennifer Germany, the 1989 Miss White Deer Rodeo, parades around the arena during Friday's Grand Entry.

Top priority was given to the 1,800-acre Fleming Creek blaze that was threatening commercial stands of timber and spewing smoke visible 50 miles to the south in Boise.

In the Boise National Forest, three separate groups of fires were burning, including one east of Cascade that posed an erosion threat to salmon spawning beds on the South Fork of the Salmon River.

Fires also were burning in the Payette National Forest, the Nez Perce National Forest and the Challis National Forest, and on federal land in southwestern Idaho.

In eastern Oregon, five forest fires, most of them set by lightning earlier in the week, raged out of control Saturday, burning about 5,500 acres. About 1,500 firefighters were on the lines.

The biggest — a cluster of four blazes being fought as one — burned through 2,500 acres of potentially valuable timber east of the town of John Day. Warm temperatures and winds up to 35 mph hampered the firefighting effort, said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Tim Kimble.

"We're just having to back off," Kimble said.

Other Oregon fires were on Dooley Mountain south of Baker, at Koontz creek south of Baker, near the Anthony Lakes ski area northwest of Baker and one near the boundary of the Eagle Cap Wilderness south of Enterprise.

In California, in addition to the blaze near Fresno, a fire that threatened homes in the rural central California community of Atascadero was 80 percent contained Saturday after burning 10,500 acres of brush.

In the Los Angeles suburb of Walnut, a brush fire that forced evacuation of 800 students from California State Polytechnic Institute at Pomona was contained Friday night by about 200 firefighters, said Rafael Ortiz of the Los Angeles County Fire Department.

One firefighter suffered second-degree burns battling the blaze, he said.

Governors focus on transportation

CHICAGO (AP) — The nation's governors opened their annual conference Saturday with a call for more investment in transportation and a complaint that the federal government is hoarding money that should be spent on highways and airports.

"Unfortunately, when it comes to transportation, America is often stuck in neutral," said Virginia's Democratic Gov. Gerald Baliles, chairman of the National Governors' Association.

President Bush planned to arrive Monday to address the governors.

The governors' association sought to steer clear of partisanship during its meeting, which concludes Tuesday, and planned to focus on efforts to improve U.S. performance in the international economy.

The bipartisan association released a report saying improvements in transportation are essential for the nation to become more competitive with foreign industry. It warned that transportation facilities "are deteriorating at a faster rate than they are being repaired or replaced."

The report called for more regional and federal planning, increased use of tolls, developer fees and other user fees, and release of uncommitted balances in federal trust funds for highways, aviation, mass transit and waterways.

At an opening news conference, Baliles and Illinois Republican Gov. James Thompson charged that the Bush administration and the Reagan administration before it have withheld billions of dollars from the states in highway and airport trust funds. They said the amounts sent to the state were restricted to count the reserves in the federal budget and make the federal debt appear smaller.

"Our view is that money represents tax dollars already paid by the people of this country, and they ought to be spent for the purpose for which they were collected, and not used to play games with the size of the budget deficit in Washington," Baliles said.

Baliles said as much as $19 billion was held in the two trust funds from money collected through the federal taxes on gasoline and airplane fares. Charilyn W. Cowan, director of capital resources for the governors' association staff, estimated as much as $13 billion of that amount has accumulated as an uncommitted cash surplus or is being withheld from the states for various technical reasons.

Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner will address the governors Monday, and Thompson said he intended to ask Skinner about the trust funds. Skinner and other Transportation Department officials have told the governors in the past that much of the money is already obligated for future spending on transportation projects.

The report was written by a task force of governors headed by Thompson, the conference host, who recently announced he would not seek a fifth term.

The abortion issue was not on the governors' agenda but was expected to be discussed privately. The meeting is the first bipartisan gathering of governors since the Supreme Court's recent decision permitting states greater leeway in regulating abortions.

At least one group, the National Abortion Rights Action League, which supports a woman's right to have an abortion, said it had obtained a police permit for a small demonstration Sunday.

By prior agreement, Iowa's Republican Gov. Terry Branstad is to become chairman of the governors association at the end of the meeting, succeeding Baliles.

Pre-1940 Wilson School reunion set

Names are still being sought for the Pre-1940 Woodrow Wilson Grade School Reunion to be held at the Pampa elementary school on Saturday, Sept. 16.

The Reunion Association has issued an invitation for all former students, faculty and staff members to attend the reunion beginning at 4 p.m. that Saturday.

The special reunion is being held in conjunction with activities for the new additions to the school building, including classrooms and a library.

The reunion will include a catered barbecue dinner, a short program and time for visitation.

Reservations should be made by Sept. 1 by writing Reunion Association, 800 Lefors, Pampa, TX 79065. More information can be obtained by calling 665-4443, 669-2984 or 669-6094. Registration fee is $6.50.

Reunion Association representative Mary Graham asked people to "call a friend and pass the word" to those who were connected with Wilson School before 1940.

She explained that the school records were burned by accident in the early 1940s, with all records of students and school personnel before 1940 being lost in the fire. The grade school opened in 1929.

Graham said she has been surprised at the number of calls that have already come in from those who attended Wilson in its early years, noting that many are still living in the Pampa area.

But the group wants to try to obtain a complete list as possible, she added, encouraging those who know anyone who attended, taught or worked at Wilson before 1940 to contact the association.

In addition to the reunion activities that Saturday, the school will have an open house for the public on Sunday, Sept. 17, for its new classrooms and library at the building, 801 E. Browning.

Principal Ray Thornton noted that the new library will be the first in the 60-year history of the school that a specific area has been planned and built to be used as a library.

In conjunction with the new library, the Wilson Booster Organization held a Book Fair on the campus with proceeds designated for the purchase of books and support materials for the library.

In addition, the school has developed a "New Books for a New Library" opportunity plan by which interested persons can make a donation to assist in purchasing new books for the library.

Satanism awareness seminar planned

AMARILLO — The Amarillo Republican Women's Club will sponsor a community awareness seminar on "Increased Interest in Satanism in the Panhandle" on Tuesday, Aug. 15, at 7 p.m. in the Tascosa High School auditorium.

The free seminar will feature local satanism expert Wayne Beigle, public information officer for the Amarillo office of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

According to organizers, the program will be aimed at parents and interested adults. Karla Hayes of the Republican Women's Club said high school students may attend only if accompanied by a parent or guardian. No children under high school age will be admitted into the seminar due to the disturbing nature of the material.

Beigle will present case histories and statistical information on how to recognize symptoms of cult involvement, Hayes said.

"In view of the fact that teenage involvement in cult and satanic worship is rapidly on the increase, awareness of this very real problem is crucial," Hayes said. "Parents, teachers, social workers and others involved with our children need to be able to detect the problem and learn how to deal with it."

For more information on the program or directions on how to get to Tascosa High School, contact Hayes at 1-352-1118.

Leaving City Hall

Assistant Fire Chief B.T. Brown, left, shakes hands with Forrest Cloyd, senior engineering technician with the city of Pampa who is retiring after 27 years with the city. Cloyd's family, friends and fellow city employees honored him with a reception at City Hall on Friday afternoon. Cloyd said he plans to keep busy at his downtown shop — Cloyd's Antique Clocks — and with visiting with his grandchildren.

Railey files for a divorce

DALLAS (AP)— Word that former Dallas minister Walker Railey has begun proceedings to divorce his incapacitated wife, Margaret "Peggy" Railey, took her relatives by surprise.

According to legal papers delivered Friday to the woman's parents in Tyler, Railey is divorcing his wife on grounds of "irreconcilable differences."

"Of course, Peggy can't answer and I can't answer for her," said Billie Jo Nicolai, Mrs. Railey's mother.

It was not immediately clear whether the divorce action would affect a pending $18 million civil judgment holding Railey, the former senior pastor of First United Methodist Church of Dallas, financially responsible for the near-fatal attack on his wife.

The couple would have been married 18 years next month.

Mrs. Nicolai said she had no warning of the divorce action.

"We had nothing saying that it was coming, and we really didn't expect it," she said.

"I can't see that this is going to make much difference one way or another," Mrs. Nicolai said, noting that Railey has not supported his wife since she was choked nearly to death in the couple's Dallas home on April 21, 1987.

United Methodist Church officials said the insurance policy that had paid the majority of Mrs. Railey's medical costs will expire Sept. 1. The church has vowed to help pay for continued medical care, but has pledged no specific amount.

Mrs. Railey, 41, suffered brain damage and is in a vegetative state in a Tyler nursing home. A breathing device was recently removed from her throat, but Mrs. Nicolai said her daughter's condition did not change.

No one has been charged in the attack. Railey's lawyer has said Dallas police consider the former minister a suspect. Railey has denied wrongdoing in the attack, and investigators say he has refused to cooperate.

In December, state District Judge John Whittington found Railey financially liable for the choking of his wife and ordered him to pay $18 million in damages.

Railey, who gave up his ministerial credentials shortly after the attack on his wife, said in a sworn deposition in March that he had no money to pay the judgment.

Railey, 42, has been working as a secretary at an aerospace firm in California.

Last month, he gave up permanent custody of their two children — Megan, 4, and Ryan, 7 — to longtime family friends.

John McShane, a Dallas lawyer representing Railey in the custody matter, said Friday that he was unaware of the divorce action. He said it should have no impact on the custody case.

Bowling associations plan second Special Tournament

The Pampa Bowling Association will hold their second Special Tournament and Fund Raiser on Saturday, Aug. 19, at the Harvester Lanes.

The tournament, co-sponsored and financed by the Pampa Women's and Men's Bowling Associations, is designed to raise funds for the Gray County Association of Retarded Citizens.

Forty-nine entries are being sought for the second annual event. Bowlers do not have to be an association member to sponsor and bowl with the participants.

Anyone wishing to enter, sponsor or donate may call Harvester Lanes at 665-3422 or Pampa Women's Bowling Association President Eudell Burnett at 665-1934. Sponsoring fee is $8.50.

"Bowling is something these special citizens can all do and enjoy," Burnett said.

Burnett said the tournament began as a Fun Day "for these special citizens, but after public awareness, donations began to come in and we decided, why not have a fund raiser for them, too?"

She said all funds go to the Gray County Association of Retarded Citizens.

Last year the tournament attracted 50 participants and 50 bowlers sponsoring and bowling in three games. About 150 spectators attended the tournament.

"With very little preparation and public awareness, we raised $1,275 last year," Burnett said.

"We would like to thank each of you that made this possible, and we would also like to solicit your help and donation for this very worthy cause this year," she said.

The Special Tournament and Fund Raiser will begin at 1:30 p.m. Aug. 19, with bowlers and participants being asked to be at Harvester Lanes by 1 p.m.

Participants will receive T-shirts, hamburgers and Cokes.

New trucking regulations to go into effect Sept. 1

Farmers and other owners and operators of trucks in Texas need to be aware of regulations passed in the recent Legislature which will go into effect Sept. 1, according to 84th District State Rep. Warren Chisum (D-Pampa).

Chisum said the Legislature had tried to make the new regulations as simple as possible for the industry.

"Since I was in the trucking business for a long time, I know what a problem new rules can be. I hope these will cause as little disruption as possible," he said.

S.B. 1204 requires trucks and drivers to comply with Federal Motor Carriers Safety Regulations with the following exceptions: vehicles under 26,000 GVW and farm vehicles under 48,000 GVW (providing they are not hauling hazardous material); oil well service and water well service rigs; and mobile cranes.

Drivers will be allowed to drive 12 hours following eight consecutive hours off duty (10 hours for interstate), and drivers employed prior to Sept. 1 are exempt from medical standards. Also, drivers who operate within a 150-mile radius are not required to keep a log book provided records of hours on duty are kept at the dispatch office.

In addition, the following exceptions will apply if approved by the Department of Public Safety: allow 18-year-olds as drivers (21 for interstate); not require a driver to read and speak English (holding a Texas driver's license will suffice); not require vehicles manufactured prior to Sept. 1 which transport seed cotton modules or solid waste to have rear end protection (bumpers); and allow a driver to drive and/or work 70 hours in seven days.

Mandatory drug testing requirement will be delayed from Dec. 21, 1989 to Dec. 21, 1990, and the date for companies to have driver qualifications files set up will be Jan. 1, 1990.

'Texas Monthly' forgot us again

The August issue of Texas Monthly features a list of the 100 richest people in Texas. And once again my name wasn't there. I looked, though, just to be sure.

It was of some consolation to know your name wasn't there either.

T. Boone Pickens' name wasn't there. Neither was that Midland fella who's running for governor.

Bo Pilgrim, the chicken king, made the list. So did H. Ross Perot, Lamar Hunt and Charles Dickie "Work Clothes" Williamson. But all those guys are from places like Dallas and Fort Worth and Houston.

That means not only did you and I not make the list, nobody from our part of the world did. And that's pretty unfair.

I've been subscribing to TM for as long as I can remember. You'd think the least those folks could do in return is come up with a list I could make.

- For instance:
- 100 reporters named after woodland creatures.
 - 100 Texans who have never seen a single episode of Dallas.
 - 100 people who traded their school-girl figure for that of two or three school-girls standing real close together.
 - 100 people who consider any country song with orchestration in the background about as classical as they would care for music to get.
 - 100 Texans who still believe we should secede from the union.
 - 100 West Texans who believe after that is done, our part of the state should then secede from Texas, form our own country and hit up the U.S. for billions of dollars in foreign relief.

I have suggested all of these as lists Texas Monthly might want to consider, figuring I was a shoo-in for any of 'em.

But if I can't have my name in the magazine, it seems only fair we should at least get Pampa's name in there somewhere.

After all, they write about places like Houston and San Antonio all the time. Aren't we in Texas too? Don't we deserve to get our name in the blasted magazine named after our state? Of course we do.

How about:

- 100 Texas cities where the streets most remind you of a North Vietnamese bombing run.

Off Beat

By Bear Mills

- 100 Texas cities most confused for being somewhere else. ("Pampa, I've been there. Isn't it close to St. Petersburg?")
 - 100 Texas cities where being a conservative is not the opposite of being a liberal, it's the opposite of being a communist.
 - 100 Texas cities that still haven't gotten their MTV.
 - 100 Texas cities where the tap water most tastes like somebody else drank it first.
 - 100 Texas cities where the goings on at City Hall most resemble an episode of Dark Shadows (melodramatic AND frightening).
 - 100 Texas cities where they still don't laugh at you for wearing a suit and cowboy boots.
 - 100 Texas cities where the residents would still rather go hungry than eat something as disgusting as sushi.
 - 100 Texas cities where being a politician is not as bad as being a child molester, it's worse.
 - 100 Texas cities where grown men can where a clip-on tie to church and not have somebody snicker.
- While any of the above lists would surely get me or Pampa or both in the hallowed pages of Texas Monthly, I'm not holding my breath. I've submitted about 2,000 articles or ideas to them in the last 10 years. Know how many rejection letters I've gotten? Yep. Right at 2,000 (a couple of times they didn't even bother to write back).
- That's $500 in postage I've shot. And when I call, they still say, "Bear who?" You'd think by now their standard rejection letter would have my name on it right after DEAR ...
- Oh well, people in Pampa often say our city is the best kept secret in Texas. I guess we'll all just stay a secret a little longer.

Union members fume over ban on smoking

FORT WORTH (AP)— General Dynamics Corp. wants to ban smoking on the job at its Fort Worth aerospace facilities — a move that has the company's largest union fuming.

Under the policy scheduled to go into effect Monday, General Dynamics workers will be allowed to smoke only in designated areas and only during factory breaks, lunch and before and after work shifts.

Smoking outdoors will be restricted to areas "a reasonable distance from (building) entrances," according to the policy.

The policy would eventually eliminate indoor smoking at General Dynamics facilities by 1990. Smoking has been banned in most General Dynamics office buildings, including executive suites. The first restrictions came in 1986.

The restrictions will apply primarily to factory and assembly areas, including the mile-long F-16 assembly building at General Dynamics' factory complex in west Fort Worth.

"These areas have high bays and fairly good ventilation, so it was a matter of looking at our priorities," said Walter Hill, General Dynamics' director of occupational health and safety engineering. "Rather than being arbitrary about it and giving everybody a drop-dead date, we decided to phase it in."

Pat Lane, president of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, District Lodge 776, said the smoking restrictions are arbitrary and unfair. He said the union, which represents about 10,000 production workers, will fight the new rules through established grievance procedures.

"It's unreasonable after letting people smoke all these years to say, 'Hey, you can't smoke anymore,'" he said.

General Dynamics is Fort Worth's largest employer, with about 30,000 workers.

General Dynamics Vice President and General Manager Charlie Anderson says the restrictions are intended to establish clean air throughout the company's facilities and to promote employee health.

Hill estimated 28 percent or fewer General Dynamics employees are smokers.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Arts shouldn't be funded by taxation

A dispute over works of art considered blasphemous or pornographic by some members of Congress has some people in the professional arts community worrying about whether such opinions will eventually lead to government stifling of artistic expression. They seem to forget that any government funding of the arts has the potential to stifle artistic expression, whether subtly or blatantly.

What got the controversy going back in Washington, D.C., was an exhibition of photographs by Robert Mapplethorpe and a photo by Andres Serrano that depicted a plastic crucifix submerged in the artist's urine. Mapplethorpe, a well-known New York photographer who died of AIDS in March, posed people in homoerotic positions and photographed children in erotic poses.

Both exhibits were financed by the taxpayers through the National Endowment for the Arts. Republican Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina and other members of Congress have criticized the NEA. It all has such people as Kevin Consey, director of the Newport Harbor Art Museum, concerned about a political threat to artistic expression.

"I think it'll be deplorable if a show like Chris Burden ('Chris Burden: A 10-Year Retrospective' shown at the museum in the spring of 1988), which was so full of political and social ideas, would not be funded by federal agencies because some of its ideas may be offensive to some people. I mean, what isn't offensive to some people?"

Well, Burden or Mapplethorpe or Serrano has a perfect right to create whatever sort of expressions they choose, call them art or persuade others to call them art. But they have no right to have money picked from the pockets of unwilling taxpayers to finance their expressions or pretensions.

Most Americans care little about art, but some care intensely. Those who don't care shouldn't be forced to finance the interests of a few. Let artists find whatever audiences respond to them and interact with them. That's fine. Why make others pay for the process?

Art entrepreneurs clamor about censorship whenever a foolish member of Congress gets exercised enough to object to some particular exhibit the taxpayers are financing. But the very act of choosing some exhibits to support while rejecting many more applications amounts to censorship of a sort.

People have a right to make choices based on the flimsiest of rationales, or none at all. But they don't have a right to make money by force from others to support their choices. The arts won't die without federal funding. Some artists undoubtedly like the money, but the constant threat of censorship just isn't worth it.

The ignorance of principles

Congress has been rocked by scandals. But we have little understanding of, much less a desire to eliminate, the fundamental causes of the mess. At the root of former House Speaker Jim Wright's scandal, among others, is a national contempt for constitutional principles and equality before the law.

A couple of months ago, I received an exchange of letters between a private citizen and Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif. Hawkins was asked to cite the constitutional authority for our food stamp program.

He replied, "Just as the phrase 'provide for the common defense' authorizes Congress to appropriate funds for the military, the words 'promote the general welfare' authorizes Congress to expend funds for programs that provide people with food, shelter and health care."

Such a flimsy interpretation applied to the Fifth Amendment's "pursuit of happiness" clause might easily be twisted to mean Congress should provide us with live music and drinks at our parties.

Hawkins' constitutional interpretation permits Congress and the courts to do anything they damn well please. It differs little from saying: If a person wants something that he cannot afford, Congress shall take someone else's earnings in order to provide it.

I don't want to single out food stamps or Rep. Hawkins for special ridicule. It is just a concrete example of widespread ignorance and contempt for rule of law held by men we entrust with safeguarding our Constitution.

Back to political scandals. Why would people, legally or illegally, give money and favors to members of Congress in the first place? The answer is simple: they expect to get something in return.

So long as we permit our lawmakers to use their positions to give certain Americans money earned by other Americans and grant special privileges, we are going to have corruption of public officials. The only change we can expect is greater efforts to avoid the appearance of wrongdoing and getting caught.

Charity is one of man's noblest virtues. With America doing about 85 percent of all world giving, we can rightfully be proud of ourselves. "Public charity" is a sin which trashes both the concept and spirit of true charity. After all, charity is a voluntary act of conscience, but what Congress gives away is obtained through threats, intimidation and coercion.

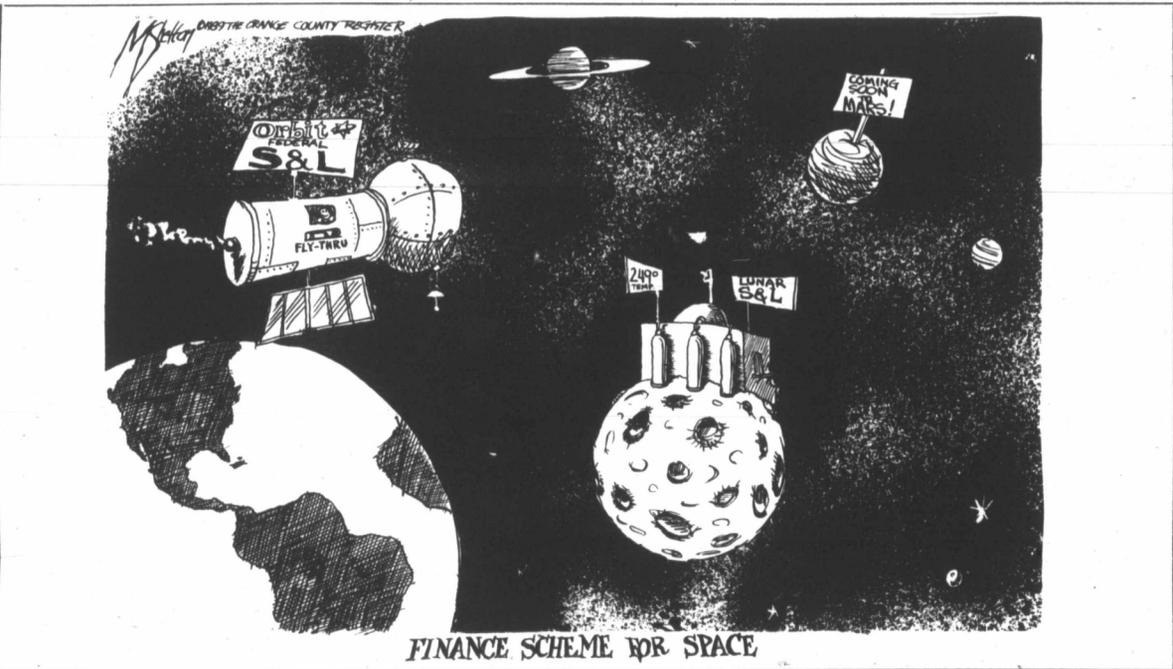

To my knowledge, only one congressman saw government largesse for what it is. Rep. David Crockett, Democrat from Tennessee who later died defending the Alamo, challenged Congress' wish to assist the widow of a distinguished naval officer.

Crockett said, "We have the right, as individuals, to give away as much of our own money as we please in charity ... We have not the semblance of authority to appropriate it [taxpayers' money] as charity." He realized that giving away taxpayers' money was closer to theft than to charity.

Constitutionally, "... promote the General Welfare" means that government should do things which benefit all Americans, not specific Americans.

Thus, promoting the general welfare might authorize federal programs like typhoid eradication, highway construction and other public works. I benefit and you benefit from these general services. But I do not benefit from having my earnings taken and given to you, nor do you benefit from your earnings being doled out to me.

Do Americans have the courage and morality to minimize what Congress can give away? If we don't, let's not criticize the sale of favors by our congressmen. At our peril, we forget Benjamin Franklin's warning, "When the people find they can vote themselves money, that will herald the end of the republic."

Name baby after me, please

I don't have any children. There are many reasons why not, one being I'm afraid if I had a son, he would come home one day wearing an earring and I would have to strangle him.

Unless hearing-impairment is involved, I stand firmly against male ear adornment. Isn't that covered in the Bible somewhere?

Doesn't the Bible say something like thou shalt not wear an earring unless thou is the same sex as the woman at the well?

But that's not what this is about. This is about the fact that a number of my over-40 friends suddenly are having babies and, with no children of my own in sight, I have tried to convince each of them to name their newborns after me. I think it would be a wonderful gesture of kindness and friendship.

At least two of these new dads have already turned me down. They both had girls.

"What kind of name is Lewisiana?" one said to me.

"It's a fine name," I said. "It's a very American name, too. Not only does it reflect my friendship with you, but it also makes reference to one of our states."

"If I were going to name my child after a state," he said, "Rhode Islandia would be my first choice."

My suggestion to the other friend, who also had a baby daughter, was to name her Leweez. "It's even misspelled," he said. "I can't name my child a misspelled work."

Now my friend B.A. and his lovely wife, Nancy, had a baby the other day, too. Another girl. My friends' chromosomes obviously agree with me on the earring issue.

B.A. and his wife haven't gotten around to naming their child yet, so I've been at it again, reflecting my never-say-die attitude.

"I've always thought Lewette was such a lovely name," I said to B.A. during my recent visit to see the baby.

"Are you still here?" said his wife, as she entered the room.

"Look," I said, "the clock is ticking on me here. I'm not going to say there's no chance whatsoever I'll ever have any children of my own, but just in case I don't, I would like to at least have one named after me."

I could see the concern come over my friends' faces when I put a little guilt on them.

"OK," said B.A., "give us some ideas but forget Lewette."

"How about Leween?" I suggested.

"Putrid," said Nancy.

"Lewzeenia?"

"Sounds too much like a Third World country," said B.A.

I was not about to give up.

"Lewzandria?"

"Now that sounds interesting," said B.A.

"Are you out of your mind?" said his wife. I was running out of time and ideas for names. I got desperate.

"Lewalsindra. She might grow up to be a basketball player."

"No."

"Lewpolia? She might want to go into law."

Now I was past desperate. I was dead in the water.

"Grizzinda?"

They both laughed uncontrollably. But I'm still not giving up.

Anybody out there with a new baby daughter? "Grizzenthia" is such a lovely name, don't you think.

Congress clings to its monopoly power

A political monopoly, like a commercial monopoly, can survive only for so long before the public protests and reformers gear up for another lusty battle against entrenched power.

In short: Look out, members of Congress. Your heady hopes of lifetime tenure may be premature.

A few publications, notably The Wall Street Journal, have already endorsed a mandatory limit on congressional tenure; others will surely follow. Meanwhile, an organization called the Coalition to End the Permanent Congress has been founded in Kansas City, Mo., with charter members including some 40 defeated congressional candidates. Among other things, the group proposes a constitutional amendment limiting service in Congress to 12 years.

Why all the concern? Because incumbents in the House of Representatives have been re-elected in the last two outings at rates of 98 and 98.3 percent — and those figures would be even higher if candidates under indictment or ethical cloud were subtracted from the list.

If nothing is done, the House threatens to become a body of 435 permanently seated rulers who swat down impudent challengers with the cocky assurance of a royal court.

Vincent Carroll

Congressional defenders retort that since 1960, turnover in the House has actually averaged 15 percent per election due to deaths, resignations and retirements, and that fewer than half of the representatives now in office held their seats before the start of this decade.

While their figures are correct, they miss the point: House members determined to make a career of it, who remain healthy and untouched by scandal, face virtually no chance of defeat for literally decades.

Besides, there is simply no doubt that re-election has grown easier over time, as even a study by the Congressional Research Service confirms. True, the years between 1790 and 1810 were a heyday for incumbents similar to the present one, when nearly everyone who sought re-election won.

But for the rest of the 19th century, incumbents triumphed at far lower rates — usually in the 70 to 85 percent range. On six occasions in the 1800s the re-election rate actually dipped below 70 percent; that has happened only once in the 20th century, in the watershed year 1932.

Not until 1950 did re-election rates consistently return to 90 percent again — and they've been trending upward since.

Defenders of the status quo also ignore another important fact: Until recent decades, many members of Congress looked upon their service as temporary. The House was a citizens' legislature, which members voluntarily left after a few terms of service.

Not any more. More than 90 percent of House members have sought re-election every chance this decade; the comparable average in the 19th century: 60 to 70 percent.

However loudly House members whine that they're underpaid and overworked, most cling to their office with the tenacity of pit bulls. A surprising number hail from gerrymandered districts in which competition is a joke to begin with. The rest scare off competent challengers through a host of built-in advantages, including tax-supported mass mailings to voters, the use of congressional staff members for political purposes, and the build-up of reserve war chests from political action committees.

Then they crush the odd opponent with the predictable ease of a practiced monopoly.

The Coalition to End the Permanent Congress is right: It is time to break their grip.

Keep the problem within community

To the editor:
It is getting very bad when the commissioners that the people elect cannot do the job they were elected for. Commissioner Sutherland says we need someone who knows what we need in a police chief, but someone in Maryland does not know the needs of this department. Who knows better than the people who work here every day? They already tried going outside of the department and look where that got them. I agree with Mayor Peet we need someone from this department.

The commissioners are complaining about the budget and taking away the safety vest from the officers who are in great need, but they will go and spend $6,000 for someone to choose a chief when the problem needs to stay home.

It's really looking bad that the city of Pampa commissioners cannot make up their own minds. Maybe we had better consult a consultant agency when we go to elect our commissioners the next election.

Keep the problem within the city.

U.S. moving closer toward communism

To the editor:
I've been sick to my stomach ever since I heard the Supreme Court said you can burn the flag. The same flag many men and women lost their lives for, so we could have our freedom. What happened to the values our country was founded on?

I was taught in school to be proud you're an American. I can't say I can tell my children that today. The red-white-blue was something of high honor. Now today you can burn it up. Maybe we should fly the "Red Star."

Also, the ABC Bill coming up before the Senate, stating children 2 and above have to go to a government controlled day care, as in the good ole USSR. You are not allowed for a grandparent, friend or relative to keep them. Church related day cares would close down. Etc, etc.

America, wake up!
Communism will not take us over, we will vote it in. All I can say is look up for the second coming of Christ. Are you ready? You can be.

Sad day when dog won't scratch fleas

To the editor and Fellow Taxpayers:
This letter is addressed to those of you who are concerned about how your tax dollars are spent. Those of you who don't care don't need to read this. This letter is concerning the city of Pampa commission meeting held on Thursday, July 27, 1989.

The City Commission has voted to hire an outside consulting firm to hire a chief of police for the city of Pampa. One would think that the commissioners and consulting firms must be partners.

You would be shocked at the thousands of your taxpaying dollars the city of Pampa has spent in the past few years on consulting firms. A few weeks ago this same City Commission voted to spend $1,900 to an outside consulting firm for a survey of city employees to see if they get along with their supervisors.

If we have commissioners who can't make a decision, I believe we ought to contact a consulting firm and have the commission replaced. It is a sad day when a dog won't scratch his own fleas!!!!

Pets, wreckers damaging parks

To the editor:
On a very hot and beautiful day last week I took my family to Central Park for a picnic. While we were setting out our food, a man and his dog (not on a leash) came by and his dog did both of his jobs within two feet of our table and then they walked on.

When did the leash law expire and why do they walk their animals in the park where people are eating or children playing? Pretty soon we won't have any parks as the animals and park wreckers will finally get them shut down. Come on, everyone who enjoys our parks, let's put a stop to this degrading action.

If they can't do it, maybe others will

To the editor:
To begin, I quote the late Edward R. Murrow: "We can deny our heritage and our history, but we cannot escape responsibility for the result. There is no way for a citizen of a republic to abdicate his responsibilities."

I would address the people of our drug task force who complain of a lack of manpower. I know of many, who at no expense to our government, have been involved in a concerted effort to rid our town of drug traffic. We have put ourselves "at risk" to see this mess cleared up.

Now, nothing is being done! In addition, the drug task force continues to sell the public the mistaken notion that busting users is waging a war on drug abuse. They then complain that they don't even have the manpower to do this job.

This is an affront to any thinking citizen who takes his responsibilities seriously.

It's no wonder to me that the financiers of these illicit commodities continue to laugh and carry on their business — They will do so as long as you, and the rest of us, make a nominal effort at solving the problem.

What ever became of dedication? Devotion to duty may not be "smart" but it has often gotten the job done.

One word of caution! There is a growing undercurrent of opinion that, if the task force can't get the job done in Gray County, some citizens possibly can. Given the composition of this ever enlarging group, I wouldn't want to bet on their following due process of law or acknowledging the rights of individuals.

The bottom line is: Our well paid task force either gets off its well padded behind or some "people" may do their job for them.

Which will it be???

You tell "US!"

The very least thing "we" ask for is some visible dedication to the job of stopping the source of drugs in our area.

City voters have option for recall

To the editor, and Mayor and City Commissioners:

We would like to thank you so much for spending more of city of Pampa tax dollars to hire an out of town consulting firm.

Considering the way the city of Pampa spends money hiring and consulting with consulting firms, the Pampa Chamber of Commerce should recruit one of these firms to come to Pampa and open a business. In this way, at least your tax dollars would stay in Pampa.

The city of Pampa should look very attractive to any consulting firm based in Pampa when you take a look at all the money this city has spent on consulting firms, surveys, etc., in the past four years.

Also, we would like to know if we are going to spend tax dollars to have a consulting firm choose the next mayor and commission for this city. We voters have elected people to be our representatives in our city government who are apparently afraid to make a decision on anything. Maybe we should let a consulting firm direct the City Commission and tell the commissioners how to do their job.

After completing a budget with massive cuts, no pay raises for most city employees, talk of raising water rates, etc., this commission has voted to spend money on an outside consulting firm to hire a police chief. The commission is the voice of the people in most towns and cities, but in Pampa the commission is just the voice of some out of town consulting firm, who does not know anything about our needs and, for the most part, could care less.

One last note to the voters in the city of Pampa — are you aware we do have the option of asking for a recall of our elected officials?

He thanks people for financing trip

To the editor:
I would like to thank the people of Pampa that bought raffle tickets to finance my trip to Africa and Switzerland for a gymnastics meet where I will represent the U.S. in a gymnastics competition. The $450 raised will be used to pay entry fees.

I'm sorry no one in Pampa won the raffled prizes. The winners of the trampolines were Kristen Oakley (Amarillo) and Anita Shell (Amarillo). The month's lessons went to Genetta Hendersons.

Thanks again,

DC-10 troubles: Real problem or bum rap?

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With two major crashes in nine days, a rash of worrisome incidents and a troubled history, talk of 8 million hours of safe flying isn't enough to calm renewed concern about safety of the DC-10.

An airline passengers group wants all of the more than 450 triple-jet DC-10s grounded, and safety groups are calling for design changes.

But federal officials and some aviation experts say the plane's bad reputation is a bad rap. They say the airliner has proved itself safe.

As the National Transportation Safety Board tries to find what caused the July 19 crash of a United Airlines DC-10 at Sioux City, Iowa, that killed 111 people and South Korean investigators probe the wreckage of a Korea Air DC-10 in Tripoli that killed at least 75 people on Thursday, 50 airlines around the world are still flying DC-10s.

Other recent incidents involving the wide-bodied airliner built by McDonnell Douglas include:
■ A Canadian Airlines model that lost a wheel but landed safely in Toronto.

■ A United plane that landed without incident in Los Angeles after reporting hydraulic problems.

■ Another United jet that made an unscheduled stop at Chicago after a bird was sucked into an engine.

■ Yet another United DC-10 that slid off a runway in Chicago a day before the Iowa crash.

Although none of the incidents caused injury or serious damage, they have added to the aura of distrust around the jumbo airliner that has been in service nearly two decades and carried 745 million passengers.

"The question of whether the DC-10 is a safe aircraft naturally pops into people's minds," said New York aviation attorney James L. Stengel. "But people who understand the sequence of events in the Iowa crash understand it was probably a very, very rare catastrophic incident."

Despite reassurances from the experts and from Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner, who last week declared the DC-10 safe, the airliner has become the butt of jokes, loose talk and some genuine concerns.

Travel agents say that since the Iowa crash, more passengers are choosy about what plane they fly and some want to sit in sections where most of the 185 survivors of Flight 232 sat.

Tim Cole, a Washington aviation consultant, said he would still fly in DC-10s.

"Eight million hours without a problem is a much higher guarantee than I could get on any new car right now," he said. According to McDonnell Douglas, a London insurance analyst said that before the Iowa accident DC-10s had flown 8 million hours without an accident.

Morten Beyer, chairman of Avmart, an independent aviation appraisal firm, questioned the conclusions and data of the International Airline Passengers Association, which called last week for all DC-10s to be grounded. The group, which claims 110,000 members, said 17 DC-10s have been destroyed since the model was introduced in 1970 — a worse record than other wide-bodied airliners.

Beyer said the figures are misleading. He said 18 DC-10s actually have been destroyed, but only three were due to accidents involving mechanical problems.

These include the Iowa crash, where investigators are trying to determine why the plane's tail engine blew up, destroying hydraulic flight controls.

Another involved an American Airlines DC-10 that crashed on takeoff from Chicago in 1979, becoming what is still the worst U.S. aviation disaster in history with 274 people killed. The crash was blamed on faulty maintenance.

The DC-10 is no longer in production. It is to be replaced by McDonnell Douglas' new MD-11 model, which has yet to leave the factory.

Workers reconstruct United Flight 232's tail section in a Sioux City Airport hangar.

Patty Loveless

Patty Loveless to perform at concert for XIT Rodeo

DALHART — Rising country star Patty Loveless will give two performances here Friday night in connection with the 53rd Annual XIT Rodeo.

Loveless, named Billboard magazine's Most Promising Female Vocalist of the Year, will perform at 10 p.m. and midnight at the Rita Blanca Auditorium.

After several singles which were critical successes but failed to muster much airplay, Loveless struck gold with "If My Heart Had Windows."

Her latest album, Honky Tonk Angel, has continued the dynamic style of "If My Heart..." and carved Loveless her own place in the "new country" genre. Like Reba McEntire, she is at once hip and classic, making her a favorite with young and old alike.

Like Loretta Lynn, Loveless comes from the mountains of Kentucky, another true-bred coal miner's daughter.

USA Today recently named Honky Tonk Angel one of the best new country albums to come along in a good while, comparing her with such major-leaguers as Dwight Yoakam, Randy Travis and Lyle Lovett. Her rising popularity and power has landed her raves in other non-country outlets like The Village Voice and New York Post.

Rob Tannenbaum of the Post compliments Loveless for combining "California country-rock with Kentucky coal dust" for a mixture more potent than Linda Ronstadt at her very best.

Other country singers scheduled to perform at the XIT this year include Mel McDaniel on Thursday night and Tom Wopat, one half of the Dukes of Hazzard who has gone on to score a couple of country hits, on Saturday.

Organizers of the XIT rodeo predict the three-day event will draw at least 65,000 people to this town of 6,800.

New Texas labor president calls for 'populist alliance'

AUSTIN (AP) — New Texas AFL-CIO President Joe Gunn, unanimously elected Saturday to replace 16-year leader Harry Hubbard, urged union members to work together for the future and endorsed a call for a new "populist alliance."

"We have to ensure our survival with careful planning," said Gunn, former secretary-treasurer of the state labor federation, who was elected president at the organization's state convention. The federation represents 650 local unions and 250,000 members.

Hubbard, 64, retired after serving longer than any other state AFL-CIO president. He won accolades this week as he presided over his last union meeting.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower called him "a tireless champion of the rights and needs and hopes of the working families."

"You're leaving behind a great legacy of leadership, not just for organized labor but for all caring people," said Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Hubbard urged members to actively support their new officers, who also include new Secretary-Treasurer Jackie St. Clair, in addressing challenges facing the labor movement.

"Don't just talk about it. Live it in action," said Hubbard, to enthusiastic applause.

Immediate priorities for the state labor federation will be the workers' compensation system and legislative redistricting, said 58-year-old Gunn.

The Legislature recently ended a special legislative session called to change the workers' compensation system without passing a reform bill. The system has been criticized as combining high premium rates for employers with low benefits for workers.

In 1991, lawmakers will draw new district lines for the Legislature and Congress.

Gunn, who was born in Madison County and whose first labor position was as a communications worker with Southwestern Bell, said an aggressive public relations campaign is needed to get out labor's message.

"We just want dignity on the job," said Gunn, a union member for four decades. He served as secretary-treasurer of the Texas AFL-CIO for 10 years.

The new president said he supports a call by Hightower for labor leaders to participate in the "Texas Populist Alliance," which the agriculture commissioner described as an effort to shift political power from the rich to the "grassroots."

Labor has supported candidates who ended up voting against them on such issues as workers' compensation, said Hightower, a Democrat. He lambasted "election-day Democrats," who he said vote with Republicans once in office.

Hightower blasted President Bush for vetoing an increase in the minimum wage, but he also criticized Democrats for not taking more aggressive action for working people.

Arid states know water is really money

By PEGGY LOWE
For The Associated Press

DENVER (AP) — Farmers in arid New Mexico and Texas do not necessarily live by the adage "Time is money."

People trying to grow cotton, alfalfa or any crop along the Pecos River in the hot, dry climate have an alternative they hold a little more closely.

They know that water is money. Water and money are the subjects attorneys from the two states have been arguing over for years. The U.S. Supreme Court ordered New Mexico to repay Texas for 340,100 acre-feet of Pecos River water taken by New Mexico between 1950 and 1983. The court ruled New Mexico violated a 1949 interstate Pecos River Compact that stated how much river water each state was to get.

But the court did not say how New Mexico was to repay Texas — in water or money. Texas wants the water, New Mexico wants to repay with cash.

The two sides have been presenting their respective cases before water attorney Monte Pascoe in Denver for the last two weeks. Pascoe is presiding over the case as a special water master.

When Pascoe adjourned the two weeks of hearings late Friday afternoon, New Mexico still had one witness to call.

The parties again will descend on U.S. District Court in downtown Denver in two weeks to hear the last witness, present rebuttals and wrap up the case. At that point Pascoe will make his recommendations for settlement in a report to the Supreme Court, probably by the end of the year.

Over the two weeks experts for Texas said the state lost $51 million from 1952-1986, while New Mexico used the water to make between $300 million to $900 million.

Chuck Howe, a University of Colorado economist, made the losses and benefits studies for Texas. Howe said he felt he had captured the economic effects but there also were unmeasured factors.

Howe said there was damage of community spirit in Texas towns because many did not have the resources to reinvest. Many people left certain areas of the state, he said, because water supplies were so uncertain due to persistent shortfalls.

"When one looks at the complex pattern of shortfalls and the effects of the shortfalls on the population of one state, it involves a complicated pattern of social and economic dynamics in a quantitative sense," he said.

New Mexico experts said Texas lost $7.8 million from the water shortfall. They said Texas would make $2.5 million over the next 10 years if restitution was made in water, while the New Mexico economy would lose $85.8 million.

Norman Whittlesey, a Washington State agriculture economics professor, was the leader of a team of New Mexico agriculture experts who made the New Mexico studies. He said the amount of water that New Mexico would owe Texas is relatively small — enough to irrigate 1,000 acres or two or three fulltime farms.

The Texas benefit-New Mexico loss study showed an inefficient scenario for use of the water, he said.

"It's quite apparent we're tearing down a rather stable and viable agriculture to deliver that water to Texas," he said.

Throughout the two weeks experts said it is difficult to recreate an economy in a time long gone and considering the risky venture the business of agriculture can be.

But Texas special assistant Attorney General Renea Hicks said there's more to the case than just economics. He said one state shouldn't break a solemn promise to another state.

"Focusing too narrowly on the economics would tend to encourage this kind of behavior for states. States are not hollow shells. There's people there," he said.

Hank Bohnhoff, special assistant Attorney General for New Mexico, said he was pleased with the way the evidence stacked up over the course of the two-week hearing.

"We remain confident that the special master will ultimately accept New Mexico's arguments," he said.

Bush stands firm on spending for defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, facing battles with Congress on several fronts, says he's standing firm on his military spending plan but is willing to compromise on his proposal to cut the capital gains tax.

Bush insisted Friday that he will be able to have his way with the Senate on his defense package even after the House last week shredded it, slashing key components such as Star Wars, the stealth bomber, mobile MX missile and Midgetman missile.

"I am disappointed that the House did what they did," Bush told a news conference, noting that the chamber restored money for some programs he wants to cut.

"Yesterday was not the House's most memorable moment, but we're going to keep fighting on for what we believe in."

But Bush said he's willing to look at alternatives on his proposal to cut the 33 percent maximum capital-gains rate to 15 percent.

"If there's some compromise that can spur investment, spur jobs, increase employment — the cause of new jobs starting up — I'd be interested in it," Bush said. "I don't think I should ever say it's to be done just this way in terms of the bills up there in the House Ways and Means Committee right now."

On another topic, Bush decried news leaks in the espionage investigation of U.S. diplomat Felix S. Bloch.

"I don't want to go into it while it is under investigation," Bush said when asked about specifics.

"I am very concerned about premature discussion and disclosure — that means leaks — on this matter, because I think you can jeopardize the case itself and perhaps the man's ability to get a fair hearing."

No charges have been filed against Bloch, but the State Department revoked his diplomatic passport and put him on paid leave June 22. He is under heavy FBI surveillance.

Regarding the House's slash of $1.8 billion from his $4.9 billion military spending request, Bush reaffirmed his commitment to his "solid strategic program."

He said he will fight to win Senate support to counter the House measure, and that he needs everything he's proposing to strengthen his arms control position in talks with the Soviet Union.

Bush also said: "He's confident his multibillion-dollar bailout plan for the savings and loan industry will prevail, despite a House-Senate conference agreement this week that rejected a key funding mechanism on which he has insisted."

Attacks on his nominee to head the Justice Department's civil rights division, William Lucas, are "pure gut politics." He said he staunchly supports Lucas, who critics say is unqualified.

He still wants a constitutional amendment to ban burning of the American flag, but didn't answer directly when asked if he would settle for a Democratic-sponsored effort, passed last week by the House Judiciary Committee, to outlaw flag burning through a statute rather than amending the Constitution.

"I will see what comes down here, but I will continue to push for the approach that I think is the best, given the Supreme Court decision," he said.

He did not condone the kidnapping of a Shiite Moslem leader by Israeli commandos in Lebanon and doesn't know if it may lead to freedom for an American hostage.

Community Services taking weatherization applications

Applications are being accepted for the Panhandle Community Services weatherization program which provides free weatherization of low income homes, with emphasis on homes of elderly or handicapped.

With many of the elderly on fixed incomes, the personal comfort and overall physical well-being are often set aside in order to save on utility bills, according to a news release from Panhandle Community Services. Weatherization can reduce the cost of utility bills up to 30 percent, allowing these individuals to live in a better home environment, the release states.

Money to provide this free service comes from a fund for energy conservation provided by state and federal governments.

Basic qualifications for the program include a one-member family income of not more than $7,475 and a two-member family income of $10,025.

On-site home evaluations are conducted by a PCS representative. Work on the home is done by a subcontractor. Individuals who could benefit from this program or who know of someone who might be in need of assistance may contact Margo Stanley or Lee Tice at 665-0081 or at the local PCS office at 322 S. Cuyler.

Laboratory risking its future to resume mouse production

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

BAR HARBOR, Maine (AP)—The fire-damaged Jackson Laboratory is taking on a crash program to replenish the nation's supply of rare research mice and gambling that tax money will keep it in business.

The world's leading producer of unusual laboratory mice is using all its resources on mouse production rather than rebuilding, its director said.

The fire two months ago at the Jackson Laboratory in Bar Harbor crippled much medical research.

By not using its insurance money to construct a permanent facility, the laboratory is facing the possibility that it will go out of business in as little as a year.

"Our responsibility was to get research animals out as fast as possible and worry about the financial problems later," the laboratory's director, Kenneth Paigen, said.

The loss of the laboratory's mouse production facilities "is currently creating very serious problems for research scientists all over the world," said Dr. James B. Wyngaarden, director of the National Institutes of Health, in a recent letter to the Jackson Laboratory.

The laboratory is the world's leading center for the study of mouse genetics. The fire on May 10 destroyed the laboratory's mouse production facilities and killed 400,000 research mice.

The laboratory was supplying 20 percent of the nation's laboratory mice, including many unusual strains unavailable elsewhere.

The mice "are essential to research on arthritis, lupus, cancer, heart disease, AIDS, and some 4,000 hereditary diseases," said Nancy Wexler, president of the Hereditary Disease Foundation, in a letter to the laboratory.

Paigen said the laboratory's interim production facilities, to be housed in large trailers, could produce 24,000 mice a week by the fall. Before the fire, the laboratory was producing 40,000 mice a week.

The Howard Hughes Medical Institute in Bethesda, Md., sent the laboratory an unsolicited check for $750,000. The Arthur K. Watson Charitable Trust of New York City gave the laboratory $400,000.

Paigen estimated losses from the fire at $40 million and said insurance will reimburse about $15 million.

The laboratory has asked Congress for $25 million. A bill is pending in the Senate that would give that amount to the National Institutes of Health to help restore the nation's supply of research mice.

Paigen is optimistic that much or all of that money, if approved by Congress, would be awarded to Jackson Laboratory.

No strains of mice were permanently lost. A few animals of each strain, or in some cases frozen embryos, were stored outside the production facility as a safety measure. The problem now is to increase the numbers of those mice.

Bush says he'll make sure that Exxon finishes spill cleanup

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Bush says he'll do his best to make sure that Exxon lives up to its responsibility to clean the oil-soaked shores of Alaska.

"If I had the feeling Exxon was going to pull back on an agreement or fail to fulfill an agreement they'd made with us, with the government, or with the state of Alaska, I would... try my best to do something about it," Bush said at a news conference Friday.

The president's remarks came hours after Exxon executives told a congressional panel that the company will suspend cleanup operations for the winter by mid-September.

W.D. Stevens

However, company officials said they would agree to any "reasonable" continuation of the cleanup next spring.

More than 700 miles of shoreline have been damaged as a result of the March spill of nearly 11 million gallons of crude oil from the tanker Exxon Valdez in the nation's worst oil spill.

U.S. Coast Guard Vice Adm. Clyde Lusk told the interior subcommittee on water, power and offshore energy resources that he expected that there would be "disagreements on what should be done," with differences in opinion as to what constitutes a clean beach.

"What is clean?" Lusk asked.

"I don't know how we're going to make that decision."

Exxon's plans have been questioned since the disclosure earlier last week of an internal memorandum that said "no commitment should be made" on when to suspend or resume cleanup.

Alaska officials interpreted the July 19 memo as an indication Exxon was preparing to pull out, even though the cleanup is far from completed.

Bush, asked by reporters about the matter, said he expected Exxon to live up to its commitment. The brouhaha prompted Friday's subcommittee hearing.

The memo, written by the manager of Exxon's cleanup operation in Alaska, "suggests Exxon is putting together its plan for demobilization without Coast Guard approval," said subcommittee Chairman George Miller, D-Calif.

W.D. Stevens, president of Exxon Co. USA, called the wording of the memo "unfortunate."

The company, he said, will withdraw its equipment and estimated 10,000 workers from the region beginning Sept. 15 because of potential safety problems with rough seas and weather.

Exxon will return "in the spring of 1990 to reinspect the area, to assure that the job has been properly done, and if not, to put it right," Stevens said.

But when Miller pressed him about whether Exxon will resume cleanup in the spring, Stevens said he couldn't give "an unequivocal commitment."

Lusk said federal and state officials, as well as scientists and Exxon representatives, would participate in the inspection next spring. But the Coast Guard has no authority to require Exxon to do additional cleaning at specific sites, he said.

Exxon executives said Friday that about 600 miles of contaminated shoreline had been treated, but Alaska's chief environmental official put the figure at about 190 miles, saying that in many cases oil has seeped back into the rocks and pebbles.

Iran's Rafsanjani faces major problems

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—Iran's new president, Hashemi Rafsanjani, will have to walk a political tightrope to achieve his expected goals of rebuilding links with the West and liberalizing life in the Islamic Republic.

He has been armed with more power than any of his three predecessors because of constitutional amendments approved in a national referendum held alongside Friday's presidential election.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency said Rafsanjani received 94 percent of the 8.5 million votes counted by Saturday. The constitutional changes received 97 percent support. It did not say how many people voted.

The leader of Tehran's so-called pragmatists will have to move carefully to avoid triggering a backlash from radicals dedicated to preserving the ideological purity of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic revolution.

Under the constitutional reforms, initiated by Khomeini himself before he died June 3, the post of prime minister will be scrapped to put the government under the presidency, which had been a largely ceremonial post.

Rafsanjani, 54, has authority to appoint or dismiss the Cabinet. He will head a newly formed Supreme Security Council, which will control Iran's vast security apparatus and military, in addition to the economy and planning.

The constitutional amendments are designed to eliminate rival power centers that have paralyzed government for years and delayed economic and social reforms. In theory, they should create a more cohesive and effective government.

Rafsanjani was elected by Iranians eager for change after 10 years of revolutionary turmoil, a war with Iraq, economic hardship and the rigid Islamic code imposed by Khomeini.

An AP News Analysis

Voters interviewed in Tehran during Friday's polling were unanimous in saying they were looking to Rafsanjani, in the forefront of Khomeini's revolution from the start, to improve their lot.

But Iran's 50 million people, battered by runaway inflation, high prices, unemployment and shortages of just about everything, may be expecting too much too soon.

Rafsanjani has sought to dampen expectations, saying, "I will try to realize what is practicable."

Rafsanjani has acknowledged he faces daunting problems—an economy run into the ground by the eight-year Iran-Iraq war, poor management and a decade of Iran's self-imposed isolation.

Mohammad-Hassan Sazegar, deputy minister of heavy industry, outlined the problems with unusual candor at a seminar on industrial problems last month, saying the economy is in its worst shape ever.

Sazegar said the 120 factories supervised by his ministry are producing at only 30 percent of capacity because of shortages of raw materials, spare parts and energy.

"We frequently prevaricate by resorting to emotional sloganeering" to solve problems, he said. "For the last 10 years we have offered the wrong solutions and weakened the economy."

Such frank comments indicate that more realistic thinking is emerging in the upper echelons of the leadership than was possible while Khomeini was alive.

Rafsanjani and his main ally, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, who replaced Khomeini as Iran's supreme religious leader, favor a free-market system to revitalize the economy.

They also know that large-scale foreign investment is needed to improve the economy and carry out postwar reconstruction, and that it will come only if relations with the West are restored.

They are opposed by revolutionary hard-liners like Hussein Musavi, the outgoing prime minister, and Interior Minister Ali Akbar Mohtashemi, who say foreign economic participation will dilute the revolution's ideological purity.

NEC hopes to zap fans from Nintendo

By ROBERT DVORCHAK
AP National Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Look out, Nintendo.

The newest player in home video games is out to zap and blast your Super Mario Brothers with special effects so dazzling that its electronic athletes dance home-run shuffles and its space battles display arcade-quality flash.

"Dad, I got to get this system. This is the greatest game I ever saw. We'll sell the Nintendo," said Joey Silverman, 9, after a trial run on the TurboGrafx-16 system made by NEC Home Electronics (U.S.A.) Inc.

Ditching Nintendo seems like heresy. It is the hottest-selling toy in America and Super Mario Brothers, named for its mustachioed heroes, the most popular game.

Yet the 20 people who played the systems in a week-long, side-by-side trial by The Associated Press unanimously praised NEC's sharper graphics, blazing color and better sound.

NEC's system, due in stores in November, has twice the computing power and at least twice the price tag. The basic unit lists at $199, with a compact disc option for an extra $399. Game cartridges the size of a credit card will sell for $45, and about 20 games will be available.

A Nintendo unit costs about $80. Its 120 games sell for $25 to $40 each.

But even a telecommunications giant like NEC is going to need more than heavyweight wizardry to challenge Nintendo, which monopolizes 80 percent of the video game market.

Eight-year-old Emmet O'Hanlon preferred NEC's graphics during a test run but said, "I wouldn't trade Nintendo at all. No way."

Josh Taylor, 18, agreed after playing a baseball game that features a post-game show and lacks only gold chains and pine tar for realism.

"NEC blows it away. It's far superior." Still, he said, "If I owned a Nintendo, I don't know if I'd go out and buy the new one."

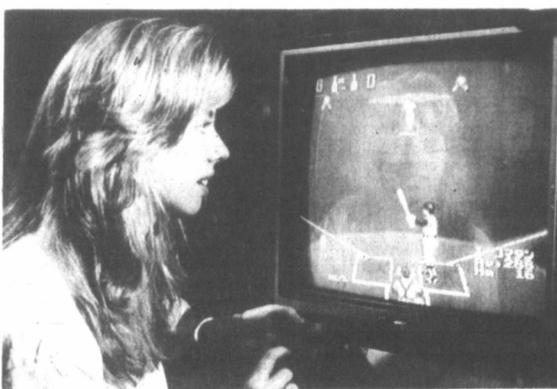

Jenny Boyd, 12, said it would take "a million dollars to give up

'After all those kids and parents have invested in Nintendo, now you're telling them to put it away in a closet and start all over again.'

my Nintendo." But after playing NEC, she told her 9-year-old sister, "Start saving your money. Any money we get will go toward this. This is a fresh game."

Like Nintendo, the NEC system is a game kids, and some adults, can't stop playing. In a space battle, white-knuckled players raced to see who can go the farthest and blast the most aliens. In pinball, getting the high score earned bragging rights.

James Herman, 9, was particularly awestruck by one NEC game in which a karate-chopping warrior battles bullies. The hero's eyes blink, his side bruises and his mouth bleeds.

"That's what I call excellent graphics," James said. "This is such an awesome game."

NEC's gadgetry has a 16-bit microprocessor, twice the power of a Nintendo. A bit measures how much information the processor can handle at once. Nintendo is testing a souped-up version, and a Sega of America Inc., subsidiary of Japan's Sega Enterprises Ltd., also has a 16-bit system on the market.

But experts say marketing and game appeal may mean more than raw computing power.

"The 16-bit guys are looking for a small niche of the market. I can't believe they're going to up-end Nintendo," said Larry Carlat, editor of Toy & Hobby World Magazine. "After all those kids and parents have invested in Nintendo, now you're telling them to put it away in a closet and start all over again with more money for better graphics."

The battle for the hearts and minds of video game players is far from child's play because of the megabucks at stake.

Nintendo of America Inc. sold $1.7 billion worth of games last year and sales should reach $2.6 billion this year. Since it introduced its boxy toy in 1985, Nintendo has sold 13 million in the United States and expects to have 19 million sold by year's end.

Becky Potter earns TSO 'Visions of Quality' award

Becky Potter, manager of Texas State Optical in Pampa, located in Pampa Mall, has received the prestigious "Visions of Quality" award, given by Texas State Optical's corporate Quality Assurance Department.

According to Michael Lombardi, director of Quality Assurance, the award system was implemented to recognize those doctors and store staff who have met and/or surpassed the quality guidelines established by the corporate office.

The award exemplifies superior service in filling eyeglass prescriptions, accurately documenting patient care, and store appearance, Lombardi said.

Each store may be reviewed as often as three times per year, said Lombardi, as it is evaluated on a 100 point scale. To win the award, the store must achieve a score of 90 or better.

Potter's store, which has been in Pampa for five years, earned a score of 100.

"TSO has always been committed to excellence, and we feel the best way to highlight our quality is to recognize those doctors who consistently uphold our standards," Lombardi said.

TSO is the Southwest's leading eye care provider, serving a five-state region of Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Mississippi. TSO has 253 locations, most of which are doctor owned and operated.

LA Herald Examiner placed on sale block

By JAMES ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Hearst Corp. has put the Los Angeles Herald Examiner up for sale, one of the newspaper's editors said.

The announcement, which according to features editor Andrea Herman was made to employees on Friday, followed months of reports the owners were holding discussions with potential buyers of the money-losing paper.

The reason was not publicly announced, but a statement to newspaper employees said the decision was a result of intense pressure from competitors of the afternoon paper.

"For a number of years, the Herald Examiner has been in an extremely challenging situation," said the statement by Robert J. Danzig, vice president and general manager of Herald Newspapers.

"We have weighed these considerations carefully and have reached a conclusion that continuing our ownership of the Herald Examiner is not compatible with the strategic direction of our newspaper company," Danzig said.

The Hearst Corp., a privately held company, has acknowledged the paper loses money, but won't disclose figures.

In recent years the newspaper has lost readers to the rival Los Angeles Times as well as to growing suburban newspapers, including The Orange County Register.

But with a circulation of 238,392 daily and 183,122 on Sunday, the Herald Examiner still is the 42nd largest newspaper in the country.

Ms. Herman said. Daily circulation peaked at 729,000 in 1967, when the Herald Examiner was the nation's largest afternoon daily.

The beginning of the circulation decline coincided with the start of a 10-year strike by the Newspaper Guild. Afternoon newspapers across the country have been hurt by the growth of suburbs because delivery is hampered by traffic.

Still, the Herald Examiner has earned a reputation as a scrappy newspaper that provides vigorous coverage of the nation's second-largest city.

The newspaper was the first to delve into the financial dealings of Mayor Tom Bradley, and its queries into the five-term mayor's ties with a commercial bank prompted last week's City Council hearings into a controversial deposit of $2 million in city funds with the bank.

Hearst hired the investment banking firm of Lazard Freres & Co. of New York to handle sale negotiations, according to the announcement given to newspaper employees.

The newspaper has 760 editorial and administrative employees, Herman said.

Israel's jobless level climbs, threatens unrest in small town

By JIM RON
Associated Press Writer
YEROHAM, Israel (AP) — An economic slump since the Palestinian uprising and the government's increased interest in the occupied lands have left this desert town and others like it with soaring unemployment and the threat of unrest.

"It has become a catastrophe. Unemployment is a time bomb in this town," said Rahel Messika, director of the government employment agency in Yeroham, a cluster of neglected tenements housing 7,000 people in the Negev Desert, 90 miles south of Jerusalem.

Analysts say high unemployment in small towns may cause tension between rich and poor and between Jews of European and Middle Eastern origin. It also could harden anti-Arab sentiment among Israeli Jews who believe Palestinians working for lower wages are stealing their jobs.

In Yeroham, the only activity at midmorning on a summer weekday is at the unemployment office, where the jobless come looking for work they know does not exist. Idle, middle-aged men seek relief in the shade next to empty cafes and grocery stores.

Yeroham was founded in the 1950s to house impoverished immigrants as part of an effort by the late Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion to develop the Negev Desert.

The town has relied on a bottle factory and two metalworks. But the plants have laid off 150 of the town's 2,000 workers, and unemployment is officially pegged at 10 percent.

"At least an additional 10 percent don't bother to register any more. They know no new offers have come in," Messika said.

Young people recently demobilized from the army are leaving Yeroham, hoping to find work and a more vigorous lifestyle in cities such as Tel Aviv.

The unemployment problem in such towns has become a major focus of concern in Israel, taking precedence in newspapers over the 19-month Palestinian uprising against Israeli rule in the occupied lands.

Last month, mayors of 30 development towns chained themselves to a fence outside Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's office to press demands for economic aid.

The 9.7 percent jobless figure for May was a 20-year high for the Jewish state. The government estimates that the June figure will break 10 percent.

Ruth Klinov, a labor relations expert at Hebrew University in Jerusalem, said the Palestinian uprising, which has disrupted the construction industry and badly hurt tourism, contributed 2 percent to the overall unemployment rate.

The Histadrut, Israel's trade union federation, organized a two-hour nationwide strike by 1.2 million workers to protest unemployment in late July. Experts say more strikes may be in the offing.

"There is a great potential for violence in unemployment, which may eventually be directed against the Histadrut itself if they don't get results," said Noah Levin-Epstein, a sociologist at Tel Aviv University.

One sign of the unrest was a wildcat strike by 50 laid-off employees of the Urdan metalworks in Netanya, which builds Israel's main battle tank, the Merkava. The workers held their managers hostage four hours to protest the dismissal orders.

Jaruzelski resigns as Communist Party head

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — President Wojciech Jaruzelski resigned Saturday as head of the Communist Party, the official PAP news agency announced.

Jaruzelski, who had led the party since 1981, resigned at a plenum during which members debated the party's future in light of recent legislative elections in which its candidates lost badly to Solidarity-backed candidates.

Jaruzelski, who was recently elected as president, was expected to give up the top party post Saturday.

The two-day plenum, which began Friday, took place less than a week before food prices are to rise under market-oriented reforms.

Earlier Saturday, the party Central Committee information policy director, Slawomir Tabkowski, told the plenum the party is changing too quickly for more doctrinaire members, the official PAP news agency reported.

"The speaker said possibilities should be created for those who are disappointed with the party ... and those who do not identify with the direction of changes to leave," PAP said.

But Jerzy Majka, the editor of the generally hard-line party daily Trybuna Ludu, said recent talk about the party's future is "unsettling to all people, not only party members," according to PAP.

Majka said the party must maintain its "rational" approach in trying to solve Poland's problems.

After lunch, the plenum discussed in secrecy the issues of personnel and leadership, according to a state media source.

Jaruzelski hinted Friday he would not hold the party leadership much longer and said a full congress of the 2-million-member party should be held soon.

"I am standing before you still, for the moment, in a double role," said Jaruzelski, who was narrowly elected to the new office of president by the National Assembly on July 19.

The party has been struggling to chart its future after it was embarrassed by the Solidarity-led opposition during legislative elections in June, the freest balloting in Poland in four decades.

The congress to determine the shape of the party could be called as early as this fall, according to party officials, but Bisztyga said no date would be set during the plenum.

"The prevailing opinion is that the congress should be held as soon as possible, as long as there is good preparation," said Bisztyga.

Newspapers have been filled with debate on whether the party should be dissolved and reconstituted into new groupings of the left.

Politburo member Janusz Reykowski told reporters: "The course of today's debate gives no justification to the opinion that the party is breaking into factions. There is an idea of respect for pluralism within the party." But he said any final decision would be up to the congress.

Opening the session, Jaruzelski challenged fellow communists to decide what "we stand for."

Broyles wins third Tri-State title

Lamesa golfer shoots 219

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

With the outcome of the tournament hinging on the final hole, Lamesa's Jake Broyles sank a four-foot birdie putt on No. 18 to win his third Tri-State senior golf title Friday.

Broyles carded a six over par 219 for three rounds at the Pampa Country Club course to claim a one-stroke victory over three other players.

Jim Kirk of Ardmore, Okla., Harold DeLong of Shawnee, Okla. and Elmer Wilson of Pampa wound up in a tie for second, forcing a playoff which Kirk won on the fourth hole.

Broyles, who was in a three-way tie for third going into today's final round, came close to blowing the championship. With a two-shot lead, Broyles double-bogeyed No. 17 when his 40-foot chip shot plopped only 10 feet in front of him and he couldn't connect on the long putt.

Broyles went into the 440-yard, par 5 No. 18 hole locked in a tie with Pampa's Elmer Wilson for first. "I didn't realize the match was that close. If I had known how close it was, I would have probably had a six on No. 18," joked Broyles. Wilson, who was trying to be-rough. Kirk, the defending seniors champion, and DeLong birdied No. 18 to force the playoff for second.

Broyles, who also won in '83 and '86, had pretty much of a straight putt for his birdie on No. 18.

"I didn't have to think about the ball breaking this way or that way," Broyles said. "My ball had the same line as Elmer's and I just walked up and hit it."

Plainview's Jack Williams, who shared the lead with Wilson after two rounds, finished two shots out at 221. Consecutive bogeys on No. 12 and 13, followed by a double-bogey on No. 16, hampered his chances.

Lubbock's Dick Alexander, runnerup a year ago, wound up at 223.

"This was the tightest tournament I can remember since I've been playing here," Broyles said. "I played pretty steady golf all the way. No. 17 was the only double-bogey I had."

Anthony hits first major league home run.

Astros demolish Giants 8-1 on four home runs

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Eric Anthony's first major league hit, the first of Houston's four home runs, and Mark Portugal's three-hitter led the Astros to an 8-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

The victory pulled the Astros within two games of the NL West-leading Giants.

Anthony, called up from from Class AA Columbus on Friday, hit a two-run homer in the second inning off Rick Reuschel, 13-5, for his first hit in five big-league at bats. He narrowly missed his second homer in the eighth, lining a double that hit the top of the left-field fence.

Portugal, 2-1, walked three and struck out eight, including Kevin Mitchell, the National League leader in homers and RBIs, three times. He pitched his first complete game since Sept. 21, 1986, when he was with Minnesota.

After the Astros scored in the first on Craig Biggio's infield hit, a stolen base, a groundout and Bill Doran's sacrifice fly, Anthony followed a walk to Ken Caminiti by hitting a 1-2 pitch far over the right-field fence.

Two outs later, Biggio hit his eighth homer of the season, a drive over the center-field fence.

Will Clark's homer, his second in two games, cut the lead to 4-1 in the third inning. But the Astros put the game away with another power surge in the fifth off reliever Trevor Wilson.

Doran walked with one out before Glenn Davis hit his 22nd homer of the year, a drive well back into the left-field seats. One out later, Caminiti hit his first homer in the Astrodome since July 19, 1987, also over the left-field fence.

The last time Houston hit four homers in a game was Sept. 10, 1987 at San Diego. Their last four-homer game in the Astrodome was June 26, 1976.

Biggio singled in Gerald Young for the game's final run in the sixth.

Bambinos drop regional opener

BROKEN BOW, Okla. — Sylvan Hills of Arkansas scored four runs in the first inning on the way to a 5-1 win over the Pampa All-Stars in the Southwest Bambino Regionals Saturday.

Pampa plays Hugo, Okla., at 1 p.m. today in the loser's bracket. Sylvan Hill did all its damage early, scoring all five runs in the first two innings.

Pampa's lone run came in the fourth inning on a leadoff homer by Duane Nickleberry. Other Pampa players with hits were Gerald Reyes, a double; Danny Frye and Tracy Peet, one single each.

Frye pitched for Pampa. He gave up seven hits while striking out five and walking one.

"That first inning is what beat us," said Pampa coach Mike Frye. "We made too many mental mistakes, but we came back and shut them down after the first two innings."

Bradshaw to be inducted into football hall of fame

Cowboys never could find formula for stopping Steelers' quarterback

By MARK GODICH
Associated Press Writer

ROANOKE — Former free safety Cliff Harris says the Dallas Cowboys arrived for Super Bowl XIII armed with a six-inch stack of computer printouts that would expose the tendencies of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

But nowhere was there a formula for undoing Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw, whose knack for the spectacular leaves Harris frustrated even today, more than 10 years after the two last matched strategies in a Super Bowl.

"I studied the psychology of the quarterback," said Harris, who played for the Cowboys from 1970-79 and was named All-Pro four times. "I would look at the play — why is Bradshaw running the play at this time. I'd look at Bradshaw. I could not figure out who he was keying.

"There was a frustration, because you might technically carry out a defense as best you could but he could still beat you with his physical ability."

That uncanny attribute helped Bradshaw attain one of pro football's highest honors. He will be inducted Aug. 5 into the Pro Football Hall of Fame at Canton, Ohio, along with defensive backs Mel Blount of the Steelers and Willie Wood of the Green Bay Packers and offensive lineman Art Shell of the Oakland Raiders.

The Steelers won four Super Bowls and eight AFC Central Division championships during Bradshaw's 14-year reign. In 1972, he led the Steelers to their first division championship in the team's 40-year history. His four Super Bowl victories remain unmatched.

He was elected to the pro football shrine in his first year of eligibility, an honor officials say is bestowed on only the true greats of the game.

"To get in on any ballot is an honor, but the first ballot makes it especially special," said Bradshaw, who lives on a 20-acre spread west of Dallas with his wife, Charla, and their two daughters.

"It gives it a little bit of sugar, it puts a little cream on top."

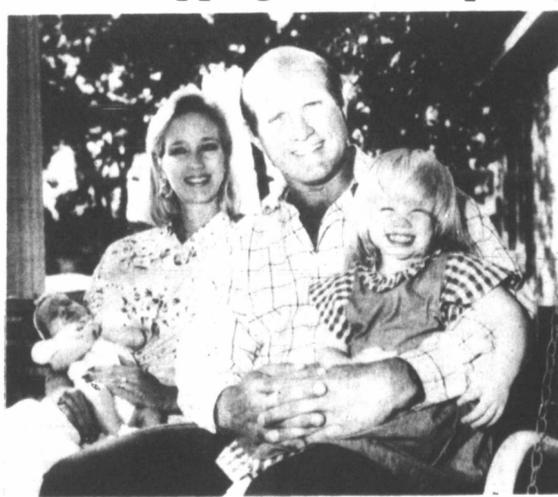

Bradshaw, the most valuable player in two NFL title games, still holds Super Bowl records for most yards passing (932) and touchdown passes (9). His 3,833 yards passing and 30 touchdown passes in 19 post-season games are both records for playoff competition.

He attributes that success to preparation and concentration.

"It's like another person jumped out of the body and said, 'OK, look, you got us this far, now let us take over from here and we'll see what we can do,'" Bradshaw said.

"History was made in big games. Plus I had such a great respect for big games. Sometimes you said, 'You may never be here again. You can't let this opportunity pass you by.'

"And nothing," he said, stopping for emphasis, "nothing bothered me. During the regular season a lot of little things would bother me, but in the big games nothing would bother me — a bad play, a bad interception — nothing would bother me. I just had that awareness, that assurance that I was going to come back and play well."

Terry Bradshaw poses with wife, Charla, and daughters, Rachel, 2, and Erin, four weeks.

It wasn't always that way. The first pick in the 1970 draft, Bradshaw signed a $25,000 first-year contract that included a $125,000 bonus with the same right hand that Steelers fans believed would end years of frustration.

But fans longing for a championship were short on patience and long on expectations for a quarterback from back-road Louisiana Tech. During a stormy career, Bradshaw was castigated for his mistakes as often as he was lauded for his accomplishments.

Bradshaw admittedly struggled his first five seasons when he "endured so much pain and so much negative." But he is quick to add, "I never just went out there and stunk the joint up."

For the first six games of the 1974 season, he was benched in favor of Joe Gilliam. Then, even though the Steelers were sailing along at 4-1-1, Coach Chuck Noll replaced Gilliam with Bradshaw. "Terry was always the guy with the talent," Noll said.

"There was no question about that."

Said Bradshaw: "When he (Noll) stopped playing games and just believed in me and turned me loose, I would have torn a building down for him.

"He stopped playing games after my fifth year and when he stopped playing games ..."

Well, the Steelers won championships.

Bradshaw led the Steelers to the 1974 championship, and they repeated the next year. All told, they won four Super Bowls in six seasons as Bradshaw threw without fear, and often long, to wide receivers Lynn Swann and John Stallworth.

He compiled some of the most memorable statistics in two Super Bowl appearances against the Cowboys.

Harris calls the Steelers' 35-31 victory over the Cowboys in Super Bowl XIII "the most devastating loss of my career." It was a typical Bradshaw playoff performance: four touchdown passes; 318 yards passing; 17 completions in 30 attempts and only one interception.

Clinging to a 21-17 lead, Bradshaw engineered two fourth-quarter touchdowns in a 19-second span that put the Steelers comfortably ahead. The first came on a 22-yard Franco Harris touchdown run, a play in which Bradshaw caught the Cowboys in the wrong defense. The second, an 18-yard touchdown pass to Swann, crossed up Cliff Harris and strong safety Charlie Waters.

Pampa's Andrew McCall will be flying high at international gymnastics competition next month.

Dream comes true for Andrew McCall

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Writer

When asked if he's ever been to South Africa before, 14-year-old Andrew McCall answered, "Only in a dream."

It's a dream that's soon to come true for the Pampa teen-ager, who was invited to compete next month in international gymnastics competitions at Johannesburg, South Africa, and Geneva, Switzerland.

McCall and his synchronized trampoline partner, 13-year-old Jeb Harris of Amarillo, are the only two Texas athletes that received invitations from the South African Amateur Tumbling and Trampoline Association. In all, nine gymnasts from the United States will make the trip.

McCall and Harris, who train at All-American Gymnastics in Amarillo, will depart for the African continent on August 2, accompanied by coaches Nard Cazzell and Chad Fox of All-American.

Once there, they will tour the area for three weeks and put on gymnastics demonstrations. Then, on August 22, the two will begin a week of competition against the best junior trampolinists and tumblers in the world at the 31st Nissan Cup in Geneva.

McCall will compete in the Junior Elite division of Acro-Gymnastics for athletes age 16 and under. Tumbling has been made a part of the Nissan Cup competition this year for the first time.

McCall's inclusion in these world-class settings is understandable after a glance at his credentials. At the state Acro-Gymnastics meet last month, he picked up three gold medals and five silvers to capture a berth at the national meet, held two weeks ago in Ogden, Utah.

At nationals, McCall and his partner Harris finished first in synchronized trampoline in the 15-17 age group. McCall also was second in tumbling, third in trampoline and fifth in double mini-trampoline. It was the first time he had medaled in the synchro, tumbling and trampoline events.

To make it to the finals of each event, an athlete must perform 10 compulsory tricks and 10 optional ones. Judges rank the performances according to difficulty, form, or both.

"Sometimes if the tricks are real hard, the judges don't care what it looks like as long as you get it done," McCall said. "You never know exactly what they're looking for, so you want a combination of easy tricks and hard tricks."

McCall will return to Pampa on Aug. 30, just in time to begin his freshman year at Pampa High School. And he's thinking of going into business for himself this September, training cheerleaders or others that want to learn tumbling skills. It's a subject he knows quite a bit about.

Walsh comes to terms with 'Pokes

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Under new owner Jerry Jones the Dallas Cowboys have proved they aren't afraid to spend top dollar to sign quarterbacks.

University of Miami star Steve Walsh was expected to be in training camp today to sign a four-year contract for $4.1 million as the top pick in the supplemental draft.

The Cowboys gave top choice Troy Aikman a six-year, $11 million contract.

Coach Jimmy Johnson said the Cowboys didn't sign Walsh to trade him.

"He has a great talent for getting the ball into the end zone," Johnson said. "We're not considering a trade for him at this time. Steve knows our system and will fit into it in a rapid fashion."

Added Johnson: "I don't see any team offering us anything that's attractive enough for Steve. Basically, he should be worth a couple of number ones and a couple of number twos. That's what we think Steve is worth."

Walsh, who decided to pass on his senior year at the University of Miami to go into the supplemental draft, was asking for a six-year deal.

Johnson said he will decide between Walsh, Troy Aikman, Scott Secules and Babe Laufenberg shortly before the regular season begins.

"I believe the competition will make both Troy and Steve better," Johnson said.

A substantial bonus was included in Walsh's contract but it wasn't disclosed. According to the contract, Walsh could be traded to any other NFL team in 1989.

After this season, he will give Johnson a list of four teams to whom he doesn't wish to be traded.

Jones defended Walsh being paid less than Aikman.

"The difference is that Troy was the number one pick in the regular draft and Steve was the number one pick in the supplemental," Jones said. "We had to go to the do-right rule in that situation."

"We'll be a much better team because of having Steve on the team. He'll make us better. We're thrilled to have him."

Johnson in finals

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — Shawn Johnson of Pampa advanced to the finals, or short-go, of the single steer roping competition at the Cheyenne Frontier Days Rodeo. Johnson's 13.0-second effort was good enough to win the first go-round of steer roping. He then posted a time of 23.5 in the second round on Saturday.

National pastime strikes out

Strate Line

By L.D. Strate

Our national pastime struck out at the All-Star Baseball Game this year. According to the Nielsen television rating, it was the lowest-rated All-Star contest since 1969. Maybe if the players were selected by the managers and not by a popularity poll, more people would watch it.

Tennis great Chris Evert has apparently joined other big-name stars like Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the LA Lakers and Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies in making their exits in 1989. Evert indicated she would retire after playing in this year's Wimbledon Tournament, which she has won three times ('74, '76, '81). She won 96 matches at Wimbledon, more than any other player.

Winning can motivate a program like nothing else.

Maybe that's why the University of Arkansas published a summer preview basketball magazine on next season's Razorbacks. Arkansas won the SWC championship last season and could very well pull a repeat. The Razorbacks return four starters and six lettermen from a 25-7 club.

The Pampa Harvesters open the 1989 football season Sept. 8 at Canyon. Their first district game is Sept. 22 against Dumas at Harvester Stadium. Two scrimmages are scheduled for Aug. 25 at Guymon, Okla. and Sept. 1 against Tascosa at home.

New England quarterback Doug Flutie is still trying to convince people he's not too small to play in the NFL. Despite winning six of the nine games he started last year, the 1984 Heisman Trophy winner is currently a backup to Tony Eason.

When Lamesa's Jake Broyles won the Tri-State Seniors golf tourney this year, he became only the eighth player to win the title three times or more since the event started in 1935. Broyles also won in 1986 and 1983. Red Gober of Austin and J.R. Brown of Amarillo hold the record for tournament victories with four each. Other three-time winners are Chick Trout, Lubbock; David Goldman, Dallas; Lofton Burnett, Lubbock; Harold DeLong, Shawnee, Okla. and Bob Giese, Amarillo.

Pampa's 13-year-old all-star team made some big league defensive plays during the West Texas State Babe Ruth Tournament last week in Andrews. Left fielder Chad Dunnam made a long run deep into foul territory to catch a flyball. Right fielder Jason Downs snagged a line drive and threw out a runner at first. Second baseman Gregg Moore made a diving stop on a ground-ball and threw to first for the final out to preserve a 9-7 win over Odessa. The Pampa youngsters won two of four games in the tournament.

Investigative reporter exposes corruption in book, TV series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three years ago investigative reporter Elaine Shannon took a leave from her job, withdrew her savings and set out to nail down the story of high-level corruption behind the murder of U.S. drug agent Enrique Camarena in Mexico. It was more than just a whodunit for Shannon. She found that the political immorality spread by the drug barons was pervasive in Mexico and there was a massive cover-up. She also found that the Reagan White House and State Department were reluctant to see the murder investigation pursued because it was disruptive of American foreign policy. Some courageous officials, however, resisted pressure and pushed the investigation. Camarena, an agent of the Drug Enforcement Administration, was abducted on Feb. 7, 1985, in Guadalajara, Mexico. He was tortured and murdered by the drug lords he was trying to bring to justice. Shannon tells the whole dirty story in her book Desperados, which has been made into a six-hour NBC miniseries called Drug Wars: The Camarena Story. The three-part series, to be shown this fall, stars Steven Bauer as Camarena, Elizabeth Pena as his wife, Mika, and Craig T. Nelson and Treat Williams as drug agents. Michael Mann (Miami Vice) was executive producer. "I traveled in Mexico and the Southwest, particularly California, and talked to everybody I could find who knew about the murder," said Shannon on a visit to Los Angeles. Shannon, who is expecting her first child next month, is married to Dan Morgan of The Washington Post. She spent 10 years covering the Department of Justice for Newsweek, which she left after beginning the book. She currently works for Time in Washington. "This is really about American policy. We have agents all over the world. Are they being supported by our embassies and our government? I talked to Mexican officials last. I didn't want them following me around and seeing who I was talking to." With the help of investigators here and abroad, Shannon was able to put together a picture of the corruption and cover-up. "In Mexico corruption is a way of life," she said. "It's essential to the drug traffic. Whenever corruption is exposed, the person is usually allowed to quietly resign." Shannon said Camarena, a very moral and dedicated man, volunteered for duty in Guadalajara because it's the only place outside of Colombia to find the drug lords. She said he was killed when he got too close to the drug bosses, as well as their high-ranking allies in the Mexican government and police. She describes an incident in the book in which American agents watched helplessly as a top official of the Mexican Federal Judicial Police allowed an escape by a suspected drug kingpin behind the murder. Informants told the agents he promised $270,000 to the official. Shannon points out in her book that a number of agents and others put their careers on the line to press ahead with the investigation and speak out against the corruption.

Bush deplors House vote on defense funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush deplored votes by the House of Representatives to cut four major defense systems but predicted that his view would prevail by the time Congress finishes work on his military budget.

Bush also foresaw ultimate victory in his fight to keep $50 billion of the cost of rescuing the savings and loan industry out of the budget — and the deficit.

House-Senate conferees voted Thursday night to reject Bush's plan and make the cost of the bailout reflected in the deficit and reduce the long-term interest cost.

At a Friday news conference in the White House briefing room, Bush adopted a soft-toned approach to the House's defense bill slashes. But he said Thursday was "not the House's most memorable moment."

"But we're going to keep on fighting for what we believe in," the president said. He said he would not accept further cuts in the Star Wars budget to protect his other defense programs.

On another hot congressional topic, Bush said he still has confidence in William Lucas, his embattled nominee to become chief civil rights enforcer in the Justice Department.

"I am convinced that much of the criticism (against Lucas) is pure gut American politics," he said.

Bush said he was working hard to save the nomination. Critics say Lucas lacks experience.

Bush called the news conference to ballyhoo the decision by Arkansas congressman Tommy Robinson to switch parties, from the Democratic to the Republican fold.

Robinson, the third Democrat in three days to switch to the Republican Party, was hailed by the president as a "man of the people."

Explaining his party switch, Robinson said, "I simply cannot wait any longer for the liberal leadership of the Democratic Party to see the light."

On his legislative agenda, Bush said, "I would not give Congress very high marks."

But he noted that both the Senate and House have Democratic majorities and said: "I have to work with these people."

Pampa's Radio Operated Plane Society

A tiny pilot sits in the cockpit of Dave Nicholson's model plane waiting for take-off.

A private airfield? Well, sort of. These planes represent just a sampling of the many styles and types of planes available for modelers.

Chance Nicholson, 8, proudly displays his model airplane. Chance is the youngest member of the club. The cloth rag wrapped around the nose of the plane is to protect the engine from dust and dirt.

All modelers travel with a flight box that contains an electric starter, fuel pump, glow plug heater, and tools. The model plane shown here is Steve Broome's Scat Twin 40, a twin engine plane that was featured in RC Modeler, an international magazine.

It's a beautiful Sunday afternoon, football season hasn't started yet, you would like to get outdoors, but not to mow the lawn, and you ask what is there to do?

Grab up a lawn chair and a cooler of something cold to drink and head out to the PROPS airfield.

Steve Broome and the members of Pampa's Radio Operated Plane Society will provide the entertainment as they put their radio operated planes through some tricky maneuvers and fancy feats of flying.

PROPS was founded in 1980 to provide an outlet for these unusual hobbyists. They lease property owned by Scott Hall for their mini-airstrip located off Loop 171.

Ranging in age from 8 to 65, current members of the Society from Pampa include Broome, Tracy Caffey, Kenneth and Zach Cambren, Rutley Chalk, Earl Crane, Rodney Darling, Arthur Dwyer, Art Fleming, Gehe Fleming, James and Monte Fleming, Dexter Hacker, Mark Hernandez, Chris Keogh, Ed Renfro, Jerrel Schoenrock, Raymond Swaney, J. D. and Jeff Williams, and Gary Wood.

ways someone to help land the plane. Crashes can be expensive.

I got to fly the famous Scat Twin Engine 40, Broome's dual engine plane that made the cover of the latest RC Modeler magazine. I would compare the flying control stick to the joy stick on a video game except it is much smaller and extremely sensitive to the slightest movement.

It was very exciting to watch the airplane go into a tailspin and panic before Broome very deftly got the plane back under control.

Professional pilots think that flying the radio-operated planes is easy, until they try it. "They don't last long," says Broome. "They are not used to operating the controls from the vantage point of head-on." As the plane changes directions and flies towards the controller, right becomes left and left becomes right in maneuvering the control sticks.

Sometimes the engine dies while the plane is in the air. Rudder and elevator control is not lost and the skill of the pilot is tested when he must glide the plane in for a landing without damaging the aircraft.

Average cost for the hobby is $300 — $100 for the radio, $100 for

An unidentified flying object? No it's one of the model airplanes flown by the PROPS members going through its aerobatic maneuvers.

Out of town members include Bobby Finsterwald, Mobeetic; Dave and Chance Nicholson, Perryton; Troy Stanton, White Deer, and Clay Walser, Wheeler.

"Radio operated planes can do more aerobatics than real planes," according to Broome. "Real planes don't have the power and pilots get too dizzy to do all the stunts our planes can do."

The planes vary in design and detailing. Beginner planes have wings that are located high on the body of the plane. They are not as aerobatic as low wing planes but are easier to maneuver.

This reporter felt like Johnny Carson, who always seems to get himself involved with his more unusual guests, when I was asked if I wanted to try my hand at the controls. I was rather hesitant. I don't think my lifestyles budget covers radio operated planes damaged in a crash until Broome explained dual control operation.

Two sets of controls are used to assist beginner pilots. The master control is operated by an experienced pilot much like the dual controls on a driver's education car. Until someone has actually "soloed" or landed a plane by themselves, there is althe motor and $100 for the plane. Style of planes vary from standard design to scale models of real planes as in Walsher's DeHavilland Beaver, a Canadian bush plane.

Radio controls will operate a plane at a distance of one mile, but at that distance the pilot can't see the plane. Flight speeds range from 100 mph for the type of planes flown by PROPS to 200 mph for racing planes. According to Broome, the Air Force even has a supersonic radio operated plane.

Coloring on the top of the plane is usually very attractive while the underneath side is painted in a garrish color that will stand out against the horizon.

Members take turns flying their planes up to four or five at a time, and a turn lasts about 15 minutes. According to Broome and the experience of this reporter that is about as long as someone can keep looking up and concentrate on the operation.

The FCC regulates all radio frequencies and 22 bands are allowed for radio operated planes. All operators must be cleared for take-off to insure no two planes are operated at one time on the same frequency, causing the planes to crash.

Membership in PROPS is $24 per year. Pilots must have insurance before they will be allowed to fly on the local field. Most members join the Academy of Model Aeronautics for $36 per year, which provides the flyers with liability insurance.

The current board of directors are Caffey, president; James Fleming, vice president; Broome, secretary/treasurer; Jeff Williams, elected board member; Swaney, appointed board member; and Finsterwald, past president.

New members are welcome and anyone interested in learning more about this exciting hobby can contact any of the PROPS members. They will share information about the best kinds of planes for beginners and best available prices, and teach new members the fundamentals of flying and care of equipment.

Jerrel Schoenrock keeps a watchful eye on his airplane while demonstrating some fancy flying techniques for prospective new member Andy Harris.

Crowd attends Golden Agers luncheon

How about a rousing cheer and a chuckle or two for the soft rains and cooler weather? Even so, Pampans did a lot of going. Let's see where they went.

Jim and Paula Chervenka, Joseph and Celest vacationed in Orlando, Fla. and stayed at the luxurious Walt Disney Inn.

Ruby Smith and Emma Crouch took a 17-day tour of the Pacific Northwest and parts of Canada.

Louise and Lonnie Richardson and relatives vacationed in Canada.

Jeannie Minton is taking summer classes at Southwestern State University in Weatherford, Okla.

Passion and Secret Young of Santa Anna, Ca. came to Pampa to spend a month with their grandparents Jessie and Evelyn Williams. The young ladies have enjoyed visiting with cousins and other relatives.

Rick and Martha Clark spent a few days trout fishing in Colorado.

Cressie Hood spent a month with her daughter Nancy Swanson and family in Terre Haute, Ind. Nancy, an interior decorator, brought her mom home and performed some acts of magic in completely redecorating Cressie's home in one week. Cressie vowed Nancy did the work of three. Nancy and her husband have by this time moved to Louisville, Ky. to make their home.

Part of the entertainment for golfers' wives of the Top O' Texas Senior Golf Tournament was a luncheon with informal modeling of fashions from local stores. Many of the fashions were purchased by the out of town guests. Cherene Beaver was a refreshing first time model, as at home showing off the pretty clothes as she would be in raising and training mules. Diversified interests, huh?

Joyce and Vince Simon hosted a Simon family reunion at their home at Greenbelt Lake all last week. The eight brothers, sisters, spouses came from parts of Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana and the mother Barbara and her sister Marie from Elk City. Barbara at 83 was the good sport who played cards every night until midnight. Couples, who are old hands by now at the annual reunion, took turns preparing food. Bill and Robin Simon arranged and decorated for a luau. Another day was spent fishing and boating. Sissy and Jack Curtis pulled off a family golf tournament of three groups of four golfers. One night there was a fish fry. How's that for a wonderful family vacation and reunion?

A large crowd of senior citizens attended the Salvation Army's Golden Agers monthly luncheon, hosted by Cabot Corporation, last Tuesday. Serving and helping in any possible way were Sonny Golden, Glen Hamilton, Lynn Luster, Glenda Fletcher, Bill Hammer, Dee Dee Laramore and her daughter Angel, Jane Gattis.

Also assisting were Eddy Miller, an Adventure Corps volunteer, and Misty and Cindy Welch, Dawn Miller, Jamie and Olivia Villalon, Erica Gama, Momy, Kathy and Beatrice Rodriguez of the Girls Guard and Sunbeams. The food was scrumptious and Bingo worlds of fun. Senior citizens 55 and over and the disabled of any age were invited to participate.

Michael Zemanek of IRI was greatly surprised when he was 'kidnapped' from work by his wife, Pam, and friends, Sam and Jan Haynes, and taken to Ruidoso for a weekend of golf and horse racing. The purpose was to celebrate Michael's 40th birthday. Happy birthday!

Coach Sam Haynes of Pampa Middle School and son, David, just returned from Michael Jordan's basketball camp in Chicago. David, are you still a Laker's fan?

Condolences to Gerald Owen! Gerald drove his brand new, shiny car to Dallas, where it was stolen!

John and Virginia Glover spent the week at a Baptist Church camp, a smaller of version of Glorietta, in Mississippi.

Charlene and Kenneth Holt recently visited their son and family in Houston and while there saw the Astros play in the Astrodome. Next was a river cruise down the Colorado River beginning at Burnett with deer, Spanish goats and unusual birds as part of the scenery. Later at Fredericksburg Kenneth toured the Admiral Nimitz Museum on Sunday while Charlene enjoyed her second day of shopping.

Attention, please, all Woodrow Wilson students of the pre-40s! Did you know there will be a "Pre-40s Reunion" at Woodrow Wilson on Saturday and Sunday September 16 and 17? Maxine Hawkins sent a copy of the PISD newsletter containing a school history written by Eloise Lane, to her brother in La., who sent back newspaper clippings and picture, one of an early band directed by Winston Savage. R.L. Edmondson was in the picture, too.

Finally, Ray Thornton, principal, suggested a reunion when the library is completed. Mary Graham, committee chairman, Maxine Hawkins, Marie Smith, Evelyn Johnson, Margie Rogers (she and her two children are former students) and Charlene Holt, school secretary, met recently and made plans for a catered dinner on Sept. 16 with a short program and time for visiting and an open house on Sunday afternoon.

A search is on for a picture of Mr. Lewis, first principal for six months and of Annie Daniels, considered by many to be the school's first principal. Spread the word to relatives and friends who were pre-40s students. A grade school reunion should be something to remember.

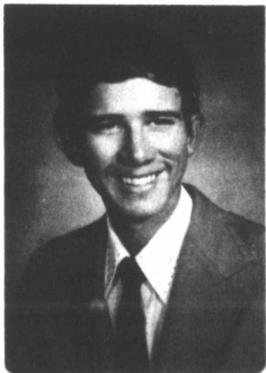

Speaking of reunions, the Class of '69 are ready for theirs this coming weekend. A pre-party is set for Friday at the Club Biarritz. Registration begins Saturday morning at the high school with a picnic planned in Central Park from noon to 4 p.m. and a dance at M.K. Brown Auditorium at 6 p.m. Sounds like plenty of good visiting time.

Mother and daughter, Pat Griffen and Rebecca Vaughn, recently enjoyed lunch at The Loft. Pat works at Michelle's and Rebecca is working for Bette's for the summer. They sing high praises for their bosses in friendly competition.

See you next week! Katie.

Blinds—easy care window fashions

BLINDS
An Easy-Care Solution to Window Fashions

Vertical blinds are a practical, beautiful window treatment that continues to grow in popularity. From the sleek, contemporary look of aluminum or PVC (polyvinyl chloride) blinds, to the softer, more traditional appeal of fabric, there's a look that's compatible with almost every decor.

Exciting colors and new materials are available to create almost any look the homeowner desires. Adding a top treatment, such as balloons, poufs or a valance, in a fabric that matches or coordinates with the verticals, can further soften the look. However, in addition to aesthetics, other factors to consider include cost and durability, how well the blinds control light and provide privacy and how they operate or draw.

PVC is the least expensive material used to make the vanes (also called slats or louvers). Aluminum is moderately priced. Because both materials are opaque, they provide total privacy when the blinds are closed. Both are very durable materials.

Fabrics used for blinds range from inexpensive handwovens to high-end macrame knits. The amount of privacy they provide depends on the opacity of each individual fabric. Fabric vanes can be free hanging or inserted into a groover. Free-hanging vanes are usually coated with acrylic to prevent cuffing at the bottom and are weighted so they don't flap. Woven and non-woven fabrics are more likely to wear along the edges over time than knits. Wovens are cut to the width of the vane with the edges left unfinished; knits usually have a finished edge.

On the practical side, the type of draw required depends on how the window or door opens. On the aesthetic side, the type of draw and the width of the vanes will affect the extent of the view when the blinds are open.

The headrail mechanism determines which way the blinds traverse - from left to right only, from right to left only, from the center out to either end or from anywhere in between. In general, if the blind draws from one end to the other, more of the view will be obstructed when they are open because all vanes will stack at one end. Blinds opening from the center, or from somewhere in between, provide a more panoramic view. Vane width is important, too. Wider vanes mean fewer vanes to stack up when the blind is open.

Light control is another consideration. In general, PVC an aluminum vanes, as well as fabric vanes that are inserted in to a groover, block out light completely when closed. In addition, some free-hanging fabric verticals are made from fabric that is naturally opaque. Some hardware gives better draw and close capabilities. To provide privacy, vanes should be evenly spaced and overlap when closed.

Homemakers' News

Where easy maintenance is a consideration, vertical blinds win hands down. They collect less dust than horizontal blinds and are easier to keep dust-free than curtains or drapes. Routine care involves nothing more than dusting, using a clean, soft cloth or the brush attachment of a vacuum. Most of the fabrics used for vertical blinds have special finishes for easy maintenance. Some are treated with an anti-static finish to repel dust, while others are treated with a fabric protector for easy release of soil.

Occasionally, more than dusting is required. Treated fabric verticals can usually be spot cleaned using detergent suds, however, check manufacturer's instructions for specific cleaning advice. For PVC blinds, it is recommended to use an all purpose cleaner according to the package instructions, or wipe the surface with a sponge or cloth dipped in a solution of liquid hand dishwashing detergent and warm water. Rinse thoroughly and dry with a clean soft cloth. To make future dusting and cleaning easier, apply furniture polish to the newly cleaned vanes. For aluminum blinds, use a cleaner that will not scratch the vanes. Apply a non-abrasive all purpose cleaner or a solution of liquid hand dishwashing cloth, then rinse with a sponge or cloth wrung from clean water. Dry with a soft, clean cloth.

Of course, not all the news in blinds is vertical. Horizontal blinds are still a viable, fashionable window treatment. They are generally made of the same types of materials and can be cleaned in the same way as verticals. Roll-up blinds require slightly different care than stacking blinds. For light cleaning, wiping the blinds with a soft damp sponge or cloth is preferable to dusting. For more thorough cleaning, use a soft bristle brush, a detergent solution and a clean-water rinse.

4-H Trail Ride canceled

DATES
July 31 - 4-H Breads Project "Bagel" Workshop - 9 a.m. - Annex

Trail Ride Canceled

The 1989 Gray County 4-H Trail Ride has been canceled. The ride was set for Aug. 5-6 at the Sitter Ranch in McLean. However, due to several other conflicts that same weekend, we have canceled the trail ride for 1989. We are planning to set a trial ride for the summer of 1990. I hope this cancellation has not caused anyone any major inconvenience.

Citizenship Is Major Goal of 4-H
Citizenship can be a lot of different things, such as helping hospital patients or senior citizens, solving community problems and speaking out on community issues.

Yet, citizenship is more than an act or activity — and more than the sum of a series of acts of activities. It is an attribute of the individual to demonstrate social responsibility and contribute to community development.

This is the 4-H Citizenship Program — a vehicle allowing young people to both demonstrate and strengthen their commitment to building a better na-

4-H Corner

Joe Vann

Citizenship means getting involved and being responsible individuals. It is a basic good of the entire 4-H program.

4-H members enrolled in the citizenship program develop an insight into the principles, processes and structures of democracy. They learn how issues affect our nation and the world, and how an individual can become involved in addressing these issues.

The National 4-H Citizenship Awards Program recognizes the achievements of 4-H'ers as they develop the skills they need to be active, well-adjusted community leaders.

Guidelines for watering plants

REBECCA BARKLEY

DANA DAVIS
Navy Seaman Recruit Dana L. Davis, daughter of Charles Davis, Skellytown, has completed recruit training in Orlando, Flor.

Watering plants seems to be one of the most confusing parts of gardening. The trouble is, too many gardeners don't realize this until it's too late.

"How often should I water?" and "How much should I apply?" are, at this time of year, the top questions from gardeners. Since water is both essential for healthy plant growth and expensive, it's important to get it to the plant's roots and keep it there.

The following are several suggestions for watering. These techniques apply to all gardening, from shade and fruit trees and vegetable gardens to lawns and houseplants.

1. Never water strictly by the calendar. We don't drink water every ten minutes or every hour so why should plants be watered every two days or once a week? Instead, learn to recognize dry plants and soil and use these as your tip-off for watering. Too many factors determine how fast a soil dries for us to put watering on a regular basis.

2. When the plants are dry, water thoroughly. Water lawns so that the soil will be wet several inches down, to encourage deep rooting and drought tolerance. One of the worst mistakes people make on their lawns is trying to "sprinkle" them each day by using their thumb and the end of a running hose. Most gardeners just don't have the patience to stand in one spot long enough for deep water penetration.

Water trees by taking the sprinkler off the end of the hose and letting water run slowly for several hours. Root feeders are also effective.

3. Most plants should be watered in the morning. Watering during the day results in great water loss by evaporation and can result in burned leaves where sunlight hits the water droplets. Evening watering increases the likelihood of disease invasion, as most diseases develop rapidly in cool, moist conditions.

4. While watering your lawn, try to keep water off the leaves of trees and shrubs as much as possible. This is essentially important for such plants as crape myrtle and roses, which are troubled by leaf disease which spread rapidly on wet surfaces.

5. Symptoms for plants which have been kept too wet are about the same as for those kept too dry. Roots in waterlogged soils die and do not take up water, so plants wilt and turn yellow. Try not to water a drowning plant!

6. Organic matter, such as peat moss and rotted manure, can reduce water loss by runoff when they are worked into the soil. To keep moisture in the soil, use a mulch such as straw, grass clippings, redwood bark or gravel. In addition to reducing evaporation, mulches also keep the soil cooler.

7. Be especially careful to keep newly planted trees and shrubs properly watered. Their developing root systems are sensitive to under-and-over watering.

8. Always soak inorganic fertilizers into the soil immediately after applying. These materials are excellent sources of plant foods, but they are all salts and can pull water out of plant tissues, resulting in burn.

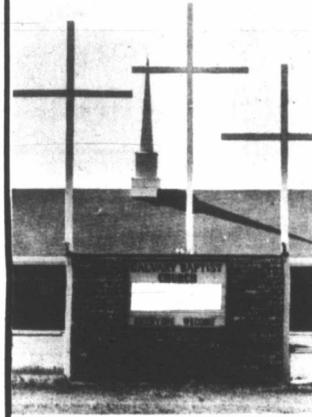

9. Plants, particularly grass, that are properly fertilized can make more efficient use of limited water than unfertilized plants.

10. Use plant growth rates to guide fertilization rates. Heavy fertilizer rates require heavy water rates! Low to moderate fertilizer rates allow for optimum use of water and fertilizer. Using lawn grass growth as the example: When grass grows 2 to 3 inches per week it is overfertilized. On the other hand, when grass growth is less than one-half inch per week and bermuda grass is mostly seed heads it is underfertilized. Generally this grass will lack a deep green color also.

Relatives' persistence leads to aggravation

DEARABBY: Please help me with a problem I've struggled with for 35 years. If your sister and brother-in-law, whom you dearly love, continue to try to convert you from your religious faith, how can you give them the firm message that you have no interest in changing your religion to theirs? (My brother-in-law is a heart patient, and I don't want to be responsible for causing heart failure or a rise in blood pressure. He is 74.)

I am a single woman, and to keep peace in the family, I am tolerating their relentless efforts to convert me from my own Christian Bible convictions to theirs — which is considered to be some kind of cultist movement by other Christian churches.

At my age, 77, I wish to be left alone and take full responsibility for my eternal fate — whatever that may be.

I was baptized at age 63 and have accepted Jesus Christ as my Lord and Savior. I have told them this repeatedly, but this explanation falls on deaf ears, and they keep trying to take the blindfold off my eyes in order to see the real truth of their belief (their words).

How do other people handle this delicate situation without making mortal enemies? I am about to blow my top and can't take any more aggravation. How would you handle it, Abby?

HAD ENOUGH IN LITTLE ROCK

DEAR HAD ENOUGH: I would tell these people that the subject of religion is off limits. And either they respect my wishes, or they wouldn't be seeing much of me. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: I still can't get over that English-born clergyman who objected to the way Californians hugged everybody they met. Doesn't the Bible say we should love one another? I am a senior citizen, and I enjoy being hugged by family and friends. In our church, we show affection by hugging.

I am enclosing the poem I read when I gave devotions for our church women's meeting. It's titled, "Hugging — the Perfect Cure for What-ever Ails You".

- It has no unpleasant side effects
- It is nothing less than a miracle drug! (Florida Teddy Bear)

PANHANDLE PEST REPORT

Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension entomologist, reports that in general Southwestern corn cormer moths are emerging. Spider mites are increasing. A few western bean cutworms have been reported. Watch for greenbugs in sorghum. Fleahoppers are the concern in cotton.

CORN INSECTS

Southwestern corn borer moth emergence is under way. Soon after moth emergence begins, eggs will become evident on corn. Most eggs will be oviposited on the upper surface of the middle seven leaves — two leaves above the ear leaf and four leaves below the ear leaf.

Eggs are laid singly or in masses of two to three. They are flat and overlap like fish scales. Creamy-white when first laid, they develop three red lines one day later.

Eggs hatch in five days and small larvae begin feeding behind leaf collars and ears and beneath shucks of the primary ear. Insecticide applications are directed toward these second generation larvae. Control is justified when 20 to 25 percent of the plants are infested with eggs or newly hatched larvae.

Spider mites are on a general increase, but fields vary considerably. Check individual fields and make control decisions based on the dynamic economic injury level table available in the County Extension Office.

Western bean cutworm is a pest of corn that we seldom have to deal with in Texas. The extreme northwest corner of the Texas Panhandle is the only area in Texas where these worms cause economic damage.

Joe Hershey, Texline area farmer, reported finding a few western bean cutworm eggs the early part of the week of July 16.

Western bean cutworm moths are active in early July. Eggs are laid on the upper surface of upper leaves in masses of 5-200. They hatch in five to seven days.

Newly hatched larvae are pale with faint diamond-shaped markings on the back. Mature larvae are gray to pinkish-brown with three dark stripes on the first segment behind the head.

Depending on the stage of corn development, the newly hatched larvae move to one of two sites of feed. If the corn has not tasseled, the young cutworms will feed in the whorl on the developing tassel. If the corn has tasseled, the young cutworms will move to the developing ear to feed on the silk. Begin checking fields for this pest at the first sign of tasseling and continue until silks turn brown. An insecticide application is justified if 8 percent of the plants have egg masses or small larvae, and the crop is 95 percent tasseled.

SORGHUM

Whorl feeding fall armyworms continue to be reported from the eastern half of the Texas Panhandle.

Greenbug infestations tend to increase as sorghum develops a full canopy. An insecticide application is justified on sorghum six inches to boot when greenbugs are causing yellowing or red spotting and before any entire leaves are killed.

COTTON

Fleahoppers should be the insect of concern in cotton at this time. Square set is of the utmost importance. An overall square set of 75 percent during the first three weeks of squaring should be your goal. Where 25 to 30 fleahoppers are found per 100 terminals and less than 75 percent of the squares are being set, fleahopper control is recommended.

CRP SIGN-UP CONTINUES THROUGH AUG. 4

An open sign-up period for the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) has been announced by the U.S. Department of Agriculture ending Aug. 4.

During this ninth sign-up, as with the eighth, some cropped wetlands and cropland subject to scour erosion as well as highly erodible lands are eligible to be bid into the CRP.

Lands are eligible for the program if the lands were cropped in two of the five crop years from 1981 to 1985 and meet other eligibility criteria. Land subject to scour must have erosion caused by out-of-bank water flows which can be expected to flood at least once every 10 years.

More than 4 million acres of cropped wetlands were in production in the U.S. in 1982. Bringing these lands into the program is expected to produce additional environmental benefits.

The majority of this acreage is along major rivers. The enrolled land must be planted to trees or another approved vegetative cover.

Persons wishing to participate in the CRP may obtain additional information from their local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) county office.

Business blossoms at Neches herb farm

By KELLI R. STEVENS
Palestine Herald-Press

NECHES (AP) — Self-proclaimed hillbilly Max McKenzie spends most of each day watering thousands of plants and wielding his most valuable tool, a pair of worn scissors, to trim branches and leaves.

Business at the Neches Herb Farm has blossomed. Seven years ago, McKenzie took over his wife's flower house and now there are four greenhouses and a 3-acre spread.

He raises some plants for growers, but loads many into truck and sells them at the former K mart garden center at Palestine Mall in Palestine.

On Fridays and Saturdays, he readily shares knowledge of the herbs' medicinal and culinary benefits with his customers.

"If people want to know what little I know, I'm happy to tell them," he said, "because everything I know, I learned the hard way."

The 60-odd types of plants he raises range from as many as 20 different kinds of mints, three kinds of lavender, tiny Thai peppers reputed to be the hottest in the world, expensive French tarragon used in salad dressings and pineapple- and lemon-scented thymes. He also grows traditional herbs such as rue, wormwood, sage, rosemary and garlic chives, which, he said, date back to Biblical times.

McKenzie said that tansy and pennyroyal serve dual purposes of lawn groundcover and insect and ant repellents. Gotucola, an McKenzie shows his most valuable tool — a pair of scissors.

African herb, has been noted in herbalist magazines for its brain stimulation powers. McKenzie said gotucola is available in health food stores in a pill form but that the plant form is more powerful.

"A lot of herbs were used for medicinal purposes," he said. "But nowadays, people would rather pop a pill in their mouths than mess with growing the plants."

McKenzie said herbs have grown in popularity the past few years.

"People in the cities like them a lot because they don't have a garden, and other people buy them just to collect them and say they have another one of something nobody else has," he said. "We could really sell a lot more than we could raise."

McKenzie's wife, Edith, said the only time the two get a day off from nurturing the delicate plants is when it rains.

Mrs. McKenzie said she worries about her 64-year-old husband's health, but he said he thrives on raising the plants, especially the rare herbs for which seeds cannot be bought.

"If you can imagine having lots of little babies, you know what we go through every day," he said.

Aquaculture conference to be in Corpus Christi

GALVESTON — The Texas Aquaculture Association, in cooperation with the Texas Sea Grant College Program and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, has set the dates and place for the 1990 Texas Aquaculture Conference.

The conference is scheduled for Jan. 30 through Feb. 1, 1990, at the Wyndam Hotel in Corpus Christi.

To mark the 20th anniversary of TAA (formerly known as Fish Farmers of Texas) and the dawn of an era in which technology, public sector support and private sector commitment have merged to accelerate the development of fish and shellfish farming in Texas, organizers are working to make this the premier aquaculture event in the nation.

Besides changing the location from the Texas A&M University campus to the Corpus Christi bayfront, the planners have sought to enhance the effectiveness of the conference bus tour of both fresh and saltwater hatcheries and cultural facilities.

Nationally recognized authorities on various aspects of aquaculture production, economics, marketing, processing and facility design will provide presentations directed at crawfish, tilapia, softshell crabs, shrimp, red drum, catfish, bivalves, hybrid striped bass and fish-out operations.

Further conference information is available from Dr. George Chamberlain, Coastal Aquaculture Specialist, Rt. 2 Box 589, Corpus Christi, Texas 78410 (512/265-9203).

Prospective trade show exhibitors should contact Brian Branner, Trade Show Coordinator, 114 W. Crews, Karnes City, Texas 78118 (512/780-3304).

'Seedicide' could reduce need of herbicides, hoes

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

A chemical "seedicide" that kills dormant weed seeds in soil could reduce the need for other herbicides, as well as for hoes, to weed horticultural crops, according to scientists at the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

An acre of farm field or garden contains tens of millions of weed seeds in the top 6 inches of soil. About 5 percent to 10 percent emerge each year. Some seeds can remain dormant for 100 years.

The chemical, methyl isothiocyanate — MIT — could act as a seedicide by killing dormant seeds, according to plant physiologist John R. Teasdale of the USDA Agricultural Research Service at Beltsville, Md.

"Most herbicides kill only a small fraction of weed seeds that germinate each year," Teasdale says, "but MIT directly kills dormant seeds."

Exceptions are seeds with a hard coat, such as velvetleaf, morning glory, bindweed and some legumes.

Teasdale points out that MIT is not to be confused with methyl isocyanate, the chemical involved in the disaster at Bhopal, India.

"Actually," he says, "MIT is the active compound in several registered pesticides used by vegetable and turf farmers for years to control fungi, insects, nematodes and weeds." Until now, he adds, no one had shown that MIT killed seeds before they sprouted.

According to Teasdale, MIT degrades rapidly in the soil, usually within a few days, and ultimately turns into non-toxic compounds.

Preliminary experience indicates that the chemical could possibly eliminate many weed problems for fruit and vegetable growers, homeowners and gardeners, while reducing herbicide use.

For vegetable growers, herbicide use would drop, from frequent sprayings to occasional spot-treatments that clean up weeds from seeds carried in by wind, wildlife or irrigation water, or contaminated crop seeds.

Teasdale believes that MIT would probably be too costly to use on corn, soybeans and other field crops, but a more active compound might be more economically feasible.
