Moslem captors claim to have hanged Higgins

Lt. Col. William R. Higgins

By RIAD KAHWAJI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem captors said today they hanged U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins and released a videotape showing his execution in retaliation for Israel's kidnapping of a Moslem cleric.

The videotape showed a man purported to be Higgins dangling from a gallows with both his hands and feet tied by rope. The victim wore a white blindfold, and his head was tilted forward.

A typewritten statement in Arabic signed by the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth said the 44-year-old hostage was hanged at 3 p.m. (7 a.m. CDT). Both the tape and the statement were delivered to a Western news agency an hour after the deadline.

The group had threatened to kill Higgins, calling him a "proven spy," if it did not free Karim Obeid, who was not freed.

There was no way to immediately verify today's claim by the Moslem group and whether the hanging had occurred today.

A diplomatic source told The Associated Press the United Nations received unconfirmed reports that Higgins was shot to death after the shooting down of the Iranian Airbus by the U.S.S. Vincennes on July 3, 1988. No specific date for the death was given.

As President Bush landed in Chicago this morning for a speech to the National Governors' Association, White House spokesman Bill Harlow said the U.S. officials had no confirmation of Higgins' death.

Bush expressed a "sense of outrage" and told the governors he was cutting short his visit and returning to Washington.

Higgins, of Danville, Ky., was serving as head of an observer group attached to the U.N. peacekeeping force in south Lebanon when he was seized Feb. 17, 1988. His captors accused him of spying for the CIA.

In Jerusalem earlier today, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel proposed trading all his country's Shiite Moslem captives for all captured Israeli soldiers and foreign hostages held by Shiite groups in Lebanon. Rabin made the proposal in an announcement broadcast on state-run Israel radio.

Shiite groups in Lebanon are believed to hold three Israeli soldiers and 17 foreigners, including nine Americans. Israeli security sources estimate 50 to 60 Shiite Moslems from Lebanon are held in Israeli prisons.

In Tehran earlier today, Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati condemned both the death threat and the kidnapping of Obeid.

Lebanese security sources and Israeli officials say Obeid played a role in the kidnapping of Higgins last year, but Obeid denies it.

In Sunday's statement, which was delivered to a Western news agency in Beirut, Higgins' captors said carrying out the death sentence "will be our first response to the stupid Israeli aggression and the flagrant American support that proves U.S. complicity in the crime."

Hezbollah and the Syrian-backed mainstream Shiite Moslem Amal militia called a general strike in Lebanon today to protest Obeid's abduction.

Businesses were closed throughout Moslem west Beirut and its Shiite-populated southern slums, as well as the cities of Sidon, Tyre, Nabatieh and Baalbek in south and east Lebanon.

In Jerusalem earlier in the day, Deputy Prime Minister Shimon Peres defended Israel's decision to abduct Obeid, whom Israeli officials have accused of instigating attacks on Israel. Peres said Israeli officials hope he can be swapped for three Israeli soldiers missing in Lebanon since 1986 and believed held by Hezbollah.

"I think that anything that prevents terror attacks against Israel, the kidnapping of our soldiers, must be done within the confines of law when there is a state of law," Peres said.

"Unfortunately in the case of Lebanon, it is a wild country and Israel must defend itself," he added.

Obeid is the reputed spiritual leader of the Shiite Moslem Hezbollah militia in south Lebanon, the umbrella group for factions believed to be holding 17 foreign hostages in Lebanon, nine of them Americans.

Lebanese security sources and Israeli officials say Obeid played a role in the kidnapping of Higgins last year, and the Israelis have hinted that Obeid was abducted in an effort to obtain the release of hostages believed held by Hezbollah.

In Paris, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler called the threat "an affront to the entire civilized community."

"It is outrageous and uncivilized that he should have been taken hostage in the first place," she said of Higgins. "It is equally outrageous to threaten to kill him."

She said Secretary of State James Baker III discussed Higgins' situation earlier Sunday at a Paris meeting with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

The group holding Higgins said in a Dec. 12 statement that it had sentenced the Marine to death and said he "made full confessions about his espionage activities."

On Sunday, the group's statement said: "Therefore, we reiterate today that we shall carry out by hanging the death sentence handed down against proven spy Higgins at exactly 3 p.m. (7 a.m. CDT) Monday if Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid and his two brethren have not been freed by then."

Israeli commandos stole into the southern Lebanese village of Jibchit early Friday, kidnapped Obeid from his apartment and flew him to Israel in a helicopter.

His cousin, Ahmed Obeid, and a friend, Majid Fahs, also were seized, Lebanese police said. A neighbor of Obeid's was shot to death by troops when he opened his door during the kidnapping.

Israel described Ahmed Obeid and Majid Fahs as "assistants" of Obeid.

Aussie wins bull riding for White Deer Rodeo

By SONNY BOHANAN

WHITE DEER — Darren Cook of Sydney, Australia, must feel right at home in Texas, the state that prides itself on having the biggest and best of everything.

For starters, Cook traveled further than any other competitor to arrive at White Deer's 30th Annual Amateur Rodeo. Then, in the span of eight seconds, the cowboy from Down Under outstripped all other rough stock riders with a bone-jarring trip on a bull aptly named Texas Tornado.

Cook, the last bull rider Saturday night, knew he needed at least a 79 to surpass co-leaders Keith Adams of Odessa and Jason Harris of Spearman. He held tight as Texas Tornado burst out of the gate, whirled to the left, sidestepped and bolted along the fence.

Half a minute later, the results were in: Cook had posted an 84, giving him the highest score and the biggest paycheck — $571.55 — of any other contestant in the rodeo.

Cook's feat takes on even greater significance when the stock is taken into consideration. Allen McCloy's bulls came prepared to wage war for the final performance, and only four of Saturday's 15 bull riders covered the full eight seconds. Mike Moore of Post and Dusty Brewer, the rodeo clown, were both hooked and thrown to the arena floor, while another bull did a dance on the back of Lubbock's Max Payne.

The saddle broncs had a score to settle as well. Jerry Dodd of Amarillo drew a suicidal bronc called Silver Bullet that banged out of the chute, crashed to the ground, slammed into one fence, then crossed the arena and tried to jump the fence on the other side.

But Dodd was unfazed. He got on another bronc for a reride and won the event with a score of 78.

Although no bareback riders bested Kenny Smith's 81-point performance from Thursday night, second and third places changed hands Saturday. Todd Bebb of Clayton, N.M., posted a score of 78 to nail down the runner-up spot, while Adam Brewster of Snyder was close behind with a 74.

Hereford's Delbert Davis surpassed another Hereford cowboy, Kirby Kaul, for the bull dogging title. Davis dropped his steer in 6.37 seconds, pushing Kaul and his 6.72-second time back to second place.

New leaders emerged in the team roping competition Saturday. Billy Stevens and Steve Lookingbill of Dumas joined forces for a 5.21 clocking and a first-place paycheck.

Snyder's Leslie Ward remained unbeaten in breakaway roping after finishing in 3.10 seconds Thursday, while Sherry Johnson, also a Thursday competitor, captured the barrel race

Sides refuse to budge as Cambodia talks open

By ELAINE GANLEY
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Diplomats from nearly 20 countries have opened a month-long international conference on Cambodia with calls for a comprehensive peace formula but no new proposals to lift the nation from two decades of conflict.

China and Vietnam, the two main power brokers in Cambodia, and the powerful Khmer Rouge guerrilla group were to address the conference today.

"We know the path to Cambodian internal reconciliation is likely to be long and arduous," U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Sunday. "But today we take the first steps."

His words reflected the measured optimism expressed by all speakers at the huge rectangular table at the International Conference Hall, a block from the Arc de Triomphe.

But the main rivals in the conflict, Cambodia's Vietnamese-backed prime minister, Hun Sen, and resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk, failed on the first day to budge from their seemingly irreconcilable positions. And none of the 10 nations speaking Sunday put forward a proposal to break the deadlock.

Sihanouk insisted on the need for an interim government composed of the four parties to the conflict — the three factions of the resistance coalition and Hun Sen.

Hun Sen refused a role for the Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge, saying any measure of power for the strongest of the resistance guerrilla groups would "open the door for them to return to power or provoke a civil war no one could limit or control."

During the Khmer Rouge's nearly four-year rule in the 1970s, hundreds of thousands of Cambodians were killed as it attempted to remold the country into an agrarian commune. Khmer Rouge rule ended with the 1978 Vietnamese invasion.

Foreign Minister Roland Dumas of France indicated Sunday that the four factions would reopen negotiations on the sidelines of the conference.

Dumas suggested the ministers provide a "political orientation" for working commissions, then return in a month for the signing of what is to be a treaty of peace and neutrality for Cambodia.

Among the items on the agenda is creating an international mechanism to monitor the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia and an end to foreign aid to the rival sides.

Hun Sen announced that just 26,000 Vietnamese soldiers remained in his country and repeated that they would be gone by Sept. 27. Western analysts have estimated Hanoi's troop strength at 60,000-70,000.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze called for a cease-fire "even before the withdrawal of Vietnamese volunteers has been completed."

Marking a difference with Hun Sen's regime, Shevardnadze foresaw a "dignified place" for the United Nations in the process toward peace.

Hun Sen has rejected any role for the world body, where Sihanouk's Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea holds Cambodia's seat.

U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, attending the conference, suggested a fact-finding mission travel to Cambodia to start the process of setting up a monitoring mechanism for Vietnam's September pullout.

Officer faces life in prison for rape

HOUSTON (AP) — A former city policeman faces life in prison after being convicted of kidnapping a drunken woman at a nightclub under the guise of an arrest, then raping her in a park.

Jurors in State District Judge Michael McSpadden's court are scheduled to continue deliberations today to determine punishment for James Cebula.

Cebula, 29, was convicted Friday of one count each of kidnapping and sexual assault in the May 2, 1988, abduction of a 24-year-old woman from a Houston nightclub.

Testimony showed that Cebula and security guard Keith Ferguson, 22, rode together in Cebula's patrol car to check on a report of a screaming woman.

Cebula acted like he arrested the woman, but instead drove her to a park, where she was raped, allegedly by both men. Ferguson also was charged with rape and is awaiting trial.

The state's case against Cebula rested on a secret tape recording of a May 19, 1988, conversation between Cebula and Ferguson. Police had Ferguson wear a radio transmitter during the dialogue. In the recording, Cebula boastfully said he had purged the rape scene and police car of evidence and no one could make a criminal case against them.

Cebula's lawyer Dick DeGuerin contended the recording was illegal, and jurors were given the option of ignoring it if they chose. It was uncertain if they did.

DeGuerin, who is requesting Cebula be granted probation, had 13 witnesses, including Cebula's mother, testify during the trial, which has lasted three weeks.

DeGuerin repeatedly referred to the rape victim's former common-law husband and one of her companions the night she was kidnapped. Both now are in prison, and DeGuerin suggested they may get revenge if Cebula is imprisoned.

Gay police officers say they have to keep a low profile

DALLAS (AP) — Many Texas law enforcement agencies have no policies against hiring homosexuals, but many gay officers insist they must keep a low profile or face harassment or firing.

"You really, really have to go underground to survive. Low profile, that's the word," says a lesbian officer in a Dallas suburb.

The recent case of Mica M. England, whose application to the Dallas Police Department was rejected because she is a lesbian, rekindled concern among homosexual advocates battling police departments that refuse to hire gays.

Ms. England took her complaint to the City Council earlier this month and said she is considering suing the city.

Dallas police recruiters routinely ask applicants whether they have engaged in "deviate sexual activity," including homosexual behavior, since age 15, a violation of state law.

Houston police and the Dallas County Sheriff's Department have similar hiring policies based on state sodomy laws.

Dallas Police Chief Mack Vines has defended his department's anti-homosexual policy, saying that the force won't hire people who admit breaking state laws.

But many law enforcement agencies in Texas, including the state Department of Public Safety, have no policy against hiring homosexual officers although those departments are subject to the same laws.

Gay peace officers across the nation, moreover, insist they do their job as well as anyone and contend that their sexual orientation has no ill effects on their public duty.

"We are strong enough. We do back people up. We do shoot straight," said Richard Norton, a deputy sheriff in San Francisco and treasurer of the Golden State Peace Officers' Association, one of two national groups that represent gay police officers.

Few gay peace officers are willing to grant interviews, Norton said. Texas has only a handful of openly gay officers, even in larger cities where applicants' sexuality is not an issue. The experience of several former officers illustrates why.

El Paso police officer Patricia Minton was fired in 1986 for kissing another woman at a dance club while off duty. She was reinstated after a yearlong battle.

In Houston, former policeman Mark Timmers said he endured taunts and threats after fellow officers discovered he was gay.

"You'd sit down in the squad room and people would move," Timmers said.

"I'd come out of work at least two, three days a week and have 'fag' written on my car, or the air let out of my tires," he said.

Timmers resigned in 1987 after a series of internal investigations and a trial on misdemeanor theft charges, in which he was acquitted. Timmers said the charges were part of a smear campaign.

Timmers is still looking for work in law enforcement, he said.

Quanah shocked by champion's death

QUANAH (AP) — In the center of town, a huge billboard boasts the rodeo achievements of a local man.

But on Sunday the billboard became a symbol of tragedy.

Lane Frost, who rode the backs of bulls to a 1987 world championship, died when a bull called K. Walsh charged and gored him during the 93rd Annual Cheyenne Frontier Days Rodeo in Cheyenne, Wyo.

Spectators said he was thrown clear of the bull, but the animal charged him as he walked away, goring him in the back.

The news spread to the small oil and farming town of about 3,900 when reporters starting calling late Sunday.

Even though he only recently moved to Quanah, the billboard in Givens Park claims the community as his home town.

"He's kind of our town idol. We're a small town. We dwell on things like this. We don't have a lot of people who do big things like that," said Quanah Mayor Butch Dickerson.

Nicky O'Neal, past president of the Quanah Riding Club, said Frost was usually out of town attending rodeo competitions.

But when he was around he spent time baling hay with his wife's father and brother and helping out with the annual rodeo.

The town's annual rodeo is scheduled for Aug. 10-12.

"He's pretty active around up here and he helped us around the rodeo grounds and all," O'Neal said.

Frost also was well liked in the rodeo community.

John Painter, Mesquite Championship Rodeo spokesman, compared Frost to world champion bull rider Don Gay.

"When I first saw him (Frost), I knew he was going to be a winner. He had many of the same moves (as Gay) and good form," Painter said.

"These guys they know you're going to get hurt. It's just a matter of when and how severe."

Longtime rodeo announcer Lynn Phillips of Enid, Okla., said Frost's dream was to be the best world champion.

"What he meant wasn't necessarily that he would be the best bull riding world champion, he meant he wanted to be what a champion should be. He wanted to talk with people as long as they wanted and he wanted to do things like help the press ... He would get in the arena and help you out. World champions don't have to do that, but Lane did."

Frost placed sixth in the National Finals Rodeo last year.

He was runner up for the 1983 Rookie of the Year. He was the 1987 Texas Pro Rodeo Circuit Champion and 1983 Prairie Circuit champion. He also was a runner up bull rider in the Winston Tour in 1986, and the National Finals Rodeo bull rider average winner in 1986.

His career earnings through 1988 totaled $461,644.

Frost, who graduated from Atoka High School in 1982, started participating in rodeos when he was about 12 years old, said Dodie Wilson, a family friend who lives in Atoka.

"Rodeo's lost someone who had the promise of being a great one and it's tragic," Painter said.

Frost had competed in the Top o' Texas Rodeo last year, said Kathy Topper, Top o' Texas Rodeo Association rodeo office secretary. She said he didn't win the bull riding event here.

Boy killed while children play with gun

BAY CITY (AP) — A 9-year-old boy was killed when a rifle discharged while he and his two younger brothers were playing with it, Bay City police said.

Jamie Moreno and his two brothers, ages 8 and 5, were playing in the living room of their duplex Friday when the shooting occurred. A 2-year-old brother also was in the house.

The children's grandfather left them alone while he went next door for a visit, Bay City Police Chief Mike Baker said.

The children were playing with a .22-caliber bolt-action Winchester rifle and a .22-caliber long barrel pistol, Baker said.

The younger brothers told police that Jamie Moreno was unloading the pistol while passing the rifle to his 8-year-old brother. The rifle discharged, fatally wounding the boy in the upper chest. Officials said the boy apparently died instantly.

Justice of the Peace Ray O'Connell pronounced the boy dead and ordered an autopsy. Officers said a rifle found in a closet had one spent shell in the chamber.

The guns apparently belonged to the boys' parents, who are separated, according to police reports. Their mother is living in Houston and the father had left the children in their grandfather's care while he left for an out-of-town doctor's appointment, Baker told the Bay City Tribune.

Police are treating the case as an accident. No charges were filed.

Bay City is about 60 miles southwest of Houston.

U.S. bomb victims to be honored

ANDERSONVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A Texan will be among nine U.S. service men honored in a ceremony at the Andersonville National Historic Site next month to remember prisoners of war killed when the United States dropped a bomb on Hiroshima.

Members of the Hiroshima POW Memorial Project will present a 125-pound bronze plaque commemorating nine U.S. airmen who were being held in the Japanese city when the American B-29 "Enola Gay" dropped an atomic bomb Aug. 6, 1945.

The ceremony, scheduled for Aug. 5 at Andersonville's National Prisoner of War Museum, will be attended by former POWs, military officers, elected officials and some survivors of the Hiroshima prisoners.

"I have always felt that people who make a sacrifice in wartime should not be forgotten," said Michael J. Blair of Lowellville, N.Y., chairman of the Hiroshima project.

'I have always felt that people who make a sacrifice in wartime should not be forgotten.'

Blair said the nine Americans were members of the crews of two U.S. Army Air Corps B-24 Liberator bombers, the "Taloa" and the "Lonesome Lady," and a Navy Helldiver bomber from the aircraft carrier Ticonderoga.

The planes were shot down on July 28, 1945, while on bombing raids against Japanese naval targets in Kure Harbor, a major Japanese naval installation.

The prisoners have been identified as "Taloa" crewman Charles O. Baumgartner of Sebring, Ohio, and "Lonesome Lady" crewmen Durden Looper of Pine Bluff, Ark.; James M. Ryan of Binghamton, N.Y.; Hugh H. Atkinson of Seattle, Wash.; John L. Long of New Castle, Pa.; Buford J. Ellison of Wichita Falls, Texas; and Ralph J. Neal of Corbin, Ky.

Blair said he learned of the Hiroshima POWs from a magazine article. Working in his spare time, he spent the next 10 years learning more about their fate.

The crewmen of the Navy plane were Raymond G. Porter of Butler, Pa., and Norman Rolland Brissett of Lowell, Mass. They ditched in the Japanese Inland Sea and were taken to Hiroshima after capture.

The B-24s were hit by a Japanese anti-aircraft battery in Hiroshima after they swung north to avoid heavy fire over Kure.

Blair said several of the airmen were either killed in the crashes or by Japanese civilians or military police. Seven were captured and confined in Hiroshima, along with the two Navy airmen.

Blair said six of the POWs were either killed by the bomb or by angry Japanese civilians the day the bomb was dropped.

One survived for two days and two who had escaped the intense heat by jumping into a cesspool died of radiation sickness on Aug. 19.

Andersonville, a former Confederate prison camp where nearly 13,000 Union soldiers died in 1864 and 1865, has been designated as a national memorial to commemorate the suffering of American POWs of all wars.

Six of the POWs were either killed by the bomb or by angry Japanese civilians the day the bomb was dropped.

The Hiroshima plaque features two B-29s, a face behind barbed wire and the mushroom cloud of an atomic blast.

The nine airmen "represent the only Americans ever killed in nuclear warfare," Blair said. "That makes them significant—a reminder to the American people that we should not let nuclear warfare take place again."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Armed forces don't belong in drug war

Our armed forces exist to defend us against attacks by the armed forces of hostile nations. They have no other purpose. They are not police forces or even paramilitary forces. For that reason, until 1985, U.S. law prohibited the use of military forces in civil matters.

But the restriction was repealed in 1985 as part of the federal "war" on drugs. Since then Navy and Air Force patrols have been used to interdict drug shipments headed for the U.S. coast. The efforts, part of a 300-percent increase in anti-drug expenditures from 1980 to 1988, have flopped miserably.

From 1980 to 1988, cocaine supplies in the United States increased more than 300 percent, even as prices dropped to 20 percent of the 1980 level. And during the same period, coca cultivation in Peru, Bolivia and Colombia increased from 220,000 acres to 520,000 acres. It is clear that people use drugs because they want to, self-destructive as these appetites might be, and little that the government does can stop them.

Yet a new government plan would inject the military even further into this no-win phony "war." The National Security Council is finishing its last draft of a plan that would expand involvement to help train anti-drug forces in foreign countries, in particular the three mentioned above. The plan doesn't call for using American troops directly, but such an expansion would be a logical development from the almost certain failure of the indigenous troops' own efforts.

This plan is so bad that it should be vehemently opposed even by those who favor keeping drugs illegal. Consider what could easily happen. Illegal drug trafficking brings corruption. There's so much money involved that police officers making, say, $40,000 a year, sometimes find it hard to resist taking payoffs.

Consider an Army private, sergeant or officer making much less money. Most are good, honest Americans. But all it takes is one dishonest GI to tip off a drug-bust operation. The Cubans recently admitted, in their continuing series of purge trials, that many of their top officials are involved in illegal drug trafficking. It would be easy for the Cuban DGI, or other foreign intelligence service, to use its contacts with the drug underworld to find U.S. military personnel involved in drug smuggling, and such GIs could then be blackmailed into treason.

Such subversion of our military would then be used on a wider scale, damaging the real mission of our military: protecting our liberties. For this reason use of the military for civilian law enforcement should be ended, not expanded.

Ship provides expansive trip

SCRABBLE, Va. — Foreign travel, they say, is a broadening experience and so it is. The traveler who takes a Scandinavian cruise returns to his veranda to find himself broader by 1 inch in the stern and 2 inches at the beam. This is a consequence of the seagoing way of life.

It is a life of almost unbearable hardships. On this particular ship, a Greek ship, the spartan days began with coffee and whipped cream at dawn, and proceeded to a full breakfast buffet a little after 7.

The buffet ordinarily offered six fruits, five juices, eggs Benedict, eggs Rockefeller, eggs scrambled, pancakes, waffles, bacon, sausage, corned beef hash and baby shrimp. Yes, shrimp. This was before one reached an assortment of breads, scones, crumpets and pastries of an unbelievable gooiness. One waiter carried the groaning tray, another hoisted the undernourished passenger. So each day commenced.

This pitiful fare was followed by two hours of lunch, followed by high tea, followed by two hours of dinner, followed by a midnight snack. The Greek turpentine known as ouzo was constantly available, but no one was compelled to drink it.

In this fashion we daily improved our characters. Oh, it is not as if the passengers did nothing but eat and drink. No, indeed. Some of us engaged in Healthy Exercise. We briskly turned the pages of paperback books. We used muscles of the forearm in pushing through a hypothetical king-ten to reach a queen fessine. We regularly leaned over to remove our shoes.

Not to boast about these calisthenic achievements, some of us even walked. Four and a half times around the seventh deck was said to equal one mile. Walkers are a determined breed. I watched them as they lapped me, arms pumping, heads thrust forward, sturdy legs pounding like pistons. The old ladies made the circuit every two minutes, not far off the time of Spend a Buck at Churchill Downs.

Thinking of age: Using our passports as a data base, the cruise director swiftly computed our average age at 82 years and seven months. This was after the teeny-bopping grandchildren had been disqualified. At 68 years and nine months, I finished in a five-way tie for youngest. It is an achievement to make a man quietly proud.

The oldest of the 1,055 passengers, who also should have been disqualified, was a retired judge from California. His first name was Stanley; I did not catch the last name. He was 114.

The thing about Stanley was that he was dead, actually. The story told by our waiter, a truthful young man from the Peloponnesus, was that the judge had expired five years ago. His widow, always a bit bedaddled, filed his body into their Rolls and headed for a funeral parlor. She missed an exit on the San Diego freeway and wound up at a taxidermist instead.

There Stanley was stuffed like a sailfish, but with such consummate artistry that his supple limbs could be readily adapted to a wheelchair. His glass eyes gave off a lively twinkle; his mouth was gently curved in the slightest suggestion of a knowing smile.

The two of them, the amiable corpse and the dusty widow, then embarked upon a series of cruises. He regularly won not only the prize as the Oldest Passenger, but also the awards for Most Congenial, Best Listener, and among ladies over 50, the Male Passenger I Would Most Like to Share a Stateroom With. Each of the awards carried a case of champagne, with the result that Stanley's lady stayed bombed from Gdansk to Oslo.

It always is more instructive to watch people than to watch statues, but perhaps a word should be said about the ports of call. In Stockholm, Helsinki, Copenhagen and Oslo, we were introduced to 8,144 statues, and the remarkable thing is that they were all statues of the same fellow.

Whether his name was Olaf, Gustavus, Hendrik or just plain Bill, he had the same impressive girth. The gent had stayed too long at the breakfast buffet. The Viking ships and the North Sea oil rigs tied for first place as Most Interesting Sights We Saw.

Flying home on British Airways, we rediscovered the immutable truth about our cousins across the sea: No one treats an honest piece of beef more abominably than the British. It is remarkable.

Given an innocent, offending hunch from a corn-fed steer, the Brits can convert it to an old cowboy boot in no time at all. But perhaps the Greeks had spoiled us rotten. It is nice to be spoiled, but you know what? It's nice to be home.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, July 31, the 212th day of 1989. There are 153 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 31, 1777, the Marquis de Lafayette, a 19-year-old French nobleman, was made a major-general in the Continental Army after offering his help to the rebellious American colonies. Lafayette later played a role in the British defeat at Yorktown.

On this date:

In 1498, Christopher Columbus discovered the island of Trinidad.

In 1556, St. Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Society of Jesus, died in Rome.

In 1875, the 17th President of the United States, Andrew Johnson, died in Carter Station, Tenn., at the age of 66.

In 1953, Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, known as "Mr. Republican" for his conservative philosophy, died in New York at the age of 63.

In 1964, the American space probe Ranger 7 transmitted pictures of the moon's surface.

In 1982, 46 children and seven adults were killed when two buses and several cars collided on a highway near Beaune, France.

'Nothing too much' best law

My mother always practiced and preached, "Nothing too much; moderation in all things." The idea was not original.

Ancient Greeks had inscribed that principle on the Delphic oracle: Pon metron ariston — the middle ground.

Juvenal, the Latin writer, thought this precept so important that it must have descended from heaven: Ne quid nimis — nothing in excess, nothing too much.

Men through all time have patterned their lives by the golden mean or have been punished for their excesses.

A little water you must have to live; too much and you drown.

A little food you must have or starve; too much and they take you to a hospital and slice you open.

A little sunshine is good; too much and you get skin cancer.

A little love you must have or you die of desolation; too much and a jealous husband shoots you.

It's hard to know when to say when because trouble always starts out being fun.

The delicate balance — that is the irrefutable law which punishes all who deny or ignore it.

Nature cannot get our of balance without getting into trouble and man is a natural thing.

If living gets too hard for us, we go insane; if it gets too soft, we atrophy.

So things have to get out of whack once in a while; just enough to keep us awake, to preserve our mental muscle tone.

Nothing too much.

The middle way lies somewhere between faith and fanaticism, between drudgery and frivolity, between the brute and the jellyfish.

Nothing too much.

Too much power corrupts. Too much authority makes any individual want to force all other individuals to conform — or any organization or any government.

Totalitarianism is too much government; democracy is too little.

Some government you must have or somebody steals your strawberries. Too much — and the government steals your strawberries.

In between is the golden mean.

We found it here in 1789 — a government that was neither too much nor too little — a "Republic." It was designed to protect each man's right and to prevent him from trespassing on the rights of another.

A government that was neither too hot nor too cold — but just right. Nothing too much.

Today I see statistics revealing that Americans are turning away from marijuana — away from promiscuous sex.

Nothing too much is a law that enforces itself.

Liberals still defending Owen Lattimore

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

The recent death of Owen Lattimore has revived the old controversy over this veteran apologist for Soviet and Chinese communism, whom certain indiscriminating liberals have felt duty-bound to defend ever since Joe McCarthy cited him in 1950 as the sort of person who had no business advising the State Department.

Liberal columnist Tom Wicker, for example, harrumphed that the tarnishing of Lattimore's reputation was a spectacular example of "the true evil of McCarthyism" — not realizing, or at any rate not mentioning, that the real damage to Lattimore was done, not by McCarthy, but by the Senate Judiciary Committee, of which McCarthy wasn't even a member.

A Judiciary Committee subcommittee under the chairmanship of Democratic Sen. Pat McCarran, a former chief justice of the Supreme Court of Nevada, held extensive hearings on the subject of Lattimore. In 1952, on the basis of those hearings, the full committee concluded unanimously — seven Democrats and six Republicans — that Lattimore, from approximately 1930 forward, had been "a conscious, articulate instrument of the Soviet conspiracy."

All this is very old news, and I wouldn't bore you with it if Wicker, in these recent months of 1989, wasn't going to such lengths to bury these inconvenient facts in a Memory Hole and construct a new and more consoling version of the Lattimore story.

I first noticed that something was wrong when I read The New York Times' lengthy obituary article about Lattimore, which Wicker didn't write but which you can be sure he read. The Times, while acknowledging that Lattimore had been indicted on seven counts of perjury for lying to the subcommittee, stated only that a federal judge had dismissed several counts of the indictment as "formless and obscure," and that the government had dropped the others for lack of evidence. The Judiciary Committee's solemn conclusion (which was never subsequently modified or retracted) is not mentioned in the article at all.

I confess that when Wicker wrote his first column on the subject, and I took him to task in one of my own for failing to tell his readers about the Judiciary Committee's finding, I felt a qualm. Perhaps Wicker had relied solely on the Times' article and had simply been misled by it — as thousands of readers undoubtedly were.

But now Wicker has written a second column, correcting the blunder of the first in attributing Lattimore's problems chiefly to McCarthy. In it, he fortifies his defense of Lattimore with selected excerpts from the research of a professor who is apparently working on a sweetheart biography of the man. And once again Wicker says not one solitary word about the stunning conclusion of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

He goes out of his way, though, to sprinkle a little dirt on the committee, perhaps because he suspects he may not be able to get away with ignoring it forever. He asserts that "the (Judiciary) Committee's Democratic majority included the likes of James O. Eastland of Mississippi and William Jenner of Indiana."

Never mind that Jenner was a Republican; Wicker was apparently so frantic that he forgot that. But it is amusing that he should try to discredit the committee's Democratic majority (without even telling his readers why it must be discredited) by the device of guilt by association.

Eastland was a Southerner of his time and roughly as racist as the rest. But the Judiciary Committee Democrats who nailed Owen Lattimore included "the likes of" Willis Smith (a former president of the American Bar Association) and the very liberal Warren Magnuson. And their Republican colleagues included Alexander Wiley and Arthur Watkins, both of whom were widely respected, even in liberal circles.

Tell your readers about that Judiciary Committee report, Tom. And, for a change, try to get the facts right.

Agency judge decides against doctor in patient-dumping case

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — In the first case against a doctor under a federal law prohibiting "patient dumping," a $20,000 fine was imposed against a Texas physician by a U.S. Health and Human Services administrative law judge.

Dr. Michael Burditt was prosecuted after his 1986 decision, as chief of the obstetrical department at DeTar Hospital in Victoria, to transfer a woman who was about to give birth to her sixth baby to John Sealy Hospital in Galveston, 160 miles away.

The patient dumping law, included in the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986, forbids hospitals to turn away patients needing emergency care or in active labor.

Details of the administrative law judge's order were disclosed over the weekend.

Rosa Rivera, who was poor and uninsured, showed up at DeTar Hospital late on the afternoon of Dec. 5, 1986. Burditt had the day off.

When a nurse called Burditt and told him that Mrs. Rivera's blood pressure was 210 over 130, he said she "sounds like more than I can handle." The blood pressure reading was higher than any he had seen in 12 years of delivering babies in Victoria.

Burditt asked that preparations be made to transport Mrs. Rivera to John Sealy Hospital in Galveston, 160 miles away. But the nurse and her supervisor were concerned about the federal law.

After some heated words between the doctor and the nurses, Mrs. Rivera left the hospital in an ambulance, 2½ hours later. She had a healthy baby boy a half-hour later, at 7:30 p.m., in the ambulance by the side of the road.

DeTar, which nearly lost its eligibility for Medicare funding, paid a $5,000 fine after an investigation by the Dallas regional office of the Department of Health and Human Services.

Burditt refused to pay a $25,000 fine assessed against him. The Texas and American medical associations took his side.

Donald P. Wilcox, attorney for the Texas Medical Association, said the ruling by Administrative Law Judge Charles E. Stratton was disturbing.

"We thought what he did was defensible and accepted practice," Wilcox said.

Judy Holtz, press secretary for the Inspector General's Office of the Department of Health and Human Services, said, "The Inspector General's Office is obviously very pleased that Judge Stratton thought that Dr. Burditt's behavior was not appropriate behavior."

The fine was lowered from $25,000 to $20,000 because Stratton found "some mitigating factors," Wilcox said.

Since the incident, Burditt has improved the transfer network system available to physicians practicing in Victoria, and has helped set up an indigent obstetric clinic that will make prenatal care more accessible for indigent patients, he said.

Burditt wants to appeal the ruling, said Wilcox.

He said he will recommend to the TMA board that the association also continue to pursue the case, with the next step being an administrative appeal at the federal agency.

A woman who identified herself as Burditt's wife said he would have no comment until he holds a press conference on Monday. She also said that he was no longer the chief of the hospital's obstetrical department but still practices there.

Wilcox said the administrative law judge "said if a delivery might occur in a transfer, then you can't transfer a patient. It would be illegal to transfer a patient," Wilcox said in a telephone interview.

"That's a very tough standard. You're looking at one risk factor and ignoring all the others," such as the possibility that a newborn might need advanced care, Wilcox said.

Based on such factors as Mrs. Rivera's previous pregnancies, Burditt thought her sixth child would need a higher level of services than available at DeTar, Wilcox said. The doctor thought she would make it to Galveston before giving birth, he said.

Dr. D. Clifford Burross of Wichita Falls, who testified on Burditt's behalf at a hearing in Victoria, said he was frightened by the implications of the ruling.

Burross said that as the doctor in charge of the family practice residence at Wichita General Hospital, he makes similar transfers. He said it is safer to transfer a baby who needs the services of a hospital with more sophisticated facilities.

"Doctors are going to have to take a second look and say, 'Can I afford to take the risk of transferring her?'" even when a transfer is needed, Burross said.

The association also thinks a peer-review process should have been used, as is done in Medicare cases, Wilcox said.

Burross said such a review, in which a panel of physicians examine the "whole record," is prohibited under regulations regarding patient-dumping cases.

"We felt Dr. Burditt had not had proper due process," said Burross, former TMA president.

Bratton displays his voodoo wares.

Doc can give boss 'hotfoot'

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — If your boss is making life miserable, Earnest "Dr. Buzzard" Bratton says he can solve your problem with a couple of shiny dimes, a teaspoon of black cat oil and an incantation over a cemetery grave, plus $1,200 of your cash.

"A piece of cake," says Bratton, a self-proclaimed voodoo witch doctor in this Washington suburb who says he's licensed by the state of Virginia to administer herbs and potions.

"I have your boss removed from his job," he says. "I give him what I call the hotfoot. It works, no doubt about it. If it doesn't work, there's no dogs in Georgia."

Bratton, 57, a native of Gaffney, S.C., says he was born with magical powers and perfected them with the help of ghostly visions. He boasts he can improve his clients' sex lives, rid them of pesky neighbors, bring them good luck at the racetrack, retire debts, cure rheumatism and banish assorted spells and curses.

He says he can even help President Bush.

"Bush is all right. He's doing the best he can, but he seems a little disoriented, a little shaky," he said. "It would be a good idea for him to come see the doctor. I could give him some breathing room."

Bratton's basement apartment is littered with press clippings, snapshots of Dr. Buzzard with fellow celebrities on late-night television shows, and clumps of stuffing torn from his Naugahyde sofa by his pet cat, Silver Dumpster.

Bratton is proud of his videotape lecture titled Voodoo Hoodoo Youdoo.

A table top in his apartment is covered with the tools of his dark trade: candles in the shape of skull and crossbones, a jar of "confusion oil," a bottle of all-purpose "Hoyt's Cologne," a plastic bag of graveyard dirt and another containing small blue stones used for "eliminating ordinary jinxes" during a good soak in the bathtub.

There's a three-eyed coconut for "sending people you don't like out of town," which Bratton says he'd like to use against the Rev. Jesse Jackson, and a "Samson doll" which he claims can save innocent prisoners from the electric chair, with the collaboration of his reclusive black cat.

A dried hawk's claw is helpful in finding missing persons, Bratton says, and such oddments as a buckeye, arrowroot, lodestone and "devil's shoestrings" make dandy good-luck charms when carried in a red flannel sack.

Are cohabitants married? Texas law vague

FORT WORTH (AP) — A man and a woman meet in a bar and later check into a motel as "Mr. and Mrs." before spending the night.

By the time they check out in the morning, they conceivably could be judged, under Texas law, to have a common-law marriage.

"Though that's probably not what they have in mind," Robert L. Wright, a Fort Worth judge, tells law classes at Texas Christian University in an example that snaps students to attention.

The public's attention, meanwhile, has been captured lately by such common-law marriage lawsuits as the one filed in New York against actor William Hurt by former lover Sandra Jennings.

A Houston jury last month voted to recognize a common-law marriage between New York Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield and a former flight attendant with whom he has a 6-year-old daughter.

Winfield maintains he was never married to the woman.

In Texas, Wright said, most people have a misconception that a couple just live together for three, five, or even seven years to be considered married under common law.

But the law does not specify any length of time.

All that's necessary under Texas law are that a couple have an agreement to be husband and wife, that they live together and that they represent themselves to the public as married, he said.

Critics of the law say the trouble has been that it allows courts to make the presumption that merely by living together, a couple agreed to be married — and that may not be the case.

As of Sept. 1, a change enacted this year eliminates that presumption from Texas' common-law statute.

Another change in the law is that a common-law partner will have only one year after the breakup of a relationship — or the partner's death — to file suit, usually over property. People in relationships that broke up years ago still will have until September 1990 to file suit.

The law's creator, state Rep.

Patricia Hill, R-Dallas, said the changes are aimed at stopping the potential spread of suits like the one filed against Winfield.

In early America, when ministers and peace justices were in short supply to perform mar-

In early America, when ministers and peace justices were in short supply to perform marriages, common law was accepted.

riages, common law was accepted so that couples could live together and have their children recognized as legitimate and entitled to an inheritance.

Many states have abolished the tradition; Texas is one of 12 that retain it.

But in modern times, where ministers and justices of the peace abound, common-law marriages do more harm than good,

Ms. Hill said.

She said she wants to see common-law marriage abolished in Texas, and said her bill was "a step in the right direction."

"The law has been so sketchily interpreted, maybe all it would take is for a neighbor to say, 'They were living together. So I thought they were married,'" Hill told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Also, because few people realize that a formal divorce is required from a common-law partner before either can remarry, some may have committed bigamy unintentionally, she said.

In the case of the couple who meet in the bar and advance to the motel, it's unlikely that either party will haul the other to court because there's no common property to squabble over.

But Wright said that other couples who move in under the same roof ought to be careful. Even with the changes in the law, he said, those who do not want a common-law marriage would be wise to make a written agreement certifying they are not married.

Taiwan's diplomatic offensive showing results

By JOHN POMFRET
Associated Press Writer

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Seeking to benefit from the outcry over the crackdown on a movement for freedom in China, Taiwan has launched a "guerrilla" diplomatic offensive against its Communist rival.

The ruling Nationalist government is aggressively pursuing closer economic and diplomatic ties with Eastern European and Third World countries, long the strongest supporters of the Beijing government.

Taiwan is also courting the West, dispatching Foreign Minister Lien Chan on a private trip to Western Europe and the Middle East that ended Friday.

And it has barged into China's backyard.

Returning from the West, Lien held quiet talks with Thailand, which has close military ties with Beijing.

The foundation of the offensive is a new policy called "one China, two governments," according to Taiwanese and Western observers in Taipei, meaning that Taiwan is willing to establish ties with countries that already have relations with Beijing.

In the past, such a practice would have been taboo.

Indeed, two years ago, Taiwan refused the opportunity to be recognized by Suriname, which had relations with Beijing, said Su Chi, a professor of diplomacy at Chengchi University who has close ties to the ruling Nationalist Party.

Since the Communists forced the Nationalists from the mainland 40 years ago, both governments have claimed to be the sole legitimate rulers of China. All they have agreed on is that there is one China and one legitimate government.

But after the rapprochement between China and the United States in the 1970s, Taiwan's international standing fell markedly. Just 24 countries now recognize Taiwan, compared to 50 in 1949. In all, 135 countries recognize China.

With the coming to power in 1988 of President Lee Teng-hui, Taiwan began to adopt a more flexible foreign policy. It relaxed travel restrictions to China and so far more than 500,000 people have gone. Its businessmen have also invested millions there.

Trade also began with the Communist bloc and "unofficial" contacts between official representatives of all nations were encouraged. Yet while trade boomed, pushing Taiwan's foreign exchange holdings above $70 billion, diplomatic successes were limited because of widespread support for Communist China.

Then came the June 4 crackdown in Beijing on a movement for freedom.

Seeing an opportunity in the anti-Chinese uproar, Taiwan decided to give tacit recognition to its Communist foe so it could compete with them in the international arena.

Beijing has blasted this as a "two China" policy. The criticism is significant because China has warned Taiwan that it risks invasion if it declares independence.

Pierce pushed disputed contracts during final days at HUD

By JOHN KING
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal housing officials say they are reviewing two contracts approved by Samuel Pierce in his final days as housing secretary, and agency sources say Pierce endorsed one project over stiff objections from HUD experts.

The two contracts, worth several hundred thousand dollars, were placed on hold shortly after the Jan. 20 change in administrations ended Pierce's eight-year tenure at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

One contract was to go to a firm headed by two prominent black Republicans and the other to a company whose president had a longstanding friendship with a former Pierce deputy, HUD officials said. The officials asked that they not be identified by name.

Pierce's role in these contracts came to the attention of HUD investigators about two weeks ago, the HUD sources said.

HUD spokesman Jack Flynn, asked about the January approvals, confirmed that they were among a number of pending contracts put on hold after Jack Kemp succeeded Pierce as HUD secretary.

Several department sources said HUD staffers had questioned the need for the consulting arrangements and had criticized the proposals as poorly drafted.

The contracts were issued under a technical assistance program that HUD auditors have criticized on grounds that many contractors provided too few services and spent too much money on overhead and administrative costs.

Pierce's approval of the projects was not improper, but his role is at odds with his congressional testimony. In sworn testimony in May, he told Congress he took no direct role in agency funding decisions.

Repeated attempts to reach Pierce in recent weeks have been unsuccessful. He has an unlisted home telephone number, and has not returned messages left at his former law office in New York.

One contract, to a company called One America Inc., was endorsed by Pierce on Jan. 17 — three days before he left the department — according to HUD sources who said an agency selection committee voted 6-1 against the contract. The other contract, to Mississippi-based Pro-Mark Inc., also was approved by Pierce in mid-January, according to sources who said the proposal was extensively revised before the review committee approved it by a 5-3 margin.

The presidents of both companies defend their proposal, both of which dealt with minority enterprise.

One America is headed by Elaine B. Jenkins, who once served on a White House small business commission, and her husband, Howard Jenkins, a former Labor Department official and the first black to serve on the National Labor Relations Board.

Pro-Mark president Les Range has close ties to DuBois Gilliam, a former Pierce associate who approved earlier HUD contracts to the company before he left the agency. Range said he appealed to Pierce in the belief that criticisms of Pro-Mark's previous work may have been racially motivated.

One America requested $421,000 to develop a computerized listing of black entrepreneurs. Pierce approved the project at half that amount despite the committee's recommendation to reject the unsolicited proposal.

HUD records indicate that One America, based in Silver Spring, Md., has received four contracts worth more than $1.5 million from the technical assistance program since 1981. The company once shared an office and telephone number with the Council of 100, a black Republican group. At the time, Mrs. Jenkins was the group's chairwoman.

In a telephone interview Friday, Mrs. Jenkins said One America "has barely broken even" on its HUD contracts and defended its work as essential aid to small and minority-owned businesses with little experience in dealing with the federal bureaucracy.

Pro-Mark is a Jackson, Miss., company that from 1985 through 1988 received $400,000 from HUD to provide technical advice.

Dixon denies lobbying charge

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House ethics committee chairman Julian Dixon is disputing a law firm's statement that it contacted him several times in 1986 and 1987 to lobby for a company with which his wife now has a lucrative deal.

The Washington law firm that represents Duty Free Shoppers Group Ltd. told Justice's Office of Foreign Agents Registration that it talked with Dixon three times and bought him dinner once in the course of its work for the client.

But Dixon, in written responses to questions about the meetings, said the documents filed by the law firm contain erroneous information.

"At no time have I ever been 'lobbied' or have I ever engaged in any discussion whatsoever concerning Duty Free Shoppers," the California Democrat's response said. "I have never helped Duty Free Shoppers 'with their legislation' (and I do not know if any exists)."

Betty Dixon, Dixon's wife, has a lucrative stake in a joint venture with Duty Free Shoppers, the majority partner in a group that operates stores at the Los Angeles International Airport.

Dixon said the documents contain wrong information because he never talked about Duty Free Shoppers with Ronald Brown, the attorney that represented the San Francisco-based company. Brown, now the chairman of the Democratic National Committee, worked for Patton Boggs & Blow.

The law firm was paid at least $1.4 million over four years by Duty Free Shoppers to pursue the company's legislative goals.

"In connection with its representation of Duty Free Shoppers, Patton Boggs & Blow has had contacts with Congressman Dixon (and other members of Congress)," the firm said in a statement.

Brown did not return telephone calls, but Patton Boggs reaffirmed the information in the Justice reports.

The Dixons earned more than $150,000 in dividends in two years from the airport operation after investing between $5,000 and $15,000, according to Dixon's financial disclosure statements. In addition, Mrs. Dixon's stake in the company has grown in value to at least $100,000.

Patton Boggs reported to Justice that it contacted Dixon three times in early 1986 — before Mrs. Dixon invested in the airport concession — and once in 1987. Mrs. Dixon invested in the partnership in July 1986, three months after the airport board awarded the concession.

Here are the Dixon contacts listed in the documents:

■ On March 11, 1986, Duty Free Shoppers picked up a $187 dinner tab for Dixon and Johnnie L. Cochran Jr., a member of the Los Angeles airport board. Cochran was a consultant to the ethics committee at the time.

Dixon said the dinner bill for himself, Brown, Cochran and a friend, Jay Preston Johnson, was mistakenly paid by Duty Free Shoppers.

■ On Feb. 26, 1986, and the next day, Patton Boggs "had conferences (personal and telephonic) with the following ... Julian Dixon," the reports said. The subject of the contacts involved advice that Patton Boggs gave to Duty Free Shoppers "concerning its duty free stores" in several cities, including Los Angeles, the reports said.

Dixon said the Feb. 26 event was a Patton Boggs "brief function" at which his wife — not he — had a social conversation about Duty Free Shoppers.

■ On Sept. 26, 1987, Patton Boggs contacted Dixon "in connection with the regulation of duty free shops by the Customs Service," the documents say. Dixon said he attended a Congressional Black Caucus Foundation function that day.

Texas A&M's president proud of his first year

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — With the school's football scandal mostly resolved, Texas A&M President William Mobley hopes to spend this year developing a different reputation for the university.

Last summer, when he became A&M's 20th president, rising enrollment — expected to hit an all-time high of 39,500 this fall — was Mobley's first concern, he said.

But in September, the NCAA found A&M guilty of 25 violations and gave the school a two-year probation, restricted football scholarships and limited recruiting.

That same month, Mobley hired a compliance officer to monitor the athletic department, set up new auditing requirements and revoked privileges of several boosters.

"I believe the NCAA conclusion was appropriate and just," Mobley said. "I think we now have that situation in perspective and under control. The challenge now is to keep that perspective and control."

Tuesday marks the start of Mobley's second year as the administrative leader of the state's second-largest school.

As he looks to the 1990s, Mobley said enrollment and the school's budget — expected to be about $530 million for the 1989-90 academic year — are his main concerns.

Britons see rocking UFO

LONDON (AP) — Mysterious lights in southern England's night sky Saturday were made by searchlights and cloud reflections, not Unidentified Flying Objects, a newspaper reported today.

The Daily Star said rock musician Roger Taylor, drummer with the Queen group, spent $160,000 for the light display above his house near Godalming, 34 miles south of London. It was Taylor's 40th birthday party.

"The bright revolving circles and darting flashes under low

"A&M is still a good university, but we're still not that well known outside the region," he said. "Others know of Texas A&M but they don't know who and what we are."

Mobley said it's too early to measure the university's progress under his leadership.

"I don't believe you measure progress in a year. You need a longer perspective. You need to look at benchmarks," he said.

But former A&M President Frank Vandiver said, "I think he's done an absolutely fabulous job. I really understand some of the problems he's faced. I would rate his first year as an A — all around."

Students also gave Mobley a good grade. Mobley tries to respond to the 1,500 pieces of mail he gets each week and he meets with student leaders for lunch about every six weeks.

"Many students considered Dr. Mobley's year an improvement over administrative communications in years past," said Jay Hays, president of A&M's Student Government Association.

Mobley has been at A&M since 1980, when he was hired as head of the management department. He became dean of the College of Business Administration in 1983 and the A&M system's deputy chancellor for academic and resource development in 1985. In 1987, he became executive deputy chancellor of the system.

clouds alarmed hundreds of sky-watchers in southern England. Sightseers and UFO experts blocked major roads as they tried to photograph what they thought was a close encounter of the third kind," the newspaper said.

Surrey county police and Scotland Yard, the London police headquarters, reported receiving dozens of telephone calls about the lights, with some people asking if an invasion from space was under way.

The police said they eventually tracked down the source to Taylor's party.

Rob Lowe granted community service in video sex case

ATLANTA (AP) — Actor Rob Lowe will be performing in a new venue in an attempt to avoid prosecution for allegedly videotaping a sex scene involving a 16-year-old girl, a prosecutor said.

Lowe has agreed to perform 20 hours of community service to avoid criminal prosecution in the case, District Attorney Lewis R. Slaton said Sunday.

Lowe is expected to visit about 20 Los Angeles-area schools during the next two years to make speeches on topics such as drug abuse and the law.

Slaton had been considering charges against Lowe for allegedly videotaping Jan Parsons, then 16, in a sex scene with a woman in an Atlanta hotel room during the 1988 Democratic National Convention.

Lowe, 25, is one of 2,600 people to participate in Georgia's pre-trial intervention program, which Slaton called an alternative to prosecution for young, non-violent first offenders.

Lowe remains the subject of a lawsuit by Miss Parsons' mother, Lena Arlene Wilson, who claims Lowe seduced her daughter.

Lowe starred in such movies as About Last Night..., St. Elmo's Fire, Youngblood and Oxford Blues.

Annual writers' conference scheduled for August 11-12

AMARILLO — Education, information, and opportunity will be the key words at the annual Frontiers in Writing Conference, sponsored by Panhandle Professional Writers, the Hi-Plains Chapter of the Poetry Society of Texas, and Amarillo College, August 11-12 at Amarillo College in Amarillo, Texas.

"Even published writers require continuing education," says Doris Meredith, conference co-chairman and author of seven published mysteries. "Unpublished writers need information and the opportunity to present their work to agents and editors. This year's Frontiers in Writing Conference provides education in career management as well as information on submission of manuscripts and the 'nuts and bolts' of writing fiction and non-fiction."

The conference opens Friday, August 11 at 5:30 p.m. with a reception and autograph party at the Big Texan Steak Ranch. A "Meet the Speakers" buffet begins at 7 p.m., followed by the address, "Language, Nonsense, and Poetry," given by keynote speaker Howard Nemerov.

Winner of a Pulitzer Prize and a National Book Award, Nemerov is the current Poet Laureate of the United States and consultant to the Library of Congress. Author of 26 books, Nemerov is a professor of English at Washington University in St. Louis.

"Howard Nemerov writes poetry that is inspiring, enjoyable, and understandable," says Sharon Drain, conference co-chairman and widely published free-lance writer. "He brings poetry back from the obscurity where it has languished for most of this century. The sponsors of Frontiers in Writing welcome the opportunity to host the Poet Laureate's first official visit to Texas."

Registration for workshops Saturday, August 12, begins at 8 a.m. on the fourth floor of the Technology Building at Amarillo College. Study groups will begin at 8:40 a.m., and will feature Wallace Exman, senior editor of Zebra Books, who will speak on "Writing for the Editor: Proposals and Query Letters;" Alice Harron Orr, partner in Kearns and Orr Associates, a literary agency, on "How to Stop Shooting Your Writing Career in the Foot;" Ben Ezzell, newspaper publisher, on "Writing for the Regional Newspaper;" and Betsy Haynes, juvenile writer, on "Writing Bestsellers for Kids." At 9:30, Howard Nemerov will conduct a special workshop on "Poetry," followed at 10:30 by a repeat of morning study groups with the same speakers.

A panel discussion featuring all speakers will follow an awards luncheon in the College Union Building. At 2:45 p.m., study groups will feature Elmer Kelton, western literature's most noted novelist, on "Creating Book-Length Fiction;" Judith Hennessee, journalist and author, on "Creating Book-Length Nonfiction;" Dr. Jene Miller, pastoral counselor, on "How to Handle the Stress, Loneliness & Rejection of Writing;" and Margaret Armen, screenwriter and former member of the Board of Directors for the Writers Guild of America, West, on "Writing for the Big and Little Screen." Study groups will be repeated at 3:45.

The conference will close at 4:35 p.m. with a drawing for two tickets courtesy of American Airlines.

Pre-registration for the conference is $55 for members of Panhandle Professional Writers and the Hi-Plains Chapter of the Poetry Society of Texas, and $70 for non-members and includes the Friday night buffet. Pre-registration for the Saturday workshop is only $40 for members and $55 for non-members. Pre-registration must be received by August 5. Registration at the door for Saturday is $60 for members and non-members.

For more information on the Frontiers in Writing conference, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Frontiers in Writing, P.O. Box 19303, Amarillo, Texas 79114, or call co-chairman Doris Meredith at (806)352-3889, or Sharon Drain at (806)352-1662.

What Happened To Good Morning, America?

The Dord Fitz Art Class did not get their local debut on the Good Morning, America program last Wednesday, at least not in our area.

According to Phil Huffman at KVII, Channel 7 in Amarillo, some "rookie" in New York pushed the wrong buttons and the segment featuring the Fitz class was seen only on the east coast.

Huffman says the television station was inundated with phone calls from Pampanians. He was equally upset with New York. This was the second time in just a few months when someone in New York pushed the wrong buttons. The last time was when the cast of "Texas" was supposed to be aired with their "Good morning, America."

"Can you imagine the number of phone calls we got then," remarked Huffman, "cast, parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles called the station for an explanation."

Because the Dord Fitz Art Class was aired, however limited, ABC will not reschedule the segment until 1990, the rest of the year already being booked full.

Dene Taylor, a student of Fitz who instigated the idea of the Good Morning segment, said that every one in the class was a little disappointed but they sure had plenty of fun with it.

Art students of Dord Fitz wave for the video camera while taping their Good Morning, America segment which did not air on local stations due to an error in New York.

Summer heat turns parked cars into furnaces

DEAR ABBY: How ironic and tragic! The same day you had the letter in your column about the 5-year-old child who had accidentally locked herself in her family's car parked in front of her home, and was found dead 30 minutes later of heat prostration, The Orange County (Calif.) Register reported this similar tragedy:

A 3-year-old girl had climbed into the unlocked family car parked in front of her home. All the windows were shut, the doors were child-proof and the afternoon was blistering hot. A few hours later, the girl was found dead due to the intense heat inside the car.

Curled up on the floor behind the tilted passenger seat, the girl's tiny body was well hidden from parents, neighbors and the police who searched the neighborhood. Her father had even used the car while searching for her.

The girl's death was the second in two months in that community involving a child and a parked car.

In May, a 4-year-old boy lost his life after his mother had partially opened the window of her car to cool it off. She went into her house for a few minutes when the boy tried to climb into the car, apparently slipped and caught his head in the partially open window, hanging himself. His

KAREN COLE,

DEAR KAREN: Thank you for a valuable addition to this column.

Readers: Most children are fascinated with cars, so please never leave a window down, never leave the keys in the ignition and never leave the doors of your car unlocked.

I realize that this item is far from an upper, but if it saves one small life, it will be well worth the space in this column.

DEAR ABBY: In 1981, 10 years after my 9-year-old son drowned, I learned about Compassionate Friends through your column. Until then, I was grieving alone.

There are no words to thank you for guiding me to this wonderful organization. My son was my only child at the time of his death. Your column, and the truly "compassionate friends," literally saved my life.

CLAIRE TORREY, TUCSON

DEAR CLAIRE: Thank you for giving me yet another opportunity to publicize this wonderful support group. Compassionate Friends is for those who have lost a child (of any age) in death. SHOOTING PAINS

If you're a victim of sciatica, you know what "shooting pains" are all about. The sometimes excruciating pain of sciatica frequently affects the hip, thigh and back of the leg. The ankle and foot are sometimes affected, too. But that's not where the problem is.

The sciatic nerve, the largest nerve in the body, extends from the lower spine to the back of the thigh and knee. Then it divides. One nerve goes down the front of the lower leg, and other goes down the back of the leg.

It's the inflammation of the sciatic nerve that causes the pain. This can be triggered by an irritated nerve root. What causes the irritation? The cause may be traced to a misalignment of the spinal column that's putting abnormal pressure on the roots of the sciatic nerves as they pass between the vertebrae.

Through x-rays and other procedures the doctor of chiropractic can locate the misaligned vertebrae. Using a gentle adjustment, he can align it properly again to help eliminate the cause and the pain.

Records fall as U.S. Olympic Festival concludes

By OWEN CANFIELD
AP Sports Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—The U.S. Olympic Festival ended in record-setting fashion, which was fitting. It had started the same way.

Hollis Conway of Southwestern Louisiana set an American record in the high jump Sunday when he cleared 7 feet, 10 inches, bettering the mark of 7-9 1/4 he had set in the NCAA Championships earlier this year.

Conway's performance came 10 days after the festival officially began in front of a record opening-ceremonies crowd of 76,014. Sunday's closing ceremonies drew 48,571, bringing the total attendance to 423,039.

The closing ceremonies featured country-western entertainers Roy Clark and Crystal Gayle, plus Ray Charles' rendition of "America."

"This has been a wonderful festival," said Sheila Walker, director of Olympic Festivals and Competition for the U.S. Olympic Committee.

"It's provided a great start to the new class of Olympians. People who follow this festival have their work cut out," Walker said. "This is far and away the best festival experience we have had."

Conway ended it with a flourish, easily clearing 7-10 after having won the competition on fewer misses at 6-6 1/2. He then failed three times to clear a world-record height of 8-0 1/2.

Conway's record jump came fewer than 24 hours after Cuba's Javier Sotomayor broke the 8-foot barrier at San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Conway, 22, will meet Sotomayor on Saturday in the Jack-in-the-Box Invitational at Los Angeles.

Conway's leap overshadowed several other outstanding performances on the final day of competition.

Olympic gold medalist Sheila Echols of Baton Rouge, La., was a double winner, capturing the long jump at 21 feet, 4 inches and the 100 meters in 11.20 seconds.

Lynda Tolbert of Arizona State set a festival record in the women's 100-meter hurdles, winning in 13.01. It was her second festival gold. She also won the event in 1987.

The temperature three feet above the surface of the John Jacobs track was measured at 103 degrees early in Sunday's competition.

Divers found relief from the heat in the new $2.1 million Oklahoma City Community College Aquatic Center, where Matt Scoggin of Austin, Texas and Cokey Smith of Ann Arbor, Mich., won gold in the 10-meter platform competition Sunday.

Bela Karolyi's gymnasts hardly missed anything Sunday, taking eight of 12 medals. Kim Zmeskal, 13, of Houston, who won golds for the all-around and team competition on Friday, got a gold and two silvers this time.

Amy Scherr, 14, of Cincinnati, won a gold on the vault and Erika Stokes, 13, won the balance beam.

Only 12-year-old Shannon Miller, of nearby Edmond, broke up Karolyi's Gymnastics' dominance by winning the uneven bars.

Lance Ringnald of Albuquerque dominated the men's competition, winning four golds and a silver, including the all-around title.

In hockey, Chris Nelson scored two goals Sunday night in leading the West to a 5-1 gold medal victory over the South.

As usual, the festival had stars from beginning to end.

Swimmers Sarah Perroni of Bristol, R.I., and Geoff Cronin of Sunnyvale, Calif., each won six medals. Perroni had two golds, three silvers and a bronze, while Cronin had three golds, one silver and two bronzes.

Fast pitch softball — a pitcher's sport — was dominated by Peter Meredith of Elkhart, Ind., and Kathy Arendsen of Holland, Mich. Meredith threw a perfect game, a one-hitter and five shut-outs as the East won the gold. Arendsen also had a perfect game and a one-hitter on the East's road to the gold medal.

Ken Davis of Lithonia, Ga., a student at the University of Nebraska, won a silver on the parallel bars.

Sheila Echols of Baton Rouge, La., who won gold medals in long jump and 100-meter dash, set a Festival record with a leap of 21 feet, 4 inches.

Thompson snares first win in 12 years

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP)—Leonard Thompson's victory in the Buick Open was for all those Bubbas out there, real and imagined.

The 42-year-old Thompson, rumped and wrinkled and proud of his good 'ol boy image, finished at 15-under-par 273 on Sunday at Warwick Hills to end a long dry spell.

"I like to have a good time," said Thompson, a North Carolina native who now calls Ponte Vedra, Fla., home. "I'm not sure I know what a Bubba is, but I know we have a lot in common."

On the first two holes of the third round, Thompson looked like a hacker at the local driving range, topping one drive 135 yards and knocking the next into the street and out of bounds. But he showed a lot of fight, getting a par despite the first shot and settling for double-bogey on the other.

"If I couldn't be competitive, I'd quit," said Thompson, whose third victory on the PGA Tour was his first in 12 years.

Thompson got to 16-under with two holes remaining in the $1 million tournament, but had a three-putt bogey on No. 17, a dinky little par-3.

That meant he had to stand and watch at the 18th hole as Payne Stewart, also at 15 under, came up the fairway with a chance to win it all. But Stewart sailed a wedge 145 yards over the green and into a bunker.

When Stewart missed his 8-foot putt to save par, Thompson wept at the realization that 12 years of frustration were over.

"It wasn't like I died," said Thompson, whose last victory was the 1977 Pensacola Open. "I played some golf. I made enough money that I didn't have to go to the bread line."

Maybe so, but the $180,000 winner's check he pocketed in the Buick Open was more than the $136,985 he had earned in the last two years combined. It also was more than the $138,826 he made in 1980, his previous best year.

"There's nothing wrong with crying," Thompson, the oldest player to win a tournament this year, said. "At Pensacola, on the 18th green, I said to myself, 'Remember this because there's no guarantee you'll be here again.'"

Stewart, who finished in a tie at 14 under with Doug Tewell and Billy Andrade, increased his earnings this season to $552,987, which doesn't include the money he made for finishing in a tie for eighth a week earlier in the British Open.

Kunkel gets the call as starting shortstop

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)—The Texas Rangers acquired designated hitter Harold Baines from the Chicago White Sox with an eye on the future and the focus on the present.

But what it means to Jeff Kunkel is less fun in the sun and more time in the fields.

"Cut back on the golf; cut back on the swimming; cut back on the sun," Kunkel said of his new role.

The five-player deal that sent shortstop Scott Fletcher and two top prospects to Chicago for Baines and reserve infielder Fred Manrique leaves Kunkel as the Rangers' everyday shortstop.

"I know I'm going to be in there," said Kunkel, who has played six different positions for Texas this season.

Manrique will replace Kunkel as the team's utility infielder.

Kunkel has played just 99 career major league games at shortstop. If he cannot handle the new role, the Rangers have a bigger problem than the one they believe they have solved at designated hitter with Baines.

"Jeff Kunkel has been more mature than he has been," general manager Tom Grieve told The Dallas Morning News. "He has shown great range, excellent arm and an improved offensive performance, too."

Rangers manager Bobby Valentine even went so far as to compare Kunkel favorably to Fletcher. "Kunkel has more range and a better arm," Valentine said.

This is Kunkel's second official try at full-time shortstop. In 1984, former manager Doug Radar proclaimed Kunkel "the next Robin Yount," and made him a fixture in the lineup.

Kunkel hit only .204 and became a victim of what Radar concedes was mismanagement. The next year, Kunkel started a four-year shuttle filled with injuries and disappointments between the majors and Class AAA Oklahoma City.

Quanah cowboy dies at Cheyenne Rodeo

By DONNA GORDON
Associated Press Writer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP)—A Texas bull rider working toward a second world championship died over the weekend when a charging bull gored him after he had turned his back.

Lane Frost, 25, of Quanah, Texas, died Sunday night at the 93rd Annual Cheyenne Frontier Days Rodeo. The bull's charge broke Frost's ribs, which punctured a major blood vessel, said Laramie County Coroner Roger Radomsky.

Spectators watched as Frost stumbled, signaled for help and collapsed.

Medical crews on the scene reportedly used a defibrillator to attempt to revive him.

But soon after officials announced Frost had died.

"We in Cheyenne are all deeply saddened at the loss of this fine young man... Lane was not only one of the best young men at his job, he was one of the finest of people and he will be missed by everyone," said Cheyenne Frontier Days Chairman Jerry Jesson.

Quanah residents, who had erected a billboard in the center of town boasting of Frost's rodeo achievements, said they were shocked and saddened by the news.

"He's kind of our town idol. We're a small town. We dwell on things like this. We don't have a lot of people who do big things like that," said Quanah Mayor Butch Dickerson.

The crowd was not aware of how seriously Frost had been injured when he was awarded an 83 score for his ride on a bull called "K. Walsh."

Frost finished at second place in bull riding in the finals and came in third in the average on three rides at the rodeo. His Sunday paycheck totalled $4,700.

A native of Kim, Colo., Frost was runner-up for the 1983 Rookie of the Year. He was the 1987 Texas Pro Rodeo Circuit Champion and 1983 Prairie Circuit champion. He also was a runner up bull rider in the Winston Tour in 1986, and the National Finals Rodeo bull rider average winner in 1986.

His career earnings through 1988 totaled $461,644.

"Rodeo's lost someone who had the promise of being a great one and it's tragic," said John Painter, Mesquite Championship Rodeo spokesman.

Pampa Bambinos advance

BROKEN BOW, Okla.—Facing elimination, the Pampa All-Stars held off Hugo, 6-5, to advance in the loser's bracket of the Southwest Bambino Regionals Sunday.

Pampa plays the East Louisiana-South Arkansas loser at 1 p.m. today.

Hugo was trailing 6-5 with a runner on in the seventh inning when Pampa second baseman Jeremy Stone made a diving catch of a line drive for the final out.

Gerald Reyes was three for three at the plate to lead Pampa's hitting attack. Danny Frye and Kyle Parnell belted home runs for Pampa. Frye also had a double while Tracy Peet and Bryan Martindale had two hits each; Duane Nickleberry, Ivan Langley, Dale Noble and Seth Heiskell, one hit each.

Peet was the winning pitcher while Nickleberry picked up a save in relief. Peet pitched five innings, giving up three runs on six hits while striking out one and not walking a batter. Nickleberry pitched two innings, allowing two runs on three hits while striking out one and not walking a batter.

Hugo was the Oklahoma State champions.

Pampa lost to Sylvan Hills of Arkansas 5-1 in the opening round of the tournament.

Stewart wins everything except recognition

White Sox second baseman Scott Fletcher, playing in his first game for Chicago after Saturday's trade, puts out Jack Howell of California during a double play Sunday.

Nolan Ryan wins more fans, Frank Viola wins a bigger contract and Roger Clemens wins more Cy Young awards.

But no one in the American League wins more games than Dave Stewart.

Stewart again filled the stopper's role, starting the Oakland Athletics over the Seattle Mariners 5-3 Sunday for his league-leading 15th victory.

Stewart, who has not lost consecutive starts all season, beat the Mariners for the 10th straight time. He helped Oakland pull within 1 1/2 games of California in the American League West.

"It's just a really good roll of the dice, to be honest," Stewart said. "I just happen to always be throwing against them when I'm pitching well, because they're a good hitting ballclub."

Stewart, 15-6, got closer to his third consecutive 20-victory season. The last pitcher to do it in the majors was Jim Palmer from 1975-78 with Baltimore.

RANGERS 9
BREWERS 3

Nolan Ryan got his 285th victory and struck out 10 and Pete Incaviglia homered and drove in five runs as Texas won at home.

Milwaukee's Robin Yount went 0-for-3 and ended his 20-game hitting streak, the longest in the league this season. The Brewers had won four in a row.

Harold Baines, acquired Saturday in a trade that sent Scott Fletcher to the White Sox, went 3-for-4 with two doubles and his 1,500th major-league hit. Ruben Sierra homered and drove in three runs for the Rangers.

Ryan, 12-6, gave up four hits and did not walk a latter in 7 1-3 innings.

WHITE SOX 3
ANGELS 2

Jerry Reuss and Bobby Thigpen combined on a four-hitter and Chicago ended California's 10-game home winning streak.

Reuss, 8-5, gave up four hits in seven innings and won for the first time since June 20. Thigpen closed for his 22nd save.

Scott Fletcher, acquired Saturday in a trade that sent Harold Baines to Texas, hit a sacrifice fly in the eighth that put the White Sox ahead 3-2.

ROYALS 7
ORIOLES 6

Danny Tartabull hit a two-run single in the eighth inning as Kansas City sent Baltimore to its 10th loss in 11 games.

The Royals loaded the bases with one out in the eighth on two walks and a single. George Brett grounded into a force play at the plate, but Tartabull singled off Gregg Olson, 3-2.

Tartabull earlier hit a two-run homer and a single. Randy Milligan and Phil Bradley homered for the Orioles.

Steve Farr, 1-4, got the victory and Jeff Montgomery earned his sixth save.

YANKEES 7
BLUE JAYS 6

Wayne Tolleson ended an 0-for-24 streak by singling home the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning as New York rallied to beat Toronto.

The Yankees, held to three hits through six innings by Dave Stieb, scored four times in the seventh, tied it in the eighth and won in the ninth. New York is 4-1 in games in which it trails after six innings.

In the Yankees' ninth, Randy Velarde led off with a drive to right that Tom Lawless dropped when he ran into the wall. Velarde got a triple and scored on Tolleson's ground single to right.

Relievers Dennis Lamp and Rob Murphy each pitched three shutout innings and visiting Boston beat error-plagued Cleveland.

Lamp, 1-1, took over after Mike Boddicker left with tightness in his right shoulder. Murphy got his sixth save.

John Farrell, 6-10, gave up five runs, two of them unearned, on 10 hits in 4 1-3 innings.

TWINS 14
TIGERS 3

Jim Dwyer, Greg Gagne and Randy Bush each homered and Minnesota got 16 hits to win at Tiger Stadium.

Dwyer hit a three-run homer and Kent Hrbek had a two-run single as the Twins scored five times in the first inning.

Bird out again with broken bone in back

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP)—The moment the Boston Celtics had waited a long time for was over in minutes. Larry Bird's return to scrimmaging left him with a broken bone in his lower back, his second major injury in as many seasons.

"In this game you have your falls, and you have to take them or you get out," Bird said Sunday night.

"I'm in my 30s now, and you're never as good as you were. What you try to do is stay at the same level. If I'm healthy, I'll play well. I still think I can play."

Bird, 32, fell heavily under the basket Saturday night, just five minutes into the first workout of the Celtics' summer camp for rookies, free agents and five veterans. He clutched his back, rolled over on his stomach and winced in pain. He is unlikely to see action again for four to six weeks.

After undergoing surgery on both heels last Nov. 19, Bird had been expected to be sidelined three to four months. But by May 2, the date of Boston's final playoff game, he still hadn't played a game. He saw action in just six games last season.

"I didn't think (my heels) would bother me at all in this camp, because I've been playing all summer," he said. "And I won't know how my feet are until I play every night for a whole year."

Newsome endangered by Dallas' youth movement

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP)—Tim Newsome begins a decade in the NFL being counted out again.

"It's been the same old song for nine years," Newsome says. "They keep trying to get rid of old Timmy."

Fullback Newsome is being endangered by the Dallas Cowboys' youth movement under new coach Jimmy Johnson.

In fact, the Cowboys cited the fullback position as one of their strongest needs and drafted Daryl Johnston of Syracuse in the second round.

Johnston has drawn heavy praise from Johnson in the Cowboys' workouts.

Newsome gained only 75 yards on 32 carries last year, scoring three touchdowns. He did catch 30 passes for 236 yards and no scores.

"I don't worry about my odds," Newsome said. "I just play football and do the best job I can. I've never been given a guarantee. I think my talent will speak for itself."

Newsome has been one of the NFL's best at coming out of the backfield and catching passes as his more than 200 lifetime receptions will attest.

The optimism surrounding Bird's return was wiped out on a freak play when he collided with teammate Kelvin Upshaw. Bird returned to the camp at Brandeis University, signing autographs and walking stiffly.

"It's just a little bit sore," Bird said. "I feel blessed that I'm standing and moving and that I didn't do more damage."

If Bird misses six weeks, he'll return in mid-September, less than a month before the Celtics open training camp on Oct. 6. The regular season begins Nov. 3.

With Bird, the Celtics won the NBA title in 1986, reached the finals in 1987 and made it to the Eastern Conference finals in 1988. Without him, they didn't clinch a playoff berth until the final day of last season, had their worst record in 10 years and were swept in three games by Detroit in the first playoff round.

Bird was hurt in the camp's first scrimmage, although he played for a minute after the fall before leaving the court.

"He's made such great progress. He was ready to make the next step, to put the emphasis back on basketball," Rodgers said. "He's not going to be able to do that for a while."

Team spokesman Jeff Twiss said treatment will consist of massage, application of ice, electrical stimulation and medication. Bird fractured a small bone, called the transverse process, that protrudes from a vertebra, but suffered no neurological or disc problems, Twiss said.

"They (the coaches) kind of overlook me every year then starting discovering me toward the end of the season," Newsome said. "I hope I can show the new coaches something they want to use right away."

Newsome said he thinks another team would pick him up if the Cowboys cut him.

"It's not what I call a do-or-die, end-of-the-world situation out there," Newsome said. "I've shown what I can do in the NFL."

"I can be a role-type player. If you want a blocker I can block. If you throw it, I can catch it. If you have short yardage I can run it. I'm a survivor."

Newsome said he expected to hear he was in danger of being cut after last year's disastrous season.

"Every player on the team should expect to hear negative things when you go 3-13," Newsome said. "Everybody should be held accountable. There should be criticism."

Newsome said it doesn't take a computer programmer, which he is, to figure his tough odds.

"Johnston will be a good player and there's Darryl Clack and Todd Fowler, both good players," Newsome said. "It's tough competition."

Millionaire rookies

Rookie quarterback Steve Walsh, left, who recently signed a four-year package worth $4.1 million, warms up with the Dallas Cowboys' other millionaire rookie, Troy Aikman. Walsh, taken in the supplemental draft, will earn a paycheck substantially smaller than that of Aikman, who signed a six-year contract worth $11 million when he was taken as the Cowboys' No. 1 pick in the regular draft.

Astros move closer to NL West lead

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

The Houston Astros hit balls that fell where the San Francisco Giants weren't. The Giants just didn't hit them anywhere.

"They hit some balls today that I don't think you could have thrown out there any better," San Francisco pitcher Mike LaCoss said Sunday after the Astros beat the Giants 6-2 to move within a game of the lead in the National League West.

Mike Scott became the first pitcher in the major leagues to win 17 games. Scott, 17-5, struck out nine. Danny Darwin, who pitched the last two innings, added five more. They struck out the side in the first, seventh and ninth innings.

CARDS 4
METS 6

Mark Grace hit a two-run homer off relief ace Randy Myers with two outs in the ninth inning for surging Chicago. New York lost for the sixth straight time, its worst slide since 1985. Chicago has won seven of eight.

With one out in the ninth, Jerome Walton beat out a bunt single and advanced on a wild pitch by reliever Rick Aguilera, 6-6. Ryne Sandberg

Pampa's Palmer captures silver in shotput at World Masters meet

EUGENE, Ore. — Pampa Middle School teacher Wendell Palmer captured the silver medal in the shot put competition last weekend at the World Masters Track and Field Games.

Palmer, 57, had a throw of 12.58 meters in the 55-59 age division.

Hans Poetsch of Austria won the shot put with a throw of 14.8 meters.

Nearly 5,000 veteran athletes from 58 nations were entered in the World Games.

NL

struck out before Myers replaced Aguilera.

Grace hit Myers' second pitch for his sixth home to make a winner of Les Lancaster, 3-0.

CARDINALS 8
EXPOS 3

Joe Magrane, 12-7, had a no-hitter going until Montreal's Rex Hudler hit a double with one out in the sixth. Magrane, a winner in seven of his last eight starts, allowed eight hits in 8 2-3 innings, struck out six and walked one.

The Cardinals took the lead in the third just before the game was halted for 59 minutes by rain because the retractable roof at Olympic Stadium is not working properly. Tony Pena singled, was sacrificed by Magrane and scored when center fielder Otis Nixon dropped Vince Coleman's fly ball.

Jose Oquendo doubled home two runs and scored on Pedro Guerrero's single as St. Louis made it 4-0 in the fifth against Bryn Smith, 4-4.

DODGERS 10
PADRES 1

Los Angeles, 11th in the league in batting and home runs, backed Tim

Belcher with three homers — two by Eddie Murray — and 15 hits.

Belcher, 8-9, pitched a four-hitter, marred only by Benito Santiago's sixth homer. Belcher struck out eight and walked four in pitching his fifth complete game.

Franklin Stubbs had a two-run homer and Lenny Harris had three doubles, scored two runs and drove in two as the Dodgers battered Ed Whitson, 14-7, and four other San Diego pitchers.

BRVES 5
REDS 2

Derek Lilliquist won for the first time in a month and Joe Boever picked up his 18th save.

Oddibe McDowell paced the Atlanta attack with three hits. He scored two runs and drove in one. Rolando Roomes drove in both runs for the Reds.

PHILLIES 8
PIRATES 6

A two-run single by Von Hayes highlighted a five-run sixth inning for Philadelphia.

The Phillies trailed 5-2 when Charlie Hayes drew a one-out walk off Doug Drabek, went to second on a single by Steve Jeltz and scored on pinch-hitter Curt Ford's double.
