Bush takes anti-drug message to students

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is enlisting school children into his war on drugs in a televised appeal aimed at urging young people not to "slam the door" on their futures.

Bush's television address today comes as the administration insists its week-old drug policy does not include a U.S. combat role in Latin America.

There is "no contemplation" of sending U.S. servicemen to fight drug wars in Colombia, Peru or Bolivia, even as escorts to local missions, Bush said on Monday.

The president's midday school address, to be broadcast from the library in the White House living quarters, was to be carried live by all four networks, said presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

Additionally, Fitzwater said 70,000 schools with satellite reception capability were asked to make the broadcast available to students.

"The president will urge children to talk to their parents about drugs, to improve communications. He'll discuss their future in terms of saying drugs will slam the door on your future," he said.

White House Communications Director David Demarest said that, in preparing the address, "there was a fair amount of consideration of who the message was directed to. It is not heavily laden with particular policy information."

"It is more of an effort to communicate to the kids why drugs or doing drugs is a mistake and why it's important for kids to try and help other kids, for them to intervene in someone else's life," Demarest added.

Bush on Monday sought to dispel new speculation, raised by the weekend disclosure of a secret White House directive, that he was prepared to send U.S. combat forces to the three Andean drug-supply nations of Colombia, Bolivia and Peru.

"Let me state clearly, none of the Andean nations have asked for U.S. troops. And there is no contemplation of the use of American armed forces in any combat role there," the president said.

Speaking at a ceremony honoring the Treasury Department's 200th anniversary, Bush said no U.S. military forces would accompany host government forces on actual field operations.

"Our personnel will provide training, equipment, and operational support," Bush said. "And I will see that it works exactly that way."

The Washington Post reported Sunday the directive would allow the advisers to accompany Bolivian drug forces on patrol.

Fitzwater confirmed that Bush had signed a secret directive outlining the goals and limits of military involvement in the drug war. He and the president insisted it did not cover Americans in combat roles.

But Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee said the directive authorizes the military to protect drug enforcement and other U.S. agents operating in Latin America.

Bush sent security advisers to Colombia as part of a $65 million package designed to help that nation fight cocaine, and he said last week another $261 million in security aid could go to Colombia, Peru and Bolivia for the drug war.

The aid was to be the first installment of a $2 billion, five-year aid proposal for the three Andean nations.

The president, in the Treasury appearance, also vowed to work with U.S. western allies in a crack down on money-laundering operations.

Wilson School getting ready for reunion, open house

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
News Editor

While most schools are quiet and dark after the dismissal bell rings on Friday, Woodrow Wilson Elementary will be the site of a flurry of activities this weekend.

For the first time, Wilson Elementary alumni from the years 1929 to 1940 are to join for a reunion Saturday beginning at 4 p.m. with an open house and visitation, said Mary Graham, reunion organizer.

Dr. Harbord Cox, local dentist and Wilson alumnus, is to emcee a short program, and the Rev. M. B. Lunsford of Del City, Okla., will give the invocation. Entertainment is to be provided by the Pampa Show Choir under the direction of Fred Mays.

Graham said the decorations will be red and white, the school's colors, and will include apples donated by Homeland.

Pampa Shrine Club members are to prepare and serve a barbecue dinner at 5 p.m. The meal will be followed with a tour of the school's recently completed addition which includes a new library and classrooms.

Graham said approximately 125 former students and their families are expected to attend the reunion. Reservations have been received from Louisiana, Oklahoma, New Mexico and "all over this part of Texas," Graham said.

Woodrow Wilson Elementary School, 801 E. Browning, first opened in January 1929, Graham said, with Earl Lewis as the first principal. The next fall, Annie Daniels took over as principal, a position she held for many years to come, Graham said.

Plans for the reunion were first discussed several years ago, Graham said, but did not come to a conclusion until this year. She, along with fellow alumni Maxine Lang Hawkins, treasurer of the reunion committee, and Mary Tinsley Smith worked to make the reunion possible. "They've been my right hands through all of this," Graham commented.

A group photograph of the returning students is planned, she said, and bricks removed from the original building for the remodeling will be available as keepsakes. Donations and memorials are also being accepted for the new library, she added.

"Any money left over from the reunion will go towards purchasing new books for the new library," Graham said.

Sunday, an open house for the new library is planned, said Ray Thornton, Wilson principal. The school's library will be open to the public from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. for a come-and-go reception, he said. Refreshments are to be served by the Wilson Booster Club.

Books donated through the "New Book for the New Library" campaign will be on display, he said. An original oil painting of the school building by Oma Fay Davis of Sweetwater, Okla., a former student, is to be unveiled at the reception, also.

Davis and her sister, daughters of Wilson cafeteria manager Jo Ann Nail, attended Wilson Elementary as children along with three other children in their family, Nail said.

The idea for the painting arose when Nail heard that the school was seeking donations for the new library. She asked her sister if she would do a painting of the school for the library and was rewarded with a "Yes."

Since that time, Davis has been painting the school from photographs and a visit of her old school grounds.

Jane Adams, a first grade teacher at Baker Elementary, works with students on Project Read.

Project Read introduced to first grade

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

When children are old enough to attend school, what are they most excited about? According to teachers, it's learning to read. But what if weeks go by and those children, for one reason or another, still can't read even the simplest words?

Baker Elementary School first grade teacher Jane Adams said for some students that scenario has been all too real in the past. And, in some cases, it has led to them becoming discouraged about their own ability and disenchanted about school.

So this year Adams is part of a pilot program called Project Read that is working to reach those students and make sure they are reading at least a word or two from the first day of school.

"It's a multi-sensory approach to reading for children who need not just visual and auditory introductions to sounds," Adams said, "but also tactile, kinesthetic stimulation on each sound."

Education expert Dr. Walter Barbe, editor of Highlights for Children magazine and a leader in the field of how children learn, told Pampa teachers last month that kinesthetic learners — those who need activity to help them learn — often are the best adjusted adults, but need the most specialized attention in school.

"Eight teachers from Pampa went to Bloomington, Minn., this summer for a week of training," Adams said of her introduction to Project Read. "We came back very enthused that we could have two pilot programs this year, one at Baker and one at Horace Mann."

Adams said Project Read is being used with selected first- and second-graders this year and allows them to always be active as they learn phonics and letter sounds.

Using puppets, sand trays and other physical stimuli, Project Read students literally make learning a hands-on experience.

"These children are involved every minute they are in the reading circle," Adams explained. "They are working with the felt or slate. They are never just sitting there waiting to be called on. They are doing something."

She said educators have come to realize that the key to classroom success is not found in making children adapt to the curriculum, but in designing curriculum around the students' needs.

"We have to vary the activities according to their learning style," Adams said. At Baker six first graders are being exposed to Project Read to see if they indeed do learn faster than they would have in a normal classroom setting. Adams said the children were chosen because of their kinesthetic traits.

"The children have been very successful," she said of her students' first attempts at reading. "We ate apples when we introduced the (short 'a') sound. And we colored and wrote in glue and in the sound tray and traced sandpaper letters, everything that helps them take the feeling and imprint it on them."

Adams said in the past teachers have occasionally stumbled upon kinesthetic aids that helped learning, but that until recently educators did not realize its true value with some students.

"Even in math we're using more hands-on manipulatives for the children," she said, "because before they can mentally picture something they have to see it concretely and experience it."

"This is nothing new. We've just found we need to go back to more of it. It's very vital. If these children are going to succeed, they need more of it."

As an experienced teacher, Adams has been able to compare her Project Read students of this year with kinesthetic learners she had in the past.

Of her six pilot students, Adams noted, "They are not frustrated. They are on their own level and they got to read the first day they came because they learned 'a' and 't' and the words that went with them."

"Children in first grade always go home disappointed because they go there to learn to read and if, after the first day, they can't, it's almost like, 'We didn't do anything.'"

"These children are busy and achieving success. They have something to take home and share with their mother and daddy."

In choosing the six pilot children, Adams sent invitations to them to join Project Read. She said those invitations let the students know immediately that they are special and their teacher feels privileged to have them.

"They need more of a certain type of activity and I am seeing nothing but enthusiasm when it's time to come to reading," Adams said.

Women, minorities fall in SAT scores

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly a decade of progress on the Scholastic Aptitude Test by female and minority youngsters stalled during the last school year. The nation's top education official termed the results "disheartening."

Statistics presented by The College Board on Monday show a widening race and gender gap among the 1,088,223 high school students who took the SAT in 1989.

White students in the high school class of 1989 gained 2 points on their combined SAT scores to 937, and now average 200 points higher than blacks whose math-verbal scores were unchanged from the previous year at 737.

Women's combined scores dipped 2 points to 875. Male test-takers averaged 934, 1 point higher than a year earlier.

Women's combined scores dipped 2 points to 875.

For all students, SAT averages showed little change for the fourth consecutive year. Average verbal scores dropped a point to 427 from 1988; math scores were unchanged at 476, for a combined 903.

The combined national averages have changed little since 1985 when they hit 906.

Average composite scores on the ACT

Assessment, the college entrance test that predominates in 28 mostly Midwestern and Western states, dipped 0.2 point in 1989, to 18.6. Averages on the four-part exam, assessing English, math, social studies and natural science skills, are scored on a scale of 1-35.

The results were "disheartening at the end of a decade marked by substantial education reform efforts," said U.S. Education Secretary Lauro F. Cavazos.

The scores, Cavazos said, pointed to "an urgent need to restructure the nation's elementary and secondary schools, to create intellectual opportunities for all."

The SAT, sponsored by The College Board and administered by the Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J., is the predominant college entrance exam in 22 states. The two-part multiple-choice test is scored on a scale of 200-800, with a combined 1600 being a perfect score.

The ACT, taken by 855,171 high school students during the last school year, is administered by American College Testing of Iowa City, Iowa. The organization announced that beginning October, students will receive 12 scores instead of the current five, including seven new subscores in specific content areas of English, math and reading.

Robert G. Cameron, executive director of research and development for the College Board, said he was disappointed by the erosion in average verbal scores. He attributed the decline in part to an increase in recent years in the number of test-takers whose first language is not English.

The latest results also were certain to fuel the perennial debate over whether the tests are valid predictors of college success, and whether, as critics insist, the tests are biased against females and minorities.

Critics led by the Cambridge, Mass.-based "FairTest" say SAT questions tend to cover subjects that male and affluent test-takers are more likely to be familiar with.

Scores among most minority groups have been gaining more rapidly than among whites.

College Board president Donald M. Stewart attributed the continued lag in SAT averages among women and minority students to inequities in educational opportunities.

"College Board research reveals a strong relationship between the strength of a student's high school preparation and his or her test scores," Stewart said. "That's why we believe that score differences among ethnic groups and between men and women reflect wide disparities in academic preparation — or lack of it."

He nonetheless noted that scores among most minority groups have been gaining more rapidly than among whites during the 1980s, at least until this year. Average scores among blacks, for example, gained 28 points on the SAT's math portion and 21 points on the verbal since 1979.

Test confirms rabies case in coyote in Pampa area

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
 News Editor

Pampa Animal Control has been notified by Austin authorities of a positive case of rabies from the Pampa area, Animal Control Director Sandy Burns said today.

A coyote killed on a ranch west of Pampa Sept. 1 has been identified as having had rabies, Burns said. The ranch owners, who Burns declined to identify, noticed the coyote acting "peculiar" and suspected the animal was suffering from rabies. The animal was killed and Pampa Animal Control officers severed the head and sent it to Austin for testing, Burns said.

Clarendon animal control officials also received a positive test for rabies performed on a bat three weeks ago, Burns said.

"This information is not being made available to the public to cause a panic," the animal control officer emphasized. "I just want people to realize that if they vaccinate their pets, we won't have a problem. And that they shouldn't mess with animals — any animals — they don't know."

Rabies vaccinations are mandatory by state law and city ordinance, Burns said, and the animals are to display valid rabies tags.

"These tags are color-coded so a child, if he is bit by a dog, can tell what color the tag is and we will at least know if the dog has been vaccinated or not. It may save the child from having to take rabies shots," she said.

Ironically, the bat tested for rabies in Clarendon was recovered from a local residence after the owner found her cat playing with it, Burns said. The cat was de-clawed and neutered, she said, but had never been vaccinated. The owner thought rabies vaccinations weren't necessary because the cat was never allowed out of the house, she said.

"In 9 1/2 years, this is the first positive test I've gotten since I've been here," Burns said. As animal control director, Burns said she began to emphasize sporadic testing for rabies in 1985. Since that time, approximately 70 animals have been tested. This is the first one that has come back positive.

"The state will tell you that most rabies cases are so isolated, we will never know about it," she said. "We really don't know how bad the problem is. There's the potential for a pretty bad problem."

"The only way to protect yourself is to have your pet vaccinated," she said. "We had a bad rabies drive this year. Not many showed up, and that really scares me."

Burns cautioned people to report any animal acting abnormally to the Animal Control Office, but urged them not to touch the animal or try to catch it themselves.

Unusual actions could be a docile animal suddenly becoming mean, or mean animal suddenly becoming friendly. Nocturnal animals that are out in the daytime should be watched.

"If you see anything at all questionable, call us," she said. "What we're trying to do is set traps. If you call us, we'll come out to determine if the animal is living there or passing through."

Although frothing at the mouth is the symptom usually associated with rabies, Burns said, she cautioned that dogs particularly can froth at the mouth for many reasons.

"By the time there is frothing, there's a lot of paralysis and disorientation," she said. "If it shows the frothing state, it's at the stage where it will not be pretty."

Prison site selection delayed

By BEAR MILLS
 Staff Writer

Board members for the Texas Department of Corrections have decided not to narrow the lists of cities in the running for six new prisons in the state at today's meeting in Austin.

Pampa is one of 46 cities around the state vying for a new prison. Officials have estimated if a new prison were to come to Pampa, it would bring 800 new jobs and generate at least $32 million in new local revenue.

Assistant to the City Manager Glen Hackler is at today's TDC meeting to listen to a discussion by TDC officials of the site selection process.

Hackler said he was told the TDC decided not to name the six cities that will receive prisons until after a Nov. 7 bond issue on funding four of the six units.

"We have effectively reduced the chances of that bond issue passing if we begin to eliminate cities," said one TDC official who asked not to be named. "The more cities that are still in the running, the more likely residents of those cities are to vote 'yes' to the funding issue."

Pampa and Gray County commissioners have joined the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce in offering $3.2 million in land and related perks if the TDC decides to locate a prison in the immediate area.

Hackler said he will be on hand in Austin today in case TDC board members have any questions about the Pampa site and proposal. Representatives from Childress, also bidding for a prison, have chartered a bus and are planning to have up to 50 members of their community at the TDC session.

Last week Hackler noted that such "cheerleading" will not cause the TDC to locate a prison in a city, but that if two cities' proposals are even, such a presence could be a deciding factor in where a prison is placed.

Acting City Manager Frank Smith said last week that Hackler's presence in Austin today could help Pampa's chances of getting a prison. He said sending the city's parks and recreation director, Reed Kirkpatrick, to a recent Texas Parks and Wildlife meeting was directly related to the awarding of a half-million dollar state grant for Recreation Park.

"They had questions and Reed was there to answer them," Smith said. He and other city officials are hoping Hackler's attending the TDC meeting produces the same effect where a prison is concerned.

Mattox accuses Richards of using Watergate-style activities

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — To Attorney General Jim Mattox, the 21-year-old college student was a spy who used a window seat at a Chinese restaurant to check on Mattox's political headquarters.

But the student, Evaristo "Carlos" Hernandez, says he was just a curious spectator.

Mattox on Monday accused state Treasurer Ann Richards' gubernatorial campaign staff of engaging in "Watergate-style spying" on his campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor.

"Ann Richards has lost control of her campaign, and they've panicked," Mattox said. He has not yet announced for governor but is a likely opponent to Ms. Richards in the 1990 Democratic primary.

Mattox said Hernandez purposely misled his campaign staff to gain access to confidential documents.

"Lucky, he was not the smoothest secret agent, which is why we caught him," Mattox said.

Richards, in Waco Monday night for a speech to the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, called the news conference "a pathetic, pathetic attempt to get attention — to get in the press. Apparently he accomplished it," the Waco Tribune-Herald reported.

Richards' campaign manager, Glenn Smith, called Mattox's statement a "ridiculous claim." He said that Hernandez, a volunteer for Richards, had done nothing more than ask at Mattox headquarters for brochures and bumper stickers.

Smith also said Frank Castillo, an employee of the attorney general, had threatened Hernandez with loss of his legal residency status, a lie detector test and a prison term.

Hernandez, who was born in Guadalajara, Mexico, has lived in Laredo, and for the past five years, Austin, where he is a first-year criminal law student at the community college.

According to Mattox, Hernandez came into his downtown campaign headquarters on three occasions and claimed to be a Mattox supporter.

Hernandez later was seen working at a campaign table for Richards at the Mexican-American Democrats convention, Mattox told a news conference. Hernandez admitted he had been working on Richards' campaign for about six weeks before coming to Mattox's headquarters, the attorney general said.

"We are fortunate that he was discovered before he gained access to our computers, where the most important campaign information is stored," Mattox said.

"I urge Ann Richards to investigate the unethical practices of her campaign staff and dismiss those on her payroll who are responsible for the misdoings," Mattox said. "We fully expect a full apology from the Richards campaign."

When asked about Mattox's demand for an apology, Richards laughed, then added, "I didn't have anything to do with it."

Hernandez said he went by the Mattox campaign headquarters twice, once at the invitation of a Mattox campaign worker, because "I was just a curious person."

Asked about his window seat at the restaurant, Hernandez said, "Everybody would like to sit by the window. Who wants to sit by the bathroom?"

Hernandez said he never asked about computers and never filled out a volunteer form for Mattox.

Hernandez said Castillo came to his house Sunday night and said, "Carlos, if you don't cooperate with us, you may lose your legal status, the right to become a citizen. And you also are going to need some lawyers."

"He (Castillo) said, 'You might need some therapy, if you become traumatized about this ... who's going to pay for all this?'"

"By that time, I was really scared," Hernandez said.

He said he told Castillo he would take a polygraph. But Smith said, "If he (Hernandez) asks me if he should take a test, I say no."

Hernandez said Castillo told him, "Carlos, you can easily go to jail ... because it looks to me like you were gathering information from this campaign to take it to the other campaign."

"In fact, that's not the truth," Hernandez said. "I just happen to be a curious person walking down Congress (Avenue)."

Billy Horton, field director for Mattox's campaign, said Castillo is a campaign volunteer, and has a good reputation. "I don't think he would have handled himself in that manner," Horton said.

Horton said he believes the accusation is an attempt to turn attention from Mattox's charges.

Reno race crash

An Unlimited racer piloted by Neil Anderson of Texas ended in pieces after a spectacular crash-landing Monday at Stead Airport near Reno, Nev. Anderson was participating in time trials for this week's Reno National Championship Air Races when the incident occurred. Anderson escaped with possible broken ribs or a compression fracture.

Workers' comp may be heading toward collapse

AUSTIN (AP) — Key legislative and industry figures say a Dallas insurer's decision to quit writing workers' compensation policies may be a sign that the system is headed toward collapse.

They also say it could prod lawmakers to adopt proposed reforms in the system that have been favored by business.

Dallas-based Texas Employers Insurance Association told policyholders last month it will stop selling and renewing workers' compensation policies because of rising losses. The company is the oldest and largest writer of workers' compensation policies in Texas.

While no one predicted an immediate breakdown in the $3 billion-a-year workers' compensation system, several legislative and industry observers said it is spiraling toward collapse.

"This may point more alarmingly than anything else to the real deterioration of the system," said Kay Doughty, executive director of the state's Office of Consumer Counsel.

Although rates charged to employers have risen 148 percent since 1985, "it may be that rates haven't gone up enough," Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said. The industry has a request for another 34.9 percent rate increase pending before the State Board of Insurance.

The decision by Texas Employers to get out of a market it has dominated in the state since 1913 could tip the balance in the Legislature toward House members who have called for radical changes in how disputed claims by injured workers are resolved.

Lawmakers are scheduled to return in special session Nov. 14 to try for the third time this year to overhaul the system.

Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan, the House leader on the subject, said, "One of the arguments of the opponents of reform is that we don't have a problem, that they (insurers) engineered this problem to drive up rates and get reforms at the expense of workers — that it was all a bluff."

"When the largest, oldest insurer in the state drops its business, that's not a bluff," he said.

Mike Toomey, chief of staff to Gov. Bill Clements, said Texas Employers' action "cuts apart what the trial lawyers have been saying, which is that one of the main problems is that it's been greedy insurers trying to make all these profits."

"Well, obviously that's not true, with a major comp writer ceasing to do business," he said.

The Texas Trial Lawyers Association, whose members represent injured workers in disputed claims, has opposed most proposed changes. It argues that profit-hungry insurance companies and lax job safety standards have caused the high rates and costs of the workers' compensation system.

Joe Woods, association executive director, said he doubts the seriousness of the announcement by Texas Employers, which collects about $180 million in premiums annually and has 1,800 policyholders.

"I think it's not a matter of this company going over under the weight of the system," he said. "It's a matter of them shuffling their policies."

"If it's a bookkeeping change, it may not be the dire marketplace we've heard about. It may be just a sound business move," he said.

Manor Downs may not open on Oct. 6

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials at Manor Downs say the opening of the Class 2 track might be delayed up to six weeks, a revelation that prompted complaints from Texas Racing Commission staff members and a call for an investigation into the track's finances.

Commissioners said Monday at least two racing stewards had been hired with the expectation that racing at Manor Downs would begin Oct. 6.

But Gordon Johnson, lawyer for Manor Downs owner Frances Carr, told the commission that the pace of construction work had prevented completion of all facilities planned for the first scheduled racing date.

"When we gear up to meet your needs, we shouldn't be taking it on the chin," Commissioner Ruben Cardenas told Johnson.

"I think it's very unjust for them (the stewards) to have left their positions in other states ... and then not have any employment," added William Meincke, the commission's executive secretary.

Some commissioners suggested that the track pay the $425 combined daily salaries for the two racing stewards, but Johnson said he didn't believe that was fair to the track.

"We've been working as fast as possible," Johnson said. But he added, "I don't believe we're going to be able to open on Oct. 6."

A second track, G. Rollie White Downs near Brady, also is scheduled to open Oct. 6. It would be the first track in Texas to offer pari-mutuel wagering in Texas since the 1930s.

Clifford Grubbs, president of Heart of Texas Racing, said the track would open on schedule.

"We plan to open Oct. 6," Grubbs said. "We've been working seven days a week, from daylight to dark."

Grubbs said the only problem the track anticipates is that a 215-seat clubhouse may not be completed by opening day. But that won't affect racing, he said, adding, "We can have the rest of that facility ready to go."

Both G. Rollie White Downs and Manor Downs, located east of Austin, are Class 2 tracks.

The Racing Commission on Sunday rejected both applications for a Kentucky Derby-style Class 1 track in Houston, the only Class 1 license sought so far in the state.

Johnson said Manor Downs had informed Racing Commission staff of construction delays, and he noted that the track's original application for racing dates was filed in May but not approved until mid-July.

"There's been no cover-up of anything," he said.

Johnson said he thought Manor Downs might be able to open by Nov. 20, a six-week delay.

The commission's director of security and licensing, John Williams, said there had been communications problems with Manor Downs and asked commissioners to approve a financial inquiry.

"I'm not sure of the financial situation," Williams said. "I would like to have your permission for my staff to conduct a financial investigation into that track, to find out what the situation is out there."

Williams also said there had been no word from track officials that racing wouldn't start Oct. 6.

"We've been led to believe all along they were going to open

San Antonio theater district renovation praised

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A jazz band played and financial backers sipped cool drinks on a sultry morning as arts advocates and renovation experts heralded the restoration and re-opening of the historic Majestic Theatre.

Workers brushed on the final touches of bright paint and last layers of plaster Monday as project organizers gathered beneath the Majestic marquee for a "black-tie" breakfast celebrating the re-opening.

The restored 60-year-old theater will host its first performance Thursday night when the San Antonio Symphony performs. A gala opening is planned for Sept. 19 featuring Rosemary Clooney and Johnny Mathis.

Supporters of the project say the Majestic is the cornerstone of a revived downtown cultural district.

"The memories and nostalgia just continue, and that's why the city is so excited. It's a wonderful connection between the past, the present and the future," said Jocelyn Straus, founding chairwoman of Las Casas Foundation, a non-profit organization spearheading the theater's restoration.

Constructed in 1929 as an "atmospheric" movie theater, the palatial and ornate Majestic is designed to lift audience members into a Spanish-Moorish village under the stars.

Special features of the decorative, 2,400-seat theater are fantasy-like birds, plants and quaint village images lining the upper sides and front of the theater. A "cloud machine" and twinkling lights above the six-story theater provide the image of a night sky.

Ray Shepardson, coordinating the restoration with his partner Sonya Winner, said dealing with the Majestic's most bright colors that blend into a more subdued tone when the lights go down proved to be the most difficult obstacle.

"There are so many colors and so many shades and nothing looks out of place. It's a fantasy of colors," he said. A color specialist oversaw that detail of the project.

Shepardson said atmospheric theaters are the rarest form of movie palaces and that the Majestic was the most spectacular ever built.

"It's an international treasure," Shepardson said. "It's a masterpiece. This building should be here 300 years from now."

The Majestic is one of several old theaters that dot Houston Street, once the hub of downtown activity.

Arts advocates say the $4.4 million Majestic restoration is the cornerstone for reviving an entire downtown San Antonio theater district, including the smaller Empire and larger Aztec theaters nearby.

"I'm sure we're going to see the momentum building for the restoration for the rest of Houston Street," said Virginia Van Steenberg, managing partner of the Majestic Development Co., a corporation overseeing restoration of an apartment and office building near the Majestic.

She said that already 70 percent of the 93 apartment units are pre-leased, and negotiations are under way for 100 percent of the commercial space and office space.

The city purchased the buildings housing the Majestic and Empire theaters and put up $2 million in bond money for restoration, leaving the rest to private financing.

Mrs. Straus, a longtime San Antonio fundraiser, started working on raising the bulk of the remaining $2.4 million in February. She contacted heads of corporations, invited them to private lunches on the Majestic stage and talked about the revival of "The Lady," as she affectionately refers to the theater.

"They were curious. They were excited. They wanted to come see," Mrs. Straus said. "I had to know my clients. I had to know who I was talking to."

One reason the Majestic project has been so successful is that the theater holds memories for almost every San Antonio resident, Mrs. Straus said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Maybe a journalist can bring freedom

No journalist envies the task set before one of their tribe, Tadeusz Mazowiecki, elected prime minister of Poland. The Solidarity activist and editor of the union's weekly, Tygodnik Solidarnosc, already has been attacked by the Communists who brought the country to penury. Jozef Blaszczak, a colonel in the Polish Army who voted in parliament against Mazowiecki's election, sniped, "He is a journalist. His predecessor was a journalist, and look what happened."

That is an outright distortion. Journalists do have their faults. But the last prime minister, Mieczyslaw Rakowski, was not a journalist at all, but a Communist Party hack as editor of the propaganda journal Polityka.

Mazowiecki has enough problems without dodging verbal spears. His most daunting task is to find some way to pull Poland's economy out of the trough the Communists dumped it in. Fortunately, he and his Solidarity advisers know the problem's magnitude, and will try to administer a stiff dose of the only true antidote: capitalism.

Mazowiecki says the Polish government must take immediate steps to "make it possible for different economic organizations to be formed in the direction of the reform of the system of property." Even more boldly, Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, in an interview published in the Italian newspaper Il Messaggero, said the new government will pull Poland along the road "from a Communist system of ownership to capitalism."

No one is under any illusions, least of all Walesa, who earlier in this decade was imprisoned by the Communist regime. He said, "Nobody has previously taken the road that leads from socialism to capitalism. And we are setting out to do just that, to return to the prewar situation when Poland was a capitalist country, after having gone through a long period of socialism."

Let's hope it works. Mazowiecki is advancing such privatization ideas as giving controlling stock in factories to workers and giving private firms complete freedom of expansion. But things are so bad that even these good ideas may take years to produce goods people want and wages that can support Polish families.

Another obstacle is the Communist nomenklatura, or ruling elite, that still essentially runs Poland. They fear, correctly, that Walesa's "capitalism" means replacing their corrupt, inefficient regime with one based on individual freedom. At a minimum, this means they will lose their jobs. In the worse case, it could mean they would face trial for their long abuse of power and suppression of basic human rights.

Yet two good signs may bring ultimate success. Soviet boss Mikhail Gorbachev has indicated that he will restrain any attempts, even by the Polish Communist regime, to halt the reforms, at least for now. And the Polish people retain the creativity that, as Walesa rightly proclaims, once was their glory.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE WAY SOME CONGRESSMEN HAVE BEEN USING THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE?

HEY — WHATEVER THEY DO IN THE PRIVACY OF THEIR OWN BEDROOMS IS THEIR BUSINESS!

Vices should not be healthy

One wag, reflecting on the axiom that virtue is its own reward, pointed out that vice is too. Hedonists, knowing the wages of sin, have always chosen to enjoy now and pay later. But now science and technology raise the alarming prospect that such habits will soon be not just pleasurable but downright healthy.

News item after news item confirms the trend. Fat substitutes that can be used to create ice cream and other treats, with all the taste and none of the consequences of the real thing. Heart attack prevention from an aspirin every other day. Longer life through aggressive, overachieving behavior.

What's next? Cholesterol-free cows? Cigarettes that clean your lungs? Painless exercise while you sleep?

If you are one of those souls given to mortifying the flesh in the hope of increasing its longevity, your reaction to these developments is bound to be intense resentment. Having put up with aching muscles, skimpy meals and sober cocktail parties in order to extend your brief passage through this vale of tears, you learn that your effort has been wasted.

You may be able to identify with the biblical Jacob, who agreed to work for his uncle for seven years without pay for the privilege of marrying the man's younger daughter, whom he loved — only to be given the elder daughter instead.

These aren't the first occasions that people have found ways to eliminate the damaging results of enjoyable behavior. But most of the past efforts have been less than completely successful. Lite beer may be less filling (and fattening), but you'd have to be drunk to think it tastes great. Low-sodium soups leave the impression that the soup has been removed along with the salt.

It cannot be a boon to the civilized order to find that what we have come to think of as prudent and upright behavior may confer no advantage over bacchanalian dissipation. Teetotalers have learned that moderate drinking helps to keep the cardiovascular system humming. Fitness buffs have been informed that the chance of a coronary rises sharply during vigorous exercise. Laid-back, congenial folks, who had been told they would get to serve as pallbearers for hostile workaholics, now discover that the latter are more likely to survive a heart attack.

Likewise, suppressing the libido may not be necessary after all. Cosmopolitan magazine, tutor to the sexually liberated female, advises its readers that AIDS shouldn't prevent any "healthy, vital American woman" from enjoying what it refers to as "an active love life" (actually, no one ever claimed that love transmits the virus). "There is almost no danger of contracting AIDS through ordinary sexual intercourse." Laissez les bons temps rouler!

Every day, the 1980s doctrine that longevity comes from sacrifice is being roundly subverted, to the delight of epicureans and the despair of whole-grain ascetics. We run the risk of doing what once seemed impossible: divorcing health from morality.

Good health isn't supposed to be something easy — you're supposed to earn it. If it can be acquired without pain or sacrifice, what attraction will there be in ... well, in pain and sacrifice? How many joggers will pursue oxygen debt for its own sake?

Clean-living sorts now find they won't reap the benefits of their upright habits until they pass on to the next world — a day that their virtue unfortunately may not postpone and may hasten. The image of hordes of sedentary, scotch-drinking gluttons living to be 100, and wickedly enjoying every day of it, cannot be welcome news to people who rise at dawn to jog five miles before sitting down to a hearty bowl of bran flakes with skim milk.

No longer can the trim, the aerobically fit and the diet-conscious take satisfaction that they not only look better but are better than their flabby, slothful acquaintances. No longer can they smugly smile at the prospect of dancing on the graves of the ne'er-do-wells. The march of progress has validated the old saying that ascetic habits don't make your life longer — they just make it seem longer.

Somehow it doesn't seem fair. But if you've suffered greatly for health, don't despair. Remember all the times you've needlessly punished yourself to keep your body trim, your heart strong and your arteries clear. Meditate on the deep injustice here.

Dentists should suffer a little

It was just a small item in the papers, but after I had read it — several times, to make certain my eyes were not deceiving me — I felt elation unmatched since I found out there really wasn't a bogieman and that they can't give you a death sentence in a divorce trial.

What follows is the first paragraph of the item. You might want to sit down if you are in the habit of reading the paper while standing up.

"A laser beam that vaporizes pockets of tooth decay, treats cavities without drilling, anesthesia or pain, a researcher says."

Did you get that? A laser beam can zap Mr. Tooth Decay.

And there's no drilling, no shots of Novocaine into your tender gums and no pain.

I feel like singing:

"Goodbye, Novocaine/Goodbye, pain/Hello, laser beam/For somebody more afraid of dentist than snakes and spiders/you are a dream."

Here's what the story had to say: "When it (the laser) was used on 100 teeth with cavities or shallow decay, 95 percent of the patients reported feeling nothing," said Richard Klein, a dentist. The others reported a brief warmth or tingle that was not uncomfortable.

Dr. Klein of Madison Heights, Mich., spoke at a recent news conference for a dental laser developed by Sunrise Technologies of Sunnyvale, Calif. The device has been sold in other countries, but it has not yet been approved by the Food and Drug Administration for general use in the United States.

Well, what is the Food and Drug Administration waiting for? This is a miracle. This is a giant step for mankind. Not to mention womankind, kidkind and terrified-by-dentists-kind, the category into which I fall.

I went to the dentist for the first time when I was 5 and it scared me for life.

I'd rather eat liver every day for a week than go to the dentist. I'd rather get stuck on an elevator with Regis Philbin or have a son who turned out to be a punk rocker than go to the dentist.

But hold the celebration for a moment. What concerns me here is even if the FDA approves the laser, how many American dentists are latent sadists who couldn't find anybody to tie up and whip so they went to dental school instead?

Why else would anybody want to spend his or her days in somebody else's mouth?

No drilling? No anesthesia? No pain? Without any of that, where's the fun in being a dentist?

Remember Steve Martin as the dentist in Little Shop of Horrors? An excellent characterization of dentists, I thought.

By day Steve Martin tortured his patients. By night, he'd get on his motorcycle and go beat up his girlfriend and run over any cats that happened to get in his way.

For all the pain they have dealt out over the years, dentists should be willing to suffer a little, too.

As much as it might hurt, I hereby challenge the American Dental Association to endure what ever pain might be involved in putting away the needles and drills and instead provide us with the dream of painless dentistry — warmth and tingles instead of the cold wrath of agony.

Open wide, ye grinders and flossers, and accept an idea whose time has come.

How can we end the cycle of abuse?

By SARAH OVERSTREET

In May, 18-year-old Debra Ann Forster pleaded guilty to having left her two baby boys alone in a sweltering apartment for three days. No one knows how long they would have been there if someone hadn't found them, almost dead, and rescued them.

Judge Lindsay Budzyn could have sentenced Forster to as much as 30 years in prison. But instead, Budzyn placed her on conditional probation. The condition was that Forster practice birth control for the remaining of her child-bearing years.

Budzyn caught blazes for her unorthodox sentence: the American Civil Liberties Union and the Catholic Church were among the indignant critics. But by September, Forster was pregnant again, and Budzyn declared the sentence unenforceable and withdrew it.

At the time Forster was tried, I said the sentence made about as much sense as the alternatives. One was to sentence her to prison; the other was to leave her alone — free to have as many children as her habits produced, and as unable to care for them as ever.

I'll admit that critics have a point when they say Budzyn's sentence was invasive and restrictive of Forster's civil rights. But that's the whole idea. When you commit crimes against others, you should forfeit some of your rights to property and free association.

In mid-August, Los Angeles Daily News columnist Debra J. Saunders went a step further than Budzyn. She suggested that if Budzyn's sentence was unenforceable when left up to the defendant, then it might be made enforceable by requiring her to have an intrauterine device (IUD) inserted — an IUD has to be left in place until removed by a physician.

Saunders' editorial came on the occasion of Christine Lo Casto's six-month jail sentence for abandoning her newborn baby in the bathroom of a jetliner. Lo Casto, you might remember, had given birth there during a flight.

Saunders also talked about the hundreds of thousands of babies that have been born with drug-use related birth defects, and the poverty-bound women who have delivered them. The anguish that Saunders felt when writing must be infinitely more intense for the social workers who struggle daily trying to find foster homes for these babies and to somehow break the cycles of tragedy.

I'm not sure we have the luxury anymore to not consider some invasive measures to prevent proven child abusers from bearing children. Our social welfare system is straining at it seams with these youngsters. Our shortage of foster homes and residential treatment centers for abused children is so acute that some of these poor kids are placed inappropriately into psychiatric treatment centers because they are the only state-sanctioned treatment "slots" left in the system. Yet proven child abusers continue to procreate, unchecked.

Of course, some of these abusers have been abused — and are being abused — themselves. They deserve our compassion and the best treatment modern sociology and psychology is able to give them. But simply treating scarred psyches doesn't stop the abusive cycles.

Christina Lo Casto's defense was that she wanted to prevent her abusive husband from knowing that she had given birth. But despite her harrowing ordeal, she became pregnant again almost immediately; at the time of her August trial, she was carrying her fourth child.

We like to think of ourselves as humane, but where is the humanity in allowing abusive parents to continue the cycle?

New wave of East Germans arrive from Czechoslovakia

By GIRARD C. STEICHEN
Associated Press Writer

PASSAU, West Germany (AP) — The mass exodus of East German refugees continued unabated today and refugee camps around this border town braced for more after word that another 16,000 had arrived in Hungary.

A day after Hungary began letting East Germans pass freely into Austria, border police in Bavaria said at least 8,208 East Germans had arrived at three separate crossings and more were coming in this morning.

Most of the refugees arrived in private cars and at least 100 buses bringing them through Austria into the southern West German state.

Also, Hungarian officials in Budapest said 16,000 more East Germans had arrived via Czechoslovakia. It was not known how many might be joining the greatest flood of East German refugees since the Berlin Wall was built in 1961.

The West German newspaper Die Welt said in today's editions that 10,000 East Germans may have crossed into the West on Monday, the first day of the historic freedom trek. Some 60,000 East Germans were reported in Hungary on Sunday — most of them on vacation — but an Interior Ministry official in Budapest said Monday that 26,000 of them had returned home.

East Germany's Communist government expressed anger at West Germany and Hungary for arranging the mass exodus, but announced no immediate retaliation. The country's leader, Erich Honecker, was reported Monday to be in worsening condition after gallbladder surgery last month.

East Germany's state-owned ADN news agency accused West Germany of "luring away and misleading citizens of our land" through an "unrestrained slander campaign." It said Hungary had "unilaterally suspended" agreements between the two countries regulating movement of people across borders.

It was not known how long the exodus of East Germans out of Hungary would last or would be permitted. News reports said the East Germans might restrict travel to Hungary in retaliation, but East Berlin denied the reports.

'Almanac' promotes $1 Columbus dollar

By JERRY HARKAVY
Associated Press Writer

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — The Farmers' Almanac, renewing its crusade to revamp the nation's coinage and currency, is promoting a $1 coin to replace the dollar bill to pinch a few pennies for Uncle Sam and taxpayers.

The almanac's 1990 edition, just off the presses, also calls for the elimination of the penny and 50-cent piece. The new $1 coin could be called the Columbus Dollar, honoring the explorer who discovered the New World, the publication said.

The almanac endorses a bill introduced by Rep. Jim Kolbe, R-Ariz., to direct the Treasury to mint and circulate the Columbus Dollar and halt production of the $1 bill 18 months after the coin is placed in circulation.

Under the new system, the little-used $2 bill likely would become the most popular piece of currency, says almanac editor Ray Geiger.

Geiger maintains that the new system would create a coinage and currency system that reflects contemporary values and lifestyles.

He quotes the Federal Reserve as saying replacement of the $1 bill by the $1 coin would save the Treasury more than $120 million a year.

"It costs approximately 2.6 cents to print a $1 bill and the bill lasts about 18 months before it goes to the shredder. It costs 3 1/2 cents to mint a $1 coin, but the coin will last 20 years," he said.

"The Farmers' Almanac, 173 years old, has always been a champion of the common man, and we think the common man is entitled to protect his right to a coinage that's sensible and realistic," he said in an interview.

Geiger's publication, not to be confused with the 197-year-old New Hampshire-based Old Farmers Almanac, has previously prodded the government to restore city names to postmarks, eliminate the nine-digit ZIP code and print currency in colors other than green. Geiger, who claims a circulation of more than 5 million, said this year's 48-page almanac contains the usual mix of calendar data, household hints, one-line jokes and inspirational messages.

It also has weather predictions by prognosticator Caleb Weatherbee that are based on "a secret formula based on sunspots, the position of the planets and the tidal action of the moon."

Weatherbee predicts that the winter of 1989-90 will be milder than usual with less snow, while next summer will be pleasant with moderate rainfall.

The campaign for the $1 coin follows last year's proposal for a new coin worth 12 1/2 cents — or one "bit."

The almanac remains adamant that the penny has got to go, saying most of the 200 billion in circulation simply gather dust in shoe boxes and piggy banks. It suggests that sales be rounded off to the nearest nickel.

Other East Berliners interviewed Monday expressed the same fear. Some West Germans have expressed concern about how their country can absorb an estimated 100,000 East Germans likely to arrive this year, but Chancellor Helmut Kohl on Monday called those expressing discontent insensitive.

"We have no right to resist the search for personal happiness of our countrymen from East Germany," he said.

Thousands of East Germans crossed into West Germany's Bavaria state via Austria during the day on Monday and the flood continued through the night with refugees moving west in sputtering subcompacts, on buses and rails.

Convoys of East German-made Trabant sedans were moving through Passau, many apparently on the way to tent communities set up for refugees at several sites in Bavaria.

Inside Passau's sprawling Niebelungen Halle civic center, the West German Red Cross and other relief groups had set up tiered bunk beds, kitchens and consultation centers for other

Drexel penalties to help fund drug war

By STEFAN FATSI
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — More than one-third of the record $673 million in fines and penalties being paid by Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. to resolve federal securities law violations will be used in the government's war on drugs.

Attempting to boost President Bush's new $7.9 billion drug package, the Justice Department decided to allocate the lion's share of Drexel's criminal penalty to a fund that will be overseen by drug czar William J. Bennett.

Drexel pleaded guilty Monday to six felonies and began paying $650 million plus interest and civil insider trading penalties, closing a major chapter in the 3-year-old Wall Street corruption crackdown.

The New York investment firm immediately wrote certified checks to three agencies and a bank that will manage a fund earmarked for civil damages claims against Drexel.

A check for $78 million — the fine against Drexel calculated under federal law — was sent to the U.S. Postal Service and will be used in part for white-collar criminal probes by that agency, U.S. Attorney Benito Romano said.

The remaining $222,196,770.97 criminal penalty was sent to the U.S. Marshals Service asset forfeiture fund, which Romano said comes under Bennett's discretion starting Oct. 1.

The fund currently is used for prison construction and other immediate law enforcement needs. Next month, it switches exclusively to the war on drugs.

"Clearly the Department of Justice wanted to see the Drexel criminal fine help fund the law enforcement efforts including the war on narcotics," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Alan Cohen, who heads the office's securities fraud unit.

Government officials said the fund now has about $250 million and will nearly double thanks to the Drexel penalty.

The total fines and penalties against Drexel amounted to $673,237,260.28. All but $150 million of that was paid Monday.

Drexel's long-expected plea followed months of legal wrangling over charges based largely on information from Ivan Boesky, the imprisoned stock speculator whose revelations about systematic lawbreaking have stunned the financial world since his arrest nearly three years ago.

Drexel attorney Thomas F. Curnin entered the guilty plea before U.S. District Judge Kimba M. Wood.

The plea had been expected since Drexel and the government reached an agreement on the charges in January. It was delayed by challenges brought by Michael Milken, Drexel's former chief junk bond trader, who was indicted separately in March.

The plea triggered enactment of a separate settlement between Drexel and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Drexel pleaded guilty to four counts of securities fraud and two counts of mail fraud and agreed to pay the fines and penalties for illegal stock transactions involving the firm and Milken, Boesky and the defunct Princeton-Newport Partners LP.

Shrimpers unite to fight controversial TED rules

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Area shrimpers devised a fund-raising plan to aid in their fight of federal rules that require use of controversial turtle excluder devices.

Brad Hemmenway, owner of Jack's Shrimp House in Port Arthur, said about 70 shrimp boat owners and seven fish house owners met Monday to form an association and raise money.

He said shrimpers agreed to donate 1 cent per pound of shrimp they catch, or $1 per 100-pound box, which is the unit by which shrimpers measure their catches, to fight regulations they say cripple their industry.

Fish house owners agreed to match the donation by the shrimp boat owners, Hemmenway said, adding he wants all the port towns on the Texas coast to generate money to help shrimpers fight the new regulations.

"The money ought to support a local chapter in Port Arthur and to fight this thing on a different level. If some of the money goes to a (turtle) hatchery, fine. Whatever it takes," Hemmenway said.

Shrimpers in the upper Texas coast say they don't find any endangered sea turtles in their nets, and Coast Guard spokesmen said they have not found any turtles since they began boarding shrimp boats to check for the de-

VICES, also known as TEDs, in mid-August.

Shrimpers also said the TEDs cause them to lose too much of their shrimp catch, which could drive them out of business.

Scientists with National Marine Fisheries Service, however, contend shrimpers' nets kill an estimated 11,000 turtles annually in the Gulf of Mexico. They also say the TEDs reduce shrimp catches by 2 percent to 5 percent if used properly, but shrimpers estimate the losses at least 33 percent.

In July, hundreds of shrimpers blockaded shipping lanes in Gulf ports in Texas and Louisiana to protest the TEDs rules.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher suspended the rules, allowing limited tow times for nets. But a federal judge ordered Mosbacher to implement new rules last week, and Mosbacher reinstated the TEDs regulation.

Raymond Clark, dock manager of Fishermen's Reef Shrimp Co. in Sabine Pass, said shrimpers in Port Bolivar and Galveston were to take similar action, which he said is in line with a proposal from Concerned Shrimpers of America.

He said Vietnamese shrimpers attended Monday's meeting with an interpreter, indicating widespread support for banding together.

TENSION HEADACHES

If you're bothered by headache that seems to have its origin at the base of your skull, you may be suffering from tension headache.

Dr. Mark Ford

Dr. Louis Haydon

Tension headaches can be caused by an irritation of the nerves in the area of the spine immediately under the skull. These are called the suboccipital nerves. They pass through small openings in the spinal column to muscles in the surrounding area. Any abnormal pressure or dysfunction of neck and muscles can irritate the nerves, causing tension.

The tension doesn't cause the headache. To treat this form of headache, attention should be paid to the bone and muscle structures. They should be returned to normal balance so they can function properly again.

Medication is not the answer to tension headaches. Aspirin and other painkillers may give you temporary relief-but they won't solve the problem. Once the source of the problem is found and treated, THEN you can get the relief you need.

Study portrays Department of Commerce as mismanaged

AUSTIN (AP) — A nine-member panel portrays the Texas Department of Commerce as an agency hampered by mismanagement, low morale and poor leadership, according to a confidential study.

The study, still in draft form, concludes the department is ineffective and inefficient in its daily operations, including the administration of nearly $300 million in federal funds, the Dallas Times Herald reported.

The review was ordered by Gov. Bill Clements and follows a legislative investigation and overhaul of the State Board of Insurance.

A committee of corporate executives and officials from other state agencies concluded that the board Clements picked to oversee the department has failed to provide clear direction.

The panel also found that in many cases the agency failed to follow regulations, establish standards or monitor spending in two major federally funded programs.

The committee recommended total reorganization of the agency, which was established two years ago to lure business and promote economic development.

Mike Toomey, Clement's chief of staff, said last week that the report was a working draft that was "not supposed to be out."

"You've got one side of the story," Toomey told the Times Herald. "No one has sat down and gone through hearing the other side of the story. This is nowhere near the end of the trail. Interchange is critical in any audit."

Dallas businessman Edward Vetter, chairman of the Commerce Board, said he planned to meet with the governor's aides to discuss inaccuracies in the report before it is made public.

"I don't happen to think there are any problems at the Department of Commerce," Vetter said. "I think we've got a pretty good team there."

But Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Dallas, chairman of the House Business and Commerce Committee, called the report "just the tip of the iceberg."

"It's a case where the whole is less than the sum of its parts," Wolens said. "We magnified all of the inefficiencies of several smaller agencies into one giant inefficiency."

The Legislature combined eight small independent agencies when it created the department to improve Texas' ability to attract new businesses and help diversify an economy that has depended on oil and gas.

The plan was to help cities like Dallas, which has pinned much of its future economic growth to attracting corporate relocations such as those by J.C. Penney Co. and GTE Telephone Operations and company expansions such as those by MCI Communications Corp. and Fujitsu America.

But the department's efforts have been hurt by a lack of cooperation and common goals among the agency's divisions, according to the study.

The panel concluded the agency failed to follow federal regulations, establish standards or adequately monitor the Community Development Block Grant and Job Training Partnership Act, which together represent the vast majority of the department's $325 million budget.

The panel reported that the monitoring of contractors, subcontractors and internal operations of the job training program is "inconsistent and not timely."

While the agency was required by federal regulations to review each of its more than 200 contracts annually, the department had a written goal of monitoring half that number, according to the study.

Sen. John Montford, the Senate State Affairs Committee chairman who initiated the investigation of the Board of Insurance, said he expects his panel to scrutinize the department's organization and operations.

Montford, D-Lubbock, said although "for over a year now there has been substantial legislative suspicion" of problems at the young agency, lawmakers didn't know about the governor's study.

"The lid has been kept on it so tight," he said. Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, Senate sponsor of the bill creating the Department of Commerce, said he was not surprised by the committee's findings.

"When you instantly create a large agency, it is going to take a period of time to get that thing moving effectively and efficiently," Glasgow said. "I think it is probably going to take three, four or five years to get that thing honed down to where they're doing what they ought to do."

Witnesses recall Bakkers' lavish, luxurious living

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — With testimony in Jim Bakker's fraud trial sounding like a script from Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous, witnesses described the PTL founder's lavish homes, a $5,000 Christmas tree and a two-story, air-conditioned tree house.

Using a wooden pointer and enlarged photographs of Bakker's homes, interior decorator James Taggart on Monday described the decorating work he did for the evangelist.

Taggart's testimony came three days after he was sentenced to more than 17 years in prison and fined $500,000 on tax evasion convictions.

Taggart and his brother David were convicted of evading $525,000 in income taxes on money they received from PTL. Prosecutors have said they might support a reduction in the Taggarts' sentences in exchange for testimony against Bakker.

James Taggart, 35, said Bakker ordered him to give his Highland Beach, Fla., condominium "a very glamorous look." PTL bought and renovated the condo in 1982 at a cost of $500,000.

Taggart said he sought to give the oceanfront unit the "theatrical presence" Bakker liked: plenty of mirrors, and motorized drapes with invisible seams.

Taggart said he decorated the condo for Christmas 1982 with a tree that cost $5,000 and featured hand-blown glass ornaments.

Bakker is on trial in U.S. District Court on 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy. He could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined more than $5 million if convicted. Prosecutors say he used nearly $4 million in ministry funds to finance a lavish lifestyle.

"The Bakkers had a tendency to grow very bored with what they had," Taggart testified about Bakker and his wife, Tammy, who is not charged. "It was not unusual to see something completely replaced more than once."

In all, 23 witnesses testified Monday, most describing the Bakkers' lifestyle.

Don Hardister, the Bakkers' former bodyguard, testified that the couple's son, Jamie, had a two-story tree house at Tega Cay that at one time was air conditioned.

Prosecutor Jerry Miller asked what happened to the air conditioner.

"I know who removed it. I took it out and put it in the doghouse," Hardister said.

Other witnesses described details from the Bakkers' opulent lifestyle, including:

- $140,000 in kitchen and dining room renovations at Tega Cay; a $25,592 garage and atrium addition; a 15-by-18-foot closet added to the master bedroom and a bedroom for Jamie Bakker son at a cost of $92,278.
- A $570 shower curtain for daughter Tammy Sue's bathroom and $439 worth for throw pillows for her bedroom.
- An insurance policy that covered more than $158,000 worth of furs and jewelry, including a $45,000 ring. PTL paid the insurance premium, which totaled about $2,500 in 1985.
- $83,000 in security equipment at the Bakkers' Gatlinburg, Tenn., home.
- A $10,910 presidential Rolex watch Mrs. Bakker purchased in December 1984.

Outside court, Mrs. Bakker appeared on the Donahue show, saying the couple never intended to misuse PTL contributions.

"We know inside we are not guilty," she said in the interview recorded Friday and broadcast Monday. "If I was guilty, I'd hide my head, but when you're not guilty you're not guilty."

If contributions were misused, it was never by intent, she said.

"The wonderful thing about God is he says you give and it shall be given to you. I thought that was what was happening," she said.

Selling your house can be slightly more traumatic than buying one

By READER'S DIGEST For AP Newsfeatures
Selling your house is only slightly more traumatic than buying one. Understanding what's involved — using a broker and lawyer, setting the price, advertising, handling contracts — can help ease the process.

To Use or Not to Use A Broker

Real estate brokers will bring in many prospects. A broker usually arranges for an open house, develops a listing fact sheet, takes care of advertising, shows the house and helps close the sale.

For these services, brokers charge 5 to 7 percent of the selling price. In some cases, services and fees are negotiable. Discount brokers offer pared down services for a lower flat fee.

If you decide to sell the house yourself, saving the broker's fee will give you the option of lowering the price for a faster sale, or keeping the proceeds. But you'll have to finance your own advertising and promotion.

Types of Listings

If you do decide to use a broker, there are several ways to list your house:

— With an Open Listing, you list your house with several brokers, but only the selling broker gets the commission.

— With an Exclusive-Agency Listing, you pick one broker and pay a commission only if he or she sells the house (but not if you do).

— An Exclusive Right to Sell Listing allows you to pick one broker, but you lose the right to sell the house yourself without paying the broker a commission.

— In a Multiple Listing, your broker may choose to handle the house exclusively or else share the listing with other brokers. This guarantees your broker some commission, no matter who sells the house.

— Listings agreements may run anywhere from 30 days to six months. Even if the sale is made up to a certain amount of time after the expiration of the agreement you owe the broker the commission if the buyer saw the house while it was listed. Both time periods are negotiable.

Pricing Your House

Determine the price range of comparable houses in your neighborhood. Check recent sales records with the local tax assessor. Get your broker's advice. Consider having your house appraised by a qualified appraiser — it will probably cost between $100 and $1,000.

Underpricing sacrifices profit but overpricing may mean taking longer to sell or not selling at all. The price should be close to fair market value. Advertising and Promotion

You or your broker should prepare a listing sheet giving the age of the house, lot size, room sizes, taxes and costs for fuel, utilities and water. A photograph helps. Specify what comes with the house, such as carpets and appliances. You'll need about 200 copies of the listing sheet.

Advertisements should stress appealing features such as nearness to schools or a secluded location. Avoid confusing abbreviations.

Showing the House

Make sure the lawn and shrubbery are well-manicured. Paint if necessary. Don't invest in new additions or modernizations that someone else won't be willing to pay for or which will overprice the house.

When showing the house provide warm touches such as flowers, a fire in the fireplace or cookies or bread in the oven. Don't play music that might offend. Keep children and pets out of the way. If a broker is showing the house, smile, retreat and say nothing unless asked. Never lie about a house's condition. It might become grounds for a lawsuit later.

Legal Details

Whether or not you use a broker, you will need a real estate lawyer (or in some areas, an escrow company). Get one involved in the sale as soon as possible.

Read any agreement carefully before you sign it and have your lawyer negotiate for any changes you would like. Always try to have a cap put on expenditure liabilities such as termite damage repair. Make sure the contract mentions everything that will stay or go; verbal promises don't count. Keep insurance in force, and don't pay real estate commissions until after the closing.

Father admits having bias against in-laws' ethnic slurs

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old married man with a fine, bright, 8-year-old son. My wife and I have a wonderful marriage, and for the most part I have fantastic in-laws. The one negative aspect of my in-laws is the way they refer to certain ethnic groups. They are very close-minded, prejudiced people who use offensive words to describe someone's race, color or religion.

I can live with it, but I don't want our son to hear talk like that from people he is supposed to respect.

Is there a tactful way to ask my in-laws to please refrain from making ethnic slurs around our child? Or should I let them say what they wish and continue to dispute what they've said after they leave?

OPEN FOR SUGGESTIONS

DEAR OPEN: Ask your "fantastic" in-laws to please keep their ethnic slurs to themselves in the presence of your son because you are trying to teach the boy to judge people by their character — not by their color or religion. Also ask your wife to join you in keeping her parents in line.

DEAR ABBY: I have some questions that need to be answered concerning several situations. I already have a couple of my neighbors upset with me, so I hope you will help settle things.

The first situation involves inviting other children to go along with my child to the movies, skating, out to eat, etc. Who should pay for the other children's food and entertainment? Should I? Or should they pay for their own?

Also, is it rude to invite only my child's playmate, even though there are three other children in his family?

And how do I handle this situation: A young neighbor boy is always asking to be included, no matter where we're going. He says, "My parents have already said yes."

Please help me, but don't use my name, initials or location. Thank you. FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: When you invite a child's playmate to go anywhere with your child, the playmate is your guest, so you pick up the tab.

'School Night for Scouting' set for Sept. 14

"School Night for Scouting" is scheduled for Thursday, September 14 at 7 p.m. in all elementary schools.

A representative from each Cub Pack will be on hand to explain their Cub Scout Program to the boys and parents and will accept Cub Scout registration according to Jane Steele, Santa Fe District School Night Chairman.

"Cub Scouting and Scouting are more educational than recreational," Steele said, "and parents find that the fun and activities of Scouting have a basis of character development, citizenship training, and mental and physical fitness."

Steele explained that Tiger Cub Scouts are in the first grade and are six years old. Cub Scouts cover ages 7 through 11, second through fifth grades. Boys graduate to the Boy Scout program upon completion of the fifth grade.

Steele announced that boys joining the Cub Scouting program on School Night or students who are already in the program who bring a friend to join the scouting program, will receive discount coupons from local food establishments.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

It's not rude to invite only your child's playmate, regardless of how many siblings he has.

Finally, if it's convenient to include the neighbor boy who is "always" asking to go along and says his parents have already said "yes," include him after checking with his parents. The lad appears to be very hungry for acceptance. Be kind to him.

DEAR ABBY: My former fiancee and I have split up and the handwriting is finally on the wall. (No hope for a reconciliation.) However, a few months before the breakup, she lost the engagement ring I had given her. She claims I should just "deal with it." I say she should reimburse me. I am still paying for the darn ring, which makes me angry every time I think of it.

Who's guilty here? Should I swallow my pride and assume the loss, or should she pay for it? Legally, do I have any recourse? Or am I out $2,200?

STEAMED IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR STEAMED: If you want to know what your "rights" are legally, please consult a lawyer.

Thanks for this opportunity to remind young (and old) lovers wherever they are, that as soon as they become officially engaged and he slips the ring on her finger, the ring should be insured for loss, theft or mysterious disappearance.

Giants edge Redskins

By DAVID GINSBURG
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If it were a painting, Giants coach Bill Parcells might have stuck New York's 27-24 victory over the Washington Redskins in a closet.

"It wasn't a Rembrandt, I'll tell you that. We were struggling," Parcells said after watching the Giants and Redskins combine for three interceptions and four fumbles Monday night.

After blowing a 14-0 lead, the Giants battled back from a 24-21 deficit in the closing minutes to beat their NFC East rivals on Raul Allegre's 52-yard field goal as time expired.

Despite the turnovers, the teams combined to put on quite an offensive show. Washington quarterback Mark Rypien threw for 349 yards and two touchdowns and, not to be outdone, Phil Simms completed 11 of 19 throws from 255 yards and a pair of scores.

All told, Washington had 457 total net yards and the Giants accumulated 390.

"We were having trouble stopping them, that's quite obvious, and they had trouble stopping us," Parcells said. "It was a typical Giants-Redskins game."

Typical in the result, too. New York has now beaten Washington in six of the last seven non-strike games. "We just had so many plays in there where we turned the ball over or had the ball in our hands and couldn't get it done," Redskins coach Joe Gibbs said. "It was a bitter loss."

Former Atlanta Falcon Gerald Riggs, in his first regular season game with the Redskins, gained 111 yards but fumbled twice, each time as Washington was driving for an apparent score.

Also, Earnest Byner, acquired from Cleveland during the offseason, dropped a sure touchdown pass on the goal line that forced Washington to settle for a field goal.

Still, the Redskins could derive some satisfaction from their rally from a 21-10 fourth-quarter deficit to take the lead. A 6-yard scoring pass from Rypien to Art Monk made it 21-17, and 54 seconds later Monte Coleman took an interception into the end zone from 24 yards out.

In a game in which the offenses did a better job of stopping themselves than the opposing defenses did, the Giants won the game with two flawless fourth-quarter drives.

Down 24-21, New York got the tying field goal on a 54-yard march that was highlighted by a 44-yard pass from Simms to Odessa Turner.

Then, after forcing Washington to punt, Simms directed the Giants on a beat-the-clock possession that covered 36 yards in 44 seconds.

With six seconds left, New York turned to Allegre, who ended it with a kick that just crept over the crossbar.

"It felt good as soon as I hit it," said Allegre, who earlier missed a 42-yarder.

Although Rypien had the better numbers, Simms got the victory. Fighting against a defense that sacked him four times, the 11-year veteran did everything he had to do to get the Giants their second straight opening day triumph over the Redskins.

Simms staked the Giants to a two-touchdown lead in the first half by throwing scoring passes of 30 yards to Turner and 62 yards to rookie Dave Meggett.

Washington cut the gap to 14-10 on a 24-yard field goal by Chip Lohmiller and a 48-yard Rypien-to-Ricky Sanders touchdown pass late in the third quarter.

On the ensuing series, Simms was sacked on first down and the RFK Stadium crowd was rocking. But the veteran quarterback coolly tossed a 31-yard completion to Zeke Mowatt and followed that with a 20-yarder to Mark Bavaro.

Four plays later, Ottis Anderson barreled into the end zone on a 14-yard run to make it 21-10.

Anderson, playing in place of the injured Joe Morris, averaged four yards a carry and finished with 93 rushing yards.

Washington's Brian Davis hangs on for the ride as David Meggett of the Giants (30) goes in for a touchdown in the first half Monday night.

Partlow is the State Director of Instruction for the North Texas Soccer Association and the chief assigner for state instructors, who present clinics all across West Texas throughout the year. During the 18-hour course, Partlow covered all rules pertaining to soccer and gave a test for persons wanting to become certified referees.

Dallas debut a letdown

By DENNE FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Tom Landry was somewhere in Europe, celebrating his 65th birthday.

Jimmy Johnson was at Valley Ranch Monday, picking up the pieces of the worst opener in the Dallas Cowboys' 30-year history.

It was easy for Johnson to discover what went wrong in a 28-0 whipping by the New Orleans Saints on Sunday in his NFL coaching debut. Johnson needed no film review to know the Cowboys were defeated in every phase of the game.

"I would love to have an experienced and talented football team," Johnson said. "But if the football team had that I probably wouldn't be here."

With new owner Jerry Jones glumly prowling the sidelines, the Cowboys made history with their first season-opening shutout.

Johnson was grim but had expected the worst.

"It's not a good feeling to look across the field and know you have to play your best to have a chance," Johnson said. "We didn't play our best in any area. We weren't as aggressive as I want us to be. We showed no spark."

New Orleans coach Jim Mora said the Cowboys didn't look prepared.

"Jimmy has a long way to go," Mora said. "I don't know if he realized that before this game."

Landry's wife, Alicia, knew she didn't want her husband around to have to deal with the emotional aspect of the Cowboys playing their first game without him as head coach.

She suggested a European vacation, which will last until late September. The itinerary is secret.

Not even Landry's son, Tom, was certain where his father was when the game was played.

"I didn't want to know so I didn't have to answer any questions," he said.

Former club president Tex Schramm wasn't gloating over the disaster.

"It was very difficult for me to watch on television," Schramm said. "But I don't want to comment any farther."

Schramm is the president of the World League of American Football, which will make its debut in the spring of 1991.

It was a big comedown for Jones and Johnson after a 3-1 preseason that gave Cowboys' fans false hope.

As shocking as the futility of the Dallas defense was the lack of production by Herschel Walker.

Walker had a combined 2,109 yards rushing and receiving last season, but he carried only eight times for 10 yards against the Saints. It was his worst game rushing since 1986.

Walker, who caught four passes for 36 yards, couldn't understand his idleness.

"I think I played decoy and blocked more than I have in any game of my career," he said. "This offense is not an offense for a running back. It's a passing offense for receivers and quarterbacks."

Rookie Troy Aikman hit 17 of 35 passes for 180 yards in his NFL debut but suffered two interceptions. He had three passes dropped and a touchdown pass was called back because of holding.

(AP Laserphoto)

Aikman's first pro start was spoiled by New Orleans.

Lady Harvesters open district volleyball schedule at Dumas

The Pampa Lady Harvesters finished in second place at the Vernon Volleyball Tournament after two narrow losses to Springtown in Saturday night's final.

Pampa was defeated, 16-14, 15-13, after leading at one time in both games.

"We had them down 13-6 in the first game and 13-11 in the second game, but they kept plugging away and we couldn't stop them," said Pampa coach Mike Lopez. "It was a lack of mental concentration, really, which has been our problem all year."

Dori Kidwell was named to the all-tournament team on varsity, while Sheila Reed made all-tournament on junior varsity.

Pampa's junior varsity spikers captured third place in Vernon. They defeated Wichita Falls Rider, dropped a match to Windthorst, then defeated Chillicothe to clinch third in the tourney.

Pampa travels to Dumas tonight for the start of District 1-4A action. Junior varsity play begins at 6:30 p.m., followed by varsity.

The Lady Harvesters stand at 3-10 on the season entering tonight's game against the Demonettes, who are the defending Class 4A state champions.

Sports roundup

Both teams are coming off strong showings last weekend. Pampa won two out of three matches in Vernon, while Dumas, currently 10-8, won the Borger Invitational on Saturday.

"It's pretty obvious that Dumas and Hereford are the top teams in this district," Lopez said. "Being the defending 4A champs, Dumas has the pride and something to fight for."

"We know they're going to dunk the ball. They don't have tremendous spikers, but they play smart and they're well-coached. Their main thing is defense. We've got to really spike the ball or they'll pick it up."

"We're going to have to have some good sets from Kandi Winton and Kelly Winborne and some good spikes from Leslie Bailey, Kristen Becker and Bridgett Mathis. But if we serve and hustle the way we did in Vernon, we'll be competitive."

See today's Scoreboard on Page 10 for District 1-4A standings.

Pampa Tennis

The Pampa High School tennis team takes a breather from District 1-4A play today with a match against Amarillo High at the PHS courts beginning at 4 p.m., weather permitting.

After staging a convincing victory over Caprock on Friday, the Harvesters dropped a match to Hereford Saturday, 10-8, to open district play.

Pampa continues non-district action on Friday at Palo Duro, then hosts district rival Borger one week from today at 1 p.m.

Lefors Volleyball

AMARILLO — Lefors won over Alamo Catholic 15-7, 15-12, in high school volleyball action Monday night.

The Lady Pirates are now 2-0 with both wins coming against Alamo Catholic.

Kellie Lake, Carrie Watson and Sonec Johnson were the top players for Lefors.

The Lady Pirates are now entered in the Briscoe Tournament, which starts Saturday.

Vincent to take over commissioner's post

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Fay Vincent, the former movie studio head who came to baseball last year as A. Bartlett Giamatti's deputy, will be elected commissioner on Thursday, The Associated Press has learned.

Vincent most probably will be elected to a 4(1/2)-year term, until April 1, 1994, said a source familiar with the owners' plans, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified.

"It will be smooth, simple. No opposition," the source said on Monday.

A quarterly joint meeting of American League and National League owners is scheduled for Thursday at Milwaukee. Baseball's nine-man executive committee, which has been running the sport since Giamatti's death on Sept. 1, is scheduled to meet today at Milwaukee and the owners from each league will meet separately on Wednesday.

A commissioner can be elected only during a joint meeting of the leagues and must receive three-quarters of the votes, including at least five from each league.

Vincent, 51, is the former chairman and chief executive officer of Columbia Pictures Industries Inc. He joined Columbia in 1978 after David Begelman, the former chairman, was found to have forged checks.

Los Angeles Dodgers president

Peter O'Malley and New York Mets president Fred Wilpon both praised Vincent on Monday but declined to predict what the owners would do.

"Although a lot of us have known him only nine months, he has impressed us more and more as we've gotten to know him," said O'Malley, who is on the executive council. "He's a very able, proven executive. He seems to be very frank, very honest, very open."

Wilpon, who owns 50 percent of the Mets, said he first was introduced to Vincent by Giamatti several years ago at a Mets game.

"I'm certainly very much in support of Fay Vincent as a person and as one who had the qualifications and qualities a commissioner should have," Wilpon said. "He's a very impressive guy and has an impressive background. He's intuitive, has very high integrity. He's thoughtful and very bright. He's a nice person. Sometime it's very hard to find a person who's both good and nice."

Vincent, who lives in Greenwich, Conn., managed to keep a low profile in movie industry, concentrating on the financial end of the business. Unlike Giamatti, a former president of Yale University, and Peter Ueberroth, head of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, Vincent has never been in the public spotlight.

That doesn't bother Wilpon. "The job itself will make him a much more public person because of the nature of job," the Mets owner said.

Sundberg calls it quits

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers' Jim Sundberg, one of the top defensive catchers in history, said he is retiring because of the physical beating he took behind the plate in 16 major league seasons.

"My body was giving me indicators," Sundberg said. "When you get my age your body starts telling you things. I knew it was time."

Sundberg, with 20 games remaining, is already the Rangers' all-time leader in games, hits, at-bats and doubles, and ranks second in runs and triples.

"The toughest part was the last two weeks," he said. "I believe that I probably cried at least once a day for the last 14 days at one time or the other."

However, the physical hurts made his decision easier.

"I have a sore left shoulder, a bad right knee," Sundberg said. "If I played any longer I would need surgery. I also have a bad thumb on my catching hand."

He said his fondest memory in his 16-year major league career was a game-winning hit in the 1985 World Series.

"My hit with the bases loaded in the seventh game to win (for Kansas City) was something you start dreaming about when you're a kid," Sundberg said. "That's the highlight."

He said his biggest disappointment was not playing for a championship team in two different stints with the Rangers.

"I wish I could have been on a winner here," he said.

Sundberg had played only three times and started once since Geno Petralli returned from the disabled list Aug. 19. Sundberg is hitting .189 with two homers and six RBI in 132 at-bats.

Sundberg's career fielding percentage is .993, third among catchers with 1,000 or more games. He has only 81 errors.

On Aug. 8, Sundberg reached an important career milestone in Toronto, when he moved past Al Lopez into second place on the all-time games-caught list. Sundberg has caught 1,025 games in his 16 major-league seasons. Only Bob Boone of the Kansas City Royals, at 2,171, has caught more games than Sundberg.

"Based on his achievements, it is no surprise that Jim Sundberg is one of the most popular players to ever wear a Texas Rangers uniform," said Tom Grieve, Rangers' vice president and general manager.

But he was hitting .276 as late as June 4, when a majority of his at-bats had come against left-handed pitching. After Petralli suffered a torn knee ligament and Chad Kreuter moved into the catching platoon, Sundberg got a higher percentage of his at-bats against right-handers and his average dropped.

After Petralli's return, Kreuter has replaced Sundberg in the platoon. Kreuter abandoned switch-hitting and batted only from the right side.

Sundberg spent ten seasons with the Rangers before being traded to Milwaukee for the 1984 season. He later played for Kansas City and the Chicago Cubs.

The Rangers signed Sundberg again as a free agent on July 21, 1988 after being released by the Cubs July 15. He appeared in 38 games the remainder of the year, making 25 starts behind the plate.

Oilers regrouping after nightmare in Minnesota

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers coach Jerry Glanville said he didn't want to single out the offensive line as the only area that didn't play well in the team's 38-7 loss to Minnesota.

But it was a good place to start. "Some of our best football players didn't play very well," Glanville said Monday. "But I don't want to pinpoint the offensive line. If you started pointing fingers you'd run out of fingers."

The Oilers offensive line was hobbled by injuries, allowing quarterback Warren Moon to be sacked seven times. The Oilers allowed 24 sacks last season.

Defensive tackle Keith Millard took advantage of Oilers guard Mike Munchak's strained Achilles tendon for three sacks. He also tackled fullback Walter Highsmith twice in the backfield.

"We've been beaten by a speed rusher from the outside before but I don't think we've ever been rushed inside like that," Glanville said. "We really didn't give ourselves a chance to win."

The Oilers scored on their first possession and then couldn't mount a sustained drive the rest of the game.

But Glanville wouldn't blame the performance on injuries and he couldn't blame it on the element of surprise.

"I wish they'd have done something exotic so we could say we weren't ready for it," Glanville said. "But they didn't. We didn't look like ourselves. We couldn't get the job done."

The worst of the injuries was free safety Jeff Donaldson, who received a severely sprained ankle in the first quarter and is doubtful for Sunday's game at San Diego.

Oilers line coach Kim Helton didn't sugar-coat his players' performances.

"It's not like they were blitzing linebackers and defensive backs," Helton said. "Their defensive line beat our offensive line. They actually play an eight-man front, using the four down linemen to pass rush every play and letting the others handle the run."

Pennison was impressed with the Vikings' defensive performance.

"This is definitely the best a defensive line has played against us," Pennison said. "We were banged up, but that's no excuse. It's part of the game. We just didn't get it done."

Glanville said he hopes the injury problem doesn't persist.

"Our biggest problem right now is getting through a practice," Glanville said. "Right now we couldn't hold an NFL workout. We'll have to see how it goes on Wednesday."

The Oilers have Tuesdays off.

Rolfing is a matter of arranging the body with gravity

By ROBERT KERR
Texarkana Gazette

TEXARKANA (AP) — Rolfing hasn't had an easy time becoming a household word.

Many people still have the idea that rolfers must either tack shingles onto the tops of houses or club a little white ball into a hole. Or that maybe they're in with the crowd that chants over crystals or sleeps under pyramids.

"We somehow got associated with the New Age, California kind of image in the '70s. But actually, rolfing began long before that, in the late '20s," says Sam Johnson, a Dallas rolfing who recently expanded his practice to Texarkana on a part-time basis.

"I find most of my clients are middle class, very conservative, who have special health problems or their health is just not as good as it should be."

Rolfing is a system designed to restructure the body into a healthier alignment with gravity. By manipulating the soft connective tissue around the muscles called the fascia in a 10-session process, a rolfing releases the body so it can assume a more balanced posture.

The system takes its name from the woman who developed it. Ida Rolf earned a doctorate in biological chemistry and worked at the Rockefeller Institute's Department of Chemotherapy through most of the 1920s. Health problems led her to study homeopathic medicine and she spent some 35 years developing the technique that would become Rolfing.

In the mid-1960s it began to receive wider attention, and in 1970 Rolf founded the Rolf Institute of Structural Integration in Boulder, Colo. Today, all rolfers are trained and certified there.

"Rolfing is not about fixing particular parts of the body, but about arranging the body in a healthy way with gravity. And a correctly arranged body tends to maintain its healthiness better. A body in tune with gravity is not going to expend as much energy," says Johnson, a 32-year-old graduate of Texas A&M and the Rolf Institute.

'We don't achieve perfection after 10 sessions, but everyone does wind up more in tune with gravity.'

"We don't achieve perfection after 10 sessions, but everyone does wind up more in tune with gravity. Some come back for maintenance, some never come back. We leave it up to each person. We don't like to foster dependence on a rolfing."

Johnson is one of 20 rolfers in Texas, six of whom work in Dallas and include a former district attorney and a theater professor who rolfs part-time. Johnson says established rolfers tend to stay as busy as they want to, though 20-25 clients per week is the physical limit for most.

Johnson has been coming to Texarkana every two weeks since April. An established rolfing in Dallas who was seeing a Texarkana client suggested that Johnson, who was just beginning his practice, start visiting Texarkana on a part-time basis.

Johnson says he is now working with 12 clients at his office at Sunnyside Health Center in Summerhill Square here. Rolfing sessions last 60-90 minutes and cost $50-100.

Walter McDonald, the 86-year-old artist whose paintings rank among Texarkana's most popular, is one of Johnson's clients.

"I happened to be in the health food store and heard two ladies talking about how much good it was doing them. I had a few ailments and I thought I'd like to try it," McDonald says.

"He told me I would start feeling better after the third treatment. Well, I feel better after only two. And I sleep better."

"They shove those muscles around, you know. I thought I was going to be sore, but I didn't have any soreness at all. It's a rather strange treatment, but effective."

'The differences don't happen all at once, but they happen.'

Donna Messer, a Texarkana interior designer, is another client of Johnson's.

"It's very subtle. The differences don't happen all at once, but they happen. I even had a friend tell me she could tell a difference, which surprised me," says Ms. Messer, who noted she was interested in the emotional benefits of rolfing.

"After three or four sessions I felt more complete, more whole. Anytime you release the body, you release the spirit, like someone who takes up walking or running."

Johnson says, "A lot of people come to us as a last resort. Others come because they feel it can free up some emotional problems. Through rolfing, people often find that emotional problems can be associated with physical problems."

Johnson, a psychiatry major who has worked in psychiatric hospitals, says Rolf training emphasizes the emotional aspects involved.

"The institute makes it very difficult to become a Rolfing, by requiring both specific training and a demonstration of emotional maturity. People going through rolfing can experience some fairly dramatic emotional changes, and you have to demonstrate that you can deal with it," he says.

"We're all certified through the institute in Boulder. Every state is different. Some states regard it as a form of massage and license it the same way. In Texas, we're really not regulated. I've checked with the department of health, and their position is basically they know we are out here and they don't consider us any problem."

"If they got complaints, they might start to regulate us. But we probably regulate ourselves tougher than any state would. Rolfing is copyrighted, and we are careful about letting people use the term if they aren't trained to do so."

Everyone wants more funds from Congress

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a steamy summer ends, the Democratic-controlled 101st Congress is turning from its earlier preoccupation with scandal to face the reality that the demands before it far exceed the ability to pay for them.

As Congress steps up the pace after its summer recess, the calls upon it seem endless.

Poland's newly installed non-communist government wants American cash to bring quick change to a crippled economy and build its strength for the future.

Billions are needed for the war on drugs; billions are needed for the war on AIDS.

President Bush wants billions to spur the development of new American technology, not to mention finding a way to send a space expedition to Mars.

Billions are demanded to house the homeless. Billions will be required if the nation's aging superstructure of highways and bridges and sewers are to be repaired and replaced.

The Pentagon seeks billions for the B-1 stealth bomber and the Midgetman mobile missile.

Money is demanded for pay raises for federal judges and civil servants and congressmen. The Senate is earmarking a few million to improve its subway system so senators can zip more quickly from their offices to the Senate floor to avoid missing roll-call votes.

Some of the money will be found, including billions to bail out the savings and loan industry. Without new taxes, most of it will not.

And if the deficit reduction goals of the Gramm-Rudman law are to be met, many existing and popular spending programs must be cut.

But congressional Democrats are not about to seek the funds by attacking President Bush's "no-new-taxes" political fortress.

"We're not going to have a light cavalry charge into the face of a certain veto," Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said last week.

But Mitchell said Bush may find himself on the wrong side of a credibility gap if he continues to propose costly new programs without saying how he proposes to pay for them.

"We face these constant and, it seems, accelerating pressures" to reduce the federal deficit and "deal with these emerging demands," Mitchell said.

"The president wants to go to Mars, but there is no plan, no timetable, no price given."

"I think that what is going to happen is that the appeal of the president's position is going to erode. The gap between his rhetoric and action, words and deeds, continues to grow," Mitchell said.

White Congress is unhappy at the "real pain" involved in attempting to deal with superpower problems in a tight-money age, many are pleased that the focus seems to have shifted to substance, that most of the purely personal controversies that dominated the early months of the session appear to have been left behind.

These include the Senate fight that saw the defeat of John Tower's nomination as the nation's defense chief and the battle over ethics that led to the resignation of House Speaker Jim Wright.

Jury selection begins in Michigan nursing home deaths trial

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Jury selection began Monday in the trial of a Texas woman charged with killing five nursing home patients in a bizarre pact with her lesbian lover.

Gwendolyn Graham of Tyler, Texas, is charged with five counts of first-degree murder for allegedly smothering the female patients during her overnight shift at Alpine Manor Nursing Home in Walker, a suburb of Grand Rapids. She also is charged with one count of conspiracy to murder.

Before jury selection began, Kent County Chief Circuit Judge Roman Snow denied defense motions to move the trial to another county and to dismiss the charges based on results of a private polygraph test. Jury selection is expected to take at least two days.

Prosecutors are basing most of their case on the confessions of Graham's alleged accomplice and former live-in companion, Catherine Wood.

Wood pleaded guilty last week to one count each of second-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder. Two counts of first-degree murder against her were dropped in exchange for her testimony against Graham. Wood faces up to life in prison, with a chance of parole in 10 years.

Wood has said she and Graham, a nurse's aide, discussed killing as many as 20 patients during their overnight shifts at Alpine Manor in 1987.

Graham, 25, allegedly smothered the victims with washclothes, choosing those patients whose poor physical condition would leave no signs of a struggle. Almost all of the patients were bedridden, and many suffered from Alzheimer's disease.

Wood, 27, said Graham told her killing the patients helped her relieve stress. She said she agreed to go along with the killings, sometimes acting as a lookout, because she hoped it would bind their love.

Graham and Wood allegedly took souvenirs from each victim — including earrings and handkerchiefs — and had planned to spell M-U-R-D-E-R with the victims' initials. That plan failed because some targeted victims struggled too much, Wood testified.
