Hurricane Hugo smashes into the Carolinas

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Hurricane Hugo slammed into this 300-year-old city of antebellum mansions with winds of 135 mph today, leveling dozens of buildings and peeling others open "like a can opener." At least five people in the Carolinas were killed.

"There's just destruction everywhere," Mayor Joseph P. Riley said after a 6:30 a.m. tour of his ravaged city. "We have on our hands a degree of physical destruction that is unprecedented in anyone's living memory."

After a direct hit on South Carolina, Hugo weakened and was downgraded to a tropical storm at 6 a.m. by the National Weather Service. At 9 a.m., the center of the storm was just north of Hickory, N.C., at latitude 36.2 degrees north and longitude 81.5 degrees west, and winds had diminished to 60 mph.

Further weakening was expected as Hugo moved northward at 25 to 30 mph through North Carolina on a path that would take it into the Virginias, Maryland, Delaware and Pennsylvania. It was expected to reach New Jersey and New York on Saturday.

At least 700,000 people were without power in the Carolinas, officials said, including 200,000 or 85 percent of the customers in Charlotte, N.C., which felt Hugo's wrath even through its 200 miles inland. The blackout canceled today's session of Jim Bakker's fraud and conspiracy trial in Charlotte.

Details were still sketchy about flooding on the barrier islands off the coast, which bore the brunt of Hugo's fury.

In addition to flooding, fires from natural gas leaks erupted in low-lying Charleston, where the first shots of the Civil War were fired in 1861. The National Guard patrolled tree-lined streets, some of which were under several feet of water.

Seventy miles up the coast near Myrtle Beach, the elite vacation retreat community of Garden City Beach was smashed, officials said. It was among the communities under an evacuation order before Hugo hit.

"Garden City for all practical purposes is gone," said M.L. Love, a Horry County administrator who toured the small unincorporated resort town. Love said some larger buildings remained standing on the oceanfront, but otherwise destruction extended "as far as I could see."

As dawn broke, the first reports of deaths from the storm in the United States began coming in as rescuers found bodies in the wreckage. Four people died in South Carolina and one in North Carolina, officials said. Earlier, 26 people died as the storm surged across the Caribbean.

One man died in Eastover outside Columbia, S.C., when a tree fell on a car, and a person died when a residence collapsed in Berkeley County near Charleston. A 9-year-old girl died in a house fire near Myrtle Beach that officials said was storm-related, and Riley said an elderly man was found beneath the rubble of a Charleston house.

A 6-month-old baby was killed in Union County, N.C., when a tree fell on a house, officials there said.

The hurricane passed through the city with winds of 135 mph and gusts even higher, the National Hurricane Center reported. Riley called the hurricane a "disaster of extraordinary dimensions."

Thirty major buildings in downtown Charleston were flattened, houses collapsed all over the city, and several people were trapped beneath a collapsed condominium complex, said Elizabeth Tam of the Charleston County Police.

Police were at the scene, but no further details on injuries was available at midmorning.

The White House granted a request from South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell for federal emergency aid.

"It is the worst storm, the worst disaster, I've ever seen anywhere," Campbell told ABC's Good Morning America. "We've got a lot of people missing. We don't know how bad it is."

Linda Lombard, head of the Charleston County Council also asked for aid.

"The storm itself was larger than the state of South Carolina," she told NBC. "We need help. We need copters. We need planes. We need medical supplies."

The impact happened at the worst time in terms of flooding. Hugo carried with it a tidal surge, or a wall of water, 12 to 17 feet high that coincided with high tide at 2:13 a.m.

At least 20 boats washed ashore, including a 50-foot craft that washed up on a city street, Police

(AP Laserphoto)

A sail boat sits in the streets of Charleston this morning after it was washed ashore by Hugo.

Chief Ruben Greenberg said.

In one Charleston neighborhood, oak-lined streets bordered by restored antebellum mansions were under three feet of water, while the open-air market downtown was flooded with two feet of water. A massive wooden church door was tossed on the sidewalk.

Tens of thousands of coastal residents, warned well in advance, spent most of Thursday boarding up homes and businesses, then driving inland to stay in shelters and hotels or with relatives and friends.

Some tornadoes are likely in North Carolina and Virginia today, the Weather Service said. But fears of severe flooding in rain-saturated Eastern states were eased because of the speed Hugo moved up the Appalachians, said Bob Sheets, director of the hurricane center.

The hurricane-force winds first hit the South Carolina coast at 9:15 p.m. Thursday. It was the first major hurricane to strike Charleston since Hurricane Gracie came ashore 70 miles to the south in 1959.

The eye passed over Charleston about midnight. A wall of water gushed into City Hall when the roof on the 188-year-old brick building cracked during the storm. Phone and electric service to the city's command post was knocked out.

Late Thursday, Hugo apparently knocked out power to the entire city.

Investigators focus on bus accident cause

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

ALTON (AP) — Federal and state investigators today were focusing on whether a soft-drink delivery truck's brakes failed, causing what is being called the worst school bus accident in Texas history.

Nineteen students died and at least 64 were injured after the bus was struck by a Dr Pepper truck that rolled through a stop sign Thursday morning. The impact shoved the bus into a water-filled caliche pit, where it sank and trapped the passengers.

Four students remain in critical condition at area hospitals this morning, authorities said. One is unconscious and on a respirator.

The National Transportation Safety Board and the Texas Department of Public Safety planned to inspect the bus and the truck throughout the day, said DPS Sgt. Israel Pacheco.

"They're checking the mechanical condition of the vehicles, particularly since the Dr Pepper driver was claiming that the brakes failed," Pacheco said.

The DPS today also raised the number of passengers on the bus from 81 to 86, including the driver. Pacheco said several students who escaped the bus with minor injuries walked away from the accident and were taken to hospitals by private vehicles.

The bus was designed to carry 83 people, said Herman Light, quality assurance director for the manufacturer, Blue Bird Body Co. of Fort Valley, Ga.

But Pacheco said state law allows for one student to be standing for every student seated on the bus.

Meanwhile, this small South Texas community prepared to bury the first of the victims.

Funerals were scheduled for 3 p.m. today for at least two of the dead students, said the Rev. Frank Gomez of San Martin de Porres Catholic Church in Alton, about 15 miles from the Mexican border.

Hidalgo County District Attorney Rene Guerra, who visited the scene, said the case will be presented to the next grand jury.

"Presently, there may be some criminal negligence here," he said. "It might possibly be involuntary manslaughter if recklessness can be attributed to the driver or the company."

The bus was pushed more than 40 feet after being struck by the truck about 7:40 Thursday morning. Bus driver Gilberto Pena had picked up the last students when the accident occurred at the intersection just east of Alton.

More than 50 area residents gathered at the edge of the pit until dark Thursday, many still having trouble believing what happened.

United Way holds first fund check-in

Special Gifts topped the divisions turning in United Way pledges at the Pampa United Way's first check-in meeting for the 1989 fund raising campaign.

David Fatheree, representing Special Gifts, turned in a total of $8,550 towards the United Way's 1989 goal of $310,000. Following closely was the Major Firms division, co-chaired by Brent Stephens, Wayne Stribling and Vic Raymond, with pledges of $8,212.08.

Professional, also headed by Fatheree, reported pledges of $3,605 which will be matched dollar for dollar for a total of $7,210. Commercial, composed of the United Way board members and headed by Dan McGrath, turned in $2,080. Individuals, led by Evelyn Johnson, brought in $1,620 and Public, chaired by Jeane Roper, reported $250 in pledges.

"We've had two good (division) meetings this week," reported Brian Vining, campaign chairman. He said division members have divided up call cards and will be meeting with prospective donors throughout the coming weeks.

Two tours of United Way agencies have already taken place, Vining said, and more are being scheduled, including six for the City of Pampa employees.

Tours are set up for 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., with groups of from five to 12 people attending, said Reed Echols, who organizes the tours. Genesis House loans a van for tour groups, she said.

A tour consists of visits to several of the local United Way agencies and ends with delivering a route for Meals on Wheels. To set up a tour, call Katrina Bigham, executive director, at the United Way office at 669-1001.

"We've gotten a lot of calls of people asking for tours," Vining said, adding that he's received a lot of support from various employers who agreed to have United Way employee rallies at their respective businesses.

"It's like Brent Stephens said, these tours are the key to the success of this campaign," Vining commented.

Publicity chairman Jack Gindorf hinted that those attending the Oct. 5 check-in could see the rumored mud fight between Gindorf and Vining.

"But it's not going to be for free," Gindorf emphasized. "If you aren't bring in pledges, it will cost a $1. You just wait, Vining, I'm going to get you down and stomp you into the mud. I'm going to smear you all around in it," he added, putting on his best imitation of Hulk Hogan.

Special entertainment for the check-in meeting was provided by Andrew Grabato, 6, who performed several classical selections on his violin. The tiny musician has been studying the violin for three years. He is the son of Drs. Rene and Teresita Grabato.

Refreshments of homemade cookies and punch were prepared and served by representatives of two United Way agencies, Genesis Houses for Boys and Girls and the Adobe Walls Council of Boy Scouts. Decorations of tiny pumpkins and autumn leaves were loaned by Watson's Feed and Seed.

Genesis House also donated home-canned pickles and fruits as a gift for the entertainment and prizes for the top divisions.

TWC official blasts TV's water report

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

While it appears that benzene contamination has spread under Hoechst Celanese's Pampa Plant, manager Brent Stephens said there is still no reason to believe any contamination of drinking water has occurred.

Stephens said Celanese worked with the Texas Water Commission in drilling three new wells on the plant site recently and that initial test results indicated contamination in two of the three wells.

"We first reported ground water contamination in the (Ogallala) aquifer in early '88," Stephens said of the benzene contamination. "We've been working with the TWC to check the migration."

Stephens said Celanese has taken an aggressive course of action in charting the migration of contamination and would be the first to alert the public if drinking water contamination was found.

"The well on the east side of the plant site is still clean," Stephens said. "There is no indication of migration off the plant site."

He added that the tests also revealed a decrease in contamination of perch water zones above the aquifer.

Bill Colbert of the Texas Water Commission in Austin said this morning that a story at aired Thursday night on an Amarillo TV station misled the public regarding the TWC's position on Celanese and the contamination.

"There is no indication of migration off the plant site."

This morning Colbert said, "We would never comment on (contamination) and migration based on initial tests. (The reporter) took some liberties with my comments and I am not happy about it." Colbert said the state is pleased with the amount of cooperation with Celanese and both entities are working together to solve any problems associated with benzene or other contaminants.

"I had Brent Stephens call me to double-check some things that (the reporter) attributed to me ... and our district office called to say the story was running," Colbert said.

He went on to say the TWC has taken no position on possible benzene migration off the plant site and that any suggestion it had was a blatant misrepresentation of the facts.

Crime Stoppers reactivated

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa Crime Prevention Officer Dave Wilkinson announced today that Crime Stoppers is being reactivated.

Noting that the non-profit organization has not been active in seeking funds for rewards or raising public awareness about how to fight crime over the past two years, Wilkinson said he is making a serious commitment to reducing the number of offenses that occur by involving the public.

"In the past two years Crime Stoppers has laid dormant," Wilkinson said, "and we are currently trying to get it restarted. The things we need are financial help — donations from the public and business owners — and sign space donated to us within the city."

Wilkinson said it is a proven fact that criminals will "rat on each other" if given even the least amount of incentive. He said cash rewards for those who help solve a felony crime will get the perpetrators of such offenses off the street, making Pampa a safer place.

"All the money that is given to Crime Stoppers, if it's a federal grant, goes to pay rewards," Wilkinson said. Money donated by businesses can either be designated to go toward rewards, public education or whatever the Crime Stoppers board of directors deems most appropriate.

All board members, Wilkinson said, are private citizens who want to curtail crime.

"We only pay on tips that result in the confiscation of stolen property or an indictment of a felony offense,"

Wilkinson said. "If we can get somebody to turn one of these people in, we don't have to go out and beat the bushes to find things out."

At its best, Wilkinson said, Crime Stoppers serves as an active motivator of public involvement of fighting crime.

"We need a concentrated effort by everyone who lives in this city to give us a hand," he said. "I'd like to see some of the things that are happening on the street come to a halt. The only way that's going to happen is for everyone to become involved. If they see something going on, they can pick up the phone and call Crime Stoppers (669-2222), remain completely anonymous and we will pay them for it if someone is arrested and convicted."

By its very design, Crime Stoppers is not funded by the police department, Wilkinson said, but is a non-profit public entity for which the police provide a coordinator.

Wilkinson cited figures from around the nation that showed when Crime Stoppers is active, it can help to prevent offenses and more quickly solve those that do occur.

When Hartford, Conn., started an active Crime Stoppers program, the crime rate there dropped by 40 percent. In Fairfax, Va., Crime Stoppers has teamed up with Neighborhood Watch to virtually eliminate burglaries in the 100 neighborhoods where the program has been adopted.

Anyone interested in contributing time or money to helping Crime Stoppers can call Wilkinson at 665-8481 for details on how to help reduce crime in Pampa.

Accident

"Half the school was crying," said Rosie Gil, 15, talking to friends at the tragic scene Thursday evening.

She said she knew seven victims, including two from her algebra class at Mission High.

David Rayburn with the National Transportation Safety Board said the investigation would include weighing the soft-drink truck and the school bus.

Investigators from the Texas Attorney General's office also probed the roadway and edge of the caliche pit, which had no fence or railing.

Caliche, a Spanish word, is defined as gravel, sand and desert debris cemented by a porous calcium carbonate, according to state geologist Bill Farr. The material occurs naturally through the Southwest and Mexico, and "is used quite a lot in making road base material," Farr said.

The accident stunned Alton, population 3,000, and the larger neighboring city of Mission, where the junior high and high school students were headed for school.

"Mi nina" (my child), cried Gregoria Gonzalez, upon learning her granddaughter, 13-year-old Ruby Lopez, was one of the dead.

Aurora Hernandez sat with teary eyes in the lobby of Mission Hospital Thursday afternoon, after visiting her 18-year-old daughter, Sara Hernandez, in intensive care. Doctors, she said, were pumping water out of Sara's lungs.

Mrs. Hernandez said she had rushed to the pit after learning the bus carrying Sara had plunged into the water, and "I only saw they were pulling out the drowned."

"I was looking and looking, not knowing where she was," she said.

"I thought I was going to die," Alex De Leon, 18, said as he stood in front of Mission Hospital in muddy pants and hospital slippers, with cuts on his face and bruised hands. "It just filled up with water real quick."

"I opened up a window, took out my sister, took out a couple of friends and it was already full of water, and you could smell the diesel," he said.

De Leon and other survivors said the truck driver ran a stop sign and struck the bus.

Truck driver Ruben Perez said his brakes failed, said Pacheco. The truck passed a state inspection last week, Coca-Cola officials said.

Four boats, firefighters from six departments and about 10 divers helped in the rescue.

"We had to break the glass of the windows to get in," said Al Nye, a diver who pulled seven bodies from the bus.

All the dead were 12 to 18 years old, according to the DPS.

DPS spokesman Mike Cox said it was the worst school bus accident in Texas history. The nation's worst such accident was in 1976, when 28 Yuba City, Calif., high school students and a teacher were killed after their bus plunged off a freeway ramp. In 1959, 27 people were killed when a bus went into a creek in Prestonsburg, Ky.

Mission school Superintendent Ralph Cantu canceled all extracurricular activities for the weekend "because we've had a tragedy. How can you be cheering at a football game when something like this has happened?"

Students' families met with counselors and school officials at the city's community center.

Mission General Hospital treated 37 people following the accident including the two drivers, said hospital administrator Thomas Symonds. Twelve were admitted, including three students in critical condition: Yesenia Perez, 15, Sara Hernandez, 18, and Lisa Flores, 15, all of Mission, Symonds said.

Also admitted was Ruben Pena, no relation to the bus driver, who was a helper on the Dr Pepper truck, Symonds said.

Lefors to have Fall Festival

LEFORS — Civic organizations in Lefors are joining together Saturday to sponsor the first annual Lefors Fall Festival.

Among the activities slated for the all-day event, which begins at 9 a.m. and lasts until 6 p.m., is a Dunk Your Principal booth, balloon toss, and live music and games.

Officials in Lefors said the event is centered around community awareness of the Emergency Medical Services in that city.

Live music is scheduled throughout the day along with a variety of baked goods and other food items.

The festival is set for the area near the fire station and City Square.

USAir crew subject of crash probe

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal investigators are turning their attention to the flight crew of a USAir jetliner after cockpit recorders failed to show why the pilot aborted take-off, causing the airliner to slide into the East River, killing two passengers.

The New York Times and the (New York) Daily News today quote unidentified authorities as saying the co-pilot said the pilot was "mumbling" and "acting irrationally" just before takeoff.

Reports said when the pilot left the plane he refused to speak to investigators on the advice of his lawyer. The pilot and co-pilot have the right to decline interviews, but the National Transportation Safety Board can subpoena them, says NTSB spokeswoman Rachel Halterman.

The Times said the co-pilot gave his report to Port Authority police, but Port Authority spokesman John Hughes said he knew of no interviews that agency police had with the crew.

The NTSB said it hoped to interview the crew today.

The crash of Flight 5050 late Wednesday split the fuselage of the plane, which was headed for Charlotte, N.C. The tail of the plane was partly submerged 10 feet from the runway while the nose skidded onto a trestle that held runway lights.

Of the 59 survivors, including all six crew members, 45 people were injured and eight remained hospitalized as of Thursday, according to USAir.

USAir Chairman Edwin Colodny declined to discuss any possible causes of the crash, saying the NTSB had jurisdiction.

"The captain is taking advice of his own counsel," Colodny said at a news conference.

Fred Farrar, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Authority, said it was unclear whether the pilot or co-pilot was at the controls during the crash.

"We've tried to contact (the pilot) but we have not been able to do so," said Farrar. "There was no indication of why he was aborting. Until we know why the guy aborted the takeoff, we have no way of knowing the cause of the accident."

The cockpit recorder had "no noises or voices that suggested there was any problem with the takeoff or why the takeoff was aborted," said James Kolstad, acting chairman of the NTSB.

The flight data show the plane swerved slightly instead of moving straight down the runway and showed some "deviations" in rudder movement, Kolstad said, but it was not immediately clear how that might have affected takeoff.

Workers comp issues still tangled in knots

AUSTIN (AP) — The impossible knot in the Texas worker's compensation system is becoming more snarled as legislators turn their attention to the debt-ridden Assigned Risk Pool.

A representative of the insurance industry and a member of the State Board of Insurance said Thursday that workers' compensation insurance rates — which have increased nearly 150 percent since 1985 — are not high enough to offset the $400 million deficit in the pool.

The Assigned Risk Pool serves employers that cannot get workers' compensation insurance on the open market. In recent years it has become the largest insurer of businesses in Texas.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, a member of the committee studying workers' compensation, said higher rates will drive businesses under, or cause them to drop the insurance, which covers employees who are injured in on-the-job accidents.

"It's the small employer that has never had a claim that you are running out of business," said Glasgow, D-Stephenville.

Lawmakers have been wrestling with overhauling the workers' compensation system since January, but have failed to come up with a solution. They will try again during a special legislative session to begin Nov. 14.

Mystery surrounds alleged occult-related slayings in Lubbock

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK (AP) — Mystery continues to shroud the deaths of a teen-age boy, his girlfriend and her parents in what the police chief and the boy's mother say was an occult-related murder-suicide pact.

Police said Thursday they do not know who fired the shots that killed Jesse and Josie Medlin late Tuesday afternoon. Police appear to disagree whether the occult had anything to do with the slaying of 18-year-old Rebecca Medlin and the suicide of her 16-year-old boyfriend, Eric Freeman, as they made love in a motel room a few hours later.

Freeman's mother, Eve Coleman, had reported to police Saturday that her son had called her to say he and Miss Medlin had signed a suicide pact and planned to kill the Medlins. She also told police Eric was involved in drugs and satanic worship, according to a police report filed Saturday.

Police Chief Tom Nichols said in a news conference Thursday that he believed Miss Medlin was involved in the occult.

"There were ... I'll just call them instruments that you wouldn't normally find in a teen-age girl's bedroom," he said.

But Nichols would not specify what was found in the Texas Tech freshman's bedroom.

Police Col. Ray Huffman said he doesn't know much about the occult, but that he saw no obvious signs of devil worship or other occult activities in Miss Medlin's room or in the motel room where she and Freeman died.

"I don't want to go into what may or may not be in the room," he said. "I didn't see any burning candles or anything. I didn't see any chicken bones or anything."

Huffman said police still are trying to find out how Freeman, a school dropout, and Miss Medlin, a 1989 Coronado High honors graduate who was majoring in business law at Tech, met each other and began dating.

And they want to know why Miss Medlin wanted to kill her parents, and how she apparently enlisted Freeman's aid. Ms. Coleman told police Miss Medlin had written letters detailing how she would kill her parents.

"We don't have any (such letters) in our possession," Huffman said. "That isn't to say there aren't any."

Police found a letter in the house in which Miss Medlin told her mother she loved her.

The grisly story began unraveling about noon Wednesday, when employees of the Stadium Motel across the street from the Tech campus called police after they couldn't rouse the occupants of Room 1.

After removing a chair that was blocking the door, police entered the room to find Miss Medlin on the bed with a gunshot to the chin and Freeman on top of her. He apparently had shot her, then placed the gun in his mouth and pulled the trigger, as they engaged in sexual intercourse, according to police.

A .38-caliber revolver was found in Freeman's hand, a .25-caliber semi-automatic was in Miss Medlin's purse and a .357 Magnum revolver was found in the trunk of her brown Mustang, Huffman said.

Police arrived at the Medlins' home to notify them of their daughter's death, but instead found them shot to death. They had been killed by two different weapons, Huffman said, adding that tests are being run on the guns found in the teen-agers' possession to determine whether they were used in the slayings and if so, whether one or both of the teens had fired them.

Huffman said a neighbor saw Miss Medlin drive into the garage between 4 and 4:30 p.m. Tuesday. Soon after, neighbors found the family's pet dog — which usually stays inside — playing outside. They knocked on the door but no one answered.

About 5 or 5:30, Medlin arrived, parked his car out front, picked up the dog and walked inside, Huffman said. The father apparently was shot twice in the head and once in the shoulder, and his lifeless body was dragged to a back bedroom.

Mrs. Medlin arrived about 10 minutes later. She parked her car in the garage and was shot once in the head as she entered the house. Her keys were still in her hand, Huffman said.

Freeman dropped out of ninth grade in February after attending classes for a month at Project Intercept, an alternative school for students who are kicked out of other schools for behavioral problems, officials said.

Routine classes were held Thursday at Coronado High School, Principal Mickey Address said. Most of Miss Medlin's friends graduated with her in the spring and are attending colleges all over the state, he said.

"There wasn't any reason today to turn school upside down," Address said.

Jimmy Val, who lived next door to Freeman and his mother, said everyone knew the boy as Chase instead of Eric, and that he seemed wild but not homicidal.

"He was a nice-looking boy, about 125 pounds, sort of blond hair," Val said. "Most of the time, you hardly heard anything out of him."

But sometimes Freeman would get drunk and rowdy with his friends, Val said.

"Like most any other 16-year-old boy, he was wild, all right," he said.

One of Miss Medlin's former high-school teachers characterized her as soft-spoken and shy. Her former fiancé, Craig Karr, told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal she did not get along with her parents.

State bank failures tie last year

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Bank failures in Texas this year have tied last year's record number, and experts say more are on the way, perhaps as a slower pace, as the industry continues to suffer from the real estate and energy depressions.

Texas Banking Commissioner Kenneth Littlefield closed Rose Capital Bank in Tyler Thursday afternoon, the 113th failure this year, matching last year's numbers.

"I had projected earlier in the year that we would likely have 100 independent bank failures," Littlefield said Thursday, noting that the 113 include more than 44 from two large bank-holding companies.

"We believe that 1990 is going to show a slight increase in the number of independently chartered banks that fail," Littlefield said, predicting about 80 next year.

"We will continue to have bank failures for two more years that are the result of past lending decision," Littlefield said.

"The worst is behind Texas banks," said Sandy Flannigan, a Houston-based analyst for PaineWebber Inc. "We have seen the peak as far as the absolute numbers are concerned."

Nationally, the numbers should remain about the same next year, according to Alan Whitney, a spokesman for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in Washington, D.C.

The failures will continue, Whitney said, "even though the economy in Texas and other parts of the Southwest has begun to stabilize somewhat because changes in the banking industry always lag from 18 months to 24 months."

Littlefield said Rose Capital was closed because "asset quality problems and resulting losses ... attributed to the area's poor economic condition."

The bank, which had assets of $64.6 million and deposits of about $61.1 million, was purchased by First City Bancorp. of Texas Inc. for $25,000.

First City will also purchase about $46.4 million of Rose Capital's assets.

The FDIC will provide $16.8 million in assistance, and retain assets with a book value of $18.2 million.

As in almost all cases this year, the bank will reopen Friday as a branch of its new parent.

This year's total includes 20 involved in the federal seizure of MCorp banks and 24 from the shutdown of banks owned by Texas American Bancshares Inc. The number does not include the 12 banks of National Bancshares Corp. of Texas which were bought by Equimark Corp. of Pittsburgh in a federally assisted transaction.

Last year's 113 also included 40 banks taken over from First Republic Bank Corp. Those banks became NCBN Texas National Bank, which remains the state's largest bank.

Nationally, Rose Capital was the 160th failure, a huge jump from 10 years ago. Ten banks failed each year from 1979 to 1981 and "we thought it was Armageddon," the FDIC's Whitney said.

Since then, the numbers have grown each year: 42 in 1982, 48 in '83, 80 in '84, 120 in '85, 138 in '86, 184 in '87 and 200 last year.

"For next year, the numbers could be lower than this year ... assuming nothing unforeseen occurs either in the Southwest economy or the economy at large," Whitney said.

"The very big banks have failed in Texas ... and at the other extreme the primarily metropolitan banks that have been of very small size."

Community mourns 19 victims of bus accident; schools closed

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

MISSION (AP) — Grieving students stayed home from school today and the town stadium was to be the site of a massive memorial service instead of a football game as the entire community mourned 19 youngsters killed when their bus plunged into a pit of water.

"It's a community tragedy; the whole town is crying with the relatives of those who died," said the Rev. Frank Gomez, pastor of San Martin de Porres Catholic Church, where some victims of the Thursday accident attended mass regularly.

A service there Thursday night was one of several planned in the aftermath of the accident, which left 64 injured. The dead ranged in age from 12 to 17 and attended Mission High School and Mission Junior High School, authorities said.

The district school board decided in a brief meeting after the crash to cancel today's classes and set up crisis centers for pupils and parents needing counseling.

They also called off weekend extracurricular activities including the varsity football game tonight and instead scheduled the memorial service at the district's Tom Landry Stadium.

School board member Rosalinda Gonzalez said the reaction from school officials to the accident was "total awe of what had occurred, but especially very strong sentiment for the families and what they must be going through."

Residents of Mission and nearby Alton began an outpouring of support for the families after news of the wreck spread. Local restaurants donated food and drinks for the Mission Community Center, where victims' relatives were told to go to get information on their loved ones.

Funds were set up for the families at First State Bank of Mission and St. Martin DePorres Catholic Church.

Mission Fire Marshal Lucio S. Guerra Jr., a resident of this South Texas town for 30 years, was one of the city leaders who gathered at the community center to help.

"We're going to miss 'em. It'll be a sad time for the school for awhile," he said, fighting back tears. "Every time they get on the bus now, they'll remember it."

Several of the deceased and injured were members of school volleyball and cross country track teams, and at least one who died — Roman Quintero, a freshman — was a popular football player, a classmate said.

"He was real glad because he was going to play — it (this weekend) was going to be his first game," said Melinda Vasquez, 15, a Mission High School student. Monette Guerrero, a seventh-grader at Mission Junior High and a friend of several on the bus, said at first she and her classmates didn't believe anyone they knew had been in the fatal wreck.

"We were at school and we were sitting there and they said it's a tragedy — our homeroom teachers told us," she said. Later she and her classmates learned that their friend David Saenz was one of those killed.

"It hurts us just to see our friends and people we've known for a long time — that they won't be there anymore," Miss Guerrero said.

At a church service Thursday night crash survivor Jesse Cuellar asked the Iglesia Bautista del Pueblo congregation to pray for his cousin who died in the wreck and for a neighbor who was seriously injured. Cuellar said when the bus first plunged into the pit, "I just felt like I was drowning."

The student also praised bus driver Gilbert Pena for saving several students after the wreck.

Gomez said that at one point Thursday at his church he noticed a young schoolgirl kneeling and praying all alone.

"She was praying in thanks that she had gotten out of the bus safely," he said.

Father of 'Night Stalker' says his son's guilt has not been proven

EL PASO (AP) — The father of convicted "Night Stalker" killer Richard Ramirez says the cards were stacked against his son long before a jury in Los Angeles found him guilty of killing 13 people.

"If he's guilty, I'm not opposed to him being punished. But they should prove these things with the sincere truth," Julian Ramirez said in an interview with the El Paso Times.

The jury, after more than a year of testimony and 22 days of deliberations, found that Richard Ramirez, 29, was the devil-worshipping "Night Stalker" who left satanic symbols at some murder scenes and forced terrified victims to "swear to Satan" as they suffered unspeakable assaults.

Husbands were murdered in their beds and wives were raped beside the dead bodies. One victim's eyes were gouged out in a reign of crimes that began in August of 1985.

The jury convicted the El Paso drifter of 13 murder charges and 30 other felonies ranging from robbery to rape. He could face the death penalty in a sentencing phase of the trial that is to begin Sept. 27.

His father said his son's guilt was not proven. He blamed the media, his son's behavior during the trial and the slaying of a juror as factors against his son.

"The media turned him into a monster. He's really just a poor boy who was raised to believe in God." The father also said he believes key evidence was ignored by prosecutors.

He cited a blood sample found at one of the crime scenes that "was compared to Richie's and it didn't match. Whose blood was it?" The elder Ramirez also said a distinctive bloody tennis shoe print found at the murder sites could not be linked to his son.

"They (prosecutors) never proved it was Ricardo's shoe," he said.

Julian Ramirez said he's convinced that defense lawyers had proved his son was in El Paso when two of the murders occurred in Los Angeles.

Julian Ramirez said his son felt his conviction was assured more than a month ago when a juror was slain by her estranged boyfriend and the judge refused to declare a mistrial.

"He told us he felt bad because the juror had been killed," Julian Ramirez recalled. "He said that because of the juror's death, the jury would find him guilty."

During the trial, news reports implied that Ramirez's lawyers, Arturo Hernandez and Daniel Hernandez, not related, were inexperienced and seemed to be in over their heads.

Julian Ramirez said he could not afford a high-powered lawyer for his son, but that the Hernandezs did the best they could.

The father also said his son's behavior during the trial contributed to the jury's prejudice against him. Richard Ramirez often smirked and, once, laughed as a rape victim recounted her story.

Convicted felon says feds owe him money

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO (AP) — Attorneys will move to Las Vegas next week in court proceedings over whether the government owes more than $1 million to Jimmy and Elizabeth Chagra — convicted in the killing of a federal judge.

The Chagras claim the government owes them $1 million for jewelry seized from their home in 1981, and $117,000 they say they overpaid in taxes. They have gone to court to have the money returned.

The government, in return, claims the Chagras owe about $5 million in taxes and penalties in hidden gambling winnings and drug smuggling profits. Government attorneys plan to question Las Vegas gamblers and other former associates of Chagra about his winnings in that city in the 1970s.

Four days of questioning by attorneys ended in El Paso Thursday. Chagra sat through three of them, but will not attend the Las Vegas sessions.

He has been returned to federal custody in a location officials will not disclose because he is under the federal witness protection program.

The jewelry was seized in a raid conducted after the killing of U.S. District Judge John Wood in San Antonio. Elizabeth and Joe Chagra, Jimmy Chagra's brother, both received prison sentences for conspiring to kill Wood. Jimmy Chagra was convicted of obstruction of justice in the Wood investigation.

Among those to be questioned next week are Las Vegas gambler Jack Binion and Henry Wallace, who was a drug smuggling partner of Jimmy Chagra and became a federal witness in Jimmy Chagra's 1979 drug smuggling trial.

Also scheduled to make statements are Las Vegas attorney Oscar Goodman, who has represented Jimmy Chagra in the past, and "people who know about acquisitions and improvements made to Jimmy Chagra's Las Vegas home," said IRS attorney Phillip Pillar.

The Las Vegas proceedings will be closed to the public for security reasons, said IRS attorney Phillip Pillar.

Tales of high-stakes gambling, dope deals, arranged killings and free-spending that dominated newspaper headlines during the 1970s and early 1980s re-emerged during the four-day proceedings in El Paso.

At one point, Jimmy Chagra testified he had so much money it was difficult to differentiate what he earned in gambling and what was drug smuggling profit.

He said he gambled at every game available in the casinos and one year was given a nearly three-foot tall silver plated trophy that proclaimed him to be "The fastest, classiest, most high rolling gambler who ever walked into Caesar's Palace or any other casino in the world."

The trophy was on display just a few feet from Jimmy Chagra while he testified Wednesday.

Jimmy Chagra received a 30-year sentence in connection with his drug smuggling activities and a life sentence for his role in the attempted murder of Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, who investigated Jimmy Chagra's activities.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

There's no reform while Gulag remains

Though some important changes have been made, in other ways it remains the same old Soviet Union. The worst enduring feature may be the Gulag Archipelago. Its slave-labor camps still house untold prisoners, and they wait to accept more should the Kremlin institute massive new crackdowns and purges.

For some dissidents, things have changed not at all. After meeting last month with two U.S. congressmen in Perm 35, the notorious concentration camp for political prisoners, dissident Mikhail Petrovich Kazachkov was transferred to an even worse camp, Chisolm prison. Soviet authorities accuse him of "refusal to work." But his real "crime" was that he spoke openly to U.S. Reps. Christopher Smith of New Jersey and Frank Wolf of Virginia. Kazachkov apparently was told to spin tales of wonderful treatment, but instead told the horrible truth.

According to Sergei Kovalev, a former political prisoner now living in Moscow, the conditions at Chisolm are much worse than at Perm 35. There is less food and there is less opportunity for fresh air. The punishment was imposed on Kazachkov even though Soviet authorities promised Rep. Wolf that no reprisals would be made. Reprisals against prisoners had been carried out last December after a visit to Perm 35 by New York Times columnist A.M. Rosenthal, and Rep. Wolf hoped to avoid more.

We must assume that the Soviet Politburo, which wields absolute power in the Soviet Union and closely monitors such important visits to concentration camps, either instigated these reprisals, or tacitly approved of them. The question then arises: How can we trust a regime that cannot keep a simple promise not to abuse a prisoner who talked to American congressmen? This hardly gives us confidence in promises to abide by arms control and reduction treaties, or in the army trade agreements now being signed.

Moreover, Gorbachev keeps emphasizing the break he has made with the "era of stagnation," as he calls the Brezhnev regime. But Kazachkov was arrested and imprisoned in 1975, during the height of Brezhnevism. His "crime": applying to emigrate. For this he was convicted of treason and sentenced to 15 years in the Gulag. After protesting conditions in the concentration camp in 1981, another 31 years was tacked onto his sentence.

It's time for Gorbachev to show his true colors. If he releases Kazachkov, he will have made another advance on the still-long road to restoring the Soviet people's human rights. If he does not, he will show himself to be little more than a showboating Brezhnevite. The Gulag is the glue that has held together the Soviet system of oppression. So long as the Gulag remains, all reforms are tentative. When the Gulag is dismantled, and brave men like Kazachkov released, then true reform will have become permanent.

2050 A.D.: Rock 'n' roll legend returns again — earns $3.5 billion per concert

He has plenty of room to plan

WASHINGTON — Sam Skinner said what he has said in a dozen interviews since he became secretary of transportation: "I am a planner." He has plenty of room to plan in now.

The secretary was honeymooning recently in North Carolina, but he took time off to talk about one particular area in his large domain: highways.

Skinner's responsibilities extend to railways, airlines, airports, boating, port security, urban mass transit, the St. Lawrence Seaway and the U.S. Coast Guard, but highway needs dwarf them all. Over the next 20 years, the federal and state governments combined have a $600 billion job to do on our roads. It already is later than we think.

Back in 1956, during the Eisenhower administration, Congress authorized the interstate highway system. It was to consist of 42,798 miles of divided, multilane, limited-access roadways. All but 794 miles are now complete. The system is a marvel of engineering and design. And parts of it are quite literally falling to pieces.

The interstate situation is worse in some states than in others. In Alaska, 42 percent of the interstate mileage technically is classed as "deficient." Missouri and Mississippi are in about the same fix.

Meanwhile, the volume of highway traffic inexorably increases. Upward of 140 million automobiles and 40 million trucks now roll up 2 trillion miles of travel a year. That volume, Skinner projects, will double in 30 years or less.

How does one plan for this inevitability? With hearings in New York and Boston this month, Skinner's department will have completed a series of 80 public and private conferences on a total transportation policy. In January he will make his report and recommendations to the president.

James J. Kilpatrick

The secretary is encouraged by the interest that has been shown everywhere. The hearings have not been exactly front-page news, but the national concern is manifest.

At a hearing in Sioux Falls, S.D., people came from 200 miles away to participate in meetings that began at 8 a.m. and ended 12 hours later. The typical American may not know much about super-bombers and toxic wastes, but he knows about potholes. Witnesses gave Sam Skinner an earful.

At every hearing the same question has arisen: Where is the money coming from? Skinner's answer is not altogether convincing. He mentions the Highway Trust Fund, the resources of the states and the prospect of toll roads. As a loyal general in the George Bush command, he has to say that an increase in federal gasoline and excise taxes "is not on the drawing board."

The trust fund now has an unexpended balance of $12.8 billion. Skinner says that he and the president are committed to digging into it, but the prospect is maybe yes, maybe no.

The hefty balance contributes to the cosmetic image of a lesser deficit; it is part of the blue smoke and mirrors by which deficit targets supposedly are approached. In any event, the trust-fund balance represents the equivalent of only one year of federal highway spending.

Over the past several years, 17 states have raised their own highway taxes; the states will have to do more. At least $70 billion to $80 billion must be spent on repair of bridges alone, and a great part of this outlay involves the states' primary and secondary systems. Skinner applauds the growing trend toward hitting land developers for road construction and maintenance fees.

Toll roads offer an attractive prospect. Across the nation, 4,939 miles of toll roads are in operation. Under the 1987 Highway Act, nine states have been authorized to go forward with additional toll mileage. These are Colorado, Texas, Pennsylvania, California, Florida, West Virginia, South Carolina, Delaware and Georgia. They may qualify for 35 percent federal money on toll projects.

The difficulty here is that toll roads crash into the great American tradition of free highways. As the overall problem of highway maintenance approaches critical proportions, the great American tradition may take a backseat.

As a planner, Skinner is chiefly concerned with the big picture. In developing a total transportation policy, he has to factor into his report all the demographic elements of a changing population.

How do you move people from suburb to suburb? What will be the role of gasohol, methanol and propane gas? How far may changes be coerced by incentives for ride-sharing?

The problems are deeper than potholes, and it will take billions upon billions of dollars to cure them.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Sept. 22, the 265th day of 1989. There are 100 days left in the year. Autumn arrives at 8:20 p.m. CDT.

Today's highlight in history: Two hundred years ago, Congress authorized the office of postmaster-general.

On this date:

In 1656, in Patuxent, Md., an all-woman jury heard the case of a woman accused of murdering her child. The jurors voted for acquittal.

In 1776, Nathan Hale was hanged as a spy by the British during the Revolutionary War.

In 1792, the French Republic was proclaimed.

In 1862, President Abraham Lincoln issued the preliminary Emancipation Proclamation, declaring that all slaves held inside rebel states would be free as of January 1, 1863.

In 1949, the Soviet Union succeeded in exploding its first atomic bomb.

In 1964, the musical Fiddler on the Roof opened on Broadway.

Foreigners don't own us — yet

It's a tired truism in Hawaii that the Japanese, unable to conquer the islands, have now bought them.

And it does appear that Japan's economic conquest of Hawaii is a fait accompli.

Arizona realtors note that Japanese and others have bought up substantial raw acreage in that state despite a state property tax which penalizes absentee land owners.

The tallest building in the world, Chicago's Sears Tower, is about to undergo a name change as a Canadian developer pays a billion dollars to put his name on it.

Are foreigners buying us out? Not really.

According to the Wall Street Journal, $3.5 trillion has been invested in commercial real estate in the United States. But foreign investors own barely 1 percent of it.

It seems they own a lot because their 1 percent share totals $32 billion and is concentrated in high-profile investments.

Actually, the giant share of our nation's commercial real estate — $26 trillion — is owned by mostly American corporations.

Paul Harvey

I say "mostly American" because the shareholders in almost any U.S. corporation now include "foreigners." There is no certain way to calculate that number.

Another thing: Though Japanese investment understandably gets the most attention, total Japanese investment in the U.S. is barely half that of Europeans.

Historically, real estate has been considered a sure-fire investment. The axiom "there will never be more land" suggested that property values would escalate without interruption forever.

The sobering savings and loan crisis has discredited that axiom.

We know now that the value of farmland — and oil land — can go down!

Also, currently rental properties are somewhat over-built.

Nonetheless, in the long view, if escalating property taxes do not eat up your appreciation, well-positioned real estate offers the most potential for appreciation with the least risk.

There are no "bargains" left. Too much money in search of too few good investments has driven the prices of premium properties beyond what's prudent by most standards. Yet nobody knows how high is too high. This favors the "imprudent" investor sometimes — and it favors the foreigner who sees any risk here as infinitely less than elsewhere.

Our nation's relative political and economic stability make U.S. investments highly attractive to foreigners. Their investments in our country, growing 10 percent a year, will keep growing.

Americans anxious about the intrusion of outside capital also need to be reminded that total investments of Americans overseas are still greater than overseas investments in the United States. They don't own us yet.

The Chinese coin may flip over again

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

When a flawed political system begins to fall apart, as communism is doing today in the Soviet Union and China, essentially only two responses are possible: either to crack down, or try to reform the system in the hope of making it work. Neither can succeed in the long run, and the desperate managers of the collapsing system are quite likely to use first one tactic and then the other, as each in turn is seen to fail.

In the Soviet Union, Mikhail Gorbachev is making a courageous attempt at both political and economic reform, and it is far too early for his internal critics to announce that he has failed.

In China, Deng Xiaoping went even further in the direction of a market economy than Gorbachev. But Deng has allowed very little political freedom of the kind that has been busting out all over in the Soviet Union.

Early in his period of power, Deng closed down a "democracy wall" in Peking on which students were inscribing political slogans and short essays calling for more political freedom.

In that sense, the savage response of Deng's regime to the demonstrations in Tiananmen Square in May and June was predictable.

It was also stupid, of course; within another few days the students would have been forced to vacate the square anyway, as problems of sanitation and health became acute. But nobody can accuse Deng of inconsistency, as far as democracy is concerned. He always been agin' it.

Even the subsequent announcement that graduate students (and perhaps also undergraduates — it isn't clear) will have to spend a year or two doing farm labor and receiving political indoctrination before they can continue their studies is pure Deng.

The communist bosses in Peking are rather like the old Afrikaner leader Oom Paul Kruger, who believed the world was flat and often exiled his more sophisticated critics to the highveld until they personally perceived its flatness.

But China's American apologists have clung desperately to the contention that Deng's other eye, so to speak — his support for economic reform — was still wide open. Politically, they conceded, he might be a back number, but economically he was still leading China toward the light.

So, it came as chilling news indeed when the Chinese government, late in August, announced that a large number of privately owned companies would be closed down. The usual excuses — "embezzlement, theft, profiteering and bribery" — were trotted out, and may not even necessarily be altogether false. Nor is it clear whether foreign-owned businesses are exempt from closure.

But the announcement was the worst possible news for those, in the United States and elsewhere, who had hoped that the crackdown in Peking could be limited to politics, with economic reforms left untouched.

And now comes word that the regime intends to limit sharply the number of young people allowed to go abroad to pursue their studies. Clearly, Deng and his cronies think a lot of students have come home infected with what Thomas Jefferson called "the disease of freedom," and have contributed to recent political unrest.

This last restriction may be conceived by its authors as essentially political in nature, but it will, over the long run, have ominous economic consequences as well.

China cannot drag itself fully into the 20th century, let alone the 21st, without the scientific knowledge that is brightest minds can obtain only abroad. By pulling up the drawbridge and trying to turn China into a self-contained cultural and intellectual unit, Deng may temporarily reduce his political problems, but only at the expense of unacceptable technological shortcomings further down the road.

In which case, perhaps after Deng's death, the Chinese coin may again flip from repression to reform.

U.S. troops patrol St. Croix to control rampant looting

By PIERRE-YVES GLASS
Associated Press Writer

CHRISTIANSTED, U.S. Virgin Islands (AP) — Rifle-toting U.S. troops patrolled St. Croix to restore order after Hurricane Hugo brought chaos to the island and officials said it appeared their presence had curbed rampant looting.

In Washington, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "The troops are having an obvious impact in controlling the looting and other lawlessness associated with the destruction. It is impossible to say at this point how long they will have to be there."

However, it appeared that most stores had been cleaned out before the troops began arriving Thursday. One official defended the looters as desperate people left homeless and hungry by Hugo's devastation Sunday.

The storm struck the U.S. mainland late Thursday. The Marine Radio Band, monitored on nearby St. Thomas, said Thursday that two looters were shot in St. Croix, but there was no word of their condition or independent confirmation. Officials said some looters were local National Guardsmen.

Sixty FBI agents, 50 federal marshals and 150 soldiers of the 18th Airborne Corps from Fort Bragg, N.C., arrived Thursday with orders from President Bush to restore calm to the popular vacation spot.

The rest of the 1,200-person Fort Bragg unit, composed mostly of military police, was due to be in place before day's end today, said Lt. Col. Ned Longworth, the unit's spokesman.

"We are authorized to make arrests only in the total absence of local authorities," Longworth said.

Hurricane Hugo left at least 26 people dead in the Caribbean. The storm was responsible for at least one death on St. Croix, where it destroyed or severely damaged most homes on the island, about 70 miles east of Puerto Rico.

Bush on Thursday declared the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico federal disaster areas, making them eligible for emergency relief money.

Roads were littered with debris in Christiansted, where hundreds of people lined up Thursday behind water tank trucks with buckets and jugs. Others siphoned gasoline from wrecked service stations. The island still lacked power, water and telephone service.

The looting that followed the storm caused panic and fear among tourists, and many residents armed themselves.

Chief Warrant Officer Layton Timmons of the Virgin Islands National Guard acknowledged that there were isolated cases of looting by Guardsmen that had been videotaped by the Coast Guard.

"When two people start looting, the whole Guard gets the wrap," he said.

Witnesses said much of the sacking of supermarkets was done by desperate families living in a disaster zone.

"We have 90 percent of the island destroyed. This was like an H-bomb hitting St. Croix," said territorial Sen. Holland Redfield. "People just need food. They're panicked. It's a reaction of survival."

Redfield said that in many cases supermarkets gave people permission to take the food since it was spoiling. He said only a few of the looters were hard-core criminals.

The few businesses that were not looted were protected by their armed owners.

A sign on the door of a Christiansted lawyer's office read: "I don't have any light but I have a gun."

"They (the soldiers) are here, thank God," said Carol Rubis, owner of a sporting goods store called Inside Track. "For people like myself who own a store, they came three days too late."

She said looters just laughed at her and continued carting away her merchandise when she ordered them to leave.

Mary Davis, right, and her attorneys, Susan and Kurt Erlenbach, talk to the media Thursday after court decision awarding her custody of frozen embryos.

Ruling on frozen embryo custody revives debate on when life starts

MARYVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A judge's ruling in a divorce custody battle over seven frozen human embryos that life begins at conception has inflamed the debate on when life starts.

Abortion foes took heart at the Tennessee ruling Thursday that custody of the embryos could be awarded as if they were children.

Regina Smith, executive director of the Pro-Life Council of Connecticut, called the court's decision "a victory for unborn children."

"This ruling reflects what pro-lifers have been saying for years — that life begins at conception and should be protected by the laws of our land," Ms. Smith said.

But those who support a woman's right to have an abortion called the decision wrong-headed and found it at odds with the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Roe vs. Wade that legalized abortion.

"That may be the personal view of this particular judge, but it has no basis in law," said Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League in Washington. "It also has dangerous implications for reproductive freedom in America."

Blount County Circuit Judge W. Dale Young awarded temporary custody of the embryos to Mary Sue Davis, who wants them implanted in her so she can bear a child. The judge rejected the arguments of her estranged husband, Junior Lewis Davis, who sued for divorce and sought an order preventing implantation.

Child support, visitation and final custody will be decided if a birth results, the judge wrote.

Davis, 31, vowed to appeal to the Tennessee Court of Appeals. "They are going to force me to become a father against my wishes," he said.

Mrs. Davis, 29, who now lives near Titusville, Fla., said she would wait to try to get pregnant until appeals were over. She said the earliest she would try would be in January.

Charles Clifford, the husband's attorney, said he believed this was the first time a judge declared an embryo a human being. He said the ruling conflicts with the Roe vs.

Wade decision, which said that a fetus in the early stages of development lacks legal rights.

The Roe decision "contains some explicit language that says that a fetus, which of course is much further along than an embryo, is not a human being for the purposes of the United States Constitution," Clifford said.

The judge said he believed Roe vs. Wade didn't apply to the Davis case because it dealt with the constitutionality of abortion, not conception.

"From fertilization, the cells of a human embryo are differentiated, unique and specialized to the highest degree of distinction," the judge said. Thus, he said, "Human life begins at conception."

Hedy Weinberg, executive director of the Tennessee American Civil Liberties Union, said there is no consensus among doctors and scientists supporting the judge's conclusion.

"There is no question that while some people believe that life begins at conception, that is based on religious belief," Weinberg said.

Colombia's justice minister reported to have resigned

By SUSANA HAYWARD
Associated Press Writer

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The nation's justice minister reportedly resigned after three months of death threats by drug lords, and security was tightened in Bogota after 12 bombs shook the capital.

Radio Caracol, a usually reliable private radio network, reported Thursday night that President Virgilio Barco accepted Monica de Grieff's resignation.

The report could not be confirmed. The presidential palace said official confirmation had to come from Barco, who met with Ms. de Grieff late into the night.

The 32-year-old lawyer won praise worldwide after she traveled to the United States in August to ask for help protecting hundreds of judges facing death threats by cocaine traffickers.

The traffickers have repeatedly threatened de Grieff, her 3-year-old son and husband since she took office July 16.

They stepped up the threats when the government began cracking down on the cocaine cartels after Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, the country's leading presidential candidate, was assassinated Aug. 18.

De Grieff

Six people have served as justice minister in the past three years and nearly all were threatened with death.

One of de Grieff's predecessors was killed by drug lords in 1984 and another was wounded on a Budapest street in 1987 after becoming the ambassador to Hungary.

Radio Caracol said Barco accepted de Grieff's resignation and offered her the ambassadorial post in Portugal but that she declined.

The news program TV Hoy reported Arturo Ferrer Carrasco, a 44-year-old economist with the Finance Ministry, would replace de Grieff.

Colombia's cocaine traffickers have responded to the government's crackdown with bombings and arson, and a new wave of explosions rattled Bogota Thursday.

The blasts damaged nine offices of Colombia's two main political parties and a 10th bomb damaged a bank earlier in the day. Two people were reported injured.

Thursday night, blasts could be heard throughout Bogota. Police said at least two bombs damaged a clinic, a bank, a police station and a street. Another bomb went off near the military hospital, injuring a young boy, police said.

The damage was believed to be in the millions of dollars. Hundreds of army troops, police and private security guarded buildings across the city of 6 million people.

The bombings came as the Colombian Senate debates allegations that government officials and others have conspired with drug traffickers.

GOP senators present new drug plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican senators, following marathon bargaining with Democrats, are taking a new plan for financing the war on drugs to the White House for inspection by the Bush administration.

The blueprint, which sources said includes a 0.3 percent, across-the-board cut in federal spending programs to raise money for the drug war, could not be called a tentative agreement, Republicans said Thursday.

The sources, who asked not to be identified by name, also said the plan contained some of the selected cuts in spending cuts in spending the Bush administration had wanted as a way to offset increases in the drug program.

Republicans indicated that White House chief of staff John Sununu had not agreed to the proposal in phone conversations Thursday and added there was no deal without administration approval.

Republicans said they would take the plan to the White House Friday and then reconvene their negotiations with the Democrats.

While senators declined to comment on specifics, sources said the across-the-board cut envisioned in the proposal would amount to 0.3 percent. That would be an increase from a .2875 percent reduction in a plan that Republicans carried into the negotiating session Thursday afternoon.

Under the Republican plan presented at the start of the session, all but $23 million of an $850 million increase in the drug war would have been funded with money raised through an across-the-board cut.

That increase would have come on top of the $7.9 billion proposed by Bush.

Selected spending cuts under the new version would be determined at the committee level, sources said. Democrats are planning something similar to that but on a larger scale in the House.

Agreement on some financing plan for the anti-drug effort is needed to stop a Republican blockade of spending bills on the Senate floor before the start of the next fiscal year Oct. 1, when they will be needed to pay for the operations of the government.

Four spending bills are awaiting passage in the Senate and eight others are in the pipeline.

GOP senators have been holding up passage for a week to bring pressure on the Democrats, who control both houses of Congress, to negotiate on how to finance the drug plan.

Bomb kills eight at British military school

DEAL, England (AP) — An explosion today at the Royal Marines School of Music killed eight people, injured 30 and trapped at least 17 in a building that collapsed, officials said. The IRA claimed responsibility.

The blast occurred at 8:26 a.m. in a lounge in the barracks near Deal, a coastal town 70 miles south-east of London, the Defense Ministry said.

"The building has collapsed," said a ministry spokesman, speaking anonymously in keeping with British custom.

Scotland Yard said it sent anti-terrorist officers to the scene.

Kent police said 17 or 18 people were trapped. The Defense Ministry said six were missing. Firemen used heavy lifting equipment and thermal cameras to search for them in the debris, said Kent Fire Brigade spokesman Kevin Simmons.

Ten doctors were giving emergency treatment at the scene and 11 ambulances were ferrying the injured to two hospitals, the ambulance service said.

"They are suffering from flash burns to their head and arms, fractures, and the sort of injuries you would expect after an explosion," said a spokesman for Buckland Hospital in Dover.

British military installations are a frequent bombing target of the Irish Republican Army in its campaign to rid Northern Ireland of British rule.

A statement telephoned to Ireland International, a Dublin news agency, said "we have visited the Royal Marines in Kent" in response to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's visit to Northern Ireland nine days ago.

The IRA said Mrs. Thatcher went to the British province "with a message of war," but "we still want peace and we want the British government to leave our country."

The music school is the training center for young recruits who want to play in the seven Royal Marines bands. Up to 250 young men, most between 16 and 20, are based at the school where they receive military and musical training.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

A REASON FOR EVERYTHING

The giraffe was given a very long neck and legs so that he could feed on the leafy part of trees. The giraffe is the only animal that can not make a sound. We do not know the reason for this. God has revealed many things to us, but not all things. Men delve deeply into theology and find many things that cannot be answered, but God has given us the answer to all things pertinent to our salvation.

Attend church, study God's word and grow in faith.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

The Round-Up is in preparation for the new Sunday School year, which begins Oct. 1.

The day will begin with Bible Study at 9:45, followed by the morning worship service at 11 a.m. Special Music will be provided during the worship service by Living Water, a singing group from First Baptist Church of Pampa.

Following the worship service, there will be a covered-dish dinner in Fellowship Hall.

The afternoon service will include testimonials; Living Truth, a youth singing group from First Baptist Church of Borger; and a brief message from the pastor, John Denton.

Charles McGahen, Sunday School director, invites the public to attend the special Sunday School day.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Blessed are all who fear the Lord, who walk in his ways. You will eat the fruit of your labor; blessings and prosperity will be yours. Your wife will be like a fruitful vine within your house; your sons will be like olive shoots around your table. Thus is the man blessed who fears the Lord. (Psalm 128:1-4 NIV)

A friend and his family moved to a desert town in New Mexico. During a recent return visit, he gave a report on his family.

"We've been passing strep throat from one of us to the other for two years. We had our daughter's tonsils taken out to try to stop the constant seiges of strep, but it didn't work.

"It's gotten so bad the doctor prescribes medicine for all of us when one of us gets sick. In fact, we are all on medicine now because our son came down with strep just before we left home to come here."

Sin sickness is also a family disease. If you don't believe it, just ask any family in the throes of dealing with an alcoholic; a troubled, rebellious teen-ager; a criminal; a cancer-riddled smoker; an adulterer; a malicious gossip.

Efforts to excise one particular offense from the individual perpetrator seldom gives relief to the family unit. But honest repentance of sin identifies the toxin and activates the holy immune system of Christ's forgiving grace.

His gift of salvation is a miracle of love that cures the sinner and, through manifestations of new spiritual health, medicates the whole family and encourages healing of even the rawest sores. And the medicine Jesus gives enlightens and influences the entire household to come to him.

Jesus Christ is our Supreme Family Practitioner!

(If you are seeking salvation, read John 3 in a New Testament. If you are in need of spiritual counseling, contact a clergyman of your choice.)

Religion roundup

MOSCOW (AP) — The general secretary of the World Council of Churches, told its central committee meeting here that the West's philosophy of progress "has culminated in secular pragmatism and consumerism."

The Rev. Emilio Castro added, "Religion has become privatized and market competitiveness has become the new idol."

Holy Ark? No, he searches for red heifer's ashes

By JAY B. LEWIS
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

ARLINGTON (AP) — They're there in that cave, right where the ancient scrolls said they would be, the ashes of the sacred red heifer. Vendyl Jones, former Baptist minister and rabbinical student, is sure of it.

And if the ashes are discovered, according to Jones' reading of biblical prophecies, the Temple of the Children of Israel will be rebuilt and the Messiah will come to Earth.

That's the vision that led Jones to start what can only be described as an archaeological ministry, the Institute for Judaic-Christian Studies, which he operates out of a small storefront office in downtown Arlington.

It's what leads him to return year after year to the Kurnan Valley, the ancient land of Achor, in the crumbling hills above the Dead Sea in Israel's traditional wilderness.

His work, Jones is convinced, eventually will usher in the final millennium.

"We're so close," says Jones, a wiry, bearded man with an air of distracted intensity. "Every year we go, I'm certain we're going to find it. Or I wouldn't go."

Jones' approach to archaeology is eccentric, and it's led to criticism from academia, some of whom denounce him as irresponsible, and from the clergy, some of whom place his reading of the Bible in the gray area between generally offbeat and downright loony.

Jones dismisses his critics. In the 20-odd years he's been digging in Israel, he's found artifacts as old as the Stone Age and as recent as the Crusades. He's located a wall of ancient Jerusalem that makes the city much larger than originally thought. And last year he uncovered a clay flask of anointing oil believed to date to the time of Christ.

Jones' work is divided among research into ancient Hebrew writings, packing up equipment and records, arranging transport and lodging for 80 amateur diggers, and traveling to Israel every two years to dig during the narrow window between winter and summer.

After years of digging Jones has found a mass of bronze inside a 60-foot-thick rock column that gives the Cave of the Column its name, he said.

Jones said he knew the object — the Parah Kalal — was in the column even before sensitive detectors found the metal.

"First of all, the atmosphere in this particular cave is different from the atmosphere in other

"One guy said, 'I just feel the hair stand up on my neck, for no reason.'"

Between Jones and the object are layers of shattered rock strata with talcum-fine dust sandwiched between.

Jones said there's an entrance to a burial chamber somewhere under the dust, rock and pottery fragments on the floor of the cave. He's already dug 45 feet and hasn't found it yet.

The priceless object was concealed by the Essene Jews around 70 A.D., when the Romans ended the Second Jewish War by destroying the Second Temple and deporting the Jews, Jones said.

'We never write and beg for money because of the dignity of the project. If God is behind this thing, would he have to beg?'

He said that the Essenes, with great effort, made scrolls of beaten copper on which they etched an inventory of the really sacred objects. One of those scrolls, the Temple Scroll, gives instructions on rebuilding the Temple for the Third Commonwealth, known to Christians as the millennium.

The scrolls are real. They were discovered 40 years ago.

"According to the scroll, hidden with the ashes of the red heifer are many other things," Jones said. "In the fifth line of the Temple Scroll, it reads: 'Here is the Tabernacle of the Third Commonwealth, which is to be established in the Golden Age.'"

Jones said the significance of the ashes lies not in what they are, but in what they mean.

"If the ashes are found — I should say, when the ashes are found — the first thing that happens is they'll establish the Sanhedrin court," said Jones, referring to the religious body that 1,900 years ago certified priests to enter the holiest places. "The Sanhedrin will appoint the priesthood for temple worship. All the Jews in the world will return to Israel."

That kind of talk causes unrest. Some academics — anonymously — are quick to denounce Jones as a crackpot and an adventurer.

And many fundamentalist churches would prefer to see the Second Coming triggered by Christian evangelism, not Jewish tradition.

Finally, because of the explosive political climate in the Middle East, many Jews flinch at talk of rebuilding the temple, which they say would mean flattening the Mosque of Omar, one of Islam's holiest, to make room.

"None of which bothers Jones much. He says his reading of Ezekiel shows no demolition of the mosque would be necessary. And in any case, since the Bible says plainly that a bloody war will follow the Messiah's arrival, que sera sera.

Jones operates his institute on contributions and sells tapes and books to make the foundation's $350,000 a year budget. He has a staff of two.

"We never write and beg for money, because of the dignity of the project," Jones said. "If God is behind this thing, would he have to beg?"

The grunt work is done by amateurs who pay their own way of up to $4,000 for the eight-week digging season. Equipment is scrounged through supporters.

His weird way of doing things has won Jones influential friends in Israel.

"At the very least, those caves in the Dead Sea area should be excavated," said Ernest East-erling, a geologist and archaeologist with Louisiana State University, who has worked with Jones on two digs since 1985.

"We won't know what's in there until they're excavated down to bedrock, which Vendyl does. Even if it weren't for the ashes of the red heifer, this would be a worthwhile project."

The Carpenter's House to have two guest speakers

The Carpenter's House, Pampa's newest Christian Fellowship, will have two guest speakers Sunday for the 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. worship services.

The meetings will be held at The Carpenter's House new location, 639 S. Barnes, formerly the location of Harrah United Methodist Church.

The two speakers are Brother Lee Cunningham and Brother Tom Salazar, both from Albuquerque, N.M., who will be presenting a program of preaching and personal testimony.

The two men currently fellowship at Calvary Chapel in Albuquerque and are involved in the evangelism outreach there.

Cunningham is a layman evangelist and a pastor's assistant at the Anne Pickard Convalescent Center in Albuquerque, where he preaches and conducts Wednesday night Bible studies.

A former Mormon, Cunningham came to know Jesus Christ as his personal savior in 1981. Since becoming a born-again Christian, he has been involved in sharing his personal testimony and evangelism work throughout New Mexico.

Cunningham is employed as a technical illustrator with Sandia National Laboratories in Albuquerque. From 1971 through 1975, he lived in Amarillo, where he was employed as an illustrator at Pantex Plant and later at Bell Helicopter.

He conducts a regular Bible study at Sandia during lunch hour directed toward others in Christian apologetics and evangelism in a scientific community.

This Sunday, Cunningham will be delivering a message entitled "Religion or Relationship" at the 10:45 a.m. service and another message at the 7 p.m. service called "Putting on the Armour."

Salazar is a co-worker of Cunningham's at Sandia. A former Roman Catholic, he will be delivering his personal testimony as part of the program.

Salazar is active in the outreach program and ministry of Calvary Chapel to the needy and homeless.

"If you're burned out on religion, having a real struggle with the Christian life or just searching for an answer to your own situation, we invite you to attend these services," said Fred C. Palmer, minister of The Carpenter's House.

Palmer said he and the congregation "cordially invite you and your friends to this exciting program of revival, praise and worship."

Jehovah's Witnesses to have Circuit Assembly

AMARILLO — "Keep Watching How You Walk" will be the theme of the two-day Circuit Assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses to be held Saturday and Sunday at the Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium.

Gary Thompson, district overseer for this area, has been assigned by the World Headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses in Brooklyn, N.Y., to oversee the assembly.

Thompson has been a full-time minister of Jehovah's Witnesses for more than 27 years and has served in more than 13 states.

Assisting him will be Pat Shropshire, serving as circuit overseer for the Texas Panhandle and parts of Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Both Thompson and Shropshire arrived in Amarillo this week to make final arrangements.

Thompson said the purpose of the program is "to help us appreciate the need to continue walking so as to please God more fully."

"Jesus Christ set the perfect example, and Christians must follow that example by walking as he did," Thompson said. "The program will give specific attention to ways this can be accomplished by all."

Tommy Long, Pampa minister of Jehovah's Witnesses, said Thompson will be the featured speaker Sunday at 1:40 p.m., speaking on the subject "Light Bearers in a Dark World."

Long said the event will attract more than 2,000 delegates from 20 congregations in Northeastern New Mexico and the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandles.

Saturday's program begins at 9:55 a.m. and closes at 3:50 p.m. Sunday's schedule lasts from 9:55 a.m. until 3:30 p.m.

All sessions are open to the public, with a special invitation to the Sunday 1:40 p.m. service.

Pampa Fine Arts presents flute/piano concert Sunday

The Pampa Fine Arts Association will present in a flute and piano concert, Katrina Hildebrandt and Phoebe Reynolds, Sunday, Sept. 24 at 3 p.m. at St. Matthews Episcopal Church.

Hildebrandt began playing flute at age 12 and studied with Paul Little in South Carolina. In 1980 she moved to Houston to work with Byron Hester, principal flutist of the Houston Symphony and received a bachelor of music degree in flute performance from the University of Houston.

Hildebrandt and husband, Bill, an employee for the City of Pampa Parks and Recreation Department, moved to Pampa in 1986. Hildebrandt teaches flute privately and at Pampa Middle School. She is also playing with the Borger Orchestra at Frank Phillips College.

The Hildebrandts are active members of the First Presbyterian Church and board members of Area Community Theatre, Inc.

Phoebe Reynolds is a native to Roberts and Gray Counties. She studied with May Fouman Carr through her high school years. She graduated from Baylor University having studied under Ozario Frugani, who is now at Eastman School of Music.

Reynolds studied with Virgian Estes Latson in Amarillo and did graduate work with George Eason of West Texas State University.

Reynolds and husband, Wiley, live north of Pampa. Ranching and farming are the family's interests. The couple both serve on the board of the Pampa Area Art Foundation.

Performances on Sunday will include these selections:

"Sonata for Flute and Piano" by Phoebe Reynolds (seated) and Katrina Hildebrandt will perform at St. Matthews Episcopal Church on Sunday at 3 p.m., sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association.

Frances Poulenc
"Syrinx for Flute Alone" by Claude Debussy
"Fantastic in G Major for Solo Flute" by Georg Philipp Telemann
"Cantabile et Presto for Flute and Piano" by Georges Enesco

After the concert the PFFA will host a reception in the Parish Hall. The Sunday afternoon performance is free to the public.

Circle of Friends set annual meeting for September 26

AMARILLO - The Circle of Friends of the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center will host its annual membership meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 26 at 1 p.m. in the Harrington Cancer Center Amphitheater.

Jean Murtishaw of Pampa is serving on the board of directors for Circle of Friends.

Over the past year the Circle of Friends has assisted cancer patients and their families through proceeds raised from the sale of The Caring Touch Collection of Christmas cards and hosting membership parties in Amarillo, Canadian, Clarendon, Dalhart, Dumas, Hereford, Pampa, Panhandle and Perryton. The membership in the Friends group currently totals more than 1,400.

Over the past year the Circle of Friends has participated in sponsoring an art contest in area schools with more than 1,000 entries, sponsoring the Caring Touch Collection of Christmas cards and exclusive cards, supporting the patient care fund with a $12,000 contribution, supporting a weekly "dialogue meeting" for patients and their families, supporting an annual cancer survivorship day, participating in Texas Cancer Council Public Hearings, decorating the Harrington Cancer Center for fall and Christmas, providing seasonal pediatric parties, providing birthday cakes for the 26 children who are cancer center patients, promoting Christmas card sales in Neiman Marcus stores throughout the country, participating in the Krazy Maze to benefit the Harrington Cancer Center, participating in area Health fairs, participating in the "Smoke Free Baby" program, co-sponsoring the Harrington Cancer Center Donor Recognition Dinner, and sponsoring a child at Camp Alphia as well as providing lunches for the Parents Camp.

Son's friend enjoys free ride on family vacations.

DEARABBY: We are an ordinary middle-class family. Our older children are married, and we have one son at home who just turned 15.

We like to take vacations, and our son likes to take a friend with him. For the last four years, the same friend has been going with us. (I'll call him Buddy.) We always pay Buddy's way as though he were a member of the family. I'm talking about food, motel room, which he shares with our son, and whatever it costs to get through the gate at some parks.

We never thought about it until this year, but we resent the fact that Buddy's parents have never offered to pay part of the lodging for their son, gas for our car, meals or anything else. They aren't any worse off financially than we are. They never go on vacations, so they aren't able to invite our son anywhere. They always thank us when we bring Buddy home and tell us he'd never get to go anywhere if it weren't for us.

We're not greedy or cheap, but this kid practically lives at our house during the year. I'm not even sure if it's proper to expect anything. I wish our son could have as nice a free vacation as Buddy gets. What are your thoughts on this?

COLORADO QUESTION
DEAR QUESTION: It would be most thoughtful and considerate if Buddy's parents paid a little something toward their son's vacations, but look at it this way: Your son has a compatible companion on his vacation trips, which makes those vacations more enjoyable for everyone, including you. All things considered, it's a pretty good deal for all parties. Especially Buddy.

DEAR ABBY: I am not in favor of hugging. In fact, I am opposed to

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

even touching a person without asking first if I may. I am not some kind of touch-me-not kook. Let me explain.

Someone may have a skin condition, or an injury that is not visible. I know a woman who has a chronic case of "shingles," but her painful condition is not visible because the rash is on her chest and rib cage, so very few people even know she has it.

Six months ago, I had surgery for lung cancer. My incision runs diagonally across my back. Casual acquaintances have patted me on the back and even embraced me as a cordial greeting. The pain was excruciating.

Abby, please print this to let folks know that a hug is the last thing some people need. A handshake is friendly enough.

FRAGILE IN PHOENIX
DEAR FRAGILE: Thanks for a friendly reminder. Sometimes even a friendly handshake is too much if it's too enthusiastic and the person is wearing a ring on her right hand.

DEAR ABBY: As branch director of the Metropolitan St. Louis YWCA, Carondelet Branch, I was most interested in one of your letters pertaining to water safety from Jeanne Burke. I commend her mother for her quick thinking on using the pool furniture as a rescue assist. It was almost as though she had taken water safety instructions from the St. Louis YWCA.

Each spring many groups, including senior citizens and neighborhood school children, are instructed about water safety at the YWCA. The program, "You Never Know What's on Hand to Save a Life," includes many items.

The demonstration itself is a picnic setting. The items include a picnic bench and table, ice chest, plastic containers, a log and, to the surprise of everyone, a watermelon! All of these items float, and are usually on the spot to throw out to someone who needs to be rescued.

Isn't it wonderful that the furniture tossing saved a life? So can other items, if we continue to train people that "You Never Know What's on Hand to Save a Life."

VERONICA M. HALVELAND, YWCA, ST. LOUIS

DEAR ABBY: Once in a while I read a love story in your column, usually from a couple who met through Operation Dear Abby. Well, I also have a love story to tell.

Several years ago, following a painful divorce, I enrolled in a square dance class. The caller (teacher) said that every year there had been marriages as a result of people meeting there. I didn't find a husband, but I had a lot of fun and met some nice people. Then I dropped out.

Last October, a neighbor encouraged me to enroll in another square dance class, and there I met Richard — an "angel" (that's what they call dancers who come to help beginners). I liked the way he looked and I loved the way he danced so I approached him, just to talk, and before the evening ended, he asked me for a date.

Richard turned out to be the love of my life! I'm no spring chicken (I'm 50 plus) and I never expected to find love again, but did I ever! He's a few years younger than I am, but who's counting?

We're getting married next week, and I've never been happier. Abby, please tell your readers about square dancing. It's good exercise and a wonderful way to meet nice people.

DO-SI-DOLLY IN L.A.
DEAR DOLLY: Your letter is a do-si-dolly. Thanks for the tip. Take heed, all you lonesome polecats. Square dance clubs are listed in the telephone directory.

DEAR ABBY: While I was aboard the USS Nimitz, which was deployed to the Pacific and Indian oceans, I was feeling depressed because the holiday season was approaching, and I was far from friends and family.

I heard an announcement over the loudspeaker saying there was more than 500 pounds of mail in the public affairs office that had just arrived from Operation Dear Abby. I decided to go and find out what they were talking about.

After waiting in line for about 30 minutes, I then walked into the office and saw letters stacked everywhere. I picked one from Rebecca Winterstein of Florence, Miss. (It was in an attractive envelope and had a nice scent to it.) Choosing that letter changed my life! We corresponded for several months, and in April of 1989 I went to Mississippi to meet her. It was love at first sight, and the rest is history.

We were married on May 16 in Anniston, Ala., where I was attending school, and are looking forward to a lifetime of happiness together. Thanks, Abby!

MA 2 BRIAN KRAMER, FLORENCE, MISS.

DEAR BRIAN AND REBECCA: Congratulations and God bless you!

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It doesn't look like you'll waste any time or motion performing essential assignments for yourself or others today. When you set your mind to do something, it will be done.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Two heads will be better than one today and this is why you should do extremely well in your partnership arrangements. Collective ideas could be winners.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Through unselfish service and a desire to help others, you are likely to receive rewards today you won't be seeking, yet you'll be deserving of what you get.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't reject any invitations today which might provide you with opportunities to make new contacts in a convivial atmosphere. You could do yourself good and have a fun time in the process.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're likely to be extremely skillful at handling commercial and financial situations today. You'll not be intimidated by obstructions if you sense possibilities for personal gain.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Occasionally, it is essential we toot our own horns, especially if we've done something noteworthy about which others should be informed. It may be up to you today to broadcast your achievements.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Diligent effort and a bold mind are two tools you can apply today to improve your lot in life materially. They make a profitable combination.

Demons wary of Harvesters

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

Be prepared for anything when Pampa and Dumas spring into District 1-4A football action tonight at Harvester Stadium.

Both teams have proven they're not afraid to put the football in the air — I mean really put it in the air — and that usually translates into a wide-open thriller.

Forty-three percent of Pampa's total yardage this season has come via the passing lanes. Quarterback James Bybee has attempted 46 aerials in two games, completing 22 for 279 yards.

That's nothing, says Dumas. The Demons have attempted 53 — 64 if you count the passes they never got off against Perryton last week — but have completed only 19 for just under 200 yards.

"This game may last five hours," said Pampa coach Dennis Cavalier. "If we throw it 30 times and they throw it 30 times, who knows what can happen? With the air full of footballs, you just never know."

"We figure they'll throw the ball about 50% of the time, and that's the way we're preparing for this game. But really, you never know, and that's what makes this such a great game. Canyon expected us to run the ball about 98% of the time, too."

Instead, Pampa sailed 20 passes, three of them for touchdowns, against the Eagles, then upped that number to 27 last week versus Amarillo High. And there's every indication that the current trend will continue.

"We don't plan on doing anything differently," he said.

One thing both teams would like to do differently is reduce last week's turnovers. The Demons surrendered seven, Pampa six.

"It must have been the full moon," said Dumas coach John Patterson, whose Demons enter tonight's contest with an 0-1-1 record. "We had a ton of turnovers, and there were a lot of turnovers all across the Panhandle that night."

Still, both coaches count last Friday as a successful evening, even though neither ended up with a win. The Demons played Perryton to a 13-13 tie, which helped to heal the wounds of a 27-6 beating they took from Caprock in the season opener.

"It was better than losing, but not as good as winning," Patterson said of the Perryton game. "It was a better indication of our team than the game against Caprock. I don't think Caprock is 21 points better than us."

Cavalier found plenty to be happy about, especially defensively, in Pampa's 20-16 loss to Amarillo High. The Harvesters recorded six tackles behind the line of scrimmage for minus 32 yards, including three by senior defensive end Johnny East. Senior Barry Coffee, whose primary spot had been at fullback, had 13 assisted tackles, one unassisted and two fumble recoveries to earn a permanent home at corner back.

Senior strong safety Chris Roden also had a sterling night, collecting seven tackles, one behind the line of scrimmage, and an interception. Senior linebacker Mike Cagle added seven tackles and two fumble recoveries, while corner back Tony Bybee, a junior, stopped the ball carrier six times and covered one fumble.

Defensive trenchmen Heath Summers and Phillip Sexton combined for 15 tackles, two of them for losses.

"Coach Dippel (of Amarillo High) himself commented on Heath Summers and Phillip Sexton as standouts," Cavalier said.

And although Cavalier would have liked the score to read differently at game's end last Friday, he is convinced that going blow-for-blow with the Sandies hastened the growth of the Harvesters.

"The sting of that scoreboard was still there on Saturday, but it was beginning to wane by Monday," he said. "I think we have a team that remembers the hurt but is now proud of its performance. We've recovered from it and turned it into a positive experience."

And that's just what Patterson feared. He's not optimistic about the chances of finding a win in Pampa tonight, with only three seniors on offense, including split end Sammy Escarciga and tight end Larry Pirkle. Defensively, the Demons are anchored by inside linebacker Robert Miriam and free safety Kevin Apple, also seniors.

But after that, experienced personnel grows mighty scarce.

"We're considering whether we even want to schedule a bus to go over there," Patterson said. "From everything I've heard Pampa is really strong this year — you have to be to compete with Amarillo High. I don't know if we're ready or not. We're not where we want to be by any stretch of the imagination."

Pick: Dumas at Pampa, 7:30 tonight. Anything can happen, but Patterson probably pegged it when he said the Demons aren't quite ready. Pampa opens district in the win column tonight ... Pampa 28, Dumas 7.

Martina Navratilova returns a shot to Dinky Van Rensburg during second-round action Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Navratilova sails into third round

DALLAS (AP) — Before she could play her opening match Thursday, Martina Navratilova had one piece of unfinished business.

She had to watch, for the first time, the videotape of the crucial second set of her U.S. Open final loss to Steffi Graf. Only then did she take the court and trounce Dinky Van Rensburg of South Africa, 6-1, 6-0, in the $250,000 Dallas women's pro tournament.

"I had to get rid of that baggage before I played another tournament match," Navratilova said. "I had to figure out how and why I lost it and get over that loss a little more."

Martin said the loss was particularly painful because she had led by a set and 4-2.

"But I do know exactly when I lost it and why, where I let up physically and mentally. I'll use it to improve, to learn from it. It's making me want to work so much harder," she said.

"And I realize that's the best I've ever played and lost a match. Against anybody else, I would have won in two sets."

Navratilova said she until Thursday, "I hadn't been well enough to watch it without bawling my head off. But today (seeing it) helped me be more positive about it."

After that purgative, Navratilova showed no first-match jitters as she obliterated any chance Van Rensburg had with almost flawless tennis.

Virginia Slims

The No. 1 seed and eight-time Dallas tournament champion toiled just 48 minutes to beat Van Rensburg in a second-round match after a first-round bye. She made only five unforced errors and didn't face a break point.

"I hadn't practiced much (since the Open)," said Navratilova. "But I played so much tennis this summer that it came back right away, so I was really sharp. I concentrated very hard at the beginning to get used to everything, and I started out well. I'm eager to play."

Van Rensburg lost to Navratilova early this year at Sydney, 6-3, 6-0. This time, she said, Navratilova was "scary."

"She made some unbelievable shots," Van Rensburg said. "She's so strong, and you can't be quicker off the mark. She's Martina. But it was an experience for me. It was great, and I enjoyed it."

The victory — her 43rd in a row in Dallas — advanced Navratilova to Friday's quarterfinals, where she will play No. 6 seed Mary Joe Fernandez of Miami, Fla. Fernandez beat qualifier Kate Gompert of Rancho Mirage, Calif., 6-1, 6-3, in 70 minutes.

Walsh wants Cowboys to set him free

IRVING (AP) — Rookie quarterback Steve Walsh says he hopes the Dallas Cowboys will trade him to another National Football League team in the next three weeks, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

The newspaper also reported that Walsh told them Thursday he would pursue the trade possibility later this month when he meets with his agent, Marvin Demoff.

Walsh said he needs to discuss the matter with Demoff because the NFL trading deadline is Oct. 17.

The former University of Miami star said he planned to urge Demoff to fly to Dallas to meet with him and possibly Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson.

"I'm going to ask Marvin to come out here in a week or so, because I think Marvin knows about some of these things," Walsh said. "For the type of deal Jimmy wants to work out, Marvin is the guy to help do it."

"He's probably one of the few agents capable of pulling off the kind of deal the Cowboys are looking to make," Walsh said. "He's good at that."

Demoff was involved in the trade that sent quarterback Jim Everett to the Los Angeles Rams from the Houston Oilers after he could not reach agreement with Houston on a contract.

Walsh is the backup behind rookie first-round draft pick Troy Aikman and his inactivity in that role has made him "frustrated," he said.

Walsh has not played since the Cowboys' Aug. 26 exhibition game against the Denver Broncos.

Although Walsh emphasized he is not demanding a trade, he considers it inevitable and believes it in his best interest to try to complete one in the next few weeks.

Johnson said Thursday he does not favor trading Walsh.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said, "When we do something with Steve Walsh, it's going to be big-time."

Both Jones and Johnson say that several teams contacted the Cowboys this week to inquire about Walsh's availability.

The Cowboys have been

No room at Texas Stadium

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys announced Thursday they have officially sold out tickets to Sunday's game with the Washington Redskins at Texas Stadium.

The game will be televised on KDFW-TV at noon.

Team spokesman Greg Aiello said that fewer than 1,000 single tickets remain for the game.

It is regular-season home opener for coach Jimmy Johnson, who took over from Tom Landry when Jerry Jones bought the team in February.

The Cowboys and the Redskins each are 0-2. Dallas has losses to New Orleans and Atlanta. Washington has been defeated by New York and Philadelphia.

The Cowboys' last home sellout was also against the Redskins, Oct. 9, 1988, the sixth game of the 1988-89 season.

involved in trade discussions about Walsh since they selected him with the first pick in the NFL's supplemental draft in July. Walsh's acquisition cost the Cowboys their No. 1 pick in next spring's draft.

Johnson would not identify the teams he had conversations with this week, but Minnesota, Kansas City, Green Bay and the Los Angeles Raiders are known to have been among the clubs once interested in trading for Walsh.

Johnson said he hopes to use Walsh some in upcoming games.

"I would like to get Steve in there, but a lot of that depends on timing and opportunity," Johnson said. "With us having the ball so little against New Orleans, we couldn't. And with the ballgame against Atlanta going down to the wire, the opportunity didn't present itself."

A's approach second straight AL West title

By The Associated Press

The Oakland A's defeated Minnesota 2-1 Thursday night and edged closer to its second straight AL West crown as Mark McGwire finally figured out how to hit in the Metrodome. It was the only American League park in which McGwire hadn't homered — until Thursday.

"The Metrodome hasn't been the greatest of places for me," said McGwire, who entered the game with a .130 average in 46 Metrodome at-bats. "But last time we were in here, I noticed the lights were changed, and I started to hit the ball hard. I was optimistic coming in this time."

He turned that optimism into a double and a 453-foot homer. That turned Bob Welch into Oakland's fourth 17-game winner.

Elsewhere in the American League, the California Angels worked hard just to get into extra innings, then had nothing to show for their diligence.

The Angels, down to their last out in the ninth inning, came up with three runs to tie the Cleveland Indians Thursday night. California got nothing but zeros the rest of the way, though, and had its American League West title chances damaged with a 5-4, 17-inning loss at Cleveland.

The 5-hour, 26-minute game was the longest in the AL this season in both innings and time. It probably felt twice as long to the Angels, who slipped three games behind division-leading Oakland, which beat Minnesota 2-1. California has nine games left, Oakland 10.

"We still have the goal set of winning this thing," Angels catcher Lance Parrish. "It's not impossible. This game didn't make it easier. We've just got to keep our hopes alive and keep playing hard."

Their hopes were dimmed somewhat when Cleveland ended a six-game losing streak on Brook Jacoby's sacrifice fly. Pete O'Brien led off the 17th with a triple off Rich Monteleone, 2-2, California's sixth pitcher.

"We played for 17 innings and a lot of hours," California manager Doug Rader said. "And we came up on the short end of the stick. It's unfortunate. After busting our backs for as long as we did, I don't think I'm quite prepared for it."

No place like home away from home

By The Associated Press

It's not Ann Arbor, but the Michigan Wolverines should feel right at home when they play UCLA in the Rose Bowl on Saturday. It will be their 13th appearance there.

The other 12, of course, came in post-season appearances representing the Big Ten Conference.

This time, it is only a regular-season game, but it is a big one as far as Coach Bo Schemblechler is concerned. His fifth-ranked Wolverines lost their opener to top-ranked Notre Dame last week and are still trying to find their identity this season.

"We're both struggling, so it should be interesting," Schemblechler said, referring to 24th-ranked UCLA, which has a 1-1 record to show for its season so far.

The contest will be one of two college football games in the state of California featuring continued rivalries between the Big Ten and Pac-10

Conferences. In the other, No. 25 Ohio State visits No. 12 Southern Cal.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, Michigan State is at No. 1 Notre Dame, No. 2 Miami is at Missouri, No. 3 Nebraska is at Minnesota, Maryland is at No. 7 Clemson, No. 8 Arkansas plays Mississippi at Jackson, Miss., No. 9 West Virginia is at Louisville and No. 10 Syracuse is at No. 13 Pittsburgh.

Also, No. 11 Washington is at No. 23 Arizona, Kentucky is at No. 15 Alabama, No. 17 Houston is at Arizona State, North Carolina is at No. 18 North Carolina State, No. 19 Washington State is at Wyoming, Utah State is at No. 20 Illinois and No. 22 Oregon is at Stanford.

Michigan and UCLA haven't met since the Bruins won a 24-14 Rose Bowl decision in 1983, and the Trojans will play the Buckeyes for the first time since Southern Cal won the 1985 Rose Bowl 20-17.

College football roundup

UCLA and Southern Cal are perennial contenders in the Pacific-10 Conference.

After their 24-19 loss to top-ranked Notre Dame, the Wolverines will try to regroup in a setting almost as familiar as home. Michigan defeated Southern Cal 22-14 last January and only Southern Cal has appeared in more Rose Bowl games.

Michigan holds a 5-2 advantage in the series with UCLA.

Southern Cal's Rose Bowl rivalry with the Buckeyes goes back three decades with the Trojans holding a 4-2 edge. But USC coach Larry Smith is looking for his first victory against a Big Ten team in four outings, including losses to Michigan State and Michigan in the last two Rose Bowls.

Southern Cal is 1-1 after a 66-10 thrashing of Utah State last weekend, while the Buckeyes beat Oklahoma State 37-13 in their first game of the year.

While Pitt appears solid defensively again this year, it is Syracuse that has proven to be the stingiest team in the East this season.

In a 10-7 victory over Army, the Orangemen held Army's prolific wishbone offense to 212 rushing yards and permitted it just two second-half first downs. In addition, the Cadets didn't complete a pass against the Orangemen in four attempts.

"We just got through playing against a wishbone team," said safety Rob Thomson, who has helped extend to 50 the string of quarters Syracuse's starting secondary has gone without giving up a touchdown pass. "We've got some big games coming up, and this (Pitt) game is huge."

School gets new furniture from firm in adoption plan

AUSTIN (AP)—The library at Metz Elementary School has never looked better.

Employees at Texwood Furniture this week delivered about $5,000 worth of new wooden furnishings for the library, donated through the Adopt-A-School program.

The school, built in 1916, was targeted for replacement in last spring's bond election, which was soundly defeated.

"I've heard a lot about the problems," said Texwood employee Juan Acosta, 44. "That's why I think what we are doing here today will mean so much to the kids. They'll know someone cares."

School librarian Patricia Kaplan could barely contain her excitement.

"This is like a birthday," she said. "I'll have to rearrange things a bit, but I don't mind. This is like someone giving me a fur coat and asking me to do the alterations."

Principal Jorge Luis Rodriguez said the new furnishings would instill pride in the students, who have yet to use the library this year.

It had to be moved this summer from the 73-year-old building's second floor because engineers feared weakened wooden beams in the floor would collapse under the weight of the books.

"We are so used to settling for second, third and fourth best at this school that when we get a gift like this, I'm not really quite sure how to say thank you," Rodriguez said.

"Texwood Furniture, which designs and manufactures library furnishings, had been searching for a school to help out since joining the Adopt-A-School program earlier this year.

"We adopted Metz because it's very close to us," said company president Carolyn Lewis. "It is largely Hispanic and our work force is about 90 percent Hispanic. When we found out that some of our employees had attended Metz or had children going there, it seemed like the perfect school."

Vietnam troops leaving Cambodia

By PETER ENG
Associated Press Writer

SIEM REAP, Cambodia (AP)—Thousands of Cambodians threw Vietnamese troops flowers Thursday as Hanoi began a pledged final withdrawal from an 11-year war against resistance forces its superior firepower could not suppress.

In the government-organized ceremony, vehicles carrying thousands of soldiers bearing rifles rumbled out of this northwestern province after a band played pop music. A commander waved flowers in the lead.

Vietnam says it is conducting a six-day withdrawal of its last 26,000 troops from Siem Reap and several other areas of the country. But opposing guerrilla forces charge that Vietnam is faking the troop movement and actually hiding and disguising its troops.

Vietnam invaded Cambodia on Christmas Day 1978 and within two weeks toppled the fanatical Communist Khmer Rouge regime, installing a pro-Hanoi government in the capital of Phnom Penh.

During its four-year rule, the Khmer Rouge killed hundreds of thousands of Cambodians as it tried at the point of a gun to turn the country into an agrarian commune. It also launched bloody attacks on the Viet-name border.

At the height of its conflict with Cambodian guerrillas, Vietnam had 200,000 men in the country, according to Vietnamese officers.

They say Hanoi began annual partial pullouts in 1982 and that 55,300 Vietnamese died fighting the Cambodians, 25,000 of them in 1977 and 1978.

The invasion also brought economic blockades by non-Communist countries that kept Vietnam one of the world's poorest countries.

With the collapse of peace talks in Paris last month, the pullout would leave the Phnom Penh government fighting a coalition of up to 50,000 guerrillas backed by China, Thailand and other countries.

Each side claims the other has received increased shipments of arms in recent months.

Phnom Penh's Prime Minister Hun Sen returned home Thursday after talks in Thailand on arranging a cease-fire and said it was now up to the guerrillas to agree to halt fighting.

Maj. Gen. Huol Savorn, commander of Cambodia's 4th Army Region, said he expected a major guerrilla offensive after the pullout of the some 10,000 soldiers of "Front 479" from Siem Reap, Battambang and Oddar Meanchey provinces. These malarial, jungled Thai border provinces are among those most strongly contested by the guerrillas.

"They are going to fight a lot" to try to occupy border areas before striking inland, he told reporters.

"But they will not be able to achieve this," he said. "With the equipment that they have, they can only carry out hit-and-run attacks. The main thing is they don't have enough food and equipment."

He said the guerrillas were outnumbered three to one, and they had different aims and refused to cooperate with each other.

The Paris talks failed to agree on international monitoring of the troop movement, and the only official foreign observers seen in Siem Reap were from Vietnam and its close allies Laos, Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Of the absence of Western observers, Soviet delegate and Foreign Ministry official Genrich Kinreed said "it was astonishing why they insisted (on international monitoring) but didn't come." His four-member team was led by Suleimenov Oljas, member of the Supreme Soviet, or parliament.
