County veterans honored with parade

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

John Philip Sousa would have had trouble staging a patriotic event as big as Saturday's Gray County Veterans Parade and Monument Dedication.

But John Triplehorn, Gray County Veterans Service officer, pulled it off.

Nearly 150 parade entries, including marching bands, precision drill teams and civic, religious and business groups from around the Panhandle, proceeded from downtown to the monument site on Hobart Street as thousands of hardy citizens braved high winds and chill factors in the teens to watch and cheer.

Dignitaries Maj. Gen. Charles E. Honore, deputy 5th Army commander; Army Capt. Rusty Prewitt-Campbell and Lt. Col. Stephen Maddox, deputy commander, Training Wing of Reese Air Force Base, were joined by State Rep. Warren Chisum and former congressman and current Railroad Commission candidate Beau Boulter in a salute to the red, white and blue and those men and women who have served to defend her. "This just illustrates the uniqueness of the people of the Panhandle, Gray County and Pampa," Boulter said of the large number of parade entries and people on hand for the monument dedication. "It shows how patriotic these people are and how much they care about values and the sacrifices that others have made. I just think it is wonderful."

Gen. Honore noted that the turnout for the parade and dedication were the best he had ever seen anywhere in his 30 years of military service.

It took nearly an hour for all of the entries, led by the McLean Marching Band and Junior ROTC units from Caprock and Tascosa high schools of Amarillo, to wind through downtown. In addition to the McLean band, the Khiva Shrine Band from Amarillo filled the air with music for the event.

Honore said Americans can be proud that the example of democracy this country has set has caught on all over the world. He cited free elections in Poland and a non-Communist Party president there, experiments in free enterprise and allowing dissenting political opinions in the Soviet Union, and the Chinese students who recently died trying to bring democracy to that country.

"I'm amazed that Gorbachev is saying they are learning democracy and the Poles are having free elections. It speaks highly of our system of government," Honore said. "The cold war is over and we have won."

"But freedom is not free," he said. "And it is to your credit that you realize that."

Honore stated that the greatest threats to freedom around the globe now are drug lords in South America and terrorists in the Middle East.

"We are making plans now to assist the Border Patrol and other agencies to deter drugs from coming into this country in the event we are called on to do so," Honore said. "The war on drugs is a serious one."

Last week Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney announced he was seeking advice from each branch of the armed forces on ways to involve the military in assisting to stop the flow of narcotics into the United States.

Maj. Gen. Honore delivers his keynote speech at the Veterans Monument dedication Saturday.

Those plans are currently being completed in the event the Army is called in to assist, Honore said.

During his speech, Honore compared the late Abby Hoffman, a member of the Chicago 7, anti-war activist and accused drug dealer who recently committed suicide, to the men who died defending their country.

Honore said that while Hoffman's questionable ethics and practices earned him cult hero status, thousands of Americans, including the ones honored on the Gray County Veterans Memorial, died honorably.

He challenged the media to spend more time focused on "heroes" such as the ones on the monument, rather than "cowards" who put down America and end up committing suicide.

Lt. Col. Maddox, a 1965 Pampa

High School graduate, said West Texas' emphasis on family, God, respect and freedom were what laid the foundation upon which he built his 20-year military career. He termed Pampa a partner with the armed forces in teaching love of country and respect for democracy.

Prior to Honore and Maddox's remarks, County Judge Carl Kennedy and Mayor Richard Peet reflected on this area's patriotic heritage. Peet quoted famous Americans such as Patrick Henry and Abraham Lincoln in noting the price of freedom.

Lefors Mayor Gene Gee and McLean Mayor Sam Haynes represented their cities and served as dignitaries for the event as well.

Guardsmen patrol streets as Carolinas recover from Hugo

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Hundreds of National Guardsmen patrolled ravaged streets against looting Saturday, and police reported more than 90 arrests as residents returned to begin the long task of rebuilding from Hurricane Hugo.

Chainsaws buzzed, crews worked around the clock to restore power and telephone communications, and insurance agents across the Carolinas braced for claims that could run into the billions from the region's most devastating hurricane in 30 years.

"It is the worst storm, the worst disaster, I've ever seen anywhere," Gov. Carroll Campbell said after surveying the destruction by helicopter. "We're going to be a long time digging out of this and rebuilding."

The hurricane was blamed for 18 deaths in the Carolinas and two in Virginia.

In the six hours Hugo and its 135 mph winds surged through South Carolina, it flattened dozens of homes and buildings, snapped trees, twisted bridges and washed scores of boats ashore. Mayor Joseph P. Riley Jr. said damage in his 3-century-old city alone might reach $1 billion.

"There's just destruction everywhere," said Riley, who imposed a 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. curfew.

Police reported isolated cases of looting. Fifty people were arrested in Mount Pleasant, across the Cooper River from Charleston; 12 in North Charleston; and at least three in Charlotte, N.C. In Charleston, police Sgt. Thomas Gardner said Saturday that 27 people were arrested Friday and early today for looting and one for violating curfew.

"It was very quiet last night. I left at 1 a.m. and the only thing I saw were police cars and National Guardsmen," Gardner said. Two people from New Orleans, he said, were posing as relief workers who then would take people's possessions; they had not been charged yet.

The governor deployed 2,600 National Guardsmen to patrol streets, enforce the curfew, help remove debris, purify water and perform other duties.

At a news conference Saturday, Riley said power should be restored by night at hospitals, but he could not estimate when residents might get power. Mail delivery could resume Monday, and he recommended that people boil water before drinking it.

Up to half a million customers across the state were without power as of late Friday. In inland Columbia, people lined up at an ice warehouse with coolers. Some areas of Charleston were without water, and residents were told to boil their drinking water.

Two hundred miles inland, Charlotte, N.C., also sustained heavy damage, and nearly 80 percent of the customers in the city of 375,000 were still without power early Saturday afternoon, said Duke Power Co. spokesman Joe Maher.

There were 14 deaths in South Carolina from the storm itself, related traffic accidents and heart attacks suffered during cleanup, according to the state Emergency Preparedness Division. In North Carolina, three deaths in the Charlotte area were blamed on the storm, and a 6-month-old baby died in Union County when a tree crashed into a house.

Two people were killed by Hugo after it moved into Virginia as a tropical storm. In the Caribbean, where Hugo first touched land, the storm killed at least 27 people and left 50,000 homeless.

The hurricane and its tidal waves of up to 17 feet smashed ashore at Charleston late Thursday. After being downgraded to a tropical storm, Hugo advanced farther west than expected, whisking through Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio and western Pennsylvania, where the National Hurricane Center stopped tracking it.

Former Pampan heads computer operations for oil company

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles about former Pampa science fair winners and their careers and accomplishments since then. Elaine Ledbetter is a former science instructor at Pampa High School.

By ELAINE LEDBETTER
Guest Writer

Harold Burgess, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bee Burgess, was Pampa High School's 1962 representative to the National Science Fair in Seattle, Wash. His project, "Measuring the Density of Liquids by Sound," was inspired while reading a magazine article on density.

Burgess now lives in Corpus Christi, where he is employed by Koch Oil Company as the system manager of the data acquisition computer program for its refineries, a position he has held since 1985.

Prior to being moved to the computer services department as a computer applications engineer, he was in process engineering. Regarding this position, he said, "This means that I do not get to use my chemical engineering much any more."

One unique aspect of Burgess' career is that in the 20-plus years he has been employed, the company has been known by three different names.

Upon his graduation from the Colorado School of Mines, Golden, Colo., with a degree in chemical and petroleum refining engineering in 1967, he went to work as junior process engineer for Sunray DX Oil Company in Duncan, Okla.

In the fall of 1969, the company merged with Sun Oil Company, and in November of 1981, Sun Oil's Corpus Christi refinery was purchased by Koch Oil Company.

After the merger of Sunray DX Oil with Sun Oil, Burgess remained in Duncan, where he was promoted to lead process engineer before being transferred to Philadelphia in 1975. There he held the positions of engineering coordinator and energy coordinator for all five of Sun Oil's refineries in the area.

In 1977, Burgess began to devote all his time to the Marcus Hook refinery, one of the five in the Philadelphia area, where his responsibilities greatly increased.

There he became operating technical specialist in charge of one-third of the operating units in the refinery. In addition, he was the operating engineer for the multi-million dollar expansion which enabled them to make electricity from the hot exhaust gases released in one particular refining process.

Burgess said, "This was basically an energy-saving operation in that we simply converted previously wasted heat energy into electrical energy."

Burgess was transferred again in 1978, this time to the Corpus Christi refinery, where he became the lead process engineer. As such, he was responsible for the operation of one-half of all the units.

After Koch Oil took over the refinery in 1981, Burgess was given the responsibility for the justification, design and start-up of the refinery sulfur plant that is currently removing some 15-20 tons of sulfur from the atmosphere annually.

Building the sulfur plant was mandatory in order to meet the requirement of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Burgess explained the process in this way: "One by-product of the refining process is hydrogen sulfide, which is a poisonous gas. Formerly, this had been discharged directly into the air. Our plant simply absorbs this gas and converts it to free sulfur."

Burgess married Roberta E. Conkin of Kirkwood, Mo., in Boulder, Colo., in 1967. At that time, he was a senior at the Colorado School of Mines and she was a sophomore at the University of Colorado. They have two children. Chris, 21, is a senior architecture student at Texas Tech. Terecia, 18, graduated from high school this spring. She plans to attend college and hopes to become a computer system analyst.

Roberta returned to college a few years back and obtained the BBA degree in finance from Corpus Christi State University. She is now working full-time and pursuing her master's degree.

Despite heavy company and family responsibilities, Burgess finds time for much community service. Presently, he serves on the Gulf Coast Boy Scout Council, is a deacon at Grace Presbyterian Church, coaches a Little League team and has been a member of the school board for the Grace Presbyterian elementary school.

Sun Oil Company has, on three different occasions, presented him with Community Service Awards.

While a student at Pampa High School as a member of the Class of

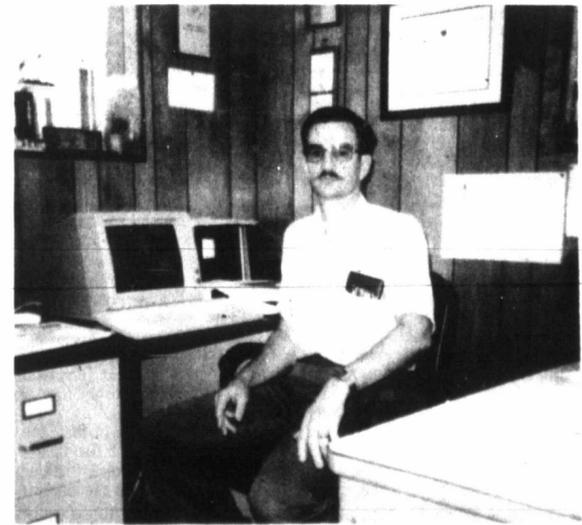

'62, Burgess was active in Spanish Club and was on the varsity basketball team all three years.

At the Colorado School of Mines, he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity, active in varsity basketball, varsity baseball and numerous intramural sports and was a student member of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

His hobbies include bowling, golf, jogging, gardening and fishing.

Burgess is shown with his project on the density of liquids at the National Science Fair in Seattle, Wash., in 1962.

Today, Burgess is system manager of the data acquisition computer program for Koch Oil Co.'s refineries at Corpus Christi.

South African police arrest 150 in women's anti-apartheid march

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Police arrested more than 150 people, clashed with angry blacks and cordoned off a cathedral with barbed wire Saturday in a massive operation to stop a march by anti-apartheid women's groups.

Two blocks from the church, where thousands of women had planned to assemble, white extremists went ahead with two government-approved rallies. Fights broke out between the khaki-clad neo-Nazis and black onlookers. Police made several arrests and chased blacks away with batons.

Downtown Pretoria resembled a militarized zone, with major streets closed to civilian traffic throughout normally busy morning shopping hours. Hundreds of policemen and scores of riot-control vehicles were deployed to prevent the women's march and monitor the right-wing rallies.

The white extremists sought and received permission to demonstrate, but the women's planned march to government headquarters was banned because organizers refused to seek a permit.

Authorities also said they feared simultaneous protests by such diverse factions might spark violence.

Zeni Tshongweni, a spokeswoman for organizers of the women's march, said many would be marchers were arrested when they tried to assemble near the Union Buildings, their intended destination. Other activists said several people, including children and elderly women, were injured when police used clubs and dogs to disperse the crowd.

Police said 154 people were arrested, all released after being told to appear in court Monday. Police headquarters said most of the arrests came when officers were pelted with stones and bottles while confronting scores of blacks, including well-known activist Winnie Mandela, at a trade union office after the march was canceled.

Police said three people were injured, but gave no details.

Mrs. Mandela, wife of imprisoned African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, and other blacks aboard two buses later were chased by a convoy of police vehicles and ordered to leave Pretoria.

"We came here peacefully but they are seeking violence," Mrs. Mandela said.

Some of the biggest marches in South Africa's history have taken place in the past two weeks, after new President F.W. de Klerk said his government would allow peaceful protests. Authorities announced Friday that leaders of such marches must obtain advance approval.

An authorized anti-apartheid march was held Saturday in Boksburg, near Johannesburg. An estimated 2,500 mixed-race residents paraded peacefully from their segregated neighborhood to the downtown area to protest the right-wing-controlled city council's reimposition of strict segregation ordinances.

In Pretoria, anti-apartheid lawyer Ismail Ayob was at St. Alban's Anglican Cathedral when it became apparent the women would be unable to assemble there.

"It's been a great success for the government," he said. "Roadblocks as far back as Soweto (a black township an hour's drive away), barbed wire, security vehicles. The government has made its point."

A notice tacked to a church door said the government had obtained a court order banning a pre-march service and the march itself. Two trucks mounted with tear gas cannons were parked beside the church.

"It is the same as any other country in the world. People can't break the law," said Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok, standing with riot police outside St. Alban's.

Police briefly detained Richard Sergay, correspondent for ABC News, and several other journalists.

Dallas athletes sentenced

DALLAS (AP) — Friends and family members met with tears and cries of anguish the sentences handed down for a dozen teen-agers whose armed robbery ring struck 21 times, mostly for the thrill.

Ten of the 12 defendants, many of them members of last fall's Class 5A state champion football team, received prison sentences ranging from 2 to 25 years. Another got probation and one will go to boot camp.

The severity of the punishment shocked family and friends. But the judge said the defendants were lucky.

State District Judge Joe Kendall told the youths that if stupidity were against the law, they would "all deserve life without parole."

"You come, for the most part, from very good homes with loving parents who provided you with all your needs and many of your wants," the judge told the teens before sentencing them Friday.

"And some of you have even been given by God athletic talent that would enable you to receive a free college education and, perhaps, both fame and fortune thereafter.

"When I compare you with a typical young offender who comes before me, you are especially without excuse."

The 12 youths pleaded guilty and tearfully pleaded for leniency over the past two months after police broke the robbery ring that struck businesses in Dallas and suburban Duncanville. Many of the youths said the robberies started as a way to have fun and acquire extra cash.

Some said they spent the money on prom night and at Six Flags Over Texas amusement park.

Each defendant faced a maximum 99-year sentence in the Texas Department of Corrections.

Derric Evans, 17, an All-America defensive back at state champion Dallas Carter High last year whose full scholarship to the University of Tennessee was revoked, received a 20-year term for his involvement in four robberies.

Three defendants attend Hillcrest High in Dallas. The others were students at Carter, and six played on the school's championship football team.

The first four rows of the courtroom were reserved for family members Friday. About 250 friends and relatives packed the hallway outside, some straining to look through a glass pane in the door to hear the punishment meted out by the judge.

Crying erupted in the hallway as the crowd learned of the youths' sentences.

"I know down deep these guys are not hardened criminals and they shouldn't go to prison," said Sean Townsend, a former Carter student. "I just hope they stay strong and when they get out, they start a new life."

Aric Andrews, the only defendant to receive probation, had a somber expression on his face when he left the courtroom. The other 11 were taken out a back door of the courtroom, handcuffed to a long chain that connected them.

"I feel very lucky. I left it up to God. He took care of it," said Andrews. He said the others bound for prison "probably will hate me."

Some students said they thought the sentences were appropriate. Corey Morgan, a Carter sophomore, said the judge "made an example of them."

"Those sentences are going to make people here realize that robbing is not a play thing," he said. "People are going to be more serious and think twice about getting into trouble."

The reality of the impending prison time overwhelmed some of the relatives as they left the courtroom.

Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Defense funding should defend us

This month Vice President Dan Quayle branded former President Ronald Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative "political jargon." He said that Reagan "talked about this impenetrable shield that was going to be completely leak proof ... But it clearly was stretching the capability of a strategic defense system."

Where has Quayle been? It's true that, early on, Reagan oversold SDI. But he quickly changed course, admitting that "no impenetrable shield" was possible. The mature Reagan program moved us away from the Mutual Assured Destruction (MAD) strategy that had prevailed since the mid-1960s.

SDI is simply common sense: the idea that it's more intelligent, and more moral, to defend your people rather than just building weapons to kill others. Of course, no program is perfect; new developments make old weapons obsolete; research must continue. But defending, say, 90 percent of Americans is better than defending 0 percent, which is closer to the case now.

It seems strange that the U.S. taxpayers spend $300 billion a year for a "Defense" Department that can't defend us, only kill Soviets. Some 40 percent of that money goes to defend Western Europe, even though they're richer than we are and have a bigger population. If Quayle wants to find "political jargon," it's this continued subsidy of wealthy Europeans.

The Soviets themselves have always realized that strategic defense is crucial. Their own SDI program began in 1969, 14 years before the U.S. program. They station anti-missile forces around Moscow, and are working on more advanced systems. The Krasnoyarsk radar in Siberia, which completely violates the 1972 ABM Treaty, is part of a network of battle-management radars they're constructing. Despite glasnost and perestroika, the Soviets have not cut military spending, but, according to a recent congressional report, have boosted it.

Some blame does lie with Reagan — but not because he engaged in a bit of fanciful rhetoric in 1983, the year he launched the SDI. His fault was that he never gave the order to fully deploy SDI. He approved only research. But why spend from $3 to $5 billion for research this year if SDI will never be deployed? Even though President Bush still backs an emasculated program, the reality is that because Reagan never gave the go-ahead to build SDI, the program itself is now moribund, the money wasted.

Quayle also seems to forget his once-fervent support for SDI. One of the reasons Bush picked him for his ticket was that Quayle's support of SDI would help gather conservatives to the Bush bandwagon.

SDI's apparent demise makes one wonder why taxpayers still must pay $300 billion a year for a defense program that doesn't defend them. We can get the same defenselessness for a much cheaper price — for example, by withdrawing our troops from Western Europe, saving some $120 billion a year, almost the entire federal budget deficit.

We shouldn't pay any ransom

War and other hostilities require heart-rending, tough decisions the average person wouldn't want to make. But the fact of business is: Hard decisions must be made, and we hope the people in charge have the guts to make them.

A considerable part of the current hostage debate is over what we can do to save the hostages. I sympathize with that sentiment and my heart goes out to the hostages and their families. But I ask: How much of our response should be dictated by concern for the safety of the hostages?

Before coming to grips with that question, let's look at other situations involving lives. Suppose a submarine commander were steaming to rescue some downed airmen, and his radarman informed him of a squadron of incoming enemy aircraft, would we expect him to abandon the airmen in order to protect his ship and his men? Or would we expect him to risk all in an effort to save American lives?

During World War II, when the Allied Command ordered saturation bombing of Frankfurt, Berlin and Munich, would you have scrubbed the mission upon receiving intelligence that Allied prisoners of war were being held in those cities? Hitler would have loved to have had a U.S. president around at that time who considered those lives overly precious and called off the bombing.

Middle East disputes, Israel's role in them and our own bungling foreign policy are not the main issues in the current crises. What is at issue are the basic principles of international conduct governing the ways that nations negotiate and settle their differences.

The focal point of any discussion of our response should be: What are the best steps to take to reduce the chances of future terrorism? The Bush administration should make it plain that taking hostages, blowing up civilian airliners and committing other acts of international terrorism are not profitable.

You don't convince terrorists of this by congressional resolution condemning terrorism. Nor do you convince them by being willing, as George Bush has indicated, to consider negotiating with Iran (through a third party) over its frozen assets. This merely proves to terrorists, and the nations that back their activities, that terrorism is profitable and the United States is a wimp nation. At best "successful" negotiations take care of the immediate problem, such as the release of hostages, but they lay the groundwork for the next airliner bombing and the next hostage taking.

Americans must have the will and resolve to exact a high cost from terrorists and the nations who back them. But what do we hear from Washington? Politicians and military "experts" whine, "We don't know who the terrorists are, or where they are keeping our people." Such experts ought to be canned. If the tiny nation of Israel can find and arrest Sheik Obeid, and be in and out in an hour, why can't we develop similar intelligence and adeptness?

Instead of all the whining and hand wringing, we need to use our carrier-based Mediterranean and Indian Ocean naval fleets to send an unambiguous message to both the terrorists, and the nations who back and harbor them, that the principles of international conduct do not include terrorist acts, and heavy military sanctions will be imposed on nations who support terrorists.

President Bush needs to look at President James Madison's foreign policy. Barbary Coast pirates were preying on U.S. and European shipping. The United States and Europe dealt with the pirates by paying tribute and ransom resulting in higher demands. Finally, Madison sent in a naval force headed by Admiral Stephen Decatur. The pirating stopped.

Show this creep to the door

"Mr. Bakker, I'm Dr. Gilroy, and I'll be examining you today to see if you are mentally fit to stand trial in your fraud case.

"I understand you were found in a fetal position and you were whimpering. Do you do this sort of thing often?"

"Only when I'm frightened by something."

"What sort of things frighten you?"

"Having to make an honest living, losing my Mercedes, seeing my wife without her makeup, those sort of things."

"Often, guilt can cause such reactions in individuals, Mr. Bakker. Is there anything you feel particularly guilty about?"

"When I was 9, I stole a candy bar."

"And you feel guilty about that?"

"No, I feel guilty because I didn't steal the entire box. I could have knocked the price down from retail and sold the candy to my friends and turned a nice profit."

"Now, Mr. Bakker, we're going to play a little game called word association. I'll say a word and you tell me the first thing that comes into your mind. Here goes:

"God."

"Money."

"Television."

"More money."

"Congregation."

Lewis Grizzard

"Suckers."

"Beg."

"Cry."

"Heaven."

"Unlimited expense account."

"Hell."

"Economy class."

"Things are coming clearer to me now, Mr. Bakker. Next, I want you to take the ink-blot test. I'll show you these cards and you tell me what you see."

"Here's the first one. What do you see here?"

"I see a $600,000 condominium with a Jacuzzi and that little figure on the side there is me going to bed in my monogrammed silk pajamas."

"And this one?"

"It's a chauffeur-driven Rolls Royce. That's me in the back seat with a woman."

"And that woman is you wife?"

"I'm not that crazy, Doc."

"Let's go on then. What do you see in this figure?"

"A yacht. I'm relaxing on deck with a bottle of champagne."

"And this?"

"That's my new Lear jet. I'm off to a Malcolm Forbes' bash."

"And this last figure. What do you make of this?"

"It's Leona Helmsely getting away with it."

"Well, Mr. Bakker, I see our hour's up. I will evaluate these tests and then tell the judge what my findings are."

"Can't you give me a little hint of what you found, Doc?"

"OK, my preliminary diagnosis would be that you are a greedy, selfish, manipulative low-life who worships only one thing — money — and that you do not have a trace of conscience and not only should you be in prison, you should be flogged."

"I think your would-be mental problems are nothing but an act. You are putting-on to try to save your hide, and in just one hour, I have learned to despise you and your wife, who is fat and ugly. Any more questions?"

"Good. Nurse Ratchett, please show this creep to the door."

Something's wrong with the message

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

There's something terribly wrong here. Maybe not legally wrong, but morally wrong.

Thursday's Pampa News ran a story I wrote about an 8-year-old girl who was hit by an allegedly drunk driver as she rode her bike on Malone Street Sunday afternoon. At the time the story ran, police said they were still deciding what charges besides driving while intoxicated might be filed against the man.

Shortly after the paper hit the street, I got the word. No other charges are being filed. Just DWI. The same charge that would have been filed if he'd been caught by police driving on some back street minding his own business, but nonetheless intoxicated.

To send a message that it is no worse to hit a child when drunk than to just be behind the wheel after a few snorts is to suggest that maybe drunk driving isn't that bad after all. And I don't think that's really the message our community wants to send to those who crawl behind the wheel with their heads lost in a bottle.

I understand there are two extenuating circumstances as far as the police are concerned. The first is that the only witnesses to the accident were kids around the age of 6. "And 6-year-olds don't make very credible witnesses," I was told. The second is that police have reason to believe the girl might have ridden out in front of the pickup.

To suggest that 6-year-olds are not credible witnesses is to say that those who commit crimes against children have cart blanche to get away with it. I don't buy it! If someone hurts a child, we adults have the responsibility to give those children's testimony credibility. We owe it to them, whether we are talking about sexual abuse or some drunk nailing a riding a bicycle.

Now, what if a child does ride out in front of a drunk driver? Are you going to tell me that he is just as capable when drunk as when sober to keep from hitting the child? Not likely.

Let's back off this subject for a moment and look at what we've been reading in the paper. Pampa's new crime prevention officer, a man I both like and respect, has been asking citizens — no, pleading with them — to get involved in fighting crime in their neighborhoods. Only when people care enough to say "ENOUGH!" will we deal with crime, he keeps saying.

My question is when do the police say "Enough!" When do they and our courts and our county attorney and our district attorney stop treating crime like a 9-5 job and start treating it like the cancer it is? Certainly some of them already do that.

But in a lot of cases I hear and see a case of musical chairs justice. Cops say, "I don't press the charges higher because the D.A. or county attorney will reject them." Justices of the Peace say, "I didn't set the bond any higher because of this or that." D.A.'s and county attorneys say, "I didn't press for a more serious conviction because the cops didn't ask me to" or "There were problems with the paperwork."

ENOUGH!

It is high time that criminals in Pampa, whether they are dope dealers or drunk drivers or whatever, know that if they commit a crime in Pampa they are going to catch nothing but hell for it. No breaks, no excuses and no pussy-footing around.

Letters to the editor

Why does TRRC persecute indies?

To the editor, and Pampa American citizens:
Are we living in a country that is different than the one we were born in? Are our appointed and elected officials to be allowed to use their authority to pursue a personal vendetta? Can this be taking place right here in Pampa, Texas? Yes, is the sad reply.
Officials of our own District 10 Railroad Commission have decided that they have the right to decide who goes and who stays in the oil and gas business in our area.

On September 7, 1989, field operatives of the Commission established a 24-hour per day vigilance on Tex-Well Oil and Gas Inc.'s Williams lease in Carson County for the purpose of determining the amounts of oil, water and gas that were produced from the oil wells on the property. The normal procedure that has been observed in this field was to test an oil well for a period of 24 hours and measure the amounts of fluids that were produced, and to use the values observed to calculate the gas-oil ratio of the well. Such spot tests are indicative of the well's potential, but most knowledgeable people will agree that it would be absurd to expect every well to produce exact quantities of any of its fluids day after day.

Yet the representatives of the Railroad Commission maintain that they are not satisfied with the test results that have been observed on the lease. They have maintained a round-the-clock presence of at least two people who are on the state payroll to ascertain that no Tex-Well employee could in any way tamper with the test results. The wells have met or exceeded the Commission's requirements for 11 out of 12 days to be classified as an oil well. The personnel of the Commission state that the fluctuations in production are unexplainable and are the reason for their costly approach.

Why?
What is the motivation of these stalwart defenders of the people's trust?

This Panhandle field was produced under a set of rules for 60 years, and now when these rules no longer serve the purposes of the mighty "Big Oil" companies, we all of a sudden need a new set of rules and an enforcement division in the Railroad Commission to persecute and harass the independent producers. The new field rules and the FERC findings read as if they were penned by the attorneys of the majors. Some of the settlement agreements that were forced on the independents read in exactly the same language as the Railroad Commission's final decision as to the future division of oil and gas strata. Is this mere coincidence? Some of these settlements were signed 18 months before the Commission's rulings.

Now, let us examine the terrible people who are, according to the TRRC and the majors, stealing something.

These people live in our community and attend with their families our schools and churches. They have been builders and job creators for our local economy. They are the backbone of our local economy.

The Big Oil companies have removed enough wealth from the great Panhandle Oilfield that, had the local people received anything like a fair shake, there shouldn't be a poor person or a bumpy road within 500 miles of Pampa, Texas. Instead, we find Big Oil selling off their production and perhaps evading their responsibility to clean up some of the mess they have made. Do you really believe that they will care about us or our land when they have finished milking all the good out of it?

Now we find the TRRC levying fines on local independents. Why? Did they foul the water and air? No. They violated some murky "filing regulations." When has the TRRC fined Big Oil for the tar pits and junk left sitting all around and seen to it that the scandal made front page news?

This farce deserves a thorough investigation from top to bottom.

We must not allow the bureaucracy to publish regulations that violate our own civil rights.

Since the oil boom ended, virtually every entity connected has had to lay off people and tighten its belt. But not our vaunted TRRC! No! They expect that they need more enforcers than ever before to slap down anyone who might dare to defy them. How long before they start carrying guns to make us do their bidding? Our own tax dollars are being spent paying people to take away our livelihood and cut our own throats.

Why are these men so angrily persistent to exterminate opposition? The situation of regulatory bodies toadying to vested interests has reared its ugly head before. We need another Teddy Roosevelt to carry a big stick and walk softly up the behind sides of these scoundrels and carpetbaggers. The situation speaks for itself when I have to sign myself ...

Women should have education, work skill

To the editor:
With no vocational skills, and naive of the ways of the world and alone, I'm divorcing.

When I married into a locally prestigious family, I had no intentions of ever divorcing. I overlooked major faults. I married with a black-eye, but I was blinded with love. I thought things, he, would change.

Now, I face the world with no support for my son other than state subsidized programs. They are my way out. It is hard. I don't have any skills and am roughing it. My in-laws are threatening to take the car, and without it I'll have no way to and from school, the day care, the doctor, grocery store or to pick up food stamps. But there is a bright side: no more public embarrassments, degradation or living without peace.

My point to you, young ladies of all ages, is to get an education. Be careful not to be blinded with love. If your man orders you about, keeps you from having freedoms, consider a new man. He probably won't change, your man. Chances are, even his parents won't put their pride down long enough to make sure their grandchild has diapers or anything else needed. As I face divorce, only I am there to provide my child's necessities.

Think about school. You can do it! If I can, any one can.

Take heed to my situation, and break the chains of women who face the same thing. Look out for yourself and never sell yourself short. Be tough, because it's a tough world out there.

People should be aware of rabies

To the editor:
I am concerned about the positive cases of rabies in this area. I wonder how many people missed the article I read almost two weeks ago in The Pampa News. I hope this letter encourages people to vaccinate their animals and to display the rabies tags.

Children are very adventurous and will usually walk up to an unfamiliar animal. I still remember walking up to a beautiful collie that looked like the one on television. I also remember speaking to him, patting him on the head and the surprise and pain I felt as he bit me on my forehead. The shots and stitches in the emergency room are also vivid in my mind.

I was very young, but I understood the adults when they talked about the dog being killed and his head sent away to see if he had rabies. I felt sad for the dog. He was so pretty. I guess I was lucky. I never took the rabies shots, so the dog must have been free of rabies. I've heard the shots are painful. Have you read about the symptoms of rabies in a human and the chances of survival if infected and not treated?

I have a question for the veterinarians in the area. Why can't you schedule rabies clinics several times a year, like the clinics for children's immunizations? It would be nice if the rates were cut to almost cost for these most important rabies shots. Then maybe people could afford to do the expensive services such as neutering, dental work, declawing, etc.

One more thing. I have a tendency to throw the rabies tag in the drawer if my animal does not have a collar. I am vowing right now to display the tags on my animals for the safety of my animals and the children that might want to go up to one of them.

Reformed dealer now against drugs

To the editor:
I watched the president's speech on the new drug policy. I am writing you in hopes that my letter will be printed in your paper. I want to tell the president of the United States that I for one support his war on drugs, that his efforts on the war against drugs are supported not only by the people of the United States but by thousands of convicted drug dealers that have lost their entire lives to drugs.

I plead with the president to attack this problem with all his power and to allow the reformed drug dealers to voice their opinion in hopes that they touch the heart and minds of other dealers to stop their destructive actions.

I am just one of thousands to stand and defend his effort. I have no power to get my message across, so I beg of my community and The Pampa News to deliver my message to the president in hopes that this will challenge other reformed dealers to support and speak out on this atrocity we helped create. I am begging you for your help to start this movement. I will not rest until I have done my best to end all drug problems.

If you will not help me, I will keep writing other newspapers, but I would rather this movement start with the integrity and sincerity that I feel toward this problem, and only a paper with your able writers can help. I will not falter in my efforts to combat this disease on our nation. Reformed Dealers Against Drugs will succeed. The RE-DAD will be a moving force. My efforts are real and my motives sincere.

I will not be stopped. Mr. President, I beg for your assistance in my effort to right a great wrong, and I ask God to be with you in this new endeavor.

Please, I ask that the community of Pampa, Texas, and the citizens of Pampa to support my efforts. Together we can succeed. I urge you to respond to my letters and write to me. Thank God and bless you!

Town mourns for victims as bus accident investigated

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

ALTON (AP) — Strangers said they felt like family Saturday as they joined in mourning at funerals for 15 of the 20 teen-agers who died in the state's worst school bus accident.

"If you want to shout, shout. If you want to cry, cry," the Rev. Francisco Quevada told 4,000 people who crowded a funeral for four of the victims.

"If you want to strike your chest, those are all natural human reactions, but we need to transform the shouts and cheers into hope."

The multitude, many of them standing, packed the San Juan del

Valle cathedral for the funerals of Marta Lozano, 13, Carmen Canales, 16, Veronica Perez, 14, and her cousin Yesenia Perez, 15.

Meanwhile, investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board continued to search for clues into the Thursday accident that injured at least 63 others.

For residents in this migrant farm area, however, the day was spent at funerals for the victims who drowned when their bus plunged into a water-filled pit after colliding with a truck.

Many who attended the Mass at San Juan del Valle, about 15 miles from this border town of 3,700, did not know the girls but said they felt like they had lost some neighbors.

Rosie Gutierrez, 25, of McAllen, said she attended because "it felt like it was part of us. It felt like it was part of my family."

Quevada asked the mourners "not to wait for another tragedy for the opportunity to be close and loving to each other."

At another crowded Mass at St. Paul's Catholic Church in nearby Mission, about 400 family members and friends remembered Michael Saenz, 14, and his brother, David, 12.

Michael had escaped moments after the bus plunged into a water-filled pit, but died while trying to save his younger brother and others trapped in the submerged bus.

The Rev. Jerry Frank told the congregation that before the two boys left home Thursday morning, they kissed their mother good-bye, as they had on most days before they left for school.

"When they left for the bus, she blew a kiss and said, 'God bless you, sons,'" Frank said. "God has blessed them."

Frank said the bus tragedy was not God's will, but he asked God to help the community to accept the deaths of the 20 young people.

"We all know that something is terribly wrong and it just ain't right that this terrible tragedy had to happen," Frank said. "It just doesn't fit when the young people die and they carry their future with them before the Lord."

Investigators continued to survey the site and were arranging for aerial photographs they hope will aid in their examination of the contours of the caliche pit.

They also hoped to talk to the truck driver, Ruben Perez, and a passenger in the truck.

"We will be asking the truck driver specifically what he said. Did he have any problems with the brakes? Tell us what you went through at the time of the occurrence," said Lee Dickinson, an NTSB member, said at a late Friday night news conference.

Dickinson said Friday that an investigation initially found no evidence to support Perez's claim the brakes failed when his vehicle and the bus collided. Dickinson said the visual inspection was 90 percent complete and investigators must conduct other tests.

The bus, carrying 86 passengers, careened into a water-filled caliche pit owned by the city of Alton and immediately sank. It was the worst bus accident in Texas and the third worst in the nation's history.

Investigators spent Friday documenting the intersection where the crash happened and did not find any skid marks.

The NTSB found drivers at the intersection can see 150 feet of the intersecting road, Dickinson said. On Sunday, investigators plan to use similar vehicles to try to recreate the events leading up to the accident.

Analysis confirms bomb in UTA crash

PARIS (AP) — Analysis of the black box retrieved from the wreckage of a French airliner confirmed that explosives blew the plane apart above the Tener Desert, killing all 171 people aboard, the government said Saturday.

Examination of the DC-10's flight data and voice recorder "show that the flight proceeded in a normal manner until a total interruption, indicating an in-flight explosion," said a statement from the Transport Ministry.

The announcement signals the start of an intensive search for the individual or group responsible for the bombing Tuesday of UTA Flight 772 en route from Brazzaville, Congo to Paris.

Police are examining the plane's passenger list for suspects, concentrating on nine people who got off in the Chad capital, N'Djamena, the plane's last stop before it exploded over the desert in eastern Niger.

Investigators now will attempt to determine the precise nature of the explosive, where it was located on the aircraft and, most importantly, how it got on board.

The pro-Iranian, Shiite Moslem group Islamic Jihad, based in Lebanon, claimed responsibility for the crash in telephone calls in London and Paris.

The French news agency Agence France-Presse, quoting an unidentified source at the presidential Elysee Palace, said Friday that authorities would focus their manhunt among the "Shiite network" in Africa.

Ash-Shiraa, a Beirut weekly, quoted Islamic militants loyal to Iran earlier this week as charging France with reneging on a 1988 deal that resulted in the release of three French hostages held in Lebanon. The newspaper said the militants were planning attacks on French interests in Africa.

France continues to deny making any deal for the hostages, beyond agreeing to restore diplomatic relations with Iran.

Nevertheless, recurring reports in the French press detail a deal in which France secured release of the hostages by agreeing to free Anis Naccache, a pro-Iranian Lebanese terrorist serving a life sentence for attempting to murder former Iranian Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar in France in 1980.

French soldiers and military doctors working at the wreckage site were to begin airlifting the bodies of victims to Agadez, a village in central Niger.

A tour of Pampa's Meals on Wheels for the United Way

Editor's Note: Pampa's annual United Way fundraising drive is now in full swing. Many local employers are introducing employees to the United Way agencies by allowing them to go on a United Way tour. These tours are available by calling the United Way office at 669-1001. For those Pampans who may not have an opportunity to personally visit these agencies, The Pampa News has put together a series of Sunday articles featuring United Way programs that will be published during the coming weeks of the campaign. First stop on the "tour" is Pampa's Meals on Wheels.

Visitors to Pampa's Meals on Wheels go to the east entrance to the basement of First United Methodist Church. Inside they'll probably find Director Ann Loter instructing a volunteer about a route that is to be delivered.

To their left is the church kitchen, fragrant with the smells of home-cooked food soon to be left at the doors of the Meals on Wheels clients. Volunteers bustle about, packing the heat-retaining disposable plates filled with a meat, two vegetables, a bread and dessert, and placing them in a thermal-type chest for delivery by more volunteers.

Director Ann Loter is assisted by Donna Powell and Juanice Ferguson. Addie Richey and Gloria Norris prepare the meals, even those that require special handling such as bland, diabetic, and low cholesterol.

Volunteer drivers deliver each of the routes consisting of nine or 10 clients. It takes an hour or less to complete a route. Meals are delivered beginning at 11 a.m. five days a week, except for holidays.

Meals on Wheels is intended as a non-profit, non-governmental program providing the delivery of well-balanced, nourishing meals for older persons or those who are handicapped and unable to prepare such a meal for themselves.

Through this service, many people who might otherwise be unable to stay in their home are able to do so. The underlying objective of Meals on Wheels is to help the elderly and handicapped remain healthy and thus be able to live in their own homes as long as possible.

Contact between caring volunteers and the clients is another invaluable part of this service, vital to the physical and mental well-being of the clients.

Anyone who is homebound due to illness, handicaps or advancing age and are unable to prepare a balanced meal for themselves can receive these meals. The price is $2.25 per meal if they can afford to pay. Some people are not able to pay anything, but they receive the meals anyway through the support of such programs as the United Way.

Meals on Wheels began during World War II in England. The British Red Cross and the Women's Voluntary Service served meals to the elderly whose homes had been bombed by the Germans. This service was extended to the United States in Philadelphia in 1954. It came to Pampa in 1978, with 45 meals being served daily. Today, Pampa's Meals on Wheels has grown to an average of 185 meals delivered each day.

In addition to the daily contact from volunteers, Meals on Wheels clients are also treated to a flower and cake on their birthdays. Local florists donate the flowers, and the cakes are baked and decorated by Barret Baptist WMU.

Anyone who is aware of someone who could benefit from Meals on Wheels or who would like to become a volunteer may call Loter or Powell at 669-1007.

Meals on Wheels volunteers such as these come to work early each day to pack the hot lunches for the program's elderly and handicapped clients.

Director Ann Loter tells volunteer Eva Dennis what route she would be delivering.

Juanice Ferguson assists Loter in many ways, including keeping up with Meals on Wheels food inventory.

Soviets help break impasse over nuke arms talks with U.S.

JACKSON HOLE, Wyo. (AP) — The Soviet Union is dropping its insistence that curbs on the Star Wars missile defense be completed before a Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, breaking an impasse over talks to slash long-range nuclear weapons arsenals, says a senior U.S. official.

The announcement came at the end of a day of talks Friday led by Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in which they neared agreement on an accord to open each other's underground nuclear tests to on-site inspection.

The foreign ministers were concluding their talks at the Rocky Mountain lodge Saturday, with expectations high that they would set a target date for a summit between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The foreign secretaries also made progress toward several other arms control agreements they were expected to sign before heading to New York on Sunday for a United Nations meeting.

A senior U.S. official, speaking on condition that he not be further identified, said the Soviet agreement to separate negotiations on the Star Wars missile defense system and START talks breaks a four-year deadlock on the issue.

"Minister Shevardnadze said they had dropped their linkage between completing and implementing in START and achieving a defense in space accord," said the official.

Until now, said the official, "the Soviets have said they would not want to enter into a START agreement until there was an understanding on defense in space."

A Soviet spokesman, Boris Malakhov, said there would be no immediate Soviet response to the American comments.

The agreement on on-site inspections would clear the way for Senate ratification of two U.S.-Soviet treaties that were signed in 1974 and 1976. The pacts have been observed by both sides, but they have never agreed on how to monitor them.

Details on the agreements were left to be resolved after Friday's session, said a second senior U.S. official.

Despite the friendly atmosphere, the two sides remained divided over the major negotiation before them, START.

Shevardnadze presented the Americans with what one Soviet official called "exhilarating" proposals to clear a main obstacle to START, an agreement on adherence to the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. That pact curbs development of space-based defenses such as the Strategic Defense Initiative, as the Star Wars plan is formally known.

Famed songwriter Irving Berlin dies

By VERENA DOBNIK
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Irving Berlin, the Russian cantor's son whose songs such as "Cheek to Cheek," "Easter Parade," "White Christmas" and "God Bless America" became the essence of American music, has died at age 101.

"He's been so much a part of all of us, of all ages, over all the many years," said composer-conductor Morton Gould, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Berlin died in his sleep at his Manhattan town house Friday afternoon, said his son-in-law, Alton E. Peters. Asked if Berlin had been ill, Peters said, "No, he was 101 years old. ... He just fell asleep."

An actor, singer, and songwriter, Berlin began his career in the early days of vaudeville and his songs for a time so dominated the stage and screen that the late composer, Jerome Kern, said: "Berlin has no place in American music. He is American music."

In a musical career that began with a job as a singing waiter, Berlin wrote nearly 1,000 songs, from his first big hit, "Alexander's Ragtime Band" in 1911, to "Puttin' on the Ritz," which was revived in 1983 by the Dutch singer Taco and was a hit on the rock charts.

Berlin was an immigrant Russian whose "God Bless America" became the nation's unofficial second national anthem. A Jew, his "White Christmas" and "Easter Parade" became Christian holiday traditions.

"American music was born at his piano," violinist Isaac Stern said on Berlin's 100th birthday.

Berlin played the piano by ear and never stopped making what he described as "songs with heart." Even in his 90s, he talked of adding yet another musical to his credits, which included 19 stage musicals and 15 movie scores.

Berlin, along with 11 other American immigrants, received a medal from President Reagan during the Statue of Liberty centennial celebrations in July 1986.

Reagan the actor was featured in the mammoth, flag-waving 1943 movie musical This Is the Army, with songs from Berlin.

"Nancy and I are deeply saddened by the death of a wonderfully talented man whose musical genius delighted and stirred millions, and will live on forever," Reagan said.

He was mourned by artists from across the spectrum of American music.

"Irving Berlin was the greatest Tin Pan Alley songwriter," said opera singer Robert Merrill, who also sings Berlin's songs. "He was not a great musician but he had a great ear and he had a feeling for melody and words that was precious."

The biggest names on Broadway played in his musical successes, which began in the World War I era with Watch Your Step, starring Irene and Vernon Castle, and ran through such post-World War II hits as Annie Get Your Gun and Call Me Madam, both with Ethel Merman.

"A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," one of many Berlin wrote for the Ziegfeld Follies, became the unofficial theme song for every Ziegfeld extravaganza.

Farmers co-ops showing healthy signs of business again

By NELSON ANTOSH
Houston Chronicle

BRYAN (AP) — Like a scene from a country feed store of long ago, people arrive by the hundreds on a typical Saturday morning at the loading dock at the Producers Co-op in Bryan to buy sacks of feed for their livestock.

The difference is that the sacks now are made of paper rather than cotton prints, and the buyers are more likely to be part-time farmers using only their time off from work.

Add fertilizer, fuel, veterinary supplies, dog food, ant bait and an assortment of other farm-type goods sold by Producers Co-Op, and you have a business that topped $14 million last year. That was a hefty increase from the $11.7 million of 1987.

Business is improving, and this year, the farmer-owned co-op is expected to report an all-time high in sales and profits, according to general manager Len Howry.

Producers Co-Op shares the turnaround with many of the state's approximately 400 such entities.

Nationally, the Agriculture Department says farmer co-ops are showing healthy signs after incurring financial setbacks during the early and middle 1980s.

Preliminary figures from 50 of the nation's 100 largest co-ops show total revenues in 1988 were up by 9 percent from 1987, while profits were up 28 percent. "In somewhat dramatic fashion, farmer co-ops continued their recovery from the agricultural recession of the 1980s," said Michael Kane, an economist for the USDA's Agricultural Cooperative Service.

The 100 largest had total revenues of nearly $46.9 billion, up 9 percent but still below the $58 billion record established in 1981. Profits were $920 million and would have exceeded $1 billion but for losses in petroleum refining.

The Producers comeback is because of different factors than in most co-ops. Its membership is not typical of many of the state's cooperatives. The Bryan co-op's 1986 slump was related to the collapse of the oil economy rather than troubles with the farm economy.

Producers turned around by branching out and aggressively going after market share, while the others did it by riding an improving farm and ranch economy.

The business volume at Producers Co-op is coming back from 1986, a bad year that was blamed on the oil bust. Wealthy landowners suddenly found they didn't have the cash to spend on their weekend showplaces. The revenue decline of nearly $3 million from 1985 was the first of any significance since the co-op began in 1943.

The Bryan-based co-op is the largest in Texas in terms of membership, with nearly 6,000 members in a 19-county area stretching from the northern edge of Houston to Marlin, in central Texas. A more typical co-op would have 200 to 300 members.

In order to become a member, one must buy a share of common stock and be approved by the board. To be a voting member, one must produce an agricultural product for the purpose of selling it. The operation's profits are distributed as "patronage refunds."

Historically, Producer's primary customers have been cattlemen, dairymen and horsemen. It has begun soliciting cotton farmers along the Brazos River as a new customer group.

Co-ops are a varied group, but the basic types are supply co-ops such as the one in Bryan and marketing co-ops like the San Antonio-based Associated Milk Producers Inc. The rice industry lost a large co-op last year when American Rice Inc. of Houston changed its charter to become a publicly traded company.

There also are co-ops that provide a service, such as cotton gins. Not surprisingly, co-ops in the Lubbock area have done well in the last two years because of bumper cotton crops, says Tommy Engelke of Austin, associate vice president of the Texas Agricultural Cooperative Council.

The financial results of co-ops tend to be volume-sensitive, says Robert Bergsten, region manager for the Austin office of CoBank, which helps finance co-ops. This means they are still profiting from last year's good crops but have less to look forward to in 1990.

The national CoBank, of which Bergsten is a part, reported net income of $21.5 million for the second quarter and $54.1 million for the six months ended June 30. CoBank was formed Jan. 1 by consolidating the 11 Banks for Cooperatives.

"We're well on the way to surpassing our original goal of matching the $68 million of 1988 combined earnings of the 11 merged banks," said President W.M. Harding in Denver.

Approximately 40 percent of Texas' farm co-ops are in the South Plains and Panhandle because the area is so intensively farmed, said Ed Smith, a Texas A&M economist. The region has vast acreage planted in cotton, grain sorghum and wheat.

Because of mergers and consolidations, there has been a decline in the number of co-ops across the state. Some people have erroneously interpreted this to mean co-ops were losing ground in agribusiness activity, said Smith. "Their market share has held in the 25 to 30 percent range. There are fewer but larger firms," he said.

Law permits farm co-ops to make up to 49 percent of their sales to non-members. "Why not solicit the urban customers?" asks Howry. The Bryan-College Station area is rapidly growing.

The board is considering putting in a lawn and garden shop. Producers already sells fruit trees off its parking lot in the winter planting season. And although it operates a big feed mill geared to volume, it will sell feed by the scoop for those with a few chickens.

Producers is one of the largest co-op sellers of pet food in the United States, said Howry. "We've got the ranchers, and ranchers always have dogs," he said.

Susan Ratzlaff joins agents of Coldwell Banker Realty

Jannie Lewis, broker, has announced the appointment of native Pampa Susan Ratzlaff as an agent with Coldwell Banker Action Realty.

"We are pleased to have Susan joining our team," Lewis said. "She has a fine knowledge of this community and can be of great help to newcomers."

Ratzlaff attended elementary school in Pampa but graduated from high school in Liberal, Kan. She enrolled in Clarendon College and later married Randy Ratzlaff. They are members of the Central Baptist Church in Pampa.

She is the mother of five children: Tracy, 19; Dustin, 15; K'Lee, 13; Nikki, 11, and Jennifer, 9. She said the children are now old enough to allow her to take the time to study and become a real estate salesperson.

"I am really thrilled to be associated with Coldwell Banker Action Realty," she said. "It is sort of 'family oriented,' and I enjoy the friendliness that comes from close relationships."

Susan Ratzlaff

Bucks honor past champions

WHITE DEER — When the tarpaulin covering White Deer's state championship monument was removed, an estimated crowd of 300 let go with a thunderous applause. The "oohs" and "aahs" seemed to go on forever.

It was an impressive sight, indeed. Imbedded in the Texas-shaped marble monument were three plaques inscribed with the names of the players, coaches and managers who were members of the Bucks' 1958 and '88 state championship football teams and the '62 state championship basketball team. The name "White Deer" adorned the upper southwest corner.

Jim Weatherall, a two-time All-

America at the University of Oklahoma and a White Deer native, cut the ribbon surrounding the eight-by-ten-foot structure during Friday's ceremony on the high school grounds.

"It took me by surprise when I was asked to do this. It's a great thing for the town of White Deer," Weatherall said.

Carl McAdams, another OU All-American from White Deer, was invited to the ceremony, but was unable to attend because of a prior commitment.

Weatherall's name isn't on the monument while McAdams, who later played for the New York Jets of the National Football League, is listed as a member of the state championship basketball team.

"We never even won district when I played, but we did have a bunch of good players," said Weatherall, who played for the Bucks in the late 1940s. "Phillips was the powerhouse back in those days and Panhandle was our biggest rival."

Weatherall played a number of years professionally with the Detroit Lions and Philadelphia Eagles. He retired in 1962 and now lives in Oklahoma City.

"The professional game has really changed, especially the money part of it. Players make more now in training camp than we did the entire season," Weatherall said. "You had to love the game because you could go out and find almost any job that paid more."

Weatherall said the average salary for an NFL player in the 1950s was $6,000. Today, it's $195,000.

Recalling his high school athletic career, Weatherall said one of his most memorable moments came when White Deer beat Borger, a much bigger school.

"We were playing in the Borger stadium, which was a big, big place then and we had 15, maybe 17 players," Weatherall said. "Before the game, we were all in a huddle in the middle of the field and all these Borger players came out in brand-new flashy red uniforms and started circling the field on us. They kept going around and around, laughing and pointing at us. We had on old uniforms which hung pretty bad on us, but we were still proud of them. We ended up winning 13-7."

David Sharp, White Deer Superintendent of Schools, served as master of ceremonies.

The 7,000-pound monument was constructed by Steve Thomas, whose son Zach plays for the Bucks' football team. Another son, Bart, quarterbacked last year's state championship squad.

"Every now and then I have a good idea," Thomas said.

White Deer residents would certainly agree.

Winless 'Skins roll into Dallas

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) — NFL education of Jimmy Johnson, Chapter Three: The Washington Redskins' rivalry.

The Dallas Cowboys rookie head coach is still looking for his first regular season victory. He couldn't have a more difficult foe on Sunday to earn it.

Not only do the 'Skins hate their division rivals, but they arrive in Texas Stadium for the noon clash without a victory.

Their 0-2 record ties the NFC Eastern division contenders with the cellar-dwelling Cowboys, who had the worst record in the NFL at 3-13 in coach Tom Landry's final campaign.

"We're very disappointed," said Washington coach Joe Gibbs. "We're down a little. We played hard in two games at home and still lost. We're in the same boat with Dallas. Both of us need a morale booster."

Gibbs said the Washington-Dallas rivalry isn't dead because Landry and former Cowboys club president Tex Schramm are gone.

"It's still a very important rivalry," Gibbs said. "The Cowboys' new organization has a lot of excitement going. It's really a tough situation for us to try to rebound in."

Johnson said he kept up with the rivalry while he was a coach at Oklahoma State and the University of Miami.

"I use to watch the Dallas-Washington rivalry because it was an exciting one," Johnson said. "There were some great games over the years. I think I'll have a few more anxious moments for this game because of the rivalry of the past."

He even asked the Cowboys' public relations department to pin a Redskins' jersey to the bulletin board in the club's locker room.

"I just wanted to remind them we were playing the Redskins," Johnson said.

Gibbs and Johnson were assistant coaches for about a month in 1973 at the University of Arkansas before Gibbs went to the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I was going to work under Jimmy on the defense and I went to two or three meetings before the Cardinals called," Gibbs said. "I was impressed with him, his wife, and his family."

Johnson said Gibbs "has done a fantastic job. He has made as much an impact in a short period of time as any coach in the NFL."

Johnson said he fears the Redskins' running game will be hard to stop.

"They'll try to run it down our throat and we'll have to stop them to win," said Johnson. "We may blitz more than we have in any game and take some chances on defense."

Facing Washington will be former Redskins' tackle Dean Hamel, who was cut by Gibbs.

"I would have rather traded Dean out of the division," Gibbs said. "But the Cowboys made the best offer for him. He's a very competitive guy and plays hard."

Gerald Riggs, who rushed for a club-record 221 yards on 29 attempts in a 42-37 loss to Philadelphia last week, will be looking for redemption after a costly fumble which led to the Eagles' winning touchdown.

Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde couldn't have staged a more dichotomous first half of football than Friday's District 1-4A clash between Pampa and Dumas.

During the opening period, Pampa produced only 14 yards of offense and yielded nine unanswered points, showing a side of its personality that, until Friday, had not surfaced this season.

But the Harvesters underwent a metamorphosis in the second quarter that left them unrecognizable. In the space of seven minutes, Pampa posted three back-to-back touchdowns to ignite a 29-9 victory before 5,000 fans at Harvester Stadium.

For the Harvesters, there was no real mystery surrounding their poor performance in the early going. After two consecutive emotionally charged games, the fever was simply not there this week.

"That kind of thing is going to happen," said Pampa coach Dennis Cavalier. "You can't maintain that high all the time. I talked to them about that all day — I just didn't feel that usual excitement or see that look in their eyes today (Friday)."

"I felt like we played tentatively — we were more conservative than we have been."

That refrain was echoed by the Harvester players:

"We had a real emotional game against Amarillo High, and we were down all week in practice," said wingback Wayne Cavanaugh, who scored Pampa's first two touchdowns to set the pace for the action-packed second period.

Junior tailback Quincy Williams, the game's leading ground gainer with 128 yards and one touchdown, agreed.

"We weren't really ready to play Dumas," he said. "We thought they'd be easy. They were pretty tough, though."

Indeed, the Demons came prepared to play, although their luck ran out after the first 12 minutes.

On the last play of the first quarter, Dumas quarterback Samuel Strayhorn, who was sidelined at halftime with a shoulder injury, reached tight end Larry Pirkle in the end zone for a six-yard scoring strike and a 9-0 Demon advantage.

But Pampa's turnaround was swift once the second period began.

The Harvesters took over on their own 35. Nine plays and 34 yards later, they had marched methodically to the Dumas 31. A Demon personal foul bumped Pampa up to the 16, and quarterback James Bybee sailed the ball to Cavanaugh on the next play to put the Harvesters on the scoreboard.

Sophomore defensive tackle Phillip Sexton made mincemeat of Dumas' ensuing possession, dropping Strayhorn for a two-yard loss, then deflecting a pass on the next play, Pampa linebacker Guy Savage gobbled up the homeless ball at the Dumas 17.

Three plays later, Cavanaugh wove ten yards through the Demon defense and crossed the goal line standing up. Shannon Cook's kick made it 14-9, Pampa.

"Wayne (Cavanaugh) is just as steady and consistent as anybody you could want. He really has a knack for seeing that daylight," Cavalier said of the Pampa junior, who has four touchdowns, 124 yards rushing and 106 receiving to his credit this season. He has also scored two touchdowns that were called back by penalties, one a 65-yard reception in Canyon and the other a 69-yard catch against Dumas.

After surrendering two quick touchdowns, Dumas drove 56 yards to the Pampa 24, spurred on by Sammy Escarciga's 24-yard pass reception and a 12-yard defensive pass interference call. On his last play of the night, Strayhorn lofted a pass that was snared at the 15 by Harvester cornerback Brandon Knutson, who returned it 85 yards for a touchdown.

Pampa used only four plays from scrimmage to go from a 0-9 deficit to a 21-9 lead.

Strayhorn was nailed by a Pampa blocker as he pursued Knutson on the interception, marking the end of the game for the Dumas quarterback and for the Demons in general.

"We played real well for a long time, but we got hurt by injuries," said Dumas coach John Patterson, whose Demons fell to 0-2-1 overall and 0-1 in district. "Pampa's a good team, so they took advantage of that."

"I felt like we had them going for the first half, really. We had it down ready to score right before halftime. If we score, we take the lead into the locker room — instead, we threw a bad pass."

The fact that it was Pampa, not Dumas, that scored in the final moments of the second quarter was an inspiration to Cavalier.

"Up until this year, it was uncanny how every team would score on us right at halftime," he said. "This team turned the tables tonight."

Pampa managed one more touchdown late in the fourth quarter. The Harvesters took possession at their own 36 and used eight plays to get to the Dumas 9. Quincy Williams capped the series with a TD run on the next play, and Bybee hit Barry Coffee in the end zone for the two-point conversion.

"I'm really glad we could come off that emotional high and still play decently," said Cavalier, whose Harvesters improved to 2-1 overall and 1-0 in district. "Even when we fell behind, we were able to keep our poise."

Canadian climbs to 3-0

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

CANADIAN — Canadian shrugged off a penalty-riddled first half and made Friday night a happy homecoming with a 28-8 win over Spearman.

For the 3-0 Wildcats, 65 yards in first-half penalties hardly seemed to phase them. Canadian's 53-defense just held Spearman in its grip until the offensive machinery could get unclogged.

"Our offense wasn't in the groove, but we have so many different snap counts it makes us more susceptible to penalties," said Canadian coach Paul Wilson. "However, our defense played exceptionally well, just the way they have all year long."

The Wildcats did get on the board before the flags starting flying.

On their first possession, the Wildcats drove 59 yards in four tries with Ty Hardin scoring on a 12-yard sweep. Brad Harris, who has been hampered by a toe injury for the past three weeks, put the Wildcats in scoring position with a 38-yard scamper.

"Brad is still hurting a little bit," Wilson said. "He was stumbling around because he's wearing so much foam rubber inside his shoes. It's hard for him to keep his balance."

Harris still managed to pick up 42 yards on six tries, second only to Hardin's 46 yards on seven attempts in the Wildcat rushing department.

Meanwhile, Canadian's defense didn't allow Spearman past the Wildcat 45-yard stripe and limited the Lynx to only 16 yards total offense the first half.

"Our linebackers (Joe Brent Brewster, Dewayne Evans and Jared Lee) filled up the holes real well. If they keep playing defense like that, I'm not going to have any gripes."

Spearman could find no place to run against an aggressive Wildcat line and quarterback Edward Mayfield didn't have enough time to loosen up Canadian's defense through the airways. He completed only one of four passes for 11 yards and was sacked three times. Lee, a 200-pound senior, picked off one of Mayfield's passes.

Canadian's hurry-up offense added two second-quarter scores to build a 21-0 lead at halftime.

The Wildcats needed only five plays to chalk up their two TDs, with the first coming on quarterback Shane Lloyd's 56-yard scoring strike to end Larry Dunnam. The 150-pound Dunnam made an outstanding fingertip grab of Lloyd's low pass on Spearman's 35 and outran the secondary to the end zone.

Lloyd, who threw four touchdown passes in Canadian's 24-13 win over Sanford-Fritch last week, had a 4-of-12 passing night for 95 yards. The Wildcats had 277 yards in total offense compared to 150 for the visitors.

Canadian's next tally came with just 34 seconds to go in the first half and was set up on Harris' 20-yard punt return to Spearman's 15. A pass interference penalty on the Lynx, just their second infraction of the half, proved costly on the next play. Hardin then picked up six yards to Spearman's one, followed by Paige Ford's plunge across the goal line.

The Wildcats pushed across their final TD on their first possession of the third quarter on Seth Crouch's nine-yard run after only a four-play, 36-yard drive.

"We made some adjustments on our blocking schemes the second half which helped us out," Wilson said. "I felt like we played pretty good offensively even though we were ragged at times. I'm real proud of the kids."

Spearman, 1-2, scored in the fourth quarter on a 44-yard run by Tim Dooley, who paced all rushers with 70 yards on 19 steps.

Canadian visits Boys Ranch for an 8 p.m. game next Friday night.

Lady Harvesters defeat Dunbar

Pampa defeated Lubbock Dunbar, 15-1, 15-11, in District 1-4A volleyball action Saturday at McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Lady Harvesters climbed to 2-2 in conference play and 6-11 overall. Dunbar fell to 0-4 and 3-13.

Kandi Winton led Pampa in the first game with nine serves, while teammates Kelly Winborne and Jennifer Massick had three apiece. Leslie Bailey sparked the Lady Harvesters' net play with five kills.

"We came out and set the ball and allowed Leslie to be our main offensive threat," said Pampa coach Mike Lopez. "We had some good sets for her to be able to get five kills."

Pampa scored four points in the second game before the Lady Matadors managed to get on the scoreboard. Rochelle Pritchard came to the rescue, scoring nine straight points to put the Lady Harvesters on top, 14-5.

"Then we allowed them to come back," Lopez said. "We lost our motivation and had a tendency to stand around. They came back, 14-10, then 14-11. We finally got the winning point when Rocky (Pritchard) dinked one over the net."

Pampa hosts Borger on Parents' Night, this Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. Parents of the volleyball players will be honored before the game, with a reception scheduled for after the game in the athletic field house.

Pampa sports roundup

Cross country

HEREFORD — Brooke Hamby and Alberto Carrillo of the Pampa High School cross country teams each finished in the top 20 Saturday at the Hereford Invitational Meet.

Hamby, who trimmed nine seconds off her time from last week, placed 10th overall with a time of 13:59 over the two-mile course. She paced the Pampa girls team, which finished eighth out of ten teams with 191 points.

Carrillo was 15th overall in the boys three-mile race with a time of 16:28. He paced the Harvesters, who improved to sixth place after finishing eighth last week against the same teams in Plainview. The boys scored 166 points, 19 less than last week when they were eighth in the team standings.

"We ran a lot better this week," said Pampa coach Mark Elms. "Our times were fantastically better, although our places were about the same."

Both Pampa teams were fourth among District 1-4A schools.

"We're still down the ladder in our district," Elms continued. "We're not up in the top two teams yet, but it's still early, and we hope to grab hold of some people.

"We ran the same course (in Hereford) last year as we did this year, and the kids who ran here last year all improved their times, some by as much as a minute-and-a-half."

Randall, the defending 4A boys state champion, posted 32 points to win its third straight meet. Amarillo High was second with 39. Roger Krueger of Randall was first overall with a time of 14:42.

The Amarillo High girls scored 68 to edge out Lubbock Coronado, which had won the previous two meets. Coronado finished with 72 points.

Other Pampa runners and their times include Steve Hawkins, 17:15; Matt Hawkins 17:49; Aaron Lopez, 17:56; Todd McCavit 18:05; Donnie Medley, 19:17; Susie Perez 15:05; Ginger Elms, 15:06; Teresa Organ, 15:26; and Holly Snider, 15:38.

Pampa will run at Thompson Park in Amarillo next Saturday. The girls junior varsity race begins at 10 a.m., followed by boys JV at 10:20, girls varsity at 10:40 and boys varsity at 11.

Tennis

The Pampa High School tennis team knocked off yet another foe

Saturday, the Borger Bulldogs, in District 1-4A action at the PHS courts.

Both the boys and girls won by scores of 8-1 for a 16-2 team victory.

"This may have been the best I've seen us play all year," said Pampa coach Jay Barrett, whose Harvesters improved to 5-1 on the season and 2-1 in district. "Every time we step out on the court, we seem to only get better and better."

"If we play as well as we played today (Saturday), getting to regionals is just a matter of time."

Pampa needs four more wins to advance to regionals. Estacado, which defeated Borger 10-8 earlier this season, is the primary obstacle in the Harvesters' bid for the play-offs.

After an open date on Tuesday, Pampa travels to Levelland next Saturday. Matches begin at 1 p.m.

See today's Scoreboard on Page 11 for results of Saturday's matches.

Volleyball clinic

Pampa will host a volleyball referees clinic Wednesday, Sept. 27, at McNeely Fieldhouse beginning at 7 p.m.

All interested parties are urged to attend the clinic, which is free and certifies the participant to judge high school volleyball games.

Europeans hold Ryder Cup lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

SUTTON COLDFIELD, England (AP) — A spectacular rally by unheralded Englishmen Howard Clark and Mark James against America's best provided Europe with a two-point lead Saturday going into the final round of the Ryder Cup matches.

The two-point swing they engineered against U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange and PGA title-holder Payne Stewart delivered the second emotionally crushing blow in as many days to the once-hopeful American squad.

Friday, it was a 4-0 blitz in the afternoon foursomes that put the Americans in a catch-up position in the biennial matches they ruled so long.

With rookies Paul Azinger and Chip Beck leading the way, the Americans closed the gap to 8-7 Saturday. Strange and Stewart were 1-up with three holes to play in the only match left in the gathering gloom of early evening.

But James and Clark — responding to near-hysterical encouragement from a gallery of about 25,000 — won two of the last three holes to score a 1-up victory.

It left the Europeans needing only five points from Sunday's 12 singles matches (each match is worth one point) to retain the cup on a tie.

"It was disappointing at the end," American captain Ray Floyd said. "That's obvious. We felt most of the day we were going to win three points in the afternoon..."

"I don't think that two points is insurmountable and my players don't think so. We have a very good attitude," Floyd said.

European captain Tony Jacklin said, "We've still got a long way to go, but to turn that game around was sensational."

"The tension during the last holes of play was incredible. That was real pressure-cooker stuff. As a captain, I was amazed to get 2 and 2 (in the afternoon matches) when it seemed 3 and 1," Jacklin said.

SMU succumbs to Longhorns, 45-13

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist didn't go peacefully.

The overmatched and underexperienced Mustangs fought heavily favored Texas to a standstill for a half on Saturday before succumbing 45-13 to the 36 1/2-point favorite Longhorns in a Southwest Conference game.

A combination of SMU's spunk

— the Mustangs even had a player thrown out for delivering a knockdown punch on a Texas lineman — and the Longhorns' school-record 20 penalties helped until superior strength took over.

There were numerous after-whistle skirmishes, and SMU defensive lineman Kenny Rea was kicked out of the game for punching guard Stan Thomas.

"We're young and I guess they thought they could intimidate us," said SMU coach Forrest Gregg. "We're not going to be intimidated by anybody. They might get whipped but they won't be intimidated. They are the biggest bunch of people I've ever seen. You can line up a pro team with them."

SMU defensive end Uzo Okeke agreed with Gregg.

"They came out to intimidate us like they could push us around," Okeke said. "They were talking to us bad. They disrespected us all the way." Texas coach David McWilliams said, "You've got to give SMU credit. They did a great job. What I noticed about them was they were aggressive."

SMU wide receiver Mike Bowen said at least the Mustangs scared the Longhorns early.

"I'm sure their coach gave them a little talk," Bowen said. "They were supposed to be beating us bad so they probably got yelled at."

Bradstreet hurls Wheeler to narrow victory over Memphis

Wheeler.....15

WHEELER — Senior quarterback Shawn Bradstreet threw two touchdown passes as Wheeler held off Memphis for a 15-6 win Friday night.

Wheeler was leading 8-6 in the third quarter when Bradstreet threw a 24-yard scoring toss to Kelly Aderholt on a fourth and one situation.

Bradstreet, who completed 10 of 18 passes for 160 yards, teamed up with Kyle Sword on a 47-yard pass play in the first quarter to give the Mustangs the early lead.

A safety gave Wheeler an 8-0 lead at halftime.

Brian Brown broke loose on a 58-scoring run to pull Memphis to 8-6 in the third quarter.

Michael Kinney was Wheeler's top rusher with 100 yards in 24 attempts.

"It feels good to win one again," said coach Ronnie Karcher, whose Mustangs lost to Shamrock 21-17 last week.

Sword, Bradstreet, Ronnie Hungate and Arthur Altamirano led a Wheeler defense which forced three fumbles and three interceptions.

Wheeler is now 3-1 on the season while Memphis dropped to 1-2. The Mustangs travel to Quanah next Friday night with the game starting at 8 p.m.

over Miami in six-man action Friday night.

Both teams were 2-0 going into the game.

The Tigers were led by Tres Hess, who rushed for 146 yards on 14 carries and scored twice. Hess also completed a 29-yard scoring pass to Dennis Hill.

McLean held a 26-6 halftime advantage.

Both Miami TDs were scored by Brock Thompson, who led the Warriors in rushing with 82 yards in seven attempts.

McLean collected 439 yards in total offense while holding Miami to 193. The Tigers had 18 first downs compared to seven for the Warriors.

"We played a good defensive game, especially in the second half," said McLean coach Jerry Miller. "The entire team played well, but I thought Tuffy Sanders was exceptional. He had a lot of tackles."

McLean, ranked No. 8 in the state by the Associated Press, hosts Harrold at 7:30 p.m. next Friday night.

yards on the ground, also threw two TD passes to Mickey Nunn covering 50 and 35 yards.

The game ended due to the 45-point rule with 38 seconds remaining in the third quarter.

Nunn rushed for 81 yards as Lefors totaled 521 yards in offense against Alamo Catholic, which was playing its first game.

Kevin Mayfield, along with Nunn, broke Roberson loose with several key blocks.

"Roberson didn't have to juke very much. Mayfield was just like a lawnmower out there and Nunn also blocked well," said Lefors coach Dale Means.

Lefors is 2-1 on the season and hosts Follett at 7:30 p.m. next Friday night.

WHITE DEER — White Deer celebrated football homecoming and snapped a two-game losing streak in the process with a 22-15 win Friday night over Clarendon.

Jerod Cox scored on a one-yard run late in the fourth quarter to give the Bucks a come-from-behind victory over Clarendon, which remains winless at 0-3.

White Deer was trailing 15-14 with two minutes remaining when Cox plunged across the goal line for the winning score. Troy Cummins then threw to Allen Mercer for the two-point conversion.

White Deer scored first on a one-yard run by Cummins in the second quarter, but Clarendon came back to knot the score when the Broncos recovered a fumble in the Bucks' end zone.

Terry Sargent staked White Deer to a 14-7 halftime lead on a one-run TD run.

In the third quarter, Clarendon recovered a White Deer fumble and went for the go-ahead points on a two-yard run by Michael Adams and Che Shadle's two-point conversion pass to Randy Allen.

Sparked by a 60-yard run by Cummins and a 20-yard scamper by Daniel Gillespie, the Bucks drove for the winning score late in the fourth quarter.

Cummins' was White Deer's top ground gainer with 127 yards on 19 steps. Stephen Urbanczyk added 81 yards on 19 tries.

White Deer, 1-2, travels to Spearman next Friday night with the game kicking off at 7:30 p.m.

Mojo, Bearcats best in the land

By GAYLON KRIZAK
The Odessa American

many 5A schools in this part of the state.

ODESSA (AP) — Entering the final season of the decade, a pair of mirror-image programs — Odessa Permian and Pilot Point high schools — have compiled the state's best football records in the 1980s. Permian's nine-year mark of 106-11-6 (.886) gives the District 4-5A powerhouse Panthers the most wins of any University Interscholastic League high school. "When people used to ask me why we were always so good, I'd say making a good football team is like making a cake: you have to have just the right ingredients at just the right time," said John Wilkins, athletic director of the Ector County Independent School District.

Coaches at the two schools have the added pressure of dealing with the legacy of popular, successful predecessors.

Gaines, who had been a Permian assistant and was head coach in Class 4A Monahans, took over at Permian in 1986 for Wilkins, who won 148 games in 13 seasons and took the Panthers to four state championship games.

Gaines' first team went 7-2 and missed the playoffs — the only Permian team to do so this decade — and the Panthers have not won an outright 4-5A championship nor beaten arch-rival Midland Lee in his three seasons. He is 30-7-1 at Permian with consecutive semifinal finishes.

Wilkins coached the Panthers — the Mojo — to the Class 5A championship in 1980 and a co-championship in 1984.

"How you use the ingredients determines who makes the better cake," Wilkins said.

The Mojo is slightly behind Class 2A Pilot Point in winning percentage. Pilot Point's 105-10-5 mark gives the 10-2A school an 896 percentage in the decade. In that time, the Bearcats, like Permian, won one state championship (1981) and tied for another (1980).

"Because I'd been an aide here before, I wasn't completely blinded by what the expectations here were, so I think that helped," Gaines said.

"We knew coming in there was no way we could do anything here that hadn't been done before, so our objective had to be to maintain the level of play people had come to expect."

"We've been fortunate to have some great athletes," fourth-year Pilot Point coach Jerry Jones said.

"But this is also a magnet community in a lot of ways. We're close to the metro area — Denton, Dallas — so we used to get a few move-ins, and there are some attractive industries."

In all, eight schools have reached the 100-win mark for the decade, with another six recording 90 victories or more. Forty-one schools have won 81 games or more, or an average of at least nine victories per season.

Jones, too, was an assistant under his predecessor, G.A. Moore. Jr. After leaving in 1982 to start a program from scratch at Class A Maypearl, Jones returned to Pilot Point when Moore left for Class 5A Sherman. Moore stayed at Sherman for two seasons before returning to Class 2A Celina, where he started his coaching career.

"There was tremendous pressure when I first came in here," said Jones, who is 30-6-3 in three years and has not missed the playoffs.

Refugio and Houston Yates (103), Daingerfield (102), Plano (101) and Littlefield and Converse Judson (100) have also reached the 100-win mark in nine seasons. Of those, only Littlefield in Class 3A has failed to win a state championship, although the Wildcats were runners-up to Refugio in 1982.

"When Coach Moore went to Sherman, a lot of the fans here were such true believers in him that they bought Sherman tickets and went to Sherman games instead of ours. We even had a couple of kids transfer over there to play for him."

The two schools atop the list have discovered that success can make potential opponents a little wary. Permian, for example, will host Marshall — located 501 miles away — from District 13-5A to complete a home-and-home series this season, and Jones said Pilot Point may have to reach into Oklahoma for non-district competition next season.

"The Lubbock schools won't play us, and in the '60s, the Monterey-Permian game was a natural because of the close proximity," fourth-year Permian coach Gary Gaines said. "We already play El Paso schools and Amarillo High, and past that, there just aren't that Several schools have a chance to break the state record of 114 victories in a decade, set by Stamford in the 1950s. Permian, for example, needs six victories to reach 115 and has not won fewer than seven games in a season since 1964, while Pilot Point has not won fewer than eight games since 1977.

No school will challenge Waco's state record for winning percentage in a decade (.927 in the 1920s), although Pilot Point would stand fourth all-time at its present pace.

Pampa High School Cheerleaders

Varsity cheerleaders are (from top to bottom) Allyn Schaub, Shellie Doke, Crystal Cook, John Fruge, Stephanie Moore, April Thompson, Cutrice Evans, Belinda Valenzuela (mascot), and Dori Kidwell.

One of the half-time highlights comes when the cheerleaders each grab a handful of mini-footballs and throw them into the stands.

Junior Varsity Cheerleaders are (from the top) Callie Babcock, Shana Greene, Joy Cambren and Leslie Forister.

*If you're yelling for the Harvesters,
Say Go!!!
If you're yelling for the Harvesters,
Say Mean Green!!!
Everybody Go! Mean Green!!!*

I attended my first pep rally in many years recently and was thoroughly enchanted by the innocence and electricity that so many young people can generate.

Before the actual start of the pep rally the classes of '90, '91, '92 and '93 proceeded to out-yell each other with their class cheers and appropriate boing towards younger classmates.

At the opening of the rally, the football team marched in wearing suits and ties (a requirement for game day) and took their place together in the center seats at the fieldhouse, an impressive display of our future business and professional leaders.

Coach Cavalier mentioned the other sports activities going on such as the Rodeo Club and the Volleyball Team, introducing the team captains, then led the football team in their own special "OOH! AH!!" cheer. Coach has some pretty good moves on his own.

Next the cheerleaders presented "The Price Is Right" skit and the afternoon's rally ended with the school song.

The game that evening was valiantly fought though Pampa was defeated on the scoreboard 20 to 16 by Amarillo High.

Responsibilities for the cheerleaders during the school year include painting all posters and banners to decorate the halls the first week of school and for all year. Cheerleaders sell spirit ribbons and pins for every football game, plan and conduct all pep rallies, select the winners of the spirit stick program, and plan the "kiss-a-pig" contest and "sexy leg" contest.

Outside volunteer activities include having a float in the Rodeo parade, being tour guides for the PHS class of '43 reunion, helping Student Council with freshman orientation, keeping scorebooks for the Labor Day golf tournament and performing on the main stage at Chautauqua.

The cheerleaders attended the National Cheerleaders Association cheerleader camp at Northwest Texas State at Denton in July. Varsity cheerleaders were nominated for the award of excellence and received one red and three blue ribbons. Junior varsity cheerleaders were also nominated for an excellence award and received three red and one blue ribbon.

Kay McKoon is cheerleader sponsor this year, her third year at Pampa High School, teaching reading and English. McKoon has a bachelor of science degree in home economics from Kansas State University and a masters of science degree from Emporia State University in education with an area of concentration in reading. McKoon is a member of the Central Baptist Church, church choir, activities director for the singles and assistant Sunday school class secretary. She has one daughter, Marlene.

Meet the Cheerleaders for 1989-90.

She has taken ballet for the past 14 years and has been a member of the Pampa Civic Ballet for eight years. Kidwell has also been active in 4-H. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Kidwell.

Shellie Doke has participated in freshman basketball and volleyball, ran track her junior year and has been a cheerleader for three years. She was freshman class secretary, junior class vice-president and is presently a member of the student council. Doke has been nominated for Who's Who Among High School Students and Outstanding High School Students of America. She has taken acrobatics from Jeanne Willingham for the past 14 years. Doke was nominated for All-American Cheerleader at cheerleading camp.

John Fruge is third in his senior class. He is a member of Key Club, the National Honor Society, Who's Who Among High School Students, the student council and received a geometry award.

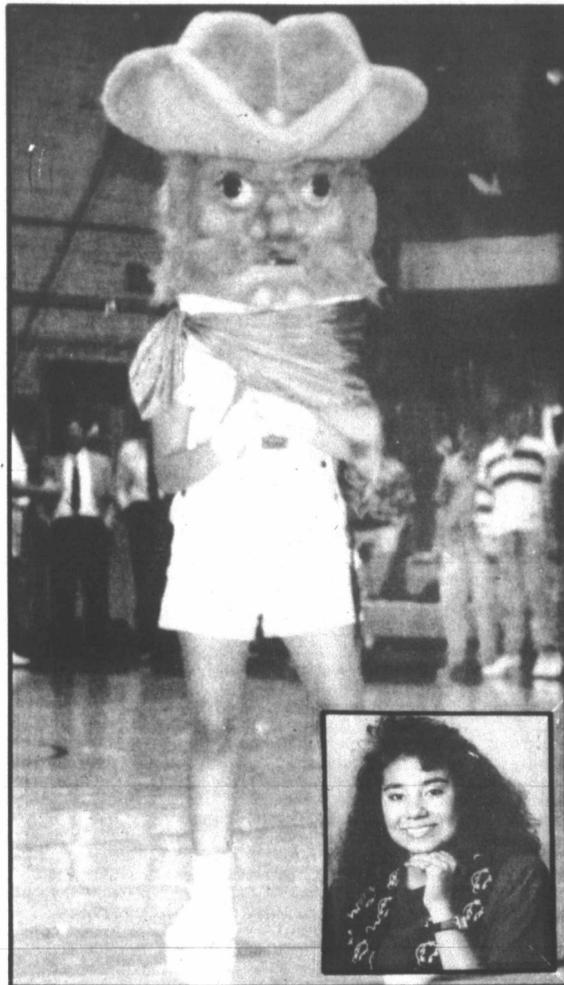

Crystal Cook is a junior and member of the Pampa Lady Harvesters. She runs on the track team and went to regionals during her sophomore year running the third leg on the mile relay team. She was a junior varsity cheerleader last year.

Cutrice Evans is the daughter of Patricia Wright and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Jones. She is a member of the New Hope Baptist Church, active in the church choir and church usher board. This is her first year as a cheerleader.

Moore is an active member of the Student Council, Latin Club, U.S. Achievement Academy, All American Scholar and Who's Who Among American High School Students. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Terry Bob Moore, her hobbies include snow skiing and water skiing.

Belinda Valenzuela is the Pampa Harvester Mascot, Harvey. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sal Valenzuela, she has been active in student council all four years and is now student body chaplain and a member of TNT (Teens Needing Teens). Her sophomore year, she was elected class favorite and has played volleyball and been manager of the girls' basketball team.

Belinda Valenzuela is the Pampa Harvester Mascot, Harvey

Shana Greene is considered the "resident artist" among the Junior Varsity Cheerleaders. She paints a sign that will go up in the halls prior to a Thursday night game.

During the pep rally, cheerleaders Shellie Doke, Leslie Forister, Allyn Schaub and John Fruge play contestants on "The Price Is Right". Item up for bid - an Amarillo Sandie.

Cheerleading class meets at 2:30 in the afternoon. Here members of the Varsity Cheerleaders confer with sponsor, Kay McKoon (far left) about the selection and ordering of pins and buttons to sell prior to football games.

Reader's use of pot nobody's business

DEAR ABBY: Your anti-mari-juana column proves that there is still no shortage of hysterical, un-reasonable busybodies who would impose their will on everyone else. Sorry, Abby, but what I put into my own body is not your business, not William Bennett's, not anyone's business but mine. If I drive while intoxicated, or show up at work in-toxicated, then the government or my employer has legitimate reason for intervention — otherwise, forget it.

And, please, Abby, learn to sepa-rate fact from fantasy. Like any drug, marijuana can be abused, but it is certainly less harmful than alcohol or tobacco. As for being illegal, that is a situation which will in time be remedied.

The drug war will continue to tear our country apart until people understand that no one has the right, or the power, to tell others what they may consume. And until you accept this, you will be part of the problem.

JOHN deLAUBENFELS,
DULUTH, GA.

DEAR JOHN: You rattled the wrong cage when you said that what you put into your own body is not my business. When what you put into your body alters your behavior so that you be-come a threat to my body, then it becomes my business.

DEAR ABBY: When my mother broke up her home 25 years ago, she gave me her sterling silver flatware and tea set. My mother, who is now 92 years old and in full command of all her mental faculties, recently told me that she wants her silver given to "Jennifer," my eldest daughter who was married last month.

This request came as a total sur-prise to me, as I had planned to enjoy using it for the rest of my life.

Jennifer never mentioned the silver to me. However, I thought it was rather odd that when she se-lected her china and crystal, she didn't select a silver pattern. Now I suspect that my mother must have promised Jennifer my silver, and is probably expecting me to give it to her now.

I don't want to cause my mother any embarrassment, but I now find myself in a very awkward position with my daughter. Kindly advise me.

DELAWARE DILEMMA

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR DILEMMA: The silver is yours; it was given to you 25 years ago with no strings at-tached. Since it's a family heir-loom, you would probably want your eldest daughter to have it one day, but you, and you alone, should decide when. (You may prefer to leave it to her in your will.) Don't feel pressured to give it to Jennifer now because she neglected to select a silver pat-tern in anticipation of getting yours.

My advice: Enjoy using the silver. Tell your daughter that she's welcome to "borrow" it whenever she wishes, and "one day" it will probably be hers.

DEAR ABBY: I have read you for years, but this is my first time to write to you. Abby, why do people promise to write, to call, to send pictures and to visit, and never make good their promises? This is especially sad for older shut-ins. The mailbox is empty, the phone never rings, and their days are long and lonely.

It is so much better not to make promises to older people — then surprise them with your thoughtfulness.

My mother is 89. Four of her friends have promised to visit her "soon" — well, it's been a year since she's seen any of them. How can people be so unkind? Mom called today, asking me to pick up a birth-day card for one of these forgetful friends.

I would love to see this in the paper.

NONA IN HAWAII
DEAR NONA: Some folks need a little nudge. Write again next week, and let me know if our nudge was effective.

DEAR ABBY: I may have a clue for "Embarrassed Parents" as to why their friends have not received acknowledgments for their wedding gifts.

After attending three successive weddings as guest of the groom and receiving no acknowledgments for my gifts, I made some inquiries.

It seems that some of the brides have been carrying this liberated woman thing a little too far. They are saying to the groom, "I will write the thank-you notes for all the gifts we receive from my family and friends, and you do the same for yours." This, of course, translates into: Her family and friends get thanked, and his get zilch.

I have solved the problem by ac-cepting no wedding invitations as a guest of the groom. Perhaps if more people did this, the brides would wake up to the fact that it is no more reasonable for her to expect him to write the thank-you notes than for him to expect her to trot out to the garage and lube the car.

BEVERLY R. IN FRESNO
DEAR BEVERLY: Please join the 20th century. Women have been trotting out to the garage to "lube" cars for some time, and men have been writing thank-you notes, too.

If you decline all wedding in-vestigations that come from the groom because you're afraid you'll not be thanked for your wedding present, you need more help than I can give you in a letter. And you're also going to miss a lot of great weddings.

DEAR ABBY: It's been almost nine months since my husband and I got married, and here's my prob-lem. Although my husband is busy with school and a job, we agreed to share the duty of sending out thank-you notes for our wedding gifts.

I went through all our gifts and made a list. I also addressed all the envelopes. Then I did my half of the notes, and my husband was supposed to do the other half — which he told me he had done.

Well, yesterday I found most of his half of the thank-you notes in a box in our spare room. I couldn't believe my eyes!

What should I do now? I know I still need to send them out, but how do I apologize for getting them out so late? Everyone who hasn't received a thank-you note yet must think we are absolutely awful! Please help.

EMBARRASSED
DEAR EMBARRASSED: Judg-ing from your husband's track record, in order to avoid further delay, you'd better write the balance of the thank-you notes yourself. Although your husband doesn't deserve to be protected, resist the temptation to "explain" why your acknowledgment is so late. How disappointing for you to learn that your husband is not only irresponsible, he's less than honest.

DEAR ABBY: I trust your judg-ment. A while ago, I invited my grown niece, Janet (not her real name), to my home for a special dinner. I am a registered nurse and cooking is my hobby.

Well, Janet informed me that she was on a diet to lose weight, so if she comes to my home for dinner, I should not expect her to eat any-thing!

I was completely chagrined and disappointed, so I told her that since she did not intend to eat anything, there would be no point in coming to my home for dinner. Well, to make a long story short, she stayed home.

Afterward, I wrote to Janet, apologizing and explaining that I would have gladly prepared some-thing she could have eaten, but she never acknowledged the letter.

I have felt terrible about this ever since. Tell me, Abby, what can I do to repair our relationship?

MADE A MISTAKE
DEAR MADE: On her birth-day, or perhaps on Valentine's Day or Christmas, send an appropriate "Can't we be friends?" card. After that, the ball is in her court. Let's hope Janet mellow with time. In holding a grudge, she hurts only herself.

nities to learn cooking skills and techniques, but they also learn menu planning, food buying, nutrition, and about careers.

Safety Is Keywork for 4-H Shooting Sports

Safety at all times is the slogan for the 4-H shooting sports project, now in its twelfth year of state-level competition.

Program goals are shooting safety training for all new shooters and the continued promotion of safe gun handling habits for experienced shooters.

A somewhat related program called Field and Stream (F&S) grew out of the interest in shooting sports but concentrates on outdoor awareness and resource conservation.

"Safety first, safety always" is the most important lesson taught in the shooting should practice rules of shooting safety.

Some of the rules include: Treat every gun with the respect accorded a loaded gun. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger. Always be certain the barrel and action are clear of obstructions. never point your gun at anything you do not intend to shoot.

Never leave you gun unattended unless you unload it first. Never consume alcohol beverages either before or during shooting.

The Gray County 4-H Rifle project is set to begin Oct. 3. For more information, contact the Extension Office at 669-8033.

PHS teachers participate in state in-service conference

What a busy week Pampans had last week with trips, family reunions, settling down as new Pampans, etc. Get comfortable and peek around town.

Gaylene Skaggs, Miriam Lynch and Jill Baker, Pampa High School teachers, participated in the state in-service Conference for the professional development of vocational home economics teachers in Dallas late in August. More than 2,800 teachers from school districts across the state attended.

Topics addressed included innovative ways to help students develop a healthy self-esteem, the consumer in the marketplace, good nutrition, child care training, working with school-age parents, strategies for teaching money management, matching teaching styles to learning styles, and much more.

The new information will be implemented during the present school year. That's enough to make all of us want to be young students again.

John Garren and James Schaffer returned last week from Mexico City, where they went to see John's son Jason and James' grandson play football for Trinity University of San Antonio.

First they flew to Laredo to meet and join the team for a train ride to Mexico City for the game and a two-day tour afterward. Dads and granddads make wonderful fans.

Pam Story and Becky Lentz of the Hair Shoppe recently attended the Redkin Hair Show in San Antonio for the latest in permanent waving, hair coloring and hair styling tips.

All ten of the children of Guy and Emma Gabriel met recently in Pampa for a family reunion held at Kenneth and Bea Dwight's home. Everyone enjoyed good food, games and lots of good memory chasing. Pampans attending were Warren and Velta Williams, Joe and Odie Gabriel, Pete and Helen Gabriel, Kenneth and Bea Dwight, plus others from Valley Mills, Waco, Andrews, San Angelo and Wichita, Kan. Next year the reunion will be held in Waco with Sylvia Pringle as hostess.

Tommy and Shirley Clark recently returned from a once-in-a-lifetime trip to Thailand and Hong Kong with an extra day spent in China. It was an incentive trip from Affiliated Foods passed up by Frank and Norma Morrison and accepted by Shirley and Tommy. Shopping sprees netted special dolls and gifts for grandchildren.

Lucille Clements has had two daughters visiting her on separate dates. Charlene Lowrance came from Duncanville last weekend, followed by Virginia Johnson from Bangs, near Brownwood.

Faye Harvey, Beulah Terrell, Barbara Shaw, Gladys Green and Marie Donnell represented Pampa at the Texas Extension Homemakers Association in Corpus Christi recently. The Panhandle had 61 ladies in attendance. Good representation, huh?

As part of Linda Whatley's 40th birthday celebration, Bob put a black bow on the front door and a sign in the yard. Hang in there, Linda!

Spotted at the last football game: Marietta and Virgil Smith with their daughter and grandson; Dustin Miller, son of Norma and Dusty Rhoades; Julie Enroe with Sandra and Bill Waters. Did you know Julie is on the University of Texas yearbook staff?

Tom and Virginia Kelley and Virginia's sister of Lubbock celebrated the Kelleys' wedding anniversary with an Alaskan cruise. Desk and Derrick members from Pampa, Amarillo, Perryton and Borger hosted the national convention in Las Vegas this past week. Ginger Ferdon, Maleeya Davis, Mary Kneisley and Bill Hassell were there as tour guides/managers/"go-fers," etc.

Carlene Morris and about 30 friends kept Roy's 50th birthday celebration at the Biarritz Club a deep black secret until Roy's boss arrived. Then Roy knew what was up. The party area was decorated with black balloons, crepe paper and a sign "Over the Hill and Ready to Roll!" Strange gifts included black underwear! Belated congratulations, Roy!

It was good to see Lynn and Louise West out for a ride following Lynn's recent surgery. Lynn and Louise are former Pampans who returned to Pampa from Hobbs in retirement.

A warm Pampa "Welcome!!!" to Rocky and Brenda Brown; Arian, 3, and Christina, 5, who moved here from Lubbock for Rocky to manage the local Wal-Mart store. Rocky, a native of Altus, has held managerial positions with Wal-Mart in Amarillo, Norman, Seminole, Okla., and Childress.

Rocky and Brenda met at Central State University in Edmond, Okla., where Rocky earned a degree in business management and Brenda one in public relations. Rocky, as an ex-track athlete, prefers running and bowling if he has a spare minute. Brenda enjoys crocheting. The family will become members of the Church of God in Christ.

A list of new teachers in the PISD, low in quantity, high in quality, includes several newly created positions.

Chuck No, recently of Angleton in the Freeport area, serves as director of Special Education. Leisure time is spent running in the name of physical fitness, not pleasure, plus reading for pleasure and knowledge. The fun time is going fishing with his son Austin when he is here visiting. Chuck is a Presbyterian.

Two classmates from Tarleton State University are Kelley Schoenhals (Shane-hoss) and Bonnie Choate. Kelley teaches reading at Pampa Middle School and is a Baptist. Bonnie, a first grade teacher at Horace Mann, is interested in antiques, cross stitch and crafts. She, too, is a Baptist.

Rene Ramaekers, a recent grad of WTSU, is a first grade teacher at Horace Mann School. Her interests include basketball, cross stitch and crafts. Renee is a member of the Catholic Church.

Kathy McEntire of Andrews teaches speech at Pampa Middle School.

The family of Richard Beamer, a new PHS math teacher, will be joining him here later.

More bits of info on other new teachers in town next week.

One more bit about Pampa schools! Belated birthday wishes to Dr. Harry Griffith, who last week joined the 39-and-holding group! There was a nice, quiet party at Carver Center where the gift he was leery of and almost reluctant to open proved to be a Texas longhorn steer, representative of his alma mater, which he proudly displayed. If Joe VanZandt was noticeably quiet, perhaps Harry should begin worrying now about what Joe may have planned for next year.

Belated birthday wishes to Carol Mackie, whose birthday was the same as Harry's.

Big birthday celebrations for Emmett Lefors, a Pampan for many years who now lives in Eldorado, Kan., began last Wednesday with a huge party in Eldorado. Emmett will be ONE HUNDRED YEARS old on Sept. 27. There'll be a large party for about 200 old-time friends Saturday afternoon, Sept. 30, in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn.

Emmett was not only a long-time Pampan, he was a long-time Mason, rancher and more. In fact, he's a long-time EVERYTHING! Emmett deserves a lot of celebration wherever he may be for this milestone event! Welcome home, Emmett, and lots of birthday wishes!

See you next week. Katie.

Colorful flowers can brighten year round with permanent dried arrangements

One of the things about early fall is the vast array of colorful flowers and native plants that adorn our landscapes. These same plants can also be used year-round to brighten the inside of our homes. How? By making permanent dried arrangements.

For hundreds of years, gardeners have preserved flowers by drying. The so-called "everlasting types", like strawflower, have been most popular, but there are many other annual flowers which can be used.

Summer annuals which are excellent for drying include marigolds, salvia, cosmos, zinnias, coreopsis and gorisosa daisies. Ageratum, dahlias, calendulas, chrysanthemums, dianthus, asters and daisies also make fine, dried specimens.

Native flowers and grasses also reach their peak in the early fall with many drying naturally or producing interesting seedheads. Cattails, dock, oats and the numerous dried grasses make delightful winter bouquets.

Drying flowers is such a rewarding experience because it is easy to do. Flowers usually dry remarkably well and last for many years. Flowers can be preserved in several different ways: by hanging, pressing or with various drying agents.

Hanging: air drying or hanging is the easiest and best method for preserving many flowers. As a general rule, flowers need only to have the leaves removed and to be hung upside down in a warm, dry, dark place until the moisture content is evaporated. An attic, closet or pantry is a good place to hang flowers for drying.

For Horticulture

Pressing: It's easy and a quick method, but the contour is lost and the flowers are flat. For pressing, use unglazed paper such as newsprint or an old telephone book. Place the flowers between several thicknesses of the paper making sure they do not overlap. Weight down with a heavy object. The time required for drying can be anywhere from two to four weeks.

Drying agents: Flowers can be dried by burying them in materials such as sand and borax or cornmeal and borax. These materials are successful for certain flowers, but undependable for others. More recently, a drying agent called silica gel has been used. This compound has the capacity to absorb large quantities of moisture and can quickly dehydrate cut flowers.

Flowers, minus leaves, are buried in the gel in a closed container and left for about a week. Silica gel can be used over and over by redrying the gel in a warm oven. Silica gel can be found in most garden centers, nurseries, florist shops and hobby shops.

Whichever method you choose, the use of dried flowers for "permanent" arrangements can be colorful and rewarding and surprisingly inexpensive.

After you have dried your flowers, put a two-to-four-inch section of No. 2 florist's wire through each flower's head, securing the wire by bending it into a hook at the flower-head end. This short wire can then be attached to longer wire which becomes the stem. The final step is to wrap all wire with green floral tape and then make your arrangement.

Lower cholesterol - reduce risk of heart disease

September is a time to focus on reducing your risks of heart and blood vessel diseases. The American Heart Association annually sponsors its Food Festival, a national nutrition education event designed to increase the awareness of the relationship between diets high in cholesterol and saturated fat and diseases of the heart and blood vessels.

You can lower cholesterol levels and reduce risk of heart disease by cutting back your intake of fats. The first step is to know what makes foods healthful and understand the role played by cholesterol in heart disease.

Cholesterol is a soft, fat-like substance found among the fats in the blood stream. Your body gets cholesterol in two ways - from your liver and from the foods you eat.

Homemakers' News

Donna Brauchi

The cholesterol we get directly from foods, however, is the type we can control.

Dietary cholesterol is found in foods from animals such as red meat, whole milk, dairy products, seafood, chicken, turkey and cornish hen.

Two types of fat also play an important role in determining your cholesterol level: saturated fat which raises the level of cholesterol in the blood, and unsaturated fat which can reduce blood cholesterol.

Saturated fats are found in animal products such as beef, veal, lamb, pork and ham; in butter, cream, and whole milk; and in cheeses made from cream and whole milk.

Saturated fats are also found in many solid vegetable shortenings, in coconut oil, cocoa butter, palm oil, and palm kernel oil.

There are two types of unsaturated fats - polyunsaturated and monounsaturated. Oils from vegetable products such as safflower and sunflower seeds, corn, soybeans, and cottonseeds are polyunsaturated.

Monounsaturated fats are found in olive, canola, and peanut oils as well as certain plants such as avocados.

Make it simple - just remember that cholesterol and saturated fat are hardest on your heart and that monounsaturated and polyunsaturated are the easiest.

Reduce your blood cholesterol level by selecting a healthful diet low in fat, particularly saturated fatty acids and low in cholesterol. Use the following dietary guidelines as you plan your diet.

To cut back on saturated fats and replace part of the saturated fats with unsaturated fats: (1) Choose 2 to 3 ounce servings of poultry, fish, and lean cuts of meat more often; remove the skin from chicken and trim the fat from meat.

(2) Bake, Broil, or boil rather than fry.

(3) Trim excess fat off meat before cooking.

(4) Drink 2 or more servings daily of skim milk or 1% milk instead of 2% milk or whole milk. eat cheeses with no more than 2 to 6 grams of fat per ounce (like low-fat cottage or low-fat farmer cheese) instead of processed, natural, and hard cheese (like American, brie, or cheddar).

(5) Limit the use of butter, cream, salad dressing, margarine, shortening, and oil.

(6) Use tub margarine or liquid vegetable oils that are high in unsaturated fatty acids (like safflower, corn, and olive oil) instead of butter, lard, and hydrogenated vegetable shortening that are high in saturated fats. Choose products that list more unsaturated fats than saturated fats on the label.

(7) Use less cooking oil and fats than called for in recipes.

(8) Cut down on commercially prepared and processed foods made with saturated fats such as non-dairy creamers or oils. Read labels to choose those low in saturated fatty acids.

To cut back on dietary cholesterol found only in foods of animal origin: (1) Eat less organ meat such as liver, brain, and kidney.

(2) Eat fewer egg yolks; try substituting two egg whites for each whole egg in recipes.

(3) Eat less shellfish such as oysters.

For more information on diet, nutrition, and health, contact your Gray County Extension Office.

Character interpretation workshop set for Sept. 30

Pampa Fine Arts Association is sponsoring a workshop on "Character Interpretation and Development" with F. Bud Behannon on Saturday, Sept. 30 from 9 to 11:30 p.m. at the Pampa Mall.

F. Bud Behannon

Behannon has been an active member of Area Community Theatre, Inc. (ACT I) for the past six years, serving last year as president of the board of directors.

His community theatre roles have ranged from a French doctor, a romantic lead, and a drowning man to a gangster, firing squad commander and a drunk on a Christmas shopping spree in such productions as The Good Doctor, Romantic Comedy, Appointment With Death, Wait Until Dark, Come Blow Your Horn, Thurber Carnival and Our Hearts Were Young and Gay.

The two-hour workshop will begin with a tour of the new ACT I facilities and cover such topics as personal experiences relating to character development, straight readings and interpretive reading and critiquing. Participants will get an opportunity to read from scripts and work on character development through interaction with Behannon and other participants.

The workshop will be conducted in the new ACT I theatre located in the southwest end of the Pampa Mall, between Kinney's and J.C. Penneys.

There is no charge for the workshop. For more information contact Betty Hallerberg at 665-6063 or Behannon at 665-1308 after 6 p.m.

SEPTEMBER IS NATIONAL CAT HEALTH CARE MONTH

Once again, across our nation, we are having National Cat Health Care Month. Veterinarians are offering discounts on assorted health care items, from Vaccinations to Spays and Castrations. Now, cats outnumber dogs, and the number seems to be growing at an alarming rate. I have a client who started feeding one stray cat, and now the number is over 16 on any given day, with at least 2 of them pregnant now. At our hospital, we are offering cat Spays and Castrations at 30% off All month.

Cats do make wonderful pets. However, when a female is allowed to continue to breed and produce kittens ad infinitum, we have many unwanted kittens needing homes, often to no avail. Many of them get sick, starve, hit by car, and generally become nuisances for people to feed, and clean up after. Having a cat "altered" makes it not only a better pet, it stays at home better, is less likely to soil the premises, gets

Kenny Rogers, Ricky Skaggs in concert

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Country music superstars Kenny Rogers and Ricky Skaggs are slated to appear together in concert Saturday, Oct. 14, at the Amarillo Civic Center.

The 8 p.m. show will be in the round, providing excellent views for everyone present, concert promoters said.

Rogers has a career that spans back to the 1960s when he was front man for the popular First Edition. Over the last two and a half decades he has landed three Grammys, 10 People's Choice Awards, five Country Music Association awards, eight Academy of Country Music awards and nine platinum albums.

Nearly every album Rogers has released has gone at least gold.

He is listed among the richest entertainers in America. His endorsements of a line of clothing for J C Penny's and Dole pineapple products as well as his TV movies and books of photography have made him one of the most instantly recognizable celebrities in the business.

Rogers has also been active in the fight against world hunger, taking up the battle started by folk singer Harry Chapin, who died in 1981 in an automobile accident. His recent 50th birthday party was a benefit for World Hunger Year, a New York-based group that Chapin started.

On the music front Rogers has had a whopping 43 albums released since 1959, 13 of them with the First Edition.

During those early years the "Kenny Rogers Sound" was as distinct as it is today. Songs like "I Just Dropped In to See What Condition My Condition Was In," "Something's Burnin'," "Tell It All Brother" and "But You Know I Love You" carry as clear a brand as "I Don't Need You" and "I Prefer the Moonlight" from more recent years.

His biggest hits — "Lucille" and "The Gambler" — forever etched him a place in the country mainstream, though his sensibilities are focused at "good music," no matter what title you put on it.

He has struck gold in the country and pop formats with duets with talents as diverse as dance diva Sheena Easton, country hardliner Ronnie Milsap and popsters James Ingram and Kim Carnes. Working with such dance figures as Lionel Richie and the Bee Gees, he has produced songs that are country hits as well as just plain good music.

Kenny Rogers

But don't confuse his music for "country." It is more than that. Like few other entertainers of the genre, Rogers started with a format, a theme, an idea, and expanded it into his own trademark work.

In this age of dance music, Rogers is one of a very few country artists to still earn respect and chart time in the adult contemporary market. His songs play as well alongside Tears for Fears and George Michael as they do Alabama and George Strait.

Most recently, Rogers has landed a huge hit with the science fiction-country story "Planet Texas," as different a mainstream song as any to ever come along. The plot line revolves around a cowboy abducted by aliens and flown through the solar system. Sound too weird to wash? It's not, though. Instead it carries a goosebump exclamation of Rogers' storytelling prowess.

The music video for "Planet Texas" is no less than outstanding, the special effects being easily better than most rock videos and comparable with some of the extravaganzas Michael Jackson, a friend of Rogers, has brought to music television.

That love of effect is also evident in Rogers' shows. Promoters are promising plenty of lights, smoke and lasers. When he takes the stage, Rogers will be backed by a seven-piece band. He traditionally does songs from all two-and-a-half decades of his chart life. It makes for an evening that is at once nostalgic and completely modern.

Ricky Skaggs

Opening act Ricky Skaggs, who lives on the traditional end of the country music spectrum, is coming to Amarillo on the heels of his big hit "Lovin' Only Me," a sure contender for song of the year.

Skaggs' first chart success came in the early '80s with "I Don't Care," a song that probably best indicates his merger of country and bluegrass. Over the last nine years songs like "Cajun Moon," "Don't Cheat in Our Hometown" and "Country Boy" have become classics.

Skaggs was CMA male vocalist of the year in 1982 and entertainer of the year in 1985. He and wife Sharon White of The Whites won duo of the year in 1987.

Skaggs is also a vocalist on Rogers' newest album, Something Inside So Strong. Working on that project, the two decided to tour together. It is the right kind of a country pairing. City-country boy meets Mountain-country boy.

Much like Hank Williams Jr. teaming with Marie Osmond for last year's Leather and Lace tour, this is a concert that promises something for everyone. It should be noted that a concert double-whammy the size of Kenny Rogers-Ricky Skaggs is rare for Amarillo.

It is a night fans will not want to miss for any reason.

Tickets are on sale at the Amarillo Civic Center and may be charged by phone by dialing 1-378-3096. Tickets are $16.50 each.

THE CONTINUUM DICTIONARY OF WOMEN'S BIOGRAPHY. Jennifer S. Uglow, editor.

Mention Karl Marx: instant recognition.

Mention Jenny von Westphalen: blank stares.

But not anymore. The Continuum Dictionary of Women's Biography identifies von Westphalen (1814-1881) as Marx's wife. Four years older than Marx, she married him in 1843 and bore six children.

Von Westphalen's biography is one of more than 1,700 in the dictionary, which is devoted to providing "essential details" of the lives of famous women — Cleopatra, Marie Curie (nee Sklodowska), Marilyn Monroe (nee Norma Jean Baker) — as well as the not-so-famous.

Compiled and edited by Jennifer S. Uglow, the biographies "represent the achievements, aspirations, and occasional eccentricities of women in all spheres of public and cultural life."

While the bios of the famous are interesting, those of the not-so-famous — sometimes infamous — women are more so.

An example is Agnes Sampson (died in 1592), listed as a Scottish witch. "She told of meetings she had led ... when 200 people danced in a circle by the sea and the devil appeared to them." She was executed.

Another Sampson, Deborah (1760-1827) served as an American soldier. "She dressed in men's clothing so as to have greater freedom, and to earn money as a soldier in the rebel army in the wars against the British. Her identity was eventually discovered in 1783. She received an honorable discharge."

Mary Frith (1590-1659) also was known as Moll Cutpurse. "English thief and transvestite. Moll dressed as a man, wore a sword, and was reputed to be a highway robber."

Elisabeth Bathory (1560-1614), Hungarian murderer: "Famous for her beauty, she was haunted by visions of old age and took baths in blood, believing that this would preserve her youth ... she is alleged to have ordered the deaths of 500 virgins."

Broadway team enjoys 'Showing Off'

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — There's a big difference, say Douglas Bernstein and Denis Markell, between writing for a small stage and the small screen.

"On television, you write a joke, then someone else decides if it's funny or not," says Markell, the bearded, bespeckled member of an up-and-coming writing team which at one time turned out TV scripts for the likes of Ricky Schroeder on Silver Spoons and for a short-lived fairy tale sitcom called The Charmings.

"Everything goes up a level to that someone else gets rewritten, then up another level and rewritten and up a third level and rewritten," Bernstein adds. "Consequently, when you put names of your own friends in the script, by the time it gets on the air, the names are the friends of the producer."

"In our revue Showing Off, we've got all our friends' names in it and nobody can change them," he says with a laugh.

With their own show, Bernstein and Markell are helping to resuscitate a neglected theatrical art form — the topical musical comedy revue. At one time, New York embraced those bright, witty little shows, productions such as Ben Bagley's Shoestring Revue and his salute to Cole Porter or Julius Monk's entertainments at the Plaza and Upstairs at the Downstairs.

"The revue puts such a premium on the words and the wit and that's something that tends to get lost on Broadway today," says Bernstein, who also is one of the show's four performers. "The revue asks an audience to sit down and pay attention. If you blink or turn away, you sometimes miss the whole premise of a song."

Showing Off, currently running in a small Upper West Side nightclub called Steve McGraw's, pokes fun at a variety of current topics, although don't look for jokes about such easy targets as Donald Trump, Dan Quayle or Leona Helmsley.

Among its more unusual subjects are show-biz rabbis, video rental addiction, New York's 72nd Street, a man who has a crush on a local television anchorwoman and what Bernstein and Markell call S.J.P., those self-important people like maitre d's, telephone receptionists and box office personnel who enjoy their moments of control over everybody else.

"We don't take the audience for granted," Markell says. "We assume that they come to the show with a certain amount of intelligence, and we don't insult them. Rather than making an audience scared, it makes them feel like they are contributing to the show."

The collaboration between Markell and Bernstein is unusual. Both men write music and lyrics. They don't divide the tasks so there is a lot of trading back and forth of ideas.

"Music is a lot harder to write together," Bernstein says. "And after it's done, you don't know who did what."

Who decides what the final version will be?

"In Showing Off, we have a wonderful director, Michael Leeds," Bernstein says. "The director, for us, has always served as the ultimate referee."

Although only in their early 30s, both men were steeped in the traditions of musical comedy.

"Denis and I were both lucky enough to be brought up by parents who valued and respected the revue form," Bernstein recalls. His father wrote for hotel revues in the 1950s. Markell's father was a television producer as well as a set designer in the early days of New York television.

"We listened to recordings of revues and were always told: 'Look who wrote these songs. This is where Sheldon Harnick and Jerry Bobcock wrote their songs. This is where Harvey Schmidt and Tom Jones wrote their songs. And look what they went on to do,'" Bernstein adds. "We've always viewed the musical revue as a not very distant source for a lot of the great musical writers."

Bernstein and Markell met some 15 years ago at a music camp in Raymond, Maine, where they would write ditties like The Bassoon Teacher's Birthday. The two would sit on the main porch at the camp's lodge and talk about current films.

Analyst: Farms not always rural guide

By DON KENDALL

MAKING HAY WHILE THE SUN SHINES

We have had several wet spells that have interrupted hay baling this season. However, with all of the hay being produced this year, a lot of it is going to be of poor quality because it has not been cut early enough.

The protein level of hay is the best indicator of the quality, and it declines rapidly past the boot stage of sorghum-sudan crosses.

As I drive around, I still see several fields standing that are getting rather mature. These mature-like fields will make a lot of tonnage, but the hay will be stemmy and low in protein as a general rule. I would rather have early cut, rained-on hay than late-cut hay.

I talked with one producer who was singing the praises of his hay preservative that allowed him to get his hay baled up just before this last wet spell. He said without the preservative, his hay would still have been in the windrow.

PRAIRIE DOG CONTROL

During the past two years, a lot of land owners have made a concerted effort to eliminate their prairie dog towns. With the wetter fall weather, now is the time to get cranked up for this project if you have any prairie dogs.

As I have mentioned before, they travel long distances to infest new areas or re-infest old towns. Any prairie dogs that you allow will sooner or later cause infestations on friends and neighbors up to 5 to 10 miles away.

Fumigant tablets and treated oats can be ordered through the County Extension office. I personally prefer the tablets because you can obtain 100 percent control with them with one or two follow-up treatments.

That is what is needed - 100 percent control. Otherwise, in a couple of years they are back as bad as ever. If you have any questions, give me a call or come by for a visit.

BINDWEED CONTROL

A new leaflet - 2339, titled Field Bindweed Control - has just been published and copies are available in the County Extension office.

Treatments are outlined on how to kill out bindweed under several different cropping systems.

I highly recommend this for anyone trying to control bindweed on cropland.

McLean couple in Beefmasters

Bob and Carrie Hardin of McLean have been accepted as active members of Beefmaster Breeders Universal (BBU).

The Beefmaster breed of cattle, which was founded in South Texas in the early 1930's, was developed on selection for traits of economic importance which have become known as "The Six Essentials." These traits are Fertility, Milking Ability, Growth, Conformation, Hardiness and Disposition.

Beefmasters were recognized as a pure breed by the USDA in 1954. BBU, headquartered in San Antonio, is the national breed registry for BBU Beefmaster cattle and was chartered in 1961. Since that time, it has grown to rank as the largest of the American Breed registry associations.

With membership in BBU, Bob and Carrie Hardin join more than 4,200 cattlemen in 36 states and seven foreign countries who hold membership in this progressive association.

Turkey's a good bargain

WASHINGTON (AP) - Larger grain crops this year are lowering costs for turkey producers and are paving the way for some bargains at supermarket poultry counters, say Agriculture Department economists.

Retail turkey prices dropped slightly in August after rising for five straight months, according to the Consumer Price Index announced last week by the Labor Department.

Despite the decline - less than half a cent per pound - the average retail turkey price last month was still slightly more than $1.04 per pound, compared with 96 cents a year earlier.

USDA economist Larry Witucki said he expects further declines the rest of the year and that there has been "a lot of featuring going on" by supermarkets to sell more turkeys.

Witucki said in a telephone interview that USDA analysts don't think the Labor Department surveys fully reflect the many price specials grocery stores feature on turkeys and many other products.

Although retail turkey prices are easing down from their summer peak, Witucki said they may still average about 99 cents per pound for the entire calendar year, up from 95.7 cents in 1988 but below the annual average of more than $1.01 in 1987 and almost $1.07 in 1986.

Meanwhile, the department's Economic Research Service said in a report to be published in the October issue of Farmline magazine that lower prices for corn and soybean meal are expected to reduce turkey production costs in the last half of

Economist Mark Weimar said production costs last year, when drought-reduced crops drove up feed prices, rose to as high as 73 cents per pound of whole dressed turkey.

But with larger harvests in 1989, costs may decline to around 58 cents per pound and possibly as low as 55 cents before the end of the year, he said.

Per capita consumption of turkey averaged 16 pounds in 1988, four times the rate in 1950. Beef is still the leader at 72.7 pounds last year, followed by pork, 63.1 pounds, and chicken, 63.1 pounds. But turkey is gaining.

"Today, consumers do not have to buy a 14-to-20-pound turkey in order to have a turkey meal," Weimar said. "Rather, they can choose a breast or a package of thighs."

WASHINGTON (AP) - A private think-tank analyst says development of rural America has been hampered by a mistaken tendency to associate the well-being of communities with farming.

Secondly, says Louis E. Swanson in Resources Quarterly, there is a false assumption that with the possible exception of farmers, rural people are doing well.

At least five factors have impaired rural policy development in Congress and the federal bureaucracy, he said. These include:

- An unrealistic, often romantic view of a bucolic rural economy and society.
- Serious limitations to existing social and economic data on sparsely populated areas.
- The treatment of rural America as a geographical entity unconnected to the larger U.S. economy and society.
- A perception that many rural areas do not have viable political solutions.
- The absence of a unified rural constituency and the presence of a formidable opposition to renovated and new rural development programs.

A report by an Agriculture Department task force earlier this year said the rural economy "has difficulty keeping pace with national economic growth" because of the small size of communities, isolation, unskilled labor and a lack of institutional support.

The task force's recommendations, which are still under review by USDA, said the department should begin by "committing itself to rural development" as a major mission and should articulate clear goals.

One of Swanson's criticisms was that USDA and the network of land-grant universities have been "relatively passive opponents" of rural development for many years.

"Their opposition has taken the form of neglect," he said. "They define their mission as primarily to assist commercial agriculture, and in so doing believe they help all rural people."

Swanson is an associate professor of sociology at the University of Kentucky and was a resident fellow in the national center for food and agricultural policy at Resources for the Future, a non-profit independent organization that conducts research on the development, conservation and use of natural resources and the environment.

In his report, Swanson said that rural America long ago shed its overwhelming dependency on farming.

For example, he noted, in 1984 most rural employment nationally was accounted for by: manufacturing, 40 percent; services and trade, 16.5 percent; government, 13 percent; farming, 9 percent; and mining, about 5.5 percent.

"Moreover, for the same year, farm families reported that more than 60 percent of their net family income came from off-farm jobs."

Of more than 3,000 counties in the United States, only 617 are considered agriculturally dependent, he said. And those account for less than 7 percent of the national population.

"By the late 1980s, then, the old axiom that farm well-being, and by inference farm programs, determine rural well-being was no longer useful," Swanson said. "Certainly, some rural economies continue to depend on farming, but this is the exception rather than the rule."

As to the assumption that rural people, except for farmers, are doing all right, Swanson said that claim has been based on reports of rural population growth. Between 1973 and 1983, rural counties did grow faster than urban counties, and many social experts proclaimed a rural renaissance.

"However, most of the population growth was due to a combination of residential mobility and natural population growth," he said. "The former was simply part of the post-World War II process of suburbanization, and not migration."

Swanson's and other studies are coming along just as Congress is cranking up again for a shot at solving the problems of rural America. Legislation for hastening rural development has cleared the Senate, and the House is working on a version.

Ironically, he said, it was the financial crunch on farmers during the mid-1980s that spurred the renewed interest in rural development.

"Since part of the problem was the assumption that farm well-being determines rural community well-being, the reintroduction of rural development in the context of a farm crisis had the effect of reaffirming this assumption," Swanson said.

"The public still appears to associate farming with rural well-being, and to believe that the farm programs of the past 50 years have helped farm families," he added. "In fact, the evidence is that these programs have facilitated the decline in the number of family farms."

Rural development should be seen as part of a long-term national strategy "to upgrade our human resources while providing employment opportunities and basic services," Swanson said. "Unfortunately, neither Congress nor the general public appears to be willing to make such a long-term national commitment."

Farm situation looking up, economists say

WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Department economists say rising incomes and a decline in the attrition rate are reasons the farm situation is looking up these days.

Recent surveys show farm bankruptcy filings in 1988 were down 50 percent from 1986, the peak year for the decade, the department's Economic Research Service said last week in a preliminary report.

"Despite the 1980s farm financial crisis, farm numbers fell less than in preceding decades," the report said. "Farm numbers declined by 266,600 (per year, on the average) during 1980-89, compared with 1.7 million in the 1950s, 1 million in the 1960s, and 516,000 in the 1970s."

The brief analysis is in a summary of the October issue of Agricultural Outlook magazine to be issued later this month.

Greg Gajewski, the magazine's economics editor, said the summary's account do not portray fully, however, the impact of the decline in farm numbers during the 1980s.

"There were proportionately more of the large, commercial farms that went out of business in the '80s than in the earlier decades," Gajewski said in a telephone interview.

But the peak of financial stress for farmers, collectively, has passed, he said. There are still exceptions, including many who are having problems repaying loans made by the department's Farmers Home Administration.

Others with debts to commercial banks and the Farm Credit System are faring much better than they were a few years ago.

Gajewski cited a recent American Bankers Association survey of commercial agricultural banks which showed that 2.8 percent of their farm borrowers went out of business during the year that ended last June 30.

Fifty percent of those quitting business did so because of "normal attrition" such as retirement and death, he said.

In 1986, 6.2 percent of the farms served by the agricultural banks went out of business. And only 29 percent of those were due to normal attrition.

The USDA report said 1989 "net cash income" of farmers is still expected to decline 5 percent to 13 percent from last year's record of $59.9 billion. That was unchanged from the forecast a month ago.

Higher expenses associated with larger crop plantings are major factors in the expected decline in cash income this year. Also, federal payments to farmers will be lower.

Net cash income is the amount of gross cash income generated by farmers during the calendar year minus cash operating expenses. It includes the sales of inventory stocks build up over previous years.

Last year's drought helped push up 1988 net cash income as farmers sold accumulated inventories at higher prices.

Another measure used by the agency is "net farm income" accounting, which measures the value of the current year's production plus government payments, minus total costs. Allowances also are made for the value of family dwellings and other factors.

By this method, net farm income could rise 5 percent to 16 percent this year to a range of $48 billion to $53 billion from $45.7 billion in 1988, also unchanged from the August forecast.

This baker delivers the goods door to door

By CAROL RUST
Beaumont Enterprise

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — The faded blue van rumbles around the corner; the brakes screech as it stops.

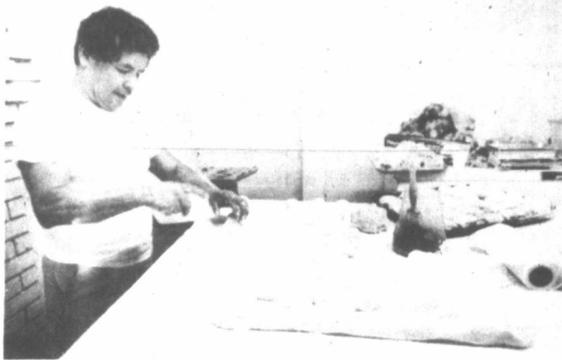

Heliodoro Nava gets out, slamming the van door behind him. He hurries up a walk to a house and ignores a barking dog to knock on the door.

Then he gives the cry that has earned him a name in Hispanic communities in Southeast Texas: "Pan," he says, announcing the weekly arrival of the bread that fills his bakery early each morning with the smells of butter, sugar and cinnamon.

Sometimes it is an old woman who fumbles with the latch to open the door; other times it is a barefoot child who dances from foot to foot to keep them from burning on the hot pavement as she walks along the street.

They follow Nava to the back of his van and wait as he opens the door, making a majestic sweeping gesture toward the inside.

"Pan," he repeats, beaming. And the sight of hundreds of pastries, stacked neatly in long flat pans and still smelling fresh from the oven, it always draws exclamations no matter how many times customers have seen it.

(AP Laserphoto)

Nava works early in the morning in his bakery to prepare his items for delivery.

Nava, 56, has been a baker since he was a barefoot 13-year-old in his native San Luis Potosi in Mexico. He has baked in markets and bakeries in Los Angeles, Chicago and Houston. But at his current location in the faded white house in Port Arthur, Nava has faith he can make

He is the only Mexican baker in Southeast Texas known to deliver door to door.

Nava hopes to earn enough money one day to allow his wife to come to the United States; for the time being, he sends money home to her, his children and grandchildren.

And every day, seven days a week, the short little man with the wide grin works 10 to 20 hours. He rises before dawn to start mixing the various batters, going through hundreds of eggs and pounds of butter and flour each day.

Just as soon as his one employee reaches the bakery, Nava hits the road with a van full of wares to deliver in Beaumont, Port Neches, Nederland, anywhere there's a customer.

"I know how to make all the Mexican pastries, but I just make the ones that sell the best," he said. If someone asks for a specific kind of pastry he doesn't normally make, he'll gladly fill the request.

Since he got a license last month from the city health department to operate a bakery, he plans to put a bigger sign out front to advertise the dozens of kinds of pastries and pies he makes.

And at some point, Nava hasn't ruled out locating bakeries in other areas. But no matter how much business picks up at the present bakery, he will continue delivering door to door.

"I like the contact with the people, and I make a good living going around," he said simply before slamming the van door closed, walking to a garage apartment and shouting up the stairs, "Pan!"

Dal Mo Sun, a Texas Tech industrial engineering student, takes part in a test to determine what makes people fall. The parachute-like harness strap to which he is connected prevents him from hitting the floor.

Professor likes his students to slip up, or even fall down

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK (AP) — Tom Leamon not only tolerates slip-ups in his basement laboratory, he provokes them.

It's all for science: Leamon, head of Texas Tech University's industrial engineering department, is a pioneer in the study of slipping and falling.

"No one has any idea why or how people fall," Leamon said. "You know it's a slip. You don't know why."

Leamon slipped into the subject a couple of years ago when he learned that about 4,000 people die each year in the United States as a result of falling in public places such as supermarkets, fast-food restaurants and city streets. Falls are the second-leading cause of accidental death in the United States, after traffic accidents.

Before he can figure out how to prevent falls, Leamon needs to find out what makes people slip and how they react when they do. It's not as easy as it sounds, because walking is an extremely complex activity, difficult to analyze.

With a $300,000 federal grant, Leamon equipped his basement lab with three video cameras plugged into a minicomputer that records 200 times a second what people do when they slip and fall.

Test subjects — graduate students who are paid $10 an hour for being the fall guys — wear a harness connected to a revolving mechanical arm. They also wear reflective ping-pong balls taped to their right shoulder, elbow, wrist, hip, knee, ankle and foot.

The subjects walk in circles for two hours at a time, repeatedly crossing about 15 feet of slick steel plate placed in front of the cameras. When the subjects slip, the cameras sense where the ping-pong balls are in three-dimensional space — in other words, how the body is moving as it falls.

A "force plate" under the floor — a distant cousin of a bathroom scale, but much more sophisticated — senses how much force the subject's foot is exerting downward, sideways, forward and back.

The harness and mechanical arm prevent the subjects from hitting the ground and hurting themselves when they fall. The devices don't interfere with the initial stages of the fall, the period Leamon is studying.

In two years of research, he has found some facts about slipping that surprised him.

"When people slip forward, they jerk sideways," he said. "It's a physical reaction. We don't know if that makes life better or worse."

He also found what he calls "microslips."

"Every time you put your foot on the ground, there's a slight slip — up to a centimeter — but you usually can't perceive it," Leamon said. "One of the things we're trying to find out is when you start to perceive it."

The answer seems to be that when you notice a slip, you're already on a collision course with the ground, he said.

Leamon wants to know how vision and carrying things affect falling.

He would like to find a surface that looks and feels slippery but isn't — the theory being that people would walk more carefully on such a floor, which would be a grocer's and restaurateur's dream.

Leamon said he believes peripheral vision helps prevent slips by orienting walkers to their environment. If he's right, long corridors lined with white, unmarked walls might turn out to be disorienting and more dangerous than hallways with stripes or designs painted on the walls. If that is true, then hospitals, nursing homes and office buildings could be made safer.

"Do you want vertical, diagonal or horizontal marks on long corridors? We don't know," he said.

Another question that dogs him: "When you walk across a slippery floor, you can tell. How, without falling?"

Step by step, he's trying to learn, with an occasional, welcome slip-up.

Consumer spending up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer spending rose 0.9 percent in August, its biggest advance in four months, while personal incomes edged up 0.4 percent for their ninth consecutive advance, the Commerce Department reported.

The rise in consumer spending followed a 0.6 percent gain in July and was the largest increase since a 1.1 percent advance last April. The August spending rate was driven in part by strong auto sales. Since then, however, auto sales have slowed.

Nevertheless, the report showed that consumer spending continued to be strong at the midpoint of the July-September quarter.

Consumer spending is watched closely as a barometer of economic health since it accounts for about two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

The advance in personal incomes followed a 0.7 percent increase in July. The slower pace was attributed to strikes against several major telephone companies. Personal incomes have risen steadily since a 0.3 percent decline in November 1988.

The statistics on Americans' income growth and spending habits provided fresh evidence that the economy is not in danger of toppling into a recession.

The report also showed that Americans' disposable, or after-tax income rose 0.4 percent in August, down slightly from a 0.7 percent after-tax increase in July.

Bush says he'll veto effort to hike taxes for wealthy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush says he'll veto any Democratic attempt to raise taxes for the wealthiest Americans to pay for other tax incentives. House Democratic leaders outlined last week a tax plan that would raise taxes for the richest 600,000 couples and individuals to pay for new tax deductions for Individual Retirement Accounts. Their plan also includes a scaled-down version of the capital gains tax cut sought by Bush.

The president, interviewed live on the ABC-TV program Prime Time Live, was asked what he would do if Democrats on Capitol Hill succeeded in passing their own tax bill.

"I will veto a rate increase," Bush said. "You heard it for the first time here, but I have sent that signal up to the Hill."

Bush also defended his proposal for a cut in the capital gains rate, saying, "It is not a tax break for the rich." The House Ways and Means Committee approved a version of the president's plan.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said that Democrats were ready to tackle the tax hike accusations.

"I like how the lines are drawn," Gephardt said. "The Bush proposal gives a tax break for the rich, paid for by the middle class. Our proposal gives Individual Retirement Accounts to the middle class paid for by the super-wealthy."

The Democratic proposal, which House leadership plans to bring before the full House this week, would:

- Eliminate restrictions passed in 1986 so that all workers, regardless of income, could have a deductible IRA plan. The money could be withdrawn before retirement without paying a penalty if used to finance the down payment on a first home or for college education.

AIDS virus uses the body's own system to fight itself, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The AIDS virus is able to use one of the body's major disease fighters to help overwhelm the immune system and leave the patient unprotected against infection, according to a new study.

In a report published in Science, Dr. Michael K. Hoffman of the Sloan-Kettering Institute said experiments in his laboratory show that an antibody made by the immune system to attack the AIDS virus is turned by the virus into a weapon against the immune system itself.

The finding, said Hoffman, suggests that some types of vaccine against the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, that causes AIDS, could actually help the disease instead of protecting the body.

"In terms of vaccination, our data provides some alarming news because you would have to realize if you immunize (with a vaccine) you also produce antibodies that might be rather harmful," he said.

"Among the antibodies that an HIV-infected individual produces, there are some that are harmful and actually participate in the immune system's own destruction."

An AIDS vaccine, Hoffman said, "could cause exactly what you want to prevent — immune deficiency."

The principle targets of HIV are immune cells called T4 lymphocytes. The T4 is one type of white blood cell and is a key soldier in the body's war against disease. AIDS kills by destroying or disabling these lymphocytes, leaving the body defenseless against infection.

T4 lymphocytes and the AIDS virus have molecules on their surfaces that can link, like a key in a lock. The molecule on the lymphocyte is called CD4, and the AIDS surface molecule is called gp120.

When these molecules join, the AIDS virus is able to invade the lymphocyte.

In fighting against the virus invader, the body produces an antibody, or disease-fighting molecule, that attacks the gp120 molecule.

Hoffman said experiments in his lab show that the gp120 of the virus actually forms what he called a "complex" when it joins with the gp120 antibody and the CD4 molecule on the surface of the lymphocyte. When this happens, he said, the lymphocyte is inactivated and is no longer able to fight disease.

If the finding is verified in other laboratories, Hoffman said it would explain why even T4 lymphocytes that are not actually infected by the AIDS virus are, nonetheless, often unable to fight disease in a patient.

"That has been a mystery for a long time," he said. "This would provide a possible explanation of that."

Sentencing guidelines create growing backlog, judge says

HOUSTON (AP) — Criminal sentencing guidelines designed to streamline federal court cases actually are adding to a growing backlog, a chief federal judge said.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda, who heads the Southern District of Texas, said the guidelines that have been in effect for more than a year have prompted fewer guilty pleas from defendants and more complicated questions from their attorneys.

"Sentencing guidelines really have simplified my job," DeAnda told the Houston Chapter of the Federal Bar Association last week.

"But lawyers are becoming more sophisticated about raising questions that will put their clients into a lower classification with shorter sentences. So, more time is being spent and creating more of a logjam than we already have."

The guidelines have eliminated parole for "good time" behavior by convicts, as well as judges' and prosecutors' discretion in arranging "deals" with defendants, the judge said.

"There's no motive to plead guilty or not guilty," DeAnda said. "So, many defendants who ordinarily would plead guilty with hopes of reducing their sentences a little now plead not guilty and hope some witness will have a heart attack in the middle of their testimony.

"And that takes up a lot of time."

DeAnda, who heads a 13-judge district including Houston, Galveston, Corpus Christi, McAllen, Brownsville and Laredo, said the delays exacerbate troubles with dockets already clogged with civil cases.

The average civil case backlog for each judge is 800 cases, DeAnda said. That backlog keeps growing because criminal cases take precedence under the Speedy Trial Act, which requires action in a case within 75 days. DeAnda's judges handle more criminal cases per judge than any federal court in the nation, he said.

"You can really appreciate that only 15 percent of cases in Houston are criminal cases but consume about 47 percent of our trial time," he said. "You can appreciate what that does to our civil docket."

And the situation is unlikely to improve with a federal crackdown on illegal drugs, DeAnda said. "And we're right in the middle of it," he said.
