Pierce refuses to answer questions on HUD

By JOHN KING
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce today told a House subcommittee he would refuse to answer questions about scandals at the agency during his eight-year tenure, citing his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

Pierce, appearing before the subcommittee under a subpoena, said attacks on him by members of the panel "leads me to the painful conclusion that I have been prejudged by this body."

Pierce made the dramatic announcement in a brief opening statement to the subcommittee more than an hour into a session from which television cameras and photographers were barred on his insistence.

Virtually every member of the panel said that they hoped Pierce would agree to testify, but said even before he spoke that they expected him to invoke his constitutional right against self-incrimination.

Pierce was originally scheduled to testify on Sept.

15 but refused to appear, saying he had just hired an attorney and was not ready. The subcommittee then subpoenaed Pierce and demanded that he appear today.

Pierce showed up as scheduled, but after being sworn in as a witness read a brief statement in which he said he would not answer questions because he still had not had enough time to prepare. He also said he had determined that the committee would not grant him a fair hearing.

"Under these circumstances, my counsel has advised me to assert my constitutional rights under the Fifth and Sixth Amendments by refusing to answer questions," he said.

Pierce's appearance came after an angry exchange between his attorneys and the subcommittee chairman, Rep. Thomas Lantos, D-Calif. Attorney Paul L. Perito had objected to having three lawmakers who are not members of the subcommittee present at the hearing.

When Perito asked that those three be barred from asking questions, Lantos said that, under House rules, Pierce's attorneys had no right to speak but only to advise Pierce.

During a round of lengthy opening statements, lawmakers criticized Pierce for refusing to appear voluntarily and suggested he was reluctant to testify because he had something to hide.

Lantos also dismissed Pierce's contention that he would not be treated fairly.

"We are not engaged in a punitive mission," Lantos said.

Pierce also appeared in May before the subcommittee, which is investigating alleged fraud, mismanagement and influence-peddling at HUD during Pierce's tenure. Testimony to date has indicated mismanagement and fraud cost the agency as much as $2 billion.

Pierce testified in May that he was not a "hands-on" manager, and he also told reporters that some of his aides had apparently betrayed him.

Since then, however, several former deputies challenged Pierce's account that he was not directly involved in major funding decisions. Agency records disclosed since then also show a greater Pierce role in major decisions than he indicated.

Neither the testimony nor the records, however, suggest any wrongdoing by Pierce.

Lantos said he found Pierce's action "deceitful," and Republican Rep. Christopher Shays of Connecticut said he believed "he's got something to hide."

On Monday, both said they were looking forward to questioning Pierce.

"He should tell the truth for the good of himself and the American people," said Shays. "But what he will do is anybody's guess."

Shays said he would demand the appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate Pierce if the former secretary refused to testify by invoking his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

Broadcasters and photographers were barred from covering today's hearing, as Pierce exercised his right as a subpoenaed witness to ban such coverage.

The TV networks asked a federal court Monday to intervene on their behalf but the request was denied.

Bush seeks congressional support for chemical weapons reduction

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush today sought congressional support for his new plan to reduce chemical weapons, as a Soviet official said Moscow will cooperate in the effort and stop producing such weapons.

Bush met with bipartisan congressional leaders at the White House to discuss the chemical weapons initiative, which hinges on joint U.S. and Soviet reductions.

At the United Nations, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Moscow will join the United States to "radically reduce or completely destroy" all stockpiled chemical weapons. He also said the Soviet Union will stop producing such weapons.

"We welcome the proposal concerning chemical weapons put forward yesterday by President Bush," Shevardnadze said. "Generally consistent with the well-known initiatives of the Soviet leadership, it indicates to us that we share the desire to rid mankind of those barbaric weapons."

Bush returned Monday night from New York after outlining before the United Nations his offer of an 80 percent cut in U.S. chemical weapons stockpiles.

The proposal, designed to spur a 40-nation conference in Geneva to ban all chemical weapons within 10 years, would have the two superpowers reduce their stockpiles to a level equivalent to 20 percent of the current U.S. level. That would mean deeper cuts for the Soviets, because U.S. officials contend Moscow has far greater stockpiles than the United States — an acknowledged 50,000 tons compared to an estimated 30,000 tons for the United States.

Bush proposed a U.S.-Soviet agreement to begin those cuts at once, while a 40-nation treaty is being worked out in which the United States would destroy 98 percent of its chemical weapons over eight years if the Soviets joined the ban.

The remaining 2 percent would be destroyed within 10 years if all nations capable of building such weapons agreed to a total ban.

While only the United States and Soviet Union acknowledge having chemical weaponry, Bush said more than 20 nations have such weapons or the capability to produce them.

Baker told reporters the smaller countries would be persuaded to join the ban because: "I think you bring the force of public opinion to bear worldwide on any country that says that they're going to keep them and they're going to use them."

Baker and Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, said the United States would consider imposing economic sanctions against nations that refused to sign on to a treaty ban.

The U.S. has condemned Iran and Iraq for using such weapons and said Libya was on the verge of production.

Grand jury indicts Pampan for involuntary manslaughter

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
News Editor

A 27-year-old Pampa man was indicted on a charge of involuntary manslaughter Monday by the Gray County grand jury. A second man was named in eight indictments alleging burglary and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

The manslaughter charges stem from a fatal head-on accident 20 miles south of Pampa on Texas 70 during the early morning hours of July 2.

Derrick L. Eldridge, 27, 1227 Christine, was named in an indictment alleging involuntary manslaughter in the death of James Henry King, 35, of Fort Worth. District Judge Don Cain set bond at $10,000.

District Attorney Harold Comer said the physical facts indicate that the pickup truck driven by Eldridge was traveling north on Texas 70 in the southbound lane about 4:15 a.m. that day when it collided head-on with a pickup driven by King.

Eldridge, King and a passenger in the pickup driven by Eldridge were taken to Coronado Hospital by ambulance following the collision. King was later pronounced dead at the hospital.

Eldridge was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital in critical condition suffering from massive head and spine injuries, according to DPS reports following the accident. The passenger, Darwin Nail, 20, 1937 N. Dwight, was wearing a seatbelt and was not seriously injured.

"According to the Texas Penal Code, if a person is operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated and by reason of intoxication causes the death of another person, the person can be charged with involuntary manslaughter, even if there's not intent," Comer explained.

"The evidence indicates that Eldridge was intoxicated at the time of the accident and was traveling at a high rate of speed on the wrong side of the road," he said.

Seven indictments naming Frederick Russell Johnson Jr., 28, last known address 817 Ruth, on allegations of burglary were handed up to Judge Cain following the grand jury session Monday.

Judge Cain set bond at $10,000 each on four of the burglary indictments, $3,000 each on three of the burglary indictments, and $1,000 on an indictment alleging unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, for a combined bond of $50,000. Johnson remained in Gray County Jail early today in lieu of bond.

The burglaries spanned a period from mid-June until the latter part of August, Comer said. Included in the indictments was the June 16 burglary of the Lynn F. Stafford residence at 1137 S. Dwight in which jewelry and coins valued at $7,200 were taken. Also included was the burglary of J&J Flea Market, 123 N. Ward, on July 25 and of a garage belonging to Ronald Hendrick, 505 N. Frost, on July 31.

Four of the indictments stem from the burglaries of motor vehicles during the month of August in which purses, billfolds, cash, credit cards, tapes and carphones were stolen.

Comer said generally the windows of the vehicles were broken in the burglaries, all of which occurred during the day at public places. In one of the burglaries, a mother had left her baby and purse in the car while she briefly ran inside M.K. Brown Pool, the district attorney said. When she returned, her purse was gone, but the baby was still in the seat, he said.

An unauthorized use of a motor vehicle indictment stems from an incident on July 17 involving a vehicle belonging to Ronald Rice Jr. of 1227 N. Christine. The vehicle was recovered near M.K. Brown Pool, Comer said. A second man, Gerry Douglas, 21, address not known, was also indicted in connection with the incident, he said. Bond for Douglas was set at $5,000.

The district attorney said the burglary spree ended when a

Lacy named Optimist of Year

Calvin Lacy, an employee of Cabot Corp., was named Optimist of the Year for 1988-89 at the annual installation banquet of the Optimist Club of Pampa Monday.

Lacy has been an Optimist for 17 years and is beginning his fourth term as secretary/treasurer for the local club, according to John Warner, an Optimist member and the person who presented Lacy his award.

In 1978-79 the Pampa Club was declared a Distinguished Club under the direction of Lacy, who was named Distinguished President. Lacy has served as lieutenant governor of the North Texas District for two different terms.

Warner termed Lacy "an individual dedicated to making our community a better place in which to live, an individual who has made outstanding contributions in many areas of the community in addition to his Optimism, and an individual who constantly works behind the scenes and gives the credit to others."

Noting that Lacy has served for 20 years in the National Guard, Warner commended him for completing his service at the rank of sergeant.

Lacy is presently serving as president of the Aldersgate Sunday School Class at First United Methodist Church.

Warner said Lacy has traveled more than 30,000 miles in attending four international Optimist conventions and more than 40 state board meetings. He has served the North Texas District as District Oratorical Contest chairman and twice as District Community Service chairman.

In 1987 Lacy was recognized with the Cabot Volunteer Award for outstanding community service. He was also made a life member of Optimist International that year.

He has been employed by Cabot Corp. since 1964. He and wife Rochelle have five children and 11 grandchildren.

Mother who hid daughter freed from jail

By RICHARD KEIL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A physician, free after two years in jail for refusing to let her daughter visit her former husband, says she realizes she could wind up back behind bars in her bitter child custody battle.

"I don't know that anything is over," Dr. Elizabeth Morgan said shortly after she was released Monday from the District of Columbia jail. "I could be jailed again, and I know that, and my daughter remains unprotected."

Morgan, 41, was jailed on civil contempt of court charges in August 1987 after failing to produce her 7-year-old daughter Hilary for court-ordered visits with Dr. Eric Foretich, her ex-husband and the girl's father. She has alleged that Foretich sexually abused Hilary; Foretich has repeatedly denied those charges.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who sponsored the bill which resulted in her release, said today that Morgan still could be charged with criminal contempt. "So I suspect this case is not over," he said on ABC's Good Morning America program.

Foretich, appearing on the same program, said, "I'm delighted that Elizabeth Morgan is out of jail. I only wish this could be coupled with some concern for my missing daughter. I would have been in support of that bill if the bill had a provision mandating a government agency such as the FBI be required to find my daughter."

Her release was the result of a law passed by Congress and signed by President Bush last week limiting civil contempt jail terms in the District of Columbia to 12 months. The law expires after 18 months.

While Morgan smiled during a news conference and held hands with her fiancé, federal appeals court judge Paul R. Michel, she acknowledged that her legal fight is far from over.

"I intend to stay here and work through the legal system until (Hilary) is safe," Morgan said. "I will never give up."

"I cannot say where she is if there is a possibility she would be returned" to Foretich, she said.

Elaine Mittleman, Foretich's attorney, said after Morgan was released that further proceedings against her are "quite likely."

Morgan "remains in contempt of court, and this law doesn't change that," Ms. Mittleman said. "That's not being vengeful; it's just what the law is about."

Foretich's attorney maintained in court papers that the new law was unconstitutional because it infringed on the power of the judicial branch to enforce its orders.

Mittleman also charged in her papers that the law violated several of Foretich's constitutional rights, among them the right to due process of law.

District Superior Court Judge Geoffrey Alprin signed the order freeing Morgan.

A cold, driving rain greeted her as she emerged from the jail, riding in a car accompanied by Michel and her attorney, Stephen Sachs.

"I feel very happy and very grateful to everyone that has helped me," she said, wearing an orange prison jumpsuit and clutching a dozen yellow roses given her by Michel. "I will probably cry when I say this, but I want to thank God for every angel on Earth who has helped me."

Meeting reporters later after changing into a blue dress with white polka dots, Morgan said she was "stunned ... It's a bit like being born again."

Refusing to disclose Hilary's whereabouts, she said her daughter is better off than she was when Morgan started the jail term.

"She's happy where she is," Morgan said.

Two Americans killed as Dan Quayle arrives for 3-day visit in Philippines

By CLARO CORTES
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Suspected Communist rebels today killed two Americans near a U.S. military base shortly before Vice President Dan Quayle arrived for a three-day visit, Filipino officials said.

Six unidentified gunmen firing from a passenger jeep killed the pair at about 5 p.m. in Capas, about 60 miles north of Manila, said Col. Florentino Amorabon, spokesman for the Philippine Constabulary in central Luzon.

Amorabon said the two were civilian employees of Clark Air Base, a U.S.-run facility 50 miles north of Manila.

The military believes the assailants were Communist rebels, who operate in the Clark area, Amorabon said.

In April, rebels killed U.S. Army Col. James Rowe as he was driving to the headquarters of the U.S. Joint Military Assistance Group in Quezon City. In October 1987, rebels killed three Americans in simultaneous attacks outside Clark Air Base.

Also today, suspected Communist rebels killed a captain from President Corazon Aquino's guard force in an ambush about one mile southeast of where the president will hold talks with Quayle on Wednesday.

As Quayle arrived today for talks on the future of U.S. military bases here, hundreds of leftists burned his effigy and an American flag while chanting "Bases out!, Quayle go home!"

Quayle made no statement as he arrived at Ninoy Aquino International Airport from Japan, where he ended a six-day visit with a short stop on Okinawa, an island that was a major World War II battlefield and today is home for more than 35,000 U.S. troops.

Before boarding a U.S. Air Force flight to Manila, the third leg of his Asian tour, the vice president called his Japan visit positive and said it helped strengthen the two nations' "global partnership."

Quayle's talks in the Philippines were to focus on the future of Clark Air Base, the Subic Bay naval base and four smaller installations, the leases of which expire in September 1991.

Jury

witness saw the burglary of a vehicle in the 400 block of North Frost. "The witness reported to police a description of the person and the vehicle," he said. "Officers stopped the vehicle and discovered two of the stolen credit cards in the vehicle." He said the majority of the stolen items have been recovered with the exception of the cash and some of the tools taken in the burglaries.

Following are the remaining indictments handed up by the grand jury in the session Monday:

Gordon Jack Addington, 57, 600 Doucette, was indicted on two charges of driving while intoxicated, subsequent offense. Bond was set at $3,000 on each charge.

John Webster Thomas, 36, of Groom was indicted on a charge of driving while intoxicated, subsequent offense, stemming from an arrest on Aug. 26 on Texas 70, 11 miles south of Pampa. Bond was set at $2,500.

Ronnie Gene Carter, 26, address not given, was indicted on a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in connection with the incident Sept. 24, seven miles east of Pampa on U.S. 60.

A motorist reported to Roberts County authorities that a man was driving a tractor without any lights down the highway at about 10:15 p.m. By the time a Roberts County officer arrived, he found the tractor had gone off the side of the road and knocked over several reflector poles. Carter was taken into custody at the time.

Sheila Mae Briscoe, 33, 1129 E. Francis, and Tetta Eta Brown, 39, 1137 Huff Rd., were each indicted on unrelated charges of tampering with governmental records. Bond was set at $1,000 for each of the women.

Isabel M. Saenz, 32, 401 Yeager #5, was named in an indictment alleging possession of a controlled substance. Saenz is charged with possessing 1.64 grams of cocaine.

Evaristo Vasquez Jimenez, 25, 909 E. Gordon, was indicted on a charge of driving while intoxicated, subsequent offense. Judge Cain set bond at $3,000.

Charles Jones, 50, of Spring, was named in an indictment charging him with theft of service by deception. The charge stems from a check with insufficient funds to cover it that had been written to Carmichael-Whately Funeral Directors for $3,306.95. The check was to pay for the funeral services of Jones' brother, who had been murdered in Houston, the district attorney said. Jones had allegedly told the funeral directors that he would cover the check when he received compensation from the Victims of Criminal Acts agency, but never did so, Comer said.

Donald David Tomaszewski, 22, and Julie Ford, 19, both of 436 Crest, were indicted separately on charges of burglary of a building in connection with the burglary of Tex-O-Can, 735 S. Cuyler on June 20. Bond was set at $7,500 for Tomaszewski and $5,000 for Ford.

Johnnie L. Barber of Canadian was named in an indictment alleging hindering of a secured creditor. Barber is alleged to have purchased a vehicle from Maguire Motor Co. of Pampa, then have to have taken the vehicle from the state without the mortgagee's consent and without making payments. Bond on Barber is set at $2,500.

FBI interviewing at least one juror for possible tampering in I-30 trial

DALLAS (AP) — The FBI has interviewed at least one juror in an investigation of possible jury tampering in the mistrial of the nation's largest savings and loan fraud case to go to trial, published reports today say.

A mistrial was declared Sept. 15 after the jury said it was hopelessly deadlocked in the trial of D.L. "Danny" Faulkner and six others.

The FBI had obtained the judge's permission to interview jurors "under certain conditions," despite a gag order on the jurors, Deborah Goodall, attorney for former banker Spencer Blair Jr., told the Dallas Times Herald.

A federal appeals court Monday declined to overturn that gag order, which prevents jurors from talking to reporters. The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans told U.S. District Judge Sam Cummings to reconsider the order, however.

Ms. Goodall said reports of the FBI investigation came from "a person definitely in a position to know."

A source not named by the newspaper said the FBI has questioned at least one juror.

Sources not named by The Dallas Morning News told that newspaper the investigation centers on a social relationship between Faulkner's daughter, Pamela Faulkner Tomlinson, 27, and juror Samuel J. Vera, 27.

On Monday, The Wall Street Journal quoted people "familiar with the investigation" as saying the FBI opened its inquiry into possible tampering shortly after the mistrial was declared by U.S. District Judge Sam Cummings in Lubbock.

The Morning News said Vera was dismissed from the jury on Aug. 3 after U.S. marshals observed several prolonged conversations between Vera and Ms. Tomlinson.

Attorney Cheryl B. Wattlely, speaking on behalf of Faulkner and his family, told The Morning News there was no improper contact with the jury by Faulkner or any member of his family.

Tomlinson has "absolutely not" had any improper contact with Vera, Ms. Wattlely said.

Four PHS students get Merit honor

Pampa High School Principal Daniel Coward announced today that four students have been named Commended Students in the 1990 National Merit Scholar Program.

Seniors John Fruge, Jennifer Jones, Teresa Lessard and Joel Turner are among 35,000 commended students around the nation being honored for outstanding performances on their 1988 PSAT tests.

Commended students scored slightly below the level necessary to continue in the 1990 competition for Merit Scholarships, but showed they have exceptional academic promise, Coward said.

An official with the Merit Program states that "to be designated as a Commended Student in this extremely competitive program is an attainment deserving of public recognition and is a credit to these young people and their schools."

Commended Students have their PSAT scores forwarded to the colleges of their choices, along with notification of their status on the test.

Another PHS senior, Charles Urbanczyk, received notification recently that he was named a National Merit Scholar semi-finalist. He was the first semi-finalist in Pampa in over 10 years.

The National Merit Scholar competition is considered the premier judgment of students' academic potential and overall ability in the nation.

Judge says Houston jail overcrowding 'unconstitutional'

By RUTH RENDON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge declared overcrowding at the Harris County Jail as unconstitutional and said reductions are in order, but fell short of releasing inmates from the facility.

In a 39-page ruling released Monday, U.S. District Judge James DeAnda described the crowding at the Houston jail as extreme, but asked that the situation be eased without orders from his court.

Instead, he asked U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice to meet with officials from Harris County and the Texas Department of Corrections to devise a solution.

DeAnda, chief judge of the Houston-based Southern District of Texas, said large reductions in the Harris County Jail population should be made.

Justice, whose court is based in Tyler, in a sweeping order earlier this decade ordered the Texas Department of Corrections, now known as the Institutional Division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, not to exceed 95 percent of its inmate capacity.

County officials contend that limit has forced convicts to back up in the county jails.

The jail was beset in recent weeks by a bacterial infection that killed two inmates and left dozens of others ill.

"Basically he's saying we're overcrowded but it's a direct result of TDC," Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen said. "If they would get their prisoners out of jail, we wouldn't be crowded. We have no control over the state prisons."

The sheriff said the prison system's population cap "has had a very devastating effect on all 254 counties. We've got to have some relief at the state level."

Asked about the effect of DeAnda's ruling, Klevenhagen replied, "None. I see we're going to have to have another hearing before Justice's court."

Rossanna Salazar, press secretary for Gov. Bill Clements, said, "We are pleased that Judge DeAnda recognizes and specifically notes the governor's willingness to find a fair and constitutional solution to the overcrowding problem. We certainly accept and will be a part of the discussion that will occur as to finding a solution for Harris County's overcrowding."

Ms. Salazar added that Clements has worked toward resolving the overcrowding issue by authorizing an additional 13,000 prison beds during the 1987 legislative session and 11,000 more during this year's session.

DeAnda's order says that "the solutions to unconstitutional conditions in state penitentiaries and local jails requires more than the joint effort of two federal judges. Just decisions should be made by those who have the primary responsibility to make them — the appropriate state and county officials."

The order from DeAnda came in response to a suit filed by attorney James Oitzinger on behalf of jail inmates. Oitzinger had asked that up to 500 misdemeanor offenders be released from the jail that now houses 8,300 — nearly double the capacity.

"It's real clear that what he says is that a massive number of people have to be released from that facility and immediately," said Jerry Bernberg, another attorney for the inmates. "He clearly tells the sheriff and the people in Harris County that they're holding people unconstitutionally in that jail. That's a very significant finding."

DeAnda also ordered that the special master in the case arrange a meeting of all the parties involved in order to facilitate a settlement regarding the appropriate relief to be imposed.

Man accused of poisoning Treaty Oak remains in jail

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — After two tries at a bail reduction hearing, the man accused of poisoning the historic Treaty Oak remains in jail, and authorities continued their search for a "mystery" witness.

On Monday, attorneys for Paul Stedman Cullen said he has been "overcharged" in connection with the poisoning of the 500-year-old live oak with the herbicide Velpar.

Cullen, 45, of Elroy, has been incarcerated in the Travis County Jail in lieu of $20,000 bail since his arrest June 29. Cullen, who does odd jobs for a living, has asked that his bail be reduced to $5,000.

"This man is overcharged," Terrence Kirk, one of Cullen's lawyers told District Judge Bob Perkins.

Cullen has been charged with felony criminal mischief in the case, which carries a maximum punishment of 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. But Cullen could face an enhanced sentence of life in prison because of a previous conviction.

Kirk later told reporters that a $20,000 bail is usually set for more serious offenses.

Referring to an Austin case last week, he said, "When you have a woman who supposedly almost beats her kids half to death ... and then her bond is set at $5,000, and our client's bond is set at $20,000, well then I think you need to start looking at the particulars of the events."

Kirk said Cullen should be charged with "desecration of a venerated object," which he said is a Class A misdemeanor that carries a maximum punishment of one year in jail, a $2,000 fine, or both.

He described the Treaty Oak, which folklore says is where Stephen F. Austin signed a treaty with Indians, as a "public monument."

Judge Perkins said he would rule on whether to reduce the charge during pre-trial motions.

But for the second time, a "mystery" witness failed to show up in court for the bail reduction hearing. Officials said they tried to reach the witness three times since Friday, but he was not home. Perkins, saying he will give authorities a few more days to catch up to the witness, reset the hearing for Friday.

Treec experts have fought to rescue Treaty Oak by replacing poisoned soil, cleaning roots, building a sunscreen and using purified water, but they remain uncertain whether it will survive.

Thousands of people have visited the tree and left get-well cards, healing crystals and cans of chicken soup.

Witness claims Falwell offered Bakker salary to 'keep quiet'

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A former builder for Jim Bakker testified in the PTL founder's fraud and conspiracy trial that the Rev. Jerry Falwell offered Bakker a $300,000 annual salary for life to keep quiet.

Falwell, who took over PTL after Bakker resigned in a sex and money scandal, also offered Bakker other perks, Roe Messner said Monday.

It was not clear whether Bakker turned down the alleged offer. Messner, testifying for the defense, was not questioned further about the matter.

But a Falwell spokesman said it was Bakker who asked for the money and perks.

Messner also said a PTL official claimed Bakker knew nothing about $265,000 in hush money to Jessica Hahn, the church secretary with whom Bakker had a sexual encounter in 1980.

Bakker is accused of defrauding followers by using more than $3.7 million in ministry money to fund his lavish lifestyle. The TV evangelist faces up to 120 years in prison and more than $5 million in fines if convicted on all 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy.

Messner testified that Falwell sent him to Palm Springs, Calif., in May 1987 to offer Bakker a deal: the $300,000 salary, a maid, a security guard, health insurance and telephone expenses "if he kept his mouth shut."

Bakker's wife, Tammy, jotted down the offer on a piece of her pink stationery, and Bakker wrote at the bottom: "I'm not making any demands on PTL. I'm not asking for anything," according to Messner.

Defense attorney George T. Davis never asked Messner what Bakker was supposed to keep quiet about.

Falwell, founder of the now-defunct Moral Majority, denied Messner's account.

The offer actually was a demand from Bakker, said Falwell's spokesman, Mark DeMoss, in a telephone interview.

DeMoss said Falwell did dispatch Messner to Palm Springs to talk to Bakker, but he carried no offer. DeMoss said Messner returned with a handwritten list of demands on the Mrs. Bakker's stationery.

DeMoss said Bakker's demands included hospital insurance, a $300,000 annual salary for life, a $100,000 annual salary for life for his wife, royalties on inspirational books and recordings made by the Bakkers, secretary and maid service for a year, use of a South Carolina lakefront house and furniture and attorneys' fees.

Messner, who testified that he handled the $265,000 payment to Ms. Hahn, also said that at a Feb. 21, 1985, lunch, PTL Executive Vice President Richard Dortch told him: "I'm going to ask you to do a big favor. I'm asking you because I know you'll keep it confidential."

Dortch told Messner that if he didn't pay a woman from New York $265,000, then she would go to The Charlotte Observer with allegations that Bakker raped her. Five days later, Messner said, he wired the $265,000 to an account number in California that was given to him by Dortch.

Messner said he asked Dortch if Bakker knew about the payment, and Dortch replied: "No, I'm acting on my own."

Messner said he agreed to make the payment in part because the Assemblies of God was named as the potential party in a lawsuit threatened by Hahn.

"I didn't think the church ought to be dragged into this incident," Messner said.

Victim's family protests probation

FORT WORTH (AP) — A district judge rejected protests of members of the family of the victim when he granted "shock probation" requested by a 23-year-old killer.

District Judge George Kredell Monday imposed "shock probation" on Stevy Smith after Smith had served less than five months of a 10-year prison term.

Smith had plead guilty May 1 to a charge of voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death of Keith Salter in 1986.

Salter was shot to death following a fight outside a Fort Worth bar. "Shock probation is a program designed to give first-offenders a taste of prison to discourage them from future crime after they are released."

"I don't know what he (Smith) will do if he is free on probation, but I don't want to meet him face to face in the drugstore," Barbara Salter, the victim's mother testified. "Everybody in my family is a total wreck."

"Why should he be out now?" she asked. "He killed my son and then left the scene."

Defense lawyer Tom Hill pointed out that the two had engaged in a fist fight before the shooting and claimed that two weapons were found at the scene.

"Depending on who fired the first shot, it just as easily could have been Smith on the ground as Salter," Hill argued.

Prosecutor James McEntire told Salter's relatives that Smith likely will be under tighter restrictions under Kredell's probation than he would have been had he been paroled when he was first eligible early next year.

"There are some positive aspects to it, but I'm still opposed to him being on the streets this soon," McEntire said. "I think the court is taking a tremendous chance putting him back on the streets, although he did put some pretty stringent controls on him."

Kredell ordered Smith to serve the first six months of his probation in a halfway house and ordered that he then be under electronic monitoring for an additional six months. The electronic monitoring is a form of house arrest in which Smith will be allowed to go nowhere except to work and home.

The judge also ordered Smith to pay $13,807 in restitution to Salter's family for funeral expenses and medical bills for the victim's younger sister, who has been treated for psychological problems since her brother's death.

"I didn't think the church ought to be dragged into this incident," Messner said.

Steroids smuggling trial delayed

COVINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A federal judge has delayed a smuggling trial so that two Texas men accused of illegally bringing $2.1 million worth of steroids into the United States from Canada can negotiate with federal prosecutors.

The trial had been set to start Monday for Tibor Reiter, 47, of Weston, Canada, and U.S. Army Capt. Clint Medford, 29, of El Paso, Texas. Medford had been stationed at Fort Bliss.

U.S. Customs Service agents said the pair intended to sell the steroids illegally for athletic use.

U.S. District Judge William Bertelsman granted a delay until Nov. 6, federal authorities said.

Robert Cortesi, agent in charge of the U.S. Customs Service office in nearby Fort Mitchell, Ky., which oversaw the July 21 steroids confiscation and arrests, said prosecutors were negotiating plea bargains with Medford and Reiter.

The two, who are both free on bond, had requested the delay while they try to resolve other charges against them, said Assistant U.S. Attorney James Arehart.

Arehart declined to say whether the government was negotiating a plea agreement with the men. He said he could not comment on any negotiations not noted in the court record.

Customs agents have said Medford and Reiter face U.S. charges of smuggling, which carries maximum penalties of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The Customs Service, with help from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, seized 25,790 animal steroid units found in a tractor-trailer stopped in Erlanger, Ky. Agents said the drugs entered the United States at Buffalo, N.Y., en route from an undisclosed European country.

Reiter was driving the truck and Medford was following in a car when the two were arrested, the Customs Service said. Agents said the shipment of vials and boxes was to be delivered to undercover agents.

The drugs were relabeled and repackaged at Vetrepharm Inc. — a London, Ontario, company that makes prescription drugs for animals, the Customs Service said.

Four other men arrested in Canada face charges in that country, U.S. authorities said. The charges resulted from a joint U.S.-Canadian undercover investigation lasting four months, agents said.

Mayor target of recall for not raising taxes

BIG SPRING (AP) — Mayor Max Green is the target of a recall petition because political opponents say he didn't raise taxes enough.

Green, who campaigned as "No Tax Max," supported a tax increase of 3 cents per $100 valuation, which means the city's revenues and expenditures of $16.5 million will remain almost unchanged because taxable property value decreased.

City Councilwoman Pat DeAnda wanted an 8-cent increase to upgrade the city's infrastructure and improve the police and fire departments. When Green voted against the 8-cent rate, Ms. DeAnda decided to seek the mayor's ouster.

"My basic reasoning is that the mayor is not being responsive ... to the citizens' requests for a tax increase," DeAnda said, adding that citizens asked for the larger increase at a recent public meeting.

She began circulating the recall petition Friday, and needs 894 signatures to force an election.

Green, who has been in office less than a year, seemed bewildered by it all.

"Certainly, I'm concerned about it," he said. "It is unusual simply because it really is based on the fact I did not go up on taxes."

Green voted for the 3-cent increase and broke a deadlock among Council members split over whether to raise the rate 3 cents or 8 cents. The ad valorem rate is 71 cents this year, a 4.4 percent increase over last year's rate of 68 cents per $100 valuation.

The increase means the owner of an average home valued at $25,000 paid $170 in property taxes last year and will pay $177.50 this year. An 8-cent increase would have resulted in an average annual tax bill of $190, an 11.8 percent rise.

The drop in taxable property value comes mostly from companies that went out of business or whose inventories decreased, City Secretary Tom Ferguson said. Residential property will be reappraised next year, he said.

DeAnda said Green and other Council members who voted for the 3-cent increase aren't doing taxpayers a favor because "we cannot continue repairing things with Band-Aid technology."

Green dismissed DeAnda by saying she "just has a different philosophy than I do. Hers is just spend money."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Capital gains tax cut a winner for all of us

It finally looks like we might get an economy-boosting cut in the capital gains tax. The House Ways and Means Committee has passed a cut in the top rate from 33 percent to 19.6 percent. The cut would last through 1991, when it would be raised to 28 percent, with inflation-caused profits exempt from the higher rate.

The tax cut passed despite the objection of the House Democratic leadership, who put political power games above the clear need to boost the economy. Despite the lessening threat of a recession, some risk remains and should be ambushed by boosting the economy now.

Even with these political shenanigans, the bill stands a good chance of passing in the full House. Led by the six conservative Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee who voted for the cut, many House Democrats realize that this is good political issue that most Americans support. Such Democrats, joining with Republicans, should provide the votes to push the cut over the top. The bill also should pass in the Senate.

President Bush has long supported a cut; he fueled the debate by proposing a reduction to 15 percent. He will compromise at the 19.6 level and, should it pass both houses, sign the bill into law.

The capital gains tax is in itself one of the worst taxes around. Such high-production countries as Japan, Hong Kong and South Korea don't even impose it. Whereas taxes on income and spending (the sales tax) are bad enough, the capital gains tax takes money away from the very center of production: the money earned from productive capital. That means less money invested in research, development, construction, tools and jobs.

Historically, a rising capital gains tax has slowed the economy, while a cut in the tax has provided a boost. In 1969, Sen. Edward Kennedy pushed through a near-doubling of the capital gains tax from 25 percent to 49 percent, contributing to the 1970s stagflation. Capital investment flowing to small companies all but dried up; it dropped from $171 million in 1969 to $10 million in 1975.

In 1978, that exorbitant rate dropped to 28 percent, and in 1981 to 20 percent. Economic recovery with low inflation began in 1982 and has lasted ever since — seven years of prosperity, a peacetime record for America. It's true that the 1986 tax reform bill boosted the capital gains tax up to 33 percent. But the bill's other major tax cuts — cutting the top income tax rate for most people from 50 percent to 28 percent — more than offset it. The reform bill's good parts covered up its bad parts.

Now it's time to correct the 1986 blunder and bring the rate back down to 20 percent. In addition to boosting the economy, by broadening the economic base the tax cut will actually bring in more tax revenues, thus helping reduce the federal budget deficit. Between 1977 and 1979, revenues from capital gains rose from $8.1 billion to almost $12 billion — even as the rate was cut almost in half. This tax cut's a winner for all.

Berry's World

"Love your leaves, man! How do we get back to civilization?"

Trading liberty for security

Consent is a defense against a rape charge. So if Americans ever wake up and regret the ravaging of their civil liberties by the drug war, they'll have no one to blame but themselves.

In a nation known around the world for its respect for the individual freedom, citizens are spread-eagling themselves on the pavement and begging to be strip-searched. No liberty is too precious to be thrown on the sacrificial pyre.

A recent Washington Post-ABC News poll found that 62 percent of Americans say they "would be willing to give up a few of the freedoms we have in this country if it meant we could greatly reduce the amount of illegal drug use." Police raids on private homes without search warrants? A ban on drugs in movies? Kids informing on their parents? You name it, the people can't get enough of it.

Americans who want to give up their liberties to fight cocaine are sure to get their wish. Anytime the populace starts to resemble a gargantuan lynch mob, we run the risk that the zeal for revenge will override our better judgment — as when we locked up innocent Japanese-Americans during World War II. But the danger is especially great in the drug war.

It's possible, in both theory and practice, to crack down on robberies or murders or noisy mufflers without shredding the Bill of Rights. But it's almost inconceivable that the government can vigorously enforce the drug laws without tromping on privacy and personal freedom.

The reason is simple. A crime is normally an encounter between a willing criminal and an unwilling victim. Most felonies involve assaults on individuals, who can let the police know a crime has been committed, provide evidence that may help to solve it, possibly even identify the culprit.

A drug sale, by contrast, involves two or more people who seek out the transaction and voluntarily complete it, usually in some private place where no one else will see. Both are happy afterwards. Neither wants to see the cops.

You may insist that the drug trade does produce victims by fraying the social fabric and dooming Western civilization, and you may be right. Trouble is, Western civilization can't go to the police station, testify in court or cooperate with prosecutors.

So police have to rely on informants, most of whom are lifetime members of the criminal fraternity, just to find out that a crime has been committed. Since informants enjoy confidentiality, they can incriminate the innocent without fear. Since judges almost never insist on questioning the informant — or even on verifying his existence — the police can invent informants to justify search warrants they can't justify any other way.

The police also have to do undercover work, forcing officers to immerse themselves in the drug culture and exposing them to constant temptations to abuse their position. They can extort money from drug dealers. They can keep some of the drugs they seize and peddle them on the sly. They can put the stuff up their own noses.

Police on the drug beat are also invited to ignore the legal rights of suspects. Prosecutors know, and some officers admit, that cops routinely conduct illegal searches of people and cars. Why shouldn't they? If they find nothing, the innocent victim can't do much about it. If they do find drugs, the evidence may be thrown out of court, but the cops will have at least deprived the druggie of his high.

Whether you're a drug user or not, you'll be caught in the crossfire. Those arrested for drug offenses may find themselves held without bond, despite the Constitution. They may also find themselves unable to hire a lawyer, since attorneys' fees can be confiscated as drug profits in case of a conviction — a policy not applied to tax evaders, armed robbers and others profit-making crooks.

If you're not arrested, you still may have your car inspected or sniffed by dogs at police roadblocks. Your kids may be having their school lockers ransacked for no reason. Your financial transactions may get a close look from federal agents. If the administration has its way, you'll have to prove you haven't used drugs through a urine test — or lose your job.

All this is just the beginning. Because the drug war — a flop every time it's been pursued — is bound to fail again, Bill Bennett and Co. will have to resort to still fiercer measures. More freedoms will have to be torched. Each one surrendered will make it easier to surrender the next one.

Short of turning the country into a full-fledged police state, stern measures against drugs won't work. Benjamin Franklin said those who would give up liberty for security deserve neither. After the drug war, neither is what we'll have.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, September 26, the 269th day of 1989. There are 96 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: Two hundred years ago, on September 26, 1789, Thomas Jefferson was appointed America's first Secretary of State; John Jay was named the first chief justice of the United States; Samuel Osgood began service as the first Postmaster-General; and Edmund Jennings Randolph was named the first Attorney General.

On this date: In 1777, British troops occupied Philadelphia in the American Revolution.

In 1888, poet T.S. Eliot was born in St. Louis, Mo.

In 1898, composer George Gershwin was born in Brooklyn, N.Y.

In 1914, the Federal Trade Commission was established.

In 1950, United Nations troops in the Korean War recaptured the South Korean capital of Seoul from the North Koreans.

Panic: Owner must sell home

I bought a new house a year ago and put my old one on the market. I haven't even had a nibble on the old one, much less an offer.

"It's just a slow market right now," my friends tell me.

Paying a mortgage on a house you don't live in has that same gut-wrenching feeling of paying alimony.

I'd just as soon flush the money down the toilet in either case.

Some months ago, I decided I would try an ad in the classified section of the newspaper.

It certainly couldn't hurt. Here was my first one:

"BREATHTAKING: Immaculate two-story. Quaint, family neighborhood in secluded cul-de-sac. This beautiful, custom-built home has four bedrooms and jumbo bonus room. Two acres. Jacuzzi and tons of extras. $200,000."

Nothing. Not one call.

"You're trying to go way over your head here."

I was told. "No way you're getting that kind of money in a buyer's market."

OK. I'm not greedy. I took out another ad:

"REDUCED FOR QUICK SALE: Won't last long. Seller to pay points and closing. Don't miss this one. A steal at $180,000."

Lewis Grizzard

Listen, I had the house repainted before I put it on the market. I had some guys come in and clean up the yard and plant some flowers around.

It's a great house, really. Terrific water pressure in the showers. Two fireplaces.

The second ad had the same result as the first. So I took out a third.

"PRICE SLASHED: Owner transferred to Beirut. Highly motivated to sell. A steal at $150,000."

So what's wrong with my house? I'm not trying to sell the Bate's Motel. I'm just trying to unload a very livable, attractive home.

I took out another ad.

"DESPERATE: 105 percent creative financing. No credit checks. $75,000 below market. Owner has small child needing operation. God wants you to buy this house."

The lot is beautiful. Great trees. The house sits way back from the road. You have complete privacy. So why doesn't some sucker come around and buy it?

I took out still another ad:

"HUNGER STRIKE: Owner refuses to eat until house sells. Don't let him die and have this on your conscience for the rest of your life. Act now."

You would think a classified ad like the one above would cause at least some interest, but not a peep.

Hey, all the toilets work. The roof doesn't leak. None of the neighbors' kids plays dogs.

I'm taking out one last ad. If this doesn't work, I know not where to turn.

"PANIC! This is it! $10 moves you in. Owner to pay points, closing moving costs, redecorating fees and college tuition for any children of buyer. Owner will throw in car, his stereo and case of beer. Owner down on his knees begging."

We'll see what happens. If you can't buy it, at least say a prayer for me.

To beat drugs, we must replace them

By SARAH OVERSTREET

I wish I was as sure of a solution to the nation's drug problem as some of the people who I've heard talking about it lately seem to be. Trouble is, I can see some sense on both sides of the argument, which sort of leaves me with a final score of 0.

In the '60s, when I was a kid and drugs were becoming socially acceptable, the civil libertarian viewpoint seemed to be the most philosophical sound: What people do in private — as long as they don't drive or otherwise endanger someone else — is their own business. That's their right as citizens.

And the argument that legalizing drugs would drive dealers into other occupations makes some sense, too. Prohibition made a lot of money for the mob. As soon as liquor was made legal again, the mob got into other pursuits — drugs, to name one.

The possibility that legalizing drugs might encourage their use is frightening, but I'm not convinced we'd have any more addicts than we have now.

As a young adult, I knew people who took drugs; some of them ruined their lives. But I knew most of these people before they began to take drugs, and in my experience, those who wrecked their lives with drugs were also the ones who had emotional and social problems to begin with.

The more well-adjusted kids might have dabbled in drugs, but the drug use always fell away at some point — usually when the novelty wore off or the unpleasant aftereffects of drug use began to outweigh the shorter periods of drug-induced pleasure.

Yet the enormous scope of the present drug crisis has me leaning just as much to the other side of the argument: that society can't withstand the negative effects of this particular civil liberty. For every quiet, casual drug-user, there seems to be one who commits crimes, ensnares children and makes life generally miserable for everyone else in his path. If drug use can wreak this much havoc, we should do anything to stop it.

Then, when I'm just about ready to see every drug-user in the country punished and pushers given the electric chair twice, the other side counters with another rational argument: You won't stop hardened criminals by upping the penalties, because those people think they're smarter than the cops and they always will.

I don't know how many reformed drug-users I've heard speak lately (usually from jail where they have little else to do but reflect on past follies) who have echoed those sentiments exactly.

Another argument against the new drug policies is that unless we're willing to up the price tag a lot, we're doomed to fail. Some cities are slapping pushers' wrists now because they need all of their available prison space for killers and rapists. And from the statistics I hear, you could convert every church camp in America into "boot camps" for casual users and still not have enough cots.

I certainly don't claim to know if the president's battle plans are on target or not, but one criticism seems accurate: He's only gone half-way.

There's not enough money for treatment and rehabilitation of users, nor is there any attempt to deal with the underlying causes of drug abuse. There is no emphasis on trying to prevent it from happening in the first place, or from happening again to those trying to escape addiction.

If President Bush goes this extra step, I believe he has a fighting chance. If we lessen the availability of drugs, then give users a hope of something better for their lives, I think we might finally hit on something attractive enough to replace drugs.

Democrats seek funding agreement for war on drugs

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats, reaching for advantage in the politically charged war on drugs, seek today to finalize a tentative agreement with the Bush administration to boost the president's anti-drug plan by $900 million.

"The American people wanted more than the president requested, and this gets more," Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., told reporters in outlining the plan Monday night. "It's not a final solution, but it's a good first step toward fighting the war on drugs."

The agreement, subject to final approval by a handful of key senators who were returning to Washington today, would raise to $8.8 billion the anti-drug funds for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. It includes an across-the-board cut of about 0.43 percent in other federal programs to pay for the stepped-up drug war.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., the chief negotiator for Senate Republicans, said the White House had agreed to the plan in general terms.

Bush was traveling Monday and had not analyzed the details of the proposed agreement, said White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk. But if it proves consistent with news reports, "then it may form a basis on which we may proceed," Popadiuk said.

The accord was expected to break a two-week logjam keeping four major spending bills from final Senate passage: transportation; foreign aid; veterans, housing and space; and labor, health and education.

But it appeared impossible for Congress to pass in time all of the 13 spending bills needed to keep the government running after Sept. 30, and the House was expected today to approve a 25-day stopgap spending measure. The bill would continue the flow of cash to federal programs at current levels.

The compromise anti-drug figure would be $900 million more than Bush sought in his Sept. 5 speech to the nation, and $3.1 billion more than is being spent on anti-drug programs in the current fiscal year. Congressional Democrats had criticized Bush's request as too little to make headway against the drug scourge.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said the agreement would "substantially improve the president's drug package" and added he was "gratified that the administration has agreed to support necessary funding for the drug program."

While the compromise figure went a little less than halfway toward the $2.2 billion increase Byrd originally proposed, nearly all of the increase — $800 million — would be devoted to drug treatment, education and prevention programs that Democrats said were most seriously underfunded in Bush's outline.

Hatfield sought to minimize any Democratic advantage from the accord by pointing to Bush's leadership in proposing the anti-drug package in the first place.

"This is a bipartisan war," Hatfield said, adding that he expected many Senate Republicans to support the compromise package. "The Democrats don't have any greater degree of support for the drug war than the Republicans."

Left unresolved were several legislative initiatives Bush had proposed on habeas corpus and the death penalty to strengthen the prosecution of drug dealers. Those awaited talks with Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., who was out of town on Monday.

A substantial part of the compromise involved the mechanism to pay for the increased anti-drug programs. The across-the-board cut would hit most government programs equally, excluding Social Security and other federal benefits.

That would mean a dent of about $1.3 billion in next year's $288.2 billion Pentagon budget. But in the case of defense spending, the agreement allows the flexibility the administration had sought to allocate the cuts to areas where the pinch can be minimized.

Investigators say they find explosives traces in UTA plane wreckage

PARIS (AP) — Investigators believe they have found traces of a powerful plastic explosive in the wreckage of a French DC-10 airliner that exploded over the Niger desert, two French newspapers reported today.

The dailies Liberation and Le Parisien said the discovery strengthened the link between last week's UTA crash and the December 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland.

The news accounts, quoting unidentified sources involved in the inquiry, said the presence of Semtex, a malleable and difficult-to-detect explosive made in Czechoslovakia, still had to be confirmed by laboratory tests in Paris.

Liberation reported the explosive may have been hidden in a shipment of farm chemicals put on the plane in Brazzaville, Congo, where it originated.

The plane disappeared less than an hour after takeoff following a stopover in N'Djamena, Chad. All 171 people aboard were killed.

French investigators have said it appears certain an "explosive substance" in a front cargo compartment caused the crash but have not elaborated publicly on what explosive may have been used.

The parallels between last week's crash and the Dec. 21 Lockerbie disaster have already been widely noted.

It is believed that a radio-cassette player rigged with Semtex was placed aboard the Pan Am flight in Frankfurt that made a change of planes in London before the explosion.

The Syrian-backed Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command is considered the prime suspect behind that attack, though the group's leader Ahmed Jibril has denied involvement.

Police in West Germany seized an air pressure-activated bomb hidden in a radio when they raided houses and apartments occupied by suspected radical Palestinians in October last year.

Claims of responsibility for the UTA crash from anonymous callers in Beirut and London on behalf of the Moslem extremist group Islamic Jihad and a previously unknown Chadian organization have not been authenticated. French police appear to be treating the claims with great skepticism.

Carolinas continue recovery from hurricane

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Truckloads of ice, plastic sheeting, bottled water and other necessities are beginning to arrive from the outside world as a few services return to communities shattered by Hurricane Hugo.

Weather permitting, Charleston Harbor was to be reopened to limited ship traffic today, and residents were advised Monday that the city's water supply is safe to drink without boiling.

The storm, which rammed the coast Thursday night with winds of 135 mph and torrential rain, left at least $3 billion in damage, state officials said.

Hugo killed 33 people as it raged through the Caribbean; 28 deaths on the U.S. mainland are blamed on the hurricane and its remnants.

Two inches of rain Monday fell on Charleston, and there was an 80 percent chance of showers today, the National Weather Service said.

"It's going to make it harder to accomplish anything, going to make everything a little more miserable," said Kay Robinson, of the weather service.

Offers of outside help have begun to arrive.

A Maryland businessman sent two truckloads of ice Monday to help residents who can't keep their food fresh because they are without power. The ice from the Berlin Ice Co. was delivered in tractor-trailers by the Perdue chicken company.

Truckloads of plastic sheeting, blankets, trash bags, diapers, tools, bottled water and other necessities were sent by Wal-Mart stores, said spokeswoman Brenda Lockhart at the company's Bentonville, Ark., headquarters.

"We still have our sleeves rolled up," she said Monday. "We'll find out what needs to be done and react accordingly."

Utility companies across the South offered to send crews to help restore service to the thousands of homes and businesses blacked by the storm.

More than 150 workers from the Florida Power & Light Co. were on the job or on the way, said spokesman Dale Thomas.

Power was restored Monday to more than 200,000 people in the Carolinas, but at least 546,000 remained without service, according to utility company officials. It could be a month before full service is restored.

Power has been restored to about 5 percent of Charleston customers, including hospitals.

Commerce is picking up on Broad Street in the heart of the Historic District, where some stores and restaurants used emergency generators Monday to power cooking and lighting.

A few banks reopened, and some automatic-teller machines have sprung to life — a godsend in a city where cash has become scarce.

At the Citizens and Southern National Bank Monday, customers with checks to cash lined up under four light bulbs strung from a wire hooked to a generator. Tellers phoned transactions to banks in other parts of the state to record the information on computers, said John Jordan, senior vice president.

Down the street at Charleston City Hall, volunteers manned a bank of phones set up as part of a nationwide relief effort.

The city needs everything from canned goods and bread to building supplies, generators and roofing nails, said Mayor Joseph P. Riley.

Gov. Carroll Campbell announced the state would hire some of the estimated 224,000 workers displaced by the storm to help with cleanup efforts.

President Bush expanded his earlier disaster declaration to include four North Carolina counties. He already declared seven in South Carolina as disaster areas. The declaration frees federal assistance and eases the way to getting loans for repairs.

The Army Corps of Engineers also began work on a temporary pontoon bridge to link devastated Isle of Palms and Sullivan's Island to the mainland once again, but the coastal resort of Garden City remained closed and guarded by troops against looters. The bridge to the Isle of Palms and Sullivan's Island was wiped out by the storm.

Animal-rights activists to boycott P&G products

By JOHN NOLAN
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Animal-rights activists say they will avoid buying Procter & Gamble Co. products in an attempt to pressure the company to stop using animals in product safety tests.

Holly Hazard, executive director of the Washington-based Doris Day Animal League, told reporters Monday that 36,000 of the group's members nationwide have returned cards indicating they will support the boycott.

The group accuses the consumer products company of needlessly torturing rabbits and other animals in laboratory tests in which cosmetics and other products are placed in the animals' eyes to document exposure risks.

The Doris Day group and similar organizations, including In Defense of Animals and People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, say the tests are cruel and unnecessary and produce irrelevant data.

The groups said other, more humane tests could provide safety data.

Procter & Gamble, however, says it has been studying alternatives to using animals but so far has found no satisfactory replacements.

Ms. Hazard met Monday with company representatives at Procter & Gamble's Cincinnati headquarters to present her group's demands, but said later she was disappointed with the results.

Hazard said P&G representatives declined her requests Monday to provide data on the numbers of animals used in testing and would not commit the company to support bills before Congress designed to phase out the use of animals in testing.

She said P&G officials also refused to disavow any relationship or contribution to the Animal Testing Coalition, which animal-rights activists describe as an industry group secretly committed to persuading the public that animal testing is necessary.

But P&G spokeswoman Linda Ulrey said the coalition was only an industry vehicle to educate the public that no sufficient alternatives have been discovered to permit the elimination of animal use in product tests.

Ms. Ulrey said P&G has spent $10 million in the last three years on research into alternatives. She said that compares with $150,000 P&G plans to spend this year on the industry coalition.

P&G reported $21.4 billion in worldwide sales during the past year.

Ulrey said alternatives to animal testing included scientific data-based predictions of effects of product exposure and computer-simulated results of exposure.

But she said: "Right now, the scientific community says you cannot completely walk away from animal testing."

P&G has won recognition for its research into alternatives to animal testing and will receive an award next month from the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Ulrey said.

Hazard and other activists said Monday they will stage demonstrations at P&G headquarters during the company's Oct. 10 shareholders' meeting.

They also said they would demonstrate that same day at other P&G operations in Baltimore; Chicago; Dallas; Greensboro, N.C.; Hatboro, Pa.; Iowa City, Iowa; Kansas City, Mo.; Oxnard, Calif.; Phoenix, Ariz.; and Sacramento, Calif.

Animal-rights activists have picketed P&G's shareholders meetings in the past.

In 1987, P&G's shareholders followed the company's recommendation in rejecting a resolution to stop using animals in product testing.

In 1988, the shareholders followed P&G's recommendation that they reject a resolution that would have required the company to disclose the numbers of animals used in tests and how much the tests cost.

P&G officials have consistently refused to release such information, saying it is privileged and is not necessarily relevant for comparison with other corporations.

Research works.

Oregon team set to explore geography of deep lakes

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press Writer

CRATER LAKE, Ore. (AP) — On the bookcase behind biologist Jim Milestone's desk at Crater Lake National Park is a reminder that the National Park Service is "gravely concerned" about geothermal development just outside the park.

The park service was so concerned that drilling for heat left by a volcano might rob the lake of clarity that it paid more than $600,000 for research that has drawn attention to deep lakes, the neglected stepchildren of oceanography.

"It is finally beginning to sink in that, gee, if we really want to know this planet, we've got to get down under not only the oceans of the world, but the fresh water as well," said Sylvia Earle, an oceanographer and head of Deep Ocean Engineering, the maker of Deep Rover, a one-person submarine.

In August, Oregon State University oceanographers Jack Dymond and Bob Collier led 23 dives — 13 seeking hydrothermal activity, five for geological samples and five studying biology — to the floor of 1,932-foot-deep Lake.

They're convinced hot springs exist but didn't find conclusive proof. They will spend a year on a report to help determine whether Crater Lake stays on a list of national parks with significant thermal features. If it does, Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan could block geothermal development to protect the lake.

What Dymond and Collier did find were mysterious blue pools of dense salty water on the bottom laden with carbon dioxide and radon; fluffy orange mats of iron-eating bacteria; elevated temperatures in rock anchoring the bacteria and rust-colored spires resembling stalagmites.

'It is finally beginning to sink in that, gee, if we really want to know this planet, we've got to get down under not only the oceans of the world, but the fresh water as well.'

At the deepest point of the lake, park biotechnician Mark Buktenica found tiny craters and a midge fly larva. Last year, Earle found ordinary green moss growing at the freshwater record depth of 725 feet.

"Part of it is the clarity of the water, but I think there may be more to it than that," said oceanographer Bruce Robison of the Monterey Bay Aquarium Research Institute.

Indian legends ascribe the formation of Crater Lake to a battle between Llao, god of the underworld, and Skell, god of the surface world.

Geologists date the cataclysmic eruption of Mount Mazama to 6,850 years ago. The volcano collapsed, leaving a "caldera" that filled with rain and melted snow and became a world standard for lake clarity.

Scientists became concerned that the lake was losing clarity and in 1982, Congress ordered a 10-year study. The clouding appears to be caused by growth in the population of microscopic plants called phytoplankton. The Park Service discounts a theory that nitrates from a septic system on the rim were feeding the plankton, but is going to remove the system anyway.

California Energy Co. filed leases just outside the park in the Winema National Forest and in 1986 began drilling in search of geothermal energy. The company says it would be impossible for its work to affect the lake.

A remote-controlled submersible made five dives in 1987. On one, Dymond and Collier saw what looked like a plume of smoke curling up from a crack, but they failed to get a temperature reading or a water sample for proof.

They returned last year for the first dives in Deep Rover, but navigation problems plagued them. This year, a system using sound waves from four ground stations to locate the sub in three dimensions cured the echo problems.

On Aug. 19, Collier piloted Deep Rover to 1,400 feet in the South Basin, where hydrothermal explorations were concentrated, and poked a probe into a bacterial mat, where it registered 61 degrees Fahrenheit. Three days later, Dymond got a reading of 63.9 degrees in another mat.

The temperatures met the U.S. Geological Survey test for a thermal spring — 18 degrees higher than the mean annual air temperature at the surface, which is 37.8 degrees. The water at the lake bottom is 38.3 degrees.

"So it is a thermal spring in some sense," said USGS engineer Manuel Nathenson in Menlo Park, Calif.

Whether it's a "significant thermal feature" as required by law "is a judgment call by the secretary of the Interior."

Dymond said the blue pools, one of which he dubbed Llao's Bath, could be the source of unexplained salts found in the lake. Those found in the South Basin have no apparent source; others found on the north side of the lake appear to be fed by tiny streams that pop out from under rocks.

Excited by their successes, Dymond and Collier are talking about expeditions to other deep lakes. First on their dream list is Lake Baikal in Siberia, the deepest in the world at 5,315 feet.

Study aims to calm hotheaded anger

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — A study of anger could help determine if hypertension can be handled by teaching hotheads and people who sit and simmer how to handle the emotion more appropriately, a researcher says.

"There must be at least a hundred studies out there showing that blood pressure and anger are related, but one has tried to change the way a person expresses their anger in order to lower their blood pressures," said West Virginia University clinical psychologist Kevin Larkin.

"We're not certain if anger causes high blood pressure or if high blood pressure causes difficulties with expressing anger.

"We're hoping if we teach people to express their anger appropriately, their blood pressure will come down."

Larkin's study, funded by the American Heart Association, will test the effect of a 12-week training program on people with borderline or moderate high blood pressure.

Half the subjects will receive assertiveness training and learn relaxation techniques. A control group will receive no training. Both groups' blood pressures will be tested before and after the training.

The training includes role playing and "stress inoculations," he said. "We teach people how to handle their stress and then expose them to little bits of stress and anger situations. We then increase the potential anger so they get used to handling bigger and more intense anger problems."

The trained group should be able to express anger without hurting others, react in a more subdued manner to provocation and have lower blood pressures at rest. "We're confident that we'll be able to show the first two. We're keeping our fingers crossed on being able to lower baseline blood pressures."

The training helps alleviate two types of responses shown to be harmful: "anger-in," in which the response is suppressed, and "anger-out," in which it is vented aggressively.

The anger-in person feels bad because they didn't express their anger openly," Larkin said. "The anger-out person feels pretty guilty because they attacked or offended somebody else.

"In both cases, people feel pretty lousy about themselves."

A third type, "reflective coping," in which anger is handled rationally after tempers have cooled, has little effect on blood pressure, he said.

Public can talk directly with experts on health issues

A KACV-TV production crew prepares to videotape in a radiation therapy suite of the Harrington Cancer Center for the upcoming special House Calls. From left, Bruce Mitchell, KACV-TV producer/director; Buddy Squyres, KACV-TV producer/director; and Karen Barnhill, local health reporter and host of House Calls.

AMARILLO - The most critical issues in public health come to the forefront of public television when KACV-TV presents House Calls Sept. 27 at 8 p.m. For the first time in this region, the public will have direct access to experts on heart disease, AIDS, substance abuse and cancer. Local physicians will man the phones to answer questions from the viewing audience. There will also be a panel of specialists discussing health issues and viewer concerns.

Sponsored by the Potter-Randall County Medical Society and KACV-TV, House Calls is a community service project designed to educate the Panhandle on leading medical issues. Health reporter

Karen Barnhill will mediate the live panel discussion and direct questions from callers.

"House Calls is a public service to our community to show that Amarillo physicians care and are concerned about medical issues like AIDS, heart disease, substance abuse and cancer," DeDe Vinson, Potter-Randall County Medical Society executive director, said.

Physicians specializing in the four topic areas will be Phillip Periman, Turner N. Caldwell III, Daniel E. Epley, G. Narayana Pillai, R. Lowell Chaffin, Pedro R. Hernandez-Lattuff, LaWayne Miller, John R. Logsdon, Gerald H. Holman, Daniel Gordon Jenkins, J. Rush

Pierce, Edward J. Sherwood, B. Ronald Fortner, B. William Freund, Jr., William I. Kracke, and Gary L. Rose.

"This type of program has received tremendous response in other parts of the country. It's an exciting opportunity for Panhandle residents to learn what they can do to lead healthier, more productive lives," Kathy Watson, House Calls producer said. "Viewers can ask questions on health problems they may find uncomfortable discussing with their private physician. Knowledge really is their best defense."

For viewers wishing to ask questions of these doctors, their calls will be taken at 371-5479 or 1-800-999-9243 during the broadcast.

Pearl Harbor Memorial tablet will honor those who died

DEAR ABBY: The year 1991 marks the 50th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor, and the 11th Bombardment Group (H) Association Inc. (a non-profit organization formed in Ohio in 1961) is in the process of building a large bronze memorial tablet with the names of those men killed in action on Dec. 7, 1941, inscribed on it. The tablet will be installed on Hickam Field, which is adjacent to Pearl Harbor.

I have spent considerable time and effort visiting the different Air Force bases, checking their records for the names of those killed or missing on Hickam Field, Dec. 7, 1941. The names of all men killed on Hickam Field will be on this tablet, not just those of the men of the 11th Bombardment Group (H).

We do not want to overlook anyone whose name should be on this memorial tablet, so because your column is so widely read, we are appealing to you to help us locate any and all family members who had loved ones on Hickam Field that day who were killed, or listed as missing and not accounted for.

ROBERT E. MAY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, GROUP (H) ASSOCIATION INC.
DEAR MR. MAY: Glad to be of help.

Readers: If you have information about military personnel who were either killed or listed as missing in action, please write to: Group (H) Association Inc., P.O. Box 637, Seffner, Fla. 33584.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter just told us that she is planning to get married this winter. We have her a good education, and now she is a high-salaried professional woman. She's 27 years old and has been on her own for four years.

Her fiance is also highly successful. He's 35 years old. Our daughter and this fellow have been living together for more than a year, against our wishes, and now they want a church wedding, followed by a big dinner for all the relatives — paid for by us! What are our obligations?

We personally feel that they have already danced to the music, and now they should pay the fiddler. Please answer in the paper, but do not use our name or town. Her grandparents would be crushed to learn that their granddaughter would live with someone before marriage!

DAD AND MOM
DEAR DAD AND MOM: You are under no obligation to foot the bill for your daughter's wedding regardless of whether she and her fiance lived together prior to their marriage. Just hand your daughter this column if you lack the courage to deliver this message verbally.

DEAR ABBY: Several times your readers have written to complain about television — the quality (or lack thereof) of the shows, the length, the number and the volume of commercials, the violence and offensive language, etc.

My solution to these problems is simple: Get rid of the tube! (People don't refer to it as "the idiot box" for nothing.) I do not own a television, and no one has been able to convince me that I'm missing much. Furthermore, I suspect that many folks who complain about never having the time to do anything spend more time than they realize parked in front of their TV sets.

Please pass this along to your readers, Abby. A suggestion: Tell 'em to get a good book and read it!
TRISH IN EASLEY, S.C.

DEAR TRISH: I have another suggestion: People who are annoyed by the commercials and the poor quality of their entertainment on commercial TV should watch public TV — and they shouldn't forget to pay for it!

DEAR ABBY: The letter carriers of the Postal Service and the employees of the utilities, newspapers and other delivery services must regularly have access to the properties of the community in order to perform their duties. Thousands of persons nationwide have suffered pain and other consequences of being bitten by dogs. Seven thousand were letter carriers last year alone.

Dog owners must accept that the attitude of "My dog doesn't bite" is a fallacy. Some dogs do bite letter carriers and other delivery service people. Owners need to realize that dog ownership carries with it several responsibilities. Preventing their dogs from biting or attacking people who must enter the property is one of them.

The U.S. Postal Service has been taking a tougher stance by interrupting mail delivery to homes where a dog is not properly restrained. Additionally, the agency has been assisting and joining its employees in actions to recover damages resulting from dog attacks.

Abby, will you please help us by asking dog owners to keep their dogs confined in a fenced yard, tied or chained, or keep them indoors during delivery hours? Thank you.

F. KOVE, SUPERVISOR, U.S.P.O., ROSEVILLE, MICH.

DEAR MR. KOVE: You bet I will. Where would I be without the U.S. Postal Service?

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There's ample justification for your expectations and hopefulness at this time, but continue to be realistic and pragmatic in your business and financial affairs. Subdue impulsive inclinations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today you are likely to be much luckier where your worldly interests are concerned than you will be socially. Focus your energies on the former, not the latter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't be influenced by associates or companions today who have devious intentions, because you could be extremely lucky today, provided you operate in accordance with your own highest standards.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) in your financial or business dealings today, stick to methods or tactics that have been tested and proven successful. Let your competitors do the experimenting.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) People whose cooperation is essential to your present needs can be induced to support you at this time. Don't be bashful about asking.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Conditions are promising for you today where the fulfillment of meaningful objectives are concerned. Focus on what you hope to achieve and know going in that what you're attempting is feasible.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could be a bit luckier than usual in just about anything you undertake today. However, there is one exception and it pertains to gambling on something about which you know little.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If there is something of importance you've been wanting to finalize, this is the day to do it. Don't wait on others to take the initiative, control conditions yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your greatest asset today is your ability to expand upon the ideas and suggestions of your contemporaries, regardless of how good they initially appear to be. Put your smarts to work.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your material prospects continue to look extremely encouraging, so make the most of situations that can enhance your financial position. There are improvements that can be made.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't be reluctant today to take on an endeavor with which you weren't too successful previously. It isn't likely you'll fall short of your expectations the second time around.

Bengals earn their stripes

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals' defense was tested twice in the clutch. It earned its stripes both times.

The Bengals stopped two Cleveland drives inside the 10-yard line in the fourth quarter Monday night to preserve a 21-14 victory over the Browns.

Cincinnati's defensive surge overwhelmed fullback Tim Manoa on fourth down and less than a yard at the Bengals' 9 to end one threat. Cornerback Eric Thomas batted down a fourth-down pass at the goal line with 1:41 left to decide the first Monday night game between the intrastate rivals.

"It feels good to be able to put your backs against the wall and keep your head up in that situation more than once," linebacker Reggie Williams said.

The two plays were all that separated the AFC Central rivals, now tied for first with 2-1 records.

"Those guys made the plays — they stopped us two times in the fourth quarter when we were trying to score," Browns receiver Reggie Langhorne said. "That pretty much says it right there."

The game started as a shootout between quarterbacks and ended up as a showcase for Cincinnati's short-yardage defense.

Cincinnati's Boomer Esiason and Cleveland's Bernie Kosar threw two touchdown passes apiece in the second quarter for a 14-all tie at the half.

Esiason, who has struggled against the Browns' tough bump-and-run coverage throughout his career, threw scoring passes of eight and 16 yards to tight end Rodney Holman.

Kosar countered with a 5-yard touchdown pass to Eric Metcalf, who put spectacular moves on two defenders to score his first professional touchdown, and a 6-yarder to Manoa just before the half.

Esiason broke the deadlock with a soft 19-yard touchdown pass to James Brooks early in the third quarter. Esiason had just three touchdown passes and six interceptions in his nine previous games against Cleveland.

"Every time we had things under control, Boomer made big plays for them," Browns coach Bud Carson said.

The difference in Esiason Monday night was his patience in adjusting to defenses at the line of scrimmage, according to Coach Sam Wyche.

"Boomer had one of those special games calling plays," Wyche said.

"Our offensive line gave me great protection," Esiason, who wasn't sacked, said. "The guys caught everything I threw. And I made a lot of right calls at the line of scrimmage."

Kosar single-handedly matched

him in the second quarter, but the Browns' lack of a running game eventually doomed them in the second half.

Cleveland's offense failed to get a first down on three third-quarter possessions. Kosar, sacked just once in the first half, was dropped five times after the intermission.

"We changed our pass protections three or four times," Carson said. "They got good pressure on Bernie, no question. They did a good job defensively. But in the end, we had the chance to win it."

Two chances to tie, anyway. The Browns drove from their own 26 to the Bengals' 9-yard line, where they faced fourth down and less than a yard with eight minutes left. Carson chose to go for the first down.

"We were close enough that I thought, hell, if we can't make this, we're in trouble," he said.

He was right.

Manoa went to the right and was stacked up at the line, losing a little ground. It was a sadly familiar scene for Carson, whose offense has struggled on the ground without fullback Kevin Mack, who is finishing a drug suspension.

"I'm not taking anything away from Cincinnati, but we have not run the ball well in short-yardage situations all year," Carson said.

Cowboys humbled by third loss

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) — On the day after the second-worst home opener in team history, new coach Jimmy Johnson's anger had cooled.

"I knew we were in for a long haul when I accepted the job," Johnson said. However, Johnson said he'll never forget Washington's 30-7 slaughter of the Cowboys.

"I don't want these players to forget how awful they looked," said the new Cowboys coach. "I can't live with this and I don't expect them to live with it either."

Sunday's humiliating loss to the Redskins dropped the new era Cowboys to 0-3 in the club's worst start since 1963. The only other NFL team without a victory is the Detroit Lions.

The Cowboys only got 10 first downs against the Redskins and Herschel Walker was held to 33 yards rushing on 11 tries. Rookie quarterbacks Troy Aikman and Steve Walsh each threw two interceptions.

"I'm totally embarrassed," said offensive coordinator David Shula, who was in the NFL eight years with the Miami Dolphins. "We were inept. I'm very discouraged."

The Dallas offense, which has been shut out in two games, has been blanked 10 times in 12 quarters. Shula's quarterbacks have eight interceptions and one touchdown pass.

"We knew there would be rough times but nothing like this," Shula said.

Johnson was livid over the Cowboys' pathetic performance.

"We will not accept being a poor football team," Johnson said. "We'll work and do whatever it takes. We'll find those players who want to work."

"We'll practice longer and stay in meetings longer and run longer after practice. It's not a good feeling."

In consecutive weeks, the Cowboys have lost to New Orleans 28-0 and blew a 21-10 halftime lead before falling to the Atlanta Falcons. They wouldn't have come close to scoring against Washington if Jim Jeffcoat hadn't returned Mark Rypien's fumble 77-yards for a score.

After a 3-1 preseason record which had Johnson and new owner Jerry Jones feeling chesty, the Cowboys once again have become joke material like they did in a 3-13 season a year ago.

"Maybe the preseason got our expectations up too high," Johnson said. "Sometimes you get humble in a hurry."

The Cowboys' flop already is hurting ticket sales.

Marcia Lavine, ticket office manager, said phones weren't ringing like they had the previous week after the Cowboys lost at Atlanta.

About 12,000 tickets remain for Sunday's game against the New York Giants.

"The phones are not as busy as they normally are on Monday mornings," Lavine said.

The Cowboys suffered more damage than just to their pride.

Running back Kevin Scott will be out for the season and undergo surgery on Tuesday for a knee injury.

Linebacker Ken Norton and cornerback Robert Williams, who have knee injuries, and center Tom Rafferty, who has a dislocated right thumb, will miss two or three weeks.

Cowboys' public relations director Greg Aiello was scrambling to find something positive.

"I'm telling everyone (Washington's) Joe Gibbs, (Pittsburgh's) Chuck Noll and (Chicago's) Mike Ditka all started out like Jimmy," Aiello said. "Or course, Tom Landry was 0-11-1 in his first year."

Gibbs went 0-5 before he won a game. Retired San Francisco coach Bill Walsh was 2-14 his first year, Noll 1-13, and Ditka 3-6 in the strike year of 1982.

"That's not much solace," Johnson said. "I just can't accept losing. The bottom line is winning."

Johnson has already lost one third as many games as he did in five years at the University of Miami where he produced a national champion and was 52-9 overall.

Pampa hosts Lady Bulldogs tonight

The Lady Harvesters will host Borger in District 1-4A volleyball action tonight at McNeely Fieldhouse beginning at 6:30.

Both teams enter the contest tied for third place in district with 2-2 records. Pampa stands at 6-11 overall, while Borger is 6-13.

Tonight is Parents' night for the Lady Harvesters. Players' parents will be honored before the start of the game, and a reception will follow in the athletic fieldhouse.

Volleyball

MOBEETIE — Kelton posted a 15-2, 15-6 win over Mobeetie in a District 9-1A volleyball match last weekend.

Rosie Taylor got Kelton off to a sizzling start when she served 14 straight points in the first game.

"She got the last one over the net, but we had a bad set or she could have had 15 in a row," said Kelton coach Brad Slatton.

The second game was much closer, but with the score 7-6, Kelton's favor, the Lady Lions reeled off the next eight points.

Kelton is now 7-7 overall and 2-0 in district play. The Lady Lions play Perryton in a non-district match tonight at Perryton.

Tech 'D' dominant

LUBBOCK (AP) — The Texas Tech Red Raiders have no need to feel defensive about their defense.

Sure, Coach Spike Dykes wasn't so sure about his football team's defensive crew before the season started. Seven of last year's starters were gone, and he worried about the loss of experience.

"We got some guys back that are a little shaky, a little tender," he said before the season opener with Arizona. "If we can hold on until we get some experience, we'll be fine."

What a difference three games makes: "The Red Raiders are 3-0 after victories over Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma State, and defense is why they aren't 1-2."

Now Dykes wants to make sure his players don't get cocky heading into Saturday's game in Waco in the conference opener for both Tech and Baylor. The Bears have a 1-2 record, with losses at Oklahoma and Georgia.

"Being 3-0 doesn't mean very much," Dykes said Monday. "It means you have an early lead, and it makes the other teams try that much harder to get it back. So we're in a position that if we're not careful, we'll be vulnerable."

The Raiders don't look vulnerable on defense. Against Oklahoma State, the Tech defense limited the Cowboys to three field goals in their first five incursions inside Tech's 25-yard line.

In the second and third quarters, the Raiders' offense turned the ball over four times in five possessions. All Oklahoma State could make of those opportunities was two field goals.

"It seems like we're at a level when we make mistakes, we don't self-destruct," Dykes said. "That's a great personality trait for a football team, and I hope it continues."

For the second game in a row, Tech kept an opponent out of the end zone after it had a first down inside Tech's 10-yard line. A spectacular goal-line stand in the final two minutes assured Tech's 27-20 victory over New Mexico, and Oklahoma State had to settle for a field goal after having a first-and-goal from the 4-yard line.

Even a career-high 159 yards rushing by Oklahoma State's Gerald Hudson wasn't enough to intimidate the Red Raider defense Saturday.

Texas-Penn State game turning few heads in '89

AUSTIN (AP) — In other years, heads would turn when Texas and Penn State met on a football field.

But this season, the game won't even be shown on local television.

Texas coach David Williams isn't concerned, however, about the lacking luster surrounding Saturday's game.

"I don't know about anybody else, but those two names still carry a lot of weight with me," McWilliams said Monday afternoon. "Hey, Penn State is Penn State."

Both teams are coming off poor seasons. Texas was 4-7 in 1988 — their worst record in 32 years. Penn State was 5-6.

"It has happened at other places," McWilliams said. "USC, Notre Dame, Ohio State. They've all had their down periods."

The Longhorns own their first game last Saturday, defeating SMU 45-13 despite a sluggish first half. Texas had been decked by Colorado 27-6 in its opener three weeks ago.

After an opening loss to Virginia, the Nittany Lions have rebounded with wins over Temple and Boston College.

Penn State had to score on the last play of the game to beat Boston College 7-3.

Despite last week's win, McWilliams said the Longhorns have not jelled.

"We are still missing a lot," he said. "We have got to get a lot better to be a good team."

McWilliams said he will continue to use three quarterbacks, although Mark Murdock will start. Freshman Peter Gardere and senior Donovan Forbes will share action with Murdock.

"If we're successful doing it, then I'm comfortable with it," McWilliams said. "The question is: can you win doing that?"

Murdock threw for a career-high three touchdown passes against SMU and was 7-of-16 for 73 yards. Gardere passed for 52 yards and Forbes threw for 40 against the Mustangs.

Blue Jays avenge 1987's loss with 2-0 victory over Detroit

By The Associated Press

The Toronto Blue Jays say they are no longer looking back and the Baltimore Orioles claim they aren't looking ahead.

The Blue Jays felt they finally laid the corpse of 1987 to rest when Tony Fernandez, the man who wasn't there in '87 after suffering a broken elbow, hit a two-run homer for a 2-0 victory Monday night over the Tigers in Detroit.

Toronto snapped a two-game skid and maintained its one-game lead over Baltimore in the American League East. Naturally, everyone recalled that in 1987, the Blue Jays led Detroit by 2 1/2 games with six remaining but finished a game behind after being swept in the final series of the season at Tiger Stadium.

"Everybody keeps bringing up 1987," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said. "I hope you'll remember we played without Tony Fernandez, who hit the home run tonight, and also without Ernie Whitt. They were both injured. We're getting tired of hearing about 1987."

If the Blue Jays are to win the division, they'll have to wait until the weekend. The Orioles' 5-3 victory over Milwaukee assured them of a chance to catch the Blue Jays in their showdown three-game series in Toronto beginning Friday night.

"We've got two more games here (Milwaukee). Don't give me that Toronto stuff," Manager Frank Robinson said.

In the AL West, the Oakland Athletics missed a chance to clinch a tie for their second straight title when Texas' Fred Manrique hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning, only the 15th of his 31 1/2-year major-league career, giving the Rangers a 3-2 victory.

The AL East leaders both got strong performances from pitchers who had been struggling.

Toronto's Jimmy Key allowed six hits with nine strikeouts and no walks in seven innings, only the third time in the last 16 games a Toronto starter has won. Meanwhile, Baltimore's Pete Harnisch won for the first time since Sept. 7 by limiting the Brewers to three hits and three runs over 6 1-3 innings.

National League

It's beginning to look like a very quiet weekend in the National League.

Oh, there will be a batting title to Jimmy Key picks up a win for Toronto, only the third time in 16 games that a Blue Jays starter has won. Key lasted seven innings to improve to 13-14.

decide and the race for second place in both divisions is still hot.

But by late tonight, the anticipated showdowns between the Chicago Cubs and the Cardinals in St. Louis and the San Francisco Giants and Padres in San Diego could mean nothing more than a mere warmup for the playoffs.

San Francisco clinched a tie for the NL West championship Monday night despite losing 5-2 to Los Angeles as second-place San Diego also lost, 5-3 to Cincinnati.

"We had the scenario down pat. San Diego needed to lose and we needed to do our job," San Francisco's Will Clark said. "The Padres lost but we didn't get our job done."

The Giants can win their second division title in three years with a victory tonight at Dodger Stadium or another San Diego loss to Cincinnati.

"Everyone knows what the Dodgers-Giants rivalry has been like," Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia said. "They're knocking on the door, but we really don't want the Giants to clinch it here in our home ballpark."

Chicago missed a chance to clinch a tie for the NL East title, losing to Montreal 4-3 in 10 innings. But the Cubs still managed to reduce their magic number to two as Pittsburgh beat second-place St.

Louis 4-2. St. Louis and Chicago each have five games remaining and the Cubs have a four-game lead.

The Cubs can clinch the division tonight if they beat the Expos and the Cardinals lose to the Pirates.

Andre Dawson hit two home runs for the Cubs.

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Philadelphia 2, New York 1 and Atlanta 5, Houston 3.

Dodgers 5, Giants 2
Mike Scioscia hit a solo homer and drove in four runs and Jeff Hamilton was 3-for-3 and scored three runs for the Dodgers.

Rookie John Wetteland struck out six and walked one to improve his record to 5-8. He pitched seven-plus innings and allowed seven hits.

Matt Williams and Pat Sheridan homered for the Giants.

Don Robinson, who pitched 5 2-3 innings, allowed four runs on eight hits to fall to 12-11.

Cubs 4, Expos 3
Scott Sanderson, 11-9, relieved in the 10th inning for the visiting Cubs and Mike Aldrete led off with a single. Rex Hudler pinch ran and stole second and the Cubs intentionally walked Andres Gallarraga. After a sacrifice by rookie Marquis Grissom moved the runners up, Tim Wallach was intentionally walked. Mitch Williams then relieved.

Some Contras left out in the cold as sides shift again

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Central America's shifting political landscape has produced a more tolerant U.S. attitude toward Nicaragua's leftist government and deepening hostility toward some Contra rebels who once enjoyed red-carpet access here, according to U.S. and rebel sources.

The changed attitude toward the Sandinista government has been subtle compared with the mutual recriminations and finger-pointing that now characterize the relationship between the State Department and some elements of Nicaragua's exiled opposition.

By de-emphasizing military pressure against the Sandinista government, the United States has moved away from the confrontational policies of the Reagan administration and is now pursuing peaceful but guarded coexistence.

The shift has embittered some Contras. "No one in the resistance trusts the State Department," says Bosco Matamoros, a rebel spokesman who is closely allied with veteran Contra leader Adolfo Calero.

Calero was once a regular visitor to the White House and the State Department during the Reagan years but nowadays is treated almost as an outcast by the Bush administration.

Matamoros maintains that the State Department has refused even to answer rebel correspondence while abandoning the Reagan administration policy of avoiding all substantive contact with Sandinista leaders. When a congressional delegation met recently with President Daniel Ortega, a top State Department official participated.

Amid the ongoing debate over when the Contras should disband, Matamoros said the State Department "seems more interested than the Sandinistas in demobilizing the resistance."

One continuing source of concern for the administration is Soviet bloc military aid for the Sandinistas, estimated at $350 million for the first eight months of this year.

The administration view is that the Contra leadership mantle has passed from Miami-based civilians to battle-hardened Contra field commanders who have risen through the ranks and are far more qualified to represent the armed opposition to the Sandinistas.

Officials talk disdainfully of the U.S. taxpayer-financed Contra bureaucracy which has operated for years in Miami. Matamoros accused State Department officials of grossly exaggerating the size of the Contras' paid staff.

By turning its back on Contra civilian leaders who have refused to return to the region and by favoring the emerging military commanders within the resistance, Matamoros says the Bush administration is tacitly advocating a military coup despite its stated preference for civilian supremacy.

Matamoros said the State Department 'seems more interested than the Sandinistas in demobilizing the resistance.'

The administration's twin objectives for Nicaragua are to support the internal opposition there as the country gears up for national elections and to keep the armed resistance intact until after the Feb. 25 balloting.

The bulk of the rebel force is based at camps along the Honduran border, living off U.S.-supplied humanitarian assistance.

Central American presidents have called for the demobilization of the rebels by Dec. 5 but the Bush administration regards that deadline as irrelevant because the presidents also said that any such process must be voluntary.

The administration believes that the presence of rebel forces along the border serves as an incentive for the Sandinistas to fulfill their promise of a free and fair election.

At the same time, the Bush administration is trying to devise a way to assist Nicaragua's fledgling democratic process without providing direct support to the campaign of the principal opposition candidate, Violeta Chamorro.

Meanwhile, the administration seems willing to live with a Sandinista victory provided the process is reasonably honest.

There's nothing new under collar

MILWAUKEE (AP) — There's really nothing new under the collar, despite what may have been written about the "latest" in necktie knots.

Delos Hinze says he was surprised to read a newspaper story that touted as innovation the idea of tying a Windsor knot by starting with the cravat inside-out.

The Shelby knot has caught the eye of the national press since being praised by a Milwaukee television newsmen.

"I've been tying it that way for 35 years," Hinze said. "It just bothered me."

The novelty was supposed to have been proven by its absence from a reference guide from the National Neckwear Association of America called Getting Knotted — 188 Knots for Necks.

But Hinze dug up a booklet he got from a Milwaukee clothing store in the 1950s, and there it was, on Page 6. The booklet from Johnnie Walkers clothing calls it a reverse half-Windsor.

The store's still around, but the present staff isn't interested in laying claim to the knot.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

U.S. Gov't. Approves Patent Claims for New Diet Pill

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special) — An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a 'lazy way' to lose weight because the pills alone 'automatically' reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public

If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W992, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) For fastest service for credit card orders ONLY call anytime 24 hours, toll free 1(800) 527-9700, ext. W992.
