Clifford Irving Called 'Con Man Of The Year'

NEW YORK (AP) — Time magazine, calling author Clifford Irving "Con Man of the Year," says much of his "autobiography" of Howard Hughes was plagiarized and that Irving admitted the hoax in an effort to spare his wife from jail.

Claimed to know how Irving gained access to the manuscript which Phelan wrote for former Hughes' aide Noah Dietrich. Irving's attorney called the Time article "a gloating, prancing, distorting piece that is irresponsible in the extreme."

agreed secretly to drop charges against Mrs. Irving if her husband cooperates with the investigation and "someone goes to jail." U.S. Atty. Whitney North Seymour Jr. declined comment on the report.

broke down and told her own side of the story, partly in anger over her husband's now famous affair with Danish singer Nina van Pallandt.

Life canceled the contract after deciding the book was a hoax. In its story Sunday, Time magazine said that Irving admitted through his lawyer in the U.S. attorney's office last week that "his baroque detailed scenario was a fraud."

version, along with 150 pages of the transcript of tape-recorded interviews with Dietrich, some time in the last year. Then with the help of a researcher, his own imagination, and information supplied by current or former Hughes associates, Irving concocted "The Autobiography of Howard Hughes," Time said.

County Solons Hear Airport Plan Report

Members of the Gray County Commissioners Court today heard Gene Barber, consulting engineer for the county, report that the work at Perry Lefors Field was completed well within the original cost estimate.

Barber noted this was accomplished even after certain changes were made in the project. The board approved payment of the final estimate to the contractor on the job. Following a brief executive session at the close of today's meeting, Judge Don Cain and the commissioners went to the airport where Barber took them on a tour of the new project.

Worry Clinic

By - GEORGE W. CRANE, PH. D., M. D.

CASE 1-502: Diana B., aged 17, is the unhappy high schooler who lacked friends and never had a date.

So I taught her the 5 Laws for Complimenting her companions, plus the art of fading out of dialogue with a question mark.

"Diana," I began, "the first law consists of praising your comrade's clothes or hair or teeth or his personal possessions."

"So tomorrow you should carefully inspect the boy who sits beside you in class."

"Then pick out something that merits a word of praise."

"Start the conversation with him by mentioning your admiration for his new tie or neat handwriting, etc."

She brightened at the thought she could now win friends.

"But, Dr. Crane," she protested, "I don't know if I could muster up enough courage to speak first!"

However, I told her to take a big breath and then launch upon her compliment.

"Diana," I encouraged her, "there is an old proverb that says, 'Nothing ventured, nothing gained.'"

"If you wish to be popular and have a boy friend, you must force yourself to employ the right psychological strategy."

DIANA'S DECISION

Well, Diana decided she had been miserable long enough so she prodded herself into speaking first.

She began by complimenting the boy's attractive tie.

"I hope you won't mind my saying so," she said, "but I think that is a very pretty tie. Where did you get it?"

The boy had been about as shy as Diana so he blushed at this unexpected compliment.

He wasn't even deft enough to say "Thank you" for Diana's bit of praise.

But he did mention that his sister had given him the tie for his birthday.

"Oh, you have a sister," Diana now proceeded more easily, "how old is she?"

Notice that Diana had profited from my tutoring her in fading out of her part of the dialogue with a question mark instead of a period!

For that interrogation mark is shaped like a fish hook.

So it hooks your companion gracefully into carrying on his half of the dialogue.

Soon conversation will reach enough momentum that it will then flow along easily without your strained effort.

After the boy had told his sister's age, Diana then asked him if he had any brothers, too.

The boy replied that he had a younger brother in grammar school, plus an older brother in the army.

"Are they as handsome as you are?" Diana continued, growing bolder with her new skill at steering conversation.

Besides, she saw by now that the boy was as shy as she had been so she felt more confident.

And each day thereafter, it became easier for Diana to chat with the boy.

In fact, within a week, he invited her to go with him to their high school basketball game.

Bones Of Prehistoric Beings Found In South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—Prehistoric beings who roamed Africa two or three million years ago may have been more human and less apelike than believed earlier.

Most scientists hold that such specimens as Mrs. Ples and the Taung child, which are classified as Australopithecus, were simple creatures with an IQ little brighter than that of a gorilla or chimpanzee. They are classified as "hominid," or members of the family of man, however.

Fossils found at Makapansgat limeworks near the town of Potgietersrus some 160 miles north of Johannesburg provide evidence that Australopithecus may have been a manufacturer and user of tools, says researcher Brian Maguire.

Working at Johannesburg's Bernard Price Institute for Palaeontological Research, Maguire has completed a 10 year study of materials dug from Makapansgat.

Along with Australopithecus fossil remains, Maguire collected thousands of stone fragments which, he contends, give evidence of having been made and used as tools.

The making of tools is not usually linked with the lower animals. While chimps will use tools, even these highly developed primates have never been credited with making them. Until recently it was taken for granted the apemen of southern Africa were not makers of stone tools. Prof. F. Clark Howell, a United States anthropologist, wrote in 1966:

"...if two-leggedness does depend on tool use, it stands to reason that Australopithecus, who was unquestionably two-legged, must have been a tool user. It would be nice to be able to confirm this by producing some chipped stone artifacts from the same strata...but here we are stymied. Experts searched for stone tools to go with Australopithecus for years but did not find a single one."

Maguire says they have been found, but just not recognized as tools by scientists. "To the conventional archaeologists such stone tools should be obviously flaked, usually into some conventional or readily recognizable form. The tools I have found are much more primitive and evidence of flaking is minimal."

They are nevertheless fashioned by hand, Maguire maintains. Natural circumstances cannot explain their features, neither the nature of damage nor the endless repetition of certain basic shapes.

Despite their crudeness, Maguire recognizes six basic tools, including those he labels as scrapers, planes, anvils and pounders. Most have a scraping or cutting edge and most of the scrapers are notched or concave. These notches vary in size and position but almost without exception show signs of manufacture and sometimes much wear from usage.

More than 40 fragments of Australopithecus have been found at different levels at the limeworks. No remains of other hominids have been excavated, indicating that Australopithecus may have been the only occupant of the caverns and hence the maker of all the tools.

Nova Scotia has nearly 10 1/2-million acres of forest.

BANKOK, Thailand (AP)—Queen Elizabeth was drenched by tropical rain before her hosts, King Bhumipol and Queen Sirikit, could summon umbrellas.

The queen and thousands of Thais who had come out to see her were caught in the downpour Friday on the way to inspect a $15 million scaled-down reproduction of the country's outstanding buildings.

Later, the queen, her dress splattered with raindrops despite the umbrella, toured the site while Thai attendants knelt bareheaded in the downpour as she passed.

The U. S. delegation spokesman at the peace talks, Stephen Ledogar, said Friday that installation of the furniture "should not be taken as an indication one way or another" as to whether Porter expected the deadlocked three-year-old talks to continue for a long time.

Porter's furniture arrived from Korea, where he had served as ambassador before his appointment to the peace talks.

Attendance In Public School Declines, Says State Board

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—For the first time since World War II, attendance has declined in Texas' public schools, the State Board of Education was told Saturday.

Enrollment in grades 1-8 last year dropped 23,656 from the previous year to a total of 1,950,900, education officials said, while enrollment in grades 9-12 rose by 19,475 to a total of 805,300.

The number of kindergarten students was not included.

Based on live births, projected enrollment figures for the next five school years suggest that the total enrollment in Texas public schools is likely to decline 6 per cent between 1970-71 and 1975-76, the officials said.

Their figures were included in a report prepared for the special session of the legislature, for which no date has been set.

3,608 Persons Killed On Texas Highways In '71

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—The director of the Department of Public Safety told civil defense directors today the number of Texas traffic deaths could be reduced if drivers would worry as much about traffic accidents as they do hurricanes and tornadoes.

Col. Wilson Speir said the estimated 1971 traffic death toll is 3,608, a new record and an increase of 48 from the previous year. The economic loss from traffic accidents totaled about $1 billion.

"Imagine, if you will, the headlines which would result if the more usual sorts of disaster killed 3,600 people in Texas each year," Speir told the annual civil defense conference.

Although the number of traffic deaths increased last year, Speir said the highway death rate fell from 5.23 persons killed per 100 miles of approximately 5.10 in 1971.

"We know that vehicles, licensed drivers, and miles driven will probably increase in Texas year after year," he said. "But if individual drivers will start worrying about traffic accidents like they do about hurricanes and tornadoes, and if our citizens will give their full support to effective law enforcement measures, there is no good reason why deaths and injuries on the highways can't be stabilized or even reduced."

For civil defense, Speir said public safety radio stations had been added at Ozona and Lampasas, and project applications for emergency operating centers are "in various stages for approval" for Harlingen, Lubbock, Midland and Dallas. A center at Waco is 75 per cent complete.

Speir said civil defense education programs are now in operation in 210 school districts in Texas for approximately 30,000 high school pupils and adults.

As an example of what Texas faced last year, he said, there were 189 tornadoes which caused some $8.5 million in damage. Hurricane Fern caused total property damage estimated at $30 million.

Speir told the directors their first request for assistance should be to the nearest Department of Public Safety district headquarters or the nearest DPS patrolman.

Grocery Shopper Finds Little Comfort In Decrease Of Food Budgeting

NEW YORK (AP) — It will be of little solace to the grocery shopper to be told that food expenditures as part of the family budget have dropped from 22 per cent in 1960, to 20 per cent in 1969 and to about 17 per cent in 1970.

Neither will calm settle over the shopper who realizes that, despite the hullabaloo, food prices during the past 20 years have seldom risen faster than the Consumer Price Index.

There just isn't any explanation, any answer, any rationale that will soothe the feelings of consumers as they gradually realize that food prices, despite controls, are headed higher. It is the direction that counts.

Food is a gut issue in more ways than one. It is closely associated with family health, security, survival.

This year, the Agriculture Department reports, consumers will spend $6.6 billion more for food because of an expected rise of retail food prices by 4 per cent and because of higher prices paid to farmers for raw products.

Last year the food price increase was only 2.5 per cent, a low figure but still enough to raise the price of a roast beef dinner for a family of four in the New York area from $5.89 to $6.44.

The lady of the house doesn't keep precise figures, such as does the labor Department, which measures each month the costs of both roast beef and chicken dinners—the latter rose 29 cents during the year to $4.41—but she does know that 55 cents is missing somewhere, and the chances are she will blame it on the grocery bill. She considers that bill the hole in her pocketbook.

Moreover, judging from rather recent experience, she will not stop with assessing blame. She will complain. She will complain to the breadwinner, who will reply that he can do nothing for her because his pay is frozen. Then what? When inflation grew steadily during the late 1960s, food shoppers boycotted and picketed around the country, forcing some of the large chains to experiment with and finally adopt the idea of discount stores free of frills.

It is unlikely that anything similar will occur again, even though shoppers learned from that experience and from the consumer movement in general that they can enforce their will and win compliance from "the system."

More likely, if prices do rise as forecast, the pressure this year will be for extension of price controls to cover raw agricultural products, which many people are only now learning are exempt.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz already has spoken publicly on the possibility, one that he apparently considers would be unfair to farmers, of expanding controls to cover raw products. And he suggested a reason why:

The preponderance of food shoppers live in metropolitan areas—the very same place where reside the voters of this largely urban nation.

In another action, the board ruled that pay increases exceeding 8 per cent which are due in the second or later years of multi-year labor agreements involving 1,000 or more workers must be cleared with the pay panel in advance.

The board added that existing contracts would be permitted to take effect unless they were challenged as being "unreasonably inconsistent" with pay guidelines by five members of the board or interested parties.

Fulfilling a commitment made last December to devalue the dollar, the government formally asked Congress to boost the official price of gold to $38 an ounce from the $35 level that has been in effect 36 years.

The request to Congress had hinged on winning short-term trade concessions from other nations.

Progress in that direction was made when Japan agreed to lift restrictions on a wide range of U.S. imports.

Among the concessions won by the United States were a 10 per cent tariff reduction on computers, machine tools, and soybean oil as well as the removal of a 5 per cent duty on soybeans.

The United States and the Common Market said they had reached agreement on mutual concessions, breaking a deadlock that appeared to jeopardize trade relations between the United States and the 10-nation bloc. At the same time, both sides announced agreement to conduct negotiations in 1973 to reduce trade barriers.

President Nixon indicated he had some serious reservations about the value-added tax, which would be a form of national sales tax collected at every stage of the manufacturing and distribution process on all products and nearly all services. The tax has been proposed as partial substitute for property taxes for schools.

"We have not yet found a way, frankly, that we could recommend to replace the property tax," he said.

MR. AND MRS. DOLTON WALKER
Miss Fisher Wed To Dolton Walker

Marriage vows were exchanged at 1:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 24, in St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church by Miss Althea Fisher and Dolton Walker.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Evelyn Daley of Brooklyn, N. Y. and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Kate Walker, 908 S. Wells.

The Ceremony
Rev. Francis J. Hynes, C. M., officiated for the double-ring ceremony. Miss Lucy White of Guymon, Okla., was organist.

The couple was married before an altar flanked by arrangements of red poinsettia.

The Bride
The bride was attired in a gown of white velvet, styled with a pointed collar, edged with lace, and long full sleeves that were gathered into wide cuffs. The floor-length skirt fell from an empire waistline. Her veil of illusion was waist-length, and she carried a cascade bouquet of miniature white carnations, accented in red.

She carried out the tradition of something old, new, borrowed and blue. Something new was a strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom.

Attendants
Miss Barbara Huckert of Summerfield, Tex., roommate of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a floor-length gown of blue chiffon and velvet and carried a cascade bouquet of white miniature carnations.

Serving the bridegroom as best man was Billy Proctor of Midland.

Mothers
The mother of the bridegroom wore a blue knit dress with black accessories. Her corsage of red miniature carnations.

The bride's mother was unable to attend the wedding.

Reception
The reception was held in the home of the bridegroom's mother. The serving table was covered with a red and white lace cloth, centered with the bride's bouquet. Flanking the bouquet were red tapers in crystal holders.

Miss Janice Kuykendall, cousin of the bridegroom, presided at the punch bowl, and Mrs. Norman Walker, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, served the cake.

Mrs. Sara Dunaway, aunt of the bridegroom, presided at the coffee service.

Affiliations
The bride is a junior sociology student at West

Texas State University, Canyon.

The bridegroom, a 1967 graduate of Pampa High School, is a senior music major at WTSU, where he is a member of Pi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, men's music fraternity.

For the wedding trip to Kansas City, Mo., and Omaha, Neb., the bride wore a blue pant suit.

The couple is at home at 407-18th Street, Canyon.

Pre-nuptial events included a shower in the home of Mrs. Wallace Bruce, Pampa.

Dear Abby

Get out of your rut, a housewife advises

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Lately you have fallen into a terrible rut. You tell everyone who has a problem to see a psychiatrist or some kind of counselor.

Abby, if these people could afford to go to psychiatrists they wouldn't be writing to you. I know what I'm talking about because my husband would never go anywhere if he had a problem, but if he saw something in your column that really shook him up he'd pay attention to it.

As a matter of fact, a couple of years back you had something in your column about how unpleasant it was to go to bed with a husband who didn't shower regularly. Right after that, my husband took to showering nearly every day, which made me very happy. And I'm sure his coworkers were a lot happier, too. Now, if you will just print some real sharp stuff about husbands who are under 50 and aren't interested in sex. SEPARATE BEDS

DEAR SEPARATE: Sorry, but I send all men under seventy who aren't interested in sex to their family doctors. And if they're physically sound, then I send them to psychiatrists.

DEAR ABBY: A girl (I'll call her "Mary") wrote to you. She said her sister was a nun, and a few years ago nuns couldn't participate in weddings, so Mary promised her girl friend that she could be her maid-of-honor when she got married.

Well, when it came time for Mary's wedding, the church had changed its rules and nuns were allowed to be in weddings, so Mary told her girl friend that she wanted her sister to be maid of honor. The girl friend got mad, and I don't blame her.

But you went along with Mary! Abby, how could you? A promise is a promise, no matter what. It wasn't the girl friend's fault that the Catholic church finally got smart.

I usually agree with you, but this time I think you were wrong. BUFFALO READER

DEAR READER: I still feel that since the circumstances changed, Mary was justified in asking her sister. The girl friend should have been more understanding, and accepted the role of "bridesmaid," which Mary offered her on bended knee. But she declined instead, saying if she couldn't be maid of honor she wouldn't even come to the wedding. I'm still with Mary.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are soon to celebrate our 25th wedding anniversary, and we're making plans. We would like to get married again in church with my daughter and her husband as our only attendants. It wouldn't be a very large wedding. Just our relatives and some close friends.

I want to wear my daughter's wedding gown and veil, which fits me perfectly. Would that be proper? When I was married, my husband and I didn't have much of a wedding. We just went to the minister's house and wore regular street clothes.

I have always wanted to be married in a church with a gown and veil. Do you think I'm foolish? Also, would it be necessary for my husband and me to have blood tests and apply for a license all over again? Let me know, and I'll do as you say. SILVER WEDDING

DEAR SILVER: Go ahead and have the church wedding in your daughter's gown and veil, and God bless you. And you do not need blood tests or another license. The ceremony is merely symbolic. You are already married.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SICK OF UNINVITED GUESTS IN ORLANDO:" There is only one way to deal with an uninvited and unwanted guest, and that is to tell him you are not able to accommodate him. And if all your friends in Orlando are having the same problem, and if, as you say, all the motels are filled up, you should consider going into the motel business.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, FEB. 15, 1972

Your birthday today: Transformation is the main way of your life this year. Long-standing obligations should be retired or converted to new, more productive forms. Today's natives live much of their most poignant moments dramatizing, projecting big legends of romantic achievements.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Your good cheer tips the general balance in favor of achievement as your turn to be heard comes around. A short cut between yourself and what you want is temporarily wide open.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Continue defining terms and striving for understanding among vigorous, outspoken associates. Patience wins out.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Money deals include details you hadn't planned; look before signing. People want your opinion on many things but may not offer much in immediate return.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Set up an important interview for what you have to offer. Initiative bulks toward a burst of energy late in the day along with an urge to do something special.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Concentrate on career building, business dealings, exchanges. Friends are off in another direction, not to be drafted to do anything for you at the moment.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Self-sufficiency is your goal as local arrangements encounter lapses, failures of coordination. See that temperance doesn't upset anything.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Discretion, formality are strongly protective approaches. You are apt to get in over your head with high stakes on what should be innocent games.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Take a broken promise in stride; not much is really lost. Discuss career questions, but not in public. Important decisions are not ripe yet.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: New enterprises are favored, should be vigorously promoted. Fresh faces, local travels provide stimulus.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Caution and management may cover your welfare and that of others as well. Do what is needed unselfishly. Your advice comes into good use if you're graceful in offering it.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Usually you can get people to do things that get your enterprises off a dull spot, but today you must do most of it yourself.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Early hours show mixed influences, family and home arrangements not well synchronized, but getting there shortly.

El Progresso Fetes Guests

El Progresso Club, following its course of study, "Let's Be Different," entertained friends at its annual Friendship Guest-Day Tea in the new Mayfaire Sportswear Shop.

Mrs. Glenn Dawkins greeted guests and presented Mrs. J. F. Malone, president, who served as moderator for the style show.

Mrs. Malone stated that the key word for summer is "action," since today's woman finds herself caught up in the fast-moving world of action, freedom, and even liberation. Color is bright; label is elegant; and call it classic! Color for summer comes from unexpected and exciting places—a child's playbox of crayons, garden flower hues, the important neutrals of earth and plant; and the varied tones of jewels. The fabrics will be "corded, crinkled, bubbled, polished, and glazed," she explained.

Fashions were modeled by Mrs. D.V. Burton, Ralph Palmer, Tom Perkins, Chas. Lanehart, John Gill, and Bruce Riehart, all club members. They included lingerie, at-home lounge wear, jump suits for home, daytime, or evening to nautical and classical daytime wear, elegant after-five long dresses and the evening hot pants with divided-skirt, cover-up Boots were furnished by Mayfaire and all other footwear was furnished by Hub's Booterie.

A Valentine motif was used for the serving table and in the window displays. Presiding at the silver service and punch bowl were Mrs. O. K. Gaylor and Glenn Radcliff.

Arrangements for the Style show were made by Mrs. Charles Lanehart and Carlton Nanbe. Hostesses were Mrs. R. A. Keagy, Darrell Cameron, Glenn Radcliff, and Ralph Palmer. Seventeen members and forty-five guests attended.

Next meeting will be with Mrs. Bruce Riehart, 1615 Fir.

China And Its Land And People

Editor's Note—When President Nixon takes the road to Peking next week he will pass mileposts weathered by centuries of struggle in the world's oldest surviving civilization. Down the road to Peking, perhaps, lies better understanding among a billion people. Chinese and Americans. The events that have paved the way—from ancient dynasties to Mao Tse-tung—are related in this and four articles to appear later this week.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent
A kite clutched in each hand, smoke belching from the black powder rockets lashed to his back, inventor Wan Hu soared aloft in his chair on wheels.

The contraption blew up and disintegrated. So did Wan Hu. But Wan left his mark on history. He had conducted man's first experiment with rocket flight.

Wan lived about 1,000 years ago. His saga is one of many from the world's oldest continuing civilization that make it a source of endless fascination for Westerners.

Centuries before Europeans could even dream of such notions, China had produced gunpowder and rockets, speculated on jet flight, developed the first magnetic compass. A millennium ago China had a vaccination for smallpox. Centuries ago China had perfected the first system of civil service examination.

Her scholars produced their wonders in majestic isolation from the rest of the world. They considered it barbarian. The imposing spectacle of Chinese history seems to be forever repeating itself, as if China were acting out each time, in different form, what she went through in the past.

Through thousands of years, China was alternately prostrate and firmly on her feet. She has had periods of brilliance and glory and more than her share of civil wars, revolutions, rebellions, socialism, collectivism, regimentation.

After the fall of each great dynasty, China invariably experienced long periods of tumultuous confusion before regaining her balance. Today's Communist epoch, in a China swollen with 800 million population, was to be no exception.

Furious unrest, outbursts of seething hatred for foreigners, revolts of the young smashing traditions—China had seen them all time and again.

China is a land of recurrent tragedy of heroic proportions, a land of many people, a land of calamity, flood, drought and famine. Her whole history is shadowed by two great rivers, the Yangtze and the Yellow, called "China's Sorrow." Time and again there have been great floods and disastrous droughts, bringing suffering on a prodigious scale.

What is a Chinese? He is of the dominant stock in a land encompassing almost 3.7 million square miles, about the same as all 50 United States. But China has nearly four times the population, the bulk of it crammed into the eastern half.

Chinese are a people of remarkable contradictions. Almost 95 per cent of all the people in today's China consider themselves "children of the Han," descendants of the great Han Dynasty of 2,000 years ago. By and large, they are a courteous, tolerant, talented and humorous people, proud of their ancient civilization, respectful of its traditions.

The circumstances of China's history, habits and culture made her people easily usable by their rulers, easily regimented. The Chinese, indeed, invented collectivism and socialism centuries before European philosophers dreamed of them. It was wholly compatible with the Chinese character to tolerate and even welcome forms of collectivization.

At the same time, in his daily life the Chinese, from the lowly coolie to the city taipan, was always an individualist, a hard worker, a natural trader and a born maneuverer who probably had more ability in circumventing laws he disliked than any man on earth.

Today China is largely a land of young people ruled by elders who have been in control ever since the Communists took over. Of China's 800 million or so, about half are under the age of 20.

The distinctive personality of the land and people evolved through ages of cohering, exploding, splintering and coming together again. Deep in that history are the roots of the current regime whose leaders choose to call theirs a Communist system. It is singularly Chinese, too.

China probably owes its continuity, despite the wars and bloodletting, to its ideographic language. Educated persons from one part of the country could read the language of another part, even though unable to converse. Thus the wide variety of dialects did not erect insurmountable barriers.

Other great empires in ancient times were brought down by internal decay or external enemies. China had similar ailments, but she was locked in by mountains and deserts and culturally isolated by her language.

Foreigners had nothing China wanted. Sufficient unto herself, China was loftily unconcerned about the rise and fall of other nations. Her rulers drew their authority from a "Mandate of Heaven," and China was the Middle Kingdom, center of the world, the Universal Empire. In the view of Chinese scholars, the rest of the world, all barbarian, was unworthy of notice.

China's name may derive from the Chin dynasty which ruled briefly about 300 years before Christ. The Romans knew China as Sinae. Europe for centuries had scant knowledge of a mysterious place called Cathay, nor had the Russians much comprehension of the land they called—as they do now—Kital. To the old Russians, China was little more than a source for their beloved "tchai"—tea.

The beginnings of Chinese history are lost in the mists of antiquity, but the civilization may date back as much as 10,000 years. It can be traced with considerable accuracy to the Shang Dynasty which lasted from 1766 to 1123 B.C. What scholars consider modern China began with the Hans, who ruled for four centuries until 221 A.D.

For 2,500 years, the Mandate of Heaven concept was deeply entrenched. So was the idea that bad conduct by a ruler justified rebellion. This meant rebellion at the top of the social ladder. There was always a wide chasm between the masses and the rulers, who came from a relative handful of families. In theory anyone who aspired to it could become a mandarin, but it seldom happened that one of the masses could make it.

The system reflected a worship of learning, however, and China had an abundance of talent. The respect for learning was for its own sake rather than for material rewards. Thus there was a lack of competitive urge. The gunpowder China's inventors produced was used not for war but for pleasure—fireworks.

The idea of competition among nations in such matters seemed foreign to the Chinese, although this may have been mostly because China was so isolated and because her rulers and scholars considered her superiority beyond question.

These sentiments were nurtured by Confucianism, a mighty influence on Chinese development. Confucianism was not a religion but a set of moral principles drawn up by the scholar Confucius to guide the conduct of rulers.

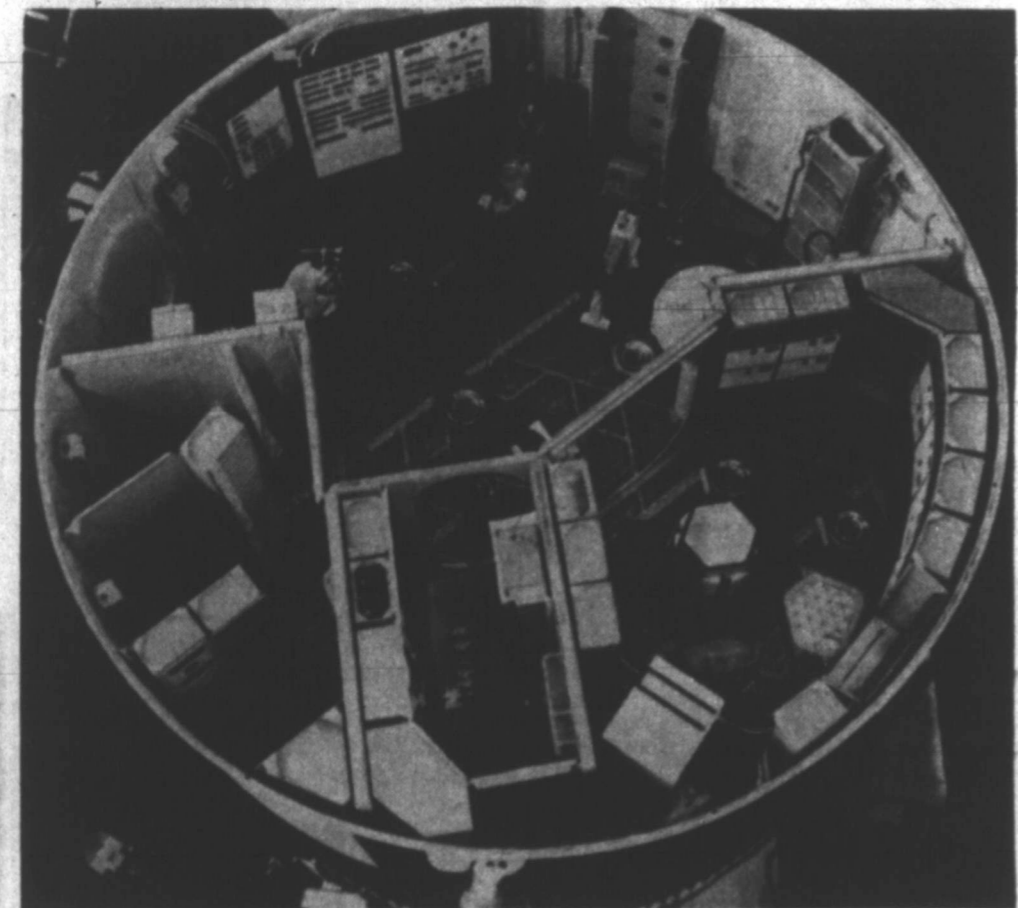

China also would, in time, be strongly influenced by the Taoism—Tao means "the way"—of Lao Tze and by the Buddhism which infiltrated from India. There was no real rivalry between the systems. All were considered links between man and the Lord of Heaven.

The Hans presided over a golden age, setting patterns which would persist off and on for 20 more centuries, a system based on Confucian ideals of human relationships. The Hans produced the world's first welfare state under Emperor Wu Ti.

A successor carried his experiments further by the sort of reforms which today would be called socialism. But the system fell apart during a period of civil war and the Han decline began. When it finally fell, China was torn apart.

China would go through other periods of unity, prosperity and flourishing culture before yet another monumental event: the 13th century invasion from the north by the petty Mongol chieftain Genghis Khan and his Mongol and Tartar hordes. He swept over much of China, but it remained for his grandson, Kublai Khan, to finish the job of conquest and establish the Yuan Dynasty.

Kublai Khan's successors fought among themselves. Again China was enveloped by chaos. Revolts finally loosened the Mongol hold and the Tartar rulers were driven out. The Ming Dynasty, bearing the Han tradition, took over.

SCIENCE IN THE ROUND, the planned Skylab Orbital Workshop will feature crew quarters arranged similar to this training model cross section. Area provides sleeping, dining and hygiene facilities as well as space for several experiments to be conducted on the mission scheduled for a 1973 launch. Three three-man crews will live and work in the orbiting station for periods of from 28 to 56 days.

Pampa Cagers To Play Palo Duro For Title

Tomorrow night the Harvesters venture to face the Dons of Palo Duro on Don home ground at eight p.m.

Pampa fans are hoping desperately that Palo Duro doesn't do the same to the Harvs.

Don Cain could use some watching also, as he came up with double figured 17 total points to help boost the Harvester's score to 80.

Big 'Out of Business' Sale

'Good' people come from 'good' family backgrounds. 'Bad' people come from 'bad' backgrounds. This is one important finding of researchers working in a 'longitudinal' study at the University of California's Institute of Human Development in Berkeley. A longitudinal study, understandably rather rare, is one in which the same subjects are followed over a period of decades. The first major book based on the Berkeley study, 'Lives Through Time...' by psychology professor Jack Block in collaboration with Norma Haan, reports that boys and girls reared in 'good,' healthy or positive families grow into more adjusted and admirable individuals, whereas those reared in sick or negative or otherwise 'bad' families tend to be disturbed and not very likeable as adults. All the families in the study were white and middle class. At first sight this seems about as original as saying, 'As the twig is bent, etc.' But how is it bent and who does the bending? The constructive family situation appears to be one where 'the father was a father and the mother was a mother,' writes Block. 'The father was effective in his work, forthright in his interactions, respected in his world. The mother was comfortable and competent in the maternal role. She was bright, and she was warm. As a marital pair, the parents harmonized well. As instructors of the young, they emphasized and illustrated the values of responsibility and fairness; they were clear and consistent in conveying the principles of the social contract; they encouraged child participation in family discussions and their child's moves toward selfhood; they were affectionate and available to their young.' By contrast, the bad family situation was one characterized by great

The French government is trying to unload the biggest white elephant of all time—the $600-million Maginot Line of fortresses which, true to military tradition, was built to fight the next war according to the last war's strategies. For years, the government tried to persuade the army to give up the long-abandoned line, which the National Geographic describes as a 300-mile chain of buried battleships. Finally, in November, the first forts were put up for auction. All but the largest installations will be on sale this year. The forts have one thing going for them—a panoramic view of Germany's similar folly, the Siegfried Line.

Question Box

Question: A reader recently commented that the primary motivation of U. S. involvement in the Vietnam war was 'profit.' Don't you think the primary motivation of any nation in war is profit? Answer: We would say the primary motivation of anyone for any human activity is profit. However, there is more than one type of profit. Generally, we accept the definition of Andrew J. Galambos who said profit is 'any increase in happiness acquired through moral action.' Since everyone seeks happiness, it follows (as in Galambos corollary) that all morally acting men seek profit. Monetary profit is a major aspect of living. And anyone working for a salary is seeking a monetary profit, just as is the businessman, retailer or wholesaler, and the manufacturer. But there are persons who have little regard for monetary profit, although most of them are seeking sufficient monetary profit in order to feed, clothe and shelter themselves in order that they can engage in whatever other activity they may find more mentally and spiritually profitable than acquiring a stock of gold or silver or dollar deposits in banks. If profit is an increase in happiness acquired through moral action as defined by Galambos, it can be seen that not all monetary gain is profit, for a person can make a gain through immoral action and this is not profit, but plunder. Galambos defines coercion as the intentional interference with the property of another, and the definition of immorality involves the use of coercion. Therefore the instigator of a war who is attacking property of another is acting immorally, and though he may be seeking happiness or gain of some kind, it is not profit that motivates him, but plunder. On the other hand, there is no immorality in defending one's own property, so those who are attacked in war and defend their property can be said to be seeking 'profit,' as they are seeking happiness morally in trying to keep that which belongs to them. Certainly, once any war is begun, there are businesses and industries which gain financially, at least on a short-term basis, by selling war material or by receiving government construction contracts. Many people have become convinced that a nation's economy is benefited by military activity. But this sort of people are the same type who favor government spending on makework projects in order to 'create jobs.' Hiring a crew to dig postholes, and another crew to fill those holes, etc., but since nothing is produced, the labor is totally wasted. As to the primary motivation for involvement in the Vietnam war being monetary gain, we are not sure. We can look back and see who, in the beginning, attacked whom, and see that the attackers seek plunder. But the involvement of the United States in the war was less direct. We were asked to help defend South Vietnam, and the politicians who engaged us in that war were probably convinced that they were serving the best interests of their own country in the defense of South Vietnam. But we are not there defending our own property, and have no real business there, so the motivation for our being there is at best, cloudy. As Thomas Paine said, 'Taxes are not raised to carry on wars; wars are raised to carry on taxes.'

H.L. Hunt Writes

The people of Chile may be surprised to hear that, according to the Moscow sect of world Marxism, Chile has just completed its first year of popular government. Further, this 'popular' government (headed by Marxist Salvador Allende who was elected by only 36 percent of the popular vote) has, again according to the communists, 'accomplished more than had been achieved in the whole of the country's history.' Communists twist meanings to the point that good people have trouble communicating, because of communist destruction of language. Chile had problems, as does every nation, but nothing like the problems caused by Allende and his Castro-backed revolutionaries who are destroying the nation. Two recent elections show that Allende soon will have to take the usual communist step of suspending elections to prevent his Marxist party from losing every election. Decent people are fleeing Chile in droves. Non-communists have been assassinated or jailed and harassed unmercifully. The non-communists in Chile will long rue the day they failed to unite against the minority of communists, thus losing their freedom. There is a lesson for all of us here.

Your Health

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
Reader Files
About Her Age
Dear Dr. Lamb—My true age is 62, but when I go for a checkup I give my age as 54 and that is what my husband believes me to be. Does the doctor get a true reading on the electrocardiogram, blood pressure and so forth, when I don't give him my right age? Dear Reader—In the past-50 age group the electrocardiogram is usually not specifically affected by an age difference of eight years. The difference in blood pressure in people who are 54 and 62 is not that great either. In general, doctors do a better job for their patients if they know the truth. Sometimes there are overriding considerations. Apparently you feel that it is important that your husband shouldn't know your true age and perhaps you are right. One good way to keep a secret is not tell anybody. I would like for you to promise me, though, that if you have any serious illness or real medical problem develop that you will confide in your doctor about your true age at that point. Dear Dr. Lamb—A few years ago, I had an attack of angina pectoris. I have no heart condition and no chest pains. However, with too much effort doing anything, I have a dull feeling in my chest that stops me doing more, and often I take a nitroglycerin pill which I carry at all times. My question: Is there any complete cure for angina or must I live with it? Will it in time cause a heart attack? I take many pills every day and have a heart tracing twice a year, all of which have proven normal. I am retired and 71 years of age. I notice a bad circulation in my lower legs at times. Dear Reader—If you have had angina pectoris you do have a 'heart condition.' In your age group it is likely that you have changes in the arteries to the heart muscle which limit the amount of blood flow to the heart. When you are doing too much exercise for you the heart is working harder but the blood supply is not able to be increased; hence, nature warns you about this by giving you this dull feeling that you state stops you from doing any more. There are many factors that contribute to the chest discomfort of angina pectoris. It will gradually disappear in some patients. Perhaps this is because there is some improvement in the blood flow to the heart muscle in time. In other people who are overweight, the reducing of body weight helps to decrease the frequency of anginal episodes. Some people develop angina associated with smoking, usually cigarettes, but it can also be caused by cigars and pipes. These individuals will profit by stopping the use of tobacco.

Reopen Phantom Pipeline To Israel in Early March
By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON — The U.S. is resuming shipments of top priority combat planes to Israel early in March. The additional aircraft are F-4 supersonic Phantom and A-4 subsonic Skyhawk jets. Israel has long sought 50 of the former and 100 of the latter. Less than one-half of the Phantom fighter-bombers and around 75 of the Skyhawk attack fighters are being sold to Israel under an unannounced agreement reached by President Nixon and Prime Minister Golda Meir during their discussions here last December. Deliveries will be on a monthly basis, with a 'few' F-4s and a larger number of A-4s going to Israel over an extended period. This is the usual practice on these aircraft. Congress, by overwhelming majorities in the House and Senate, voted $300 million in credits to Israel to pay for the new planes. Another $50 million in so-called 'support assistance' was also approved to aid Israel to maintain an armaments balance against large scale Russian weapons shipments to Egypt and other Arab countries. The carefully unpublicized understanding between the President and Mrs. Meir is particularly significant because it marked another roundabout set back for Secretary of State Rogers. In effect, the accord to sell more Phantoms and Skyhawks to Israel meant Rogers was being superseded in handling Middle East problems. He had long opposed supplying Israel with additional combat planes—despite admitted continued massive Soviet arming of the Arabs. Rogers' obstinate attitude provoked widespread bipartisan hostility in Congress which finally culminated in including the $350 million in credits and grants to Israel in the foreign aid legislation. At this point, President Nixon took the occasion of Mrs. Meir's visit to Washington to brush Rogers aside and directly negotiate a plane sale with her. Simultaneously with the Israeli air force's impending reinforcement with the much-needed F-4s and A-4s, two other important military developments are taking shape, as follows: (1) Of far-reaching moment, Israel is well advanced in producing its own high performance combat aircraft. In process of completion is a supersonic light attack fighter made entirely in Israel—with the exception of the engines, bought in the U.S. Modeled after the French Mirage 3-C, latest version of that superior interceptor, the Israeli fighter is faster and more powerful than the latter. (2) The Pompidou government is finally repaying Israel the $50 million it put down five years ago on the purchase of 50 Mirages. In an effort to win Arab goodwill, President de Gaulle abruptly halted delivery of the planes and other arms. Since then, the issue has been stewing in French courts. Under the settlement arrangement, France will pay 8 per cent interest. The Pompidou regime is going out of its way not to publicize the reimbursement deal. Empty Blustering There will definitely be 'close proximity' negotiations on reopening the Suez Canal and other cease-fire matters—despite President Anwar Sadat's bellicose war talk and Cairo's noisy anti-U.S. huffing and puffing. In fact, there already have been some closely guarded preliminary exchanges between Israel and the Arabs. These initial backstage overtures have been on arrangements for the talks: where they should be held, in New York or somewhere else, who will participate, and other procedural items. Two key factors are at the bottom of the hollowiness of Sadat's war clatter: (1) Militarily, economically and psychologically, Egypt is not ready for war. Its allies, Syria and Iraq, are even less so. And Jordan's King Hussein has served notice that this time he will have no part of it. Those recent raucous Cairo student demonstrations were contrived by anti-Sadat political and military elements, and did not represent general public opinion, particularly businessmen. (2) In Sadat's hurried visit to Moscow last week, he was bluntly told to 'cool it.' The Kremlin rulers currently have far more important fish to fry than backing a highly doubtful round of more Arab-Israeli fighting. The Soviets are intensely concerned about President Nixon's forthcoming visit to Peking. They also want a reduction of NATO forces in Europe and some kind of agreement in the long-pending SALT disarmament deliberations. To Sadat they made it plain that a new flare up of Middle East warring is furthest from their thoughts. That is why the rebuffed and disconsolate Egyptian returned home empty-handed—except for some minor arms additions. As reported last week in this column—Sadat's most dangerous foes and most serious crisis are in his own country and not Israel. He is teetering precariously on the edge of a furiously seething internal eruption—which could blast him out of power, and possibly even cost him his head. Crucial weakness of the anti-Sadat forces is lack of an outstanding leader. Whether Sadat can ride out this raging domestic storm remains to be seen—especially after his Moscow setback. WIT & WHIMSY Show us the man who wants to live his entire life just as it has been, and we'll point out a fellow with a very faulty memory. With Valentine's Day coming up, it makes many a man quiver at the thought of Cupid's arrow.

BERRY'S WORLD
No, dear—I'm not reviewing the budget. I'm reviewing the list of officials and aides who want to make the Peking trip!

Newspaper Bingo
Cards NOW!!

Rules of the Game:

NO OBLIGATION OR PURCHASE NECESSARY: There is no obligation or purchase necessary. A copy of the paper is available for playing the game at the office of this newspaper - also at the public library - also a Bingo card and/or copies of The Pampa Daily News containing the Bingo numbers may be obtained by mailing your request to this newspaper (please print your name and address clearly.). You may play as many cards as you wish - they are free. Get additional cards - one at a time - each day of the week - from the merchants listed below (ADULTS ONLY).

DIFFERENT COLORED CARDS EACH WEEK: The color of the cards changes each week. To be a winner, you must play Bingo cards of the correct color for that week. Mutilated or altered cards will not be honored. ALL 24 NUMBERS on a card must be matched to win.

CHANCE DETERMINES NUMBERS: Bingo numbers for each week's game are drawn strictly at random at the office of this newspaper. Some duplication of Bingo numbers may appear in the merchants' ads - or elsewhere in the paper. This duplication does not affect the game or the total numbers drawn. All numbers for each week's game will appear someplace in the sponsoring merchants' ads - and possibly elsewhere in the paper. Employees of this newspaper and members of their families are not eligible to win any of the prizes. Newspaper Bingo is a program copy-righted and registered by Marketing-Research Associates, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

PICK UP FREE BINGO CARDS: Each week (adults only, please), pick up your Free Bingo Cards from the sponsoring merchants listed below. Rules of the game allow the merchants to give you only one card on each store visit. You may, however, make as many visits as you wish each day of the week. THE MORE CARDS YOU PLAY-THE BETTER YOUR CHANCES ARE TO WIN.

HOW TO PLAY: Check the ads in EACH DAY'S issue of The Pampa Daily News. The ads of the merchants listed below will contain one or more "Newspaper Bingo" numbers in the "Bingo Bug" symbol (shown above). Occasionally, numbers in the "Bingo Bug" symbol may be found elsewhere in the paper. Check the classified ad section for additional numbers. IF YOU CAN MATCH (JUST CIRCLE OR "X" THE MATCHING NUMBERS) ALL 24 NUMBERS ON ONE OF YOUR BINGO CARDS WITH THE TOTAL OF THE NUMBERS PUBLISHED IN ALL THE ISSUES OF THE Pampa Daily News. EACH WEEK YOU HAVE A "BINGO"-AND YOU ARE A WINNER!!!

AT LEAST $50.00 WEEKLY! Winners will share a weekly prize of $50.00 (in "Bingo Bucks", they spend the same as cash with any of the sponsoring merchants listed below). If there is only one winner, he wins all of the $50.00. If there is more than one winner, all winners will share the $50.00 equally. If there are no winners any week, the $50.00 weekly prize will be added to the following week's prize fund.

CHECK EACH ISSUE OF THE PAPER: A new game will start each Sunday and be completed the following Friday. Be sure to check each day's issue of The Pampa Daily News because some of the numbers may appear in each day's issue. All numbers needed to complete each week's game will have appeared by each Friday's issue. A new set of Bingo numbers will be published for each week's game. A new color of Bingo cards will be available each week at the sponsoring merchants' stores. To be eligible to win, you must play Bingo cards of the correct color for that week's game. The color of the cards for each week's game will be announced each week on this page.

IF YOU ARE A WINNER: If you have a winning Bingo card, on which ALL 24 NUMBERS have been matched with the total of the numbers published during the week in The Pampa Daily News print your name, address, phone number, and the name of the store where you got your winning card, on the back of your card and mail to: The Pampa Daily News, P. O. Box 2198 PAMPA, Texas 79065 (the envelope containing your card must be received by 5:00 PM Monday of the following week)-or bring your card to the office of this newspaper at 403 W. Atchison Pampa Texas by 5:00 PM Monday of the following week.
