Sex scam

something like telephone sex. And as we put it all together, we have no reason to believe the boys did anything wrong."

The parents, none of whom wanted their names in the paper for fear it would cast aspersions on their children, said the boys accused of running up the telephone sex bills do not run in the same social circles.

Stephens, with Southwestern Bell, said if the man claiming to be Finkelstein is calling parents locally, the case would fall under the jurisdiction of the district attorney. If the calls are coming from across state lines, such a scam would be a federal offense.

"With what we know, it appears to be a scam," Stephens said. "Of course, there are some companies whose 900 numbers we don't collect for, but they would get some sort of a bill from that company." The parents involved said they have received no credit card or telephone bills to reflect their children's involvement, which Finkelstein said occurred this summer.

Phil Byrnes of the Nevada Attorney General's office said it would be nearly impossible to trace the whereabouts of PSL Enterprises or Erv Finkelstein, if they were fronts for other businesses. However, he said he was familiar with most of the sex-oriented businesses in the Las Vegas area and that phone sex operations were not normally based in his state.

He added that if the person is intimidating parents with threats that their children's "sex phone behavior" will be exposed in public if they do not pay the several hundred dollars requested, such a statement would likely be considered extortion, a felony offense.

"It does not sound like the kind of thing we hear a lot about," Byrnes said. "But that is because most people would be too embarrassed to report it. If they were calling a phone sex service and then this guy called, it's likely they would pay to shut him up and we'd never hear about it."

Byrnes went on to say it is more likely the person is calling from the Pampa area and would give a local address to send the money.

Pampa police said anyone receiving such a call saying someone in their house owes money for telephone sex should get as much information as possible, especially regarding where to send the money, and call them immediately.

"It's also possible they are just trying to make trouble for these boys," a parent noted. "If that's what they are trying to do, it worked. They upset everyone in our house over this."

The van also made a trip Saturday. At bottom, Pampa Fire Department workers and volunteers get their truck load ready; from left are Tony De Hosse, Cindy Ensey and Kelly Randall. Lt. Wildish said their items included juices, beans, clothing, blankets, heavy jackets, building materials from Bartlett's Lumber, food and toothpaste donated by Coldwell Banker Action Realty and miscellaneous other foods representing "a whole community effort" from businesses, individuals and the agency. The fire department, with a truck donated for use by 4-R of Borger, took two loads over to Amarillo Saturday and one on Sunday, with materials donated from businesses and individuals, schools and a box set up at Wal-Mart. Helping to coordinate the fire department effort was Kim Powell. The Gray County Chapter of the American Red Cross also assisted in the Hugo relief effort. Wildish said no more items will be taken, since the planes and trucks left from Amarillo Sunday and Monday, but cash donations to be sent to the hurricane relief effort will still be accepted. Donations may be mailed to the Salvation Army at P.O. Box 1458, Pampa, TX 79066, or taken to the Red Cross for its projects.

Noriega reportedly toppled in coup today

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, who controlled Panama and defied U.S. efforts to oust him for two years, was toppled in a coup today, according to a Panamanian Defense Forces communique read on national radio.

The announcement came after shots were fired outside the Defense

Forces headquarters. U.S. troops in combat gear took up positions only 600 yards from the barracks, which is in downtown Panama City near the canal. The U.S. Southern Command has installations at Fort Amador and Quarry Heights, less than a mile from the barracks. The Pentagon said no U.S. troops were involved in shooting.

The shooting appeared to be between factions of the Panamanian military. There was no confirmation of casualties, but neighbors of the headquarters in Panama City told The Associated Press there were dead and wounded. A press spokesman at the headquarters said he had no information on the shooting.

Edgewood students applaud court's school finance ruling

(AP Laserphoto)

Edgewood School Superintendent Jimmy Vasquez is all smiles as he greets Kennedy High School sophomore Daniel Pina on Monday after court's ruling.

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Lawyers and educators joyfully congratulated each other, but the Texas Supreme Court ruling on school finance wasn't lost on Edgewood school district students, who also cheered the prospects for change.

"I really can't tell you how lucky you are. You belong to a school district that has guts," Al Kauffman, lead attorney for the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, told jubilant Edgewood students Monday.

MALDEF assisted the 15,500-student Edgewood district in pressing the lawsuit that led to a 9-0 Texas Supreme Court decision Monday that the state's public school finance system violates the Texas Constitution.

The court ruling on Edgewood vs. Kirby gave the Texas Legislature until May 1 to come up with a solution.

'Let the Future Begin, Texas Children 9, Kirby 0,' read a marquee at the stadium entrance.

About 1,800 pupils in the school district — ranging from small children to high school seniors — packed the Edgewood stadium next to John F. Kennedy High School and held banners reading "Victory" and "Edgewood All the Way" as a band played and a flag corps kept time.

"Let the Future Begin, Texas Children 9, Kirby 0," read a marquee at the stadium entrance.

In Spanish, Kauffman told the youngsters of the predominantly Hispanic district, "What's most important is we're going to make a system with dignity for all the children here in Edgewood and the state of Texas."

Kennedy senior class president John Guzman said the ruling will improve school morale and might mean more money for foreign language courses. Currently the school has Spanish, French and Italian classes.

Guzman said construction projects at his school have been evidence of limited money.

"They've always had money and they started to build stuff, and they never finished it," he said, pointing to the surrounding library originally intended to be a swimming facility. Lack of money meant the pool project couldn't be completed, he said.

Senior class parliamentarian Ruben Gonzales said it is too late for him and his classmates to see results of the ruling. "We won't, as seniors, but the younger generations will."

Leslie Roche, junior class president, predicted that by early next year changes will be noticeable at Kennedy High School and other places in the district.

Fourth-grader Daniel Rodriguez said it was difficult to explain the court ruling, but said his school district will be better off.

"Where all the rich people go, they give them more money. Now they'll give us more money too," he said. "We'll be able to get more stuff for our schools and put more stuff inside our schools."

Edgewood Superintendent James Vasquez stressed to a group of students the importance of the day.

"Do you know that you're history in the making today? Do you feel as good as I feel?" he asked with a smile.

"Today we can begin to say we're no longer the poorest school district in Texas — we're the toughest," Vasquez told the stadium crowd. "We took on the state of Texas and we beat 'em."

Attending the Monday gathering was Demetrio Rodriguez, whose five children have gone to Edgewood schools and who launched the fight for equal school funding in 1968 when he and other district parents filed a suit that in 1973 reached the U.S. Supreme Court, which rejected his arguments.

"This is a big day for me and my family," Rodriguez said, fighting back tears. "I cried this morning because it really is something that has been in my heart."

The Edgewood district was lead plaintiff in the current lawsuit, filed in 1984. More than 60 other districts also were involved as plaintiffs or intervenors.

Edgewood leaders contend their district has little high-priced real estate to tap for property taxes. Much of the district is made up of low-income residences or military property, which cannot be taxed.

Districts across Texas spend from $2,100 to $19,300 per student per year, the court said. Edgewood spends about $3,600 per student per year, school board president Pete Gonzales said.

But Gonzales said much of that goes toward students with special needs, who are more prevalent in low-income districts, leaving less money for so-called mainstream students.

'I cried this morning because it really is something that has been in my heart.'

Superintendents from other districts and a handful of state lawmakers showed up at the Edgewood celebration.

State Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, called on Gov. Bill Clements to open a special legislative session, already scheduled to start Nov. 14, to the school finance issue.

But Clements said he will wait until spring for a special session on school finance, giving a task force time to offer recommendations.

State Rep. Gregory Luna, D-San Antonio, whose legislative district includes much of the Edgewood district, imitated a shout of joy he said he let out Monday morning upon learning of the ruling.

"It means a lot to everybody in Texas," Luna said. "It is the ultimate answer to our prison problem. It is the ultimate answer to our economic and business problems. It is the ultimate answer to productivity, not just for the poor but for all of us."

Attorneys say districts may still increase taxes

By JAY JORDEN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Public school districts might have to raise millions of additional dollars annually from local taxes, beginning next year, if the Legislature can't find a court-ordered solution to the education finance dilemma, attorneys said.

The Texas Supreme Court ruled Monday that the state's public school financing system is unconstitutional and gave lawmakers until May 1, 1990, to create a "substantially equal" funding system for rich and poor districts alike.

The ruling came on a suit known as Edgewood vs. Kirby, which was filed in 1984 by school districts with low property values.

Taxpayers in dozens of affluent systems could bear the burden if the Legislature fails in its task.

"If the trial court's judgment was allowed to stand and has not been changed, then by May 1, 1990, assuming the Legislature does not do anything between now and (then), the economic effect would be that the Irving district would have $18 million per year that it would have to make up from local funds," said James Deatherage, an attorney representing the Irving Independent School District in suburban Dallas.

The district's property taxes would rise from $1.03 per $100 valuation to $1.30 or $1.35 if lawmakers failed to come up with a suitable plan because an injunction would bar the Texas education commissioner from dispensing state funds after that time, he said.

But another attorney who represents districts intervening in the state's behalf disagreed.

"In the past, when we have had education reform bills, that is exactly what happened: districts losing state aid have to put more local taxes into education," said James Turner, a Crockett attorney.

"It is now uncertain whether that will happen again because that is what the court is saying is at the root of the inefficient system. Certain districts have the wherewithal under local property wealth to fund education while others do not," said Turner, who represents about 25 school systems, including the affluent, suburban Eanes district in Travis County.

One legislative proposal, Turner said, may take local property tax dollars from wealthy districts to the state for distribution to poor ones.

Another, he said, might create regional tax districts to collect taxes and disburse them equally or consolidate rich and poor districts. A plan for a statewide property tax for education would limit local districts' taxation power.

"There is no single answer to the dilemma for any class of school districts," he said. "For example, some property-poor districts would love to consolidate with their wealthy neighbors, while others would fight consolidation to the final draw. That is what will make the resolution of the problem so difficult politically — varying interests of the 1,050 school districts around the state."

Attorney Earl Luna of Dallas, who represents 25 school districts, including several defendant-intervenor systems in the Dallas area, said he was disappointed in the ruling.

"All the court did was simply to send it (the case) back to the Legislature and say that the Legislature has to do something about it," said Luna. "If the Legislature doesn't do anything about it, the injunction issues in May 1990, which would have the effect of closing all these schools. It would enjoin the commissioner of education from sending out any money to anyone."

Luna's office represents districts in Richardson, Plano, Carrollton-Farmers Branch, Highland Park, Lancaster, DeSoto and Duncanville.

Federal team inspects safety at Pantex Plant

AMARILLO (AP) — A team of federal inspectors is spending the next few weeks at the nation's nuclear weapons assembly plant to determine whether it is complying with environmental and safety guidelines.

The so-called "tiger team" of federal and private experts will scrutinize the Pantex Plant north of Amarillo, said Ralph Stein, an Energy Department employee supervising the team.

The sprawling Pantex Plant, north of Amarillo, is where all the nation's nuclear weapons are assembled from components made elsewhere. The plant's owner, Mason & Hanger-Silas Mason Co. Inc. of Lexington, Ky., operates the factory under contract with the Energy Department.

Inspectors will report to Energy Secretary James Watkins on how the plant complies with environmental, health, safety and management rules, Stein said Monday, the day the team began work at the plant.

Watkins ordered similar inspections of all Energy Department plants in reaction to environmental problems at the Rocky Flats weapons plant north of Denver.

The Pantex team will interview union officials, some of whom complained before a congressional subcommittee earlier this year of alleged unsafe working conditions.

"The fact is any individual that wants to talk to the tiger team will have the opportunity to do so," he said.

Pantex and Mason & Hanger-Silas Mason officials will be able to reply to any violations or discrepancies the team finds, and would be asked to prepare an action plan to correct any shortcomings, Stein said. The Energy Department then would review the action plan.

"Once that plan is approved, the Pantex facility will be required to put that plan into effect," Stein said. "It goes all the way up to the Secretary (Watkins)."

The Energy Department reported in June that gasoline components and some cancer-causing solvents have been found in ground water under the Pantex plant, but said the pollutants have not reached Amarillo's municipal water supplies.

Stein said three new bore holes have been drilled at the site to determine the extent of contamination. He said the tiger team will monitor samplings from the borings closely to see if more tests are needed.

Energy Department officials at Pantex are planning to address 19 violations of federal hazardous waste regulations discovered in an inspection earlier this year by the Texas Water Commission. Pantex is to receive at least $79.8 million under a five-year, $19.5 billion environmental program for Energy Department plants nationwide.

Watkins' environmental teams are inspecting two other Energy Department plants, the Y-12 plant in Oak Ridge, Tenn., which produces and fabricates components for nuclear warheads, and the Mound Laboratory, a facility in Miamisburg, Ohio that produces non-nuclear components for nuclear warheads.

Physicists view super collider site

By JAY JORDEN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — As a group of physicists viewed the site where the multibillion-dollar super collider will be constructed, a Texas congressman warned that it may be difficult to get funding for the project in coming years.

U.S. Rep. Joe Barton, a Republican from Ennis whose district includes the site near Waxahachie in adjacent Ellis County, said approval of the $225 million for the start of construction does not mean that will be easy to provide funding for the project.

"It's going to be extremely tough to convince the congressional delegations from outside Texas to basically double a discretionary program for the SSC," he said, pointing out that supporters of the collider will likely ask Congress for $400 million for the next fiscal year.

President Bush has approved the initial $225 million for startup of construction.

Another congressman from Texas told more than 800 physicists and other scientists attending the Conference on Super Collider Physics and Experiments that the project will continue well into the next century and beyond.

"This conference is an important first step in the research that will be conducted at the superconducting super collider for years and decades to come," said Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas.

Scientists will use the circular tunnel, to be constructed about 30 miles south of Dallas in Waxahachie, to bombard atoms and study the debris.

"Also, we in Texas are particularly interested in exploring the possibilities of international participation in construction of the SSC," said Frost, whose 24th Congressional District includes DeSoto, home of the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission and the U.S. Department of Energy's SSC Laboratory.

Dr. Roy Schwitters, SSC lab director, read a letter from Energy Secretary James A. Watkins welcoming the international conference to north Texas and thanking scientists for their support.

"The super collider is one of the administration's highest priorities in the area of science," Schwitters read. "The project holds great promise for increasing our knowledge of the fundamental constituents of matter and the origins of the universe and for furthering advancements in medical research and technology."

The congressional funds appropriation was "a tremendous victory for the administration, for the international science community and for America," Watkins wrote.

The $4.4 billion project's history has been a Texas success story, Frost said.

"This project has been successful so far because it does not belong to one political party but has truly been a bipartisan effort," said Frost.

"The initial efforts were the byproduct of cooperation begun by our Republican governor, Bill Clements, and our then-Democratic speaker of the House of Representatives, Jim Wright."

Texasans have voted to issue $1 billion worth of bonds in support of the project.

"I think you will find that the enthusiasm for the super collider project in this region goes beyond mere civic boosterism," Dallas County Judge Lee Jackson told the scientists.

"We want to provide an unparalleled research facility for the work that you're doing now and the work that you want to do here, and we're proud of our role in making it possible. We want to share the excitement of basic research into the fundamentals of how our universe works," he said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

No taxes should support genocide

One of the Reagan administration's noteworthy actions was to cut off funding for the United Nations Funds for Population Activities. Among other things, UNFPA subsidizes Communist China's "one child" policy, including forced abortions and infanticide.

But the U.S. Senate has passed a bill that again would spend tax dollars, $15 million this time, on UNFPA. The vote stipulated that none of the money could be used for China's draconian population-control programs. But the stipulation will have little effect. If it chooses to, UNFPA can put the U.S. money into other programs, then shift it to China—a shell game. And to refund UNFPA just 4 months after the June 4 Tiananmen Square massacre—in which the People's Liberation Army gunned down hundreds, perhaps thousands, of unarmed student protesters—seems especially odious.

Some UNFPA advocates have said that Communist China has curbed its forced abortion policy. But Stephen Mosher, director of Asian studies at the Claremont Institute, wrote about how the practice continues: "The northwestern province of Gansu recently declared that in order to 'raise the quality of the population' and eliminate poverty, the 'retarded' will not be allowed to have children. The central government has praised the Gansu move and predicted that a program of sterilizing mentally handicapped couples who are married or plan to marry, and forcibly aborting retarded women who are pregnant, will soon be the law of the land."

Mosher compares the Beijing population-control programs to Hitler's murderous eugenics policies. Some 10 to 20 million Chinese could be forcibly sterilized. And in Tibet, the restive captive nation seeking independence from Beijing, 70 percent of the people are illiterate, and so could be considered "retarded."

The very idea of the U.S. government seizing tax dollars to fund population control is hateful. For one thing, the much vaunted "population bomb" has turned out to be a dud. In an article in a recent Economic Affairs, Professor Jacqueline Kasun of Humboldt State University explodes many of the remaining qualms people have about population. Nowadays people starve only in socialist countries, such as Ethiopia. In capitalist lands, people use their freedom to produce the food and goods they need.

Her calculations show that all the world's 5 billion people could be settled on land the size of Texas, "with each person allotted space equal to that of the average American home." Kasun says that people are not "hapless sheep" who need government to show how many children to have.

Nor should Americans let their tax dollars be seized to support nations that treat their people as "hapless sheep." The House should reject such spending. And if the House too says yea, President Bush should veto the larger foreign aid bill of which it's a part. Not one tax dollar should be spent on programs tainted with genocide.

HELP THE HOMELESS

"OOPS! Sorry!"

But magic wands don't exist

If you could wave a magic wand and banish many of the problems afflicting America's handicapped, wouldn't you do it? Of course. So you'll have no trouble understanding the impulse behind the Americans with Disabilities Act, passed by the Senate last month, endorsed by the president and sure to become law.

But magic wands exist only in fairy tales. And the fairy tale that comes to mind here is "Rumpelstiltskin," in which a young woman is asked by the king to spin straw into gold. In the unlikely event that American businesses can do that, they will be able to give this story a happy ending.

In what has been dubbed "Liberation Day for the disabled," the Senate decreed that virtually every retail establishment, commercial building, bus line and subway system in the country, no matter how small or remote, will be made accessible to the handicapped. The bill also orders phone companies to install equipment to make phones usable by those who can't hear or speak.

If the bill is enacted, businesses will be forbidden to discriminate against handicapped people in hiring. Besides making sure the disabled can get in and out of their workplaces, employers will have to make whatever accommodations are needed to allow the blind, the deaf and the paraplegic to perform the jobs for which they are otherwise qualified.

The measure is a giant gift to the disabled, charged by Congress and the administration on someone else's account. It undoubtedly would improve the lives of Americans with physical or mental impairments. But in their zeal to elevate the needs of the disabled to sacred "rights," the supporters declared the cost not only tolerable but irrelevant.

That approach would be easier to defend if anyone had the faintest idea what the cost will be. One supporter, Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) airily disparaged such concerns on the part of critics. "There will be those who will come on the floor and say, 'You do not know what this is going to cost,'" he told the Senate. "I suggest to them, neither do they."

No, they don't, but it won't be cheap. AT&T estimates that the new devices for the deaf and mute would cost up to $300 million a year. The intercity bus industry, reports the Wall Street Journal, could easily end up spending more than its total annual profits for buses with wheelchair lifts and wheelchair-accessible restrooms.

An employer may be forced to hire someone to read for a blind employee—at an additional salary of $20,000 or so. And, when deciding whether to hire the blind person in the first place, the employer may not take that extra expense into account.

It's not just the people we normally think of as handicapped who are protected. If a rehabilitated crack addict applies for a job as a day care worker, the employer can't hold the addiction against him. If an AIDS victim wants to work for a small company that could be ruined by his potential medical expenses, too bad for the small company.

The bill exempts businesses and employers if complying would impose an "undue hardship." It mandates only accessibility improvements that are "readily achievable." But these terms are empty vessels to be filled by unpredictable judges.

An employer who thinks he can't afford to comply may end up having to justify the decision in court, with the burden of proof on him and with no idea how the judge will interpret the law. If the litigation expenses become an "undue hardship," tough luck.

Supporters insist that the costs won't be great, that all of us will profit from unleashing the productive skills of the handicapped, and that the government will save huge sums of money it now spends supporting disabled people who would rather work.

But if these claims are accurate, they're also an argument for all of us to pay the expense of modifying buildings, buying new buses and providing special equipment for handicapped workers. If the rights of the disabled are so urgent, why aren't they urgent enough for taxpayers to come up with the cash required to secure them?

The answer is: Because that approach would force elected officials to confront the true burden of this measure, and to weigh the needs of the handicapped against other pressing concerns. Helping the disabled would be only one of many demands on a limited budget. So the cause might have to make do with less than its partisans would like and might have to balance costs with benefits.

It's far more satisfying and politically attractive to mount a moral crusade and let someone else worry how to pay for it. But if the needs of the handicapped deserve an ambitious national commitment, they also warrant an honest one.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, Oct. 3, the 276th day of 1989. There are 89 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Oct. 3, 1863, President Abraham Lincoln declared the last Thursday in November Thanksgiving Day. (The holiday moved to the third Thursday of November in 1939 before Congress moved it to its present location, the fourth Thursday of November.)

On this date:
In 1922, Rebecca L. Felton of Georgia became the first woman to be seated in the U.S. Senate. (Mrs. Felton, a Democrat, was appointed to serve out the remaining term of Thomas E. Watson.)

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt established the Office of Economic Stabilization and authorized controls on farm prices, rents, wages and salaries.

In 1944, during World War II, U.S. troops cracked the Siegfried Line north of Aachen, Germany.

Any wart removal remedies?

This may or may not be the sort of thing I should go public with, but I have a serious problem and I need help with it.

I have these three plantar warts on the bottom of my left foot. If you've never had plantar warts on the bottom of your foot, you know not the basic agony of defeat, if you will allow me such.

A simple walk outside my house to fetch my morning newspaper is an exercise in horrible pain. What I'm learning to do is to hop around on my right foot, which causes a great deal of stinging when I, for instance, hop into a convenience store for a loaf of bread.

According to various wart experts with whom I have spoken—my barber, and a guy I play golf with—plantar warts grow inward and the roots can go deep under the skin.

"The only way to get rid of them," I was told, "is to have a doctor cut them out."

That, of course, is out of the question. I simply can't bear the thought of some doctor probing deep into my foot with some sort of sharp object.

"You don't have to have them cut out," is what else I was told. "The doctor can burn them off."

Not my plantar warts, he can't. I simply can't bear the thought of some doctor setting my foot afire either.

From my youth, I seem to remember certain alternatives for removing warts that did not involve any sort of medical procedures.

My grandmother knew a woman, for instance, who could talk warts off. (I once had a mother-in-law who could talk the ears off a donkey, but that's another story.)

My grandmother's gone now, and very likely so is the woman who could talk warts off, but I'm open to giving this a try if anybody out there knows someone who happens to possess this particular skill.

I recall some other old-fashioned wart remedies as well. One is where you bury a wash cloth under a full moon and turn around three times while chanting, "Unga, dunga, dunga, dee," which is witch doctor for, "Off, off, damned wart!"

Then there was the remedy where you found a slick river rock, rubbed it over the warts and then threw the rock back into the river while making noises like a duck. Your warts were supposed to be gone by the next morning.

Still another is where you went out at midnight and put a chicken on your head and when the chicken flew away, it was supposed to take the warts with it.

I have tried all three of these remedies, but none worked, and the thing about putting a chicken on your head involves certain complications that were quite disgusting.

But I'm still not ready to go to a doctor with this problem, and I was hoping that there might be those within the sound of this column who might know other wart removal remedies I have not already tried.

I'll go to just about any length to keep from having foot surgery or anything else that might involve pain. Recall that I went out at midnight and put a chicken on my head, so nothing is really out of the question.

I would even consider going to see a witch doctor if I knew where one was, and if that didn't work, I'd even hop over to see a chiropractor.

If that doesn't indicate my desperation, nothing will.

Looking across that generation gap

By SARAH OVERSTREET

A friend and I just took two teenagers—my friend's daughter and her friend—to see the Rolling Stones on the St. Louis leg of their "Steel Wheels" tour. Some of you parents of teenagers are probably wondering why I'd pay $128 for four tickets and confine myself in a car for eight hours with two kids whose first question was, "Do we have to sit with you when we get there?" But I had a great time.

For one thing, I think being with teenagers is sort of like owning a lake cabin. If you don't have one and don't have to go down there and fix busted pipes in the middle of winter, you really envy all the people who have lake cabins.

But I guess the most compelling reason I wanted to take them to see the Stones is that I was amazed, maybe even vindicated, that kids who usually think I'm so uncool like the same group of middle-aged singers that I do. And I realized I might not ever have a chance quite like this again to bridge this particular part of the generation gap. I thought I might get more of a clue as to what makes them tick, maybe what makes me tick, and maybe even what made me tick 20 years ago when I was their age.

During my 10 hours with these two kids (we were together 18 hours, but eight of them they spent sleeping) did teach me one thing: They are more like me at that age than I would have wanted to admit a week ago.

My friend's daughter is even crazy about the same anthem of disaffected youth that we were in the '60s, the Stones' "Paint It Black." And what was my immediate thought when she said this? The same as my parents' 20 years ago: "What she got to be so pessimistic about? Why, kids today have it so much better than when I was their age; I'd have been doing handsprings if I'd had all the opportunities she has."

But the spookiest moment came during a conversation she had with her grandfather when we stopped off to have lunch with him on our way to the concert. He was talking about disruptive students, and how they should be shown the schoolroom door if they don't want to learn. She sucked in her breath and puffed up her chest and glared at him. "They just act that way because they've got problems," she said. "They're either bored or have bad home lives or emotional problems. If someone would just help them, they wouldn't be disruptive!"

As she talked, I thought, "What an idealistic child. Wonder how long it will take reality to dampen some of that fire?"

It was a while later that my memory finally engaged, and I realized her words could have been mine years ago. Then I wondered what had happened to my own idealism; it had disappeared in such tiny increments through the years that I didn't even notice it was going.

Do still have any of the idealism that she has, or did experience—perhaps too many years of being a journalist where a healthy dose of cynicism is the only way to survive—change that completely? And if so, when did it happen?

Oh, I could recite some of the reasons I might have changed my thinking, including the thing she's looking so eagerly forward to for answers... a college education. What I've learned seems as valuable to me now as the idealism I started with. But I still have to wonder if the conflict between idealism and experience has made me better able to see what really is and what can be hoped for, or if the battle between them has just left me tired. What price have I paid for my own disillusionment, and what loss may the world have suffered for it?

Soviet lawmakers reject proposal to ban strikes as unconstitutional

By ANN IMSE
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — After an all-night meeting, lawmakers today rejected an unconstitutional President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's proposal to ban strikes for 15 months. The Soviet leader says further strikes could destroy the economy.

The draft resolution put forth by the lawmakers would, however, empower the government to take control of the country's railways by Monday if that is deemed necessary to end a blockade related to the Azerbaijani-Armenian dispute.

Gorbachev on Monday gave the legislators until today to decide on his strike-ban proposal and when the Supreme Soviet, or parliament, reconvened, lawmakers debated the reworded resolution.

During a break, Interior Ministry Vadim Bakatin called the strike-ban proposal unconstitutional.

"We don't have a basis for what is an extraordinary situation," he said.

Leonid Abalkin, a deputy premier in charge of economic reform, said the initiative to change the draft resolution came during an overnight meeting of deputies and not from Gorbachev.

"Everyone wants to be sympathetic, wants to public to like them, and nobody wants to take the responsibility," he said.

Gorbachev, in calling for a ban on strikes, called the measure necessary "to protect democratization from anarchy and irresponsible management."

By inserting the threat to take over operations and security on the country's railroads, the legislators were acting to bring an end to a blockade by Azerbaijanis of rail lines leading from their republic into Armenia.

Soviet law does not ban strikes outright. But labor unrest was ruthlessly repressed before Gorbachev came to power in 1985 and began his effort to turn the Soviet Union into a country ruled by law instead of dictate.

Gorbachev said Monday that his proposal to ban strikes was "not an effort to stop the processes that are underway in the framework of perestroika."

A key element of Gorbachev's reforms is perestroika, or restructuring the Soviet Union's stumbling and shortage-ridden economy, and the Soviet leader said that economic transformation is "under threat" because of strikes.

First Deputy Premier Lev Voronin told lawmakers Monday that the economy lost $6.15 billion in July and August because of strikes and supplies of fuel are so low the country might be unable to provide enough heat for citizens through the winter.

A letter dated Sept. 29 and read out to the Supreme Soviet from the Trade Union of Electrical Workers suggested that extreme action was needed to restore the "rhythm of labor" in the country.

The most damaging strike this year was a walkout in July by thousands of coal miners in the far north, Siberia, and the Don Basin of the eastern Ukraine. That strike cost the country millions of rubles and the government agreed to a package of economic and social improvements that officials said will cost about $3 billion.

Strikes also have become a way of expressing ethnic discontent.

Bakker accuses Falwell of cheating PTL followers as testimony ends

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jim Bakker completed testimony in his fraud trial by accusing the Rev. Jerry Falwell of cheating PTL followers and by conceding he and his wife accepted millions in bonuses as the ministry's finances foundered.

"The real conspiracy to defraud came from that group of people who took over the ministry for their own selfish gains," said Bakker, who invited Falwell to take over the ministry when he resigned in 1987 in a sex and money scandal.

Bakker also denied the prosecutor's assertion that he failed to tell PTL board members about the ministry's money problems.

"I don't know how the board members could not be aware of the financial crisis at Heritage USA," he testified Monday. "They knew we had cash flow problems and they voted to borrow funds to pay for them."

Closing arguments were scheduled to begin today in the U.S. District Court trial. Jury deliberations were expected to begin as early as Wednesday.

Bakker, 49, is charged with 15 counts of wire fraud, eight counts of mail fraud and one count of conspiracy to commit wire and mail fraud. He is accused of conspiring to defraud followers of $158 million and diverting more than $3.7 million in PTL money for his own benefit.

If convicted on all counts, he could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined more than $5 million.

Prosecutor Deborah Smith asked Bakker to explain apparent contradictions between his story and testimony and exhibits presented by the government, including former PTL board members who said they didn't remember voting on some of the large bonuses for Bakker and his wife.

Bakker said Falwell and his attorney, Norman Roy Grutman, had intimidated the directors.

"Norman Roy Grutman and Jerry Falwell threatened those board members that they would be in terrible danger," Bakker testified. Among the threats, Bakker said, was that the directors might be liable to a civil suit.

Bakker said he and his wife, Tammy Faye, accepted $3.1 million in bonuses in the mid-1980s as the ministry's finances ran into trouble. He said the bonuses amounted to less than 1 percent of the more than $425 million he raised for the ministry.

Asked by his lawyer what he did with the $425 million, Bakker replied, "I put it to the work of Jesus Christ."

Board members granted the bonuses "of their own free will," Bakker said, and often told him he was "worth much more than this, and they would say that over and over again."

Bakker, who began his testimony Friday, spent 10 hours on the witness stand. He was the last defense witness.

Under cross-examination on Friday, Bakker testified repeatedly that he didn't remember details of his ministry's finances. The testimony prompted his attorney, George Davis, to say "it was very damaging, very devastating."

During defense questioning Monday, Bakker summed up his case: "We were a church, and people always wanted to run it like a business. I had to keep telling them, this was a church, not a business."

Salinas seeks trade concessions from U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, opening talks with President Bush, is seeking trade concessions from the United States as part of an effort to restore Mexico's economic health.

But a U.S. official, responding to remarks Salinas made to reporters before leaving Mexico, disagreed with his contention that Mexico has difficulty penetrating American markets.

After a morning welcoming ceremony today at the White House and a meeting with Bush, Salinas planned to attend a working lunch with Secretary of State James A. Baker III. A White House state dinner is scheduled for this evening.

The Bush administration has been highly complimentary of Salinas' performance during his first 10 months in office, praising his economic reform program and his efforts to crack down on drug-smuggling.

But trade appears to be one area where the two sides are far apart.

Salinas was reported to have complained during his meeting with reporters that it is inappropriate for the United States to criticize closed markets in Japan when the United States itself is guilty of protectionist practices.

"I think that reciprocity in commercial relations is fundamental," Salinas was reported to have said. "Isn't that what the United States is asking of Japan?"

A U.S. official, insisting on anonymity, contended the U.S. market is far more open than Japan's. Whereas the United States has a huge trade deficit with Japan, Mexico enjoys a $2.7 billion trade surplus with the United States on total two-way trade of $43.9 billion, the official said.

Berlin wants Bonn to eject refugees

By GIRARD C. STEICHEN
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — East Germany's Communist leaders are demanding West Germany evict the more than 2,000 East German refugees who have surged into Bonn's embassy in Prague hoping to follow compatriots to the West.

The demand came in a formal protest filed Monday after East Berlin grudgingly allowed a weekend rail exodus of 7,000 East Germans who had sought asylum at Bonn's missions in the Czechoslovak capital and Warsaw.

East German envoy Horst Neubauer, delivering the protest to Chancellor Helmut Kohl's office, complained that by harboring more refugees Bonn was renegeing on the agreement that allowed the weekend passage.

Kohl's spokesman, Hans Klein, denied any such conditions had been agreed upon. And Peter Rothen, a Foreign Ministry spokesman, said West Germany "never told the East Germans it would stop taking in East Germans seeking refuge."

The official East German news agency, ADN, said Neubauer insisted that the new refugees be "turned out of the embassy and returned to East Germany."

Initially, Czechoslovak police cordoned off the Prague embassy and muscled away refugees.

At one point, a West German embassy official intervened as police tried to pull off the compound's fence a refugee attempting to scale it. The refugee and another who had been handcuffed to a bench were allowed entry.

Czechoslovak police later relaxed their controls and refugees thronging the embassy compound's muddy grounds Monday evening told reporters they numbered more than 2,000 and about 100 more were arriving each hour.

About 200 other East Germans had gathered at Bonn's mission in Warsaw, Poland, by Monday evening, hoping passage to the West could be arranged for them as it had for compatriots who left over the weekend.

East Germans have not needed special permission to travel to Czechoslovakia and it was not immediately known if their government planned to seek to halt such travel.

East Berlin reportedly restricted travel to Hungary after that country's liberal leaders opened their border with Austria in mid-September and thousands of East Germans fled West across it.

Government permission is needed to go to Poland and many refugees arriving there have said they crossed the border illegally.

The East German opposition group New Forum on Monday criticized the country's Communist leaders for agreeing to the weekend release, saying in a statement that East Germany is "losing a village every day."

So far this year more than 120,000 East Germans have reached West Germany, where they are granted automatic citizenship. The exodus of the mostly young, skilled workers has hurt East Germany's economy.

On Friday and Saturday, the hard-line East Berlin government led by 77-year-old Erich Honecker is to play host to Mikhail S. Gorbachev as it marks the 40th anniversary of the East German state.

Bonn Foreign Ministry spokesman Juergen Chrobog said Monday that Gorbachev's foreign minister, Eduard Shevardnadze, had played "an important and helpful role" in getting East Germany to agree to the weekend exodus.

JOINT PROBLEM, MUSCLE PAIN

If you've developed symptoms that make you think you have arthritis, it would be wise to have an examination to see if the muscles in the affected area are out of balance.

Muscles help keep a joint stable and assist it through its normal range of motion. But if the muscles on one side of the joint are weak, this puts a strain on the joint. It may also cause arthritic-like symptoms.

Dr. Mark Ford

Dr. Louise Haydon

The doctor of Chiropractic will test the muscles to determine their balance and strength. He will also evaluate nerve patterns and may take an x-ray to study the joint structure involved. Perhaps some laboratory procedures will also be needed.

If the problem is in the muscles around the joint, treatment can be given to strengthen and return them to proper balance. Once this is achieved, the arthritic-like pain and discomfort may be greatly relieved or eliminated.

Sheriff Dave Parkman, right, and investigator Glenn Ramsey stand outside their office near Forrest City, Ark., as they discuss unsolved crime.

Unsolved death victim of jurisdictional policy

By JANET K. ISBELL
Associated Press Writer

FORREST CITY, Ark. (AP) — There's a body, evidence and a suspect. But Arkansas and Tennessee authorities can't agree who should investigate the death of a former women's collegiate basketball star. The body of Joel Tillis, who graduated from Northeast Louisiana University in 1988, was found June 11 in a ditch near Forrest City, about 25 miles from the state line. But she may have died in Memphis. "I'm wondering if they are thinking of her as a nobody," said Marliss Bates of Hammond, La., who last saw her daughter when she came home for Mother's Day. "Had Joel been some prominent person's daughter ... would it have made a difference then? Was Joel just another black child?"

Authorities in St. Francis County, Ark., contend Ms. Tillis, 24, was slain in a Memphis apartment and her body then dumped in the ditch beside U.S. 70, halfway between Forrest City and Memphis. "We have simply pursued all the leads that we have, and everything to us points back to Memphis, Tennessee," said Sheriff Dave Parkman, who forwarded the case file to police in the Tennessee city in August. "We just cannot resolve a murder here in this county that happened someplace else."

But Capt. Ken East, commander of the Memphis homicide division, said he isn't about to take over the investigation.

"It is his case, it has been his case and it will continue to be his case," East said. "Unless it can be proved that a homicide occurred here, which it cannot be proved at this time, then it stays where it is found."

The discovery of Ms. Tillis' badly decomposed body came a little more than two years after the body of her best friend and former teammate, 18-year-old Brenda Spicer, was found in a trash bin on the Monroe, La., college campus. Both women were strangled.

Ms. Tillis' boyfriend, Ivryn Bolden, who shared a Memphis apartment with her until her disappearance in May, is a prime suspect in the Tillis case, Parkman said.

Bolden was acquitted of second-degree murder in the 1987 death of Ms. Spicer, with Ms. Tillis testifying on his behalf.

On May 19, he reported to Memphis police that Ms. Tillis was missing and that he last saw her the previous day, when he dropped her off for work as an assistant manager at a Lady Foot Locker shoe store.

But Ms. Tillis' boss told police the young woman never showed up for work that day.

Shortly after Ms. Tillis' disappearance, Bolden was questioned by Memphis police, but he since has left Tennessee and was last reported living in Florida.

Parkman said investigators have learned Ms. Tillis and Bolden argued the day she disappeared. But Parkman said he never questioned Bolden.

"I think Bolden should be interviewed," Parkman said. "But I don't think we have enough to do that in this county. I don't think we have enough evidence and information on Bolden to initiate picking him up."

Bolden declined comment recently, saying, "I know my name is being bounced around a lot up there, but my attorney has advised me not to say anything."

Years of recovery legacy of hurricane

By FRED BAYLES
AP National Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — It took Hurricane Hugo six hours to roar across South Carolina, lashing the state with wind, rain and flood. Officials ending a week of cleanup say those few hours will be felt for years.

The storm smashed the state's economy, throwing thousands out of work. It devastated timberlands, farmlands and coastal areas, damaging everything from tourist havens to shrimp beds. The genteel face of Charleston has been scarred and muddled.

"It's not going to be a quick process, it is going to be hard for all of us," said Joseph P. Riley Jr., the mayor of Charleston, where more than 2,500 historically significant buildings were damaged. The repairs to those buildings will take five years.

The immediate effects are obvious. Twelve days after South Carolina bore the brunt of the storm, thousands of people remain without electricity, and an estimated 50,000 are homeless.

Cleanup efforts are costing the state a half-million dollars daily. State Comptroller General Earle Morris has estimated Hugo could put the state budget $300 million in the red in the next fiscal year, partly due to losses in revenue from fallen payroll and property taxes.

Hugo's 135 mph winds and 17-foot tidal surge also altered the state's employment picture. An estimated 270,000 people were thrown out of work for at least the short term, raising the state's normally low unemployment rate of 4.5 percent to more than 16 percent.

"It's across the board," said Jack Philips, a program supervisor with the state Employment Security Commission. "We have everything from manufacturing plants to hardware stores affected. The weather doesn't discriminate."

Philips said it was hoped many shops and businesses would reopen soon, but the state's important lumber and fishing industries may take three years to recover.

Dozens of shrimp boats were beached and damaged by the storm, which struck during one of the best harvests in recent years. State officials say shrimp beds appear to have escaped major damage, but producers were hit hard.

Of greater concern is the damage to forests, which provide the raw materials for a $4.3 billion wood products industry that employs 30,000 people.

It is estimated 36 percent of the 12.2 million acres of state forest was damaged, felling trees worth more than $1 billion.

Put in perspective, about 2.2 billion board feet of timber are harvested annually. Hugo's destruction downed 6.7 billion board feet.

"We hope to salvage what we can, but there's three years of harvest on the ground," said Steve Scott, a state forester.

The tourist industry, a $4 billion business that employs 98,000 people, is expected to bounce back quickly despite $2 billion in damage. But Robert Liming, state director of tourism, said damage to such resorts as Myrtle Beach and Garden City would drop growth from an anticipated 8 percent to less than 3 percent this year.

"Some people are assuming that Myrtle Beach is gone and that's a wrong assumption," he said. "A remarkable amount of property has already gotten back on line, but some heavy rental areas are going to be a long time coming back."

The storm also laid waste to as much as $100 million worth of cotton, soybean, corn and tobacco in the major agriculture areas in the Savannah Valley and the northeast part of the state.

Perhaps most worrisome is Hugo's impact on the state's small businesses: the restaurants, shops and small manufacturers without the resources to survive weeks and months of down time.

"The number of businesses coming into the disaster assistance centers is far greater than we expected," said John Patrick, district director of the U.S. Small Business Administration. "We will probably be seeing effects of this for the next 10 years."

Nelson Bean, president of Evans American Corp., a Houston-based company specializing in catastrophe management, said the longer it takes businesses to get on their feet, the greater the risk they face of closing.

"Probably 40 percent of businesses won't reopen," he said. "That's pretty significant when you consider that these are largely mom and pop operations that have been in business for years and years."

Developers in Israel face archaeological hazards

By ALLYN FISHER
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — After 16 years of haggling, a license was granted for widening a road next to the wall of Jerusalem's Old City. But work was halted days later when a bulldozer uncovered a Byzantine bathhouse no one knew existed.

It's a typical hazard for developers in Jerusalem, a city that dates back some 3,500 years and where a shovel put in the ground almost anywhere can turn up archaeological artifacts.

"We have an overload of history here," said Aharon Meir, a city archaeologist. "That's what makes Jerusalem different. If you don't bother to check, you can simply bulldoze important findings away."

Meir supervises the archaeological dig launched where construction crews have temporarily ceased building a 820-foot stretch of the new Mamilla Road.

The finds so far indicate that contrary to earlier belief, the roughly square-mile walled city may have once extended beyond the current walls, Meir said.

The new road runs near the Old City's Jaffa Gate, built by the Turkish ruler Suleiman the Magnificent in the 16th Century. Although long considered a possible archaeological site, the area was never excavated by researchers.

For years, it was off limits as a battlefield or ceasefire zone between Israeli and Arab armies. After Israel captured it and the rest of east Jerusalem from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war, other sections of the city were given priority by archaeologists.

One example was "King David's City," near the holy Al Aqsa Mosque, and the Wailing Wall remnant of the ancient Jewish temples.

At the Jaffa Gate, excavators have dug more than 2,000 years into the past, stopping when they hit bedrock that indicated they had found the earliest settlement.

Two structures so far uncovered — a bathhouse and a large public building yet to be identified — have been tentatively dated from the Byzantine period of the Roman Empire, or about the 4th century.

Also discovered by Meir, helped by several dozen Palestinian laborers, is an intricate web of water cisterns, apparently part of an aqueduct system that supplied the ancient city's water.

"These may not look like stupendous finds, but they provide little important tidbits of information about what life was like. If we give up these little things, we would miss the larger picture," Meir said.

As he spoke hundreds of vehicles crawled at a snail's pace above on the main road, which has been temporarily narrowed to two lanes.

The new road is part of a $250 million project to build a hotel, apartment buildings and a shopping plaza in Mamilla, a predominantly Arab quarter before Israel's 1948 independence war.

Several plans for developing Mamilla have been shelved since 1973 amid huge disputes between planners and environmentalists. Among other complaints, the environmentalists expressed fears the new road could increase pollution, causing damage to old buildings.

In the current project, a compromise was struck in which the planned road was narrowed from six to three lanes and several old structures were spared being leveled.

Officials of the Karta Company, developers of Mamilla, said they hoped the latest delay will not last beyond the end of the month so they can meet their building schedule. But they take it philosophically.

"In some places they make a fuss over remains only 100 years old, here we're talking about things dating to 2,000 years," said Karta's deputy director, Yaacov Brandt.

Low self-esteem is heavy burden

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I applaud you for encouraging those who make disparaging remarks about fat people to change their ways. Fat children in our society often receive no support from any source: peers, teachers or family. And, as "Heartbroken Mother" so eloquently stated, parents are often blamed for the child's weight, when "blame" (if any) should be placed on metabolic and genetic factors.

It's unfortunate that you did not take the opportunity to explain the dangers of the "yo-yo dieting syndrome." Children who start dieting at an early age will probably end up fatter as adults than fat children who do not diet. Additionally, severe calorie-restricted diets during the developmental years can damage the body's growth and maturing process. The negative effect that dieting has on a child's self-esteem (giving them the message that they are not acceptable) cannot be overstated.

People come in all colors, shapes and sizes. If we would all be more accepting of the uniqueness of each person, instead of attempting to make everyone conform to a certain physical ideal, we would have a much healthier society, both physically and mentally.

Abby, the National Association to Advance Fat Acceptance (NAAFA) can provide support to fat people, fat children and their parents. NAAFA's purpose is to try to improve the quality of life for fat people through public education, advocacy, research and member support. Please tell your readers who are harassed because of their weight, or their child's weight, to contact us: NAAFA Inc., P.O. Box 188620, Sacramento, Calif. 95818. (When writing, please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.) We can help them in their struggle for acceptance.

SALLY E. SMITH, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, NAAFA

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to your answer to "Heartbroken Mother." It appears this woman is really trying very hard to help her daughter, and that's great. But Abby, there are a lot of parents out there who just allow their children to become grossly overweight and deserve the condemning looks they get from passers-by.

These parents just don't seem to care what or how much their children eat, don't care if they get exercise and don't have the time even to teach them how to eat properly. And because of their neglect, the child withstands cruel teasing from his peers and rude stares from strangers, and often develops a low self-image.

These children grow up to be fat adults with high blood pressure, high cholesterol levels, heart problems, arterial blockage, etc. It used to be believed that chubby children were healthier than thinner ones. We now know this to be untrue. It's cruel and unfair for parents to doom their children through obesity to such a dim (and often short) future.

A CONCERNED OBSERVER
DEAR ABBY: You recently printed a letter from "Heartbroken Mother," who thought people were rude to stare at her seriously overweight daughter.

I don't "stare" at overweight children; whenever I see one, though, I say to myself, "That's child abuse!" A fat child is obviously eating too much of the wrong kinds of foods. And where is the child getting these foods? At home.

My 11-year-old daughter has a friend who is grossly overweight because her mother keeps their fridge and cupboards well-stocked with "goodies," which the children are constantly eating. This obese friend is so accustomed to eating sweets that when I gave her and my daughter each a bowl of strawberries, she said she couldn't eat hers without sugar!

Children are not responsible for the eating habits they learn at home, but, unfortunately, they suffer when those eating habits are not in their best interests.

Abby, how can we stop this subtle form of child abuse?

ANTI-CHILD ABUSE
DEAR ANTI-CHILD ABUSE: We can stop rewarding children with cookies and candy.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 84 years old, but I still like the ladies. My wife is the jealous type, and she never wants me to leave the house without her because she's afraid I might call on an old girlfriend, so she hides my false teeth.

What should I do?
GRANDPA MAX
DEAR GRANDPA: Your wife is looking out for your best interests. She wants to make sure you don't bite off more than you can chew.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

Over the weekend, I went to Lubbock with some ACT I board members - John Wright, treasurer, and Bub Behannon, past president. We went to a mini-conference sponsored by Texas Non-Profit Theatres, Inc., (TNT).

We met Paula Simpson there, a former ACT I board member and director, now living in Odessa.

As a member of the Texas Commission on the Arts citizen review panel, I was able to visit with theatre directors in the West Texas region who I will be representing for grant reviews next spring.

ACT I members got some fresh perspectives on theatre management and we all got to see the Texas Tech production of The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas. I thought the production was well done, although I don't particularly like the script.

Paula had just finished taking the TASP text that morning before driving to Lubbock. She is attending Odessa College this fall. In her opinion it was a glorified SAT test.

"None of the people responsible for the test could pass it," was Paula's comment.

The other night I saw a commercial where a husband asks his wife (I supposed) first if she's bushed, then what's for dinner. She replies yes and we're going out. On closer inspection you realize she doesn't look bushed. She looks ready for a night out.

When I feel "bushed" I look it and I'm too bushed to care. I may not want to cook but I certainly don't want to get out to eat. I figure that's what frozen dinners, canned things, leftovers and pizza delivery are for.

I'm beginning to appreciate public television more and more, not only for its excellent programming but also for the lack of intelligence insulting commercials.

El Progreso Club

El Progreso Club met Sept. 26 for a field trip arranged by Maxine Hawkins and Julia Dawkins. After lunching at the Plaza in Borger, the group went to the site of the Alibates Flint Quarries National Monument six miles south of Fritch off Texas 136.

The site covers about 800 acres and includes at least 550 quarry sites. It was named for a cowboy, Allen "Allie" Bates, who once lived in a dugout shelter along one of the numerous dry creeks with rocky walls that run into the Canadian River.

The famous site, occupied by the Panhandle Pueblo Culture for about 400 to 500 years until the 15th century, has been called "this continent's foremost link to man's dim past." The distinctive flint, a quartz in shades of nearly every color except green, has been quarried for at least 12,000 years and was traded throughout the Great Plains.

Park Ranger Ed Day lead the group tour starting with the history and geography of the area, pointing out objects and sites of interest, and stressing the importance of flint to the Indians.

The next club meeting is annual guest day on Oct. 10 in the Energas Flame Room. Rita Sell of Perryton will give a slide presentation of wildlife along Wolf Creek.

A Russian proverb has it that: "To ask is no sin and to be refused is no calamity."

Bears win again

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Ditka couldn't resist kicking the corpse. "We might not be the best, but we know we're not the best," Ditka said after the Bears, certainly the best Monday night, had blitzed the Philadelphia Eagles 27-13.

The Eagles, Ditka added, "think they can come here and talk their way into a game and they got that from their coach, the Fat Man, and that's just stupid."

With that, Ditka got in the last swipe at his old nemesis, Eagles coach Buddy Ryan.

"It was a disappointing loss," said Ryan, who gets under Ditka's skin as much these days as he did when he was defensive coordinator for the Bears. "It was probably more disappointing than the (Fog Bowl) loss we had in the playoffs last year. You can't turn the ball over five or six times and win."

"Instead of blocking a punt, we rough the kicker; instead of intercepting a couple of balls, they end up getting touchdowns," Ryan said. "It was just a great team win for the Bears and a terrible loss for us."

"We must be awful lucky," Ditka said, a note of sarcasm in his voice.

The Bears' victory kept alive two streaks: the Eagles have never beaten the Bears in 13 games on Chicago turf, and Ryan is winless in four outings against Ditka.

Quarterback Mike Tomczak directed the Bears to their fourth straight triumph by completing 24 of 38 passes for 266 yards and three touchdowns.

Philadelphia's Randall Cunningham had some flashy numbers of his own — 32 of 62 for 401 yards and one touchdown — but threw four interceptions and was sacked four times.

"The Bears are a better team than we expected," Cunningham said. "We were going downfield and we would turn the ball over. I thought we would be able to protect the ball better. But they had the stunts and (Richard) Dent took advantage."

Dent had two solo sacks and John Roper had one. They also shared a sack.

Tomczak's first touchdown was for 14 yards to Dennis McKinnon, who made a circus catch between two defenders. It followed an interception by Shaun Gayle but was set up when Izel Jenkins roughed Bears punter Maury Buford.

McKinnon, asked to describe the touchdown, said, "It was a jump ball and I got the dunk."

Tomczak also hit Matt Suhey with a 1-yard touchdown pass for a 13-0 halftime lead. In the third period, Tomczak completed five straight passes in a drive that led to Neal Anderson's 2-yard scoring run.

The Eagles got back into the game on a pair of field goals by Luis Zendejas and a 24-yard touchdown pass from Cunningham to Gregg Garrity that cut the lead to 20-13.

Chicago defensive end Richard Dent (95) puts the heat on Eagles quarterback Randall Cunningham during second-quarter action Monday night.

Aikman, Dallas down and out

Steve Walsh gets the call

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — The third string quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys is none other than former Texas Christian star, Scott Ankrum.

Coach Jimmy Johnson said rookie wide receiver Ankrum would be the Cowboys' emergency third stringer should Steve Walsh and Babe Laufenberg go down on Sunday against the Green Bay Packers.

Doctors operated on $11 million rookie quarterback Troy Aikman's non-passing hand Monday, inserting four screws into a broken finger and putting on a cast that will sideline him at least a month.

Aikman, who suffered a broken index finger on his left hand in the first period of the winless Dallas Cowboys' 30-13 loss to the New York Giants Sunday, will wear the cast for three weeks.

The Cowboys estimate that the earliest Aikman could return is four weeks with six weeks more likely.

"Realistically he will be out four ball games," Johnson said. "We'll take a look at him before the fifth."

Aikman, the top pick in the regular NFL draft from UCLA, was tackled by linebacker Carl Banks while scrambling eight yards for a first down. He returned to the huddle and asked lineman Kevin Gogan to look at the finger.

"I thought it was just a dislocation and asked Kevin to give it a hard pull and a jerk, which didn't help," Aikman said.

"I gave it a hard pull like he asked and I sure hope I didn't hurt it more," Gogan said.

Dr. Robert Vandermeer, the Cowboys' team physician, said Aikman "was very fortunate it wasn't his throwing hand. That would have been a season-ender."

The left index finger absorbs a lot of the shock in the snap from center and it would be difficult for Aikman to play without fumbling.

Steve Walsh, the top pick in the supplemental draft from the University of Miami who is earning about $1 million a year, replaced Aikman and completed 13 passes for 190 yards and a touchdown. Walsh, who had two passes intercepted, threw a 27-yard scoring pass to Herschel Walker.

"The baseball hat is off and my helmet is on," said Walsh, who had been rumored on the trading block before the Oct. 17 deadline. "I hate to go in this way, but when you are number two, this seems to be the way you get your chance to play."

"My first NFL touchdown pass was sure a highlight. Herschel caught the ball and did his thing."

But no matter who was on offense, the Giants weren't bothered.

"The Cowboys in the past never seemed to run the same play from the same formation or set twice in the same game," Giants' linebacker Lawrence Taylor said. "What they sent against us Sunday was pretty vanilla. You could always read what was going on. Sometimes it was so simple that we thought it was some trick because it was just too easy to read."

The "new era" Cowboys are off to an 0-4 start, worst since 1963. Some fans wore "cowbag" cutout grocery sacks over their heads Sunday, when only 51,785 showed up at Texas Stadium. There were more than 4,000 no-shows.

"I don't like to lose," said Johnson, who won 52 games and a national title in five years at Miami. "But if this group keeps working this hard, we'll win some games. We're making progress."

As to Taylor's comment, Johnson said "We have so many young players in the lineup that we can't go to a much faster pace offensively than we have been going. We can't put in a lot of stuff."

He added "I'm pleased we didn't trade Steve Walsh. I feel comfortable he will perform well."

Blue Jays, Oakland seek to dispel talk

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Baseball Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. — Cito Gaston rejects the talk that the Toronto Blue Jays can't win the big one.

In the next week, the Toronto manager wants to prove it against the Oakland Athletics.

The Blue Jays blew a 3-1 lead to Kansas City in the 1985 playoffs. Two years later, Toronto lost its last seven games to lose the American League East to Detroit.

"As far as big games," Gaston said, "you have to think about what happened."

"In '85, we had KC down 3-1, but they came back to beat us just like they did to St. Louis to win the World Series. We had two of our best guys go down in 1987 (shortstop Tony Fernandez and catcher Ernie Whitt) that really hurt us."

Last weekend, the current Blue Jays started to chip away at their image problem by rallying twice against Baltimore to win the AL East.

"Cito reminds me a lot of Joe Torre as a manager," Lee Mazzilli said. "He's calm and treats everyone fair. He was a player so he understands certain situations."

Gaston will send Dave Steib (17-8) against Dave Stewart (21-9) tonight in Game 1.

AL playoffs

The Blue Jays will need some great pitching by Steib, who three times in his career has lost a no-hitter in the ninth inning.

"I guess you have to look at the different degrees of pressure," Steib said. "We as players don't look at it that way, although the media likes to. My job is the same every time out. I have to go out Tuesday with my best stuff and do the job."

The A's, meanwhile, have been criticized for being too laid back.

"That's one of my raw nerves," Manager Tony La Russa said. "It seems like some media people say, unless in the clubhouse before or after the game you have players talking controversial stuff, putting the opponents down, or bragging about themselves, that it's not an emotional clubhouse."

The A's, despite injuries to Jose Canseco, Dennis Eckersley and Walt Weiss, finished with a major league-high 99 victories and a second straight AL West title.

"When you watch us play, there is no way this club doesn't have a lot of heart," La Russa said. "We slide as hard as anybody, we run the ball out as hard as anybody. I just don't think we talk as much as the writers would like us to."

The Blue Jays will go with right-hander Todd Stottlemyre (7-7) in Game 2 against Mike Moore (19-11).

"The A's have a good right-

Soccer

AMARILLO — The Pampa Classic split soccer matches with Amarillo teams in the 14 and under outdoor league last weekend at Southwest Park.

Pampa blanked the Amarillo Tornados 1-0 in the first match on a second-half goal by Sutton. The goal was set up by a long pass from Jason Soukup to Sutton, who head-shot the ball in.

The Classic were edged by the Outlaws 3-2 in the second match.

Pampa gave up two early goals, but came back to knot the score at the half on a pair of goals by Jesus Lopez.

Amarillo scored the winning goal in the second half as the Classic were unable to capitalize on their offensive opportunities due to fatigue, said coach Fran Kludt.

Pampa players recognized for outstanding performances were Andy Sutton, J.B. Horton, Jesus Lopez, Lanny Schale, David Urbanczyk, Tim McCavitt, Jason Soukup and Abel Del Fierro.

The Classic have six matches remaining on the schedule, two per Saturday for the next three weeks, at Southwest Park.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

U.S. Gov't Approves Patent Claims for New Diet Pill

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors' claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a 'lazy way' to lose weight because the pills alone 'automatically' reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public

If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W992, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) For fastest service, credit card orders ONLY call anytime 24 hours, toll free (800) 527-9700, ext. W992.

Rangers improve '88 by 25 games

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON — Although the Texas Rangers finished 16 games behind the Oakland Athletics in the American League West, it was a vast improvement over 1988 and left club officials hoping for a bright 1990.

Pitcher Nolan Ryan, who had five near no-hitters in 1989, brightened the Rangers' prospects with his announcement on Monday that he will return in 1990.

Texas improved 25 games this season, going from 21 games under .500 to four over. The Rangers were the fourth most-improved club in baseball behind the Chicago Cubs, Baltimore Orioles and California Angels.

"We had a decent season," General Manager Tom Grieve said. "We need to improve our starting pitching."

The Rangers drew over two million fans for the first time in club history and a large part of the turnout count can be attributed to Ryan. He won 16 games and struck out 301 batters, including Rickey Henderson on Aug. 22 for the 5,000th of Ryan's career.

Ryan, 42, announced on Monday that he will return for the 1990 season in his quest for 300 victories. He needs 11 more wins to reach that plateau.

Ryan's strikeout total led the majors, 66 more than runnerup Mark Langston. Ryan became the oldest player by 11 years to have over 300 strikeouts in one season.

"The only disappointment was that we didn't do better as a team," Ryan said, "but I expect us to be even better next year."

Ruben Sierra hit .306 with 14 triples, 29 homers, 119 RBIs, 101 runs scored, a .543 slugging percentage and 78 extra-base hits. He led the American League in RBIs, triples, total bases (344), slugging percentage and extra-base hits. At 25, he's the sixth-youngest player to lead the AL in RBIs since 1920, and the youngest since Texas' Jeff Burroughs did it in 1974 when he was 23.

"Ruben had a tremendous year," Grieve said. "He's a viable MVP candidate that's for sure. Just look at the numbers."

Second baseman Julio Franco gave the Rangers a .316 season that included 13 homers and 92 RBI.

"Ruben was a big catalyst for us," Grieve said. "He was solid the entire year until he got hurt toward the end."

The Rangers were hurt by their pitching staff, which led the AL in walks for the fourth consecutive season. Texas also was down in turning double plays and allowed more unearned runs.
