Fall Festival more than just a celebration for ESL class

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Monday night's Fiesta de Otoño - Fall Festival - at the Pampa Community Building for local ESL students was more than just another excuse to put on a huge feed. It was a celebration of Hispanic heritage and those who want to incorporate it with their new experience as United States citizens.

ESL - English as a Second Language - meets twice a week at Baker Elementary and helps local Hispanics complete their amnesty requirements as well as acquainting them with the English language and American traditions.

"(The festival) was mostly to encourage the people to come back to ESL and let them know we're back in business (after the summer vacations) for everyone," said Eunice Moreno, community liaison for Baker Elementary School. "(ESL) helps them build their self-confidence. It's like a speech class. A lot of them are completing their amnesty papers and this is part of that, but some of them are genuinely interested in learning English."

One of those is Elfida Regalado, who brought her family to the United States from Chihuahua, Mexico, 10 years ago.

She and her daughters Alma and Raquel are all involved in ESL. Elfida is working to learn English. Alma, a student at Clarendon College and Pampa High School graduate, is serving as a translator and aide. And Raquel, a junior at PHS, serves as cheerleader for the family.

"A lot of people, even school kids, have cars here," Raquel noted of the differences between the US and Mexico. "Down there we would never think of having a car. Buses take you where you go. Now we (she and Alma) both have our own cars."

She added that her mother is committed to ESL as a way to learn the English her daughters have mastered.

"She wants us to speak English to her," Raquel said of her mother.

"A lot of people quit after they take their (amnesty) test, but she wants to learn how to speak it all."

"My mom wanted to learn (English) and started going to school," older daughter Alma said. "I graduated last year and Cindy, Mom's teacher, started telling me about college. I went and I liked it."

Currently she is working on a secretarial science certificate, but said if she continues to enjoy college she may go on to a higher degree.

"We didn't know the language at all when we moved here," Alma remembers of first coming to the United States. "It was a little scary." Thanks to programs like ESL, the Regalado family has now settled into the mainstream of American life, something they find very comfortable.

"We love it here," Raquel said. "You have so much here, microwaves, TV dinners and everything."

Her mother broke in to speak to her in Spanish.

"She said if I say this, people will think I am lazy," Raquel giggled. "But you do have so much here. I love Mexico, but I love it here too, and when I am here, I think I would never want to move back."

Elfida was nervous about trying out her English on a stranger, but she got straight A's when it came to offering heaping helpings of the enchiladas, tortillas and other Mexican goodies, all made from scratch, that the Fall Festival had to offer.

"I need to speak English for my work," Elfida said. "I clean houses. It is hard (to learn English)." She hesitated, translating in her mind. "It takes a lot of time."

Community liaison Moreno said that in addition to learning English, the ESL students also study American traditions like Thanksgiving.

"It gets them familiar with our celebrations," Moreno said. "We are having a Thanksgiving skit and they are going to dress up like pilgrims and Indians. I want to see that - a bunch of Mexicans dressed up like pilgrims and Indians. It should be fun."

"We are also going to have a

East German city calls for open talks

By GIRARD C. STEICHEN
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) - In an unprecedented move, Leipzig officials promised to push for dialogue between the opposition and Communist leaders and allowed 70,000 protesters to jam the city center in East Germany's largest protest in decades.

The official tolerance of Monday's peaceful march for an end to authoritarian rule contrasted sharply with the violence police used in breaking up similar demonstrations over the weekend in six East German cities.

Hundreds of people had been arrested in East Berlin, Leipzig, Dresden and other cities by club-swinging police. West German television said many have already been sentenced to jail terms of up to six months.

Leipzig, an industrial city of 500,000, has been the scene of several clashes in recent weeks as police moved to crush demonstrations stirred in part by an exodus of disillusioned citizens to the West.

After two nights of clashes in East Berlin, many feared police would also use violence to break up the Leipzig demonstration.

But beforehand, officials of the Leipzig Communist Party promised to push for a free exchange of ideas between citizens and the government, Lutheran sources said.

Police and paramilitary troops watched the Leipzig march, but did not intervene. Christoph Wonneberger, pastor for the Lukas Lutheran church in Leipzig, said he was surprised by the restraint.

He told West Germany's ZDF television network by telephone that some demonstrators even "began conversations with paramilitary troops" when the crowd was dispersing.

He said he considered the police restraint "a very hopeful sign."

The country's Communist leaders, however, have given no indication they are about to soften their tough stance against the reforms sweeping such East bloc allies as Hungary, Poland and the Soviet Union.

The aging leadership in East Berlin has repeatedly rejected any moves toward greater democracy, steering a conservative, orthodox Communist course.

In the capital on Monday night, about 2,000 demonstrators gathered in front of a church in another pro-democracy vigil. Witnesses said the crowd dispersed and there were no reported incidents. West German radio also reported peaceful demonstrations Monday in Dresden, Plauen and Halle.

Monday's demonstrations were far different from the weekend marches across the country of 16.6 million people, when police marched into crowds of demonstrators and hit, chased and arrested hundreds.

Protesters paraded through Leipzig on Monday shouting, "We Need Freedom," "Democracy," and "No Violence," witnesses said on condition of anonymity.

The march was the largest single protest in East Germany since a 1953 workers uprising was put down by Soviet tanks.

Earlier Monday, Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany denounced the East German government as "rigidly authoritarian" and said relations with East Berlin "cannot prosper" under present conditions.

Also, 18 Lutheran leaders issued an appeal in East Berlin calling on the government to implement wide-ranging democratic reforms and urging all sides to refrain from violence.

Meanwhile, one of East Germany's star athletes, two-time Olympic skating champion Katarina Witt, said the East German government must think about the causes for the exodus of its people to the West.

She also urged considering changes at home.

At least 50,000 East Germans have fled West in recent months.

The exodus, along with the weekend clashes across the country, deeply embarrassed the government on its two-day 40th anniversary festivities, which were attended by Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Gorbachev hinted in statements during and after the ceremonies that he favors for East Germany the types of reforms he is overseeing in the Soviet Union.

Court allows anti-racketeering law against abortion opponents

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court today allowed the use of an anti-racketeering law against 26 abortion opponents for incidents at a Philadelphia clinic.

The justices, over one dissenting vote, rejected arguments that use of the racketeering law violated the protesters' free-speech rights.

The protesters were sued successfully by operators of the abortion clinic.

Similar lawsuits, each invoking the federal Racketeering Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), have been filed against anti-abortion activists in cities such as Pittsburgh, Chicago and Brookline, Mass.

Antonio Califa, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer in Washington, recently wrote: "The ACLU believes that civil RICO's potential for chilling First Amendment rights of expression is enormous."

The concern centers on the possibility political protesters will be labeled "racketeers" and held financially liable for doing nothing more than expressing their views.

But in upholding a $108,000 award against the 26 Philadelphia protesters last March, the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said their actions "went beyond ... constitutional rights of speech and protest."

The protesters on four occasions from 1984 to 1986 unlawfully entered the Northeast Women's Center in Philadelphia. According to trial testimony, protesters threw medical supplies on the floor, damaged equipment, assaulted the clinic's employees and harassed patients.

"An assistant district attorney who witnessed a demonstration testified that the demonstrators' activity rose to a 'frenzy' and that he delayed leaving the center out of fear for his physical safety," the appeals court noted.

It added: "Civil RICO could appropriately be applied to defendants' intimidation and harassment of the center resulting in the destruction of its property."

The 26 defendants are members of Pro-Life Coalition of Southeast Pennsylvania.

In the appeal acted on today, lawyers for the 26 protesters decried "an unprecedented and dangerous expansion of" the federal law primarily aimed at fighting organized crime.

"Under the 3rd Circuit's interpretations of RICO ... Martin Luther King was a racketeer when he trespassed on private property and conspired with others in an attempt to change the business policies of owners of segregated lunch counters," the appeal contended.

Chamber calls meeting to discuss prison site plan

Pampa and area residents are asked to attend an urgent meeting concerning the proposed building of a maximum security prison in the county at 10 a.m. Wednesday in M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building, 200 N. Ballard.

Discussion will be conducted on the upcoming on-site visit by members of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice and the Texas Department of Corrections. Chamber officials say "time is of the essence," since the on-site visit may be as soon as Tuesday of next week.

Through the discussion, chamber officials hope to determine ways to help raise the funding for incentives to be offered to the state in the hopes of securing the placement of the prison in Pampa.

Should the prison be built here, the community will benefit through an additional 800 jobs, and the economy will be boosted by millions of dollars each year, chamber officials say.

Engine trouble, anti-nuke activists may delay shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - NASA today reported an engine problem that could ground space shuttle Atlantis beyond Thursday's launch date even if anti-nuclear activists lose their court challenge to stop the flight.

U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch began hearing arguments today in Washington from attorneys representing NASA and three citizens groups seeking to halt liftoff because Atlantis will be carrying a plutonium-powered space probe.

Shuttle test director Mike Leinbach said overnight checks found that a controller on one of the three main engines was giving a faulty fuel pressure reading. The device controls the engine during the liftoff burn.

Experts were analyzing the situation to see if the controller had to be replaced, a task that could take five or six days.

A decision was not expected until late in the day today or Wednesday.

Sources said that after the first low pressure reading, four more tests were conducted, and the problem did not repeat itself.

Leinbach said other countdown tasks were proceeding normally despite four inches of rain overnight. The main job today was loading fuel aboard the shuttle's power-producing fuel cells.

The countdown ticked toward a liftoff at 1:29 p.m. Thursday with the Galileo spacecraft on board.

Opponents sought a temporary restraining order because Galileo, which Atlantis' five astronauts are to dispatch toward Jupiter, carries two generators fueled by 49.4 pounds of plutonium.

They contend an explosion like that which destroyed the shuttle Challenger in 1986 could spread cancer-causing plutonium particles over a large area of heavily-populated east-central Florida.

NASA responds that in tests empty plutonium containers have been blown up, shot at and burned to determine how they would survive all kinds of accidents. They have withstood pressures far greater than those produced in the Challenger accident, the agency reports.

Similar devices have been carried on 22 other U.S. spacecraft without a problem.

"We're going to count down to a launch on Thursday unless we are told to stop," NASA test director Ron Phelps said Monday as the countdown started.

About 25 people held a brief demonstration at the space center Monday, staging a mock countdown and then collapsing in mock death when a woman sprinkled powder representing plutonium.

They said that if they lost in court they would attempt to stop the liftoff by infiltrating the launch area in a non-violent occupation.

"We're going to attempt to put people on the launch pad if the court doesn't prevent the launch," said Bruce Gagnon, coordinator of the Florida Coalition for Peace and Justice, one of the three groups that filed suit.

Banks having high profits, but fed officials still worry

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Despite a string of record profits, hundreds of commercial banks and the government insurance fund that guarantees their deposits are far less healthy than they seem, analysts say.

The warnings are making members of Congress nervous just two months after they enacted a $50 billion, three-year bailout of the savings and loan industry.

Legislators remember all too well the reassurances they heard from regulators and industry executives while the S&L business was crumbling, and how quickly hints of trouble mushroomed into the most dire financial crisis since the Depression.

Two well-known banking economists, Robert E. Litan of the Brookings Institution, a liberal think tank, and R. Dan Brumbaugh Jr. of Stanford University, report that commercial banks, though better off as a whole than S&Ls, may be heading for trouble themselves.

Litan, appearing before the Senate Banking Committee last week, warned that about two-thirds of the reserves in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s bank fund will be needed for banks that are weak or already insolvent.

At the end of June, the FDIC's bank reserves totaled $14.5 billion. But Litan and Brumbaugh say their analysis of bank data through March shows that $9.5 billion of that is needed to cover losses at banks that are insolvent or close to it, leaving only a thin $5 billion layer of protection before taxpayers would be called on to bail out the fund.

A post-Depression record of 221 banks failed last year. So far this year, 167 have closed or required government assistance to stay open - 116 in Texas.

FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman says he expects failures for all of 1989 to be slightly below last year and to decline further in 1990.

However, a study by analyst William C. Ferguson of Irving, Texas, casts doubt on that. He said that 443 banks of 13,000 nationwide have been losing money consistently from 1987 through the first quarter of this year.

"In spite of the high reported earnings of the banking industry (overall), the picture is not as rosy as it seems," Ferguson said. "If present earnings trends for these (443) banks continue, this group will run out of capital by late 1990 or early 1991."

The banking industry disputes its critics.

"Skeptics make a living peddling a different tune," Nebraska banker C.G. Holthus, president-elect of the American Bankers Association, told a House subcommittee. "We think they're exaggerating the problem."

By many measures, commercial banks, unlike savings and loans, are flourishing.

Banks earned a record six-month profit of $14.3 billion in the first half of 1989, on top of the record annual profit of $25.1 billion last year. And their three most pressing problems have all eased:

- The nation's largest banks have added to their loss reserves, putting them in a better position to withstand a deterioration of shaky Third World debtor nations to repay the banks' loans.

- The string of Midwestern bank failures has subsided with the recovery of the farm economy.

- The economies of Texas and other oil-producing states, where most of the failures are concentrated now, appear to have bottomed out.

Moreover, the savings and loan bailout bill passed this summer nearly doubles the insurance premium paid by banks. That will provide an added $1.5 billion a year to help the fund recover from its first-ever loss in 1988.

"Simply put, the condition of commercial banks is not a thrift crisis in sheep's clothing," said James J. McDermott Jr. of Keefe, Bruyette & Woods Inc., an analyst who expresses more optimism than some of his colleagues.

Replied Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., "I'm not sure I'm reassured. ... It's a little bit like saying the United States is better off than Bangladesh."

On the House side, Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., has been voicing similar worries and last week asked Congress' auditing arm, the General Accounting Office, to conduct a comprehensive study of the deposit insurance fund and the condition of banking.

"Although federal regulators paint a rosy picture of the industry, certain industry experts cast doubt on this assessment. I am deeply troubled over the concerns raised by these experts," he said in a letter requesting the study.

The analysts identify two areas as the likely causes of the next banking crisis: large banks' growing involvement in financing leveraged corporate buyouts and community banks' decision to follow thrifts into real estate lending.

ESL

Christmas party for them and their kids and have Santa Claus there, too."

Raquel said that while she and her Hispanic friends love the United States, there are some areas where they still choose to follow their Hispanic ways.

"We hang out with our group," she said. "They (whites) invite us to dances, but they aren't like our Spanish dances and we just like our Spanish dances better."

Alma added that she and her American boyfriend have found that mixing the two cultures can be a challenge.

"When we are together, we just stay by ourselves and don't get with either group," she said. However, college lovebirds wanting to be by themselves is not something unique to a mixed-cultural relationship.

Moreno said a federal grant has made it possible to provide child care for ESL participants for only $1 per child per night, up to a maximum of $3 for three or more children.

"Since they have classes on Monday and Thursday night, the mother and father would take turns coming and the other would stay home with the kids," Moreno said.

"That's why I worked so hard to get child care. So they could both come every night. We really need a new play pen, though. Look at those."

She pointed at two wooden play pens that have seen better days. Both have been repaired so many times there is almost nothing left to fix anymore.

"We have three little ones coming and we really need a play pen for them," she said.

Moreno is hopeful a charitable member of the community will be moved by the ESL students' desire to join the American mainstream and will help by donating a play pen.

"The child care, which we have at Baker in the gym, really helps them out," she said.

While ESL classes are normally held in the Baker cafeteria, for the Fall Festival the students moved the celebration to the Community Building, affirming their place in the Pampa mainstream.

And as they began, each participant and teacher joined hands in a circle, bowing their heads to pray.

Among the things they thanked God for was the opportunity to come and learn together.

In spite of slowdown, Texas still has some of nation's richest

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The depression in the Southwest may have trimmed a few wings, but rich and Texan still go together well: the Lone Star State trails only California and New York with members on Forbes magazine's latest list of the 400 richest Americans.

Despite the downturn caused by falling oil and real estate prices, they remain the base of most Texas riches, although H. Ross Perot's electronics wealth and Harold C. Simmons' buyout-created fortune top the 31 Texans on the list released in New York Monday.

The magazine estimated Perot's wealth at $2.5 billion, tying him with the Cox sisters for eighth overall. Anne Cox Chambers and Barbara Cox Anthony, who head the Cox Enterprises Inc. media empire, also have significant Texas ties through their six daily newspapers in the state.

Although Simmons consistently is listed second in Texas to Perot, Simmons' publicist suggests his boss is richer, although Forbes lists him at $1.9 billion, good for 17th in the country.

Perot's wealth comes from Electronic Data Systems Corp. the computer company he built and then sold to General Motors Corp. for $2.55 billion in cash and stock. Simmons' money comes from buying large stakes in major companies.

"Ross Perot made all his money in one fell swoop, apparently ... nor does he have much ambition beyond that," Simmons said during a recent interview. "I'm totally different. I made my money in a series of financial investments and I'm still working on that and continue to work on that."

In all Texans accounted for $22.8 billion, or 8.4 percent of the total $269 billion in the 400 fortunes.

New York led with the most members of the list at 82, followed by California's 64, then Texas.

Far down the list from Simmons came the next Texans, with Robert Muse Bass' $1.4 billion good enough for 41st.

His three brothers also are on the list: Lee Marshall Bass and Sid Richardson Bass are tied at 51st with $1.25 billion, and Edward Perry Bass is at 64th with $1 billion.

Also among the elite is another fortune tied to the Besses, that of Richard Rainwater, at 356th and estimated to be worth $300 million.

Many attribute the recent rapid growth of the Bass fortune to Rainwater's savvy investments before he struck out on his own.

H.L. Hunt's legacy also is sprinkled throughout the list, although in a different set of members from some past years.

The richest of the offspring of the legendary wildcat oilman is Ray Lee Hunt at $1.4 billion, a son by Hunt's second wife.

Margaret Hunt Hill, whose mother was Hunt's first wife, is worth $1.2 billion the magazine said, and her sister, Caroline Rose Hunt, has $800 million.

Missing are other famous first family Hunts — Bunker and William Herbert — both of whom have filed for bankruptcy.

Developer Trammell Crow remained on the list, but his fall demonstrates much of what has happened in the state's economy. Forbes estimates Crow's wealth fell from $775 million last year to $300 million this year because of softness in commercial real estate.

The list, released Monday, appears in the Oct. 23 edition of Forbes and is based on estimated holdings as of Sept. 8.

Topping the list is Metromedia Co. Chairman John Werner Kluge, worth an estimated $5.2 billion and replacing Wal-Mart Co. founder Sam Walton, who fell from the top after splitting his $9 billion fortune among his family.

Wal-Mart chairman drops on richest list

NEW YORK (AP) — Charity began at home for Wal-Mart stores founder Sam Walton, who ended a four-year reign as Forbes magazine's richest American by sharing his $9 billion fortune with his four children.

Metromedia Co. Chairman John Werner Kluge, with an estimated net worth of $5.2 billion, climbed into first place on Forbes' annual list of the nation's 400 wealthiest people.

The prototypical member of Forbes' ultrarich was a 63-year-old male with a net worth of $672 million last year, more than the gross national product of Lesotho, Forbes said.

The compilation contains 346 men and 54 women. Of those, 159 inherited their wealth. Eight states lack a resident on the list.

Among alma mater represented, Yale educated 22 of the richest, Harvard 17 and the University of Pennsylvania 12; the 45 with master's degrees in business had an average net worth of $895 million, while the 10 high-school dropouts had an average of $854 million.

Overall, Forbes' richest are worth an estimated total of about $269 billion, up nearly $50 billion from last year, a 22 percent increase that substantially outpaced last year's 4.4 percent inflation rate.

That total wealth would come just short of bailing out the nation's failed savings and loans over the next 30 years, the cost of which was estimated by Congress at $285 billion.

The list, released Monday, appears in the Oct. 23 issue of Forbes and is based on estimated holdings as of Sept. 8.

At the pinnacle is Kluge, 75, of Charlottesville, Va., whose holdings rose an estimated $2 billion from the previous year thanks to a tripling in the value of his investment in cellular telephones, Forbes said.

Kluge moved up from the No. 2 spot. The magazine noted that "klug" in German means smart.

Walton, 71, of Bentonville, Ark., who milked cows during the Depression to support his family, split his Wal-Mart and other assets equally with his four children.

Although the family's total holdings increased from $6.7 billion, the individual family members tied for 20th on the list, each at $1.8 billion.

Moving up to second from 12th place is investor Warren Buffett, 59, of Omaha, Neb., the head of Berkshire Hathaway, whose stock market-based fortune nearly doubled, to $4.2 billion.

Behind him is Sumner M. Redstone, head of moviehouse operator National Amusements Inc. and TV-cable giant Viacom, with $2.88 billion.

The number of billionaires increased to 66 from 51. The minimum net worth to make the list rose to $275 million from $225 million.

Sniper attack witness returns to Mexico

MARFA (AP) — A teen-ager who prosecutors say will testify he saw Eduardo Rodriguez-Pineda fatally shoot a Rio Grande rafter last year has been recalled to Mexico.

Despite the development, the murder trial of Rodriguez-Pineda resumed Monday after a brief recess, prompted by a court request to determine the competency of the defendant to stand trial.

Rodriguez-Pineda was ruled competent to stand trial after a psychiatrist reported that the defendant understands the charges against him.

Rodriguez-Pineda is accused of killing Michael Heffley of Eastland as Heffley, his wife, Jamie, and a guide were rafting the Rio Grande through the Colorado Canyon.

District Attorney Richard Barajas had brought Julio Cesar Hernandez, 16, to Texas last week. But Hernandez went back to Chihuahua on Saturday after the Mexican Con-sulate claimed it did not have the proper travel documents, Barajas said.

Barajas said he will try to bring Hernandez back to the United States on Thursday.

If Hernandez' testimony cannot be secured, Barajas said prosecutors have two confessions from Rodriguez-Pineda as well as the alleged murder weapon.

Heffley was shot once in the back as he tried to shield his wife from gunshots in the Nov. 17, 1988 attack. Mrs. Heffley was shot in the hip, and river guide Jim Burr was shot in the leg.

Authorities said a group of teenagers fired the shots while standing on a cliff above Colorado Canyon.

"It was quiet and calm on the Rio Grande. These people were rafting for vacation when the solitude and serenity was broken by gunfire," Barajas said in opening arguments.

"The kid had confessed to being present at the time and they found a .44 Magnum at the (Redford) residence (where Rodriguez-Pineda was arrested)," Barajas said. ".44 Magnum rifle casings were found at the bluff that matched those with the .44 at the residence. He confessed numerous times and he has implicated himself."

Defense attorney Michael Rodgers said his client was fired upon first and returned fire in self-defense.

But Burr, the first prosecution witness, said the trio was floating down the river when they saw smoke and then heard shots. Then two shots were fired at them on both sides of the raft.

"I was quite frightened, petrified," said Burr, describing the shooting and saying the rafters were unarmed. "We were afraid whoever was shooting at us would come down and kill us."

After several shots were fired, Burr said he pleaded with the attackers to stop shooting because there was a woman with them. He said he also offered money that Heffley had left in the raft.

"Bullets were raining all around us. Then Jamie said she'd been shot. Then Mike turned back and started to help her," Burr testified.

Burr recalled hearing Heffley tell his wife he was dying.

The defense also claims authorities have covered up evidence. Rodgers, as part of his self-defense argument, contended Heffley was wearing a belt with a holster, which law enforcement officers later destroyed.

Amis testified when he saw Heffley's body the morning after the shooting, there was a belt but no holster.

Attorneys deny GTE refund 'political'

AUSTIN (AP) — Ratepayer attorneys, defending a refund ordered for GTE Southwest Inc. customers by the Public Utility Commission, sniffed at charges that political pressure triggered the telephone rebate.

"This political pressure issue is a total and complete red herring in this particular case," Don Butler, attorney for cities served by GTE, said in a court hearing on the company's challenge of the estimated $140 million rebate.

State District Judge Joseph Hart said after the four-hour hearing Monday that he would rule as quickly as possible.

Pete Schenkkan, attorney for the Irving-based telephone company, noted that Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, took the PUC to task before the commission ruled in the GTE case.

The senator criticized the commission for a delay in reviewing the 1986 federal corporate tax reduction, which he said should be reflected in lower utility rates in Texas.

"We're talking about Sen. Truan's speech attacking the commission one day before our case came up for a vote for ... being guilty of philosophical corruption and regulatory rot," Schenkkan said.

After two hearings, the commission voted to lower GTE's annual rates by $59.2 million, effective Jan. 1, 1987. The effective date triggers a customer refund of $128 million, plus interest, to be paid over two years.

Schenkkan said the commission made the GTE decision, in part, to show lawmakers their concerns were being addressed.

"It is time to go beyond their wish to send messages to each other ... It is time to apply the law as it is written," Schenkkan said. He said the law does not allow the commission to set rates retroactively, and that GTE's financial integrity would suffer if the refunds are allowed.

But attorneys for GTE ratepayers and the commission argued the PUC's decision was valid.

They said the commission could have made the rates effective any time after acquiring jurisdiction over the case in 1984, if customers were being overcharged.

"The decision of the commission was moderate, it was conservative, and it balanced the interests of all the parties," said Assistant Attorney General Scott McCollough, representing the state as a ratepayer.

John Laakso of the Office of Public Utility Counsel, which represents residential and small commercial ratepayers, said GTE did not prove that any political pressure improperly affected the commission's decision.

"I think every major agency decision in this state takes place in an environment of political pressure of one sort or another," he said.

GTE is asking Hart to reverse the refund order, and to require the PUC to order a telephone-bill surcharge allowing the telephone company to recoup about $6 million in refunds already paid.

The telephone company began making refunds Sept. 1, but stopped after the 3rd Court of Appeals upheld a temporary injunction halting the rebate until Hart rules in the case.

Democrats fear child care funds could be lost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats fear that billions of dollars in proposed child care tax subsidies for low-income families could be lost in the fight over a proposed capital gains tax cut for the wealthy.

The proposed child care tax writeoffs for families earning less than $25,000 are part of a broad deficit reduction bill that, in its House version, includes a cut in the capital gains tax rate for the rich.

The Senate version also includes the new child care benefits. But Senate Democrats and Republicans are haggling over how to also provide a similar break for better-off taxpayers. The chamber's leaders from both parties planned to resume talks today on resolving the stalemate after making weak stabs at it through the weekend.

Republicans and a handful of Senate Democrats want to fulfill President Bush's campaign promise last year to cut the tax on capital gains — profits made from selling stock, real estate and other property.

Democrats are countering with a proposal to encourage savings by providing a tax break of up to $330 if they save $2,000 a year in Individual Retirement Accounts.

Looming over the negotiations is an Oct. 16 deadline. Unless Congress completes work on a deficit-reduction plan by then, automatic across-the-board reductions will be triggered in most federal spending programs.

"Child care legislation is of the highest priority in this Congress — a far higher priority than a capital gains tax cut," said Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine. "We don't want that to fall between the cracks."

Senate leaders are searching for a way to strip away from the big deficit-reduction bill numerous provisions that are popular with lawmakers but do nothing to reduce the deficit.

Democrats are trying to cut the capital gains tax cut from the deficit-reduction bill. But the child care provisions then could come under the same knife.

Both the Senate and House have approved slightly different child care measures that would rely on $1 billion to $1.5 billion in Eamed Come Tax Credits for low-income families over the next five years to provide more than two-thirds of the new benefits.

No need to build walls against trade

One thing is certain about the likely purchase of Columbia Pictures Entertainment by Japan's Sony Corp. — the first acquisition of a major Hollywood studio by a Japanese company: It will keep the reels rolling in the feature-length debate over foreign investment in the United States.

Some analysts find investment from abroad as frightening as a Friday the 13th sequel. A close look at the issue shows they're too easily spooked.

Will Columbia suffer from the Sony purchase? Not likely. Reports suggested that Peter Gruber, a renowned Hollywood producer, is expected to be named the studio's top executive once acquisition is completed — a sign that Sony is serious about running Columbia with an eye toward profit. That's hardly a script to displease employees and stockholders.

The foreign-debt picture is too often viewed in bad light. To put it in better focus, keep in mind that Commerce Department statistics overstate some facts by leaving others out, and thereby exaggerate America's "indebtedness." Government reports note the value of direct investments when they're made, but don't record later appreciation. As a result, they underestimate the current value of foreign investments undertaken years ago by U.S. companies.

Also, don't overlook the difference between "passive" and "direct" foreign investment. Sixty percent of foreign holdings in the United States fall in the passive category — bank loans, government debt and bonds. The worry over these investments is that America will end up poorer when it comes time to pay off the interest. While that's a real danger, it's not an inevitable one: It can be avoided through shrewd economic policies and deficit reduction. Moreover, passive foreign investment is hardly incompatible with economic growth. For most of the last century, the United States was a debtor nation, even as it advanced steadily toward the status of a world economic power.

What about the other kind of foreign holdings — "direct" investments? Here, too, the hand-writing is excessive. In a real sense, foreign funds flowing into equities or real estate — or movie studios — don't add up to true debt. They're assets that reap returns only to the extent they're put to efficient and profitable and productive use. So in the process of benefiting themselves, foreign owners of these assets end up benefiting the American economy as well.

Debtor status has a downside, to be sure. Economist Micheal Becker, in an essay of Citizens for a Sound Economy, notes, "ideally, Americans would not enjoy the job creation and higher incomes from [foreign] investment but also the direct benefits that come from earning profits on investments." True enough. But as Becker goes on to note, the answer isn't to post "keep out" signs at the country's borders; rather, it's to boost home-grown enterprise by promoting saving and investment. Erecting walls against foreign investors is the last way to build a more competitive economy.

Berry's World

"HONESTLY! Can't you at least wait until Halloween?"

Poland needs its own strength

Poland. Throughout its history, it has been harmed by its enemies. Now, with its own complicity, it's in danger of being victimized by its friends. In their rush to help the new government headed by Solidarity, the Western nations may end up killing it with kindness.

"If we fail, it's going to be your fault," Lech Walesa informed Senate Republican leader Bob Dole in a recent Warsaw meeting. That sort of thinking is the real obstacle to Solidarity's success.

Saving Poland from economic decay is the duty of its government, not ours. The Warsaw regime has all the tools it needs to revive the economy, if it is willing to use them. The only thing we're likely to achieve by pouring in aid is to slow or prevent the essential changes.

But pour we will. "Poland's new leaders," reports the Washington Post, "are scrambling to sort out and make use of an avalanche of good will from the capitalist powers." No one wants to be accused of doing too little in Poland's hour of need; no one wants to get the blame if Solidarity fails. So the West will err on the side of spending too much.

The European Community appears ready to provide nearly twice as much money next year as all the industrial democracies had promised so far. Spurring pleas for frugality, a U.S. Senate committee recently voted to boost the administration's proposed help eightfold.

Liberals who once preached that the U.S. couldn't be the world's policeman now want it to serve as a global social worker. Conservatives who fear the destructive results of domestic welfare have become blind to the dangers of the international variety.

Those who favor generous aid say the regime badly needs help to pursue the unpleasant economic reforms Poland requires — cutting the government deficit, slashing subsidies, raising food prices, halting hyperinflation. Otherwise, the populace will rise up in anger. The resulting turmoil could discredit Solidarity, allow the Communists to re-establish control, possibly even force the Kremlin to intervene.

Pretty scary. But the scenario is overdrawn to the point of melodrama. Solidarity came to power vowing painful changes. Are we supposed to believe that the Polish people, finally having a government they trust to work for their interests, will revolt at its first efforts to do what every one expected? Are they unaware of the dangers of restoring the Communists and provoking the Russians?

Much of the pain, in any case, has already been borne. Food prices have soared in recent months, and already farmers have begun responding to the new incentives by producing more. Greater supplies of food in the stores will help to appease popular resentment of higher prices.

Not all of the crucial economic changes are painful. It costs nothing to admit private investment from abroad, or to allow foreign firms to operate more freely in Poland. On the contrary, Poles would quickly reap the benefit of new jobs and new goods.

Likewise, it would involve little pain for the government to cut tax rates from their current punitive levels (up to 100 percent in some circumstances) or to sell off decrepit state-run industries. Just the opposite: State revenues would rise and budgetary pressures would ease. Stopping inflation is never easy, but these measures would help immensely by relieving the government of the need to finance programs by printing money.

No one doubts that Solidarity wants to do the right things. Its own proposal for Western aid said, "Financial assistance should be extended in such a manner as to preclude the possibility of its being squandered as in the past." If the government does what it ought to do, doesn't it deserve our help?

But if it does what it ought to do, it won't need our help. Private investment, from Western corporations and banks, will quickly be attracted by a more favorable environment. If private investors aren't drawn to Poland, there's bound to be a good reason: too little fundamental reform, too much risk.

If the government has to depend on private funds, it will have a sensitive barometer of how it's doing — plus a powerful incentive to do well. Aid from Western governments and international lending agencies, by contrast, is likely to flow even if the reforms get stalled.

And this money is far less likely than private funds to be invested productively, if only because it will be allocated according to political demands rather than economic ones.

The West will be better off if the new government succeeds. But that doesn't mean Western aid will improve the odds of success. The wise goal is not to ensure that Poland's transformation is easy, but to ensure that it's real.

Today in history

Today is Tuesday, October 10, the 283rd day of 1989. There are 82 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On October 10, 1973, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, accused of accepting bribes, pleaded no contest to one count of income tax evasion and resigned.

On this date:
In 1845, the U.S. Naval Academy opened in Annapolis, Md.

In 1886, the tuxedo dinner jacket made its American debut at the autumn ball in Tuxedo Park, N.Y.

In 1911, revolutionaries under Sun Yat-sen overthrew China's Manchu dynasty.

In 1913, the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans commingled in the Panama Canal after U.S. engineers blew up the Gamboa Dam.

In 1935, the American opera Porgy and Bess, with music by George Gershwin and libretto by DuBose Heyward and Ira Gershwin, opened on Broadway.

In 1938, Germany completed its annexation of Czechoslovakia.

Some true gambling stories

I'm not like Pete Rose. I am going to admit that I did in fact once make a bet on a football game with a bookie.

It was about 20 years ago. My roommate at the time, Frank, said to me, "I've got a lock on the Monday night football game."

Green Bay was playing Philadelphia, if my memory is still capable of recalling facts from two decades ago.

Frank said the Packers were giving up only 9 points and would thrash the Eagles easily.

I was bringing home about a hundred a week at the time and could have used the money. So I put down $50 and began to plan what I would do with my extra cash.

Frank and I watched the game together. The Packers had the ball with only seconds left to play. And they had the 9 points covered by 4.

But then something happened. There was a fumble and an Eagles' lineman picked up the ball and ran it and my $50 into the end zone.

I never bet with a bookie again. You can't beat them. And I've heard too many stories and know too many guys who, when football season arrives, bet the ranch each weekend and have to suffer the consequences.

Lewis Grizzard

Some true stories:
Another friend of mine, Charles, lost every bet on Sunday pro football. The last defeat came from the West Coast as he watched his money go down the drain on television.

He became so infuriated with his bad luck he picked up his television and threw it out of a second story window and it hit his dog.

He was out what he bet, out his $300 television set and the vet charged him $200 to put his dog back together again.

A fellow walks into his office on Monday morning and tells a co-worker he was wiped out during the weekend.

"I'm never going to bet again as long as I live," he said.

"Of course you will," argues his co-worker.

"No, I won't."

"Yes you will."

"I've got a hundred says I won't."

A guy has loaded up on a Monday night game. His wife has asked friends over for dinner. Dinner is over. And the guy says to his guests, "Excuse me, I've got to go up on the roof."

"What for?" asks his wife.

"I've got to fix the antenna so I can get perfect reception on the ball game."

He goes up on the roof, fall off and breaks his leg and the '49ers don't cover.

And this one: A man bets on 13 pro games on Sunday, and like the guy who threw his television out the window, loses all 13. My dog could probably pick one winner out of 13. But not this unlucky soul.

He goes to see his bookie Monday and painfully hands over the cash.

"I've got hockey games, too," says the bookie.

"Why not try that?"

"Are you kidding?" says the guy. "I don't know a thing in the world about hockey."

Both tax reforms would help workers

By SARAH OVERSTREET

Two Missouri legislators that I admire a great deal have squared off in a battle in Congress that means a great deal to me.

Each wants to modify the 1986 Tax Reform Act in drastically different ways: Republican Sen. John Danforth wants to cut the capital-gains tax from its 1986 rise, and House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, a Democrat, wants to bolster Individual Retirement Accounts.

I'd be lying if I said I knew Danforth's plan would "give a tax cut to the rich, paid for by the middle class," as Gephardt charges. Danforth says the higher capital-gains tax, coupled with the October 1987 stock market plunge, has seriously curtailed business investment and expansion.

Business isn't my area of expertise. But many of my sympathies are with business, because I know only a healthy business has a chance of benefiting its employees.

Still, I know from experience what Gephardt is talking about. Individual Retirement Accounts should be available to a much wider group of workers than they are now. As it stands, only people whose income fall below a certain level, or who don't have any retirement benefits through their jobs, can contribute to IRAs and deduct their contribution. It's as if anyone making a certain level of money this year, or receiving company benefits this year, doesn't need a little help saving money for retirement.

But nothing could be farther from the truth. I've seen it proved over and over again in the lives of people who fall into the very income brackets that the '86 tax bill declared too high to qualify for IRA deductions.

Employees making good salaries one year unexpectedly find themselves out of work the next. This is especially true for older workers who are getting close to either having a vested interest in their pension plans or qualifying for full pensions — or whom their employers think could be replaced just as easily by workers half their age, earning half their salaries.

Employees who may have transferred to a company expressly because of better benefits, often find their benefits cut back when the company is sold. Other employees have their health benefits axed altogether when companies decide they can no longer afford them.

Still others end up paying so much out of their own pockets for health insurance that the amount of money they're able to save is severely lessened.

We're also seeing the elderly increasingly strapped to meet their needs. And the government has become stunned and winded from trying to take up the slack. The more money we're able to save ourselves for the time when we can no longer work, the better off the whole country is.

If wishes were horses, perhaps we could reform the reform act in such a way that we would be able to cut the capital-gains tax and bolster IRAs at the same time. Then workers would come closer to having the money they need for retirement, and healthy companies would be more able to provide worker benefits. However, experience leads me to believe that employers are much more likely to put any tax savings into bigger widgets, not employee benefits.

If there ever was a legitimate reason to have one's tax bill lessened, it is to stockpile money for old age. It isn't a luxury, it is a necessity. If only one of these retro-reforms is to survive the current fray, it should be the IRA.

Large cocaine seizures could be a result of Colombia's crackdown

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The recent U.S. seizures of almost 36 tons of cocaine may be the result of the Colombian drug crackdown as traffickers move the drug out of an unsafe haven, officials say.

But others say the timing of the huge busts may simply be coincidental. The drugs seized may have come to the United States through Mexico or may have been in this country before the crackdown began Aug. 18 in Colombia, they say.

"We're seizing a lot more cocaine because a lot more cocaine's coming out, because it's not safe to leave it in Colombia anymore," Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner told reporters at a dock in New Orleans, where the ship Zedon Sea was taken after six tons of cocaine were seized from it in the Gulf of Mexico.

While drug traffickers used to send out cocaine in smaller lots as a security measure, they've now begun moving it out in huge shipments, Skinner said. "That's because of the pressure from the government in Colombia," he said.

The Colombian crackdown, begun one day after the assassination of a leading presidential candidate who was a critic of the drug trade, has resulted in sweeping arrests and the seizure of millions of dollars of drug traffickers' assets.

One accused money-launderer has been extradited to the United States.

The traffickers vowed to wage "total war" against the government and have been blamed for at least 148 bombings that killed 10 people and wounded 165.

U.S. officials in the past two weeks seized 20 tons of cocaine from a warehouse in Los Angeles, nine tons from a house in Texas five miles from the Mexican border, six tons from a ship in the Gulf of Mexico, and 11/2 tons near Puerto Rico. The 20-ton seizure was the largest ever in the world, while the nine-ton bust is the second largest in U.S.

Several years ago, cocaine came into the United States primarily on private aircraft. The shipments were much smaller and the loss of any load cost the traffickers much less.

"As we became more effective in targeting that method of transit, they have changed," Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Frank Shults said. "These are businessmen ... We feel that they are weighing the risks and have decided they have got to move these drugs."

But there also are reasons to believe that the huge busts may have nothing to do with the situation in Colombia.

For example, there is no indication how long the 20 tons of cocaine seized in Los Angeles had been in that warehouse.

Los Angeles District Attorney Ira Reiner said the group arrested in connection with that seizure had been operating the warehouse for two years.

During that time, Reiner said, authorities estimate 60 tons were processed through the warehouse in addition to the 20 tons just seized.

In Texas, Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said state officials also have no hard evidence that the huge seizure at the home in Cameron County was related to the Colombian crackdown.

George Strait wins entertainer honors

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — George Strait, a former ranch trail boss whose songs are White House favorites, was voted entertainer of the year by the Country Music Association.

Strait, 37, won country music's top honor Monday night during the association's nationally televised 23rd annual awards show.

Ricky Van Shelton and Kathy Mattea won top vocalist honors, and perennial honoree Hank Williams Jr. received two awards.

The accolade for Strait came a month after President Bush, a country music fan, told the singer how much he enjoyed his songs. The president made the comments during a Rose Garden ceremony honoring Strait and 11 others for promoting vocational-technical education.

Monday night at the Grand Ole Opry House, Strait's peers gave him a standing ovation as he accepted a bullet-shaped trophy for entertainer of the year.

"I'm so excited. I've wanted this for so long," said Strait of San Marcos, Texas. He thanked his Ace in the Hole Band, adding: "I truly believe audiences go away entertained."

Strait's July hit single, "What's Going On in Your World," was his 19th No. 1 song in eight years of recording. His album Beyond the Blue

Neon has been a top seller this year.

Besides his crisp tenor, he is known for his spiffy cowboy hats, neatly pressed jeans and starched shirts that accent his lean, athletic frame.

"This is incredible," he said backstage after the awards program. "I'm my own worst critic. I know I'm not a great singer."

A fourth-generation cattle rancher who was a trail boss in the 1970s, Strait has a degree in agriculture from Southwest Texas State University.

Top male vocalist honors went to Shelton, an ex-pipefitter in Virginia, for his recent hit singles "From a Jack to a King" and "Hole in My Pocket."

"I thank God he gave me a voice instead of big feet," Shelton quipped as he accepted the award.

Top female vocalist Mattea, a former tour guide at the Country Music Hall of Fame, had a No. 1 single in "Come From the Heart."

"I've always liked to do this (sing), because I liked the doing of it," she said, her voice choked with emotion.

Williams, the association's entertainer of the year in 1987 and 1988, was the night's only double winner.

Both awards were for his music video, "There's a Tear in My Beer" — on which old footage and sound recordings are used to make it appear that Williams is singing with his late father, the famed country artist. The vocal event of the year award goes to two performers who don't normally sing together.

The late Keith Whitley, 33, who died of an accidental alcohol overdose in May, won single of the year for his hit "I'm No Stranger to the Rain." The award was accepted by his widow, singer Lorrie Morgan, who said as her voice cracked, "Five months ago on this date, I lost the world's greatest husband, and country music, in my eyes, lost the world's greatest singer."

The mother-daughter team the Judds won duo of the year, making it the fifth consecutive year they won either duo of the year or group of the year.

"I think as time goes by, we appreciate it (winning) more every day," daughter Wynonna Judd said. "Music isn't just a living, it's our life."

Singer Hank Thompson and music publishers Cliffie Stone and the late Jack Stapp were chosen for the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Other winners included: Will the Circle Be Unbroken Vol. II by the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, top album; Highway 101, group of the year for the second straight year; fiddler Johnny Gimble, musician of the year; "Chiseled in Stone" by Max D. Barnes and Vern Gosdin, song of the year, a songwriters' award; and Clint Black, Horizon Award for a rising star.

Poll: Family center of Americans' lives

By MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Politicians who claim to fight on behalf of "family values" in battling abortion and promoting prayer in school may be off target, according to a study released today.

"Politicians and pundits of various stripes have attempted to co-opt the term (family values) in pursuit of their own agendas," said the study on the American family, which included information from 1,200 randomly selected respondents.

The survey was commissioned by Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co.

The respondents were presented with 28 value statements and asked how well the term "family value" described each one.

Topping the list of responses were love and emotional support for family members, respect for others and taking responsibility for one's actions.

"Being in favor of prayer in school" ranked 25th and "opposing abortion" ranked 27th.

"It tells us that our legislators really don't know what they're doing," said Dr. Lee Salk, who was hired by Springfield-based Massachusetts Mutual to review the study findings. "They're all paying lip service to something they've not really examined."

Salk said a true political "family value" might be granting paternity leave or employers giving time off for parents to attend school functions.

The study said Americans are changing the way they define family, but family is still the center of their lives.

By 3-to-1, Americans defined the family as "a group of people who love and care for each other," over the traditional definitions of people related by blood or marriage.

Eighty-one percent of the respondents listed "family" as one of their top two sources of pleasure, with "friends" the next most mentioned source.

"People cherish the family and they cherish it because of their own experience even when their experience has been less than perfect," said Dr. Albert Solnit of the Child Study Center at Yale University, one of the advisers to the study.

"Even with the rate of divorce and even with the rate of remarriage the expectation of being able to love someone and being able to be cared for by someone is universal," Solnit said.

While family was a top source of pleasure to Americans, it also was a chief source of worry, the survey found.

Fifty-one percent said providing financial security for their families was one of the things they worry about most.

Americans also believe that the root cause of social problems is found in the family, with the largest group, 20 percent, blaming the problems on "parents failing to discipline their children."

But the question of whether the American family is actually in decline drew a paradoxical response that Salk described as, "I'm OK, but everybody else out there is not."

More than half of respondents gave a negative rating to the quality of American family life.

But 71 percent said they were at least "very satisfied" with their own family life.

The survey said that might mean respondents weren't willing to speak honestly about their own problems, or that the declining American family is a myth fueled by widespread media reports of crime and social ills.

Hungary elects Nyers to head new party

By GEORGE JAHN
Associated Press Writer

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Delegates who dissolved the country's ruling Communist Party ended a four-day congress today after voting to keep their old leader but picking a reform slate to fill other top posts.

A closed session chose Rezső Nyers, chairman of the dissolved party, late Monday as president of its successor, the Hungarian Socialist Party, which professes to now embrace constitutional democracy.

The vote followed debate in which key reformers opposed to some of Nyers' beliefs — including his support for continued party influence in the workplace — reluctantly shelved reservations to avoid a possible split.

Reformers want a clear break with the past and that includes depoliticizing the workplace, where under traditional one-party rule in the East bloc the leaders of party cells organized in the workplace have been de facto bosses.

The congress also elected a 25-member National Steering Committee to replace the Communist Party Politburo.

Among its members are key

reformers Imre Pozsgay and Premier Miklos Nemeth, who belonged to the old party's collective leadership.

But the two were not chosen as vice presidents to Nyers, an indication that most of the 1,200 delegates were unwilling to completely part with the past. The new party's statutes had foreseen two vice presidents and liberals proposed Pozsgay and Nemeth.

However, the clearly reformist makeup of the Steering Committee — the party's executive body — was expected to please some liberals unhappy with the choice of Nyers.

Despite the party's commitment to multiparty democracy, reformist delegates expressed fear that the party does not differ enough from its predecessor to attract much support among the people.

The choice of Nyers was likely to increase anxieties among leading reformers that their party will fare poorly in Hungary's first free national elections in 41 years, which have been promised by June.

In its last two hours after midnight the congress approved the following resolutions — all falling short of the wishes of the most committed reformers among the delegates:

— Start of discussions in Parliament about the fate of party-controlled assets accrued illegally during its predecessor's 41 years in power.

— Informal support of the largely volunteer Worker's Militia, formerly controlled by the Communist Party and facing dissolution, if it decides to give up its paramilitary character and become an emergency aid organization during fires, floods and other catastrophes.

— Declaration of Oct. 23, the start of the 1956 nationalist uprising that was crushed by Soviet tanks, as a "Day of National Reconciliation."

Earlier, Nyers, tired but clearly elated, told reporters that Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev had been the first to congratulate him.

"Gorbachev conducts very fast diplomacy," he said. "They gave me his telegram within two hours of my election."

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason why you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment. No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain of awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persistent back pain. Don't delay treatment when help is readily available.

Jogger Robert Hurley pushes his daughter, Kelley, along in a three-wheeled "baby jogger" in Houston, recently. The Road Runners Club of America has recommended that babies and "baby joggers" be banned from road races.

Small children on a roll with trend towards baby jogging

By DAGMAR AALUND
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — Through the sight of a jogger crossing the finish line with a cute, contented baby in the three-wheeled "baby jogger" stroller seems wholesome enough, it's a controversial practice.

In June, the influential Road Runners Club of America recommended that babies be banned from road races.

Claiming the risks are too high, RRCA President Henley Gible says another runner could be injured by tripping on the baby stroller, or a baby could be hurt if the stroller went flying. Race insurance concerns are another factor.

The club has no objection to joggers running with their babies on training runs.

Bob Glover, the author of the Runner's Handbook and the director of the New York Road Runners Club's family fitness runs, says "baby joggers" don't belong in races because inevitably some parents get caught up in the competitive atmosphere and "put running before the child's safety."

Not everyone agrees. Houstonian Chris Brown, who did the Jingle Bell Run and the Symphony Run with his baby daughter, says barring baby joggers from fun runs goes too far. Though a few parents may not behave responsibly, he says, "Why ruin it for the rest of us?"

Brown, a 32-year-old engineer, says he stayed out of the way of other runners during the races, keeping to the back of the pack. His 7-minute mile pace allowed him to keep the "baby jogger" under control, he says. He believes most parents pushing babies in fun runs are careful.

But Glover says he has seen near accidents and has cringed at the sight of a man finishing a marathon with a baby. "No kid could enjoy sitting down that long," he says.

Casual runs with the baby should be enough, he says, adding that parents who insist on running races with their child have an "ego problem" in that they are showing off a child who could not care less whether he's in a race or not.

But Brown says the urge to show off a child is positive. In fact, he would like to see a 5K just for joggers with babies.

The differing opinions on the "baby jogger" issue can get emotional, as Glover has found when asking runners with babies to step out of a race lineup.

Women generally seem to understand his concerns, he says, "but the men get as mad as hell."

But everyone seems to agree that the "baby joggers" are a godsend for training runs, including Glover.

And to the casual observer, it seems that the trend has gone beyond gender: Men are just as likely to be out on the trail pushing their babies as women.

The tradeoff is not exactly equal, says Cheryl Hansen, who runs with her 5-week-old baby during the week while her husband, Tom, takes the weekend shift. They are trying to juggle the workouts so they can both stay in shape.

Their credentials for the endeavor seem excellent. Tom Hansen is professor of pediatrics and head of neonatology at Baylor College of Medicine.

Cheryl Hansen is a former intensive care nurse in neonatology (care of newborn infants). They have each run 10 or so marathons.

Another Houston couple, Tracy and Robert Hurley — who are Hawaii Iron Man veterans and parents of a 17-month old — regularly use their homemade version of the "baby jogger."

"For a really competitive runner, the key is to change your expectations," Tracy says, who runs a 10-minute mile with the baby.

And as for the races, she hasn't done any for a while. Not because of any "baby jogger" controversy, she says, but simply because the races are getting too expensive.

Some safety tips for running with babies:

1. Use a well-built carriage with good shock absorption. The lightweight, collapsible strollers with swivel wheels are dangerous, he says. Always strap the baby in with a full harness, and run at a slow, comfortable speed.
2. Be sure there is no way for the baby's hands to get caught in the wheels of a stroller.
3. Consider using mosquito netting for the baby.

Fine Arts and Crafts Festival Oct. 14-15

(Staff photos by Kayla Pursey)

Jack Towles has been creating stained glass lamps, pictures, music boxes and by special order, windows for years. At his work table, Towles goes through his glass samples selecting the next combination of colors to use for his latest creation. Towles uses the same "score and break" technique he used in his ceramic tile business for years. One unexpected problem with his artistic projects is keeping the broken glass swept up to prevent flat tires on his wheelchair. A recent addition to Towles work are small and large kaleidoscopes in a variety of clever disguises like his bi-plane design. Looking through the tail of the plane, the propellers spin creating an enchanting world of color and light.

This "dragon fly" Tiffany lamp in yellows and oranges, patterned after the original Tiffany design, will be one of several items crafted by Towles that will be on display at the Pampa Fine Arts sponsored Fine Arts and Crafts Festival scheduled for Oct. 14-15 at M.K. Brown Auditorium. On Saturday, the festival will begin at 10 a.m. and continue through 6 p.m. and on Sunday the hours are noon to 5 p.m. Artists and craftsmen will be displaying fine jewelry, portrait paintings, quilts and clothing, silk screen prints, ceramics, dolls, country crafts, wooden toys, woodworking and pottery.

Murder sparks effort to shield public figures' private lives

DEAR ABBY: The leadership of the Screen Actors Guild was highly gratified by your recent letter demanding confidentiality for private home addresses kept by government agencies such as the Department of Motor Vehicles. We, too, believe that such information should be kept secret as a matter of both privacy and security.

The shocking and senseless murder of actress Rebecca Schaeffer stunned and alarmed the entire acting community. The guild received dozens of phone calls from members urging that we take action to stop the virtually unrestricted release of home addresses and other private information by government sources.

You and your concerned readers will be glad to know that the California State Legislature on Sept. 15, unanimously approved AB1779, a bill sponsored by Assemblyman Mike Roos, D-Los Angeles, which limits public access to private information. The bill was supported by the Screen Actors Guild.

Pam Dawber, who co-starred with Rebecca Schaeffer in the TV series

"My Sister Sam," went to Sacramento to lobby for this vital measure. So did Rebecca's parents.

Once the bill is signed into law by the governor, all California citizens will be able to list an alternate address with the Department of Motor Vehicles, such as a post office box or business manager's address. This alternate address may also be printed on the driver's license. The private home address will then be kept strictly confidential, accessible only to law enforcement officials and authorized businesses such as auto insurance companies. Anyone else seeking information on another citizen will receive only the alternate address. In addition, there will be a 10-day delay between the request for information and the release of any data. During these 10 days, the DMV will notify the person that a request has been made for his or her personal information. The person will receive the name of the individual or company who made the request and the reason for it.

We believe that this is an important first step toward protecting the privacy and well-being of all California citizens.

It's incredible (and regrettable) that a tragedy had to occur before this action was taken. But better late than never.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old woman who has married and divorced the same man three times in the last 10 years. Our last divorce became final three weeks ago, and now Mike is begging me to marry him again. We have no children, and we don't want any. Abby, the only time he is decent to me is when we're divorced. He's a wonderful lover but a rotten husband. He's a boozier and a cheater.

If I told you how much we've spent on lawyers you would think we were out of our minds. I love the guy, but I know if I marry him again he'll go back to his old abusive ways. Can you help me?

SAN FRANCISCO — The Giants had the Willies — Mays and McCovey — on hand at Sumner Candlestick Park to cheer on the club's biggest day since 1962.

Even the Say Hey Kid and Willie Mac may have learned a few things from Will, as in Willie, Clark. "The Thrill" put on a show for the ages, and he's not finished yet.

After San Francisco wrapped up the second National League pennant in its 32-year baseball history, Clark was willing to compare himself to one of the greats. But he had one of his cross-bay rivals in mind, not the architects of pennant No. 1.

"You saw it in the other series with Rickey Henderson," the NL playoffs' most valuable player said after lifting the Giants to a 3-2 victory over Chicago on Monday to win the playoffs four games to one.

Clark's heroics made a reality out of the matchup many California fans fantasized about. The Giants and Athletics, spring training partners for over two decades, finally play for real Saturday when the Bay Bridge World Series opens in Oakland.

The A's have the pitching and the speed, but the Giants boast baseball's hottest and most dangerous hitter.

"I've just got a lot of confidence when I walk up to the plate right now. You come up there and it feels like you are going to get a hit every time up."

Clark almost did. He tripled and scored the Giants' first run on Kevin Mitchell's 400-foot fly in the seventh inning, then punched Mitch Williams' high fastball into center field for a game-winning two-run single, his third hit, in the eighth.

Yet it was only an average game by his own astronomical postseason standards. Clark set NL playoff records for hits (13 in 20 at-bats), runs (8), extra-base hits (6), total bases (24), batting average (.650) and slugging percentage (1.200).

And, by the way, he helped win Monday's game with aggressive baserunning and alert defense.

The playoff pitching wasn't good on either side until Monday, when the rejuvenated Rick Reuschel engaged in a duel with the Cubs' Mike Bielecki. It came down to managerial strategy in the late innings, and Don Zimmer paid the price for not lifting Bielecki after he'd issued his first three walks of the game with two outs in the eighth.

In Chicago, critics might spend the winter arguing whether the "Boys of Zimmer" may have been undone by the "Boo-boos of Zimmer" — particularly his reluctance to change pitchers. On Monday, that reluctance filled the bases and brought up Clark — certain death in October.

Soccer

AMARILLO — The Pampa Classic (under 14 boys outdoor) soccer team split a doubleheader against two Amarillo teams Saturday at Southwest Park.

Despite holding back its regular forwards, Pampa surged to a 6-0 halftime lead, then cruised to an 11-0 shutout. Classic goals were scored by Andy Sutton, Jesus Lopez, Jason Soukup, Russ Gunter, Tim McCavit, Joel Monds and Steve Beckham.

Pampa was edged, 2-0, in the second game by last season's championship team, the Cosmos. The Classic gave up one goal in the first half on a defensive miscue and were unable to capitalize on several scoring opportunities. After a good defensive second half, Pampa surrendered another goal to finalize the score.

Pampa players recognized for outstanding play were Joel Monds, Matt Caswell, Tim McCavit, Abel Del Fierro, Jason Soukup, Russ Gunter, Jesus Lopez, Lanny Schale, Andy Sutton, Steve Beckham, J.B. Horton, David Urbanczyk, Shawn Hurst, Chris Podnemy, Justin Allison, Jacob Ybera, Kyle Sparkman and Jeremy Telkamp.

The Classic have four games remaining on the schedule, two each on Oct. 14 and 28 at Southwest Park in Amarillo.

Volleyball

The Lady Harvesters host Dumas in District 1-4A volleyball action tonight at McNeely Fieldhouse, beginning with junior varsity at 6:30.

Pampa enters the contest in sole possession of third place with a 5-3 conference record, 9-12 overall.

Dumas moved two games ahead of the Lady Harvesters by defeating Hereford, 15-12, 15-8, Saturday. In doing so, the Demonettes climbed to 7-1 in district and vaulted into a tie for first place.

Although the Lady Harvesters can't clinch a second-place tie tonight, they will be fighting to keep sole ownership of third place. See today's Scoreboard for an overview of the District 1-4A volleyball standings.

Wily Cougars play spoilers' role in SWC

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

Be Ware of the Houston Cougars!

They can't win the Southwest Conference football title but it's obvious they'll decide who does.

The Cougars and their bionic-armed quarterback, Andre Ware, are college football's most dangerous football team. It doesn't seem to matter to them that they won't be rewarded with a bowl bid or championship honors because of NCAA sanctions.

They destroyed the nation's top passing defense on Saturday with a 66-10 verdict over the proud Baylor Bears, considered by many to be the main contender for the SWC title.

It was the most points Baylor had yielded in a game since 1913 when the Bears lost 77-0 to Texas.

Ware finished with an SWC-record 33 completions and broke his own record for passing yardage in a game with 514. Manny Hazard set another record with five touchdown receptions. He had 13 catches for 218 yards.

In other games, Texas Tech upset 19th-ranked Texas A&M 27-24 on Jamie Gill's two fourth-quarter touchdown passes, seventh-ranked Arkansas rolled to a 41-19 victory over Texas Christian, and Texas survived for a 31-30 victory over the Rice Owls in a wild game at Memorial Stadium.

Baylor committed seven turnovers and Houston cashed them into touchdowns like they were coupons at the State Fair of Texas.

"It wasn't a situation where they came out and marched down the field," said Baylor coach Grant Teaff. "Still, I was surprised they got that many points."

"What a great game," said Houston coach Jack Pardee. "We were a little nervous in the first quarter and had trouble playing pitch and catch."

The victories by Tech and Texas provided some controversy.

Besides a bench-clearing brawl in the A&M-Texas game, the Aggies were late getting their defense back onto the field on the play when Jamie Gill hit Travis Price for the game-winning touchdown pass on third-and-28.

A&M coach R.C. Slocum said the officials signaled play to start with his defense huddled on the sidelines.

"We were running like the devil to get all the way across the field," Slocum said. "I'm sure we would have had a lot better chance to play that play had we been lined up."

Price said: "We worked in practice on snapping the ball before the defense is set. It worked."

Two plays before the touchdown, A&M claimed Gill fumbled when hit by linebacker William Thomas. But Gill was ruled down.

"I would have liked for it to be a fumble but the officials are paid to make those kind of calls," Slocum said.

Texas quarterback Pete Gardere scored on a 4-yard scramble on a fourth-and-goal play with four minutes to play to save the Longhorns.

"There was some conjecture as to whether he was down or not," said Rice coach Fred Goldsmith.

Arkansas rolled over TCU as Barry Foster and JuJu Harshaw enjoyed career rushing days. Each scored two touchdowns.

"We just wore out," said TCU coach Jim Wacker. "We played them off their feet for three quarters, but you have to play 60 minutes. We just didn't have the depth."

In games this week, Houston is at Texas A&M, Baylor is at Southern Methodist, Arkansas is at Texas Tech, Texas plays Oklahoma in their annual grudge match-up at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas, and Rice hosts TCU.

SWC Superlatives

Passing — Andre Ware of Houston, 33 of 53 for 514 yards, 6 touchdowns.

Receiving — Manny Hazard of Houston, 13 for 218 yards, 5 touchdowns.

Rushing — Barry Foster of Arkansas, 17 for 176 yards, 2 touchdowns.

Shell guides opportunistic Raiders to victory

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — In this West Coast story, when you're a Raider, you're a Raider all the way.

And you beat gangs like the Jets, particularly when one of your greatest players is making his debut as coach.

The Los Angeles Raiders weren't too sharp Monday night. They were tough, and opportunistic. That was enough to beat the New York Jets 14-7 in Art Shell's debut as the first black coach in modern NFL history.

"I love those guys to death," Shell said after two big plays lifted the Raiders. "We fought hard today. That's what the thing is all about. It's about that team in there."

"I almost cried in there, but they wouldn't let me do that. Everyone was very happy and everyone got a game ball."

The first two game balls should have gone to Eddie Anderson and Mervyn Fernandez. Anderson's spectacular 87-yard interception return broke a 7-7 tie in the fourth quarter. Fernandez's equally scintillating 73-yard pass play provided the Raiders' other points.

"It's not what he did out there, it's what he represents," Anderson said of Shell, a Hall of Fame tackle and star with some of the franchise's greatest teams. "He was a Raider, he is a Raider, and that's what he gave us — Raider football."

"He's Mr. Raider, Mr. Pride on the sidelines," added Fernandez. "He asked us to play hard and with pride."

It took the Raiders a little more than 30 minutes to do so. The teams struggled through the first scoreless half in the NFL this season, with the Raiders' only scoring chance a 43-yard field goal try on the final play of the second quarter. Jeff Jaeger's kick was well short.

Vance Mueller ran for 19 yards on the first play of the second half. Then Fernandez ran an out pattern, took Jay Schroeder's pass, eluded Bobby Humphery and Erik McMillan, raced down the right sideline and, after a cutback to the middle at the 15, scored for a 7-0 lead.

New York tied it with a 97-yard, 15-play drive capped by Roger Vick's 1-yard dive.

In fact, the Jets moved the ball better throughout the game, but didn't make the big plays.

"We just stopped playing on key plays," Freeman McNeil said. "We just have to regroup. It's very tough but we owe it to the public to get everything together."

The Jets are 1-4 overall. The Raiders are 2-3.

Most importantly, they claim, they have re-established an identity with the Silver and Black of the past, something they lost under Mike Shanahan.

"Art just told us to believe in ourselves and one another and in the Raiders," Greg Townsend said. "He talked about what that meant in the past and what it still should mean today."

To Anderson, it meant making the decisive play. He grabbed Ken O'Brien's pass, got away from several tacklers near the Los Angeles 30 and headed outside. Only O'Brien was near him but never got close enough to make the tackle.

Walker's days in Dallas may be numbered

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING — Herschel Walker was almost as big a topic as the NFL owners meeting again trying to find a new commissioner.

Minnesota Vikings general manager Mike Lynn was to be in Dallas today and said he will pursue a trade for the Dallas Cowboys' Pro Bowl runner.

Lynn will be trying to get Walker to change his mind about the Vikings. Walker reportedly nixed a deal with Minnesota last week.

According to the Dallas Times Herald, Walker's agents, Peter Johnson and Ralph Cindrich, have a meeting scheduled with Cowboys owner Jerry Jones today.

The Dallas newspaper reported that the league source say the Cowboys have an agreement in principle with the Vikings, and would receive series of first- and second-round draft choices that could number as many as seven, including at least two first-round picks.

Walker wasn't talking about any possible trade.

"I don't think about it," Walker said. "Right now, I'm concentrating on playing football for the Dallas Cowboys."

The NFL trading deadline is Oct. 17 and Walker has been a stranger in the Dallas offense. In Sunday's 31-13 loss to Green Bay, he carried 12 times for 44 yards.

Study: syphilis originated in Americas

By MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press Writer

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Nearly five centuries after Christopher Columbus set sail, scientists still debate whether European explorers unleashed the scourge of syphilis on the Americas. A study says it might have been the other way around.

Research by two University of Massachusetts anthropologists cites studies of skeletal remains that they say show forms of syphilis existed in the New World before Columbus and his crew landed.

In contrast, the researchers said studies from the pre-1492 Old World show almost no evidence of syphilis.

Doctoral candidate Brenda J. Baker and Professor George J. Armelagos base part of their conclusions on an apparent epidemic of syphilis in Europe in the 1500s.

Their research was presented in an article, "The Origin and Antiquity of Syphilis," which appeared in a recent issue of Current Anthropology.

An opposing theory holds that venereal syphilis was present in Europe before it was transported by the explorers to America, but at the time the disease was not distinguished from leprosy.

Another theory suggests the disease has occurred independently in both continents.

The Massachusetts researchers cite one case of a skull showing signs of syphilis from a London cemetery. But they note the cemetery was used between 1197 and 1537, and it is impossible to date the bone exactly.

Another case from Norway could be pre-Columbian, the researchers note, raising the possibility that Norse explorers brought the disease back to their country. Explorers led by Leif Ericson are acknowledged to have landed in Greenland a little more than 500 years before Columbus crossed the Atlantic.

Syphilis is detected by such marks as lesions on bones and marks on skulls, Baker said. It is usually transmitted sexually and, if untreated, it can lead to the degeneration of bones, heart and nerve tissue.

Whether a European epidemic of syphilis occurred after the sailors' return isn't entirely clear. Baker and Armelagos conclude it did after reviewing documents, studies of bones and numerous ordinances passed throughout Europe in the late 1490s concerning the disease. Opposing theorists say the outbreak merely reflected the recognition that syphilis was distinct from leprosy.

The various explanations of the origin of syphilis have fascinated scientists for two reasons — sex and politics, says Al B. Wesolowsky, managing editor of the Journal of Field Archeology at Boston University.

"First, syphilis is a venereal disease and so anything connected with sex often has an interest in and of its own," he said. The question also has political implications in light of a growing awareness that Native Americans see 1492 as an invasion that led to their exploitation and devastation by imported diseases such as smallpox and tuberculosis, he said.

Gary Kimble, executive director of the New York-based Association on American Indian Affairs, said a bigger issue than the origin of syphilis is the way Columbus' travels have been characterized.

"The conclusions of the Incan and pre-Incan civilizations, their importance and their sophistication has really been minimized," he said. The Incas dominated in Peru until the Spanish conquest.

Congress plans crackdown on misleading mail

By NANCY BENAC
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An elderly couple in Texas is invited to join a $50,000 "Social Security" sweepstakes.

An 81-year-old retiree in New Jersey receives an envelope from the "IRS" asking her to donate money to a group opposing a new Medicare law.

A California couple gets a "warrant of appearance" to claim a prize from the "Department of FBI."

Official-looking letters from official-sounding groups with no connection to the government are under scrutiny this year by members of Congress hoping to crack down on legal but potentially misleading mailings.

Direct-mail schemes involving "look-alike" letters and "sound-alike" organizations range from real estate investment deals to sale of services that already are available for free from the government.

The "FBI" letter, for example, was from the Fountains Bureau of Invitations and invited families to visit a California resort. The "IRS" designation signified only that the letter came from a non-profit group with a particular Internal Revenue Service classification.

Many look-alike mailings fall into a "gray area" — they confuse the recipient about their origin but are still legal, said Thomas W. McClure of the Postal Inspection Service. "Something needs to be done to make sure the public gets a clearer interpretation of what they're receiving."

The Direct Marketing Association, a trade group, tries to police itself and deter unethical solicitations, but look-alike mailings "have been a consistent problem over the past couple of years," said spokeswoman Lorna Christie.

The House in July approved legislation that would require private mailings bearing official-looking emblems, titles and insignia to include prominent disclaimers of any government affiliation. Similar legislation is pending in the Senate, with committee action likely this fall.

The legislation's supporters include the American Association of Retired Persons, which says "look-alike" mailings often target the elderly and prey on their concerns about the well-being of Social Security and Medicare. Some come in envelopes similar to those containing Social Security checks and bear typical government messages like "Buy and Hold U.S. Savings Bonds."

"There seems to be no end to people's creativity in finding some way to make money at other people's expense," said the AARP's Robin Talbert. "People get confused about exactly what it is they're getting."

Groups charge fees ranging up to $40 to help married women change the name on their Social Security records, get Social Security numbers for children or obtain personal earnings records. In many cases, recipients are unaware the services are available at no cost through SSA.

Among the outfits that have come under criticism is the Social Security Protection Bureau, which staged the $50,000 Social Security sweepstakes. It charges $7 for a "membership kit" that includes a form people can mail in to check their retirement contributions — a form available free from SSA.

"A person has a right to either do it themselves or have someone else obtain the information for them," said Michael Kushnick, an attorney for the company. He said the mailings include a disclaimer of government affiliation.

The new Social Security Commissioner, Gwendolyn King, said she is looking for ways to cut down on misleading mailings.
