United Way fund raising drive reaches 40% of campaign goal

Four weeks since the campaign kick-off, Pampa United Way officials report that more than $124,000 in pledges and donations have been received and 40 percent of the $310,000 goal has been met.

"Although we've been in the midst of the United Way campaign, the community has also responded when they were asked to give in support of the prison proposal," said Jack Gindorf, 1989 publicity chairman. "Giving to the United Way is excellent and on top of that we've had great community support for the civic leaders who are trying to bring a prison to Pampa."

"To me that shows things are better in Pampa than people perceive," Gindorf said. "It shows me there's a future in Pampa. It shows Pampans care for themselves and also for those in need."

Following the check-in Thursday, the United Way drive had netted $103,846 in pledges and donations. That amount was boosted by late pledges to $112,768 or 36 percent of the goal by this morning, Gindorf said.

Later today, Coronado Hospital turned in $12,200 in pledges following a goal-busting employee campaign, and other pledges were received from Mesa Petroleum, bringing the total to more than $124,000 and pushing the giving to the 40 percent mark, he said.

Major Firms led the giving at the check-in with $14,700. Commercial Division posted $3,500, followed by Individuals with $3,354 and Professional with $3,200.

Bush says flag burning bill OK, but not enough

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said today he will allow a newly approved ban on flag-burning to become law without his signature, but "I don't think it's enough." He vowed to continue pressing for a constitutional amendment.

During an appearance in the White House briefing room, the president said he was withholding his signature from the congressional legislation "to signal our belief that a constitutional amendment is the best way to provide lasting protection for the flag."

When Congress is in session, legislation can become law automatically if the president does not act on it within 10 working days of when it is sent to the White House. After Congress has adjourned, a president can pocket-veto bills by refusing to sign them.

"I believe the American flag is a unique and special symbol of our nation and it should be protected from desecration, and our administration has proposed a constitutional amendment to protect the flag," Bush said in his statement.

He proposed the amendment after the Supreme Court ruled last June that flag-burning was a constitutionally protected form of free speech.

The court ruling brought a flood of calls for an amendment to the Constitution. But after the initial response, many members of Congress including the Democratic leadership began looking for a way to deal with the problem through legislation rather than changing the Constitution.

When asked if he were concerned about the political consequences of vetoing flag-burning legislation in the light of his attacks on Democrat Michael Dukakis in the 1988 presidential campaign, Bush denied that was a consideration in his decision.

During the campaign, Bush and his supporters repeatedly attacked Dukakis, the governor of Massachusetts, for vetoing legislation that would have required public schools teachers in the state to lead pupils in daily recitations of the Pledge of Allegiance.

The House voted 317-43 Thursday to complete congressional action on the bill.

Supporting the bill were 154 Republicans and 217 Democrats, while it was opposed by 25 Democrats and 18 Republicans.

The measure requires up to a year in jail and a

$1,000 fine for anyone who "knowingly mutilates, defaces, physically defiles, burns, maintains on the floor or ground, or tramples upon any flag of the United States."

The lopsided approval margin reflected the power of the flag as a political symbol as demonstrated in last year's presidential campaign and by the outcry over the Supreme Court's June decision overturning a Texas flag-burning conviction.

The court reversed the conviction of Texas flag-burner Gregory Lee Johnson on grounds the law violated his right to freedom of speech.

Bush contends a constitutional amendment would settle the issue once and for all and could not be overturned by a court. Such a measure is set to come before the Senate next week.

House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., told reporters that someone at the White House — he did not recall the name — told him the president might stress his dislike of the bill while bowing to its popularity by letting it become law without his signature.

Soon afterward, White House sources said Bush was likely to follow that course. He could do that by allowing the measure to sit untouched after it reached his desk for 10 days while Congress remained in session. The sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

Fitzwater, traveling with Bush in New York, declined to say what the president might do.

Congressional Democrats, declaring that constitutional amendments should be used only as a last resort, said their bill was so carefully worded that it probably could survive a court challenge.

"It is the act of harming the physical integrity of the flag rather than any action that the message might convey that is to be punished," said House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas.

He said the idea was to make flag defacement illegal regardless of whether it had anything to do with political protest and to make the statute "content neutral."

Michel scoffed at that notion, however, saying there was no way to draw up such a bill.

"To those who believe we can overturn a Supreme Court decision at this time by statute, I can only repeat the immortal words of the farmer who, asked directions, said, 'You can't get there from here,'" Michel told the House.

Mobeetie school district begins process to improve deficiencies

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

MOBEETIE — Mobeetie Independent School District has three years to correct "serious" deficiencies in the educational process or it will lose all state and federal funding, a member of the Texas Education Agency told school board trustees Thursday night.

George Manning of the TEA in Austin reported the lowering of the school district's accreditation and discussed the investigative report. As of mid-September the school district, with 63 students, is on accredited-advised status, one step lower than the preferred accredited status. At present, 26 of the state's 1,070 school districts have the accredited-advised status.

Manning and Al Marten, also with the TEA, met with school superintendent Dave Summers and Mobeetie teachers Thursday afternoon. As part of the corrective action when a school district's accreditation status is lowered, the campus must within 30 days hold a public meeting to discuss the investigative report and status of the district.

The main purpose of the corrective actions listed in the 19-page investigative report is to see that students receive a good, quality education, Manning said.

"It is not to generate paper shuffling between the agency and the district. Your students are important and we want to insure your students are getting the best," Manning said.

Manning said the community, school board, teachers and administration have to be committed to overcoming the lowering of the district's accreditation. "It's going to take teamwork on everyone's part, but you can do it," he said.

At an on-site visit May 17-18, TEA members found deficiencies in planning, curriculum, instruction, student services, instructional resources, personnel, governance and physical facilities. Within the school year, the school district will receive another visit from the TEA to review the status.

Before House Bill 72, accreditation was more compliance-oriented. However, the state board now looks at quality and performance, Manning said. "Are the students getting the quality education and are the students performing?" he said. Manning also said the district should set high expectations for students.

Superintendent Summers said he welcomes the TEA's report and sees it only in a positive light.

Pampa resident finds relaxation in being air daytripper

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Call them daytrippers. Breakfast in Oklahoma City, Okla., lunch in Dallas and dinner in Santa Fe, N.M., then back to Pampa by bed time.

Sound impossible? Not if you are a private pilot with your own plane or belong to a club and have access to their aircraft.

Clifton "Kip" Everett, owner of Evco Exxon, is one such daytripper.

Since 1975 he has flown to 44 of the 50 United States as well as Canada, sometimes for extended vacations, sometimes only for a few hours of fishing, relaxation or dinner and shopping.

Earlier this week Everett traveled in an afternoon to Topeka, Kan., to pick up his mother and return her to Pampa for a visit. A trip that would have taken at least 19 hours by car was made in six hours in Everett's single engine

Cherokee Archer II.

"I had a fellow tell me one time, 'I feel safer up in the air with radar on me, going 150 mph, than passing cars two feet apart at 60 mph on the highway,'" Everett said. "He's got a point. I don't, per say, enjoy just flying around Pampa. I enjoy going places and taking people who have never flown before."

Everett said the total cost of his trip to Topeka would be about $150. "When you consider the cost of gasoline and time and wear and tear and probably a hotel along the way, it is about the same cost as driving. If you include everything, flying is probably a little cheaper," he said.

He insisted that pushing the limits of the plane or his own ability holds no appeal, and is the kind of activity that will get a pilot and his passengers killed.

"In snow skiing, you get a little bit more aggressive each time," he said. "That's how you get better. I don't do that in flying. There is a safety envelope and I stay in it. I won't fly into closing (weather) conditions. That's what will get you killed."

"The challenge is flying into a strange airport at night. Notice I didn't say 'danger.' It's a challenge, but not really dangerous. It's not hard, but it does take practice."

Prior to take-off, Everett checked sectional maps of the area between Pampa and Topeka. When in the air, he would keep track of his location by monitoring the cities and large bodies of water he would pass over.

Once in the plane, Everett went over his checklist as if it were his first time to sit in the pilot's seat.

"I don't care how much you fly, you go by the book," he pointed out. At 1:14 p.m. the plane was in the air. By 1:30 the plane was passing over Canadian, traveling about 140 mph.

"What I'm trying to do is climb about 90 knots, 500 feet a minute," Everett told a passenger, "up to 9,500 feet. In five minutes I ought to be there."

While flying at low altitudes is a little like riding the Judge Roy Scream at Six Flags Over Texas, once the plane had reached 9,500 feet and 150 mph, the trip was as smooth as glass.

And while temperatures on the ground were approaching the 90 degree mark, it felt more like fall — a gentle 50 degrees — in the air.

As Everett switched the plane to auto-pilot, he talked about some of the trips he has made.

"We went to Hutchinson, Kan., the other night for dinner," he said. "It was an hour and a half each way. Really nice. It's pretty to fly at night with all the lights below you."

He said several vacations have been spent with a local flying club that will take six planes and around 20 people and fly in groups to various destinations.

"Everyone takes off from Pampa and, say, meets in Oklahoma City for breakfast," he said. "The lead plane will do the talking (to ground control) usually and they will all be spaced out."

Daytripper

I'm not a commercial pilot. I just do it because I enjoy it."

By 1:14 the plane passed over Gage, Okla., and by 3:45 final adjustments for the approach to Topeka were being made.

"It's not like driving a car," Everett said. "If you drive a car for three hours, you are tense. But after three hours in a plane, I'm relaxed. On one trip we took off from Pampa, ate breakfast in Oklahoma City, a light lunch in Springfield, Mo., and when we got to Nashville, Tenn., in eight hours (from Pampa) I was ready to go and do."

"If I'd have spent eight hours in a car, all I'd of wanted was a motel and a bed."

Indeed, when the plane touched down in Topeka, climbing out was a little like climbing out of three hours in a jacuzzi - relaxed. Everett's claims of the calming effect of a plane trip had not been exaggerations.

On the way back to Pampa, Everett and his passenger feasted on a picnic dinner Everett's mother had prepared.

"Not too bad, eh?" he asked. "You didn't know we had a stewardess and in-flight meal too, did you?"

Everett said on most of his trips he will borrow a car at the airport he lands at and go have dinner, but on this trip, the idea was to go and get back.

"A lot of airports have loaner cars they will let you borrow," he said. "Of course, you could write a book on the kind of cars you get loaned sometimes."

The return trip was serene, watching the sun set in the west and the lights come up on little towns across Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

At one point the lights of Canadian, Miami, Pampa, Wheeler, White Deer and Borger could all be seen at once, giving the appearance of hundreds of green and red and gold lights on a huge Christmas tree.

"Now you see why I like to fly at night," Everett said.

Actually, he just likes to fly. It gets him where he is going quickly and peacefully.

"I've got approximately 330 hours in the air," he noted, "but I've sure been a lot of places in that time."

Public invited to special band practice tonight

Even though the Pampa Harvester football team is off this week, the lights will be burning tonight at Harvester Field as the high school and middle school marching bands practice their contest material.

Pampa band directors said the marching will begin at 6:30 p.m.

Dr. James Middleton, professor emeritus at the University of Missouri-Columbia, and Dr. Harry Haines and Don Lefevre of West Texas State University will serve as guest judges for the event.

The public is welcome and no admission will be charged.

St. Mark Church sets Fall Banquet Saturday

St. Mark CME Church Missionary Society is sponsoring its Fall Banquet at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Pampa Community Building.

Guest speaker will be Mrs. Barbara Patrick.

Tickets for the meal will be a $5 donation. They may be purchased at the door.

Mobeetie

"The accreditation visit is a very positive action, a positive statement of support for this school district," Summers said. "It's assisting me, my staff and faculty in letting our district know what our role is for the kids."

"I intend to vigorously pursue the issues addressed in this report," he added.

The TEA representative said there was no evidence of any type of planning on the district or campus level. The district will be required to submit to the Division of Accreditation a copy of the 1989-90 district and campus improvement plans, as well as a "plan to plan," said Manning.

Curriculum documents for each course taught or offered must be developed, he said.

According to the report, "Mobeetie's curriculum documents needed review, revision and adaptation. Teachers reported that they had received as many as five different kinds of curriculum guides within the past five years."

A problem was also found with the administration of the Texas Interactive Instructional Network, where a paraprofessional is assigned to monitor the program. The person assigned was also reassigned to work as a substitute teacher, at times leaving students viewing programs unsupervised.

Other problems were found with methods used to document mastery of essential elements and grading procedures, which were at many times left to the discretion of teachers, varying greatly. Manning said one teacher was deducting points for behavioral problems.

Operation of the special education program was left to the discretion of the physical education teacher who lacked preparation in special education, the report states.

Also, five of six children from a Hispanic family identified as Limited English Proficient were assigned to special education, rather than English as a Second Language, it said in the report.

Major deficiencies were found in the science laboratory, which had neither a safety shower nor a vented fume hood. Master cutoff switches for gas, water and electricity were not easily accessible and old chemicals were found stored with no identification. No notice of the Texas Hazard Communication Act and its provisions were found posted, as is required by law.

The district was found to furnish limited manipulatives. "In order to be effective, teachers must have the needed items - not everything requested, but what is needed," Manning said.

A complete and current inventory of all audiovisual items assigned to the library media center is also required, as well as suggestions that books be "weeded." The TEA team found that easy books were being checked out and some of the harder books to read had not been checked out for up to five years.

During the investigative visit, seven teachers were assigned to positions for which they lacked appropriate certification or adequate training. The TEA is requiring the school district to submit a letter of assurance that all teachers hold appropriate certification for their 1989-90 teaching assignments. Discrepancies were also found in the Texas Teacher Appraisal System records, and corrective action is also required on that measure.

In the area of governance, Manning said the board should work together. During the on-site visit, discord was found among board members, he said.

"Board members, you have a very important role and responsibility. You've been selected by your peers to make decisions affecting the children. Let's not short-change the children of Mobeetie."

The report indicated that ethical breaches were occurring on the school board and information discussed in executive sessions was freely shared with members of the community.

Two board members in May had not fulfilled their training requirements, and the TEA is requiring all training hours be completed and submitted to the TEA, according to the report.

The district is also required to submit to the Division of Accreditation a plan to improve the superintendent's methods of communications to the board, the staff and the students.

Numerous physical facilities deficiencies were cited, with the gymnasium, the newest of the three Mobeetie school structures, in the worst condition.

"Electrical wires were found exposed on the gymnasium floor ... a broken fire alarm switch was noted. The locker rooms and storage areas were unkempt and dirty ... The toilets were backed up and unusable because of full septic tanks. Toilets in the gymnasium and main building would not flush," according to the report.

TEA is mandating the district to make immediate repairs and changes as necessary on the physical facilities.

"The purpose of this report is not to belittle the district, but to identify the areas that need to be corrected. These (the students) are our future leaders," Manning said.

entertained the crowd attending the check-in with contemporary tunes and choreography.

Clad in bright pink shirts and blue jeans, the songsters from all five Pampa elementary schools performed popular tunes such as the Beach Boys' "Kokomo," "Walk Like an Egyptian" by the Bangles, and a medley of '50s tunes. The group is directed by Wanetta Hill.

Volunteers for the Pampa United Way also witnessed a historic mud battle Thursday between Brian "Bad Deal" Vining and Jack "Hershey Bar" Gindorf while munching on Dirt Cake and Mississippi Mud Pie.

Though tension was high, especially after "Bad Deal" was late arriving for the match, then had some problems getting into the ring, the rest of the highly-touted show went off without a hitch.

As was expected, Hershey Bar's exceptional size and aggressive demeanor stood him in good stead in the match. In the muddy hand-to-hand combat, he held his ground, finally sending his opponent to the floor and emerging the victor.

Sponsors for the check-in were the Girl Scouts-Quivira Council, High Plains Epilepsy and Pampa Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

Sources: Congress shares blame in coup failure

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Intelligence sources say Congress is partly to blame for U.S. inaction during last week's failed Panamanian coup because lawmakers precluded at least one covert action for which President Bush sought clearance.

Members of the House Intelligence Committee earlier this year barred the Bush administration from exercising certain unspecified options in Panama "that might have led to a different outcome" in the coup, according to intelligence sources who spoke Thursday on condition of anonymity.

"The reason we didn't have total information (as the coup unfolded) was because of the action of some members of the Intelligence Committee," said one source.

There was "interference" and "second-guessing" when the administration proposed a set of actions designed to give it better inside knowledge of the Panamanian Defense Forces, the source said.

Also on Thursday, the Bush administration denied Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega's allegation the United States paid $1 million to rebel officers to launch last week's failed coup. And a National Security Council staff member, Robert Blackwill, said the coup plotters said they didn't want U.S. help.

"Indeed, they said they didn't wish for their effort to be tainted by American intervention," Blackwill said during a speech at Wichita State University.

The Bush administration has said U.S. officials were notified in advance by Panamanians involved in the coup but did not play a part in planning it.

The intelligence sources said the Bush administration notified Congress earlier this year of options involving Panama in an intelligence "finding," a document required to be given to Congress before covert actions are undertaken.

Some of the loudest criticism of Bush's handling of the Oct. 3 coup attempt against Noriega by PDF rebel officers has come from members of Congress, including Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman David Boren, D-Okla.

But House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., without mentioning names, said Thursday that there is "plenty in the (classified) record ... to know that some of these people are going far beyond what they've got the right to say about the administration's requests in the past, what was granted and what was denied." One member of the House Intelligence Committee alluded to the congressional restrictions during debate on the appropriations bill for intelligence agencies, saying Bush's cautious response to the coup was justified in part by interference from the Democratic Congress.

"Who could expect this administration or any administration, or any intelligence agencies, to make gutsy decisions when we have lashed them, put them under the whip, tethered them, told them they better not do anything?" said Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa.

Shuster noted that some on Capitol Hill have said Bush has received "everything he wanted with regard to Panama."

"And yet we know there are those who have gone to the White House and threatened them with exposure (of) classified information, and said, 'You dare not engage in covert operations,'" Shuster said.

Boren said on NBC television last weekend, "Since George Bush became president, every single word of authority that he has requested from the Intelligence Committee and every single penny that he has requested from the Intelligence Committee relating to Panama, he has gotten and he has gotten with my support."

Investigators examining newly found DC-10 parts

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators are examining a pre-flight crack in a DC-10 engine fan disk found in an Iowa corn field this week, nearly three months after the crash of a United Airlines jet.

James Kolstad, acting National Transportation Safety Board Chairman, said Thursday he hoped the disk section unearthed by an Iowa farmer would tell investigators what caused the July 19 crash that killed 112 of the 286 people aboard Flight 232.

Kolstad expressed the optimism even before a second farmer on Thursday found what a lawyer hired by engine-maker General Electric said is the final one-third part of the disk.

Kolstad announced discovery of a crack in the larger section unearthed by farmer Janice Sorenson on Tuesday as she was harvesting with a combine near Alta, Iowa. The section included about two-thirds of the 300-pound disk and parts of 25 of its fan blades, Kolstad said.

Lawyer Steve Gadd, hired by GE to assist in the search, confirmed late Thursday that the final third of the titanium disk was found by farmer Harold Halverson about a half-mile from the Sorenson discovery. The company had offered $271,000 for various missing pieces of the engine and has delivered a check for $116,000 to Mrs. Sorenson.

Investigators say the plane's tail-mounted No. 2 engine disintegrated in flight, throwing out pieces that severed hydraulic flight control lines. Pilots said they used only thrust from the remaining two engines to steer the plane to the Sioux City airport where it cartwheeled in flames upon landing.

Kolstad said the precise "size, nature and reason for the crack" found along the interior surface of the engine disk had yet to be determined. "There has been no determination on whether this crack was detectable before the accident, nor has there been a determination whether this crack is the point of origin of engine failure," said board spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz.

However, both he and Kolstad said preliminary evidence indicates the crack existed prior to the flight, although they did not indicate what led board investigators to that conclusion. Engine parts were being examined at the GE plant in Evendale, Ohio.

The crash-landing killed 111 people at the scene and one passenger died a month later from injuries.

Two insurance companies settle with Mattox

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Two major insurance companies say their decisions to settle a lawsuit brought by Attorney General Jim Mattox was the cost-effective choice.

Mattox announced Thursday that the Travelers Insurance Co. and St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. had agreed to pay $500,000 each and testify in the state's antitrust suit against other insurers.

In agreements signed by state District Judge Pete Lowry, both companies denied wrongdoing or liability.

The pacts say each $500,000 payment is for investigative and legal costs and "does not represent a fine or penalty."

"In essence, these companies have entered a nolo contendere (no contest) plea and have agreed to testify for the state as the lawsuit continues against the other defendants," Mattox said.

The state accuses the insurance industry of seeking to create aphony "insurance crisis" several years ago in which insurers claimed that an increase in lawsuits was forcing them out of the commercial liability field.

Mattox in March 1988 sued eight major insurance companies and other insurance groups, accusing them of illegally conspiring to boycott, coerce and intimidate insurance consumers in order to drive up rates, cut back coverage and create a false insurance crisis in the commercial liability field.

Several other states joined a similar lawsuit filed in federal court in California.

"We are asking the court to set us a trial date as soon as possible for the rest" of the defendants, Mattox said.

The state's lawsuit seeks civil penalties and restitution for consumers.

The civil penalties could range up to $1 million for each violation of the state's antitrust law by corporate defendants and up to $100,000 for each violation by individuals.

Spokesmen for both Travelers and St. Paul Fire and Marine said their companies believe they would have won but decided to settle because of costs involved.

School officials seek dismissal of lawsuit on student haircuts

CANUTILLO, Texas (AP) — Canutillo school officials say their investigation of students' claims that their hair was cut by teachers turned up no reason to discipline faculty and the district will seek dismissal of a related lawsuit.

Wilson Knapp, Canutillo superintendent, said the district also will seek compensation for litigation expenses.

Two junior high students claim in the suit they were sent to detention last month and forced to remain until they agreed to allow teachers to cut their hair.

The suit, filed last month, accuses the district of denying the students due process and violating the equal rights amendment because only the hair of male students was cut.

"The board found no disciplinary action is warranted against any faculty or staff member arising from the incident in question," Knapp said, reading from a prepared statement.

Additionally the revised student dress code for the district as adopted for Sept. 12, 1989 will remain in force and be implemented in conformance with the discipline-management plan of the district.

"Their claims are basically groundless and frivolous as set forth in the lawsuit," Knapp told The Associated Press.

Wild pigs terrorize small town

LUCAS (AP) — A small community in North Texas is under siege from a pack of wild pigs that are killing dogs, destroying property and have left one 74-year old man in need of hospital care.

"I know they ate my dog and my sister's dog, and they're running her crazy," said Claudia Wilson, 69, a resident of Trinity Park, which is about 20 miles north of Dallas near Lake Lavon. "We're always fighting these hogs. They're everywhere. And you either have to stay in or carry a gun."

Ms. Wilson said she was preparing to bury her dog when she found about seven of the pigs eating the carcass one day.

Animal control officials in Collin County Thursday rounded up 39 of about 60 wild pigs that have been terrorizing residents and killing animals in an unincorporated community along Lake Lavon.

The officials were rounding up the savage pigs in a field near the lake at the same time that one of the animals was attacking a 74-year-old man about a block away.

Ocie Sanders was treated at a local hospital for two gashes in his leg after being attacked by a 400-pound red Duroc boar. Sanders said he walked out to feed his pigs and the boar followed him into his pig pen and attacked him when he tried to chase it off.

Residents of the neighborhood of about 35 houses said the herd of pigs has been running hog wild and plaguing the neighborhood for more than a year.

The school district implemented the dress code this year but deleted the long hair regulation at a board meeting attended by parents of the students who claimed their hair was cut.

Rod Ponton, who represents the plaintiffs, said he would not withdraw the suit. "Absolutely not. It's a valid suit. Canutillo apparently did not think the students have rights, but a judge and a court will tell them so."

"It was my understanding they (the school district) investigated themselves and they found they did not find they did do anything wrong," he said.

Knapp said the board has instructed its attorneys to seek "from the court sanctions against the plaintiffs in the form of reimbursement for cost and expenses incurred by the district in defense of the groundless and frivolous claim set forth in the lawsuit."

Knapp's statement drew criticism from Ponton. "First they assaulted the children and cut off their hair. Then, the students were trying to assert their rights in court so now the school district wants to sue the parents."

When asked whether the board determined if the hair cutting actually occurred, Knapp said he could not comment further than the statement. The district's attorney was not immediately available.

Cherry blossom time?

James E. Lewis, 1226 Duncan, points to a small bunch of white cherry blossoms on the tree in his back yard. Lewis said the tree burst out in blossoms last week, even though this is mid October. A week later, there are still a number of small groups of blossoms on the tree. He said he had never seen the tree blooming before in fall. He speculated that the warm fall weather, with a cool spell for a couple of days near the frost level, probably confused the tree. With temperatures hovering in the upper 80s for the past several days, it has seemed more like spring than fall.

Fuel tax fraud sentence set

AUSTIN (AP) — An investigation into fuels tax fraud has ended in a prison sentence for a Houston man, said state Comptroller Bob Bullock and Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle.

George Canada, 43, was sentenced Thursday to two years in state prison for fuels tax evasion, according to a statement from Bullock's office.

"We've seen some strong sentencing during this investigation, but this is the first prison sentence that's been handed down," Bullock said.

Bullock said Canada bought fuel tax-free and charged the state fuels tax of 15 cents a gallon when he sold the fuel in Houston. Canada pocketed the tax money of approximately $7,000, Bullock said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Another tea party could wake them up

As the U.S. Supreme Court returns to work, it will be taking up one of the most important cases to come before it in years. It will review an order by federal Judge Russell G. Clark of Kansas City, Mo., that imposed a near doubling of the city's property taxes to fund his public school desegregation scheme. Costs to Kansas City taxpayers now run to $700 million a year.

The judge's action patently violated the Constitution. Article I stipulates that "The Congress shall have power ... to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises." The executive branch can propose tax levies, not impose them; only if the legislature passes such proposals itself can the executive then sign them into law and implement them. The judiciary holds only the power to interpret laws and order their enforcement. It has no power to act as a pseudo-legislature and impose its own taxes, or as a pseudo-executive and hire police to enforce them.

Such specific assignments of power to the three branches of the government are crucial to the idea of limited government enshrined in the Constitution by America's founding fathers. The founders had recently suffered under the unjust, distant tyranny of King George II of England, who imposed taxes on them but denied them representation in the British parliament.

The separation of powers was designed to ensure against one branch of government seizing such absolute power. The founders gave each branch defined, limited powers, and charged each with zealously watching over the other branches. The founders most feared arbitrary power acting without consequence.

Kansas City residents have grasped the historical perspective. Citizens have dumped tea bags into a box, commemorating how our forefathers dumped tea into Boston Harbor in 1773 to protest an earlier tyrant's imposition of an unjust tax. At a rally to oppose Judge Clark's judicial tyranny, people railed against "taxation without representation," the same cry that sparked the American Revolution.

The Supreme Court almost certainly will curb Judge Clark's tyranny. In recent years the court has begun a shift away from the judicial supremacy practiced by the Warren and Burger courts from the mid 1950s to the mid 1980s. Judge Clark is a holdover, one of the large crop of judicial activists appointed to federal benches by Jimmy Carter.

Curbing his judicial excesses would be a fitting way for the court to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the implementation of the Constitution.

Restraints failed in Yonkers

"This court will tolerate no further violation of its lawful orders," said Judge Leonard B. Sand. And with that, the judge imposed draconian fines upon the city of Yonkers, N.Y., and threatened members of its City Council with indefinite terms in prison.

That was a year ago. Now the Supreme Court heard argument in the Yonkers case. To some observers, the issue primarily involves desegregation. Geoffrey P. Miller, associate dean of the University of Chicago Law School, says the case "epitomizes the new polarization in race relations."

In my own view, the Yonkers case epitomizes something else entirely: It epitomizes the power of judges. Two other cases recently in the news go to the same difficult issue.

Here in Washington, Dr. Elizabeth Morgan spent 25 months in jail for refusing to obey a court order in a child custody case. In Kansas City, Mo., a federal judge took it upon himself to increase local property taxes in order to finance desegregation of the schools.

The Yonkers case commanded national attention from the time the Department of Justice brought suit against the city in 1980. There was no question that the city had discriminated against blacks in matters of public housing. The evidence of a "pattern and practice" of discrimination was overwhelming.

Thus began eight years of litigation and negotiation that led last January to a consent decree: The city would agree to 200 units of public housing in the white neighborhood of East Yonkers; it would accept a long-term plan for 800 units on sites that would effectively achieve desegregation.

White residents of Yonkers erupted in a storm of resentment. Responding to this political outpouring, four members of the City Council balked. They refused to vote for an ordinance to implement the agreement. Fed up at last, Judge Land erupted on July 26. He ordered the recalcitrant councilmen to vote for the ordinance. He forbade them to resign.

"Each of the council members who fails to vote in favor of the enactment of such legislation shall be personally fined $500 per day." If disobedience continued after Aug. 10, the council members "shall be committed to the United States marshal for imprisonment." The city itself was to pay a fine starting at $100 for the first day and doubling every day thereafter.

The city wound up by paying $820,000 in fines. The defiant councilmen paid $3,500. The ordinance was adopted.

We start with the elementary proposition that the lawful orders of a court must be enforced. Otherwise courts are reduced to impotence and the rule of law crumbles underfoot.

But what are the limits of judicial power? In the Yonkers case, an unselected federal judge simply usurped the power of lawfully elected city councilmen. The judge reduced them to puppets dangling from judicial string. In Kansas City, another federal judge similarly exercised despotic powers. In the matter of Dr. Morgan, she might have stayed in jail for 10 more years if Congress had not intervened with special legislation.

A great deal of fresh thinking needs to be done about the power to punish for civil contempt. There is not much law on the subject — certainly not much law on all fours with the facts in Yonkers.

In the early days of desegregation of Southern schools, federal judges imposed decrees that roused great public opposition, but I cannot recall that judges ordered state legislators or school board members to vote in particular ways or go to prison. Alabama's Gov. George Wallace stood metaphorically at the schoolhouse door, but marshals put him firmly aside.

This is no easy problem for the Supreme Court to resolve. In most cases involving injunctive relief, a federal court forbids the doing of something. In Yonkers, Councilman Henry G. Spallone, in whose name the case will be styled, was ordered to do something: He cast a vote that he would not have cast otherwise. His freedom of conscience was effectively nullified. A serious question of First Amendment freedom will have to be faced.

A better way than civil contempt must be found for enforcement of unpopular court decrees. I have no idea what that way might be, for it is unacceptable for judges to convert themselves into housing authorities or school superintendents and act directly to achieve remedies. One object of constitutional government is to restrain the exercise of absolute and arbitrary power. In Yonkers those restraints failed.

Public pressure might work

Airlines don't like to talk about it, but their ticket desks are hearing some insistent questions they've rarely heard before.

Airline passengers want to know in advance "what type of aircraft." They will re-schedule flights to avoid airplanes of the design involved in recent crashes.

The public perception that certain older aircraft are unsafe stems from recent accidents such as the United flight 232 which crashed in Iowa and the Aloha Airlines 737 whose fuselage peeled apart in flight.

What if we were able to detect structural failures before they occurred?

A Texas A&M University civil engineer, Dr. Norris Stubbs, has been five years detecting structural flaws "in advance" by measuring changes in vibration response.

He has applied it to offshore drilling platforms, bridges — and aircraft.

Dr. Stubbs says, "The beauty of this method is that we can detect damage — even in inaccessible areas — damage which might escalate into structural failure."

His "nondestructive testing" is based on ultrasonics, on measurement of resonant frequencies and characteristic mode shapes.

For decades, scientists have been aware that a structural weakness is reflected in an altered frequency response as surely as a human illness may be detected with a thermometer or a stress test.

Examining a human body with modern scanning devices, doctors can detect early symptoms of constricted blood vessels, lung damage, heart damage, tumors, "pressure points" — often in time to prevent serious sickness.

Similarly, there are changes that precede failure in the fundamental qualities of a structure — and these changes produce fluctuations that can be measured with modern signal processing equipment.

In each structure, we know the frequency which reflects "wellness." Any deviation reflects and pinpoints something "unwell."

Currently, the cost factor inhibits routine use of this procedure. To detect potential trouble spots in a pipeline, for example, might cost $10,000 a mile.

But Dr. Stubbs insists that, as with almost anything, costs will come down with more widespread use.

His "global method" tells you very rapidly where any damage is located and an estimate of its severity. It's been demonstrated on beams, trusses, frames.

Industry is reluctant to accept change, especially expensive change.

Aviation, however, motivated by public pressure, might be more prompt to respond.

Call him when the game is worthwhile

By BEN WATTENBERG

If what follows sounds like sour grapes, designed to ruin your World Series season, well, maybe that's what it is.

As a boy and a teen-ager, I rooted for the Brooklyn Dodgers, and at no small sacrifice. I lived in the Bronx, home of the repugnant rooted for those pin-striped boobahs.

I knew all the averages, followed all the games, worshipped all the players. (When I was 8, I wanted to be Pistol Pete Reiser).

Then they took my team from Brooklyn — Hodges, Reese, Snider, Furillo — and plopped it cold turkey, into Los Angeles.

As a young man, I came to Washington, D.C., which then had a bad baseball team called the Senators. With my young children, I went to the Senators games, knew most of the averages, followed most of the games, admired many of players — monumental Frank Howard, semi-monumental Mike Epstein ("Super Jew," he was called) and un-monomental Ed Brinkman who looked like a skinny water rat. The manager was the maxi-monumental Ted Williams.

One day the team disappeared and re-surfaced in Arlington, Texas, which I learned was between Dallas and Fort Worth.

That was 18 years ago. To this day the capital city of the United States — one of the most affluent and fastest growing areas in the nation, a community zonked on spectator sports (the Redskins) — does not have a major-league baseball franchise.

Let me tell you something about not having a baseball team. It's OK. It's fine. You can live without it real easy.

It's sort of a dumb and boring sport. Some of our finest columnists and intellectuals have been trying to tell us otherwise as they wax sagely about the true meaning and poetry of baseball generally, and too often about the Chicago Cubs particularly.

Baseball is the soul of America, we have been told. You can't really understand the nature of America if you don't understand baseball. Oh, the finesse and drama of a pitcher's duel! Oh, the geometric purity of the diamond in the church of baseball!

It's got zero to do with the soul of America. Did America not have a soul before Abner Doubleday didn't invent baseball in Cooperstown, N.Y., in 1839? Did Benjamin Franklin play baseball? Did Tocqueville know from baseball when he explained America? Did Tom Jefferson worry about hitting the curveball? Did Joltin' Jim Madison know the sound of horsehide meeting hickory? Did George Washington have a good move to first?

And don't get me going about a pitcher's duel. I was graciously invited to a major-league game the other week, and saw a major-league pitcher's duel. Snoreball. Three hours and no one hit more than double.

The better games aren't much better. Eighteen men in shrunken knickers. At any moment almost half of them are sitting on a bench yelling, "Way to go, Bubba."

Seven of the nine men-in-field are doing zip for 99 percent of the time.

The total action time in a nine-inning game must be about three minutes. Watch the highlights on the evenings news.

In football, all 22 men on the field are playing at the same time. In basketball everyone is playing all the time. That's roughly true in soccer, too. If you must watch a game played with a stick, watch lacrosse or tennis, where athletes at least work up a sweat. Baseball is team golf.

The lure of baseball comes from journalism, fable and statistics. When you don't know that your shortstop can make .300 this year if he hits .320 for the rest of the season, when you don't know that your team is Cinderella coming from nowhere, when you don't know that the young left-hander with the fastball is in the manager's doghouse, and is about to face Mighty Casey in front of 60,000 fans — baseball is snoreball squared.

So have a nice time watching the playoffs and the Series. Call me when they expand the leagues and there's a team-in-my-town.

East Germany's dialogue will leave out opposition movement

GIRARD C. STEICHEN
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — The chief ideologue of East Germany's Communist Party indicated his country's growing opposition movement will be excluded from discussions with social groups about political reform.

Politburo member Kurt Hager promised Thursday during a visit to Moscow that the East German government will consider changes following an exodus of tens of thousands of citizens and the most widespread public demonstrations since 1953.

But Hager's reference to talks with public organizations, church groups and other social forces did not appear to include the opposition movement.

In an interview with West Germany's ZDF television, Hager said there were no "differences of opinion" within the Communist Party leadership.

"We have many discussion partners in all parts of the population — allied political parties, social organizations, the (Lutheran) church, other institutions," he said. "If they are ready, willing and well-intentioned, that would lead to good talks. We are willing to talk to all parts of society."

He said, however, that those challenging the foundations of socialism would have no role.

"If they want to question our social order, then that's not a basis for discussions," said Hager, who was in Moscow for the opening of a cultural exhibition.

The communist government has routinely accused the major opposition groups of trying to undermine socialism.

The state news service ADN reported that Lutheran Church leaders, including Bishop Gottfried Forck of East Berlin, had met Thursday with East Berlin Mayor Erhard Crack.

Forck and other church leaders frequently have mediated during the recent unrest. ADN quoted Guenter Krusche, a ranking church official, as saying "it is not the church's goal to destabilize" East Germany.

The future of hard-line leader Erich Honecker meanwhile remained a subject of widespread speculation. Party sources have said influential members of the ruling Politburo were upset over the way the 77-year-old Honecker has responded to the unrest.

West Germany's mass-circulation Bild newspaper, quoting unidentified Communist Party sources, reported Thursday that Honecker would be replaced on Oct. 18.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev visited East Berlin over the weekend to help East Germany celebrate its 40th anniversary and urged Honecker to undertake reforms.

Tens of thousands of East Germans demonstrated in several cities and demanded political and economic reform; many asked the reform-minded Gorbachev for his help.

Opposition leaders Thursday said they were skeptical about the government's professed willingness to enter into real dialogue with any social forces.

Baerbel Bohley, an East Berlin painter and a co-founder of the opposition group New Forum, described the Politburo statement as a "verbal shift that does not take into account real life."

East German leaders have made it clear that any changes would occur only within the framework of the existing socialist system.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler welcomed the East German offer of a dialogue but said it "should be meaningful and not just a tactical move to relieve domestic and international pressure."

The government in East Berlin has rejected pro-democracy reforms like those taking place in the Soviet bloc countries of Poland and Hungary.

East German Communist Party chief Erich Honecker waves to troops during a military parade in East Berlin last week. Honecker has been plagued by nationwide protests and mounting troubles within the Communist Party ranks. With Honecker becoming increasingly isolated in his hard-line course, there is speculation he may be replaced as party chief soon.

Physics, chemistry Nobel Prizes awarded

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The Nobel Prize in physics was awarded Thursday to two Americans and a West German whose work led to the atomic clock used as an international standard.

The chemistry prize went to an American and a Canadian for the discovery of surprising properties of the genetic material RNA.

The physics award was given to Norman F. Ramsey of Harvard University for the atomic clock used as the international time standard and to Hans G. Dehmelt of the University of Washington and West German Wolfgang Paul for a method to isolate single atoms and make exacting measurements of them.

The recipients of the Nobel Prize in chemistry were Thomas Cech, 41, of the University of Colorado, and Canadian Sidney Altman, 50, of Yale University, who showed independently in the 1970s and early 1980s that RNA, then thought to be merely a genetic messenger, could actively aid chemical reactions.

Their discovery "will probably provide a new tool for gene technology, with potential to create a new defense against viral infections," the Swedish Academy said. They will share the $469,000 prize.

Half of the physics prize, worth the same amount, will go to Ramsey, 74, of Harvard University.

The other half will be shared by the German-born Dehmelt, 67, of the University of Washington in Seattle, and Paul, 76 of the University of Bonn.

"All three of them have developed exact methods of measurement, which has made it possible to conduct experiments that might force us to reconsider some basic physical laws, especially regarding time and space," said Ingvar Lindgren, chairman of the awarding committee.

Informed by The Associated Press that he had won the prize, Ramsey said, "Are you sure?" then said he was delighted. He spoke in a telephone interview from his home in Brookline, Mass.

Ramsey developed a way to study the structure of atoms by exciting them to different energy levels using two oscillating electromagnetic fields.

That led to the development of the hydrogen maser, a laser-like device that excites hydrogen atoms and provided the most detailed determination of their internal structure.

Another application was the cesium atomic clock, in which cesium atoms are excited to higher levels. Since 1967, the second has been defined as the time during which the cesium atom makes 9,192,631,770 oscillations.

Dehmelt and Paul were recognized for the development of the ion-trap technique for separating ions — electrically charged atoms — according to their weight.

In 1973, Dehmelt used the technique to observe a single, isolated electron. Later, he was able to observe single ions in the trap.

Paul, working independently in his laboratory at the University of Washington, developed another kind of ion trap called the Penning trap, which can be used for the same purposes as the Paul trap, the Swedish Academy said.

Cech and Altman forced chemistry books to be rewritten when they showed independently that RNA, or ribonucleic acid, could be a catalyst for chemical reactions.

"The discovery of catalytic RNA has altered the central dogma of the biosciences ... (and) has had a profound influence on our understanding of how life on earth began and developed," the academy said.

The researchers found that RNA has the rudimentary ability to reproduce itself, suggesting that the first living things might have arisen from RNA rather than DNA, or deoxyribonucleic acid, the principal carrier of hereditary information in plants, animals and bacteria.

Ramsey has been at Harvard in Cambridge, Mass. since 1947.

Dehmelt was born in Goerlitz, Germany. He moved to the United States in 1952 to do post-graduate studies at Duke University in North Carolina. He has been at the University of Washington since 1955, and he is a U.S. citizen.

Paul was born in Lorenzkirch, Germany. He became professor of experimental physics at the University of Bonn in 1952.

Americans have shared or won the chemistry prize 36 times among the 112 times it has been awarded since 1901, five years after the death of benefactor Alfred Nobel.

Study: Building blocks of matter in three families

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scientists say they are closer to understanding the birth of the universe after using an atom smasher to find strong evidence that the basic building blocks of matter belong to only three families.

"It means that somehow the universe is comprehensible, that it's not a total mystery, that it can be grasped by the human mind," physicist Michael Riordan said by phone from the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center, 30 miles southeast of San Francisco. "It puts a lid on the complexity of nature at its most fundamental level."

Experiments in the center's 3-mile-long, $125 million Stanford Linear Collider showed the odds are 25-to-1 that there are only three families or "generations" of fundamental particles — known as quarks and leptons — that make up matter, he said Thursday.

Particles of matter and antimatter were smashed together inside the machine with such power that the particles destroyed each other, producing conditions that nearly mimicked the "big bang" — the giant explosion physicists believe created the universe some 15 billion years ago.

Until now, atom smasher experiments indicated only that there were no more than five or six families of fundamental particles, said Burton Richter, the center's director and 1976 Nobel laureate in physics.

The new discovery "brings us closer to really understanding the physical universe and how it's put together," Richter said.

Everyday matter is made from the four particles in the first family. They are up quarks, down quarks, and two leptons named electrons and electron neutrinos.

Protons and neutrons in the nucleus of an atom are made of up and down quarks. Electrons orbit the nucleus. Electron neutrinos are produced by exploding stars.

Particles in the second family are the strange and charmed quarks, and leptons named muons and muon neutrinos.

Members of the third family — first discovered in the mid 1970s — are the bottom quark, the yet-undetected top quark, the tau lepton and the tau neutrino.

Physicists say particles from all three families existed naturally in the fraction of a second after the big bang. But some particles in the second family and all the particles in the third family can't exist naturally today, although they can be created in atom smashers. That's because the universe is much cooler compared with conditions during the big bang.

If there were more than three families of particles, experiments in Stanford's particle smasher should have produced evidence of more than the three known types of neutrinos and possibly evidence for other quarks and leptons, but no such evidence was found, Riordan said.

The machine, shaped like a giant tennis racket, includes a 2-mile-long linear accelerator that speeds up electrons — the particles that create television pictures — and their antimatter counterparts, called positrons.

In the 1-mile-long part of the machine that looks like the head of the tennis racket, the particles collide, annihilating each other and producing Z particles, which are so heavy they existed naturally only for moments after the big bang.

The 500 Zs produced in Stanford's machine since April quickly decayed into lighter particles such as quarks and leptons, which were studied with an 1,800-ton detection device.

Richter said a major mystery is "why God chose three families instead of one or nine or 47."

But David Schramm, a University of Chicago astrophysicist, said humans have reason to be thankful there are no fewer than three families.

The universe contains more matter than antimatter. But for complex reasons, "without at least three generations, there would be an equal amount of antimatter and matter in the universe, and it would have annihilated long ago," Schramm said.

"We wouldn't be here. The whole universe would be filled with radiation and we'd have very little else."

New observatory allows public to see the stars - free

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

DAMON (AP) — In the darkest corner researchers could find in the Houston area, scientists are hoping to shed some light on the secrets of the universe in an astronomy project unique because it will be open to the public.

Contractors and volunteers working for the Houston Museum of Natural Science are putting finishing touches on a $1.3 million installation of a 10-ton, 36-inch research telescope.

The museum, using a $770,000 grant from the Houston-based George Foundation, purchased the 20-year-old telescope, described as one of the largest and most powerful telescopes available, from Louisiana State University about two years ago.

Then, given a choice of about six sites by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, museum officials selected an isolated spot in the 5,000-acre Brazos Bend State Park — home to cypress and oak trees that shelter alligators and deer about 45 miles southwest of downtown Houston.

And unlike other observatories around the nation, the new George Observatory which opens this weekend is available for use by anyone.

'And unlike other observatories around the nation, the new George Observatory is available for use by anyone.'

The only fee is the $2 per car admission charged to enter the state park.

Already, museum officials have commitments from at least 8,000 schoolchildren who want to view the heavens. And most of the 800 VIP guests invited to a special preview reception to mark the opening of the facility have indicated they'll attend.

"What we're going to do is learn crowd control, if nothing else," laughs Carolyn Summers, director of astronomy and physics for the museum.

"When the public gets this, they're going to want to see the planets," says Dee Graham, an engineering consultant who worked with an identical telescope at the Kitt Peak Observatory near Tucson, Ariz. "Saturn is just beautiful."

Graham and several other workers in the past week have been tinkering with the dials and gears and bearings and mirrors that comprise the telescope, surrendered by Louisiana State because of the $30,000 to $40,000 annual upkeep the device required.

Houston museum officials, in the market for such a telescope, leaped at the opportunity in the spring of 1987. Construction of the actual observatory began in March.

"Part of the problem in science is that it's so focused on the laboratory — that's what kids think science is," says Ms. Summers. "They hate it in chemistry and physics."

"What we're doing here is focusing on the observational sciences — earth science, environmental science, ecology, astronomy — where you can't manipulate the environment. You just observe it. And that's the way humans are. Most of our lives, the less we mess with the environment, the better. The more we observe it and understand it, that's what matters."

The current schedule will allow the public to view the planets and stars every Saturday night, first come, first served. About 25 people will be allowed inside the 12-ton, 36-foot-diameter observatory dome for about 30-minute periods.

Other nights are reserved for school groups, researchers and advanced observations.

'Part of the problem in science is that it's so focused on the laboratory - that's what kids think science is.'

As part of the deal with Louisiana State, the Baton Rouge school will get to use the observatory for two weeks a year.

The other major Texas observatory, the McDonald Observatory in west Texas, allows occasional public viewing through a 14-inch portable device. The new George telescope is 12 tons heavier and 22 inches wider, according to Houston museum officials.

Besides the public access, another oddity is the location of an observatory so close to sea level. The highest spot in the park is just 64 feet above sea level.

But scientists determined the sky in the area was the darkest, clearest and least polluted in the immediate Houston area. The site is so good, the Milky Way still extends from horizon to horizon and star patterns are clear.

Ms. Summers said she hopes to have a video system installed shortly so monitors can capture the images seen through the telescope and allow even more people in the park to take advantage of what the telescope sees.

"There's nothing like this in the country," she said. "That's what this place is all about — real science. No exhibits, no simulation. Here the science is real."

READY FOR New CARGO

This ship has been emptied of its cargo, and now stands ready to take on fuel and more cargo for further service. If this ship were to remain empty, it would be of no value and would be failing in the one thing that it was built for.

Man was created to be a companion to God, and when he does not join in worship with God, he is failing in the reason for his creation. Make your life mean something for God...

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

The Bentons to appear at McLean UMC

McLEAN - The Bentons, communicators using sacred music and the spoken word, will be appearing at the United Methodist Church of McLean at 10:50 a.m. Sunday, Oct. 22.

In their 29th year of full-time ministry, The Bentons have recorded 15 albums, appearing in 41 states. They are native Iowans, making Burlington their home.

D. Dean Benton was ordained in 1960; he has pastored 14 years in Iowa and Illinois. A graduate of Garrett Evangelical Theological Seminary, Open Bible College and Upper Iowa University, he is the author of 11 published books and numerous magazine articles.

Carole Benton plays electronic piano on stage, sings and writes some of the songs used in The Bentons' concerts and recordings. Her book, Adventure at Hollow Hickory Fort, was published in 1980.

Deborah Benton is their adult daughter. She began traveling with the group in 1973, then joined her parents as a full-time singer in 1978. Her writing has been published nearly 20 times.

In addition to 200 concerts a year, The Bentons conduct a seminar ministry related to family life. This is a family in ministry to families.

The Bentons and Pastor Mark Wilson invite the public to this concert and comment.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: However, as it is written: "No eye has seen, no ear has heard, no mind has conceived what God has prepared for those who love him." (1 Corinthians 2:9 NIV)

While on a short vacation recently, my husband and I visited the Philbrook Art Center in Tulsa, Oklahoma. A beautiful old mansion has been restored and used to house and display an impressive collection of art, much of it from the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.

As interesting as the art is, a far more dazzling display of beauty lies through the veranda doors at the back of the house.

The grounds were designed by a landscape artist who combined formal and informal landscaping to produce an exquisite finished view. Sculptured hedges in a precise, geometric layout give way to a free style rock garden. Water springs from an ornate fountain, is diverted through the center of the hedge design, spills over the rock garden and gathers in a reflecting pool which lies past the rock garden.

Beyond the pool and centered with the mansion and gardens is a gazebo with a love seat. Visitors may sit on the love seat and look back at the gardens to get the full effect of the botanical symphony.

God has a plan for every individual's life. Its design is conceived in his perfect wisdom; its mechanism is precision interlocked with his grand design for humanity; its purpose is spiritual progression; and its victory is everlasting life.

We mortals haven't the capacity to grasp the significance of God's plan nor his workings to that end. But I believe some time in eternity, all will be made clear to us. We will get to look back with perfect spiritual vision and see God's completed, sublime work of art.

Just what Christian minds and souls need - a panoramic view which transcends all our questions and permanently eases our restive hearts.

Sounds heavenly!

Faith Tabernacle plans revival with California minister

Evangelist Steve Miller from San Diego, Calif., will be in revival at Faith Tabernacle, 610 Naida, on Sunday, Oct. 15, and Wednesday through Sunday, Oct. 18-22.

Rev. Miller is a graduate of Tabernacle Christian Academy and Christian Service Training Institute in San Diego. He has been youth minister at Revival Tabernacle in San Diego for the past several years.

In addition, he has taught choir clinic, music seminars and youth minister workshops. He is an accomplished musician on keyboard, saxophone, guitar, bass and drums, as well as being an anointed minister of the gospel.

Pastor Aaron Thames said the public is invited.

"We are sure you will be blessed by the inspiring ministry in word and song of this young man," he said.

First Christian Church to install new minister

The public is invited to attend the installation service of Dr. John Thomas Tate as senior minister of First Christian Church at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the church sanctuary, 1644 N. Nelson. A reception will follow in Fellowship Hall following the installation.

Among the dignitaries who will be present for the installation will be Pampa Mayor Richard Peet. A number of area Disciples of Christ ministers will be participating in the service, including former pastor, Dr. Richard Crews of Fort Worth, and Dr. Harold Cline, area minister, of Amarillo.

Also participating in the service will be Rev. Kevin Hollowell, pastor of First Christian Church of Miami; Dr. John Judson, pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Pampa and president of the Pampa Ministerial Alliance; Rev. Herb Peak, pastor of First Assembly of God of Pampa; and Rev. Jack Rothenflue, pastor of First Christian Church of Dumas.

Dr. Tate arrived in Pampa with his wife Doris and two children, Wendy Elaine, 17, and John Thomas Jr., 16, this summer. Both of the elder Tates have been active in the Christian Church since childhood. Dr. Tate entered the church ministry while active in the first Christian Church of Jackson, Miss.

On Jan. 1, 1975, the Tates joined First Christian Church of McKinney with Dr. Tate serving as associate minister while earning a master of divinity degree from Brite Divinity School, Texas Christian University. During the 3 1/2 year ministry, Dr. Tate served as interim minister at Allen Christian Church and as interim minister at First Christian Church of McKinney.

In 1978, Dr. Tate accepted a position as senior minister of First Christian Church of Mineral Wells. While there, he earned a doctor of ministry degree from Brite Divinity School.

Dr. Tate holds the designation of pastor affiliate with the American Association of Pastoral Counselors and is a licensed professional counselor with the Texas State Board of Examiners of Professional Counselors.

He has also been active in Kiwanis International Texas-Oklahoma District and has served on numerous boards and committees at the Regional level of the Christian Church in the Southwest.

Dr. Crews will be guest speaker for the installation service. A one-time pastor of First Christian Church of Pampa, Dr. Crews is presently serving as associate minister of South Hills Christian Church in Fort Worth.

He and his wife, Mary Jean, have two children, both graduates of Texas Christian University.

Their daughter, Barbara Gregory teaches in Crowley High School at Fort Worth. She is married to Keith Gregory, a graduate student at TCU and a teacher in the English Department. They have a daughter, Bronwen Erica. Richie Crews is a graduate of Texas Tech Law School and is now practicing law in Corpus Christi. He and his wife, Cathy, have two children, Courtney Catherine and Kimberly Ann.

Revolution Thru Christ founder to minister at Briarwood Full Gospel

Rich Weaver, founder and president of spiritual Revolution Thru Christ Inc. since 1967, will be ministering in the Sunday morning service at 10:45 a.m. at Briarwood Full Gospel Church, 1800 W. Harvester.

Revolution Thru Christ is a non-political ministry to national leaders and a ministry of revival to the people.

Weaver has personally ministered to former U.S. presidents Ronald Reagan, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter.

He has also ministered individually to Supreme Court justices, ambassadors, governors and 93 of the 100 U.S. senators.

Weaver is committed to seeing revival come to the nation and the world.

He continues his personal ministry to leaders while speaking at major churches throughout the United States, calling churches to pray and work for revival. He has challenged many of the great churches of America to greater dedication to revival.

Weaver is an author with Logos International. He has appeared on The 700 Club, The PTL Club and the 100 Huntley Street program in Canada.

He has shared three times at the world convention of Full Gospel Business Men Fellowship International.

He has received national media exposure by UPI and AP wire services, Newsweek, Rolling Stone and Christianity Today magazines.

His previous ministries have taken him to many diverse groups, from such university campuses as the University of California at Los Angeles and Berkeley to prison ministry at Folsom Prison in California and Nevada state prisons.

Reagan, when he was governor of California, declared Feb. 13, 1971 as Spiritual Revolution Day in honor of Weaver's ministry. According to an Associated Press report, 8,000 young people marched and rallied for Christ on the Capitol steps, one of the first nationally covered events of the "Jesus movement."

In his college years, Weaver was student chaplain to the student leaders of all the junior colleges of California. He directed one of the fastest-growing Youth for Christ programs in the nation.

The public is invited to attend this special Sunday morning service at Briarwood Church.

Missionary returns

(Special photo)

John Stevens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gattis of Pampa, recently returned from a two-year mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He served in the Guatemala Quetzaltenango Mission, a mountainous area of northern Guatemala. Most of the people he worked with were Indian descendants of the Mayans. He not only spoke Spanish but also several Indian languages. Stevens graduated from Pampa High School in 1986. He will resume his college education at Brigham Young University at Provo, Utah.

The Carpenter's House to have revival meetings

Former Pampa minister Mike Benson of Elk City, Okla., will preach in revival meetings Monday through Wednesday at The Carpenter's House, 639 S. Barnes.

Joining Evangelist Benson for the services at 7:30 p.m. nightly will be his wife.

Along with the regular revival services, there will be a puppet ministry for children, featuring Noah and His Critters. Minister Fred C. Palmer said the puppet ministry will be "a ministry of laughter" to entertain and inform the children, with children of the church encouraged to ask their friends to attend.

Palmer said the revival will offer an old-time gospel meeting, great Bible preaching, prayer for needs and special singing.

Benson served as minister of the Calvary Assembly of God in Pampa for nearly six years. Before their service in Pampa, the Bensons had traveled as full-time evangelists for several years.

Upon leaving Pampa, Evangelist Benson served a ministry in Dumas, building a new church and experiencing "a wonderful growth."

For the past two years, the Bensons have served as ministers at First Assembly in Elk City.

The Bensons are involved in gospel singing as well as powerful Bible preaching, Palmer said.

Each service will feature special music as well as the ministry in the Word of God.

Palmer said the church family invites all old friends of the Bensons and the entire community of Pampa "to come and share in this special gospel meeting."

Nursing home ministry honored

In observance of "Week of the Ministry," First Christian Church honored a special ministry of the church at a local nursing home.

Honored in a special portion of the morning service last Sunday were Betty Sloan, Lil Hall, Marjie Rogers, Kim Jones, Mary Ledrick Kneisley, Stan and Doris Friend, and Rosemary Holloway.

Sloan and her staff of volunteers go each Sunday to the Coronado Nursing Home and bring residents to the dining room for a brief devotional and song service conducted by an elder and two deacons from First Christian Church. The Lord's Prayer is recited and everyone is then invited to receive Communion. Those who are unable to come to the dining room are served in their rooms.

This nursing home ministry began on Feb. 20, 1983. Sloan met with residents Ray Wilson, Willard Chapman and Thelma Paris, Sloan's mother, in Wilson's room at the nursing home.

By the next Sunday this group had grown to nine people. Nine people in wheelchairs was more than the room could handle, so they moved to the dining room.

From there the group has grown to as many as 40 nursing home residents attending the worship service. Originally Hazel Wilson played the piano for the service. Later, Viola Bloomingdale took over as pianist. Presently Ruby Vardeman plays the hymns with George Keeton assisting in leading the singing.

In presenting certificates of appreciation to each of the volunteers, Dr. John Tate, pastor of First Christian Church, reminded churchgoers of the two kinds of ministers, the ordained and the unordained. Ordained ministers have been set apart, he said, for full-time Christian service either by the church or the seminary. Unordained ministers have been "set aside" by Jesus Christ, he said.

Both types of ministers have been called to proclaim the "Good News" and do the work of an evangelist, he said, by witnessing to God's great love for all people. Both are equally responsible for the use of their talents and time and energies to service this purpose.

By having this Sunday morning service through the volunteer efforts of Sloan and her assistants, many of the Coronado Nursing Center residents have been able to take Communion on the last Sunday of their lives.

Sloan's length of service has extended the full six years of the service. Hall joined her in 1984, and Rogers began in 1985. Kim Jones served two years from 1986 through 1987. Stan and Doris Friend contributed their time in 1987, along with Mary Ledrick Kneisley, and Rosemary Holloway joined the group in 1988.

Why do we need a parenting program?

In the next 12 months, according to Josh McDowell, leading Christian author and speaker on youth issues, from the book "Raising Positive Kids in a Negative World" by Zig Ziglar -

- *500,000 kids will attempt suicide
- *1,000,000 kids will run away from home
- *275,000 teenage girls will give birth illegitimately
- *418,000 girls under nineteen will have an abortion
- *12,000,000 teens will take some form of narcotics and regularly use drugs
- *3,300,000 teens will experience a serious drinking problem
- *5,000,000 kids will be victims of broken homes
- *4,000,000 kids will be beaten, molested, or otherwise abused by parents.

More than 50 percent of the 21,000,000 teens between the ages of fifteen and nineteen are sexually active. Another 2,000,000 between the ages of thirteen and fourteen are believed to be sexually active.

Sixty percent of all teen marriages result in divorce within the first five years. The annual number of teen pregnancies has doubled since 1973, now totaling 1,100,000. More than one in ten teenage girls become pregnant each year. Two thirds of all teenage pregnancies and one-half of all teenage births are unintended.

Tralee Crisis Center is looking for volunteers for its new parenting program "Positive Parenting with Ease." According to Lendy Woodriddle, program director, volunteers will serve as "nannies" or "mentors" for single parents in a program designed to make parenting easier for both parent and child. After completing the training program, volunteers will be assigned one or two parents to serve as a counselor, provide a telephone support line, and meet with the parents once a week for group sessions.

"Sometimes just 'being there' to listen can make a world of difference to a single parent. Our volunteers will not be criticizing right and wrong ways to handle parent-child relationships, but will be there to offer alternative resources not only to the parent but to the child as well," says Woodriddle.

"The stress of parenting is trying to use 150 year old parenting skills in today's rapidly changing society," states Dauna Wilkerson, director of Tralee Crisis Center. "The long term effects of the program will be making good parents better and stopping child abuse."

Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer in the "Positive Parenting with Ease" program needs to contact Woodriddle at the TCC office at 669-1131 weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Disposing the flag with respect

DEAR ABBY: When I studied civics in high school, I was taught that the proper, respectful way to dispose of an American flag when it became soiled, torn or damaged, and therefore unsuitable for displaying, was to burn it.

Now with the current move to make such an act unconstitutional, I ask you, what am I to do with my flag should it become unsuitable for displaying?

PATRIOTIC AND PERPLEXED
DEAR PATRIOTIC: First, one would have to determine whether the flag burner burned the flag to show contempt or respect.

When a flag becomes unsuitable for displaying, call the local chapter of your American Legion. They collect such flags and dispose of them in a dignified and respectful ceremony.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in defense of the couple who announced their divorce to their friends at their 25th wedding anniversary party. Although "Was There" thought the couple's actions were unbelievable, I think that their actions were kind,

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ON THE BRINK: I am not advocating dissolving marriages, but if you decide to go that route, this seems the most civilized way to do it.

DEAR ABBY: Re the couple who announced their divorce on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary: Bravo! I only wish my parents had the good sense to do the same.

They have plenty of money to go their separate ways and make new lives, but they just stay together — quarreling and unhappy.

Congratulations to the couple who admitted their marriage wasn't working anymore and went on with their lives.

WATCHING THEM WASTE THEIR GOLDEN YEARS IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: This is just a note of thanks for your endeavors and articles with regard to laboratory animal abuse.

I understand that you urged Maryland state legislators to pass a historic bill that would have made Maryland the first state to outlaw blinding and poisoning tests on animals by cosmetic and household product manufacturers.

Abby, please continue your heroic efforts. Those who cannot speak need all the help they can get.

compassionate and mature. Their announcement must have put a damper on the party, but if their marriage could not be reconciled, they did the next best thing for themselves, their family and friends.

It is much nicer if divorcing couples can part as "friends" rather than to go for the jugular. The anger, accusations and pain should not be hashed and rehashed. By making a joint announcement with all of their friends in attendance, they avoided the painful explanation to each friend, as well as the inaccuracies that occur through gossip and the placing of blame. They also gave their children and friends permission to remain friendly with both parties.

Their actions were commendable. May they both find happiness as they each make a new life. I've thought of doing the same thing myself.

Alzheimer's Bowl-A-Thon

The public is invited to participate in a Bowl-A-Thon for Alzheimer's Disease set for Oct. 28 at 6 p.m. at Harvester Lanes.

Priscilla McLearen, president of the Pampa Alzheimer's support group, says that each participant will bowl a three-game series with a plaque going to first, second and third place winners with separate divisions for men, women, and children.

Pledges for the Bowl-A-Thon will be accepted per pen or in a lump sum for all three games. Pledge forms are available by calling McLearen at 665-8259.

National Field Representative Cindy Butler of Austin will be on hand to award plaques to the winners.

Funds raised during the Bowl-A-Thon will go to the National Alzheimer's Association in Illinois and to Texas Tech University for continued research into this disease.

Kennel Club puppy class

The Top O' Texas Kennel Club will sponsor a "Puppy Training" class for dogs 12 weeks to four months of age.

Lynn Ledford, instructor for the class with 20 years dog show experience, says the kindergarten puppy training is informal "sitting and laying" instruction based on sheer bribery but the classes also teach the animals and trainers socialization with other people and pets, common dog sense, techniques for collars and leashes, the psychology of dog training and tips on housebreaking.

The classes are scheduled for four weeks, half an hour each, beginning on Oct. 17 at the Bull Barn. For more information contact 665-0300.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Usually you are a reasonably cooperative person, but today if others don't play by your rules, you might cancel the ball game. You'll be happier if you stay in character. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) After you paint yourself into a corner today you might angrily seek a scapegoat. It's best you don't point the blame at someone else, while the brush is still in your hand.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't let the activity take precedence over the relationship in competitive involvements with friends today. Losing a pal is worse than losing a silly game.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Drive and ambition are admirable traits, provided they are properly applied. On the other hand, selfish motivation today won't be worth the price it costs to gratify them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try not to behave like a know-it-all today, because you may encounter someone who'll make it a point to challenge your smarts. It could result in a humbling experience.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Actions that are materially motivated could produce frustration and dissatisfaction today. At present your security is not guaranteed by more money or possessions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Being free to make your own choices will be of utmost importance to you today, yet you might try to deny this same privilege to a person with whom you're closely associated.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It looks like you might have to contend with some additional responsibilities today. If your frame of mind is resentful or belligerent, it will make them harder than they really are.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you may have to deal with someone socially who has an extremely forceful personality. You could feel challenged by the other and engage in self-defeating one-upmanship.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) People who behave in a superior manner and throw their weight around will be intolerable to you today. However, you may also be guilty of the same offense when dealing with people you deem inferior.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might use anger as a cover-up for a weak defense in your debates with others today. However, if you keep your ego out of the picture, it won't be necessary to use this facade.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) An interesting arrangement might develop today where you'll feel you're the giver and another is the taker. Conversely, the accused might also hold the same view and each could be right.

Deal is done Herschel packs his bags for Minnesota

By MIKE NADEL
AP Sports Writer

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — For the present, the Minnesota Vikings think Herschel Walker is at least 12 times as good as most NFL players. For the future, the Dallas Cowboys think most players are more than one-twelfth as good as Herschel Walker.

"We've improved our future. It's a cornerstone to build from," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said Thursday after he sent Walker to the Vikings for five players and seven draft choices in one of the NFL's all-time megadeals. "The draft picks we got will give us a chance to build for the future and the players we got will enhance our competitiveness in 1989. It was very unique and in everybody's interests."

In the Vikings' interest, of course, was Walker, the All-Pro running back on whom they're counting to put them over the top.

"Depending on how things work out over the next three years, yes, we could have mortgaged our future for the good of the 1989 and 1990 teams," Vikings general manager Mike Lynn said.

"We felt that the last piece of the puzzle, the last spoke on the wheel, was a running back. And not just a running back, but a marquee running back."

"If we don't win the (NFC) Central Division, if we don't get to the Super Bowl while Herschel Walker is a member of the Minnesota Vikings, then we have not made a good trade."

Going to the Cowboys were four Minnesota regulars, even if they weren't always starters: linebackers Jesse Solomon and David Howard, cornerback Ike Holt and running back Darrin Nelson. Rookie defensive end Alex Stewart, who has spent the entire year on the disabled list, was included in the deal.

In addition, the Vikings gave up their first-round draft choice in 1992.

The Cowboys also got six "conditional" draft choices over the next three years — two first-round picks, three second-round choices and one third-round pick.

"We have the right to decide at any time what those conditions are," Jones said. "Everything must be settled over the next three years. It's our call. This is a draft-oriented trade."

Said Lynn: "We're not going to give a detailed breakdown of the conditions. It'll take you until 1993 to figure it out."

When you're the 1 in a 12-for-1 trade, when the man who runs your new organization is saying you're the key to Super Bowl hopes, that sounds like big-time pressure.

"I don't feel any pressure. I don't know whether I'm the answer or not," said Walker, who expected to take part in his first Vikings practice today and to play in his first Vikings game Sunday against the Green Bay Packers. "If we win, that's great. But it takes a team effort. Herschel Walker is just another athlete that has come here to try to help this team win."

Coach Jerry Burns warned that people — including Lynn, his boss — shouldn't put too much pressure on Walker.

"He's a great player," Burns said, "but we have a lot of good players. He wants to fit in and help us win the Super Bowl. He's not responsible for getting us to the Super Bowl, he's just another cog to help us in that direction."

Walker, 27, in his fourth NFL season after three years in the U.S. Football League, was asked if he was worth 12 players.

"It's nice to have a chance to try to be worth it," he said. "I'm going to try my best to make it up to them."

Last year, Walker, who reportedly received more than $1 million in "exit" money from the Cowboys, became only the 10th player in NFL history to gain more than 2,000 yards from scrimmage.

Walker's statistics have fallen off sharply this year, however. He has rushed 81 times for 246 yards — a 3-yard average that is almost 1 1/2 yards less than his career average entering the season.

The Cowboys are 0-5 under first-year coach Jimmy Johnson, who led some of the nation's best passing offenses at the University of Miami. Johnson uses a pass-oriented attack whereas his predecessor, Tom Landry, favored the ground game.

Nelson at first said he might not report to Dallas. But after talking to Nelson, Johnson said: "Darrin was upset, but he's going to be here."

Nelson said the Cowboys got the best of the deal: "We gave up too much. We gave up an awful lot on defense."

But many players who remain with the Vikings feel the trade helped Minnesota.

"I don't think any team is going to be able to concentrate on our passing game anymore," said cornerback Carl Lee, who at one point was rumored to be going to Dallas. "Obviously, you have to respect Herschel Walker."

It was the league's biggest trade since the 1987 three-team deal that sent Eric Dickerson to the Indianapolis Colts, Cornelius Bennett to the Buffalo Bills and Greg Bell, Owen Gill, three first-round draft choices and two second-rounders to the Los Angeles Rams.

Jones used that trade, comparing Dickerson to Walker, to project a sunny future for his team: "Los Angeles did it. Now they're 5-0."

The 6-foot-1, 226-pound Walker is the second "impact" player Lynn has acquired since last season. He traded for linebacker Mike Merriweather in April, giving this year's first-round draft choice to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Lynn said he has been obsessed with building a Super Bowl team since the Vikings went 3-13 under Les Steckel in 1984.

"At that time, when I talked to the team, I told them we were going to do everything we could," he said.

That everything included getting Walker, who has been one of the most ballyhooed athletes of the 1980s.

Minnesota and Dallas discussed a trade for Walker as early as last June — when the Vikings inquired into the availability of quarterback Steve Walsh — but the talks didn't heat up until two weeks ago, Lynn said. A deal was completed last week, but Walker said he wanted to think about it before coming to Minnesota.

Mitchell uncomfortable being focus of attention

By DAVE CARPENTER
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — The case of the missing outfielder has been resolved, to the apparent satisfaction of everyone but Kevin Mitchell himself.

Mitchell was described by Manager Roger Craig on Thursday as being as contrite as "a kid who got caught in the cookie jar" after missing the San Francisco Giants' first World Series workout a day earlier. But Mitchell acted more like a bear that had been attacked by a swarm of crazed bees when he met with the media about his transgression.

"It's too big of a deal — this, all this," he said testily on Thursday, gesturing to the crowd of about 100 reporters and photographers who attended a press conference inside Candlestick Park.

"I tell you, I can't even walk around without something wrong," he said. "I've been to the World Series before, but I've never seen this."

The last time Mitchell appeared in a World Series, however, he was a rookie fill-in for the New York Mets in 1986. This time he comes in as the major-league home run leader with 47.

Craig did disclose one decision of note, however, naming Candy Maldonado his starting right fielder for at least the opening game of the World Series Saturday night in Oakland against the Athletics.

Maldonado, who hit only .217 with nine homers this season, drew a key walk in the pennant-clinching rally in Game 5 of the National League playoffs against the Chicago Cubs on Monday.

"He had a hell of an at-bat the other day to help us win a ballgame," Craig said. "He's had a rough year, but I'm playing a hunch."

Mitchell said he planned to apologize to his teammates for missing practice.

"I was wrong — I missed practice," Mitchell said. "It's no big deal. I've got to pay a fine, and the case is closed."

Craig approved of the proposed apology but said he did not suggest it.

"I think it would be accepted and I think it would be very nice of him to do that," the manager said.

Mitchell, assessed what Craig described as a stiff fine, offered no excuse for his absence except to say that he didn't find out about the workout until 1:45 p.m. Wednesday at home in San Diego, 15 minutes before the workout started.

That conflicted with what hitting coach Dusty Baker had told reporters Wednesday. Baker said he told Mitchell about the workout Tuesday night.

Meanwhile, Giants catcher Terry Kennedy was focusing on Athletics speedster Rickey Henderson.

It hasn't escaped the Giants' attention that Oakland's left fielder had just six hits in 22 plate appearances in the American League playoffs. He won the Most Valuable Player award largely because Toronto pitchers walked him seven times, giving him the chance to steal eight bases and score eight runs.

Kennedy gets a chance to be the show-stopper starting Saturday night, although he says much of the responsibility lies with the Giants' pitchers.

"The odds are pretty much against you from the start" in trying to throw out a runner as good as the Athletics' leadoff hitter, Kennedy said. "The key, and this is obvious, really is to keep him off the bases."

SWC roundup

By The Associated Press

Can the Texas Aggies repeat what they did last year and slow down Houston quarterback Andre Ware?

Ware is the national leader in total offense by 70 yards per game, averaging 439.5 yards per contest. Houston has outscored four opponents 236-24.

But the Aggies beat the Cougars last year in the Astrodome by putting a hard rush on Ware. Arkansas was the only other team to beat Houston in the regular season.

Odds-makers have made eighth-ranked and unbeaten Houston an eight-point favorite over A&M in a 2 p.m. game that could draw 70,000 fans at Kyle Field.

In other games Saturday, seventh-ranked Arkansas was an eight-point favorite over Texas Tech in Lubbock where the Red Raiders ambushed A&M last week 27-24, Baylor tries to bounce back from a 66-10 slaughter by Houston at Southern Methodist in a noon game, Rice and Texas Christian meet at 2 p.m., and Texas was an 18-point underdog in its 84th showdown with Oklahoma at the Cotton Bowl at 2 p.m.

Baylor was listed as a 28-point favorite and Rice was a point pick over TCU.

The Aggies have won 17 consecutive SWC games at Kyle Field. "The home-field advantage should stand for something," said A&M coach R.C. Slocum. "I just hope we can bounce back from our loss to Tech. It was a devastating loss because of the way it happened."

"We desperately need a win in this one. We can't count on getting our victories late and be in a bowl game. You've got to have numbers in the win column."

Jamie Gill's two fourth-period touchdowns beat the Aggies.

SMU was idle last week and will be hosting Baylor in Ownby Stadium for the first time since the 1940s.

Texas Tech has outscored opponents 55-6 in the fourth quarter and hopes to finish strong against the Razorbacks.

However, Arkansas has beaten Tech 14 out of 15 times in Lubbock. Tech's only victory in Lubbock was a 21-16 decision in 1966.

BRISCOE — Kelton closed in on the District 9-1A volleyball championship with a 15-4, 15-5 win over Briscoe Thursday night.

Kelton remains unbeaten (4-0) in league play with two matches remaining. Briscoe dropped to 1-3.

"I was a little worried because we haven't played for a week and a half, but the girls came through and played real well," said Kelton coach Brad Slatton. "We got our serves in and hit the ball real well."

Because of a hip injury to starter Susan Davidson, Slatton relied on freshmen Isabel Lopez, Rosie Taylor, Rene Atherton, Misty Lewis and Jamie Stewart to help the Lady Lions claim the win.

"They did a good job. I'm real proud of them," Slatton said. Kelton, 10-8 overall, hosts Mobeetie at 5:30 p.m. next Thursday night.

Football

The Pampa High School junior varsity football team was defeated by Hereford, 20-8, at Harvester Stadium Thursday evening. The loss leaves the J.V. with an 0-4 record.

The PHS Freshman A football team was shut out, 36-0, by Dumas Thursday at Demon Stadium. The A team trailed 36-0 at halftime, but managed to get back on track in the second half and held Dumas scoreless. Pampa now stands at 2-1 in district and 2-3 overall.

The Freshman B team was also shut out by Dumas, 18-0.

Golf work party

The Pampa Public Golf Association has scheduled a work party for 8:30 a.m. Saturday at the new Municipal Golf Course north of town.

Volunteers are asked to bring gloves and a hammer if available. Painting, carpentry, wood hauling and fence building are all on the schedule for Saturday.

Workers can put in as many hours as they wish.

Swim-A-Thon

Pampa High School swimmer Rhea Hill competes in a Swim-A-Thon Thursday at the Pampa Youth and Community Center to raise money for the upcoming season. Each team member solicited a sponsor for the 5,000-yard event. A sponsor's pledge could be based on each lap the swimmer completed or on the entire Swim-A-Thon. Pampa opens the season Nov. 4 at the Abilene Invitational.

Pampa retains Ryder Cup lead

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

BORGER — The Pampa Harvesters broke even with Borger in low-ball play Thursday afternoon at Huber Golf Course to retain their overall lead in the Panhandle Ryder Cup competition.

Pampa earned 1 1/2 points Thursday by winning the first match, losing the second and halving the third. The Harvesters, who now own a 4-2 advantage over the Bulldogs, need only 2 1/2 points in next week's final to clinch the championship.

Ryan Teague and Mark Wood had to come from behind after the fifteenth hole to finish two-up in their match against Borger's Eric Teague (no relation) and Dusty Green. The Bulldogs went one-up on No. 14, the two teams halved the fifteenth, then Teague and Wood won the last three holes to win the match.

"There was never more than a one-shot difference in that match," said Pampa coach Frank McCullough. "Their (Borger's) home course is definitely an advantage for them. Most home courses are worth about 15 strokes, but I feel like their course is only worth five or ten because it's not that difficult."

Teague and Wood teamed up for a convincing 4-and-2 win over Borger's Teague and Green in last week's alternate shot play at Pampa Country Club Course.

In other action Thursday, Pampa's Matt McDaniel and Jason Harris were never able to recover after losing the first three holes, eventually falling to Borger, 7-and-6.

"When you lose the first three holes, you can have a tendency to get down, especially if you're playing low ball," McCullough said.

Willie Carlisle and J.W. Earp halved their match against Borger. They were down by two with five holes to play, and both had a chance to win the match with birdie putts on No. 18.

"Jay had an eight-foot birdie putt and Willie had a 12- or 14-foot birdie putt," McCullough said. "Jay left his head in the mouth. Another half-turn and it would have fallen in the hole."

A story last week incorrectly reported that the leader would have the home-course advantage for next week's final. Instead, the Harvesters will travel to Borger again next Thursday for head-to-head match play at Huber Golf Course beginning at 3:15 p.m.

"Playing in Borger will be good for us," McCullough said. "We play a district round over there, and the more we play there, the better."

This Saturday, the Harvesters will host triangular-dual play at the Pampa Country Club Course, scheduled to begin at approximately 8:30 a.m. Ten teams will compete, including the four Amarillo schools, Hereford, Plainview, Canyon, Randall, Borger and Pampa.

The girls team will play in a triangular-dual at Phillips Country Club in Borger this Saturday. Tee time is 9 a.m.

Family 'adopts' a monkey to help train it to aid disabled

By JENNY NARKIEWICZ
Beaumont Enterprise

JASPER (AP) — Audra scampers across the couch and coos with delight at a toy that has captured her attention.

"She's just like any other child," said Christi Gates, Audra's "foster mother."

"She gets into everything." But Audra really isn't like "any other child." Any human child, that is. Audra is a capuchin monkey Mrs. Gates and her family have "adopted" and will raise for about the next three years.

When Audra is grown, she will undergo training so she can help a quadriplegic regain some independence.

Audra is part of a program called Helping Hands, which provides simian aides for the disabled and is affiliated with the Boston University School of Medicine.

Audra's future training will include learning to turn lights on and off, turning on televisions or stereos, retrieving books, operating microwaves and toaster ovens, and assisting her future human companion with eating and drinking, all by voice commands.

She will become the hand and legs of her quadriplegic companion and will be giving a wheelchair-bound person some independence.

Mrs. Gates became interested in the Helping Hands program after reading a magazine story about a woman and her monkey companion.

"We're not doing this to have a monkey as a pet," Mrs. Gates said. "She's not our pet. We're raising her as if she was our baby."

"There are very few chances in life where you can really make a difference. After I read the story, my family and I decided we wanted to do this."

M.J. Willard, director of Helping Hands, began training monkeys after befriending a young quadriplegic. She experimented with different kinds of monkeys before settling on the capuchin, commonly called organ-grinder monkeys.

The monkeys at one time were shipped to the United States from Argentina. Now, the monkeys are bred and born in the United States.

Disney World has created a natural habitat for the monkeys specifically for the Helping Hands program, Mrs. Gates said.

Audra was born July 4 and arrived in Southeast Texas on Aug. 28. Mrs. Gates had to give up her full-time job to receive Audra. A family member must be with the monkey 24 hours a day.

'Once you've rearranged your life and house for a monkey, you might as well keep one.'

"When we first applied, I wasn't working, so it wasn't a problem," Mrs. Gates said as she stroked Audra's head. "When they called to tell us our monkey was coming, we decided that I'd work only a couple hours a day so we could have her."

Mrs. Gates says the screening process to become a foster parent is rigorous.

"They make sure the monkeys are going to be taken care of," she said. "As foster parents, we have to humanize and socialize Audra so she'll be able to be trained."

Sponsors such as Disney World have helped the program tremendously, Mrs. Gates said.

"Each monkey has an account," she said. "That account is used for the monkey's socialization and training costs."

An account for Audra has been established and will help the Gates family meet the expense of raising the monkey.

Several area businesses, including Brookshire Brothers, West department store and Wal-Mart, have donated diapers, food and toys for Audra.

Mrs. Gates hopes to find a corporate sponsor for Audra. A corporate sponsor donates $2,300 a year for three years to cover costs of socialization and training.

"Only 20 percent of that money goes to cover the costs of raising Audra," Mrs. Gates said, adding that she has received several donations from Southeast Texans who have heard about her "daughter."

"The rest goes to training," she said. Mrs. Gates is accepting donations and forwarding them to Helping Hands.

As Audra investigated a new-found toy, Mrs. Gates said she and her family aren't looking forward to the day when Audra will leave.

"We know it will be hard," she said. "But we know we're doing something that will help someone else."

"And I imagine when Audra leaves, we'll reapply for another foster baby. Once you've rearranged your life and house for a monkey, you might as well keep one."

To make a donation, make checks payable to Helping Hands with a notation that it is for Audra Gates, and send it in care of Christi Gates, Route Box 14, Jasper, Texas, 75951. Donations are tax-deductible.
