Approximately 120,000 East Germans demonstrate for political reforms Monday night in Leipzig.

East Germans march for more democracy

By GIRARD C. STEICHEN
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — A day after thousands of pro-democracy activists took to the streets in several cities, East Germany's Communist Party today promised an "atmosphere of openness" to discuss critical issues.

The ruling Politburo, facing mounting unrest at home, was scheduled to hold its regular weekly meeting late today amid speculation it could determine the political future of hard-line leader Erich Honecker.

Neues Deutschland, the party newspaper, pointed out in a commentary that in recent days it had dealt with "many critical questions, constructive suggestions and new starting points."

But the paper emphasized the country's communist system will stay firmly in place, and it left out the growing pro-democracy opposition movement from a list of discussion partners about possible reforms.

"Everything should be discussed openly, with the exception of Socialism on German soil," the newspaper cautioned its readers.

Opposition leaders say they are in favor of "democratic socialism," implementing free elections but also preserving many of socialism's benefits, such as guaranteed jobs and free medical care.

Monday's night's march in Leipzig, the largest single protest in the nation's 40-year history, put new pressure on the government to consider reforms.

In other protests Monday night, 10,000 people marched through downtown Dresden and about 3,000 people gathered in an East Berlin church for a pro-democracy vigil, activists said.

West Germany's ARD television network said today that thousands also marched Monday night in Magdeburg, Plauen and Halle.

Honecker, 77, reportedly is under increasing pressure to step down from within the ruling Communist Party.

In Leipzig, protesters on Monday night carried placards demanding freedom of the press and free elections.

Protesters chanted "Power to the young people" and "Erich, lead reforms or go to a retirement home."

There were reports of scuffles when security forces attempted to grab banners away from marchers but no reports of arrests.

Christoph Wonneberger, the pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran Church in Leipzig, told West Germany's ZDF television that more than 120,000 people participated in the three-hour march.

For the first time, East Germany's state-run television promptly reported the protest, saying "tens of thousands of citizens" took part.

On Oct. 7, during a visit to East Berlin for 40th anniversary celebrations, Gorbachev urged Honecker to implement reforms akin to those under way in the Soviet Union, Poland and Hungary.

Honecker's government has steadfastly rejected the need to open up his tightly-controlled society.

But pressure has mounted on the aging hard-line leadership in East Berlin as unrest spreads, and there is a seemingly endless exodus of tens of thousands of refugees.

For days, there have been reports and growing speculation that Honecker's 18-year rule at the head of the Communist Party may be drawing to a close.

On Monday, West Germany's Bild newspaper reported that the dissatisfaction has spread to East Germany's regional Communist leaders.

Firefighters rule boiler blow-out as cause for Central Tire blaze

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa firefighters have ruled that a major blaze Monday morning that destroyed Central Tire Works, 618 E. Frederic, was started when a boiler blew fire out onto tires held on wooden stands in the business.

Fire Chief Robert Young said he had firefighters battling the blaze from 8:38 a.m. until almost 3 p.m., containing it from spreading to a nearby house.

Officials estimate the fire, which left the building and its contents a smoldering heap of rubber and metal, caused at least $60,000 damage.

They said Vernon Maddox, owner of the business, told them he had only $20,000 worth of insurance to cover the fire.

Young said the boiler was used to create steam which, in turn, would be used to recap bald tires.

"The mold that puts the recap on the tire is from steam off this boiler," Young said. "It (was) a gas-fired boiler. He (Maddox) thinks whatever caused the fire to come out (of the boiler) caught wooden racks with tires on them on fire."

Firefighters said the heat from the boiler was enough to ignite the tires quickly. They added that the amount of tires in the business only helped fuel the fire on.

"It was one of those old-time businesses that didn't throw away anything somebody might buy," Young said. "If you were ever in there, you know there were just racks of tires and narrow aisles to walk down."

The fire chief commended the Salvation Army, which brought food and drinks to the firefighters, provided free of charge by McDonald's and Burger King.

"It was greatly appreciated," Young said, "because we had been there quite some time and people were thirsty and hungry."

Firefighters continued to monitor the fire scene throughout the night in case any of the smoldering tires re-ignited a blaze.

At 10:35 p.m. another fire was found at the business. However, it was extinguished in about seven minutes.

Young said it took 13 firefighters to battle the fire, which shot flames hundreds of feet in the air and blanketed the south side of the city with thick black smoke for most of the morning and afternoon.

Houses along Reid and Campbell streets were evacuated due to the smoke, which could have proved hazardous to any one with respiratory problems.

Weather delays shuttle launch

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA today scrubbed the launch of Atlantis and its Galileo probe because of bad weather.

The shuttle had only a 26-minute launch "window," beginning at 12:57 p.m. (11:57 a.m. CDT). Liftoff was called off at 1:18 p.m. because of rain showers about 20 miles away through which the shuttle would pass if it had to make an emergency landing.

NASA said that if it decided to launch the shuttle on Wednesday, liftoff could take place between 12:50 p.m. and 1:17 p.m.

"It appears the local weather we will not cooperate, so we're going to have to scrub," launch director Bob Sieck told the astronauts.

He said shuttle managers would meet later in the day to determine if another launch attempt can be made on Wednesday.

With about 200 armed security guards on alert for anti-nuclear trespassers, the countdown had advanced smoothly to a point nine minutes before launch time.

NASA had only a 26-minute period during which Earth and Jupiter were in proper alignment for a launch. When time ran out, Sieck scrubbed for the day.

The showers were in an area that Atlantis would have to pass through if an engine were lost shortly after liftoff and the astronauts had to attempt an emergency landing on a 15,000-foot runway near the launch pad.

Officials said rain hitting a descending shuttle could severely damage the fragile fiberglass tiles that protect the vehicle from heat during reentry from orbit.

The $1.5 billion Galileo, bound for Jupiter, is the most expensive and sophisticated unmanned spacecraft ever built and is expected to give the best look yet at the mysteries of another planet.

"It is the Rolls-Royce of spacecraft," said Clayne Yeates, one of the mission managers.

The countdown progressed normally as the launch team pumped more than half a million gallons of liquid oxygen and hydrogen into Atlantis' external tanks.

The five astronauts boarded the spacecraft at mid-morning. The mission commander is Donald Williams. The others aboard are Mike McCulley, the pilot, and mission specialists Ellen Baker, Franklin Chang-Diaz and Shannon Lucid.

About 200 guards on foot, in helicopters and boats patrolled the Kennedy Space Center for activists who have said they might try to stop the launch by infiltrating a launch danger zone. The zone covers five miles on either side of a line that extends 30 miles to sea.

Eight demonstrators were arrested for trespassing Monday when they walked through a line of security guards at a space center gate. Another was arrested today when he walked up to a gate and stepped across the space center boundary line.

NASA officials said today there were no signs overnight that protesters tried to infiltrate the launch range.

The activists oppose the launch because Galileo receives electrical power from two generators fueled by nearly 50 pounds of plutonium.

City prepares for prison site team visit

By KAYLA PURSLEY
and BEAR MILLS
Staff Writers

Pampa city officials are crediting a call-in pledge drive conducted Monday morning by radio stations KGRO-KOMX with raising an additional $4,000 in pledges to buy land for a proposed maximum security prison site and broadening the base of public support.

"Yesterday KGRO-KOMX did a simulcast for an hour and took pledges and raised over $4,000 in an hour," said Glen Hackler, assistant to the city manager. "We are going to be able to show them (the Texas Department of Corrections) that hundreds of townspeople are contributing."

"Someone mentioned yesterday that pledges are running from $5 each to $100,000 by a local foundation."

Through this morning a total of $486,595 had been pledged by local businesses, foundations and private citizens.

Officials said the pledges will be called upon in the event the TDC chooses Pampa as the site for a new maximum security prison. The money would then be used to buy land for the TDC's use as agricultural areas or to house prisoners.

TDC officials will tour Pampa on Wednesday morning and visit proposed prison sites.

"The first question the officials ask before selecting a prison site is, 'Is the community behind the idea?'" said Jim Morris, president of the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce. "We are asking those individuals and businesses along the travel route to show their support for the project by displaying an orange ribbon or banner in their yards or businesses."

"We only have one hour to tour the proposed sites, a distance of 38 miles, and we have to make every minute count," Morris explained.

Officials will land at the airport at 10:30 a.m. They will travel down 23rd Street, turn left on Perryton Parkway and drive toward the hospital, turn right and follow Duncan to town, turning on Francis, then Cuyler out to Frederic, and the follow Frederic to the first site.

Robert Knowles, owner of Knowles Cadillac, will have the orange surveyors' ribbons available to the public to display on trees, porches, automobiles, whatever the imagination will allow, officials said. Ribbons can be picked up before 6 p.m. tonight and beginning at 8 a.m. on Wednesday. The ribbons must be in place by 10:30 Wednesday morning.

If time permits, officials will be driven to the proposed site on the south side of town, taking 171 north to highway 273, turning west towards Hobart and up Hobart back to 23rd and to the airport.

All businesses and residential homes on 23rd Street, Hobart and Duncan streets and downtown merchants who support the prison plan are asked to show that support by "tying an orange ribbon" for the officials to see.

Frank Smith, acting city manager, said TDC officials are in Childress today touring its proposed prison site.

"They will be in Dalhart first thing in the morning and then fly to Pampa," Smith said.

He and Hackler said they would spend most of today in meetings with other local pro-prison officials updating the proposal they will present to the TDC and preparing for Wednesday's visit.

Banners will be placed in downtown Pampa and at Perry Lefors Field welcoming the TDC to Pampa.

"We don't want to stage something that will appear artificial," Hackler said. "We want people to do whatever they want to do (to make the TDC aware the community supports a prison)."

He added, "We're going to offer them a package that will be difficult for the state to refuse. We've tried to confirm what is important to them and offer it."

"As (Texas Tech football coach) Spike Dykes said, 'You have to answer the bell.' We have answered it."

Hackler said the more citizens that decorate their businesses and signs with messages supporting the prison and welcoming the TDC to Pampa, the more the TDC officials will be assured this is the place to bring the 800 new jobs and over $16 million in payrolls a new prison will afford a community.

EPA tells city to clear up waste water problems

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa city officials and Operations Management International Inc. (OMI) have been given 30 days by the Environmental Protection Agency to correct problems in the city's waste water treatment plant or face the possibility of fines.

However, Nathan Hopson, director of public works, said most of the problems have been corrected and tests later this week should indicate the city is on the way to total compliance.

Hopson said the city was cited in June by the Texas Water Commission for 10 violations that included exceeding legal limits of Bio-chemical Demand (BOD) and Total Suspended Solids (TSS) as well as an excessive amount of floating solids in the water and excessive foaming in the oxidation ditch.

"It was a combination of excessive rains and somebody must have put some toxics in there that killed the bacteria," Hopson said.

He noted that solid waste is treated by fostering colonies of bacteria which feed on the waste and then turn it into gas.

"There's not really any way to tell where the toxics came from," Hopson said. "But we have the police and everybody else on the lookout for anybody that might be dumping things into manholes."

Hopson said when the toxics killed the "little bugs," they could no longer eat the waste, causing too much of it to reach public streams.

"At our worst in June we were really having problems," Hopson said. "But so far we are in compliance this month."

Copies of correspondence between the TWC, EPA and city indicate that communications regarding correcting the problems may have been hampered by former city manager Jack Chaney.

The correspondence shows that Chaney did not give the agencies the information they were seeking, even though he had it from Kit Rousch, OMI plant manager.

"We did not know Jack had not responded to this," Hopson said. "We only found out when we were in Dallas (at an EPA hearing on the matter) and found out they had not gotten a response."

Hopson said he didn't feel Chaney's failure to respond had threatened any valuable technical assistance from the state or federal government, but that, "They sure wondered why we hadn't responded."

In a letter dated Oct. 16, Hopson informed the EPA that they had not heard from the city because of "a lack of communication, and not (a lack) of action or concern."

He notes that city staff were not informed by Chaney that a report to the EPA should even be filed when he left the city.

Chaney resigned this summer under pressure from the City Commission because of a variety of problems.

He is now reportedly managing an apartment complex in another part of the state.

Hopson said the city is fully cooperating with the TWC and EPA on correcting the problems.

"The process is done by expediting natural means," he said. "We try to create an ideal environment for biological organisms to multiply and feed."

He added that if the solid waste plant is still out of compliance later this week, OMI and the city will immediately work to rectify the problem.

OMI manages the site for the city as part of contract privatization.

Pathologist rules stab wound cause of Pampa woman's death

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

An autopsy Monday ruled the cause of death of Dolie Mae Jackson, 45, who was killed early Monday morning at her home, 1019 S. Clark, was a stab wound directly into the heart with an object believed to be a steak knife.

Dr. Ralph Erdmann, Amarillo pathologist, reported to Pampa officials that Jackson was stabbed twice, with one wound going through a lung and into the heart.

Jackson's line-in boyfriend, Kenneth Wayne Adkism, 33, has been charged in the murder. Bond on Adkism was set at $50,000 by Justice of the Peace Wayne Roberts.

Adkism remained in Gray County Jail through press time today.

Lt. Jess Wallace of the Pampa Police Department said reports that Jackson was stabbed 18 times, which appeared on an Amarillo television news report Monday, were incorrect.

According to the autopsy report, Jackson was stabbed while lying down. Police declined to speculate on whether she was first knocked down by Adkism or had been lying down the entire time.

Police said Jackson's 15-year-old son had heard

Adkism and Jackson arguing violently prior to the stabbing. However, details on the actual attack are somewhat sketchy, they said.

"He (Adkism) isn't talking and she (Jackson) can't talk, so we're just not sure right now," Wallace said.

Asked if drugs might have played any role, directly or indirectly, in the murder, Wallace replied, "At this time, I'd rather not comment on that."

Wallace said police have still not recovered the murder weapon. Adkism reportedly fled the murder scene after stabbing Jackson and then returned after police arrived.

Police said they have no reason to believe the stabbing was in self-defense.

"I imagine he (Adkism) is going to say, 'I meant to stab her, but I didn't mean to kill her,'" Wallace said.

He added that it would be up to the district attorney whether he would pursue the case as a crime of passion or outright murder.

Comer said until he interviewed police who were on the scene, he is unable to comment on what level of charges would be recommended against Adkism.

"We're not ready for the grand jury this Thursday," Comer said. "We don't have another grand jury scheduled, but I would estimate it would be another two to three weeks."

Judge gunned down in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A federal judge was gunned down today as he waited on a Medellin street corner for a ride to work, and an anonymous caller said drug traffickers killed him in retaliation for extraditions to the United States.

Police said Judge Hector Jimenez Rodriguez was shot six times by a passenger on a motorcycle. The gunman got off the motorcycle, walked up to Jimenez and shot him, the Colombian radio chain Caracol quoted witnesses as saying in Medellin, the base of the country's most notorious cocaine cartel.

An anonymous caller to Caracol in Medellin said the judge was slain by "The Extraditables," a group of suspected drug traffickers being hunted for extradition to the United States.

The government of President

Virgilio Barco has extradited four Colombians to the United States, including three last Saturday, since a crackdown on drug trafficking began Aug. 19.

"The Extraditables" said in a communique soon after the crackdown began that they would kill 10 judges for every Colombian extradited. Jimenez was the first judge killed since the drug sweep started. It was not immediately known if Jimenez had been involved in any recent extradition cases.

There are varying figures on the number of judges that have been killed in Colombia, but the Justice Ministry says that about 50 judges and 170 judicial employees have been killed since 1982.

The Association of Judicial Employees says 1,600 of Colombia's 5,000 judges have been threatened with death in the last 12 months. Meanwhile, the newspaper Vanguardia Liberal of Bucaramanga, heavily damaged by a bomb on Monday, hit the streets with a 16-page edition today. The newspaper had joined in a condemnation of cocaine barons.

There had been doubts that Vanguardia Liberal would be able to publish today. The paper usually publishes 24 pages each day. Four employees of the newspaper were killed when a car bomb wrecked its building in northeastern Colombia.

The newspaper's publisher blamed drug traffickers for the bombing in Bucaramanga, a city of 400,000 people 175 miles north of Bogota.

Four journalists were assassinated by unidentified gunmen last week in the cities of Medellin and Monterria.

House-Senate panel OK airliner smoking ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — Smoking foes are proclaiming victory following House-Senate negotiators' vote to ban smoking on all continental U.S. airline routes and on many flights to and from Hawaii and Alaska.

The restrictions, which must be approved by the House and Senate before being sent to President Bush, would cover practically all of the 16,000 airline flights scheduled in the United States each day.

By the estimate of tobacco industry lobbyist Charlie Whitley, the rules would allow smoking on about 55 flights daily. Lobbyist Jo Ellen Deutsch of the Association of Flight Attendants said she thought smoking would be permitted on fewer than 20 flights a day.

"This isn't even a compromise," said Nancy Halpern, lobbyist for the American Cancer Society, one of many health groups that fought to expand current anti-smoking rules. "We're using the word compromise basically for the benefit of the other side."

"With few exceptions, every airline passenger in America now can look forward to smoke-free travel," said Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., who helped write the measure.

Durbin and Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., who championed an airline smoking ban in the Senate, predicted the legislation would be approved by Congress.

"I don't think we'll have a bit of a problem," Lautenberg said.

The tobacco industry was battered in Congress this year when on Aug. 2, the House voted 259-169 to make permanent the current smoking ban on flights of two hours or less.

On Sept. 14, the Senate voted 77-21 against cigarette-state lawmakers' effort to prevent adoption of even stricter rules. The Senate then passed a permanent ban on all flights by a voice vote. With those defeats behind them, tobacco interests had to accept what they could get.

Whitley, a former Democratic congressman from North Carolina, said of the adopted language, "As much as it preserves, we'll take that."

Flights from the West Coast to Hawaii and Alaska are scheduled for less than six hours and would be covered by the ban, Lautenberg and others said.

Police investigate four shooting deaths in El Paso

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Police today were investigating the failed business partnership of a police detective and a gunman who was killed after shooting the officer and another man to death and injuring another man.

Police also are investigating the death of the gunman's wife, whose body police found in the couple's home when they went to tell the woman her husband had died.

Detective Norman Montion, 42, died at R.E. Thomason General Hospital of gunshot wounds suffered in the shootout with Richard Stratton, 47, in the office of Police Officer Promotions Inc. shortly before 1 p.m.

The private company raises funds for the El Paso Municipal Police Officer's Association and the sheriff's association, two law enforcement unions.

Sergio Munoz, a company employee who tried to wrestle Stratton to the ground during the shootout, died late Monday at R.E. Thomason after more than five hours of surgery.

John Ely, a POP employee, was treated and released.

Police were investigating witnesses' statements that Stratton and Montion had a falling out over money and Montion's buyout of Stratton's share of the business.

Police Chief John Scagno said Stratton spent Monday morning in a bar where he brandished his weapon in front of patrons before heading to the office. Police believe he had already shot Mrs. Stratton by that time.

"Apparently Detective Montion stopped by for whatever reason to check on the business and Stratton went over, when Stratton went over Detective Montion was sitting behind the desk," Scagno said. "Stratton walked up and fired, we believe three rounds at Montion. Detective Montion went down to the ground."

Stratton then shot Ely and Munoz, Scagno said.

Police believe Stratton was going to fire at the fallen Montion again when the detective pulled his .38-caliber pistol and fired six shots, hitting Stratton at least four times.

Several hours later, police discovered the body of Elva Corona

John Ely, left, talks to his friends Monday afternoon after he was shot in the arm during a gun battle in El Paso between a man and his business partner.

Stratton, Stratton's wife, at about 5 p.m. in a bedroom, Lt. Paul Saucedo said. Police said Mrs. Stratton, who was born in 1953, was killed sometime between midnight and noon.

"Once we arrived at that residence we found that the house was locked and his daughter was there," Saucedo said.

Police said they kicked in a bedroom door and found Mrs. Stratton dead. Police said they would not know the exact time of her death until they receive autopsy results.

Stratton left behind two brief notes apologizing to family members for what he was about to do, Saucedo said.

Police said the Strattons had a family outing at 9:30 p.m. and had an argument in their home about 11:30 p.m.

"That is the last time that we know that Mrs. Stratton was alive," Saucedo said.

Mark St. John, who said he has worked with Stratton about a week, said Stratton had filed a lawsuit against the promotion business about a year ago, claiming that Montion owed him money.

"He was mad. He was saying those SOB's owe me money ... but he never made no threats or nothing like that," St. John said.

St. John said he had talked with Stratton shortly before noon and noticed he had been drinking.

Lt. Eddie Cavazos, president of the El Paso Police Association, said the dispute was not over money.

"They had a disagreement over management of the company," Cavazos said. "Stratton was bought out by Montion and Stratton left town. He later came back to get into the fund-raising business."

"Richard (Stratton) was just a very volatile person," Saucedo said.

The employees had received threatening phone calls, some which were recorded, Steve Ibarra told an El Paso television station. "But no one believed this would ever happen," he said.

Stratton was married with two children, Scagno said.

Chuck Heinrich was the last El Paso officer to die in the line of duty. He died Aug. 29, 1985, in a New Mexico hospital, 2 1/2 years after he was shot in the head while attempting to question a man in central El Paso. He never regained consciousness.

Although Montion was on duty at the time, police said they did not know why he had stopped by his business.

Plea bargain may free man who killed niece

HOUSTON (AP) — A man sentenced to death twice for killing his 10-year-old niece may be freed within a few weeks because he decided to accept a plea bargain rather than face a third capital murder trial in the case, his attorney says.

John Charles Zimmerman Jr., 41, pleaded guilty Monday to murder in the March 24, 1977, slaying as part of a plea bargain that included a 45-year prison term, said his attorney Wes Hocker.

Hocker, who had served as jury foreman in Zimmerman's first trial in 1977, said the kidnapping and aggravated rape charges were dropped as part of the agreement.

"I talked to him about it (the plea bargain offer) Friday and he said he wanted to take the deal," Hocker said. "I felt we could have prevailed ultimately, but he'll get out quicker by taking the 45 years."

Zimmerman has been in the Harris County Jail for nearly a year awaiting his third trial. He will be transferred back to the Texas Department of Corrections before a decision is made on any release date, Hocker said.

The attorney said he believed that Zimmerman, who was sent to the TDC in December 1977, has served enough time to be paroled on the 45-year sentence.

"I think it'll be about two to three weeks before he gets out," Hocker said.

TDC spokesman Charles Brown said although Zimmerman may be eligible to be considered for parole, he added it will be up to the Texas Board of Pardons and Parole to make that decision.

"They'll have to review his records first," Hocker said.

Zimmerman had written to State District Judge Woody Densen asking that he appoint Hocker as his attorney. Hocker said Zimmerman approached him through his current law partner, Robert Morrow, who worked with one of Zimmerman's principal attorneys in the second trial in 1979.

The inmate's third trial was the result of a Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruling in April 1988 that overturned his previous conviction because the trial judge improperly allowed into evidence letters written by Zimmerman to his wife, Sherry, after he was in custody.

'Zimmerman made both oral and written confessions to the crime but later alleged he was forced to make the confessions ... by Jacinto City police.'

The letters, in which Zimmerman admitted killing his niece, wound up in his mother-in-law's hands. She sent them to another daughter, the victim's mother, who forwarded the material to investigators.

In ordering the new trial, the court ruled that the letters were confidential communication between husband and wife and that their introduction as evidence violated a provision of the law that one spouse cannot give adverse testimony against another.

According to previous court testimony, Zimmerman took Ramona Ann Abner from the Jacinto City Elementary School where she was a third-grader on the day of the killing, telling a teacher's aide there was a family emergency.

The next day, Zimmerman led police to the girl's body in an unfinished garage at a Houston townhome where he had worked. A 10-inch butcher knife also was found where the Marion, Ind., native said he had thrown it.

A medical examiner ruled that the girl, who was nearly decapitated, died from cuts and stab wounds to the chest and back, and that she had been raped before she died.

Ken Sparks, who prosecuted Zimmerman's two trials, said Zimmerman would have been executed by now had it not been for a confession coerced by Allan R. Jamail, the former Jacinto City police chief of the Houston-area town.

Zimmerman made both oral and written confessions to the crime but later alleged he was forced to make the confessions after being slapped, hit and shocked with a cattle prod by Jacinto City police.

A police dispatcher testified she typed Zimmerman's confession and that Jamail told him everything to say. She also said she saw an officer hit Zimmerman with a slapjack.

The Jacinto City Council fired Jamail, who later was elected mayor, and a federal grand jury indicted him and two other officers on charges they abused two prisoners questioned in the Abner case. All, however, were acquitted in 1979.

Hurricane Jerry cleanup begins

By SUE FAHLGREN
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON (AP) — The cleanup continued across this island city where Hurricane Jerry wielded a brief but deadly blow, causing three deaths and as much as $8.25 million in damages.

As remnants from the weak hurricane slipped out of Texas and into Louisiana and Arkansas on Monday, the city of about 62,000 quickly returned to normal Monday.

Galveston city crews picked up downed power lines and trees, and only one school was closed because it had a power failure.

Also on Monday, the body of Coast Guardsman Robert Perryman, 19, of Little Rock, Ark., was discovered on the east end of the island near the seawall. He was believed to have been with a man and a child whose bodies were found Sunday night a few hours after hurricane swept ashore. Perryman was stationed as Galveston.

Authorities believe all three were riding in a truck when Jerry's high winds pushed the vehicle over the seawall.

The other two victims were identified as Dan W. Lindley, 26, of Portland, and his 2-year-old daughter, Salina, police said. Lindley was a Coast Guardsman stationed at Galveston. The pickup truck was retrieved Monday.

"We're very sorry we had any loss of lives from the storm," Mayor Jan Coggeshall said. "We feel the storm battered and probably bruised us. We've had much more serious storms. But for the people who did have damage, it was very serious for them."

Jerry, a relatively small hurricane, grew unexpectedly from a tropical storm to a hurricane early Sunday. It roared ashore later that night.

As it swept across Galveston Island, Jerry toppled trees and power lines, tore roofs and shattered windows in cars and residences. The hurricane also spawned a half-dozen tornadoes in the area, but the damage was generally confined to roofs and power lines.

Trump withdraws AMR takeover bid

DALLAS (AP) — Opponents of billionaire developer Donald Trump's attempt takeover of American Airlines parent AMR Corp. have approved a plan that would discourage future buyout bids.

Union leaders and several congressmen have criticized Trump's takeover proposal, saying it would saddle AMR with such a heavy debt it would be forced to sell assets and cut corners on safety.

Trump withdrew his $7 billion bid for AMR Corp. Monday, saying stock market turmoil stemming partly from another airline buyout had forced him to re-evaluate his plans.

Before Trump announced his withdrawal, opponents testified before a House subcommittee in support of a bill that would give the Transportation Department up to 50 days to block the takeover of at least 15 percent of the voting stock of a major air carrier.

The subcommittee, chaired by Rep. James Oberstar, D-Minn., approved the bill, which was to be taken up Wednesday by the full House Public Works and Transportation Committee.

A Senate committee already has approved a bill with similar provisions, and many, including Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, had indicated they would amend the bill to make it cover Trump's AMR plans.

Trump sent a letter to Oberstar on Monday accusing AMR management of "obvious self-interest" in supporting the legislation. Trump also said attempts to rush legislation through Congress "cannot be in the interest of anyone but AMR executives."

But Bentsen said, "I think Mr. Trump has elected the wisest course. Taking a solid airline like American and piling it up with $6.5 billion worth of debt was ill-advised from the start. I hope Trump's withdrawal is a full-scale retreat."

AMR stock plunged by 22.4 percent in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange following word that Trump was withdrawing his $120 a share offer, finishing down $22.12 1/2 a share at $76.50.

Trump's announcement came less than two weeks after the equally stunning disclosure that he was making a bid for AMR, owner of the nation's biggest airline.

In a two-paragraph letter to AMR, Trump said, "I am currently reviewing all my options with respect to AMR, including making another offer at a lower price, increasing my existing position in AMR, selling my AMR stock or taking other actions that I may deem appropriate. I intend to closely monitor development."

Trump Organization officials said there would be no further comment beyond the letter.

AMR greeted the news with the same silence it has maintained since it revealed Trump's $120-per-share proposal on Oct. 5.

But baggage and freight handlers said they would continue to support the current management and oppose Trump.

Trump's has a history of buying shares of companies, making takeover noises and later selling his stock on the subsequent speculation-related runup, or when a third party bidder emerged.

Monday's slide in AMR stock continued a plunge that began last Friday, when news that a management-employee group was unable to obtain financing for its planned $6.75 billion buyout of UAL Corp., parent company of United Airlines, triggered the second-worst drop in stock market history.

SHOOTING PAINS

If you're a victim of sciatica, you know what "shooting pains" are all about. The sometimes excruciating pain of sciatica frequently affects the hip, thigh and back of the leg. The ankle and foot are sometimes affected, too. But that's not where the problem is.

The sciatic nerve, the largest nerve in the body, extends from the lower spine to the back of the thigh and knee. Then it divides. One nerve goes down the front of the lower leg, and other goes down the back of the leg.

It's the inflammation of the sciatic nerve that causes the pain. This can be triggered by an irritated nerve root. What causes the irritation? The cause may be traced to a misalignment of the spinal column that's putting abnormal pressure on the roots of the sciatic nerves as they pass between the vertebrae.

Through x-rays and other procedures the doctor of chiropractic can locate the misaligned vertebrae. Using a gentle adjustment, he can align it properly again to help eliminate the cause and the pain.

Not a celebration, but a eulogy it was

This month marks the 40th anniversary of the imposition of communism on China's people. In October 1949 the forces of Chairman Mao Tse-Tung, supported by Josef Stalin's Soviet Union, defeated the Nationalist Chinese forces.

But the defeat was only a military one. The Nationalist Chinese, led by Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, fled to Taiwan. Over the next decades the contrast between the countries could not have been more pronounced. On Taiwan, the Nationalist established a largely free country. Chiang adopted a free market, and during the 1960s and 1970s Taiwan blossomed and prospered, becoming one of the world's most active trading nations.

Meanwhile, Mainland China suffered under the most brutal and homicidal regime the world has seen. Mao murdered some 50 million to 100 million of his own people (depending on which estimate one takes) — millions through direct execution, millions of others through starvation from such follies as the "Hundred Flowers Campaign," the "Great Leap to Communism" and the "Cultural Revolution."

Finally, in 1976, Mao died. After a brief power struggle, a regime led by current dictator Deng Xiaoping rose to power. In 1978 Deng instituted reforms that effectively repealed Mao's most communistic policies, and instituted a quasi-free market, particularly in agriculture. He also ended the worse Maoist repressions. But in a regression, Deng did institute a policy (deeply loathed by the Chinese people) that mandates "one child" per family, imposed by forced abortions.

And this year Deng reverted to Maoist repression. Tens of thousands of Chinese students held protests in Tiananmen Square in Beijing for months. In June Deng called out the troops and massacred hundreds, possibly thousands, of students.

Speaking on the achievements of 40 years of communism, Communist Party boss Jiang Zemin, Deng's hand-picked successor, said "that the socialist system will replace capitalism is the true trend of history. We are fully confident in the communist future of the human race."

It's doubtful if any of the 10,000 people who heard Jiang in the Great Hall of the People believed him. His own grim countenance indicated that maybe he has his own doubts. After all, Deng's 11 years of market reforms effectively repudiated communism and socialism, which is also collapsing in Eastern Europe and is shaky even in the communist fatherland, the Soviet Union.

Jiang insisted that Deng's 1978 reforms would stay, though he attacked "an excessive disparity" between those in China getting wealthy on private businesses, and those still working in government-run industries. The very admission indicates that, contrary to his rhetoric, socialism is finished: Private Chinese businessmen and workers are getting wealthy because they deliver the goods; socialist workers remain impoverished because they don't. Jiang's speech was not a celebration of 40 years of Chinese socialism, but a eulogy for its demise.

Faulty idea fleeces the young

Government, it was once said, is a device by which everyone tries to live off everyone else. The shattering discovery that this effort is impossible is what led to the swift death of the catastrophic health care program for the elderly.

The program looks like a good bet to be the first major reversal in the expansion of the welfare state. It's also one of the few social welfare undertakings financed by its beneficiaries. The coincidence is no accident.

The whole point of government programs, after all, is to get something for nothing. The senior citizens who deluged Capitol Hill with protests against this measure had found that to get something, they were expected to give something, which was the very farthest thing from their minds.

The program, which covered large expenses for hospital stays and doctor care, lacked the coverage for long-term care that many older people want. But the real opposition didn't stem from this inadequacy.

A spokesperson for the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, which opposes the measure, explains with unintended candor, "We've always supported the benefits. What we haven't supported is the financing." They and others want the elderly to get the coverage and someone else to get the bill.

The plan was financed by two levies: a $4 a month charge on all Medicare recipients, and a 15 percent income tax surcharge on the most affluent 40 percent or so. Unlike past Social Security programs, this one placed no new tax on working people. It obliged those covered to bear the expense. Many did people found themselves paying more for less coverage than under their old private insurance.

This, they felt, was horrendously unfair — making retirees pay so much for something that gave them so little in benefits. The only fair policy, they concluded, is to have the cost paid by people who get no benefit at all, namely working taxpayers.

This approach mirrors the entire history of Social Security and Medicare. Beneficiaries universally insist that they've paid for their benefits by contributing to the trust funds during their working lives, and that they are getting back no more than they're owed. In fact, most of today's retirees get a return on their investment that would make Michael Milken blush.

Michael Boskin, now chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, noted in a 1986 book that the average person retiring before 1978 "paid" for only 14 percent of his benefits, after inflation and interest are accounted for. A 1982 retiree could expect to get nearly three times as much as he had contributed. Even someone retiring in 1992 will get 65 percent more than he "earned."

Medicare tells the same tale. The Congressional Budget Office says the average person retiring in 1989 will reap a net subsidy of $1,500 a year in medical benefits (this not counting the catastrophic program). The typical retiree's past contributions to the hospital trust fund are less than a third of what he gets back. Even the highest earners, who get the worst deal, get a 40 percent subsidy.

It might be reasonable to confiscate truckloads of currency from today's workers to help today's retirees if today's workers could anticipate a similar windfall when they grow old. In fact, Social Security expert Peter Ferrara says that "for most of these young workers, the real rate of return promised by Social Security is 1 percent or less, and for many it is zero or even negative." A lot of them would see their investment grow just as fast in a Sealy Posturepedic.

The reason for the disparity between the generations is that today's older Americans spent much of their working lives paying low payroll taxes. It was conveniently late in their careers, or after their retirement, that taxes suddenly skyrocketed to pay for a vast expansion of benefits.

These retirees have profited from a mammoth pyramid scheme that rewards the early players by skinning the later ones. The first Social Security recipient, who had paid $44 in payroll taxes and eventually got more than $20,000 in payments, is different from other retirees only in degree.

The catastrophic care measure was a faulty idea with one prominent virtue: It didn't transfer additional mountains of cash from younger Americans to older ones. It recognized that current workers, who have seen the maximum payroll tax load grow fivefold in the last 15 years, are not all tending money-free seen orchards on the side.

That recognition was long overdue and ought to be the basis of any new program to reduce the medical bills of the elderly. Younger Americans can't do much about the fleecing they're now getting from Social Security, but they're certainly justified in saying enough is enough.

No hockey in Atlanta, please

A friend called me Tuesday and invited me to go to a hockey game.

"Where is the game?" I asked him.

There is no hockey team in Atlanta anymore. There used to be a team, the Flames, but it moved to Nova Scotia or Cleveland or Saskatchewan, I can't remember which.

"The game's not in Nova Scotia or Cleveland or Saskatchewan?" I asked my friend. "I don't want to go to any of those places."

"No," he said. "There's a hockey game right here in Atlanta tonight."

He went on and explained that the Boston Bruins and the Philadelphia Flyers were playing an exhibition hockey game at the Omni, and his boss had given him two tickets and told him to go.

I'm not certain what my friend did wrong to deserve such treatment from his boss, but it must have been pretty bad.

I figured the least I could do was go with him and help him get through the ordeal.

I had attended a few hockey games back when Atlanta had its own team. I had heard of hockey, of course, and knew it was popular in places where it got so cold people suffered brain damage and paid to go to hockey games, but that was the extent of my knowledge.

I can report now, nothing much has changed about hockey since I was introduced to it. It's the same old dull stuff that it was years ago.

The players still wear skates and play the game on ice, and the ball they use is flat and they call it a "puck," which is a stupid name for a ball, even if it is flat.

The idea is to skate back and forth on the ice for hours attempting to put the puck in an opponent's goal.

That doesn't occur often, however, and most of the game involves the players simply skating back and forth, which is interesting for about 11 seconds.

And when somebody does put a puck into a goal, the puck is so small you never actually see the entry.

That's why somebody turns on a red light when a goal is scored, so everybody will know it's time to either stand up and cheer or feel depressed, depending on which side you're on.

Then, there's fighting.

What happens is that when one of the hockey players gets bored skating back and forth, he starts a fight.

But the fight isn't all that interesting either, because the players involved put down their sticks and grab one another and do more dancing and hugging than fighting.

If the players would attempt to beat each other over the heads with their sticks, it would improve hockey fighting a great deal — that, or allow them to carry knives.

There were 14,000 people at the game. I'm not certain how many of them came on their own accord, and how many were being punished by their bosses, as in the case of my friend, but the attendance was high enough that the sports pages speculated next day on whether or not Atlanta might get its own hockey team again.

I hope not. If we had a hockey team again, my boss could get mad at me and assign me the hockey beat, and I'd have to watch hockey games until I became brain-damaged, too.

There's another reason I hope nobody brings hockey back to Atlanta. We've already got Braves baseball and Falcons football. Isn't that enough agony for one city?

TV ministries should be accountable

By SARAH OVERSTREET

If they haul Jim Bakker off to jail and keep him there for the full 120 years he could earn, I'm afraid there's a part of me that still won't quite believe he did it.

I know that sounds foolish. It sounds ridiculous to me as I say it. I've read all the trial testimony about the outrageously opulent lifestyle the Bakkers led while over-selling "lifetime partnerships" to Heritage USA, PTL's time-share religious retreat in North Carolina. I've partners who bought time-shares and then showed up to find that there was no room for them.

I know all about Jessica Hahn; and about the hundreds of PTL employees who were laid off at Christmas the same year Bakker received $250,000 in bonuses.

And I can't say I didn't know that he was blabbering little crybaby a long time ago. I've watched the PTL Club off and on for years, both for entertainment and out of fascination. I watched him cry and whine about mean old Satan trying to destroy his ministry when the FCC investigated him a few years ago. And I've seen him plead for more dollars so he could throw Beelzebub out of the electronic kingdom.

But, darn it, this stuff is my ethnic heritage, and it's hard to turn off just like that. I was raised with a blood-deep belief in the word of these silly men on TV who claim to be speaking for God.

I grew up in Midwestern fundamentalist churches where we were always being dragged off to listen to some odd-looking, odd-sounding man who said things that didn't seem to make a lick of sense. We were assured that the guy was in direct communication with God and that we weren't if we didn't agree.

When we weren't hearing it in church, we were seeing and hearing it on TV. I watched Oral Roberts back when it was easy to convince viewers to send money — long before he had to resort to tales of seeing 900-foot Jesuses and threats that God was going to call him to glory if we didn't pay up.

Another part of the Bakker phenomenon has to do with the credibility that is lent by the television image. On television, if a person can buy enough air time and use that air time to act like good ole boy, what eventually stands out most in most people's minds is that he is a good ole boy.

No matter what is said about Ronald Reagan in years to come, people who formed their opinions of him based solely on his television appearances will remember only a kindly man who seemed resolute in crisis and sure of his decisions. Years of watching Jim Bakker goo and giggle and hug Uncle Henry have stamped an image in many viewers' brains of a rather harmless, well-meaning (if simple) man.

So when Bakker came along in the '70s, watching him was a little like watching TV sitcoms with canned laughter. We knew there was something unreal and vaguely annoying about what we were seeing, but we were so used to it that it didn't seem so bad.

So even if we put Jim Bakker in jail, I'm not too optimistic that we'll save much money for the gullible religious viewer/contributor during my lifetime. We were brought up to trust these people, and to trust television. The patterns are too ingrained.

A recent study by the North American Securities Administrators Association and the council of Better Business Bureaus revealed that 15,000 believers have been fleeced out of $450 million by "born-again" hucksters since 1985.

As more preachers are brought to justice for fraud, and as others such as Oral Roberts and Jimmy Swaggart are caught in the midst of their tricks, the next generation will have a better chance of seeing them for what they are. Until that happens, the government owes it to the innocent to hold these ministries to the same accountability rules as any other business.

Dow Jones index leaps 88 points

By PETER COY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market investors are groping for stable ground after two of the wildest days on Wall Street since the Crash of 1987.

Analysts said the market still might have some surprises in store after the Dow Jones industrial average of 30 stocks plummeted 190 points on Friday and leaped 88 points on Monday.

"The chances are pretty good that we'll see a brief lower low" than Monday's bottom before the bull market resumes, said Bert Dohmen, president of Wellington Financial Corp., an investment management firm in Honolulu.

The Dow fell about 63 points to about 2,505 in the first hour Monday before rebounding to finish with a gain of 88.12 points, or 3.4 percent, at 2,657.38. The rise wiped out nearly half the losses suffered Friday.

It was the fourth-biggest point rise on record, although it did not rank among the top percentage gainers. Volume totaled 416.29 million shares, also the fourth largest in history, exceeded only by the volatile period of Oct. 19-21, 1987.

Monday's rally was concentrated in blue-chip stocks, which benefited from a "flight to quality" among nervous investors while many smaller issues continued to lose ground.

Thomas Bradley, center, American Airlines stock specialist, yells orders on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange Monday.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by a 5-to-4 margin on the New York Stock Exchange. Indexes of the American Stock Exchange and over-the-counter stocks fell.

Friday's plunge had raised fears of a repeat of Oct. 19, 1987, when a Friday decline turned into a Monday rout that knocked a record 508 points off the Dow average. That did not turn out to be the case.

Stocks held up despite a steep decline in the U.S. bond market and weakness in foreign stock markets.

Stock indexes on Monday fell 1.8 percent in Tokyo, 3.2 percent in London and a steep 12.8 percent in Frankfurt, West Germany, where one trader described trading as a "blood bath."

Today, the Nikkei Stock Average closed at 34,996.08, up 527.39 points, on the Tokyo Stock Exchange. It was the second-largest rise in the key index this year.

The dollar closed at 142.25 yen on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market today, up 1.50 yen from Monday's close.

Traders said the stock market benefited from the experience gained in the 1987 crash.

The New York Stock Exchange managed to handle the heavy volume because of a big investment in technology made after Black Monday 1987.

In addition, traders were soothed by a promise during the weekend by the Federal Reserve to supply fresh money to the financial system if necessary to make sure banks kept loans flowing to traders who lost money.

It turned out that little Fed action was necessary. As a precaution, the central bank injected about $2 billion into the financial system on a day when it ordinarily would have drained reserves.

Turmoil continued in the airline sector. Donald Trump announced he was withdrawing his $7 billion bid for AMR Corp., parent of American Airlines, after the company's stock had fallen.

He said he would consider a new offer at a lower price.

It was a failure to obtain financing for an employee-management buyout of United Airlines parent UAL Corp. that sparked Friday's plunge.

A spokesman for British Airways, which is backing the buyout group, said the group planned to pursue a takeover, although the terms of the deal were under review.

Bush prepares veto for abortion funding

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is prepared to veto a bill allowing federally financed abortions in cases of rape and incest, now that his spokesman says the White House is giving up efforts to find a compromise.

The White House abandoned the bid for a compromise after Chief of Staff John Sununu met for a second day Monday with leading anti-abortion congressmen.

"We have made every effort ... and have decided basically there is not" any possibility to find common ground, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

"It's our judgment at this time that no one has been able to provide a convincing reason for the president to change his position" opposing such funds, he said. "So the president will not change his position."

Bush earlier had threatened to veto legislation expanding current law, but last week he said he was seeking "room for flexibility" to avert a veto.

"I'm not looking for any conflict over this," he said Friday. "I'm not going to change my position any. But let's see how those negotiations come out."

Congressional Democratic leaders have already conceded they do not have enough votes to override a veto of the measure, which has already passed the House.

The efforts to reach a compromise were never given much of a chance by abortion rights supporters, who won a surprise victory last week in the House and expressed no willingness to yield their position.

Fitzwater acknowledged as much after Sununu met with Reps. Vin Weber, R-Minn., Christopher Smith, R-N.J., and Henry Hyde, R-Ill., just as he did on Friday.

"I don't think really there was ever much opportunity to get close," Fitzwater said.

He said "senior advisers" to the president "have recommended a veto."

Abortion rights supporters warned that a veto will hurt the Republican party in the context of what some believe is a changing political climate on the issue.

"If he vetoes it, it hurts him," Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., said earlier Monday. "It hurts our party. It hurts our candidates."

Packwood said a veto could particularly damage GOP candidates for governor in Virginia and New Jersey, two states with races this fall in which the abortion issue has been successfully used by Democrats who back abortion rights against anti-abortion Republicans.

"He's misjudged badly the sentiment of the public on the issue of choice," Kate Michelman, head of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said earlier Monday.

The language dropping a 10-year-old ban on the use of federal money for abortions by poor women in cases of rape and incest is included in a $156.7 billion appropriations bill for the labor and health and human services departments.

Current law allows Medicaid abortions only when the mother's life is in danger.

The bill next goes to the Senate for agreement on a separate provision.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said he did not know when the bill would come to the floor.

Cavazos gets message: Send more money

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's education secretary is in East Harlem to hail that struggling district for allowing parents wide choice in the schools their kids can attend. He got back a bitter message: Praise is nice, but send money.

Several hundred parents, educators and community activists met with U.S. Education Secretary Lauro F. Cavazos on Monday night in the auditorium of Intermediate School 117.

The school's district ranked last in pupil performance in the city 17 years ago but gained national recognition by replacing overcrowded, failing schools with 52 smaller magnet schools for parents to choose from.

"You have right here one of the best examples of choice in the United States," Cavazos told the gathering, the first event in a two-day regional meeting that the Bush administration hopes will help spread the idea of choice as a reform measure.

The sessions were to continue today with speeches by Cavazos and New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean and workshops on how choice operates elsewhere in the country.

President Bush and others believe that if parents had more options, the resulting competition would compel schools everywhere to improve. Bush has called choice "the single most promising idea" in education today.

But parent after parent during Monday night's 2 1/2-hour forum said schools generally, and in their district in particular, were short-changed by the federal, state and city governments.

"I don't want to read his lips. I don't want to see a thousand lights. What we need is money," said Pat Bradford, a Newark, N.J., parent.

Dolores Quintero, whose 10-year-old son attends school in the East Harlem district and who was homeless for 15 months, said: "If I could learn to stretch my dollars when I was homeless, then you in the government ought to be able to figure it out. In the name of Jesus, kick up the money."

Cavazos, in brief remarks at the close of the session, said that "the funding issue will continue to be a major, major discussion."

Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and Arkansas already have adopted statewide "open enrollment" plans giving parents wide discretion in choosing schools even outside their districts.

Scores of local districts around the country have for years offered magnet and alternative schools that extend options beyond neighborhood schools.

In a statement last month, the American Association of School Administrators expressed concern that the choice concept might worsen some schools by encouraging the most motivated parents and youngsters to flee, while other families simply couldn't afford the transportation to schools outside their neighborhoods.

But choice advocates frequently cite Harlem's Community School District 4, where I.S. 117 is located, as proof that choice can transform even desperately downtrodden urban districts.

In 1972, District 4 was dead last among New York City's 32 community districts in reading and math scores. Only 15 percent read at their grade level. I.S. 117 was a failing, impersonal school with more than 2,000 students.

Armed with federal and private dollars and the idea that parents should be free to choose among schools with themes, nearly everyone agrees that schools like I.S. 117 were gradually transformed for the better — so much so that children outside this impoverished district are on waiting lists to attend.

The school houses four academies — schools within schools — each occupying a floor and each with roughly 200 students: a gifted program, a school for performing arts, a career academy to help children develop career goals, and a special school with small classes to help underachieving youngsters with emotional problems.

Trade deficit has increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit, after falling for two consecutive months to its lowest level in nearly five years, increased to $10.77 billion in August, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the August shortfall represented a 30.77 percent increase from a revised July deficit of $8.24 billion.

The widening gap resulted from a 0.2 percent decline in exports to $30.4 billion and a 6.4 percent increase in imports to $41.2 billion.

The August deficit was the first increase since May.

Economists had been watching to see what effect the rising value of the dollar would have on the trade imbalance. A stronger dollar tends to widen the trade gap by making U.S. goods more expensive overseas while lowering the price of imports to American consumers.

Rising imports tend to curb demand for U.S.-produced goods, thus dampening production and threatening the loss of jobs.

Exports, on the other hand, strengthen demand on domestic production and help create more jobs.

Preliminary estimates had put the deficit in August at about $9 billion.

The nation's foreign oil bill increased 0.4 percent to $4.3 billion in August. The amount of imported oil rose to 8.67 million barrels a day from 8.14 million in July, but the price per barrel fell to $16.14 from $17.12.

In addition to oil, increased imports included manufactured goods such as electrical machinery, clothing and footwear.

Analysts had said a big decrease in airplane and aircraft exports would contribute to the widening of the August deficit. Such exports were off 16.1 percent, the Commerce Department said.

For the first eight months of the year, exports increased 14.6 percent while imports rose 18.7 percent.

Former Contra spokesman says U.S. involvement was a "farce"

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bosco Matamoros, once the voice of the Contra rebels, is hammering out his memoirs, a work he says will unmask the "stupidity and arrogance" of the government's handling of Central American policy in Nicaragua.

"I will portray the Americans as we saw them," Matamoros said during an interview at his Washington apartment. "I'm very relieved we don't have to deal with people who didn't speak a word of Spanish, who represented the ugly American."

Matamoros, 44, always an outspoken critic of the United States, describes himself as deeply resentful of what he sees as the Bush administration's dismantling of the civilian directorate and the way the Contras were treated. Although he still considers himself the movement's spokesman, the United States does not.

"My whole thesis of the book is the whole thing has been a farce," he said. "The Americans never respected us as the resistance. They saw us as puppets. Their attitude is 'change your course or you are purged.'"

The United States backed the Contra rebels since 1981 in their fight to oust the leftist Sandinista government in Nicaragua. That support brought international condemnation as well as domestic problems, most notably the Iran-Contra affair in which the government sold arms to Iran and used the funds to finance the anti-Sandinista rebels.

The Bush administration has sought to distance itself from the Contras. Pointing to congressional will and agreements reached by Central American leaders, the administration has stopped arguing for military aid and agreed to provide the rebel combatants, most of whom are in base camps in Honduras, with food and clothes.

Several of the civilian leaders recently returned to Nicaragua to take part in next year's elections. The CIA-financed Contra office in Miami and the congressionally approved radio station were shuttered.

"Our perspective has changed," said one administration source, who works closely with Contra issues but declined to be further identified. "We no longer deal with the guys in suits."

The State Department now works directly with the rebel commanders, he said, adding that the Contra civilians "at the time served a tactical necessity" to lobby Congress for funds. The move leaves Matamoros and others as unemployed exiles.

Sitting by his typewriter near four cages of chirping doves, finches and parakeets, Matamoros says: "A tamed, more easily influenced Sandinismo was preferable to continuing the fight in Washington."

He leafs through his notes, written in Spanish and translated into English by his American wife.

"They have achieved their big objective, to eliminate the resistance politically," Matamoros says.

He said his book, in the infant stages, will talk about his dealings with prominent figures in the Iran-Contra scandal, including Oliver North, Carl "Spitz" Channell, Richard R. Miller and Richard Secord.

Climbers find $4 million gorilla habitat not escape proof

By ARNIE STAPLETON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The real gorillas were not watching Sunday afternoon as people aped them. Good thing. It could be a case of "monkey see, monkey do," and that might mean a 400-pound gorilla or two lumbering around Dallas.

Dallas Zoo officials tested the $4 million future home of the zoo's four lowland gorillas and members of the Texas Mountaineers climbing club found it was little challenge to escape.

Ken Kaemmerer, the zoo's curator of mammals, said 18 volunteers found "10 to 15 escape routes, and many, many more handholds and footholds" in the new Jake L. Hamon Gorilla Conservation Research Center.

"Obviously, one escape route is too many," he said after watching the experienced climbers scale their way out of 11- to 13-foot-high textured concrete walls.

"We fully expected some escape routes to be found," Kaemmerer said. "One of our zoo keepers even got out, and he's not a climber."

A representative from a Seattle architectural firm that designed the center watched the test and will meet Tuesday with zoo and construction officials to discuss solutions, Kaemmerer said.

All weak spots found in the textured concrete walls were marked with large pieces of chalk. Construction workers later will smooth down the spots so the gorillas cannot get a handhold or foothold once they inhabit the center next spring.

"Beyond that, we'll probably have to raise the wall a couple of feet in some places and pitch the wall so that there's an overhang," Kaemmerer said.

The climbers' discoveries won't delay the scheduled April 1990 opening of the center nor will it add any cost, said zoo spokeswoman Dawn McDonough.

Climbing club spokesman Cliff Begnaud said he expects gorillas would more than match humans in climbing ability because they have longer arms, much greater strength and more agile toes.

The two-acre habitat is a hilly island surrounded by a dry moat-like ditch. The exhibit is part of a $32 million expansion that will nearly double the size of the Dallas Zoo.

Kaemmerer said officials hope to acquire about eight more gorillas from other zoos once the exhibit is complete.

Right now, the zoo's two males and two females are housed in a concrete facility with iron bars built in the 1960s.

Kaemmerer said the gorillas should be much happier with the change.

But no matter how much they like their new home, it shouldn't be long until they start looking for a way out, he said.

Aquino brother-in-law hospitalized in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) - Doctors on Sunday treated the brother-in-law of Philippine President Corazon Aquino at a hospital here after he arrived at the facility complaining of severe pain.

Ricardo Lopa was in serious condition at Baylor University Medical Center's intensive care unit, said a spokeswoman who did not want to be identified. Lopa was conscious but in severe pain when he left Manila, a spokesman for the air ambulance service that transported him here said.

The patient was met at Dallas Love Field by Dr. Orlando Solis, a Baylor cardiologist and friend of Mrs. Aquino's, said Wilbur Smith,

Saxophone Quartette big hit at community concert Friday

By Bill Haley
Guest Reviewer

On Friday night the Pampa Community Concert Association ventured into its 44th year presenting the highly recommended Harvey Pittel Saxophone Quartette at M.K. Brown Auditorium. Over the years many great names have graced out town's concert stage, among them are Eileen Farrell, Rise Stevens, Robert Merrill (all of the Metropolitan Opera), the Robert Shaw Chorale, Guy Lombardo and the London Philharmonic.

Pittel (pronounced "pit tell") is presently a member of the faculty at Texas University. He has performed as a saxophone soloist with the Denver and Boston Symphony Orchestras and has been acclaimed by the New York Times and National Endowment for the Arts. His associates in the quartette boast similar commendations.

The first glimpse the concertgoers had of the performers was of the latter seated on stage behind an oblong table piled high with saxophones of every shape and size. After a brief introduction the proceeding began with Bach's well known G minor Organ Fugue which in turn was followed by Mozart's elegant serenades "Eine kleine Nachtmusik."

It was difficult not to be deeply impressed by these two performances. The fugue, created to reverberate through the cavernous vaults of medieval cathedrals, is a composition of great majesty and strength. The serenades are gems of aristocratic light heartedness. Both were performed with great clarity and in excellent style.

The rest of the program dealt with more transcriptions of classics together with arrangements of popular, ragtime and jazz favorites. Accompanying the music were some cute staging and considerable ad-libbing. At one point, a quartette member made a reference to the celebrated nuisance factor of the saxophone.

Perhaps the best way to sum up the evening would be to quote a statement about the Harvey Pittel group from the New York Times - "The program not only glorified Adolph Sax's 139 year old instrument but brought glory to the music that was played on it."

Members basted two quilts, a tulip quilt pieced by Edwards and a scrap quilt brought by Vines. Hostesses were Edwards and Darlene Vespestad. The next meeting will be Oct. 26 at The Hobby Shop.

Senator ready to raise stink about magazines that smell

DEAR ABBY: Earlier this year you ran a letter in your column from a woman signed "Choking," who suffered a full-blown migraine headache caused by a fragrance sample inserted in her TV Guide. Her letter went on to say that millions of folks with severe allergies, asthma and other related health problems do everything they can to avoid these odors.

Soon after reading "Choking's" letter in your column, I introduced legislation in the New York state Senate that would require that any cosmetic, perfume or other fragrance sample be enclosed in an odor-proof sealed packet if it is to be included in any publication or advertisement offered for sale or mailed in New York state.

The introduction of this legislation has prompted quite a response from people who have at one time or another had a violent reaction after having been exposed to these free samples. I intend to hold hearings this fall on this legislation to allow all interested parties to come forward and offer their feelings on this issue.

Thank you, Dear Abby, for inspiring this legislation.

MARTIN CONNOR,
STATE SENATOR, ALBANY, N.Y.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When I call my friend on the phone, one of his children (ages 15 and 17) usually answers. In answer to my request to speak to their father, I am always asked, "May I ask who is calling, please?"

This really rubs me the wrong way because I figure the child has no business knowing who is calling. It comes across as being rude and nosy.

I know this is not intended, so I asked my friend if his children have been instructed to do this as a form of "screening" his calls. He said, "No. It's because callers often do not leave messages; therefore I've instructed my children to get their names right away."

Abby, I think this is faulty reasoning, because callers have every right not to leave a message if they choose.

In answer to the question, "Is your dad in?" I think the appropriate answer should be either, "Yes. Just a minute, I'll get him," or, "No, would you care to leave a message?"

I've explained to my friend twice that I find his present answering procedure offensive, but nothing has changed. It is so upsetting to me that I now hesitate to call him at home. Am I justified in being upset? And how would you suggest I resolve this?

TROUBLED IN ONTARIO
DEAR TROUBLED: I think you are not justified in being offended or upset. Well-mannered people always identify themselves when placing a telephone call.

When an unidentified caller is asked, "Would you care to leave a message?" invariably the response is, "Never mind, I'll call again." (Click). Then the caller is left to wonder who called — which can be very frustrating.

On the other hand, when people inquire, "May I ask who's calling?" they will usually get the caller's name immediately.

Reich leads Bills past formerly unbeaten Rams

Buffalo Bills' quarterback Frank Reich looks long to receiver Andre Reed, whom he connected with on a 47-yard aerial to sustain a fourth-quarter drive. Reich, playing for an injured Jim Kelly, led the Bills to victory in his first NFL start.

By JOHN F. BONFATTI
AP Sports Writer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — The miraculous followed the mundane for the Buffalo Bills' offense.

Bills followers expected little of quarterback Frank Reich, a four-year backup making his first NFL start in place of the injured Jim Kelly. For much of the game, they weren't disappointed, because little is what they got.

Reich underthrew and overthrew his way to a 5-for-15 passing performance in the first half, and the Bills generated as much firepower as a damp firecracker.

But Reich the wreck became Reich the redeemer in leading Buffalo to a stunning 23-20 victory over the Los Angeles Rams Monday night, knocking off the NFL's last remaining unbeaten.

Coach Marv Levy, who withstood many calls to find a better backup for Kelly, said he knew all along that Reich had the composure to be an effective pro quarterback.

"You never got wrong going with a player with great character because he can overcome a lot of things. And Frank Reich has that."

Reich kept his composure even after the chilly start and a demoralizing touchdown reception by the Rams' Willie Anderson that seemed to give Los Angeles a 20-16 victory with less than two minutes to play in the game.

The Anderson pass from Jim Everett restored the lead to a Rams team that had held it until a 1-yard touchdown pass from Reich to Thurman Thomas put Buffalo ahead 16-13 with 2:23 left in the game.

On the Los Angeles sideline, there was a feeling that the Everett-to-Anderson bomb had saved the Rams in a game that was much closer than most had predicted.

"We thought we were magicians," Rams defensive back LeRoy Irvin said. "We thought we had pulled one out of the hat."

On the Buffalo sideline, a depressed defense was met by an upbeat Reich.

"Right after the Rams scored that touchdown, the defense came off and they didn't look too happy," Reich said. "But we gave them a vote of confidence. We really felt we were going to go down and score. That's what we told the defense going off."

What followed was a story line fit for a Disney movie.

With 1:17 to play, Reich, feeding off the success he had suddenly found in the previous drive of 86 yards that led to the Thomas score, marched the Bills 64 yards downfield.

He completed seven straight passes, ending the drive by hitting Andre Reed from eight yards for a touchdown with 16 seconds left.

Reich hit 16 of 22 passes in the second half.

All of this was accomplished, Reich said, despite a dislocated finger on his throwing hand that happened in the third quarter.

"Even right now I don't have feeling in it," he said. "That's why I was throwing the ball on the sidelines. I was continually throwing because I was trying to block out the pain."

The Rams were stunned. "You make a play like my touchdown, you feel like you won a ballgame," Anderson said. "We were celebrating, but then they came back and it really hurt to watch. It hurt a lot."

Overshadowed by Reich's heroics was a magnificent effort by a Bills defense that has been accused of living off its reputation of last year. With the exception of the Anderson touchdown, the defense "played, no question, their best game of the season," Levy said.

The Rams' offense, No. 4 statistically in the NFL, was limited to 266 yards. Greg Bell, the NFL's No. 2 rusher, ran for 44 yards in 22 carries.

"We hadn't been playing together and we knew it, so we had a meeting and talked it over," Bills nose tackle Fred Smerlas said. "What you saw tonight was the real Buffalo Bills defense. We were rockin' and rollin'."

Life gets even tougher for 'Horns

First-place tie to be broken on Saturday

AUSTIN (AP) — Beating Oklahoma was big. Beating Arkansas would be even bigger, University of Texas football Coach David McWilliams says.

"This game determines our position in the race for the Cotton Bowl," McWilliams told his weekly news conference Monday.

To keep winning, the Longhorns will need the same type of performance every week they had in their emotional upset of Oklahoma, he said.

"We're going to have to play our very best. Really play with that intensity and that concentration we played with Saturday," McWilliams said.

The Longhorns have little time to savor Saturday's 28-24 victory over the Sooners, traveling to No. 7 Arkansas. The Razorbacks routed Texas Tech 45-13 last weekend.

"We face this same schedule every year," McWilliams said. "We've been coming off losses to Oklahoma and playing Arkansas fairly well, so hopefully the (Oklahoma) win will help push us over."

With wins over SMU and Rice, Texas shares the Southwest Conference's top spot with Arkansas, also 2-0 in conference play.

Eleven times in the past 30 years, the Texas-Arkansas game has determined the SWC champion and Cotton Bowl representative.

The most recent was 1981, when Texas lost to the Razorbacks 42-11 and finished 6-1-1, behind 7-1 SMU.

McWilliams said a loss to Arkansas would offset the good that was accomplished in the Oklahoma win.

"Sure, no question," he said. "We're not playing just a one-game season. The Oklahoma win doesn't turn the program around, but it does give us a big push."

"It's the first opportunity we've taken advantage of to get us going, but you've got to start over again," he said. "You don't want to be a one-game-a-year team. The importance of this game will show up later in the season."

Jubilant UT players carry coach David McWilliams off the field after they defeated Oklahoma, 28-24.

Dykes not taking Owls lightly after last week

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech isn't taking anything for granted — especially after being brought back to earth last weekend by Arkansas.

Red Raiders coach Spike Dykes said he is telling his team, now 4-2 overall and 1-2 in Southwest Conference play, not to be cocky going into its game Saturday with Rice.

Dykes said the Owls are better than their 1-4-1 record would lead people to believe. He points out Rice suffered one-point losses to Tulane and Texas and tied Wake Forest. The Owls led in all three games.

"Plus, Rice is one of those football teams that can't wait to play Texas Tech," he said.

And Tech probably is glad to be meeting anyone other than Arkansas, which pounded the Red Raiders 45-13. Arkansas lived up to its No. 7 ranking, converting four turnovers into touchdowns.

While Saturday's contest at Jones Stadium in Lubbock might look like a breather after playing the tough Razorbacks, Dykes said his can't afford to take that stance.

"I don't believe you take anybody lightly, especially when you're coming off a big game," he said

Monday. "I would think you would be thrilled to death to go out and try to get that out of your system and play well."

The Texas Tech coach also is reminding his coach that nearly half the season remains.

"Five more games can add up to some interesting numbers," Dykes said. "Add it to four and you've got nine. Add it to two and you've got seven."

College Top 25
See this week's Associated Press Poll of the Top 25 college teams on Scoreboard, Page 10.

Though Dykes obviously has a flair for teaching math, his job is coaching football. He said he should have done a better job at preserving his team's enthusiasm following an upset win over Texas A&M prior to the Arkansas contest.

"Last Saturday's intensity level was down a little bit and I'm not sure why," he said. "You've got to go make things happen. You can't stand around and wait for them to happen. It looked a little to me a little bit Saturday night that we were waiting for things to happen."

Slumping Giants welcome change of scenery, personnel

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Baseball Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — A change of scenery is not the only thing that will be different for Game 3 of the World Series.

San Francisco manager Roger Craig, faced with a 2-0 deficit against Oakland, is making some lineup changes.

Ken Oberkfell will start at third base and Pat Sheridan in right field, knocking Jose Uribe and Candy Maldonado out of the lineup. Matt Williams moves from third base to short, taking Uribe's spot.

In the first two games at Oakland, the Giants went 9-for-62 (.145) with one run scored. They were 0-for-11 with runners in scoring position, including 0-for-6 by Will Clark and Kevin Mitchell.

"Evidently we need more offense," Craig said. "Oberkfell has been swinging the bat good all year. The only reason I hate to do it is that I take away my pinch hitter."

During the regular season, Oberkfell set a club record with 18 pinch hits.

With the World Series moving over the Bay Bridge to Candlestick Park for Games 3, 4, and, if necessary, 5, the designated hitter rule will not be used.

"You're going to use a pinch hitter more in the National League than you would in the American League," Craig said. "But he's swinging the bat good. I just feel he can get me some offense, drive in some runs."

To make matters even worse for the Giants, Clark just feels plain lousy. Clark, who already has a sore knee, now has tonsillitis.

The Giants first baseman was at Candlestick Park on Monday, but did not participate in San Francisco's two-hour workout.

"He reported for about 60 minutes of treatment on his knee," Giants trainer Mark Letendre said. "We also changed his medication for his tonsillitis. Although he had a general malaise, and that was not somebody in the French Revolution, he felt better."

Game 3 is scheduled for 7:35 p.m. CDT today and the forecast at Candlestick calls for temperatures in the low 60s and breezy.

Don Robinson is set to pitch for the Giants against Bob Welch. Robinson isn't in tip-top shape himself. He has ligament damage in his right knee and is wearing a huge brace. Nobody is quite sure how long the big right-hander will last.

"Don's had a lot of injuries throughout his career," Craig said. "Don Robinson is a pitching coach and manager's dream as far as his makeup, his desire to win, his desire to pitch and pitch hurt."

Robinson can also contribute with his bat. He hit three homers this season and has 11 in his career. He's such a good hitter that Philadelphia gave him an intentional walk on June 22, 1984.

"Don Robinson is a good hitter, and I would let him bat in a close situation," Craig said.

"I like to hit. Everyone knows that," Robinson said. "I feel my hitting gives me an advantage before I even go to the mound. The other pitcher has to face nine hitters."

The A's and manager Tony La Russa did just about everything right in winning the first two games at the Coliseum.

Dave Stewart pitched a five-hitter to win Game 1, and Mike Moore allowed four hits in seven innings in Game 2 as the A's won 5-1.

Before coming to Oakland prior to the 1987 season, Welch pitched for Los Angeles and the Giants had all sorts of problems with him. Welch is 19-4 lifetime against San Francisco, including 6-0 with a 2.35 earned-run average at Candlestick.

"I know my record at Candlestick is good, but I can't pinpoint why. I just happened to pitch good games against them," Welch said. "I could be 10-0 here and it wouldn't matter once I go out on the field."

The A's got home runs from Dave Parker, Walt Weiss and Terry Steinbach in the first two games, one more homer than they had in losing the 1988 World Series to L.A.

Giants' pitcher Don Robinson, scheduled to start Game 3 of the World Series tonight, takes his cuts during batting practice Monday morning in San Francisco. The pitchers will bat in games at Candlestick Park.

Volleyball

The Pampa Lady Harvesters travel to Randall High School tonight to take on the Lady Raiders in District 1-4A volleyball action beginning at 6:30.

Pampa is currently tied for third place with Borger, each with 6-4 conference records.

Randall, 4-6 and 5-15, is in sole possession of fourth place.

Middle School The Pampa Middle School volleyball teams won three out of four games over Hereford Monday evening at Pampa.

The seventh-grade Blue avenged its loss to Hereford in the Pampa tourney two weeks ago with a commanding 15-4, 15-3 victory Monday.

The eighth graders emerged victorious from two hard-fought battles. The Blue team defeated Hereford, 18-16, 17-15, while the Red won by a score of 16-14, 15-6, 16-14.

Soccer

AMARILLO — The Pampa Classic under 14 outdoor soccer team swept two games against Amarillo at Southwest Park last Saturday.

Pampa blanked the Hurricanes, 4-0, in the first game. The Classic built a 2-0 lead in the first half, then added two more goals against a stiff breeze to coast to victory.

Andy Sutton and Russ Gunter scored Pampa's goals. David Urbanczyk was injured and Andy Sutton was ruled ineligible so both were lost for the second game of the day.

Pampa staged another shutout in game two to defeat the Stingers, 2-0. The Classic posted two unanswered points in the first half, then played stingy defense in the second half.

The game ended with a Pampa breakaway shot moments from entering the goal, but the shot was disallowed and the match ended with the score 2-0. Pampa's goals were scored by Tim McCavit and Jesus Lopez.

Both games were marked by numerous Pampa scoring opportunities and good defensive play. Pampa players recognized for outstanding play were Russ Gunter, Jason Soukup, J.B. Horton, Shawn Hurst, Lanny Schale, Able Del Fierro, Jesus Lopez, Tim McCavit, Andy Sutton, Kyle Sparkman, Steve Beckham, Matt Caswell, Jacob Yberra, Bubba Meadows, Chris Podzemny, David Urbanczyk, Jeremy Telkamp and Justin Allison.

The Classic now stands at 4-2 on the season and 3-1 in league play. They have two games remaining on the schedule, both on Oct. 28 at Southwest Park in Amarillo.

Rodeo

The Tri-State High School Rodeo reunion committee is tentatively planning a 20th reunion for former Tri-State members.

The reunion is to be held in conjunction with this season's Tri-State Finals, scheduled for June 7, 8, 9 and 10, 1990.

"We're in the process of trying to find 20 years of former Tri-State members," said Sue Giddeon, secretary of the reunion committee and former executive secretary for the Tri-State Rodeo Club. "It's not limited to contestants. We're looking for former directors, sponsors — anyone that wants to come can come."

"If all goes well, we plan on having a rodeo for the exes, and they'd be invited to a reception and to the awards banquet on Sunday (June 10)."

Anyone with information on former Tri-State members can contact Giddeon writing P.O. Box 273, Skellytown, Texas, 79080.

Football

The Colts defeated the Raiders, 6-0, in a battle of the unbeaten during Saturday's Optimist Tiger League Football action.

Colts' coach Don Carpenter credited hard, aggressive play on the part of the Colts for shutting down a potent Raider offense. The Raiders had scored three or more touchdowns in each of their three previous outings.

Matt Utzman scored a touchdown late in the second quarter for the only score of the day.

With the win, the defending city champion Colts improved to 4-0. The Raiders, coached by Wayne Barkley, dropped to a second-place tie with Wheeler and the Packers, each with 3-1 records.

Other results from Saturday include Packers 20, Groom 0; Wheeler 22, Redskins 0; White Deer 6, Rams 0, OT.

See today's scoreboard for Tiger League Standings.

Middle School The Pampa Middle School Football teams face Hereford today to continue district play. The seventh grade will play at Hereford Stadium at 5 p.m., and the eighth grade travels to Hereford for a 5:30 p.m. kickoff.

Irvin out for season

IRVING (AP) — A knee injury suffered by Michael Irvin has dealt a severe blow to the Dallas Cowboys passing game.

Irvin, the Cowboys' No. 1 draft pick in 1988, is out for the rest of the season after he tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee in the third quarter of Dallas' 31-14 loss to the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday.

Coach Jimmy Johnson said Monday that Irvin will be placed on injured reserve and will have surgery, though no date has been set.

"We just started to do the things I wanted to do on offense," Irvin said. "It's tough. It's tough on everybody. It's just something I have to work through." The time Irvin will need to recover is "anywhere from nine to 12 months," according to Cowboys trainer Kevin O'Neil.

Irvin was leading the team in receiving with 26 catches for 378 yards and two touchdowns. Last year, his 20.4 yards average was the highest of any Cowboy since 1981 when Tony Hill averaged 20.7.

"I hate to see that because he was really starting to fit into the offense," Johnson said.

James Dixon, Derrick Shepard or Bernard Ford, released by Buffalo in the pre-season and soon to be on Dallas' active roster, will replace Irvin.

Walker no pauper after Viking trade

DALLAS (AP) — As everyone suspected, Herschel Walker left Dallas with more than just the suitcases he was carrying.

In fact, one of his agents, Pittsburgh attorney Ralph Cindrich, confirmed that the new Minnesota Vikings running back made a great deal to move north. The original Vikings — the ones with the long boats and horned helmets — would have had to plunder a long while to match what Walker got for accepting a trade.

Here is a list of what Walker reportedly pulled down — one that appeared Sunday on CBS-TV and was confirmed by Cindrich, and one that undoubtedly will attract the interest of Walker's tax man:

A $1.25 million cash bonus. According to The Dallas Morning News, both the Dallas Cowboys and Minnesota Vikings are chipping in cash, but it is uncertain whether it is an even split. Both teams have declined to reveal a financial breakdown. Both teams, however, have admitted the other team contributed to the bonus.

Free use of any Mercedes of his choice during the 1989-90 seasons, paid for by Minnesota.

Free use of a fully furnished home comparable to Walker's Texas home, paid for by Minnesota.

Ten free first-class plane tickets of his choice to be used until his current contract expires after the 1990 season, paid for by Minnesota.

"He has to be happy with the home," Cindrich said. "I guess (Minnesota General Manager) Mike Lynn has already shown him or talked about Ahmad Rashad's home." Vikings fans may fully approve of the hefty team expenditures if Walker keeps performing as he did in his debut.

Herschel's a winner again

By MIKE NADEL AP Sports Writer MINNEAPOLIS — It's wonderful what a change in scenery can do for a fellow. Herschel Walker testifies to that. "I can smile now and really mean it. Before, you sort of made yourself smile," Walker said.

touched the ball and 47 yards on his first play from scrimmage. "I changed my mind." "I'm not the smartest guy, but I'm not a complete idiot, either," said Burns, who gave Walker the day off Monday to return to Dallas and clear up some personal matters. Football was fun again Sunday for Walker.

Landry — who, unlike Johnson, featured Walker in his offense — his job. "Everybody wants to be on a contender," said Walker, who contemplated the trade for a week before accepting it. "You play football to win, you don't just go out to compete. With a team like this, we can win. We already have won one that I've been in on."

Teen genius plans to start work on doctorate

By RUTH PILLER
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — University of St. Thomas senior David Huang plans to mail applications to at least six graduate schools this week. He wants to earn a Ph.D. in applied math.

He also wants to learn to drive, but that will take almost as long as graduate school: Next month, Huang will turn 14.

Huang, who scored 1,090 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test when he was 8, began college in 1984 at age 9. He hopes to take the Graduate Record Examination and graduate in December, the university's youngest — but perhaps best-known — graduate.

"I'd probably be bored if I was in elementary school," said the alumnus of "Late Night with David Letterman" and "20/20" television programs and countless newspaper, radio and TV news accounts of his genius.

The math major has a 3.2 grade-point average and carries five classes, one more than required to be a full-time student. While he prefers physics and math, his current courses — poetry, theology, sociology, history and English — aren't hard but require a lot of reading, he said.

Although Huang will have completed the requirements, he may not graduate in December. Administrators are mulling over the snafu — Huang's concurrent enrollment in an English class and its prerequisite, a poetry class.

Though David Huang is a celebrity of sorts on campus, his teachers and classmates treat him like one of the crowd.

Whether he graduates this winter, or even if he is forced to repeat the English class and graduate in May, he plans to take some physics classes next semester.

After skipping first grade, Huang attended a Louisiana school for gifted children in third grade — when he completed the seventh-grade curriculum — and fourth grade — when he completed the high school curriculum. Then he entered St. Thomas, the only university that would admit a 9-year-old, on a part-time basis. He transferred for two semesters to the University of Texas at Austin. "I thought (UT) was too big, so I came back here," he said. "It's a nice place."

Huang is a proctor, a paid teaching assistant in a physics lab, and has been enlisted at least once to teach an administrator to use a computer. He attends St. Thomas on a full scholarship and a Pell grant. Although he's a celebrity of sorts on the Montrose-area campus, his teachers and classmates treat him like one of the crowd.

"Some were surprised at first to find out how young I was," he said. "But they got used to it."

Huang said he is applying to graduate programs at Yale, Princeton, UT-Austin, Texas A&M University, Stanford and the University of California at Berkeley. He expects to gain admission to most, if not all, of the programs.

Earlier this year, Johns Hopkins Medical School and Baylor College of Medicine refused to admit Huang until he is 17, although Baylor offered admission to a different graduate program. He hopes to earn a doctorate in three or four years and then enter teaching and/or research, although medicine remains a possibility.

Huang's divorced mother, Rtie, chauffeurs her only child from their Sugar Land home to class each day and will move to the city where he attends graduate school. The boy's father, Richard (Americanized from Hsiao-nan), is a seafood processor in Lake Charles, La.

Like others his age, Huang likes to eat "just about any kind of American food" and has to be urged by his mother, sometimes, to do his homework.

When not studying, he spends time away from school in front of his computer or in a pool. He also runs around with neighbors about his own age — playing basketball or other games. They do not treat him any different for being a college man.

"The kids on the block say 'that's neat,'" he said, "but they don't really pay attention."

Huang is not St. Thomas' only prodigy. Mary Chou, 12, is a sophomore who majors in computer science. She and Huang occasionally see each other in computer labs, he said, but have not spent much time swapping scholastic stories.

Texas Demos seek to stifle gubernatorial mudslinging

AUSTIN (AP) — While the chairman of the Texas Democratic Party plans informal guidelines to assure fair campaigns, county leaders have created a "Code of Campaign Ethics" to guide statewide contenders.

They also plan to form a monitoring committee to watch those running for office in the March 1990 primary, according to The Dallas Morning News.

Party Chairman Bob Slagle of Sherman said that rather than urging the State Democratic Executive Committee to adopt the county chairmen's resolution, he will use a less formal effort.

Slagle said he will begin meeting with all statewide candidates in November and December, asking them to establish their own guidelines on what constitutes a fair campaign. But the agreements will not be in writing.

"We'll just have a discussion about what is fair and unfair and where the line ought to be. We'll reach some basic arrangements," he said.

Slagle said he relied on a similar pact in the 1982 gubernatorial primary.

"We had an informal understanding, and when one of the candidates felt like another was getting out of line, he would call me and I would call the candidate who was getting out of line," Slagle said. "It worked very well."

Ron Gay, chairman of the Democratic party in Brazos County, said the county chairmen's code is aimed at preserving candidates' strength.

"We've seen too many instances where Democratic opponents beat each other senseless and whoever comes out of the primary is so weak, they can't stand up to the Republican," said Ron Gay, Brazos County's Democratic Party chairman.

Some Republican consultants are worried as well about the need to rein in their candidates, the newspaper said. But GOP officials plan no formal action, saying they doubt the Republican field will hit below the belt.

Gay, president of the county chairmen's association, said he will ask all statewide Democratic office-seekers to sign a pledge to abide by the code. Those who "step over the line of fair campaigning" would be publicly reprimanded, he said.

The proposal is similar to a tactic used by Texas Republican officials in 1986. Then-state GOP chief George Strake made the three Republican gubernatorial candidates sign an agreement that they would follow the party's "11th Commandment" — speak no ill of another Republican.

But current Republican Chairman Fred Meyer said he does not see any reason for such a requirement in 1990.

"I don't think we're going to have the kind of primaries the Democrats are going to have," Meyer said. "We don't have people like Jim Mattox or Ann Richards involved in our primary. We don't have that kind of problem."

Political experts say the Democratic gubernatorial race will be the most explosive, with Mattox, Ms. Richards and former Gov. Mark White battling for the nomination.

Contacted last week, spokesmen for the three refused to commit to signing the pledge, saying they were not familiar with the action of the county chairmen.

The conduct code would specify the type of television and radio commercials a candidate could run, the type of direct mail that could be sent and just how far contenders could go in talking about their opponents.
