ASCS's Latest Farm Program Report

Danny Noble and the ASCS office released the following dates Thursday morning:

FINAL CERTIFICATION
The final date to certify or request aerial measurement service on all spring seeded crops, conservation use acreage (CU), and ACR, is July 15, 1991. A complete acreage report must be filed including all program crops, sunflowers, soybeans, alfalfa, vegetables, and etc., by this deadline. An accurate certification is very important, SO DON'T GUESS. The reported acreage cannot differ from the spot checked acreage by the larger of 5 percent or 1.0 acre, not to exceed 10.0 acres, or the farm could be ineligible for program benefits. PLEASE call soon for an appointment.

MEASURING SERVICE REMEMBER!!! As soon as we get your farm measured, you will be notified of the measured acreage and you only have five workdays in which to adjust (if any) and certify your acres in this office. Please notify this office if you have to adjust prior to destroying any crop.

PREVENTED PLANTING PROVISION

The purpose of prevented planting credit is to allow P & CP credit (History) for those acres that the producer was unable to plant and determine whether the 50 percent planting requirement for cotton under the 50/92 program can be waived.

To apply for prevented planting credit, the operator shall do the following:

1. File an ASCS-574 within 15 days after the final planting date for the crop. (Cotton-May 31)
2. File an acreage report.
3. Have attempted to plant the applicable crop.
4. Not have designated the prevented planting acreage as ACR, CU for Payment, or CU for P&CP.
5. Not have later planted acreage of the same crop in the same program crop year for which an ASCS-574 is filed.

Cotton producers have the option of crediting the acreage they are prevented from planting to either the prevented acreage of cotton or they may choose to use...the acreage as conserving use (CU) for payment acreage under the 50/92 provision if waived. If producers choose to credit the acreage as prevented planting for cotton, the acreage may then be devoted to acreage of another crop which would be considered as "ghost acres" for program purposes. These prevented planting acres will not be eligible for any deficiency payment for 1991. If producers who were prevented from planting cotton because of drought, flood, other natural disasters, or other conditions beyond the producer's control (other than managerial decisions) may devote the acreage to CU for payment. This acreage must be maintained as CU for payment for the remainder of the year and cannot be planted to another crop for harvest. Cotton producers who choose this option would be eligible for the 10 cents per pound guarantee without regard to the 50 percent planting requirement if the sum of the prevented planting and actual planting totals at least 50 percent of the maximum payment acres for the farm if approved.

FAILED ACRES
Any program crop that has failed due to drought, excessive moisture, hail, or for any other reason beyond the producer's control, must be certified and an ASCS-574 (Disaster Application) filed before the crop is disturbed in order to be eligible for program benefits.

MAINTENANCE OF ACR, CRP, AND CU/PAY
Weed control measures MUST be carried out in a timely manner on acreage designated as ACR and CU for Pay throughout the calendar year. Weed control measures also

Lazbuddie, Pleasant Valley

Hardest Hit By Storm

A strong line of thunderstorms accompanied by rain, strong wind and some hail moved into the area late Wednesday afternoon. Rain ranged from an inch in the Bula area, in Southern Bailey County to three inches at Lazbuddie, in Parmer County. Muleshoe officially received 1.8 inch.

Lightning played havoc with Southwestern Public Service lines causing the entire city of Muleshoe to be without electricity for approximately 30 minutes, with some sections of town being out of electricity for an hour.

Although some hail fell in the city, little or no damage was reported.

For the second straight day, another line of thunderstorms moved into the area Thursday afternoon and Bailey County was placed under a tornado watch. At least one twister was unofficially spotted in the West Camp area. Heavy rains and hail once again accompanied the storm.

The hardest hit was in the Lazbuddie and Pleasant Valley area where several farmers were reported to have lost cotton and corn crops in the hail storm on Wednesday afternoon.

Although the damage was heavy, no exact number of acres lost in the storm Wednesday night could be given.

Ben Foster, Jr. at Foster Fertilizer told the Journal that he received 1.7 inch of rain on Wednesday and .7 inch on Thursday night.

On the Demp Foster farm two or three miles South of Lazbuddie he received three or more inches of rain.

Bennie Claunch, in the southern area of the county reported that Bula received two inches of rain and some hail in the two storms. Approximately three miles west and one mile North of Bula some cotton was hailed out.

In the Stegall area they received one inch of rain.

In the West Camp area, Eugene Shaw reported about .9 inch of rain the two days. Although he didn't receive any hail, he stated that they had strong winds.

Other farmers in the area were not as fortunate. Some of the farmers had their cotton hailed out. One farmer stated that he lost about 400 acres of cotton and if it dried up by the 10th where he could get back in the field he would be able to replant cotton, if not he would have to go to an alternate crop.

Hail fell in a line reaching from about the Texas-New Mexico State Line on to Lariat causing considerable damage.

The National Weather Service out of Lubbock forecasted more of the same type of weather for the next five days.

Muleshoe received another 1.2 inch of rain on Thursday afternoon.

Report From U.S. Representative Larry Combast

During his Lubbock news conference on Friday, U.S. Representative Larry Combast (R-Texas) said his vote to extend President Bush's authority to negotiate upcoming foreign trade agreements gives Texas agricultural and energy producers a guaranteed seat on the "fast track" train. "In raising my concerns with the President and his cabinet officials, I have been successful in alerting them to issues I believe they will address in these future trade discussions," said Combast.

Congressman Combast said that during the past few weeks, he has been actively working with U.S. trade officials to ensure that agriculture and oil interests are not negotiated away.

"In agriculture, U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills has assured me that my concerns for cotton, peanuts and sugar producers in the 19th District will be addressed. As chief trade negotiator, Ambassador Hills told me that the U.S. would make changes in the import quota program for these terms. In the event imports unexpectedly increase, snap-back trade provisions will help protect domestic farmers," said Combast.

"Overall, I am satisfied that stringent rules of origin will be in place to ensure that Mexico is not simply a conduit for third-country agricultural exports. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher has personally assured me that he will strongly recommend there be a cotton advisory group on the U.S. negotiating team," said Combast.

"Recently, I met with President Bush to discuss my desire for an energy working group to negotiate Mexican business opportunities for oil drilling and other oil field servicing companies like those throughout the Permian Basin and West Texas," said Combast.

"Being so close to Mexico means both that we have the most to gain in a good trade agreement with Mexico, but we also have the most to lose in a bad agreement," said Combast.

•The Permian Basin area of Odessa is rich in the experience beneficial to energy exploration and oil field service needs.

•Gaines County's production of 80.2 million pounds of peanuts is the largest in Texas.

•The Hereford area's sugar-beet production represents $32.6 million in agricultural production.

"Fast track authority merely enables trade talks between the U.S. and other countries to proceed," said Combast. "If a trade agreement is concluded, Congress can still exercise its right to disapprove the proposed treaties if the terms are not in the best interests of the American producers."

The "fast track" vote extends until June 1, 1993 the negotiating permission originally granted in 1988. The President's extended negotiating authority may be used for completing the Uruguay Round of GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade), negotiating a North America Free Trade Agreement with Mexico and Canada, and pursuing other trade initiatives.

U.S. Representative Larry Combast (R-Texas) announced that on Monday, June 17, he will host a congressional field hearing of the House Agriculture's Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit and Rural Development in Lubbock. The hearing will be held at 9 a.m. at the Texas Tech University Livestock Arena/Meat Laboratory building at Indiana Avenue, located just off the Tech Freeway. "Bringing members of a congressional committee to the South Plains provides an opportunity for local lenders, producers and business owners dependent on agriculture to voice their concerns and views on the operation of agricultural credit programs," said Combast. "Those of us on the subcommittee are conducting a wholesale review of agriculture credit, looking to improve the system."

Credit Subcommittee Chairman Glenn English (D-Oklahoma) said, "We intend to leave no stone unturned in our attempt to determine if the credit needs of farmers and ranchers are being met in a timely and efficient manner. Many of these agricultural lending programs we intend to examine have been in place for over 50 years, a period of the most drastic change in the history of agriculture. If the system has not been flexible in keeping pace with these changes, we intend to ensure that it does from here on."

On the South Plains, Congressman Combast is intensely aware of the increased demand for operating capital placed on commercial lenders as well as government agencies like the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA).

"FmHA has taken on more of the load while having less staff and a smaller budget," said Combast. "Cuts in funding for the direct loan program have placed an increased emphasis on the guaranteed loan program. I am hopeful that input from commercial lenders, borrowers and FmHA officials will assist the subcommittee in finding a workable plan for an ample, timely supply of credit for producers," said Combast.

"I encourage interested lenders, farmers and those involved in agriculture to contact my office," said Combast. "This is an opportunity to help shape the course of agricultural credit policies now under review by a subcommittee of the Congress."

Those wishing to testify during the agricultural credit hearing should contact the congressman's district representative, Jimmy Clark in Lubbock at (806) 763-1611 or David Hartman in Combast's Washington, D.C. office at (202) 225-4005 by June 3.

Witnesses for the hearing must provide 10 copies of their prepared written testimony to the agriculture subcommittee. In the interest of time, all oral comments will be limited to five-minute summaries, however participants may submit detailed testimony for the official record. Additionally, the subcommittee encourages interested persons who are unable to attend the field hearing to submit written testimony.

A family of four squeezing by on $21,500 a year pays almost one-fourth of that income in federal, state and Social Security taxes. The same size family with an equivalent earning power in 1948 paid just two percent in taxes. The culprit is the structure of the tax code and its dramatic erosion of the personal exemption deduction.

If personal income exemptions had kept pace with inflation and per capita income, today the personal exemption would be approximately $7,800. Currently, the personal exemption for children under 18 is only $2,050. Is it any wonder that both parents have to work, pay someone to keep their children and try to make ends meet. Tax fairness for families is long overdue.

In response, I have cosponsored H.R. 1277, "The Tax Fairness for Families Act of 1991," which would increase personal exemptions for dependent children to $3,500 per child this next tax year and $7,500 per child by the year 2000. Families need more choices and opportunities. With family tax relief, the burden can be lifted by allowing families to keep more of their own earnings to do the job they do best: Being a family and taking care of one another.

Taxes also have their dampening effect on a state's economy. For instance, in the 30 years between 1957 and 1987, the average tax rate in Texas amounted to a little more than eight-and-a-half percent of personal income. During that time, the economy of the state prospered at the national average, growing about two percent.

Recently, a study was done of how state and local taxes affect economic growth. You personally feel the pinch when increased taxes put a hold on your spending and sidetrack your savings plans. The result is a drain on the economic growth of a state. Businesses feel the effect from decreased sales, and banks have less capital to make loans.

However, if Texas' tax rate had taken just one percent less of personal income over the years, the increased activity would have allowed the state's economy to grow at four percent, rather than two percent. Put another way, easing the tax burden just one percent for a Texas family would have doubled the economic growth rate of the entire state. For a generation of Texans, personal income would have grown for each one by approximately $2,000 more annually; a 30 year total of $61,000 per person.

We all benefit from government services from our taxes. We help the needy through social programs. Taxes are the price we pay to collectively do the things we cannot accomplish individually, like building highways, schools, and feeding the poor. However, when your taxes are unwisely spent, it is certainly not ungrateful of you to ask yourself: Who is more efficient at spending your money wisely--you, or the government? The answer is very taxing.

Is it better to cut up stew meat yourself, rather than buy pre-cut stew meat?

For microwaving it is. You can cut the meat in 1-inch cubes and they will be uniform in size, and microwave better.

Also, supermarket stew meat is often cut from lean round and for microwaving, it's best to use boneless chuck.

There is some fat in chuck and it adds flavor during the microwaving.

Learn to Parent More Effectively

Here are some suggestions for parents. Recognize the problem and accept it. The capacity for book work may always be below that of a child with higher intelligence. Concentrate on strengths for publicity and work on weaknesses privately. Read to him and develop his interest in books and learning. environment. Take him visiting to the farm, zoo, factory, TV Station and so forth. Give him an opportunity to climb, jump rope, skip and run to help build coordination. Permit the child to interact with others and grow in his own way through scouts, church, school, summer camps, and so forth. Maintain a happy home by having a minimum of pressures. Treat each member as an individual, with respect and value for the child for what he is. Do not compare him unfavorably with others. Do not expect that every child should go to college unless there is a definite ability. Encourage open channels of communication. Keep the family working as a team with the parents as co-captains. Dads who are masculine but warm and understanding so that sons learn how to become a man. His daughter needs his help to develop the feeling that it is good to become a woman. Provide love, affection, humor and excitement (the soil which produces secure and happy children), forgiveness and recognition of individual differences in children of the same family. Here are a few rules for dealing with your child. Here is what the child would say to you if he could: Don't spoil me. I know quite well that I should not have all I ask for. I'm only testing you. Don't be afraid to be firm with me. I prefer it. It makes me feel more secure. Don't make me feel smaller than I am. It only makes me behave stupidly "big." Don't let me form bad habits. I have to rely on you to detect them in the early stages. Don't correct me in front of others if you can help it. I'll take more notice if you talk with me in private. Don't make me feel that my mistakes are all sins. It upsets my sense of values. Don't protect me from consequences. I need to learn the painful way sometimes. Don't be too upset when I say I hate you. It isn't you I hate, but your power to thwart me. Don't take too much notice of my small ailments. Sometimes they get me attention. Don't nag. If you do, I shall protect myself by appearing deaf.

Freeze Branding Less

Painful For Cattle

Freeze branding seems to cause animals less pain than the hot-iron method, but it isn't painless, according to comparison studies done by Texas A&M researchers.

Freeze branding should be an option whenever possible, said Dr. Ted Friend, associate professor of animal science at Texas A&M. However, he added, "Freeze branding is not painless, as some animal rights advocates have thought."

The technique was developed in 1966, but mostly because of expense and tradition never caught on, Friend said. Hot-iron branding, practically unchanged since the days of the Old West, has aroused controversy because of perceived suffering by livestock.

Freeze branding apparently causes less severe but slightly longer-lasting pain, according to a study led by Friend and Don Lay, an A&M animal science graduate student.

The researchers compared behavioral and physiological response to freeze branding and hot-iron branding among cross-bred calves, Angus calves and mature Jersey and Holstein dairy cattle.

They noted whether animals reacted vocally or attempted to avoid branding by jumping, kicking or other responses.

They also monitored heart rates and levels of epinephrine (also known as adrenalin), norepinephrine and plasma cortisol in the cattle's blood for approximately 30 minutes after branding. All three substances are hormones associated with "fight or flight" responses to stressful situations, Lay said.

The experiments were done with the help of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station's McGregor and Overton research centers and Texas A&M Dairy Science Center. Cattle at the three locations are routinely branded to discourage theft--to this day, still the main reason for branding, Friend said.

The A&M team branded a third of each group with hot irons and another third with irons frozen by liquid nitrogen. The rest were control animals who had room-temperature irons pressed against their hides.

Generally, hot-iron branding caused stronger kicking or leaping reactions from cattle, while freeze branding caused slightly longer periods of increased heart rates, the study found.

Perhaps the best indicator of pain intensity came from the group of mature dairy cattle, who are docile by nature, Lay said.

Epinephrine levels were substantially higher in heat-branded cattle in the first half-minute after branding. There was no apparent difference in vocalization among the groups based on branding method, Lay said.

However, calves branded with heat or cold within the vicinity of other calves tended to bawl in pain, apparently to alert other cattle, Lay said. Those branded in isolation tended not to vocalize their pain, he said.

The study seems to support the opinions of those who think freeze branding should be an option for livestock owners, Friend said. Branding, although not mandatory in Texas, is mandatory on many states, and some breeding associations and governments agencies require the hot-iron method.

The Kingsville-based Santa Gertrudis Breeders Association, however, allows either kind of branding. But, interim executive director Les Brandes said, freeze brands don't always "take"

"It looked nice, but for all practical purposes it didn't work," Brandes said of freeze branding.

Friend said it can be difficult to read freeze brands on lighter-colored livestock, but darker livestock usually brand well with the freeze method.

Freeze branding, he added, is more expensive than hot-iron branding. Costs of both vary depending on herd size and management, among other factors, he said.

However, hot-iron branding can cause scar material to form, ruining any potential leather use for that area of a hide, Friend said.

Friend also said breeding organizations, by sanctioning freeze branding as well as hot-iron branding, could make a "strong statement" to the public that they are concerned about minimizing harm to livestock.

Friend is the director of Texas A&M's proposed Frederick L. Thompson Animal Euthenics Center, to be located at the new Animal Science teaching, Research and extension Complex near the campus. Euthenics is the study of determining optimum living conditions for animals, especially with regard to their environment.

Friend concluded that in light of animal-rights and welfare questions and the study's findings, electronic identification is the "logical replacement" for both branding methods.

Electronic identification would center on microchips injected into livestock with syringes. European countries are already experimenting with industry-wide identification, Friend said and the American livestock industry very likely will need to find ways to electronically "brand" its stock.

Electronic identification can be made cost-effective, Friend said. However, he added, researchers must find ways to implant microchips where they cannot be easily removed in the case of animal theft, but where they can be easily removed at slaughter, as required to obtain regulatory approval.

"The Europeans are going to adopt it, and to market there, we're definitely going to have to conform to it," he said.

The Best Coed--What do you think of men? Roommate--The best opposite sex we've got.

Hospitality Training In Unusual Places

When Sea World in San Antonio opens daily May 25, visitors should find the folks who work there extra nice.

"Sea World is using the state-wide Texas Hospitality program to train its line managers and employees in good customer service the Texas was," said Susanna M. Coppennoll, program manager with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The program is conducted by the Extension Service and the department of recreation, park and tourism sciences at Texas A&M University. It was initiated two years ago by the Texas Department of Commerce to enhance communities by improving customer service in local businesses and government.

It's the manager training that sets this program apart from others in the United States, Coppennoll said. The training helps a manager recognize the value of customer service and foster it in the work of employees.

Sea World, part of Anheuser-Busch Companies, is finding that the state's hospitality program is providing excellent training for its 2,300 employees, said Cathy Young, assistant manager of personnel at Sea World. Young is one of more than 200 instructors in 75 Texas counties trained by Extension to teach employees and managers.

"The program is perfect for what we do," she said. "One of our main objectives is guest satisfaction. This training will help employees become more aware of customer needs and teach them good skills that they can use daily."

For example, employees learn the six hospitality habits--making a good first impression, communicating well with visitors, knowing their job, knowing the community, handling problems (instead of avoiding them) and making a positive last impression. These important factors help determine whether a visitor will return, Young said.

"A recent national customer service survey (from Service America) showed that when a person chooses not to go back to a place, 68 percent make that decision because someone was rude or indifferent," Coppennoll said. "Hospitality training seeks to eliminate that statistic by encouraging people to go above and beyond. We teach participants to understand why service is important and why they get particular results."

Participants learn to identify points of customer interaction--where a customer might form an impression--for their specific jobs, Coppennoll said. They learn to predict what could go wrong and to develop solutions. For example, a secretary's point of customer interaction occurs whenever a telephone is answered or a visitor is greeted.

During the course, individuals can evaluate themselves using the six hospitality habits, identify their weak spots and work on improving them, she said.

"There's good customer service and excellent customer service," Coppennoll said.

Three Way News by: Mrs. H.W. Garvin

"Excellent is what hospitality training is all about."

Hospitality is important to Texas because of tourism--one of the top industries in the state, Coppennoll said. "Tourism has become a way to diversify the economy, but we must keep people coming back. Hospitality is the competitive edge--the service edge that keeps people, businesses and communities a step above others."

Texas Hospitality training is available to anyone in the state. Instructor training programs are scheduled for Fort Worth, May 20-21; Palacios, May 29-30; and College Station, Aug. 6-7. Registration information on these workshops and others is available from Susanna Coppennoll, Department of Recreation, Park and Tourism Sciences at Texas A&M, (409) 845-5419.

A HAT WOULD BE SO MUCH COOLER!

She must go to the native market for her physical needs. The straw hat would be so much better than the old scarf tied and knotted about her head. Sweet, cool air could come through that straw and that would feel so wonderful in this heat!

Where does she go for her spiritual needs? Is there a church on the island? Does she know that she will be told about a great God there who will help her, guide her, and refresh her?

How fortunate we are in this country that there is a church in every community. Spiritual help, refreshment of soul, fellowship and love awaits all who enter her doors. We invite you to attend Church this week.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Host Families Can Learn About Other Cultures

According to one Thai Foreign Exchange Student sponsored by International Student Exchange, "Thailand, the land of smiles, is the home of the happiest people in the world!" Ise is presently seeking host families for these delightful Thai students as well as for bright, outgoing high school students from a variety of countries including Germany, Spain, Bolivia, Mexico and others. Here are excerpts from two student applications.

"I am a 17 year old boy from Panama. Because of my father's job, we travel a lot and I have lived in many places. I love meeting new people and can easily adapt to new situations. I have brown hair and green eyes and also a broken tooth that can be seen when I laugh--which I do often. My father is Buillermo and he writes books for children. He is my best friend and my relationship with him is very strong. My mother is a teacher and a lovely person whom I love very much. I tell her all my secrets. My grandmother's sister lives with us and she is always knitting. My principal interest is to participate as a foreign student is not only to learn English better but to be able to live with a family of the country that I admire, go to school, learn of the American culture, and make new friends. I am easy to please and have simple taste. I only wish to be as one more among your school, help you in what I can, and live as any American boy would. I like all sports especially basketball, soccer, fishing, and the open air life. I want to represent with dignity my family and my country, and I hope to meet you soon."

Another letter from a Thai girl is equally as endearing. "My first name has 14 letters and may seem long to you, but fortunately most Thai children use nicknames to make things easier. Mine is "Cee" which came from the name of the state called Washington, D.C. because by father was there at the time I was Born. I am now 16 years old and the eldest child in my family. I am responsible for cleaning the bedroom, doing the dishes, feeding my puppy and looking after the house when my parents are not home. I think this teaches responsibility and is important. I believe I am cheerful, ambitious, energetic, generous, and happy around my family and friends. People are important to me and therefore I will always act in a way to insure that I don't hurt or turn away those people I care for. In Thailand most teenagers have been exposed to some Western culture. so, I believe there will be no problems staying with an American family. I'll teach them about my beautiful country, and will promote my culture regarding politeness, respectfulness to the old people, gratitude, and hospitality. I will also cook Thai food which is very delicious. I will be proud if I can share my Thai culture with everybody. Believe me Thai people are one of the most friendly people in the world. That's why my country is known as the "land of Smiles!"

When you open your door to a foreign student, you will embark upon one of the most rewarding experiences of your life. You and the boy or girl your family selects will enrich each others lives by sharing yourselves and your cultures with one another. The personal relationship which develops with the student as he or she becomes a member of your family can only be describes as "beautiful"! A bond forms which will last for the rest of your lives.

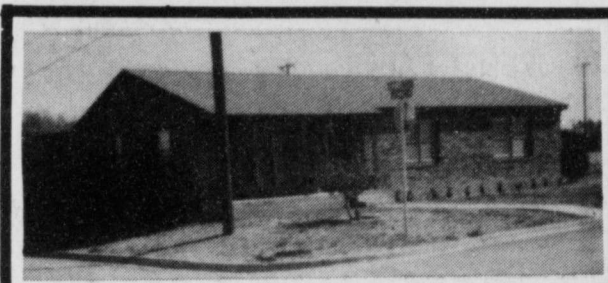

Host families are not asked to make special expenditures, but they do provide room and board for the student. The students bring their own spending money for personal needs. ISE provides medical insurance as well as counseling for the student and host family if a need should arise.

The placement of foreign students is accomplished by a careful screening and placement process based on applications submitted by both the prospective family and the foreign student. It is not necessary that there be children in the host family, and retired couples often welcome teens into their homes. Hosts actively participate in the selection of the student who will live with them, thus assuring that the family and the student are placed together on the basis of interests and compatibility.

Won't you invite one of these students to share your life? To participate in this unique experience, contact: International Student Exchange, P.O. Box 840, Fort Jones, California 96032, or Telephone 1-800-233-9632, or Telephone 1-916-468-2264 in California. You'll be glad you did!
