Courthouse somber after learning news

By BETH MILLER Staff Writer

The mood was somber in the Gray County Courthouse Monday afternoon following the announcement of the six sites selected to receive a state prison.

Most of the county offices had tuned radios into KGRO/KOMX to listen to the live coverage in Austin as Pampa-Gray County made its plea to be chosen as a site for one of the six prisons. The majority of the employees in the courthouse were optimistic after Bill Waters of the Industrial Foundation gave his testimony in support of the Gray County site.

But that optimism was soon shattered when Pampa did not receive even one nomination for either the three maximum security facilities or three minimum security facilities.

"My office got quiet," said Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter.

The three county commissioners who stayed behind in order to have a quorum to canvass the constitional amendment election votes expressed disappointment, but a spirit of enthusiasm for the support gathered in the attempt to get a

"This just shows what we can do if we work together," Wheeley said. "I don't want to loose heart. It's going to be hard not to be disappointed, but we're headed onward and upward."

The commissioners commended Bill Waters of the Industrial Foundation and Glen Hackler, assistant to the city manager, and others

LEFORS – A plan was formulated this past summer for water rationing in the city of Lefors. Luckily, however, it was a wet summer and the plan never was implemented. But with only one good water well, the city is looking for more water.

At a Monday evening meeting, the City Council discussed its next steps for getting water, which include applying for a grant to drill a water well and securing water rights on property south of the city.

"We will have our grant application presentation somewhere around Dec. 5," Mayor Gene Gee told the City Council.

During two months in 1987, Enron "zero" billed the city. Then at a later time, Gee said, Enron came back and adjusted those two months and five others to the tune of $54,000. The average monthly bill for the city of Lefors for gas from Enron Corp. is $8,000.

The city is paying on that $54,000 based on an agreement signed in early 1989, Gee said. An $11,000 credit was given to the city at one point after the overbilling, Gee said.

Cut the culprit: federal spending

This month the National Advisory Committee on Semiconductors (NACS) delivered to President Bush a report recommending that the federal government become deeply involved in the consumer electronics industry. The report calls for the government to back low-interest loans for a private consortium, the Consumer Electronics Capital Corp.

The main item such a government/industry project would fund would be high-definition television (HTDV), a TV with a better picture - just what TV-addicted America needs. The field is currently dominated by the Japanese.

The businessmen seem to think the government would provide the loan guarantees; business, the know-how. But that was the same idea behind federal guarantees behind the savings and loan industry, which now will cost taxpayers at least $385 billion over the next 30 years.

The new proposal is nothing but a high-tech version of the old calls for a national industrial policy. We've already suffered through a limited version of such planning. The "voluntary" quotas on Japanese car imports, imposed since 1981, allowed Tokyo to increase prices, run up profits, and finance innovative designs.

In the high-tech field, the 1986 quotas on Japanese microchip imports gave the Japanese microchip companies, many of them losing money, a profitable shot in the arm. Even worse, the quotas boosted microchip prices in the United States right when American industries using those microchips - computer manufactures and software designers - were in the midst of a boom. The quotas boomeranged, muffling the boom.

A high-tech industrial policy will turn out to be nothing but a high-tech-pork-barrel program. The congressmen are already lining up for the pork. Rep. Mel Levine of California, a strong backer of HDTV, said he will introduce a bill to create a Technology Corporation of America financed by federal tax dollars. In other words, though NACS will ask only for loan guarantees, Rep. Levine has already upped the ante to taxpayer finance and federal control.

This is all so unnecessary. As George Gilder and other economists have shown, the United States maintains a commanding lead over all the rest of the world, including Japan, in software and computer systems creation. Ask anyone who uses a computer how much non-American software he uses. The answer will be: almost

Can we do more to help development in our high-tech industries? Yes. First, pass the capital gains tax cut, dropping the top rate from 28 percent to 19.6 percent, Indeed, a drop to zero percent - the level in Japan - would be even better. Next, cut income taxes sharply. Finally, cut the real culprit behind inflation and budget deficits: bloated federal spending.

Does Head Start really help?

Policymaking in Washington often proceeds like fashion design in Paris - relying more on eyecatching fads than on good sense. The current fad is early childhood education, which is used to justify everything from more funds for Head Start to expanded subsidies for child care. In Congress, critics of the trend are about as numerous as confessed crack dealers.

Head Start, a Great Society program to prepare poor children for school, has nothing but admirers at either end of Pennsylvania Avenue. President Bush asked for a big increase in its funds, and he's sure to get even more than he asked for.

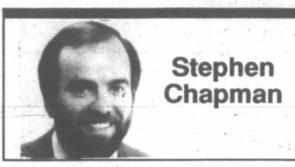

The House recently passed a child care bill that would expand Head Start to 10-hour days, yearround, and include families with incomes up to $31,200 - instead of the part-day, school-year program for the poor that it is now. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D.-Mass., has a bill to set up federally funded preschool programs throughout the country.

The early education fad has caught on at the local level too. Chicago's new school superintendent, Ted Kimbrough, wants to set up preschool programs at every elementary school in the city and to make them mandatory for all 4-year-olds.

Never mind the cost. Supporters insist that frugality here is false economy. They brandish research showing that every $1 spent on Head Start yields $6 dollars in savings down the road - by discouraging dropouts, reducing crime and preventing unemployment and poverty.

Well, if every government program that was justified by the savings it would return had actually returned those savings, we could abolish the income tax. The payoff in this case will probably be just as elusive.

There are two key questions about Head Start, which provides education, health and nutrition services to poor children from age three to five. The first is how much good it does these kids. The second is what it might do for middle-class children.

Poor kids probably reap some benefit from Head Start. But the achievements are nothing like what is commonly advertised, and they may not have much to do with Head Start's educational fea-

The huge returns always cited are based on a single study of a small group of poor kids in Ypsilanti, Mich. - who weren't enrolled in Head Start at all, but in a far more ambitious, intensive and costly experiment that would be almost impossible to duplicate on a mass scale.

Why does everyone look at this study when they could be looking at the 9 million people who in the last 20 years have been through Head Start? Simple: It's the only evidence that resoundingly confirms the value of early education for the poor.

The payoff from the average Head Start program, by contrast, is questionable. A 1985 study for the Department of Health and Human Services found that kids did make intellectual gains in Head Start. But the benefits didn't last: After two years in school, these kids were doing no better than Start.

One of the few definite benefits of the program had nothing to do with schooling. Because Head Start provides meals, its students enjoy better nutrition than other poor kids - which may account for their intellectual gains. Does that mean Head Start is a waste of time? Not necessarily. Most well-to-do parents send their kids to preschool because they think it will strengthen their learning abilities, and common sense suggests that it's bound to accomplish something. Head Start gives poor kids the same opportunity, helping them get the most out of their innate mental abilities.

That, however, is no argument for expanding federal preschool programs beyond the poor. Better-off children generally do well in elementary and high school regardless of whether they went to preschool. Edward Zigler, a reknowned child development expert at Yale, says "there is little if anything to be gained by exposing middle-class children to early education."

Middle-class parents may disagree, and they are free to spend their money accordingly. But if they aren't willing to pay the cost of preschool, why should the taxpayer at large foot the bill? The only likely result of including more properous children in Head Start is to divert if from its only useful pupose - helping the disadvantaged overcome the handicaps of poverty and other social ills.

Whether Head Start contributes much to overcoming these problems is far from certain, through it isn't likely to hurt. But if we insist on providing taxpayer-funded preschool education for the middle class, we'll probably end up cheating poor kids without really helping prosperous ones.

Swindlers now depend on technology By SARAH OVERSTREET

Jim Bakker has just started his 45year sentence for defrauding his followers and diverting the money to his TV show every morning. He prayed. personal use. It's enough to make with them and for them, and taught even the cynical among us believe them sort of an "I'm OK, you're OK" that perhaps every dog WILL have philosophy of the Bible. his day (and hopefully not in an airconditioned dog house).

It's an unusual turn of events. We're not used to seeing preachers sent to jail for fleecing their flocks, even though this sort of thing has been going on since well before television became the pulpit of choice. Perhaps the lesson here is that you just can't get away with it so easily in Technicolor.

As technology made it easier for the Jim Bakker of the world to reach potential prey, it has also made it easier for crooks of every ilk to reach out and fleece someone. Telemarketing fraud is swindling an estimated $1 billion a year from its victims, and if until you hear about these guys.

Fraudulent telemarketers give their victims nothing but insults. My "beat" at the TV station where I work is consumer reporting, and I've seen so many elderly people cheated that I can't understand why more of these telephone swindlers aren't getting 45 years in prison.

How easy is it? The formula is simple: Develop a lie, tell it to gullible people, wait for the money to roll in and then vamoose. One of the most popular telemarketing scams operating now is to send a postcard telling the victim he has "won" one of four valuable prizes. One might be a car, one might be a savings bond and Bakker's antics infuriated you, wait .one might be cash. But one is always something that sounds like something

New premier: Berlin Wall should stay

By ABNER KATZMAN Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) - East Germany's new premier said tearing down the Berlin Wall would create "chaos" and the barrier is needed to keep AIDS, crime and other Western problems out of his Communist country, a newspaper said today.

Hans Modrow, considered a reformer, also called for a coalition government and said he has begun consultations on the Cabinet he must form.

A leader of East Germany's biggest opposition group, New Forum, said today that the movement could work with a revamped Communist Party but that naming Modrow as premier was not enough.

Modrow was chosen Monday in a session of unprecedented liveliness in East Germany's Parliament. In this city, for instance, there is a volunteer group called the Sisters of Rachel which seeks to help women out of the trauma of abortion. And there are experts who deny that abortion produces longterm emotional pain.

The Sisters of Rachel have a counseling center where they teach women to cry, to blame and to forgive, especially themselves.

"There's so many women out there hurting like we were," says Linda Gardner, a co-founder of the Sisters. "This is a place they can come and let all that grief come out.'

Judy Rivenbark, who operates the Tampa Women's Health Center, doesn't think women suffer guilt pains after abortion.

"I have worked in abortion for many, many years," Rivenbark says. "Most women have come to terms with their decision by the time it's made. I do not believe in this post-abortion syndrome. Afterward I don't see a lot of depression, tears or guilt. I see a lot of relief."

Study: science education must be a priority

By TAMARA HENRY AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - With the supply of scientists and engineers quickly dwindling, state college officials are urging Congress to double the science education budget with half the new money to be used to upgrade undergraduate science instruction.

"America will be a second-rate nation," warned Florida A&M University president Frederick A. Humphries, pointing to predictions that there will be a shortage of 700,000 science and technology professionals by 2000.

Science education, he says, is in

"We have to start channeling more of our resources into programs improving undergraduate science education and offer more support to college instructors committed to teaching science to college and university students," said Allan Ostar, president of the American Association of State Colleges and

Humphries, chairman of the association's committee on science and technology, and other committee members discussed at a briefing last week the results of a report to be released at the association's annual meeting in San Francisco later this week.

The report, partly funded by the National Science Foundation, predicted that channeling funds to undergraduate science education has the "potential to be the catalyst for reforming the total science education pipeline of the nation."

"We must raise the quality of science education at every level, expand participation in science by all students and encourage more students to choose careers in engineering, science and science teaching and to do all that we need more money," Ostar said.

The report, "Formula for Reform: The Role of the Comprehensive University in Undergraduate Science and Engineering Education," offered three recommenda-

-Double the National Science Foundation budget within the next five years, bringing it to about $3.6

-Divide all new appropriations for the foundation equally between science and engineering education and research and related activities.

-Develop a broad geographical base for the nation's research and science education activities.

The report noted that President Bush has proposed that the budget for the National Science Foundation be doubled and, while enabling legislation has been passed by Congress and signed into law, the actual appropriations have not been

Idea blossoms into community garden for Waco

By SUE ANN JONES Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO(AP) - Ulysses Barnes planted an idea last spring in the Sharondale Addition. And it's been growing ever since.

Louis Mooney, another Sharondale resident, said it was Barnes who thought a weed-choked lot in the neighborhood could become a community garden.

"I'd always had a little garden behind my house," Mooney said. "I don't know why I didn't think of it

"This is one of the few vacant lots out here, and a lot of times it was full of weeds, six feet tall. The neighbors would have to call the city to come out and mow it, and the owner would have to pay. We have a very nice neighborhood, and we didn't like the weeds," said Mooney, who teaches earth science at Tennyson Middle School in Waco.

"Mr. Barnes got the idea to turn this lot into something productive. He got together with four other men out here, and we planted our first crops the first week in April," he said.

Besides Barnes and Mooney, the other Sharondale gardeners are Roscoe Booker, a 20-year service technician for Sears; Bertrand Williams, a medical technician; and Robert Jordan, a carpet layer and substitute teacher.

The men and their families have lived in the Sharondale Addition on Waco's north side from 15 to 22 years,

After getting permission from the landowner, the men had the 3/4-acre lot cleared and plowed, then they shared the labor - and the produce.

"That's the fun of it," said Mooney. "That's the number one thing, the pleasure of learning and working together. Some of the men didn't know anything about gardens. I didn't know that much about it myself. But it was the cooperation among the men. It wasn't hard at all, because each one did his part. We shared the tillers and the hoes and things."

The men did all the gardening.

"The women helped with the canning and freezing and eating," said Mooney. "We had bushels and bushels. We didn't keep track or pay much attention to how much we raised. We just gave it to our neighbors and friends. We made sure we didn't waste anything. Now I've got a freezer full of black-eyed peas."

They planned four 150-foot rows of peas and corn, two rows of cucumbers, two rows of okra, two rows of okra, two rows of tomatoes and five rows of watermelons. The watermelons "just took over - you couldn't even see the ground for all the vines," Mooney said.

The gardeners shared their produce with other neighbors, too. "They've all been very supportive; they love it," he said.

"It's all voluntary. We didn't all go there at once. When a person had time to go, he would go, and when another person had time, he went. Sometimes, we were fortunate enough to all be there together," he said.

The men now are tending a fall garden of collards, purple-hulled peas, Swiss chard, beets, cabbage, string beans, spinach, onions and other crops, and plan to continue their project year-round.

Utility admonishes child for letting balloons fly free

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - When to Joseph. a 3-year-old boy released a batch of balloons with self-addressed envelopes on them, he never day." expected to the kind of response he got - an angry letter from the electric company.

The Anderson Municipal Light & Power Co. wrote Joseph D. McKinney on Thursday to admonish the tot after a couple of his helium-filled ballooons shorted out a

7.620-volt power line. Twenty-five homes lost power for about half an hour because of the balloons, set free on Joesph's birthday, which were attached to a note and a return envelope with

Joseph's address on it. The electric company's line supervisor, Robert J. Sokol, mailed the sternly worded letter to Joseph on Thursday, describing where the balloons landed and how they affected the company's customers. "I know this was a freak accident that did not cause any real damage ... but when you get a little older you should be aware of how dangerous power lines can be," the letter stated.

Helped out by his father, Joseph had set eight silvery metallic helium balloons off on Nov. 3 from his home on Indianapolis' far east side.

Three days later and about 30 miles to the north, two of the balloons - one with a Mickey Mouse picture and the other saying "I love you" - became entangled in electrical lines and caused the power loss.

"Who thinks of balloons getting tangled up in anything?" said the boy's father, Mark E. McKinney, 28. "I could see it if it was a kite, not a balloon, because usually balloons go straight up and you just don't think about it.'

Sokol let up a bit on the stern tone when he wrapped up the letter

Heart Association's 'seal of approval' eating guide draws fire from critics

Association is proposing will drive up food costs up unnecessarily and ignores such factors as fiber, complex carbohydrates and calories.

Under the first phase of the heart association program, makers of five types of food have until Friday to apply for the HeartGuide seal of approval, which would be stamped on certain packaged food.

The initial five categories of products are margarines-spreads; shortenings-oils; shelf-stable and frozen vegetables; crackers; and frozen dinners-entrees other than meat and poultry.

Each product must pass the association's nutritional test, for which companies pay administrative costs ranging between $10,000 and $40,000, according to a sliding scale based upon brand size. Products that pass the tests will be eligible to display the heart-and-checkmark seal beginning in February.

In addition to the testing costs, companies accepted in the program must pay an annual educational fee, again based on a sliding scale, that ranges from $5,000 to $600,000.

These costs are one concern cited by opponents of the plan.

Rita J. Storey, a nutrition consul-nutrition guide the American Heart imately 600 food manufacturers, said. last week brought the group's case to Dallas, where the American Heart Association is based.

She and other opponents of The American Heart Association HeartGuide say they would prefer the AHA stay out of what they contend is the business of marketing food products. The HeartGuide program will only test for four nutrients, the opponents say.

> "As a dietitian, I stress total nutrition," Storey said. She said that while the HeartGuide testing will measure total fat, total saturated fat, cholesterol and sodium, the program will not consider such factors as fiber, complex carbohydrates

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has expressed reservations about HeartGuide. The USDA, which has labeling authority over meat and poultry, has said that it will not allow meat and poultry to be part of the program, an action the AHA has appealed.

At the heart association's national center in Dallas, Cass Wheeler, deputy executive vice president, said the "HeartGuide" program was undertaken as an aide to consumers who indicated they wanted some type of guide to help them select nutritional food.

Wheeler said HeartGuide was created because of the research by a task force that indicated consumers are confused by product labels. One National Food Processors Associa- public was interested in purchasing and scientific data.

DALLAS (AP) - Critics say a tion, a trade organization of approx- products with a seal of approval, he

Wheeler emphasized that the consumer asked for "approval," not an "endorsement."

Along with the food product approval proposal, the HeartGuide program will include a variety of consumer education activities including a toll-free consumer telephone line, recipes and a mass media program.

Wheeler said consumers will learn more than ever about how to modify their eating habits and lifestyles through HeartGuide.

He would not release specifics on the companies that have applied to the program, but said if it were implemented immediately, there would be "over 100 products as of

Widow's mementos are rich reminders of happier days

DEAR ABBY: You recently ran a letter from a widow whose daughters, meaning to be helpful, had gone to her home and cleaned out all the evidence of her deceased husband. As a rather recent widow, may I comment on those who are carrying on without their partners?

It gives me much comfort to have my late husband's pictures around me. I "talk" to them. Yesterday I even scolded him, saying, "You know I hate being alone. Why aren't you here to help me?"

I am always pleased when I see my young adult son wearing one of his father's good shirts. (He wore his dad's favorite tie at his recent graduation.) If all those things had been given away, I would miss reliving so many happy memories.

My husband was an avid sailor and had many books on sailing. Had I given them to a rummage sale, they would have meant nothing. I gave them as gifts to his sailing friends who treasure them, knowing they came from a real sailing expert. His notes and comments scribbled in the margin enhanced their value. Even an old dish that was his is on my desk holding paper clips and rubber bands. Why should I discard useful objects because they were his and he

It's true, those things can be painful reminders, but one way to get over the pain is to keep a few familiar things around to remind me of good times.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to keep your life in proper balance today. Don't be all work and no play, nor all play and no work. Parity is essential for happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There is a possibility today you might pretend you received nothing in return for something you did for another while, in actuality, you did receive some acknowledgment.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Slights will breed resentement today, so be sure you do not play favoritism in your involvements with friends. Anyone you anger may not forgive readily.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will

Oilers win 26-24 thriller over Cincy

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Houston Oilers ond career touchdown. special teams coach Richard Smith has a busy week ahead of him giving out awards for his wild and crazy "hit the beach" players.

Warren Moon drove the Oilers to Tony Zendejas' fourth field goal of time expired for a 26-24 victory.

Forgotten wide receiver Leonard Harris replaced leading receiver Drew Hill and made key catches, including a 23-yard touchdown catch.

But when the medals are passed out, the special teams will get the most attention for keeping the Oilers in contention for the AFC Central Division title.

"The Oilers have the greatest punt rush team in the league," said Bengals punter Lee Johnson, twice victimized by the Oiler special

"Anytime the game is this close, special teams are going to be a big factor, they got 13 points from their special teams and that was the difference.

Eugene Seale recovered a blocked punt in the end zone for a touchdown. Seale also tackled Johnson on fourth down to set up a field goal and Bubba McDowell caused a fumble on the kickoff that set up another field goal.

"It just shows that when one part of this team is having problems, another area can take over and do the job," McDowell said. "We took drive.

Cincinnati made one last stab at victory with Jim Breech's 38-yard field goal for a 24-23 lead.

"A 5-5 record puts us in a position where we must win all the remaining games on our schedule," Cincinnati linebacker Reggie Williams said. "Our playoff hopes are dim but they're not out.'

Red Raiders go bowl shopping

By HOLDEN LEWIS Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — Since few bowl scouts have visited Texas Tech, the Red Raiders are doing a little bowl scouting of their own.

The 20th-ranked Red Raiders want a choice Nov. 25, when bowl invitations are officially extended. So far, the only bowl to send a representative to watch Tech in action has been the Independence Bowl.

"If you're dating an eight and there's a 10 out there, you're going to try to want to get around to that, I guess," coach Spike Dykes said Monday.

ranked teams en route to a 7-2 record, and has games remaining against Southern Methodist and Houston. It still has a remote chance of going to the Cotton Bowl for the first time since joining the Southwest Conference in 1958.

In the likely event Tech isn't playing in Dallas on New Year's Day, three bowls have expressed a lot of interest in the Red Raiders: the All-American, the Aloha and the Independence, according to Tech and bowl officials. The All-American and Aloha bowls plan to send scouts to Saturday's game at SMU.

The John Hancock (formerly the Sun), Freedom, Peach and Copper Tech has beaten three nationally bowls also have expressed some Dykes and athletic director T. Jones have said they think their players deserve more attention from bowls than they're getting.

"You sit there and you look at your record and you look at some of the other teams they're looking at, and it's frustrating," Jones said. "But you have to have that magic name that appears on TV a lot."

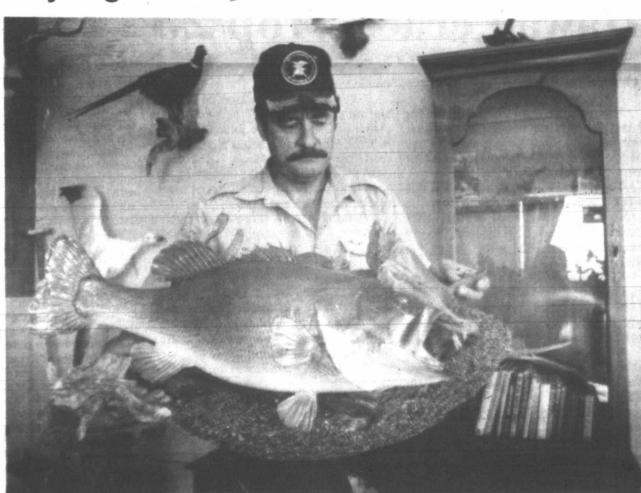

Tech lacks a magic name. Until the victory over Texas, the Red Raiders had not been nationally ranked since 1977. They have never won a conference title, and have compiled a 1-7-1 record in bowl games since 1958.

The All-American Bowl, played Dec. 28 in Birmingham, Ala., is scouting Tech, Duke, North Carolina State and Virginia on Saturday, spokesman Bill Miller said. The bowl pays out about $600,000 and will be nationally broadcast on

"We're very interested in them," Miller said. "They have the kind of record we're looking for the 9-2, 8-3, 7-4 range — and we're also looking for local appeal, and we think Texas Tech would fit in there real well."

He said Tech would draw a lot of fans in Birmingham because a lot of engineers live and work there, and Tech is noted for its strong college of engineering.
