Czech students protest police attacks at rally

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — About 100,000 demonstrators packed downtown Wenceslas Square today in the largest anti-government protest in this Communist nation. Police did not interfere.

Protesters demanded a new government and free elections, and loudly supported a general strike

Nov. 27.

The rally followed three days of increasingly angry protests over recent police violence against peaceful demonstrators in downtown Prague.

Also today, students began a sit-in strike at Prague universities to protest police attacks on demonstrators, and a Communist leader for the first time condemned the bloody crackdown Friday. Banned playwright and prominent activist Vaclav Havel canceled a trip to Sweden to protest the violence.

According to unofficial reports, student strike committees were negotiating with university authorities at the Technical University in Prague and the downtown Film Faculty.

At least three official Prague theaters went on a de facto strike, refusing to put on shows and terminating cooperation with official media, actors told The Associated Press by telephone. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

A statement of the official Socialist Union of Youth called Friday night's police crackdown on student demonstrators "politically irresponsible."

The communique was endorsed by Vasil Mohorita, the union's chairman and Communist Party central committee secretary. It was the first time a Communist official publicly condemned such police action.

Many people were injured Friday in clashes with the police, who used truncheons, tear gas and attack dogs to disperse the largest demonstration in 20 years. Hospital officials said 100 people required treatment.

The socialist daily Svobodne Slovo joined in the condemnation of the official handling of the demonstration. The paper gave full coverage to the events, even quoting witnesses of bloody beatings.

"Such police action only creates tension in society and causes natural resistance, especially of those who are the future of our country — the youth," the daily said.

By contrast, the Communist Party daily Rude Pravo in an editorial today called for "resolute action against provocations."

About 30,000 people demonstrated in Prague again Sunday to protest police brutality and demand that government and top Communist officials resign.

On Sunday, authorities arrested 10 dissidents.

Those arrested included Petr Uhl, a leading human rights activist, who was charged in connection with the spreading of news about the purported death of a mathematics student at police hands Friday. The government has called reports of the student's death "an unfounded rumor."

The state news agency CTK said Uhl was charged with "the crimes of harming the interests of the republic abroad and spreading alarming news."

Uhl, a veteran member of the Charter 77 human rights group, is associated with VIA, a dissident news service active in several East European countries. If convicted, he could be sentenced to 3 1/2 years in prison.

Dissident sources in Prague and Vienna told The Associated Press that police also arrested Drahomira Drazska, who had told dissidents that her boyfriend was killed by special police Friday. She identified him as Martin Smid.

Rude Pravo blamed the opposition for reports that the student was killed in the protest. Authorities have denied the report.

At a news conference today, Havel said he would not travel to Sweden to receive the Olof Palme award even if authorities issue him a passport.

"I will not make use of that passport, and I will not leave the country," Havel said.

"I do not wish to serve as a false visiting card of this regime which wants to claim that a foremost dissident is traveling abroad... while people are brutally beaten in the streets," he said.

Havel and representatives of the entire Czechoslovak opposition founded a "Civic Forum" on Sunday, which they termed a temporary representative of the people.

They demanded the resignation of hard-liners in the Communist Party Politburo, including president Gustav Husak and party leader Milos Jakes. They also asked for a dialogue with authorities.

Officials consider felony charges in escape of accused kidnapper

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Gray County officials plan to determine today whether felony escape charges should be filed against accused kidnapper Michael Frank Greene, 37, in this county or in Potter County.

District Attorney Harold Comer said this morning that he had been informed of the reported escape of Greene made on Friday while at a doctor's office in Amarillo.

"I'll be in grand jury today, but early this afternoon I plan to take another long look at the situation," Comer said this morning.

"If the court has jurisdiction in Gray County because he was in the custody of Gray County authorities, then we will file the felony escape charge here."

However, Comer pointed out that normally charges are filed in the county in which the offense occurred.

Gray County Sheriff Jim Free said this morning that Greene escaped from the custody of sheriff's deputies between 1 and 1:30 p.m. Friday while he was at Dr. Hugh Pennal's office at 2209 W. 7th Ave. for a psychiatric evaluation.

He apparently told deputies he needed to use the restroom and his handcuffs were removed. He then went in an unmarked door which led to stairs and escaped, only to be recaptured about 15 minutes later. Free said, hiding behind a dumpster in an alley at South Florida Street and San Jacinto Avenue.

Free said Greene was about three blocks from the doctor's office when he was nabbed by Officer James Opper and Sgt. Joe Allen of the Potter-Randall County Special Crimes Unit.

Greene was arrested Sept. 28 in Oklahoma and charged with felony kidnapping. He allegedly kidnapped his estranged wife and their three children from Pampa. After waiving extradition, he was placed in Gray County Jail where he is awaiting trial in the case.

He is also being held on an appeal bond in the revocation of his probation, which occurred in October when District Judge Don Cain sentenced him to four years in the state penitentiary after finding he had violated terms of his probation.

Archbishop suggests Army to blame for priest murders in El Salvador

By CANDICE HUGHES
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — As leftist rebels withdrew from around the capital, the country's Catholic leader predicted a backlash of "revenge, repression and witch-hunting" and was himself threatened with assassination.

After the fiercest offensive of their 10-year-old insurgency, the guerrillas on Sunday pulled out of most areas of the capital they seized nine days ago, returning to mountain strongholds.

Army patrols moved through streets strewn with the rubble of fighting. On some, several burned bodies could be seen.

People began returning to their homes, or what was left of them, but thousands remained in shelters. The warfare had forced about 40,000 of the capital's 1 million people to evacuate homes in now-ravaged neighborhoods.

About 800 mourners attended the funeral of six Jesuit priests, their cook and her teen-age daughter, who were slain and mutilated early Thursday in an attack widely blamed on right-wing death squads.

The United States has pressed rightist President Alfredo Cristiani for a full investigation. In Washington, Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., warned Sunday that U.S. aid could be curtailed if Cristiani cannot stop such killings.

The rebels said they launched the offensive in response to a resurgence of death squad activity and many people think Cristiani has lost control over the military and extremists in his party, the Republican Nationalist Alliance.

Many opposition politicians, labor leaders, religious and human rights activists are now in hiding or have left the country because of threats or arrests followed by deportation orders.

Archbishop Arturo Rivera Damas, the Catholic leader, warned in his homily Sunday that "a dreadful wave of revenge, repression and witch hunting may follow" the guerrilla withdrawal.

He called the rebel offensive "useless and unjustifiable," but said the military response had been "excessive."

Rivera Damas said before Sunday's funeral that "there exists the vehement presumption" that the six Jesuits were killed by "members of the armed forces or people in intimate connivance with them."

The archbishop, whose predecessor Oscar Romero was slain in 1980 by a right-wing death squad, has been urged to leave the country by Attorney General Mauricio Colorado.

Colorado told a news conference Sunday that the unnamed "church dignitaries" he had in a letter asked Pope John Paul II to withdraw were Rivera Damas and Auxiliary Bishop Gregorio Rosa Chavez, whom he accused of fomenting leftist violence.

He claimed he had information that both have been targeted for assassination.

In attendance at Sunday's funeral were U.S. Ambassador William Walker and Cristiani.

Salvation Army prepares for Christmas aid program

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
News Editor

Preparations are underway for the Pampa Salvation Army's annual Christmas program for needy and underprivileged, Capt. Don Wildish announced today.

But first, they'll serve the Golden Agers annual free Thanksgiving dinner of turkey and dressings to the city's elderly, he said. The meal will be served at the Salvation Army building, 701 S. Cuyler, at noon Tuesday, he said.

The Army's Christmas plans include setting up Angel Trees at the Pampa Mall and Wal Mart on Friday, he said. The trees, donated by Wal Mart and K Mart respectively, will be decorated with "Angels" — actual children from Gray County who are in need of clothing gifts for Christmas, Wildish said.

Although there were some misconceptions about the Angel Tree program last year when it was learned that the gifts went to children in the Amarillo area.

"In light of that, I want to assure the people that the money we raise in Gray County will be spent in Gray County," Wildish said. "The things that are done here will be applied here."

"The exception to that is some rural towns right outside Gray County. Borger won't take them and I won't take them... I can't possibly turn them away," he said.

"I feel like we've built a good relationship with the people of Pampa since we've come here and I hope that they'll trust us in this area as well," he added.

Wildish requested that clothes be bought for the children on the Angel Trees rather than toys, unless the donor would like to buy a toy "above and beyond" the toys. New toys will be given to the children through the Army's toy shop, he said.

"Yes, it's true they can go down to the thrift store and get a nice pair of used pants and a good pair of used shoes, but there's nothing like getting a brand new shirt, a brand new pair of blue jeans and sneakers that they can call their very own," the captain said.

Also beginning Friday will be the Army's annual kettle drive with bell ringers set up at various locations throughout the city six days a week through Dec. 23, he said.

A doll tea has been set up for local women who dressed dolls to be given away at the Army's toy shop on Dec. 8. Prior to the tea, the beautifully dressed dolls will be displayed in the lobbies of First National Bank and Citizens Bank and Trust, Dec. 7 and 8.

After the dolls are displayed, they will be returned to the Army and readied for the Christmas Toy Shop.

"We'll be setting up the Christmas Toy Shop here on Dec. 18 and 19," Wildish said. "We will really need volunteers for that, organizing toys for the families and preparing the Christmas food baskets," he said. Anyone interested in volunteering for this activity may call the Salvation Army for more information.

The Golden Agers Christmas luncheon will be served at noon, Dec. 12, with a menu that includes turkey and ham and all the trimmings.

On Dec. 20 and 21, the Christmas Toy Shop opens when clients who have been determined to be needy through their applications to the Army may pick out toys for their children and receive a Christmas food basket filled with chicken, stuffing, cranberry sauce, vegetables, rolls and dessert.

Applications for the program are now being accepted at the Salvation Army office, Wildish said, emphasizing that applications are being taken not only for families but for senior citizens, singles and couples, too. Those who qualify for aid are determined by income and need, he said.

"Every family who signs up gets a food basket," Wildish added.

Once an application is accepted, the Army will write to the applicant and let them know which of the two days and what time to come to the Toy Shop, he said.

Another activity planned by the Army this year is the annual canned food drive through the Pampa Independent School District. The canned food gathered in the drive will be distributed to the needy through the Christmas food basket program, Wildish said.

Gramm: collider change won't cause move

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm says it's "absurd" to suggest a potential engineering design change could reopen the decision on where to build the $5.9 billion superconducting super collider.

The Washington Post, quoting unnamed U.S. officials and independent scientists, said however that the change could result in a smaller, less powerful collider that would be unsuitable for its chosen Ellis County site.

"There is absolutely no basis for this assertion and no reason to reopen the site selection process," according to the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations.

Rep. Joe Barton, a Republican whose district includes the SSC site, said any speculation of moving the collider is "fairy tale thinking on somebody's part."

Congress recently approved the first $225 million to build the collider over an eight-year period. The site around Waxahachie, south of Dallas, was chosen in November 1988 after a lengthy and costly selection process involving many states.

"There has never been a state-of-the-art, cutting edge project that has not had some design changes," Gramm said in an interview Sunday. "This one is no exception. To suggest this modification might reopen the site selection is absurd and will not happen."

Gramm, R-Texas, said he has known for about two weeks a potential existed for a major design change as scientists moved from the conceptual design to the engineering design of the collider.

The Texas Office of State-Federal Relations also said any technical adjustments "have no bearing on the quality of the Ellis County, Texas, site. The Texas proposal can readily accommodate changes if they are proven necessary."

As currently planned, the collider would be a 53-mile underground oval where atomic particles would be hurled at each other by superconducting magnets. Scientists would collide the particles in an attempt to break them down further to test theories about the building blocks of the universe.

The problem, Gramm and the Post's sources said, is in the size of the mechanism that would inject proton beams into the underground ring.

Gramm said it was initially believed that the injector could be the same size as the one used at the Fermilab in suburban Chicago.

But because the super collider would be 10 times as powerful as the Fermilab accelerator, scientists believe the injector should be enlarged, the senator said.

Earthquake jolts southeast Iran, killing 3, injuring 45

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) - A strong earthquake jolted southeastern Iran early today, killing at least three people and injuring 45 as it toppled homes, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.
 The agency said the quake measured 6 on the Richter scale and shook the entire province of Kerman, home to more than 1 million people.
 IRNA quoted officials in Kerman as saying that casualty reports were still being assessed. Hardest hit were the cities of Golbaf and Shahdad, east of the provincial capital, Kerman, IRNA said.
 An earthquake measuring 6.9 on the Richter scale devastated a number of villages in the same region in July 1981, killing 1,200 persons and injuring 1,400.
 Kerman, and neighboring Fars province to the west, are frequently hit by earthquakes.
 A quake registering 6 on the scale can cause severe damage.

Congress makes little headway in completing year-end work

By ALAN FRAM
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress' race to adjourn for 1989 by Thanksgiving is running into problems from two measures that have proven intractable all year: deficit reduction and eliminating Medicare benefits for long-term illnesses.
 Lawmakers planned to search for solutions to those standoffs today, following an unusual Sunday session dominated by closed-door negotiations but little floor action.
 "I remain determined we will be able to complete action in order to adjourn ... by Thanksgiving," Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, told his colleagues.
 But judging from the path in front of them, that might not prove easy.
 The House planned action today on a new version of the $14.6 billion foreign aid bill which President Bush vetoed Sunday. He complained that the measure provided funds for a United Nations agency that financed forced abortions in China, but liberals and conservatives were expected to clash over aid to violence-torn El Salvador.

 House-Senate bargainers renewed their effort to decide how to roll back the 1988 catastrophic health care law. The legislation provides coverage to elderly patients with long-term medical problems that otherwise could lead to financial ruin.
 When enacted, the measure had bipartisan and popular support. But well-organized lobbying by seniors objecting to the surtaxes they must pay to finance the program - reaching $800 this year for the most well-to-do - has convinced lawmakers to undo the program.
 The House wants to repeal the entire measure, but the Senate wants only to eliminate the surtax and most benefits, leaving coverage of hospital costs and other minor provisions intact.
 The two chambers agreed Saturday to terminate the program, but that deal unraveled Sunday. Legislators remained determined to reach a new compromise, rather than returning home to angry constituents.
 "We can't leave here without final disposition of this issue," said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas.
 Negotiators trying to strike a deal on a separate bill reducing this year's federal deficit also made scant progress as disputes arose over the savings in the measure and some of its provisions.

 President Bush has threatened to veto any measure failing to achieve at least $14 billion in legitimate savings. Congressional experts project that the shortfall for fiscal 1990 - which began Oct. 1 - will be about $141 billion.
 Bargainers from the House and Senate agreed to a budget-cutting deal early Saturday. But talks resumed Sunday after many lawmakers said the measure fell well short of the savings target, with Dole saying he thought it was insufficient by $5 billion to $6 billion.
 There seemed no disputing certain aspects of the package: that it contains about $5.3 billion in new tax revenues and billions in concocted savings achieved by shifting various payments out of the fiscal year.
 All sides agreed it also would have to be supplemented by several billion dollars in savings by retaining until at least January the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law's cuts in federal programs. Those reductions began Oct. 1.

Officials brace for flood of refugees

DALLAS (AP) - Charities and legal assistance agencies in Texas are bracing themselves for what they expect to be a new flood of refugees from El Salvador.
 About 30 lawyers attended a training seminar on political asylum litigation over the weekend at Southern Methodist University.
 The seminar, sponsored by Proyecto Adelante, the State Bar of Texas, Catholic Charities and the South Texas Pro Bono Asylum Representation Project, was aimed at combating what officials say is a critical shortage of lawyers willing to assist political refugees.
 Vicky Stifler, an attorney for Proyecto Adelante's Project Forward, a legal service representing Central American refugees, said the slayings of six Catholic priests in El Salvador is sure to have set many in that country packing.
 "I have no doubt the ones who make it out will be coming this way," Ms. Stifler said.
 Stifler said, "They travel by land, foot and bus so they won't be arriving tomorrow. It'll be a few weeks before they start trickling in."
 Ms. Stifler is the only full-time paid worker for Proyecto Adelante, where the majority of the clients are Salvadoran. She and a volunteer handle about 1,300 cases a year.
 "We haven't had to turn anyone away so far, but we're not going to be able to continue if we don't get some help," Ms. Stifler told the Dallas Times Herald.
 Some of those attending the training seminar said they hope news reports of the priests' deaths will spur more lawyers in Texas to assist refugees.

Thousands of immigrants still are being held in detention centers in South Texas and are in dire need of legal assistance, said Karen Keltz Haring, the director of Political Asylum Projects for Southern Methodist University.
 Ms. Haring said detained refugees must be prepared so they can effectively persuade judges and immigration officials their lives would be in jeopardy if they were not allowed to stay in this country.
 "Many don't speak English, or understand the workings of the court," Ms. Haring said. "It's hard enough for someone with a legal degree and who speaks English fluently to do it."
 One of the 30 lawyers undergoing the training said he is convinced that legal representation for refugees is the most neglected area of U.S. legal services.

 "I think this is probably the greatest area of need in this country that is not being met," said Steve Anderson, a business attorney with the Dallas firm of Akin, Gump, Strauss, Hauer & Feld. "I think a lot of the people would be facing a death sentence if they had to go back."
 Darrell Jordan, president of the State Bar of Texas, said he wished more lawyers had turned out for the training seminar and said he is committed to recruiting help for the refugees.
 "I expect the number of people being held in detention centers to increase (in light of the El Salvador murders)," he said. "But I hope the attention, the unfortunate publicity, will also increase the number of lawyers down there."

Bush to address nation on summit, East Bloc

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush will make a nationally broadcast address Wednesday evening on events in Eastern Europe and next month's summit with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, it was announced today.
 The speech, at 9 p.m. EST, will be broadcast from the presidential retreat at Camp David in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains, where Bush will be spending the Thanksgiving holidays.
 It will be only the second time in his presidency that Bush has made a prime-time, televised address. The first was Sept. 5 when he announced details of an anti-drug program.

 The White House also confirmed that the president will stop in Brussels, Belgium, after the superpower summit to brief the North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies on the talks.
 Bush and Gorbachev are to meet Dec. 2 and 3 on U.S. and Soviet warships in the Mediterranean off the coast of Malta.
 The opening of the Berlin Wall and the spread of democratic reforms in Eastern Europe are expected to dominate the meeting.

Elderly farm couple accused of murdering transients

By JOSH LEMIEUX
Associated Press Writer

CHILLICOTHE, Mo. (AP) — People in Livingston County say it's a friendly place. Folks trust each other, and nobody ever imagined it as a site for a series of slayings.

But three bodies were pulled from hidden graves in a barn Oct. 16. A week later, a body was found in another barn, shot in the head like the others. And up to nine men are missing.

Last week, an elderly farm couple in the northwestern Missouri county was charged in three killings, and people here say they're shaken by one of the largest and strangest murder investigations in the state.

Prosecutors say Ray Copeland, 75, and his 68-year-old wife, Faye, hired drifters to buy cattle with bad checks, conspiring to keep the proceeds when the animals were resold and killing the transients to keep them from talking.

The Copelands were charged in the three deaths in which the victims have been identified. They could face the death penalty if convicted. Their lawyers say they will plead innocent at a hearing set for later this month, and accuse prosecutors of running a "media circus" against their clients.

Dale Johnson of Chillicothe made his first-ever visit to the county courthouse a week ago to watch the Copelands arrive for their arraignment. Like others in this town of 10,000, he's shaken by the case.

"It's a friendly community. Everybody respects everybody," he said. Usually, news about gruesome killings comes from big cities, Johnson said, but "it's close to home this time."

Authorities acting on a tip arrested the Copelands on Oct. 9 and charged them with conspiracy in connection with a bad check. That day, officers began digging on the 40-acre farm where the Copelands have lived for 24 years.

Officers found no bodies at the site near Moresville, about 10 miles west of here. But in the following two weeks, four bodies were found at two farms where Copeland had done odd jobs. The investigation into the fourth death is continuing, as is the effort to find the missing men. Sheriff Leland O'Dell said 100 sites in the county have already been searched.

The victims whose names are known — Paul J. Cowart, 21, of Dardanelle, Ark.; John W. Freeman, 27, of Tulsa, Okla.; and Jimmie Dale Harvey, 27, of Springfield, — are described as transients who worked for the Copelands.

All had stayed at a mission in Springfield, 180 miles to the south, where Copeland recruited his workers. Prosecutors believe they all died during the past two years. The names of the nine others have not been made public. But they are also believed to have worked for the Copelands during the past three or four years, authorities said.

The Copelands remain jailed on $500,000 bond apiece. And the man whose tip led to the investigation remains jailed.

Jack McCormick is being held in neighboring Sullivan County, unable to make bond as he awaits a December trial in a bad check case.

McCormick, 57, said he began working for Copelands on July 26 and was recruited from the same mission where the dead men had stayed. He left Aug. 10, shortly after writing the checks that led to the charge against him.

In a telephone interview from jail, McCormick said Copeland told him "I'd get a chance to gain some respect. That's how he got me interested." Copeland offered $50 per day plus room and board, and set up a checking account for McCormick to buy cattle. McCormick said he didn't know two checks he passed were bad.

Ten days after leaving the Copelands', McCormick reported what he knew to a crime hotline, and that started the investigation that led to the couple's arrest and the search for the bodies. Meanwhile, though, bad-check charges were lodged against McCormick, and he was eventually arrested in Oregon.

Faye Copeland, 68, left, and her husband Ray Copeland, 75, right, were charged last week with three counts of first degree murder in connection with the discovery of three bodies buried in shallow graves in a barn. A fourth body was later discovered in a subsequent search.

Space station: project in search of a mission

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If all goes according to plan — and there's every likelihood that it won't — a space shuttle will leave its Florida launch pad in March 1995 carrying the first pieces of America's space station into orbit.

Ten flights and 28 months later, by the same shaky timetable, the parts flown up piece by piece will have been assembled into a place where men and women can live and work for months at a time, looking down at the Earth as they silently drift across the sky 250 miles high.

By August 1999, seven years late but just in time for the 21st Century, the space station will be finished, serving as a basic research laboratory for medicine, astronomy, space physics, and as a staging area for manned flights to the moon and beyond.

Mostly what stands in the way of this rosy scenario is money.

Space Station Freedom, as it is named, began as an $8 billion, 10-year project when President Reagan announced it in 1984. It has grown into a 15-year marathon likely to cost $19 billion or well over $30 billion, depending on whose figures you use.

From the start, the space station has had problems with money as well as with identity and purpose. Former Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin summed up the feelings of many in Congress when he called the space station "a project in search of a mission."

NASA administrator Richard Truly, a former astronaut, considers the space station "the cornerstone of our future in space," but admits the program has had a sputtering past.

"In the last five years, Space Station Freedom has undergone 11 major reviews, has faced nearly continual readjustments of its budget, has had a great deal of management turnover and has experienced several configuration and schedule changes," he says.

The management turnover reached its peak in May and June of this year when three top space station executives left NASA.

The budgeting process for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1 — the year in which the design phase ends and cutting of metal begins — illustrates the station's travails.

President Bush proposed that NASA get $2.05 billion for the space station, but the House Appropriations Committee in July decided to chop off $400 million. With that prospect, the space agency made plans for a 20 percent reduction only to readjust when actual appropriations ended at $1.85 billion.

"The thing that's really tough is the funding instability in the program," says William T. Lenoir, the NASA associate administrator and former astronaut who reversed a trend and returned to the agency from private life this year to take charge of the space flight and space station programs.

"In June of every year we don't know what the hell we are going to get in October," he says. "This year, beginning in June, we slowed the progress of the space station down because if we had continued to build on schedule there was a real danger that we'd get to October and be firing contractors and laying off civil service (employees)."

The House Committee on Science and Technology authorized three-year funding for NASA to give space programs some stability. However, congressional appropriations committees who vote the actual money have not gone along.

So NASA has to live with the uncertainty.

"We are very much prejudiced to starting to construct the space station in March 1995," Lenoir says. The choices then boil down, he says, to "can we start either less of a station in March 1995, or can we start in 1995 and let it take longer (to complete)? And last on our list is, 'Okay, we can't start in 1995.'"

The station is America's big project for the next decade. Even President Bush's space goal for returning Americans to the moon and then pushing on to Mars requires that a space station be in place first.

Loss of speech money should not affect Congress' perks

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In granting themselves a $31,000-plus pay raise, House members are agreeing to stop taking $2,000 a pop for speeches before interest groups and pocketing their campaign treasures when they retire.

But with the other perquisites around Capitol Hill, taxpayers can be assured their representatives would not have suffered even if they had given up the speeches and political money pots without an offsetting raise.

The current salary of $89,500 goes pretty far when your haircuts, gymnasium, parking, travel, meals, mail, insurance, retirement and telephone bills are subsidized by the Treasury.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader — who believes members of Congress should be paid about the same as their constituents, instead of being in the top 1 percent income bracket — once portrayed the system as "imperial legislators with their self-contained court of favors."

With the pay raise, the House members beginning in 1991 will have to give up the most profitable of those favors, the speech honoraria. Many senior lawmakers for years have been padding their incomes by up to 30 percent that way.

The Senate voted to give itself only a 10 percent pay raise, and to keep taking the speech money for now. The result is that the House and Senate incomes will remain roughly comparable, at more than $120,000 by 1991.

Like executives in the private sector, salary is just part of the remuneration package.

The National Taxpayers Union says the new pay package means that more than half of the House will be "pension millionaires." That is, once the pay hikes take effect, they can be expected to collect more than $1 million in benefits during their lives.

Members get health insurance like other federal employees, plus more personal and immediate attention if they so desire.

The Attending Physician's office provides doctors, nurses and technicians who can take x-rays, dispense drugs, give allergy and immunization shots and perform other services.

Staying in shape is convenient at the Senate Health Club and the House gymnasium. The Senate has an indoor tennis court; the House has a swimming pool, handball, volleyball and basketball court and a steam room.

Members pay half the cost of their $78,000 life insurance policies. Lawmakers don't get Christmas bonuses, but they often take government or privately financed "fact-finding" trips during the holidays.

Everything around the Capitol is geared toward making lawmakers feel like they own the place.

The subsidized barber shops and beauty salons cater to their needs at discount prices. There's a private movie theater, and gun enthusiasts have access to the Capitol Police firing range.

Works from the National Gallery of Art decorate their offices, and the Library of Congress is at their beck and call.

The restaurants have private dining rooms open to only members and their guests. If they get tired of the food, which is rather bland, they are allowed to take as many meals as they want from lobbyists.

There's talk that many senior House members will retire rather than run again in 1992, because after that they will no longer be allowed to keep for personal use the money in their campaign chests. In some cases that's more than $1 million.

But for the most part, members of Congress run for re-election again and again, and would have kept doing so even if their salaries didn't reach six figures any time soon.

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason why you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment. No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain of awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persistent back pain. Don't delay treatment when help is readily available.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Let the champagne flow for a few days

When freedom triumphs, it yells and parties. Germans properly celebrate, with rounds of toasts, the effective demolition of the Berlin Wall. And we Americans also should hoist a few. Our steadfast commitment to freedom during the dark night of totalitarianism has finally broken through the wall of tyranny. Even now, our military bases in West Germany are being used to give temporary shelter to refugees from the East.

After the celebrations, two questions will hurtle over the Wall toward us: the status of Red Army and NATO troops on either side of the Wall, and Germany's reunification. If events continue at their present pace, these questions must soon be answered, we hope amicably. Kremlin spokesman Gennady Gerasimov proclaims that East Germany may choose its own form of government but must remain part of the Warsaw Pact. Hundreds of thousands of Red Army troops, armed with the latest Soviet tanks, warplanes and nuclear weapons, remain stationed on East German soil.

But if East Germany gets a free, democratic government, its new representatives will ask: Why are troops here? If the Red Army won't keep East Germany communist, it's useless to keep troops stationed there whose only purpose is to force West Germany — and the rest of Europe — to become communist. And how much does it cost to maintain the Red Army, as well as the East German military? Can the country's rapidly declining economy afford this?

President Bush could aid things by working out a mutual withdrawal of Red Army and U.S. military forces from Europe, perhaps at his December summit with Mikhail Gorbachev. Bush should make sure that any actions do not ignite the powderkeg of instability. But now is the time to act.

As reunification, throughout most of history Germany was more a linguistic and cultural unity than a political one. The individual "lands" — such as Bavaria, Saxony, Hesse and Prussia — were mostly independent. Yet no hindrance was put on immigration and travel. Even when Germany was unified, in 1870, the lands retained much autonomy. Destructive centralization came, finally, in 1933, with Hitler.

When West Germany was constructed from the ashes of World War II, the lands were again given much autonomy. Hence West Germany's actual name: Bundesrepublik Deutschland, the Federal Republic of Germany. Alas, as in the United States, federalism has to a great extent been eroded by a centralized, bloated bureaucracy.

The best solution to the East German situation would be to return to a loose confederation, with centralized government kept to a minimum. That way Germany could effectively be "unified," but it would allow East Germany — under its old name, Prussia — to decommunize at its own rate.

These are the messy details that must be dealt with after a burst of freedom. But for a few days let the champagne corks pop and the steins be filled and refilled. Prosit!

Correcting a major injustice

On the evening of Nov. 2, Iowa's junior senator, Tom Harkin, took the floor to denounce Lt. Col. Oliver North.

Let me quote the senator exactly on the character of Ollie North: "Benedict Arnold was a hero of the Revolutionary War until he became a traitor. He fought bravely for this country until he became a traitor. Like Benedict Arnold, he threw it all away when he became a traitor to the Constitution."

A traitor, by definition, is one who commits treason. The Constitution defines treason as levying war against the United States, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. This was exactly what Benedict Arnold did. Did Oliver North commit treason in the Iran/Contra affair? The charge would curdle a billy goat's belly.

Harkin had not ended his demagoguery. He went on to compare North to the Nazi generals of World War II who obeyed "illegal" orders. Other senators also exuded poison gas. Joe Biden of Delaware said that North "is not a hero; he is a felon," and Biden added virtuously that "I sure would not want Ollie North teaching my children ethics." Biden's children should learn ethics from their father.

All this oratory preceded the Senate's vote of 78-17 to restore North's pension as a retired officer in the Marine Corps. The parliamentary situation should be understood. As introduced by Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, the bill did not identify North by name. It would have restored the pension rights of "any retired officer who has graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy, and who has been awarded the Silver Star, the Bronze Star and two Purple Hearts." Obviously this would have applied to North only.

James J. Kilpatrick

Several senators objected to a bill so narrowly targeted. They didn't want to take the political risk of voting to help Ollie North directly, so with Helms' consent the bill was revised to cover all retired officers so situated.

Much of the talk on this point was pure hypocrisy. Over the past seven years the Senate has passed 1,947 private relief bills; the tax reforms act bulges with individually tailored provisions.

Biden said that by having Congress interfere with the specific case of Ollie North, the Helms bill "violates the most basic principles of separation of powers," but Biden was quiet as a cockroach when the Senate voted on Sept. 7 to let Dr. Elizabeth Morgan out of jail for contempt. The generic cover-up was mere window dressing. Said Helms, in closing debate: "I will just say to Ollie North: This one is for you."

Precisely so. And high time. The cruelest of all punishments imposed upon North was the triggering of the statute that led to the loss of the pension he had earned in 20 years of service to his country. The money was not so important, though the North family is far from affluent. North owes his attorneys more than a million dollars. For a short while he may net $20,000 an engagement as a lecturer, but this will not last for long. The Marine pension symbolized his life.

Harkin's flutulent denunciations cannot obscure North's heroism. In 70 combat missions, North repeatedly risked his own life to lead his men into action. His citations ring with the clash of arms: "conspicuous gallantry in action ... complete disregard for his own safety ... fearlessly moved across the fireswept terrain ... resolutely refused medical attention and ignored his own painful injuries ..."

This is the "felon" that 17 senators voted to punish. They were indifferent to the argument that the law under which North's pension was suspended was an ambiguous law. The statute says that anyone who willfully and unlawfully destroys a government record may be fined and imprisoned, "and shall forfeit his office." The question was whether the pension of a retired Marine Corps officer is an "office" subject to forfeiture. Authorities disagreed.

There was no disagreement on the law's unique application to North. The statute does not affect the pensions of crooked congressmen. A Cabinet secretary could be convicted of embezzlement and not lose his retirement pay. Only by a peculiar interpretation could North be singled out.

North's sin was that he did his damndest as a loyal Marine to serve his commander in chief. He can be forgiven for lying to Congress — everybody lies to Congress and Congress lies to everyone else — but his destruction of documents was a woeful mistake. For this he has been punished plenty. In restoring his pension, the Senate has moved to correct at least some of the injustice that has been done.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Nov. 20, the 324th day of 1989. There are 41 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Two hundred years ago, on Nov. 20, 1789, New Jersey became the first state to ratify the Bill of Rights.

On this date:

In 1620, Peregrine White, the son of William and Susanna White, was born aboard the "Mayflower" in Massachusetts Bay — the first child to be born of English parents in present-day New England.

In 1910, revolution broke out in Mexico, led by Francisco I. Madero.

In 1925, Senator Robert F. Kennedy was born in Brookline, Mass.

In 1929, the radio program, The Rise of the Goldbergs, later simply The Goldbergs, made its debut on the NBC Blue Network.

In 1945, 24 Nazi leaders were put on trial before an international war crimes tribunal in Nuremberg, Germany.

You can always buy American

Fumio Matsuda is the Ralph Nader of Japan. He says Japanese car makers have been cheating.

He says they send "special cars" to be used in crash tests, cars made of thicker everything.

But, says Matsuda, these are not the same cars that they then put on the market, with thinner everything.

Thus, he says, the Japanese are getting a reputation they do not deserve for making better cars when actually, "Japanese cars and trucks are poorly designed, fraught with defects and downright unsafe."

Matsuda, formerly an engineer for Japan's Nissan Car Company, conceivably could have an ax to grind. Nonetheless, he claims and comforts, "American cars are safer."

Japan's Ministry of Transportation is not denying what Matsuda says and promises to conduct an investigation of his allegations.

Further, The Wall Street Journal reports some of the food we have been importing from overseas is contaminated.

On campus at Mississippi State University, shortly after one recent cafeteria breakfast, more than 20 students became ill.

The illness was traced to mushrooms in omelets — mushrooms imported from China in 68-ounce cans — mushrooms contaminated with staphylococcal bacteria.

The Food and Drug Administration says its limited staff of inspectors cannot keep up with the recent tide of imported food. Much escape inspection.

Food imports have tripled over the past 15 years to a present 30 billion pounds a year.

Said another way, 20 billion American dollars went thataway.

Of all imported products tested, 40 percent do not meet FDA small percentage of imported foods for bacteria. Millions of pounds of imported food may be unfit to eat.

Take the stuff coming across our own border from Mexico, 700 truckloads a day.

The USDA's inspectors and supervisors in Nogales are watching only for blemishes, not poisons.

The FDA hears reports of food poisoning from imported food in New York and Pennsylvania.

In Massachusetts two women had to have their stomachs pumped after eating canned lobster from Canada. (It contained listeria and other bacteria.)

Since 1988, there have been five recalls of Danish cheese; recalls of frozen rabbits from Hong Kong; of canned tuna from Samoa and chewing gum from Guatemala; horseradish from Japan; jam from Hungary.

An FDA supervisor in Houston is trying to cover 1,200 miles of the Gulf Coast and the Mexican border with six inspectors.

Of 60,000 shipments of Canadian food grains and fish crossing into Pembina, N.D., each year, only 40 samples get tested for pesticide.

And even where "faulty food" is detected, unscrupulous importers are likely to find a way to get it onto the U.S. market anyway.

The chances of getting caught are small and the penalties even smaller.

You have the best chance for controlling this situation; you can always buy American.

Bork strikes a blow against judiciary

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Robert Bork has written a book about the legal principles that ought to govern the interpretation of the Constitution, and it is a blockbuster. It is bound to have an enormous impact, no matter how hard the liberals try to denigrate or ignore it.

If it receives the attention and respect it deserves, it may well alter the course of our legal and social history.

The Tempting of America (The Free Press, $22.50) describes, in its final quarter, the bruising (and losing) battle over President Reagan's nomination of Judge Bork to the Supreme Court.

But the legal meat of the book, for thoughtful Americans and, one senses, for Bork himself, is in its earlier pages. In lucid prose accessible to any intelligent reader, Bork carefully describes the necessary rules of constitutional interpretation, show how and by whom they have been violated, and explains — devastatingly — why.

Bork begins at the beginning: "Either the Constitution and statutes are law, which means that their principles are known and control judges, or they are malleable texts that judges may rewrite to see that particular groups or political causes win."

Bork thus locates the "doctrine of original understanding" at the very heart of the judicial process. He carefully points out that both liberals and conservatives have been tempted to disregard it in pursuit of political objectives in the past, but he has no doubt whatever whence the danger comes today: "The abandonment of original understanding in modern times means the transportation into the Constitution of the principles of a liberal culture that cannot achieve those results democratically."

Bork then traces the history of the long and increasingly successful original intent: Chief Justice Taney's "transformation of the due process clause from a procedural to a substantive requirement" in the Dred Scott case, making slave ownership legal even where state law prevented it;

Lochner v. New York ("the symbol, indeed the quintessence, of judicial usurpation of power"), which struck down a state law specifying maximum hours in the baking industry; Griswold v. Connecticut ("a loose canon in the law"), in which Justice Douglas, to invalidate a Connecticut ban on the sale of contraceptives, discovered a previously unrecognized "right of privacy" in certain "penumbras, formed by emanations" from the specific guarantees in the Bill of Rights; and so on down to the wholesale legislative jurisprudence of the Warren Court.

Significantly, Bork does not wholly exonerate the Burger or even the Rehnquist Court.

"We have recently gone," he concedes, "from having a reliably liberal Court to having a mildly and some what inconsistently left-liberal Court."

But the fact remains that "we are increasingly governed not by law or elected representatives but by an unelected, unrepresentative, unaccountable committee of lawyers applying no will but their own."

Bork contends that the battle over his own nomination to the Supreme Court "was ultimately about whether intellectual class values, which are far more egalitarian and socially permissive, which is to say left-liberal, than those of the public at large and so cannot carry elections, were to continue to be enacted into law by the Supreme Court ... The behavior of the people involved reflects a left-liberal culture in near despair. The members of that culture know they are a minority, and they were desperate not to lose a battle in which symbolism as much as substance was at stake."

The liberal critics are already moving to discredit The Tempting of America, and no wonder. It is the most damaging blow to their pretensions — of constitutional scholarship or even intellectual honesty — in many a moon. Get it and read it, and you may agree with me that Judge Bork, in writing it, has served his country almost as well as he would have served it on the court.

Viewpoints differ over value of storing frozen blood

By WOODY BAIRD
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Here you are in the age of AIDS, preparing for surgery that may require a transfusion. Is the blood available from the local blood bank safe? Should you have some of your own set aside?

Yes, and yes, doctors say.
What if you just want some of your blood on hand in case you're hit by a truck or need an emergency operation — is it worthwhile?

Probably not, say the American Red Cross and traditional blood banks.

Yes, say those who freeze and store blood for a fee. "A blood transfusion is the most intimate contact you can have with another human being. It is more intimate than sex," said Dr. Joseph Feldschuh of New York, who founded an independent frozen blood lab in 1985. The Food and Drug Administration says 18 such companies are licensed in the United States.

Freezing blood for long-term storage is nothing new. The Red Cross has been doing it without charge since 1964 for people with rare blood, and has 10,000 pints in frozen storage at 56 centers. Non-donors may use it in emergencies.

Companies began getting into freezing four or five years ago because of AIDS anxiety but "there has been a low level of such activity," said Dr. Toby Simon, president of the American Association of Blood Banks.

The Pentagon kicked off the world's largest frozen blood program in October, a five-year project to draw 45,000 pints a year toward stockpiling 225,000 pints domestically and abroad for use during combat or disasters.

Medical authorities, including the American Medical Association, agree that whether the concern is disease or simply the best match, the safest blood you can receive is your own.

But freezing blood on speculation is another matter. Liquid blood has a shelf life of 42 days, while frozen blood can be kept 20 years or more.

But dealing with frozen blood, which must be thawed and cleaned of chemicals added during freezing, is expensive and there is no guarantee it will be available where and when it is needed, Simon said.

In an emergency, the chance of contracting disease through a transfusion pales beside the risk of dying without it, said Dr. Arthur Kellermann, director of emergency services at the Regional Medical Center at Memphis and a professor of emergency medicine at the University of Tennessee, Memphis.

But James W. Jarvis, who runs a Miami-based blood storage company, said setting aside a permanent supply "can provide a layer of protection for your family and yourself that is not otherwise there."

His Personal Blood Storage of America Inc. recently opened an office near the Federal Express air shipment hub in Memphis, guaranteeing delivery anywhere in the country in six hours.

Six hours can be too long in an emergency, Kellermann countered.

The Red Cross and military frozen blood programs have nothing to do with fear of disease, said Dr. Gerald Sandler, the Red Cross' medical director.

The risk of getting AIDS through a transfusion is about one in 100,000 — "better than the odds of getting through your operation," he said.

A greater statistical risk is hepatitis, with the chances of infection at two to four in 100 per pint of blood.

A new screening test to be used starting next year is expected to reduce that to one in a hundred or less.

Those risks are enough, Feldschuh said, for concern. His Idant Laboratories will store a pint of blood for $12.50 a month, plus $85 in drawing and testing fees and about $45 for processing when it's time to use the blood.

At Personal Blood Storage, it costs $295 to store a pint for four years, and $4 a month after that.

Additional charges totaling $125 are likely when the blood is used, plus any shipping, said spokeswoman Laura Hardy.

On average, a person getting a transfusion gets four pints, says the Red Cross, which collects half of the 12 million pints of blood drawn annually in the United States.

It puts the average cost of a pint of blood at $52. Hospital fees may add $50 to that, said Bob Rigney of the blood bank association.

Most medical insurance does not pay for storing blood on speculation but generally covers all costs when it's time to use the blood, said Jarvis, whose company has freezers in Florida and South Carolina as well as Memphis.

He wouldn't say how many customers he has or how much blood is in the freezers. Idant, a subsidiary of Daxor Corp., which runs what it bills as the world's largest frozen sperm bank, also wouldn't release those figures.

CAF rejects Midland bid for museum

HARLINGEN (AP) — Confederate Air Force members have rejected a proposal to move the organization and its World War II aviation museum from Harlingen to Midland, CAF leaders said.

Although the Midland proposal won 70.57 percent of the vote Saturday, it fell short of the amount needed for approval.

CAF bylaws require at least 75 percent of voting members to approve a headquarters move before the organization's staff can begin negotiations.

The results showed 1,695 and 707 against the $6 million offer from Midland officials, who hoped the tourist attraction would move.

The referendum began with votes cast in person at the CAF's general membership meeting Oct. 13 during Airsho '89.

Absentee voting continued until this month.

"That means that the Midland referendum is rejected," said Ralph Royce, executive director of the 6,500-member CAF.

CAF officials say they must move from the Valley International Airport in Harlingen because an expansion project under way at the airport does not fit in with the CAF's plans for growth.

The CAF, which started near Harlingen in 1957, is dedicated to preserving World War II aircraft in flying condition, and maintaining the memory of the war effort.

It has about 145 World War II aircraft of 61 different types. Every CAF member is called a "colonel."

Estimates show the CAF draws as many as 75,000 visitors annually to Harlingen, an annual economic impact on the Lower Rio Grande Valley of between $35 million and $50 million.

Midland resident Joe Mabee, a CAF general staff member who pushed the proposal to move the CAF to his city, declined serious comment Saturday, but joked, "We lost by a landslide."

Thirteen other areas have presented proposals to attract the CAF, but Midland was the only one under consideration in this referendum. Midland may submit another proposal.

The organization heard pitches Saturday by representatives from Brownsville, 25 miles south of Harlingen, and Longview, in northeast Texas.

"We felt just as encouraged before the vote as we do now with the vote announced," said Roddy Bland, executive vice president of the Greater Longview Economic Development Foundation and the Longview Chamber of Commerce.

Longview is offering the CAF a 20-year, $6 million loan for new facilities at the Gregg County Airport.

Brownsville, with the backing of the Rio Grande Valley Chamber of Commerce, has offered a $13 million package including a commitment to raise $3 million, a utility abatement for 20 years and 50 acres of land.

Genetic tests confirm babies were swapped at hospital

By PAT LEISNER
Associated Press Writer

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Robert Mays sat quietly after hearing proof that he and his wife left a hospital 10 years ago with someone else's baby, leaving behind their real daughter who later died from a heart defect.

Moments after receiving the news, he asked where his biological daughter was buried, according to his attorney.

"I think it depressed him he had a child he never met that died," said Mays' lawyer Arthur Ginsburg after genetic test results made public Sunday proved Kimberly Michelle Mays is the daughter of another couple.

The 10-year-old girl has been the focus of a custody battle between Mays — a Sarasota roofing contractor whose wife, Barbara, died in 1981 — and Ernest and Regina Twigg, who claim they lost their newborn in a baby swap at a rural central Florida hospital in December 1978.

John Blakely, the Twiggs' attorney, said the tests give a 99.9 percent certainty that Kimberly is the Twiggs' daughter and a 98 percent chance that the girl who died last year of a congenital heart defect, Arlena, was Mays'. The tests left no doubt about parentage, lawyers for both sides said.

Arlena, raised by the Twiggs as one of their own, was buried in Pennsylvania. Just before her death in August 1988, the Twiggs learned through genetic testing that she wasn't related to them.

(AP Laserphotos)

Robert Mays, left, and his late wife, Barbara, are not the parents of the girl they took home from a hospital after her birth 10 years ago, genetic tests have shown.

In the search for their biological daughter, they discovered that Kimberly and Arlena were born three days apart at Hardee Memorial Hospital in Wauchula.

During a subsequent court battle, Mays resisted the Twiggs' efforts to subject Kimberly to genetic testing. The impasse was broken last month, when the Twiggs promised not to seek custody regardless of the outcome. But they kept the option to seek visits with the hazel-eyed fifth-grader.

Mays, who was in seclusion Sunday, planned to take his only daughter away to break the news privately and to reassure her that she would never have to leave him, Ginsburg said.

"I think the thing he's going to emphasize is 'just don't worry about anything. ... I'm going to stay your daddy and we're going to stay together for the rest of our lives,'" the attorney said.

The Twiggs have sued Hardee officials in U.S. District Court in Tampa, claiming employees switched their baby shortly after birth. They also persuaded the FBI to investigate the hospital and its employees, but the agency failed to find sufficient evidence that federal law had been violated.

The hospital Sunday referred questions to attorney Janet Adams, who could not be reached at her office. Her home telephone number in Orlando is unlisted.

Attorneys for both families believe a switch occurred at the hospital, but said they don't know how.

The Twiggs and their seven other children, ages 6 through 21, attended a news conference with Blakely in Clearwater to announce results of the tests by Johns Hopkins University. They talked about the long ordeal, and said they were overwhelmed and anxious to meet Kimberly.

Both sides will have psychologists talk with Kimberly and draw up a visitation schedule to be approved by a Sarasota Circuit judge.

Mrs. Twigg, a substitute elementary teacher, said when she meets Kimberly she plans "to take things very slow and chat with her about what she likes to do."

Mrs. Twigg said she and her husband, a railroad ticket agent, feel cheated. "All of us have suffered enormously. There is anger and outrage," she said.

The Twiggs want to take Kimberly to Pennsylvania to meet grandparents, and 15 aunts and uncles.

"I'm relieved we found out she is my sister," said Irisa Ploypse, the Twiggs' oldest daughter who recently married. "We've been waiting a long time for this."

Kimberly Mays, in a 1988 photo, was apparently the victim of a baby swap at her birth.

Two months after Hugo, even counselors need counseling

By TOM STRONG
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Every time a breeze stirs, Jackie Puckett's mind races back to that horrible September night when Hurricane Hugo smashed into Charleston and devastated the state.

"It's hard for me to hear the wind blow and not to think of 135 mph winds," said Puckett, who coordinates a 24-hour mobile crisis unit in Charleston that offers help for the mentally ill and hurricane victims.

"I'll probably always remember that sound, and I'll probably never be able to be in high winds without having a twinge."

Puckett is among those coping with that reminder of the Sept. 21 storm, which killed 29 in South Carolina and caused an estimated $4 billion in damage, while helping hurricane victims confront psychological trauma.

Two months after the storm, even counselors are receiving counseling.

"I think what was unusual about Hugo was that it traumatized half of our state directly," said Nancy Carter, one of the state mental health department's two emergency response coordinators, "while the other half of the state has been traumatized responding and helping our victims." Twenty-four of the state's 46 counties have been declared disaster areas.

The state mental health department conservatively estimates that 60,000 people will need counseling. The agency arrived at the figure by using a formula recommended by the National Institute of Mental Health that takes into consideration deaths and homes damaged or destroyed.

Mental health officials said they do not know how many hurricane victims have come into regional mental health centers or been visited by counselors going door to door, which account for about 80 percent of the therapy. Nor do the officials know how many counselors are helping victims.

Puckett's crisis unit, a team of six counselors, has seen 250 people on an emergency basis so far in November, compared with about 75 in a normal month. The symptoms run the gamut: disorientation, agitation, grief, bewilderment, hopelessness, depression, suicidal tendencies, hostility, survival guilt and sleep disorders.

The hurricane traumatized the mentally and emotionally ill already undergoing treatment. But it also deeply affected many who had never before sought counseling.

"We've had calls on people we've never seen before, people who are affluent, who have resources ... who've never been in a position of calling for help. They're used to ... pretty much getting along," Puckett said.

Many relate their experiences to a dream: They hope to awake soon and find their lives back to normal.

Counselors help victims accept the situation "and then try to rebuild their world," Puckett said.

Counselors also try to calm fears that another natural disaster will strike.

Helped by federal aid, the state has added counselors and administrative staff. Last month, the state received a $300,000 FEMA grant covering the first 60 days of relief; the state hired about 25 counselors on a temporary basis with the money.

Today, the state planned to apply for a $1.5 million grant that would extend through the next nine months.

"It seems like there's never enough (counselors)," Puckett said.

That's creating problems for the care-givers, many of whom are suffering from emotional and physical exhaustion, officials said.

As a result, counselors are helping counselors.

The South Carolina Baptist Convention, for instance, is offering counseling to church ministers and others who have given advice to hurricane victims.

"We've seen a lot of ministers and a lot of lay people who hit the wall emotionally and had a lot of emotional questions, a lot of spiritual questions," said George W. Bullard Jr., a church spokesman.

Buck Helm's death grim reminder of quake

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The death of Buck Helm, who amazed rescuers by surviving four days beneath tons of concrete in a collapsed freeway, was a grim reminder of the destruction wrought by the Northern California earthquake.

Just 20 hours earlier, residents cheered the reopening of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge as a symbol of recovery from the Oct. 17 quake, which toppled a 50-foot section of the span, killed 67 people and caused $7 billion in damage.

"I'm sure this will hit a lot of people hard," said Steve Whipple, the state Department of Transportation engineer who found Helm in the early hours of Oct. 21.

"I was under the impression that he was going to make it," Whipple said. "It was just going to take a long while."

Helm, who turned 58 on Nov. 10, died of respiratory failure at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center on Saturday evening, 28 days after his rescue.

The rescue of the burly longshoreman's clerk buoyed spirits of rescuers depressed by the rising death toll in the collapse of Interstate 880 in Oakland — and cheered people across the country who watched the drama on television.

"I'm still glad we found him and gave him a better fighting chance than he would have had otherwise," Whipple added. "It picked our spirits up and made all our work worth it."

In a statement, Helm's family said: "To many, Buck had become a symbol of survival and hope."

"For the Helms, the thousands of cards and letters from all corners of the world gave Buck and the family strength and encouragement, and for that they are forever grateful," said the release issued by Gary Frischer, a Beverly Hills spokesman hired by the family after Helm was rescued.

"He represented more than just a person. I think to many people he very much represented the event of the earthquake," said Ron Treleven, a Kaiser Permanente spokesman.

The 220-pound, 5-foot-10 Helm suffered a fractured skull, fractured neck, three broken ribs, nerve damage to his leg and kidney problems caused by dehydration. He also had diabetes and high blood pressure.

Others were rescued from the freeway immediately after the quake, but Helm was the only survivor to be pulled from the wreckage after crews began gingerly searching through rubble remaining on the teetering structure.

Benefit concert cut short by tear gas

FORT WORTH (AP) — A country music concert to benefit people with AIDS was halted after a tear gas canister was hurled into the lobby of the building where the event was being held, police said.

No one was injured in the incident Saturday night, and fire and emergency medical crews helped clear tear gas vapors from the Texas & Pacific building, authorities said.

About 2,000 people were listening to the country band Mason Dixon when the canister was thrown in the lobby about 10:40 p.m., said concert-goer Leo Russell of San Antonio.

The concert was sponsored by the Texas Gay Rodeo Association.

Russell said he and others inside the building suffered burning noses and throats from the tear gas. Many fled through a back door.

"When we went around front, we saw there had been a lot of people in the lobby," Russell told The Dallas Morning News. "They were outside coughing and crying."

Machinists reach agreement with Boeing Aircraft officials

SEATTLE (AP) — Boeing machinists tonight will approve an agreement to end a strike that has virtually shut down production at the world's largest maker of commercial aircraft, a key union leader predicted.

A tentative contract, which affects more than 57,000 workers in nine states and was expected to set a standard for other aircraft manufacturers, was agreed upon early Sunday.

The agreement culminated 14 hours of talks during which a federal mediator took the unusual step of presenting his own proposal. It was accepted by a 3-2 vote among negotiators for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

The 48-day strike — longest against The Boeing Co. in 41 years — has delayed deliveries of jets to airlines at a time of growing passenger loads and rising concern over the nation's aging commercial airline fleets.

Tom Baker, president of Machinists District Lodge 751, praised the three-year pact as a substantial improvement over two earlier Boeing offers.

"I feel it will be ratified overwhelmingly," he said.

But Justin Ostro, an international vice president who coordinates aerospace industry negotiations for the Machinists, had harsh words for the agreement and the way it was reached.

"There's a great deal of sacrifice on the part of these members," Ostro said. "They were entitled to a great deal more."

Union members meet at Seattle's Kingdome at 8 p.m. PST to vote after hearing an explanation and arguments about the contract. Meetings also are set for 5 p.m. CST in Wichita, Kan., and 8 p.m. in Portland, Ore.

Strikers picketing outside Boeing plants Sunday were happy to hear about the agreement.

"I'm pretty sure everybody will go for it. We're tired of standing around in the rain," said Elaine Campbell, who was doing just that outside a Boeing jet plant in suburban Renton.

Outside corporate headquarters, picket Dave McMurrin said people were starting to feel the pinch of being on strike. "If they put the last contract offer in front of members, I think it would have passed," he said.

Boeing chief negotiator Larry McKean said if the pact is approved, strikers could return to work Wednesday. "At this point we're looking forward to a favorable vote on this contract and a return to normal operations," he said.

Analysts have said a settlement with the Boeing Machinists traditionally sets the pattern for other aerospace companies, especially Lockheed and McDonnell Douglas, as well as for other unions at Boeing.

CORNING ANNOUNCES GLARE CONTROL LENSES

If you want to reduce glare and relieve discomfort during many visual tasks, there is one simple thing you can do: filter out ultra violet and blue light.

The Corning Glass Company who originally developed Photogray changeable tinted lenses has developed a new type of lens for today's needs. By reducing glare you usually improve contrast and functional vision. Corning Research shows that 80% of patients who wear CPF lenses experience sharper vision and better depth perception. 87% of wearers reported significantly reduced glare and haze.

Those who could benefit from this new Corning CPF lens would include: "People who work under fluorescent lighting, such as in offices or schools.

"People who are bothered by glare and eye strain.
"Computer users.
"Persons with developing cataracts and some retina problems.
"Any one with unusual light sensitivity.

The lenses are available in light weight and inexpensive clip on flip ups. Prescription lenses can also be tinted.

Eighteenth century centerpiece held fruit that was not to be eaten

Bunches of grapes, fruit, candy, cakes and flowers were displayed in the center of the table in this 1781 English epergne. An impressive centerpiece used for decoration only. The food was not to be eaten.

In 1989 a large dinner such as the family get-together for Thanksgiving is probably served at a table in the dining room. A tablecloth covers the wooden table and food is either served buffet-style or family-style with many bowls on the table. At the end of the main course all of the dishes are removed and dessert is served on clean plates.

That would not have been the proper way to serve a dinner in earlier days. Dinner was very informal and crowded until the 17th century. The bare tables in the "great hall" were filled with platters of food, meat was cut with a knife but eaten with the fingers. The bones were tossed to the waiting dogs in the room. "Russian service" was initiated at the end of the century when the dining became more private. Dishes were passed, the center of the table was decorated and forks were used.

By the 18th century huge centerpieces were in style. They were made up of flowers, porcelain figures and the sweetmeats to be eaten for dessert. By the 19th century the wealthy Americans had new customs. The entire table was cleared before dessert was served. A group of footmen would remove the cloth while two servants held the centerpiece epergne in the air. Then the epergne with its fruit and sweetmeats was returned into position and dessert was served on the bare table. It seems strange to us that the centerpiece food was never eaten.

Other cakes and sweets were brought to the table. It was considered rude to eat a grape from the decorative bunch in the epergne basket. Today most of us do not have platoons of servants or laundresses so the dinner and dessert is served on a cloth-covered table. But the epergne as an elaborate centerpiece holding fruit, nuts and cakes is still used.

The Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, Mich., is planning an exhibition called "America on Vacation." They need help. They are looking for a cartop rack, Scotch cooler, fishing equipment and golf equipment of the 1950s, 1940s swimsuits, 1930s ski equipment and all sorts of paper bumper stickers and decals for vacation spots and other unusual material about travel in the 20th century. They even need snapshots and home movies of you and your family at vacation spots. If you have anything that might be useful and you wish to donate it, write to Donna Braden, Henry Ford Museum, P.O. Box 1970, Dearborn, MI 48121.

Q. Does it pay to restore my wicker chair so I can use it on a porch? The wooden leg is cracked and some of the wicker is loose but it all seems to be there.

A. First decide the age and value of the chair. An elaborate armchair made before 1900 is worth twice as much as a simpler 1930s chair. A new chair may be worth less than half as much as the 1930s chair. New pieces are often made on bamboo frames, are lighter in weight and often have woven seats.

A broken leg can easily be repaired if the break is below the wicker. Just use a good wood glue. Minor wicker damage can be a do-it-yourself project. Wet the wicker to make it pliable, reweave and bend into until it dries. Heavily repainted wicker is difficult to fix and almost impossible to strip.

Q. When were pieces marked "Nippon"?

A. Nippon was used as a mark from 1891 to 1921. It was used to identify wares imported into the United States from Japan. After 1921 the word "Japan" was used. Nippon was the Japanese name for Japan. The mark "Nippon" is still being used as a maker's mark, but not to indicate the country of origin.

Adoption week celebrates joy

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The week of Nov. 19-25 is National Adoption Week. Because of the positive attitude you have expressed toward adoption, and your apparent understanding of both the joy and sorrow that adoption brings to those involved, you have the potential to influence the attitudes of millions of people.

Will you kindly publish a particularly meaningful letter concerning adoption?

NEDRA RANDOLPH,
ADOPTION COUNSELOR,
HOUSTON

DEAR NEDRA: With pleasure: DEAR ABBY: My daughter just turned 10. On her birthday, I shed a few tears. I wish I could have held her and told her all the things a mother should tell her daughter when she turns 10. I wish I could have dressed her up and put ribbons in her hair, and ridden the merry-go-round with her until we both got sick, then laughed ourselves silly rolling down hills in the park.

I also said a little prayer of thanks for having made the decision 10 years ago to give her up for adoption. I was barely 16 and wanted my daughter to have a better life than I could have given her.

I feel confident that the parents who were blessed with her can give her what I could not and will love her as much as I do.

I pray my daughter realizes that it was not for lack of love that I gave her up, but because my love was brave and mature enough to let her go when I was but a child myself.

I pray that when she is 18, she will decide to look me up through an adoption search group and we will meet again. The last time I held her tiny hand, she was only 10 days old.

Until then, my thoughts and prayers are with her and her parents.

HOPEFUL IN L.A.

DEAR HOPEFUL: Are you aware that biological parents can register with International Soundex Reunion Registry, P.O. Box 2312, Carson City, Nev. 89702? Adopted children may also register, and when they become legal age, if both parties are registered and want to find each other, a match is made.

Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to the above registry, requesting Soundex forms.

I have dealt with the people at the registry for many years and have found them to be efficient, honest and in total agreement with my feelings that neither the identity of the birth parents nor the adopted child shall be disclosed unless both parties are agreeable to a reunion.

DEAR ABBY: I will never forget a letter you had in your column from a young adopted girl who asked you how to go about finding her "real" parents.

I recall reacting very strongly to that letter because I was also adopted — a fact I had known all my life. I can't remember when I first found out because Mom and Dad told me as soon as I was able to understand what adoption meant. They told me I was a very special child — that they had their choice of babies, and I was the one they chose.

When I was a kid, I used to brag about it because I felt so "special." Now I realize that my parents may have gone overboard because they didn't want me to feel insecure or inferior to my friends who were being raised by their biological parents.

Because I've made no secret of the fact that I was adopted, I've had people ask me if I know who my "real" parents are. I simply reply, "I know who my real parents are. They are the people who fed me, clothed me and taught me right from wrong. They are the ones who sat up with me all night when I was sick and waited up for me when I stayed out later than I should have. They paid for my education and convinced me that I could be whatever I wanted to be. I owe them more than I can ever repay."

I'm married now and I have children of my own, which makes me appreciate my parents even more because I know how hard it is to be a parent. So why should I go searching for my "real" parents? I found them the day they found me.

ADOPTED IN ILLINOIS
DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been very happily married for 14 years and have four children. My problem is my parents, who take frequent vacations and short trips.

Every time they return from one of their trips, they bring some kind of gift for each of our children and me — but there's never anything for my husband.

Although he has never said anything, I can tell he feels hurt. I would prefer that my parents bring presents for the children only and nothing for me if they can't bring something for my husband. My parents are very loving and generous people, but I'm afraid if I tell them how I feel, they might think I am ungrateful.

What do you think, Abby? Perhaps if my parents (or other people who are guilty of the same thing) read this letter, they will remember to bring something for everybody in the family — or nothing at all.

HURTING FOR HUBBY

DEAR HURTING: Tell your parents how you feel. Don't assume they might think you ungrateful. If they are truly "loving and generous people," they will appreciate your calling this oversight to their attention, and admire you for your sensitivity and caring attitude for your husband.

Vikings stay atop NFC Central despite loss to Eagles

By The Associated Press

The Minnesota Vikings trailed by 1 with a minute left in Philadelphia and had a first down at the Eagles' 36. But the Vikings, criticized by their fans for poor play-calling all season, threw four straight incomplete passes and lost 10-9.

"It was a discouraging loss," Minnesota coach Jerry Burns said Sunday after the Vikings had 10 penalties for 74 yards and lost the ball four times. In the final minute, Viking quarterback Wade Wilson threw three straight medium-range passes, all incomplete. Then, rather than try a 53-yard field goal by Rich Karlis, whose career long is 51 yards, Burns sent receiver Leo Lewis long.

Lewis was open, but Wilson barely overthrew him near the goal line, and the final score stayed 10-9.

Both teams now are 7-4. The Vikings still lead the NFC Central by one game over Chicago and Green Bay, while the Eagles stayed two games behind New York in the NFC East.

Karlis was 1-for-2.

Philadelphia went ahead 10-9 on Randall Cunningham's 3-yard touchdown pass to Cris Carter with 2:32 left in the fourth quarter. The score was set up by Walker's fumble, which was picked up by Byron Evans. He lateraled to Eric Allen on a play that carried 24 yards to the Minnesota 20.

"I think I was changing the ball from one hand to the other while making a cut," Walker said. "I don't know what happened, whether somebody got a hand in there."

Packers 21, 49ers 17

Quarterback Don Majkowski ran for two touchdowns and passed for another as Green Bay (6-5) stopped San Francisco (9-2). The 49ers and the Giants are tied for the league's best record.

Joe Montana completed 30 of 42 passes for 325 yards for San Francisco.

The 49ers allowed six sacks and hurt themselves with four turnovers and a season-high 10 penalties. An offside call wiped out an apparent 96-yard interception return for a touchdown by Chet Brooks. Buccaneers 32, Bears 31

Donald Igwebuike kicked a 28-yard field goal as time expired, his fourth field goal of the game, as Tampa Bay (4-7) beat Chicago (6-5).

The Bears' Mike Tomczak, who replaced struggling starter Jim Harbaugh, threw three touchdown passes in the final 4:27, while Kevin Butler kicked his 23rd field goal without a miss.

Chiefs 10, Browns 10

Kansas City kicker Nick Lowery missed twice in the final four seconds of regulation and missed again with three seconds left in overtime, resulting in the first tie of the year.

AFC Central-leading Cleveland improved to 7-3-1; the Chiefs fell to 4-6-1 in a game that turned into a grudge match as former Browns coach Marty Schottenheimer, now in Kansas City, returned to Cleveland.

Lowery kicked a 41-yard field goal with and defensive end Leonard Marshall had a safety for the Giants (9-2). Seattle fell to 4-7.

Rams 37, Cardinals 14

Jim Everett passed for 308 yards and threw two touchdowns to Henry Ellard as Los Angeles trounced visiting Phoenix.

The Rams (7-4) intercepted four passes, including Michael Stewart's 41-yard return for a touchdown on the third play from scrimmage. The Cardinals are 5-6.

Bengals 42, Lions 7

Barney Bussey recovered a blocked punt in the end zone, the first time Cincinnati has scored on a blocked kick in 11 years, as the Bengals scored 28 points in the second quarter.

Cincinnati (6-5) won for just the second time in six games and Detroit (2-9) lost again on the road.

Boomer Esiason threw three touchdown passes. He completed 30 of 39 attempts for 399 yards and Tim McGee caught a regular-season team-record 11 for 194 yards.

The Lions, the most error-prone team in the NFL, fumbled five times in the first half and lost another fumble and had two passes intercepted in the second half.

Dolphins 17, Cowboys 14

Dan Marino completed another "Hail Mary" pass for a touchdown as Miami (7-4) won at Dallas. Luis Zendejas missed a 53-yard field goal attempt on the final play of the game for the Cowboys (1-10).

Sammie Smith's 1-yard touchdown run early in the fourth quarter helped the Dolphins overcome a 14-10 deficit.

On the last play of the first half, Marino lofted a 48-yard pass into the end zone and Andre Brown outjumped five defenders.

Oilers 23, Raiders 7

Houston had three interceptions, recovered two fumbles and held Bo Jackson to 54 yards. Warren Moon threw two touchdown passes for the Oilers (7-4). The Raiders dropped to 5-6.

Saints 26, Falcons 17

Buford Jordan scored on two short runs in the fourth quarter and, with Dalton Hilliard gaining 158 yards, New Orleans won in Atlanta.

Jordan's 2-yard touchdown run with 9:20 left and his 1-yard burst with 2:38 remaining gave the Saints (6-5) their victory. The Falcons fell to 3-8.

Patriots 33, Bills 24

Maurice Hurst put New England ahead with a 16-yard interception return for a touchdown with 2:49 left as the host Patriots rallied for 20 points in the last eight minutes.

Jason Staurovsky's third field goal, a 34-yarder, cut Buffalo's lead to 24-23 with 3:06 to go. Hurst intercepted a pass by Jim Kelly on the next play.

Buffalo (7-4) made a final drive to the New England 31, but Kelly fumbled on fourth down and Staurovsky's 38-yard field goal with 13 seconds left sealed it for the Patriots (4-7).

Steelers 20, Chargers 17

In a game between the NFL's two worst offenses, Pittsburgh drove 91 yards to score on Merrill Hoge's 1-yard run with 6:17 remaining as the Steelers won at home.

Rod Woodson also scored on an 84-yard kickoff return for the Steelers (5-6). Jim McMahon threw two touchdown passes to Anthony Miller for San Diego (4-7).

Colts 27, Jets 10

At Indianapolis, Jack Trudeau passed for 255 yards and a touchdown and Eric Dickerson became the first runner this season to gain more than 100 yards against the Jets (2-9).

Eric Dickerson, bothered most of the season by a sore hamstring, rushed for 131 yards and a touchdown for the Colts (5-6).

Eagle defenders sack up the Vikings' Wade Wilson.

Wilson was sacked four times in the second half.

Wilson was sacked four times in the second half. He missed a 45-yarder with four seconds remaining, but an offside call gave him another chance, which he missed from 39 yards. The Chiefs got the only scoring chance in overtime, and Lowery missed from 47 yards.

Giants 15, Seahawks 3

Phil Simms connected with Howard Cross for a 16-yard touchdown pass on the game's first series and that was enough for New York to win at the Meadowlands.

Rookie Bjorn Nittmo, playing for injured Raul Allegre, kicked two 32-yard field goals

NFL ROUNDUP

In other games, Green Bay surprised San Francisco 21-17. Tampa Bay stopped Chicago 32-31. Cleveland and Kansas City tied 10-10, the New York Giants topped Seattle 15-3, Cincinnati routed Detroit 42-7, New England stopped Buffalo 33-24, Miami downed Dallas 17-14, New Orleans defeated Atlanta 26-17, Pittsburgh beat San Diego 20-17, the Los Angeles Rams roughed up Phoenix 37-14, Houston defeated the Los Angeles Raiders 23-7 and Indianapolis took the New York Jets 27-10. Denver is at Washington tonight.

The Vikings-Eagles game began with instant excitement when Herschel Walker returned the opening kickoff 93 yards for a touchdown. But Karlis missed the extra point, starting off a long day for the kickers.

Steve DeLine made a 34-yard field goal for Philadelphia, but missed three others.

Arkansas shooting for New Year's date in Cotton Bowl

Hogs-Aggie collision has the trappings of championship tilt

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Arkansas fans can start making holiday hotel reservations if the Hogs can handle Texas A&M University in a nationally televised collision in College Station the day after Thanksgiving.

Defending champion Arkansas can all but assure a New Year's Day date in the Cotton Bowl if the Hogs snap A&M's 21-game SWC home winning streak.

The 1:30 p.m. showdown on CBS-TV has all the trappings of a championship game because both teams have only lost once in the SWC.

Arkansas would have only a game against weak Southern Methodist left.

Things are tougher for the Aggies, though.

If coach R.C. Slocum's crew handles Arkansas, it would still have to beat Texas on Dec. 2 at College Station to be assured of getting to Dallas.

Texas Tech and Texas stayed alive for the SWC's host team berth in the 1990 Cotton Bowl with hard-earned victories on Saturday.

Tech outlasted SMU 48-24 as James Gray scored four touchdowns and rushed for 232 yards. Texas rallied for a 31-17 victory over Texas Christian. In the other game, Rice beat Baylor 6-3, the Owls' first victory over the Bears since 1981. Both Tech and Texas have two league losses.

Here's what it would take for the four teams remaining to make it to Dallas on New Year's Day:

—Texas. The Longhorns would have to beat Baylor and Texas A&M and A&M would have to beat Arkansas and Tech would have to lose to Houston to make it a burnt orange Cotton Bowl.

—Texas Tech. The Raiders would have to beat Houston and A&M and Arkansas would both have to lose another game.

—Texas A&M. The Aggies have to beat Arkansas and Texas.

—Arkansas. The Hogs have to beat A&M and SMU.

Tech is lined up to go to the All-American Bowl in Birmingham, Ala., on Dec. 28 if the Raiders miss out on Dallas. Duke is the likely opponent.

The loser of the Arkansas-A&M game is expected to get a bid to the Dec. 30 John Hancock Bowl in El Paso. Pittsburgh is the likely opponent.

The guest team in the Cotton Bowl is expected to be Tennessee, which beat Mississippi on Saturday.

All-American Bowl officials were on hand to witness Tech's hard-earned victory. SMU's Mike Romo had 408 yards passing to keep things interesting.

"I'm just tickled to death to win the game," said Tech coach Spike Dykes. "We still have a bunch of kids who still think we'll go to the Cotton Bowl. That's how stupid we are."

Tech plays at Houston in a 4 p.m. game on Saturday and Dykes said, "We better change something up defensively for Houston or there won't be enough bulbs in the scoreboard if we don't."

In the other league game on Saturday, Baylor is at Texas in a 1 p.m. clash.

Slocum is singing the blues about the Aggies being idle since Nov. 4.

"It's been like waiting on Christmas," Slocum said. "We've never been through anything like this before. We had two back-to-back open dates. We've got cabin fever."

Harvesters' press potent in opening win

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

Pampa's press defense can take a large portion of the credit for Saturday's 88-48 shelling of Dalhart in the 1989 basketball opener at McNeely Fieldhouse.

By halftime, Pampa held an 18-point advantage over the Golden Wolves, a margin which grew to 26 points by the end of the third quarter and finally topped out at 40.

The Harvesters dropped their press after three frames, but the damage was already done, said Pampa coach Robert Hale.

"We shell-shocked Dalhart, and caught them off-guard a little bit," Hale said. "We pressed most of the game, and that really gave them problems. We dropped straight back in the fourth quarter, but it was over by then. Really, the game was virtually over at halftime."

The Harvesters are off to a winning 1-0 start, but Hale is hesitant to put too much stock in a single victory.

"It's a good way to start, but you can't tell much by these early games," he said. "Everybody's still just trying to get their rosters set."

Pampa was no exception there, as every Harvester player saw action Saturday. Hale's first five included returning all-district performers Mark Wood and Ryan Teague, both seniors, and three sophomores, Cederick Wilbon, Jeff Young and David Johnson.

Sophomore Randy Nichols, senior Cornelius Landers and junior Daniel Trejo all came off the bench to help spark the Harvesters. Quincy Williams, a junior, and Landon Thornton, a senior, both of whom joined the team on Saturday after completing the football season Friday night, also saw action.

"Our kids were excited and played with a lot of enthusiasm," Hale said. "We were pretty pleased with our defense — anytime we keep it under 50 we feel real good."

Trejo led the Harvesters with nine rebounds and Young was right behind with eight.

"We were real proud of Daniel (Trejo)," Hale said. "He did a good job defensively and a great job rebounding."

Offensively, the Harvesters had four players in double figures and three more with eight points each. Wood topped all scorers with 22 points, followed by Teague with 15, Landers with 13, Young with 10, and Johnson, Trejo and Wilbon with eight.

Wood, Johnson and Wilbon all shot 100% from the free throw line, although Pampa converted only 11 of 21 as a team. The Harvesters were 38% from the three-point line and 48% on two-pointers. According to Hale's statisticians, Pampa outrebounded the Golden Wolves, 38-22.

Overall, the season opener left Hale with a pleasant taste of what he hopes are things to come.

"Our kids displayed a great attitude out there, and a good attitude is the key to having a good basketball team," he said. "You can be for a team, but pulling for a team is a little different. If all the players are pulling for each other, you're going to have a good team and have fun playing."

The Harvesters are now preparing for Tuesday's clash with Perryton, a team that also stands at 1-0 after whipping Spearman, 58-28, last Tuesday.

"Perryton is off to a good start," Hale said. "In our estimation, they're a better team than Dalhart."

The Rangers boast two 6-4 players, and another — Brad Butler — who is 6-3. Butler, who scored 14 points against Spearman, was named the Most Valuable Player in District 1-3A last season as a junior.

Teammate Clay Cameron, who led all scorers against Spearman with 15 points, is another force to be reckoned with.

Tuesday's tipoff is set for 8 p.m. at McNeely Fieldhouse. The Harvesters conclude their three-game home stand the following Tuesday against Amarillo High.

"It's off and running now," Hale said.

Notre Dame remains No. 1 in Associated Press poll

By The Associated Press

Notre Dame remained No. 1 in The Associated Press college football poll today for the 12th week in a row while Fresno State dropped out of the rankings and Michigan State returned after a five-week absence.

However, Notre Dame could face its toughest game in its battle to repeat as national champion in next Saturday's visit to No. 7 Miami.

The Irish, who flattened Penn State 34-23, received 57 of 60 first-place votes and 1,497 of a possible 1,500 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Colorado, a 59-11 winner over Kansas State, received the other three first-place votes and 1,439 points after completing an 11-0 regular season. The points for Notre Dame and Colorado were the same as last week.

Michigan held onto third place with 1,359 points after trouncing Minnesota 49-15. No. 4 Alabama received 1,319 points by trimming Southern Mississippi 37-14. No. 5 Florida State crushed Memphis State 57-20 and received 1,244 points, No. 6

Nebraska earned 1,200 points by downing Oklahoma 42-25 and Miami totaled 1,169 for a 42-6 rout of San Diego State.

However, Southern Cal was held to a 10-10 tie by UCLA, dropping the Trojans from eighth to 12th. Tennessee, a 33-21 winner over Mississippi, moved up from ninth to eighth with 1,065 points, idle Arkansas rose from 10th to ninth with 988 and Auburn from 11th to 10th with 925 by defeating Georgia 20-3.

The rest of the Top 25 consists of Illinois, Southern Cal, Houston, Texas A&M, Clemson, Virginia, West Virginia, Texas Tech, Pittsburgh, Ohio State, Brigham Young, Penn State, Duke, Hawaii and Michigan State.

Last week, it was Auburn, Illinois, Houston, Texas A&M, Clemson, Virginia, Penn State, West Virginia, Pittsburgh, Texas Tech, Brigham Young, Ohio State, Fresno State, Hawaii and Duke.

Michigan State moved back in by crushing Northwestern 76-14 for its fourth consecutive victory. Previously unbeaten Fresno State lost to New Mexico 45-22 and dropped out after a two-week stay.

Rookie helps Lakers get past Bullets

By The Associated Press

Los Angeles Lakers rookie Vlade Divac scored 17 points, had six rebounds and keyed rallies in the second and fourth quarters in 17 minutes of playing time to help the Lakers beat the Washington Bullets 120-115.

Magic Johnson had 25 points, 14 assists and 10 rebounds for the Lakers in Sunday night's game.

"Offensively, he is a great surprise," Johnson said of Divac. "He has the moves, a great touch and he's a good rebounder. He just knows how to play the game. "Vlade has come along much faster than I ever thought," Johnson said.

Washington does not have a true center, so Divac had to defend against Mark Alarie and John Williams, who are smaller and quicker.

"Washington does not have a tall team, but tough," Divac said. "I had trouble with the small guys."

After the Bullets pulled within 105-100 on two free throws by Williams, Divac scored six straight points to give the Lakers a 111-100 advantage with 5:50 remaining. Washington closed to 111-108 on a pair of jumpers by Alarie, but got no closer.

The Bullets were led by Williams and Jeff Malone with 24 apiece. Ledell Eckles added 22 points. Trail Blazers 119, SuperSonics 109

Terry Porter and Jerome Kersey scored eight points apiece in the third period as Portland built a 24-point lead. Portland, ahead by 10 at the half, scored eight straight points to open the third period and take a comfortable lead.

Porter and Clyde Drexler finished with 20 points apiece, Cliff Robinson had 18 and Kersey had 16 points and 18 rebounds. Michael Cage and Dale Ellis scored 17 each for Seattle. Rockets 132, Heat 94

Sleepy Floyd, who didn't start for the first time this season after going scoreless in his previous game, had 23 points to go with Mitchell Wiggins' 26 for Houston.

With 7:39 left in the first quarter, Wiggins hit a 15-foot jump shot to give the Rockets the lead for good. Akeem Olajuwon, Buck Johnson and Floyd scored eight points apiece as Houston built a 36-24 first-quarter lead.

Cowboys plagued by financial troubles

DALLAS (AP) — The troubles facing the Dallas Cowboys have spread from the playing field and into the National Football League team's business affairs, a published report said.

The Cowboys have the worst record in the NFL this season. And in recent months, the club has fallen behind in paying routine bills and making mortgage payments.

A Dallas newspaper is also reporting that the team held rookie quarterback Troy Aikman's $1.5 million paycheck until after banking hours and is negotiating with a group of doctors to sell the Cowboys Valley Ranch headquarters.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones, who paid $130 million for the team last February, told the Dallas Times Herald that some of the club's bills have gone unpaid for up to 60 days.

"Obviously the Dallas Cowboys lost money last year," Jones said. "The Dallas Cowboys were not a money-maker. That didn't discourage me, and I feel very strongly that it's a sound business."

"So when the Cowboys need any money for their cash flow, a part of what I do is provide that money for them."

Jones is president of Arkoma Exploration Co. of Little Rock and acquired his wealth in the insurance business before turning to oil and gas.

Dinkins paces Rockets to victory over Heat, 132-94

HOUSTON (AP) — After absorbing a 30-point loss to Denver on Saturday night and dropping three straight games to the Miami Heat, the Houston Rockets felt they had to shake things up, and rookie point guard Byron Dinkins was anxious to be a shaker-and-mover.

In the first eight games, Dinkins had accumulated only two assists and four points in 18 minutes of action. But in Sunday night's 132-94 victory over Miami, Dinkins had 12 assists and 12 points in 26 minutes.

"I would say it's a surprise to me to play such a prominent role so fast," said Dinkins, a free agent from North Carolina-Charlotte. "But I felt confident and was mentally prepared to play. I feel like I'm getting my role defined, and it feels good any time to get minutes."

According to Houston coach Don Chaney, the 6-foot-1 Dinkins is going to come off the bench for newly installed starter John Lucas.

Lucas is replacing Sleepy Floyd as the No. 1 guard.

"This is my lineup for awhile," Chaney said. "I'm looking for the type of consistency that will help us win."

Sierra happy with season

DALLAS (AP) — Whether or not he is handed the American League's Most Valuable Player Award today, Ruben Sierra said he is satisfied with the season he had for the Texas Rangers in 1989.

"I know what my numbers say," Sierra said. "So it doesn't matter if I win or not. I had the numbers. We'll see what happens, but if they don't give me the MVP, I don't worry. I'll come back and try to work harder and do better."

The Rangers right fielder led the league in runs batted in with 119 and hit .306 with 29 homers and a club-record 78 extra-base hits.

Sierra, who turned 24 in October, will be awaiting word of today's announcement at his home in Carolina, Puerto Rico. He is spending the off-season there, but has decided to take the winter off.

The decision not to play winter baseball in his home country has angered many of his neighbors who once were among his biggest fans, Sierra told the Dallas Times Herald.

"They're real mad," Sierra said. "Some understand, but others don't. They say I'm a hot dog now and I don't want to play (winter) baseball now because I make too much money."

But Sierra said his countrymen simply don't understand what it is like to undergo a rigorous spring training and 162-game major-league schedule.

Sierra was encouraged to take the winter off by Rangers second baseman Julio Franco. The 28-year-old Franco also warned him that he could expect a great deal of criticism for sitting out the winter season.

Franco caught the same heat from friends and fans in his home of San Pedro de Macoris, Dominican Republic. He eventually decided to move his home to Boca Raton, Fla.

But Sierra said he is happy to be back in Puerto Rico, explaining that he frequently gets homesick during long American baseball seasons.

This fall was particularly difficult because Hurricane Hugo strafed parts of his country in September and he went without sleep for days as he watched cable news telecasts of the damage.

High winds and heavy rains destroyed the homes of his mother and grandmother. They lived with Sierra's aunt in San Juan until he finished the season and returned. Then he bought them a new three-bedroom, two-bath house that is luxurious by island standards.

"But things still aren't so good," Sierra said. "It made a lot of damage to the east part (of Puerto Rico), and it was about one month they had to go without power and water. Everybody is working and fixing, but it's going to take time."

The AL MVP, selected by 28 members of the Baseball Writers Association of America is scheduled to be announced at 4 p.m. today.

Only one Texas Rangers player has won the award — Jeff Burroughs in 1974.

Others who are expected to be among the front-runners include Baltimore's Cal Ripkin Jr., Toronto's George Bell, and Oakland's Rickey Henderson, Dennis Eckersley and Dave Stewart.

Pentathlon board to be headquartered in Atlanta

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The U.S. Modern Pentathlon Association board has voted to move the organization's headquarters from San Antonio to Atlanta, it was reported today.

The vote by the 24-member board of directors was about 75 percent in favor of moving, sources told the San Antonio Express-News. The decision was expected to be made official today.

The USMPA's relationship with San Antonio started in the 1950s, when the sport was operated by the U.S. Army.

When the Army stopped funding the sport in 1985, the USMPA board began seeking sponsorship elsewhere but has had trouble doing so in San Antonio.

The possibility of moving the headquarters to Atlanta surfaced in October, when Anne Duncan, head of the Atlanta Sports Council, made a presentation on training facilities available in Atlanta.

She also discussed facilities that would be built if Atlanta hosts the 1996 Summer Olympic Games. If Atlanta is chosen to host the games, a centralized training center would be available for the association, something it has never had in San Antonio.

The board's vote throws the 1991 World Championships into uncertainty.
