Recreationalists prepare for court case over Canadian River land rights issues

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Mike O. Wilson of Pampa was hunting on the Canadian River when President John F. Kennedy was assassinated on Nov. 22, 1963.

Wilson is now a member of the Texas Panhandle Recreationalist Association, fighting to keep the Canadian River bed public domain. At a meeting of the group in Pampa on Tuesday evening, members discussed the court case that was filed by landowners in Roberts and Hutchinson counties against the state of Texas.

The landowners, who include T. Boone and Bea Pickens, want the rights to own the land that once was home to the flowing Canadian River. A dam in the mid 1960s at Lake Meredith caused the flow of the river to significantly decrease. Some of the landowners have placed their fences in the river bed, claiming the land is theirs.

On Nov. 7, 100th District Judge John T. Forbis granted intervenor's status to the recreationalist association.

The association says public domain should remain public domain and the land should not be sold or given to the adjacent landowners, but be kept for people to use on family outings, for hunting, bird-watching and other recreational events.

"Our next step is a change of venue, trying to get the case out of Roberts County. We don't believe we can get a fair hearing in Roberts County," said Gerald Cantrell, chairman of the group's membership committee.

On Dec. 21, Judge Forbis is scheduled to rule on whether the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority should be granted intervenor's status. The water authority wants to be part of the lawsuit, because it says if there was a need to release water from the dam, the authority would be held liable for damage caused to land, unless the land belonged to the state.

"While their getting intervenor's status could only help us, they are not joining with us," Cantrell said.

Wilson said Tuesday that before the lawsuit was instituted and a compromise settlement was being attempted, the group almost made a mistake. "They were going to steal the horse and give you a bicycle," Wilson said.

"It would be to our advantage, if no more than an objection to relevance, at the trial if no reference is made of the alternate area (considered in a prior attempt at a compromise)."

Cantrell said the handling of the lawsuit is in the hands of Attorney Robert Templeton of Amarillo. However, Cantrell said that the group considers the prior compromise attempt as a separate issue that has nothing to do with the court case.

"We think we'll get a ruling that will stand. He's (Judge Forbis) interested in getting it settled quickly and doing it fairly," Cantrell said.

The question in the court battle, Cantrell said, will likely be, "Do manmade changes in a navigable stream alter the ownership of the riverbed?"

"We want justice to prevail and we don't want to get anything we've never used, but we don't think others should get something that is not theirs," Cantrell said.

Doug Coffee of Pampa, a member of the group, said he's been to the archives in Austin researching the land controversy.

"In 1940 the land was deeded to the state from ranchers because it was worthless and they wanted to eliminate it from their tax rolls. That information should be taken into consideration in court," Coffee said.

Although only about 20 people attended Tuesday's meeting, Cantrell said there is a lot of support for the group's cause. More than 7,500 people have signed a petition seeking to keep public domain as public domain.

Future plans of the recreationalist association include starting a children's conservation group and fund-raising events.

Aquino declares state of emergency

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A beleaguered President Corazon Aquino declared a state of national emergency today and pleaded with fellow Filipinos to defy the hundreds of mutinous soldiers who "want to kill me."

The declaration came after a cease-fire between rebel and loyalist troops enabled about 1,800 foreigners, hundreds of them Americans, to be evacuated from Manila's financial district, scene of heavy fighting since Saturday.

The rebels, angered at U.S. military support for Mrs. Aquino, had on Tuesday threatened to prevent some Americans from leaving. Today, they issued a veiled threat against those who remain in the country.

After the evacuation, rebel and military representatives then opened talks for a peaceful settlement of the crisis.

Mrs. Aquino had previously vowed not to negotiate, demanding that the rebels "surrender or die." She had also overruled recommendations from Cabinet members two days ago to declare a state of emergency.

"You, my beloved countrymen, I depend on you," the obviously strained and fatigued Mrs. Aquino said on national television before declaring the emergency. She appealed for a show of "people power" in the streets on Friday similar to the 1986 demonstrations that helped put her in office.

The plea came five days after thousands of mutineers launched the strongest attempt yet to topple Mrs. Aquino's administration, which has been widely criticized as indecisive and inept.

It was unclear what specific powers Mrs. Aquino would be able to wield under the emergency declaration. Press Secretary Adolfo Azcuna said the government planned to take over utilities and transport but not the media.

Sen. John Osmena said most of the 23 senators endorsed the move and he expected Congress to grant

Mrs. Aquino sweeping powers.

But opposition Rep. Salvador Britannico said it would discourage foreign investment and tourism: "The opposition believes that it is a first step ... toward the declaration of martial law."

Cabinet officials said the declaration was not tantamount to martial law and that there would be no curtailment of civil liberties.

"This is not martial law," said Labor Secretary Franklin Drilon. "There's no curfew, there's no suspension of the writ of habeas corpus. Congress will continue. We will continue to enjoy our rights. It only empowers government to check those who may not be delivering basic services."

The announcement came as estimated 400 rebel soldiers continued to hold the Makati financial district and a similar number of mutineers held an air base on Cebu Island about 350 miles south of Manila.

Opposition sources claim the rebels also have the support of other units that have not moved overtly against the government.

The insurrection, the sixth in Mrs. Aquino's nearly 4-year-old government, has claimed the lives of at least 77 people and left more than 540 wounded.

On national television, the president attempted to rekindle the now-dormant "people power" that toppled Ferdinand Marcos and propelled her into office with a plea for people to take to the streets on Friday.

She said the rebels wanted to dismantle democracy and return the nation to the dark days of martial law, which Marcos imposed from 1972 until 1981.

Early today, buses began transporting foreigners trapped in hotels and condominiums in Makati, which the insurgents seized on Saturday.

U.S. Embassy and Philippine authorities said at least 241 Americans were among the foreigners taken out safely.

"It was slick," said Crosby Nash, 58, of Centerville, Md., of the evacuation. He had been stranded at the Manila Garden Hotel. "It was a superb operation. I think there's certainly relief."

One-month-old Carizma Moxon rests in her incubator, weighing 1 pound, 9 1/2 ounces.

Premature baby breaking odds in fight for survival after birth

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Brought into the world at 3:30 a.m. on Oct. 26, weighing slightly more than a pound, Carizma De'LaLuz Moxon has already broken a lot of odds.

And chances are she'll break more than her share if her mother has anything to do with it.

Keri Moxon, the strong-willed young Pampa woman who gave birth to the premature baby, said she never doubted for a minute that her baby would live even though doctors gave the infant only 24 hours.

"I never had any doubt in my mind whatsoever," Moxon said in an interview this week in the waiting room of Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

Her baby, whose name means "gift of the light," is the smallest ever admitted to the hospital. The baby, who at birth was 11 1/2 inches, was delivered at Coronado Hospital and a neonatal team from the Amarillo Hospital was waiting to transport it to Amarillo.

Since her birth, Carizma has gained weight well and is now being fed through a tube, rather than intravenously. Her weight dropped initially to 15 ounces after she was born. On Tuesday she weighed 1 pound, 9 1/2 ounces.

Keri Moxon pats and gives comfort to her infant daughter.

Moxon said the cause of the premature delivery was toxemia — a disturbance of metabolism which in severe form is attended by fever, headache, convulsions and rapid rise in blood pressure. If untreated, toxemia can pose dangers for the mother as well as the baby.

In Moxon's case, she said she went to the Pampa hospital at 1:30 p.m. on a Wednesday with severe pain below her rib cage and in her back. She was 24 to 26 weeks pregnant.

"At first they thought it was a bladder infection that had spread to my kidneys," she said.

While doctors continued running tests on her, Moxon said she knew something was wrong because of her pain.

"I knew I couldn't be in labor because labor couldn't hurt that bad," she said.

About midnight, medical officials prognosed Moxon as having toxemia and she was informed-the

Mrs. Hance campaigning for husband Kent

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Carol Hance, wife of Republican gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance, was in Pampa Tuesday campaigning for her husband.

Mrs. Hance, during an interview with The Pampa News, admitted that her husband was running a little behind political newcomer Clayton Williams in statewide polls, but said they had a clear lead over Tom Luce and Jack Rains.

Carol Hance

She said most polls show that her husband and Williams have equal name recognition. However, Mrs. Hance predicted that when her husband's campaign hits full stride in January, his experience will make him the clear choice of Republican voters.

"People recognize the Clayton Williams name," Mrs. Hance said. "But when they see how much Kent knows about the issues and his political experience, I believe they will have an easy choice."

She echoed the Hance platforms of being pro-life while maintaining abortion as a choice if the woman's life is at risk, pushing for greater involvement in OPEC and encouraging economic development in the state by controlling spiraling workers' compensation costs.

On the abortion issue she noted that opponent Jack Rains has continued to vacillate from one position to another.

"Kent, from day one, has said he is pro-life," she pointed out. "It's an issue that is so tough, but we believe in the sanctity of life. We need to approach this from a point of view of compassion because people are coming from such different points of view."

Mrs. Hance added that while it takes parental permission for a minor to go on a school field trip, get ears pierced or even tan in a salon, a female minor can get an abortion without parents even knowing.

"It is the only surgical procedure on a minor that doesn't require permission," she said.

"Kent Hance is a man of action," she said. "He doesn't just get elected. He knows how to get in there and mix it up."

Mrs. Hance said of a state income tax, "Taxing people does not create jobs. They are calling for a 4 percent income tax. That sounds innocent, but to that they will add a percent here and a half-percent there."

"Putting a ban on a state income tax gives the people the option of approving it later by vote if they want one."

Responding to criticism her husband took while a member of the state Railroad Commission for his role in the so-called Austin-Boston Connection and attending OPEC meetings, Mrs. Hance said, "His involvement brought energy issues to the forefront."

"We don't have a national energy policy. Now the people know that. He made it a public issue. Where do you go to change things? The people. They can then put

Holiday time to take precautions

Pampa Crime Prevention Officer Dave Wilkinson said the Christmas season is a time to take extra precautions around the home to prevent becoming a victim of crime.

Wilkinson noted that there are a number of ways that criminals select targets during the holidays.

"Don't put large displays of holiday gifts in view of your windows," Wilkinson said, adding that it only encourages thieves. "Also, when you are going out for the evening, use automatic timers to turn indoor lights off and on. That makes it look like you're at home."

Wilkinson said the police department has timers that can be borrowed, on a first-come, first-served basis, for those who will be traveling during the holidays.

"If you have house guests during Christmas, familiarize them with your security precautions and make sure they follow them," Wilkinson suggested. "And, even if you are leaving your house for a few minutes, make your your doors and windows are locked."

Wilkinson pointed out that potential burglars will know what new appliances and valuables are in your home simply by checking your dumpster for boxes after Christmas.

"Don't advertise," he warned. "Break down boxes or take them to the dump yourself. Or you can put out boxes a few at a time and cover them up with other things really well."

Wilkinson also recommended that all new Christmas gifts should be marked as soon as possible with the owner's driver's license number, making it possible to return them if they are recovered following a burglary or theft.

the pinch on legislators." She also noted that Texas is a "bigger player" than 10 of the 13 members of OPEC, meaning that the state needs to be represented in worldwide energy negotiations.

Mrs. Hance described her roll in the campaign as being "an extension of Kent Hance."

"I like people," she said. "If I know an answer, I'll repeat it. If not, I'll find out and call the person back."

Noting the size of the state, Mrs. Hance said it was physically impossible for a candidate for governor to be everywhere, meaning they had to rely on family members to help campaign.

"Kent Hance has been a state senator, a U.S. congressman and railroad commissioner," she said. "He has the experience to do the baby would have to be born by caesarean section because her life and the baby's were in serious danger. By the time the surgery was performed, Moxon said, she was under so much medication she hardly recalls anything during that time.

While Moxon stayed in the Pampa hospital until Oct. 29, nurses and doctors were carrying for her newborn in the neonatal intensive care unit at Amarillo.

"I called every day while I was in the hospital to check on her," Moxon said. "She had not opened her eyes, but when she heard my voice that Sunday she opened her eyes and started looking around."

Two pictures of Mom are kept in Carizma's incubator and a tape-recorded message of Moxon reading stories and lullabies are played for the infant during her feedings. And Moxon travels more than 100 miles round trip daily to be with her daughter, staying an average of five hours a day.

When Carizma was 10 days old, she was flown to the Children's Hospital at Fort Worth for a 10-minute surgery to correct a valve in her heart. She has recovered well from that surgery, Moxon said, and her scar is barely visible to the naked eye. Carizma has also had tests, which Moxon calls brain sonograms, to see if there has been any bleeding. So far, there has not been, Moxon said. Carizma is still on a ventilator and other equipment which monitors her organ functions.

On Nov. 27, Carizma returned to the Amarillo hospital and has been "improving every day," her mother said. For the first month of her life, Carizma received breast milk from her mother.

"Her little face is filling out and her cheeks on her butt are getting fatter," Moxon said. "Her features are real detailed and she has good color."

Although as of Tuesday Moxon had not been able to hold her child, doctors say she should be able to do so by Christmas. They are waiting for the oxygen saturation to stabilize. Doctors are shooting for Feb. 14 as a release date for Carizma.

"I've never held her and I've never heard her cry. But I can tell she has a temper by her facial expressions and the way she kicks and holds her breath when she gets mad," Moxon said.

The mother is holding up remarkably well, but said she sometimes get "scatter-brained," and does have a lot of stress. Her mother, Irene, provides support, as does her closest friend, Mary Arellano, who accompanies her to the hospital daily.

Moxon said the nurses and doctors at Northwest Texas Hospital give excellent care to her daughter and the other infants in the neonatal intensive care unit.

"From the time of birth, she's been her own little person and they respect that."

Moxon, a 1988 graduate of Lefors High School, is thankful that she has medical insurance that covers the majority of the hospital bills. With bills already surpassing the $100,000 mark, she jokingly predicts that she will soon have a "million dollar baby."

For the incubator alone that the baby stays in, the bill is $3,000 a day, Moxon said.

Medical authorities have told Moxon that five years ago her baby probably would not have lived. Even today, the baby's life is considered amazing.

"She's a fighter and she has a temper. We've come a long way. So far, she's a normal baby and she proved them all wrong," her mother said.

Elementary school principal punished in taping incident

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - An elementary school principal was suspended for three days without pay after she taped together the hands of two students after an argument, school district officials said.

"She chose to use an inappropriate form of discipline," said Harlandale School District Superintendent Yvonne Katz. "Disciplinary action has been taken. And it was quite severe."

Flanders Elementary School principal Yolanda Escobedo was suspended Tuesday, and the Texas Department of Human Resources and the children's parents were notified of the incident, said district vice president Steve Price.

The disciplinary action came after a fight between two students last week at the school in which one child called the other child a name, Ms. Katz said.

Abortion rights issue heats up campaign debate for GOP gubernatorial hopefuls

By LAURA TOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Abortion rights for women managed to heat up an otherwise calm debate involving the four Republican gubernatorial hopefuls, as one candidate again accused another of flip-flopping on the controversial issue in pursuit of votes.

GOP candidates Clayton Williams, Jack Rains, Tom Luce and Kent Hance gathered at Stratford High School auditorium Tuesday night where they agreed on the need to fight crime and drugs and improve the Texas economy and education.

But each had some different ideas on how to accomplish those goals.

The last question of the debate — about abortion — proved to be the most controversial of the night as Hance called Rains "Jack the Flipper," and claimed Rains has taken a pro-choice stand because it may get him more votes.

Hance, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, said he is "pro-life, pro-family," and holds the same position on the topic as President Bush.

Rains, a Houston businessman, denied Hance's accusation.

"I have not changed my mind," he said. Rains said he opposes abortion on a personal level, but that as governor, he would not support legislation that would further restrict an adult woman's right to an abortion in Texas.

Rains and Luce, a Dallas lawyer, are airing television commercials declaring their support for a woman's right to choose. The ads are being touted as an unprecedented gamble by media political consultants.

In the commercials, Luce and Rains describe abortion as a personal matter in which government officials should not intervene.

Williams was not asked directly about abortion during the debate. But afterwards, he said the only exceptions for abortion should be in cases of rape, incest or if the mother's life is at risk.

"Hance's group has come after me pretty viciously," Rains said after the debate. But he added that such attacks were "typical" of Hance.

During the debate, Luce and Rains both said that education is the most important issue facing Texans, although they have different plans on how to improve it.

Williams, a Midland businessman, said the main issue is the war on drugs. He said drugs increase crime and school dropout rates and adversely affect worker productivity.

"Drugs are killing our kids," Williams said. "We're losing our children and building prisons for our own kids," he said.

Meanwhile, Hance said economic development is the top priority.

"If we have a good (economic) foundation, then we will be able to deal with education, crime and drugs," Hance said.

Luce later characterized the debate as "positive," rather than controversial, saying it gave Houstonians the chance to hear the candidates' various stands.

About 300 people attended the debate, hosted by the Memorial West Republican's Women's Club, the West Houston Republican Women's Club and the West Side Republicans.

The candidates again voiced their opposition to a state income tax in Texas.

"We all agree we don't need an income tax," Luce said. "We're a party of growth."

Hance said "low taxes mean high growth."

Former executive wins $31.2 million suit against firm

By RUTH RENDON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who sued his former employer, saying he was wrongfully fired after refusing to certify what he claimed were fraudulent company tax returns, has won a $31.2 million verdict in the case.

Attorneys for Roger C. Sims' former employer, Dallas-based Kaneb Services, an oil field services company, said they will appeal the jury award.

A jury in State District Judge Russell Lloyd's court handed down the verdict Nov. 23, but the judgment was entered Monday, said Sims' attorney, Julius Glickman.

Glickman said the award "is the largest that I've ever heard of" in a lawsuit over a firing. Sims' suit had not asked for specific damages.

Sims, 40, said he was fired from his job at Kaneb for refusing to certify what he said were fraudulent 1984 company tax returns. Sims objected to signing the company's tax returns because he noticed that personal expenses were being written off as corporate expenditures, Glickman said. Kaneb attorneys, however, deny the charge.

Sims worked for Kaneb in Houston from March 1974 until his firing in August 1985. He sued the company and executives Michael G. Shoup, former president and chief executive officer, and Carroll M. Selby Jr., former senior vice president of finance and administration.

"What they did was a big wrong," Glickman said. "Their defense was that they had fired him for a reason — that he was a bad employee. The only thing was that he had been there 11 years and had gotten raises and bonuses."

William Pakalka, one of three attorneys representing Kaneb Services, said they will ask the judge to disregard the jury's findings and reduce the award, or set aside the verdict and order a new trial.

Pakalka said Sims was a good employee for a while, but then began taking a lot of time off, complained about the company in public and refused to go on an important business trip because he had scheduled elective surgery. Sims later canceled the surgery, but the company already had hired someone else to do his work, he said.

The jury award included $12.2 million in actual damages and $19 million in punitive damages, plus interest.

Sims said that after he sued the company, Kaneb sought revocation of his Certified Public Accountant's license and filed criminal charges that he altered a company computer disk. The criminal charges were dismissed, but the accounting proceeding is pending.

NEW LIFE FOR OLD EYEGLASSES

Your cast off eyeglasses could restore the sight of a poor African farmer and help build houses in his village at the same time. The connecting force between these two events is Vision/Habitat. This non-profit organization offers the glasses to needy people in developing countries. The nominal charge for each pair of glasses goes to fund housing projects in those countries.

Vision/Habitat is an arm of Habitat for Humanity International. The Americas, Georgia-based organization started out recruiting volunteers to build low-cost, no-profit homes in the United States. The homes are built in partnership with low income families.

When Habitat for Humanity began working overseas, organizers found that many local people couldn't pitch in because of vision problems. Eyeglasses are only for the well-off in many developing countries.

Vision/Habitat can use all the glasses it can get. If you would like to donate an old pair send them to: Vision Habitat, Habitat and Church Streets, Americus, GA 31709. You may also drop them by our office at 1324 N. Banks and we will send them in for you.

Clements plans special session in March to cover public school financing issues

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he will call a special session of the Legislature in March to overhaul public school finances, but several lawmakers say that's too long to wait.

"I'd like to address the issue right now. I think we've waited long enough," said Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, a co-sponsor of a three-year, $5.6 billion school finance proposal introduced Tuesday.

Uribe said school districts need to know soon how much money they will be receiving so they can plan for the 1990-91 school year. He noted that lawmakers have failed in more than 11 months to reform workers' compensation. Clements' top legislative priority.

"If this Legislature takes as long to deal with public school finance as it has with workers' comp, we will certainly be in a chaotic situation," the senator said.

The Texas Supreme Court, voting 9-0, in October ruled the state system of funding public schools unconstitutional and gave the Legislature a May 1 deadline to write a new plan.

"The fact is, we have researched this thing long enough. It is time to act. We've heard from every expert imaginable. We need to act," said

Rep. Gregory Luna, D-San Antonio, House sponsor of the new plan.

"Nothing has been more damaging than Gov. Clements' delay on this issue," added Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi.

Truan said Clements' record on school finance, including his previous support for a constitutional amendment to legalize the current system, has been damaging.

"That is a horrible record which I predict will forever condemn the legacy of the Clements administration to the dustbin of history, just as the existing system of school finance has condemned so many hundreds of thousands of Texas school students to an inferior education," Truan said.

Clements said Tuesday he has decided to call lawmakers into session "in March, probably the early part of March."

He said he wants to wait on the recommendations of a new task force that began looking at school finance late last month.

Clements also said the state may have to consider consolidation of its 1,100 public school districts because of the court ruling.

"We're going to go right back to what the Supreme Court said, which is that we have an inefficient system. So we're going start talking about efficiency and we're going to start talking about consolidation," Clements said.

Consolidation, the governor said, is "a bad word, it's a contentious word and a lot of people don't like the idea. But if there's anything inefficient about our system, it's 1,100 school districts."

The Uribe-Luna proposal, which they dubbed "the equality plan," would shift to a countywide tax base for schools.

The plan would establish a minimum countywide property tax rate of 80 cents per $100 valuation, and it would allow local school boards to add up to 20 cents in enrichment taxes for a maximum allowable tax of $1 per $100. The state would add funds to make up for any disparity of wealth in the local enrichment efforts.

Average state and local spending per student would rise from $3,100 now to $4,700 by 1992-93, Uribe said.

The plan would cost $800 million for 1990-91, $1.8 billion for 1991-92 and $3 billion for 1992-93.

According to Uribe and Luna, none of the 1,100 school districts would have less money to spend in the first two years, and 73 districts would lose funds in the third year.

The plan offered no method of funding, but the lawmakers said more money is a must. "I think all of us must be willing to stand and say we are going to support any effort to finance" the plan, Luna said.

Lawmakers await panel's vote on workers' comp

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Leaders of a House-Senate conference committee working on an overhaul of the workers' compensation system say the panel will pass a bill today but that measure's fate in the full House and Senate remains up in the air.

"It's just sort of wait and see," Gov. Bill Clements said Tuesday.

"It's kind of like watching water boil."

The current special session ends Dec. 13, but Clements said he will call lawmakers back into an immediate special legislative session if the current one fails to produce "meaningful" reform.

Clements blamed the legislative impasse on trial lawyers, who represent injured workers in disputed compensation cases.

"So, this Christmas, the role of Scrooge may be played by the trial lawyers themselves," Clements said, adding that he will make lawmakers work until Easter if that's what it takes to get a bill.

Clements wants a business-backed reform proposal supported by himself, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis.

Texas Trial Lawyers Association president Mike Perrin shot back at Clements, saying, "The bill that he and his cronies are trying to peddle to the Texas Legislature is a cruel joke."

Perrin said the business-supported reform bill would increase the workers' comp bureaucracy and insurance premiums.

"When they get around to casting the role of Scrooge, Gov. Clements and the big business boys have the inside track on an academy award," Perrin said.

Lawmakers, now in a second special legislative session, have fought all year over proposals to change the workers' comp system, which has been criticized for high employer-paid premiums and low benefits to injured workers.

Last week, the Senate rejected the business-backed proposal, 17-14.

But lobbying pressure has been increasing in the 31-member Senate, where a two-vote swing would give the business lobby a workers' comp overhaul that trial lawyers and labor groups say would prevent workers from receiving fair benefits for permanent injuries and impartial treatment in disputed comp claims.

The major disagreements are over how benefits are calculated and disputed comp claims are resolved.

The House and business favor a structured plan that would set a specific amount for each type of injury. The Senate has proposed taking into account the worker's ability to earn a living in his or her chosen profession.

Opinion

Bush should think clearly about China

As liberty spreads like a brushfire across Eastern Europe, we should remember the hideous suffering still endured by the people of China, where communist repression remains, at least for now. Seeking to relieve some of the suffering, the U.S. Congress moved to pass a bill that would let Chinese students stay in the United States indefinitely.

That's a humane response, considering the fate of many students in China: Hundreds of protesters were gunned down in the streets in June, thousands more have been arrested, tortured and sent to "re-education" camps.

Unfortunately, President Bush worked to stop Congress from passing the bill, and even vetoed it when it came to his desk. The president thinks that it will hurt relations with the communist regime in Beijing. Bush has his priorities wrong. There may be no reason to harangue the Beijing regime, but the American president should be on record supporting a full establishment of human rights. He can start by granting Chinese students the right to stay in America indefinitely.

By being so attentive to the Beijing regime's desires, Bush is effectively allowing them to set American refugee policy. Americans, not a communist clique in Beijing, should determine our own refugee policy. This is matter of our national sovereignty.

Also, a firm policy by Bush toward Beijing would, in fact, advance the cause of freedom there. In the short term, Beijing might react unfavorably. But the clique that now runs the country, whom Bush got to know when he represented the United States in Beijing in the mid-1970s, is now very old. Within a few years they won't be in power.

Now is the time to send a message to the younger men who will soon be running China: if you want international respect, grant freedom to your people. Such steadfastness worked with the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. One of the many reasons for the new freedoms being granted there is that the new leaders, especially Mikhail Gorbachev, got tired of being called the Evil Empire and of having their people flee to the West. The lesson is clear: By labeling tyranny for what it is, and helping its refugees, we advance freedom's cause.

Much blame must go to Bush's State Department. One of its officials said of the Bush stance, "Based on what we know of Chinese [government] thinking, passage of this legislation would threaten future educational exchange programs" between the two countries. Translated from Statespeak, that means: "In order to advance the freedom of Chinese students, we need to back repression of them by the Beijing regime."

Bush and his advisers need to start thinking clearly about China. If they don't, Congress should act by letting the brave Chinese students stay here, working for liberty back home, for as long as they wish.

New breed of Puritans arising

The hunter who appeared on the television screen a few days ago was doing a great job of holding his temper. He was being badgered by a willowy fellow with long hair whose purpose was to spoil the hunter's day.

Looking at the screen, I kept hoping the hunter would punch this milksop zealot in the snout.

It appears that people who profess to be animal lovers are waging a concerted effort this year. In Hawaii they are mad about dolphins as swimming companions. Elsewhere they are out to ruin the lives of trappers who depend upon the fur trade for a living.

The particular game this season appears to involve the provocative harassment of law-abiding sportsmen in the field. Having alerted local TV stations, the animal lovers turn up on public lands where hunting is permitted.

There they ring cowbells, or take to bullhorns, the better to frighten game. They chase wildly after hunters, asking insipid questions, and the TV cameramen chase wildly after the troublemakers. All this is supposed to preserve wildlife.

One young woman pronounced that "we have as much right as the hunters to do what we please on public lands." Up to a point, this is true. But no one has a constitutional right to interfere physically with the lawful conduct of another.

Free speech has its limits, and the animal lovers, so-called, are breaching them.

I say "so-called," because one wonders about those who agitate in the name of animal rights. It seems unlikely that all of them are barefoot vegetarians. More probably they eat meat now and then. They may have enjoyed turkey for Thanksgiving. Their diet may include fish, lobster and crab.

If so, than the weight of their hypocrisy must be a terrible weight to bear.

Dan Matthews, director of the anti-fur campaign of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, finds it morally wrong for people to wear fur. Does the gentleman wear shoes? Does he hold up his pants with a leather belt? Does he find it morally wrong to have bacon with his eggs? If not, why not?

The moral distinction between shooting a deer in the wild and slaughtering a pig in a plant is not immediately apparent.

In the television incident that involved the Gucci-Pucci pest and the hunter, the ostensible object was to prevent the killing of deer.

Let me tell you something about deer. I have lived for 24 years in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia. In these parts we are overrun with deer. The animals can destroy a vineyard or devastate a young apple orchard overnight. They are a positive menace on rural roads. Every year hunters take 120,000 deer in Virginia, and the deer population is not affected at all. State wildlife biologists place the deer population at between 750,000 and 1 million.

Most of the deer hunters in my county are local hunters. It seems not to have occurred to the Gucci-Pucci that in our low-income area, a deer represents 80 pounds of dressed meat in the freezer. Mountain men are feeding their families. They hunt as a way of life, as their fathers and grandfathers hunted before them.

A personal word: I do not hunt. The only gun on our farm is an ancient double-barreled .410 that belonged to my father-in-law. He was a self-taught naturalist who loved and respected all of God's creatures and treated them with respect, and he taught me his values. I fought for adoption of the Endangered Species Act; I have defended snail darters, sea turtles, dune mice and spotted owls. The abuse of animals in laboratory experiments arouses me to fury.

But fanaticism in any form has small appeal, and the thought will not go away that the pro-animal nuts are as offensive as the pro-gun nuts. They are equally nuts. And when it comes to the supposed evils of hunting, let it be said for the record that hunters do more toward the preservation of wildlife than whole battalions of publicity-seeking pantywaists have ever done.

Since enactment of the Pitman-Robertson Act of 1937, wild game hunters have provided more than $2 billion toward the care and propagation of wild animals. Through the duck stamp program, other hunters have preserved wetlands and developed breeding grounds for waterfowl that otherwise would have been lost. These are the true lovers of nature.

The thought will not go away that in harassing the deer hunters, the willowy boys and earnest girls are not wholly concerned with prolonging the life of a deer. Their companion purpose lies in preventing the pleasure of the hunter. It is a new Puritanism, as selfish and censorious as the old.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, December sixth, the 340th day of 1989. There are 25 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: One hundred years ago, on Dec. 6, 1889, Jefferson Davis, the first and only president of the Confederate States of America, died in New Orleans.

On this date: In 1790, Congress moved from New York to Philadelphia.

In 1884, Army engineers completed construction of the Washington Monument, 36 years after the cornerstone was laid.

In 1917, more than 1600 people died when two munitions ships collided in the harbor at Halifax, Nova Scotia, setting off an explosion that devastated the city.

In 1921, an Anglo-Irish treaty was signed in London, providing for the creation of the Irish Free State.

In 1923, a presidential address was broadcast on radio for the first time as President Calvin Coolidge spoke to a joint session of Congress.

Not all airlines are suffocating

In 1976 Midway Airport, Chicago, was almost my private airport.

The vast complex of terminal facilities was abandoned and decaying. Grass grew through cracks in the runways, and the airport that once had been the busiest in the world — the hub of our nation's air traffic — was host only to the handful of us who flew light planes for fun.

For transient aircraft, hangar facilities were less than comfortable.

That was 1976 ... barely 15 years ago.

And it was then and there in the weatherbeaten concourse that a resident army of rats scurried about, scarcely noticing the intrusion of two men ... David Hinson, a former Navy pilot ... former commercial jet pilot ... and his friend Irving Tague.

Together they had taken the defunct Hughes Airwest Airline from Howard Hughes and made it profitable.

And now they vowed that somehow they would bring Midway Airport back to life.

When they began what they chose to call Midway Airlines, they could afford only three rebuilt DC-9s, but they started flying to four cities one-class, no-frills service.

Paul Harvey

I mean NO frills. Reservations were recorded on 3-by-5 cards filed in shoeboxes.

The improvised executive office was a part-time waiting room for passengers.

Most of the rats were moving on, but there was still tumbleweeds blowing down the concourse.

There were diverted flights when the pilot had to open the baggage bin and help passengers inside with their luggage.

That was 10 years ago.

Today, Midway Airlines' first fleet of three rebuilt planes has been replaced with 37 brand-new, up-to-the-minute MD-80s, with another billion dollars' worth on order.

Now Midway flies first class ... services 51 cities in the United States and the Caribbean and the Bahamas.

The first two employees have become 5,000. Midway has opened a second operational hub in Philadelphia to coordinate East Coast travel.

And Midway Airport, where grass grew in cracked runways 10 years ago and cobwebs draped broken windows ...

This year Midway, busier than it ever has been, will handle 7 1/2 million passengers.

Some of us around Midway Airport who were early believers and investors in David Hinson — we have profited, too.

I mention this experience today because these last 10 years since deregulation we have watched a dozen or more airlines start up — and go belly up. Even T.E. Braniff's once-proud Braniff Airline has somehow been mismanaged into bankruptcy.

And one might well get the impression that all airlines are being strangled, suffocated or starved to death.

Not all of them.

Colleges now teaching ethics in business

By ROBERT WALTERS

Graduate students seeking a master's degree in business administration from the University of Denver now receive far more than the traditional instruction in marketing, management, finance and accounting.

Those MBA candidates also get what Denver business executive Bill Daniels characterizes as "a cram course in human decency" — an education in everything from ethical behavior and social values to proper manners and communications skills.

Daniels, a multimillionaire cable television pioneer, is paying for much of the innovative program. One year ago, he gave the university $10 million to finance a radical overhaul of its MBA curriculum.

After months of study and preparation, the university instituted many of the changes when students returned to the campus this autumn.

"This isn't just a matter of sticking an ethics course into the curriculum," says Professor Bruce Hutton. "We're talking about integrating values ... in everything we teach."

MBA programs at universities throughout the country gained considerable notoriety during the 1980s as training grounds for amoral, greedy and ruthless young men and women who had little concern for others as they strove to enrich and advance themselves.

Now, however, the University of Denver is not alone in its determination to remedy the situation. Among other universities drastically overhauling their MBA programs to place unprecedented emphasis on personal integrity and professional conduct:

• Harvard University's business school launched the trend last year by requiring all entering MBA students to take a three-week course in business ethics. (In 1987, the school was given $23 million by John S.R. Shad, a former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, to support ethics research.)

• At Northwestern University's Kellogg Graduate School of Management, a class that previously dealt exclusively with acquiring and using power now require students to examine problems associated with racism and sexism. They also must spend time at AIDS hospices, homeless shelters and public housing projects.

• Yale University's business school offers a course that requires students to write memos on a hypothetical moral quandary, only to be later confronted by people playing newspaper reporters who sharply question the proposed course of action.

• The University of Chicago's Graduate School of Business, Dartmouth College's Amos Tuck School, Georgetown University's School of Business Administration and other business schools now are either planning or implementing far-reaching reforms.

Skeptics have good cause to suspect that the phrase "business ethics" is an oxymoron. For example, the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School last year received a major grant to incorporate ethics into its business curriculum. But the money came from Exxon, a firm whose ethical conduct — or lack thereof — following a major oil spill earlier this year in Alaska left a great deal to be desired.

Daniels, the University of Denver's benefactor, sometimes appears to be more concerned about poor manners and boorish behavior than about more serious moral lapses, but university officials insist that they will not be offering etiquette courses.

What they will provide is an MBA program that requires all students to devote 10 days each year to volunteer work and includes such unconventional offerings as Outward Bound experiences and cultural awareness seminars. Chancellor Dwight M. Smith says the revised curriculum will emphasize "integrity, ethics and professional business conduct."

But if Elliot Kline, dean of the Denver business school, is correct, much more needs to be done elsewhere. According to him, fewer than 10 percent of all the nation's business schools currently require their students to sign up for an ethics course.

Supreme Court reviews right-to-die case

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court addresses wrenching ethical, medical and legal questions as it studies a Missouri couple's request to end life-sustaining treatment for their permanently unconscious daughter.

Preparing for its first "right-to-die" decision, the court today was to hear arguments over the asserted right of Nancy Cruzan's parents to precipitate her death.

Ms. Cruzan, 32, has been in what doctors call a persistent vegetative state for almost seven years. Her parents, Joe and Joyce Cruzan, are asking the court to let them order removal of a surgically implanted tube providing her with food and water.

The Missouri Supreme Court ruled doctors may not remove the tube.

Ms. Cruzan suffered severe brain damage in a Jan. 11, 1983, car crash. She lies in a hospital bed, her body rigid, her hands and feet constricted and bent into claw shapes. Doctors say she cannot experience thoughts or emotions, and that her condition is irreversible.

But Ms. Cruzan can breathe on her own and has periods when her eyes are open and move randomly.

The surgically implanted tube could keep her alive for 30 years or more, doctors say. Without it, she would soon die of starvation or dehydration.

Joe Cruzan, a sheet-metal worker, allowed doctors to implant the tube four weeks after his daughter's accident. He said he was told he could have it removed after a year if there were no improvement in her condition.

The right-to-die issue captured national headlines in 1976 when the New Jersey Supreme Court allowed the family of Karen Ann Quinlan to order removal of a respirator helping her breathe. Ms. Quinlan, in a similar coma-like state, continued to be fed through a tube and lived for nine more years.

American courts since generally have permitted removal of life-sustaining treatment for such patients, relying on a 1986 American Medical Association opinion that artificially supplied nutrition and hydration are medical treatments.

The AMA estimates 70 percent of Americans at some time will be involved in a decision about whether to provide life-sustaining medical care for themselves or family members.

Forty-one states, including Missouri, have so-called living will laws that allow people to pre-authorize the termination of life-sustaining treatment. But Missouri's living-will law, which does not allow for removal of feeding tubes, was not in effect when Ms. Cruzan was injured.

Her parents said she had told them she would not want to be kept alive by artificial means if ever rendered incompetent.

The Missouri Supreme Court said such statements fall well short of the "clear and convincing" evidence needed to prove her real intent.

"We choose to err on the side of life, respecting the rights of incompetent persons who may wish to live despite a severely diminished quality of life," the state court said.

Even if the justices decide there is no constitutional right to die, or that it cannot be exercised by a parent or guardian of an incompetent person, states will remain free to let doctors remove life-sustaining treatment from certain patients.

But such a ruling might prompt lower courts to make it more difficult for physicians and family members to terminate treatment.

Exchange student reunited with American sweetheart

By DOINA CHIACU
Associated Press Writer

FARMINGTON, N.H. (AP) — A Finnish exchange student is being allowed to return to his American sweetheart three weeks after he was forcibly transferred to another state because they spent too much time together, a legislator says.

"I'm so excited," 17-year-old Kelly LaPointe said Tuesday night after learning she and Iiro Lehtinen will be together again.

State Rep. William Tsiros said he got "the good news" Tuesday evening from the regional director of the Education Foundation for Foreign Study.

The organization had transferred the 18-year-old to South Portland, Maine, because they said he wasn't spending enough time with his host family in Farmington.

After being sent to South Portland, an hour away by car, Iiro said he was limited to one visit with Kelly and two telephone calls to her per month.

Because of the separation, about 100 of Farmington High School's 300 students boycotted classes one day last week. The couple's parents also were angered.

Kelly's mother, Patricia LaPointe, said she planned to send letters and petitions to state and exchange officials after learning of the transfer to South Portland, about an hour away.

"I had two very upset teen-agers here ... always on the verge of tears," Mrs. LaPointe said.

Iiro's father, Kimmo, said from Finland he lobbied with foundation officials in his country. "Now he is sad and alone," he told the Dover newspaper Foster's Daily Democrat.

Tsiros said an attaché in the Finnish embassy in Washington, D.C., became upset when she learned about the transfer.

"She said she was going to call the Education Foundation officials and was very irate at the whole situation," Tsiros said. "I don't know what she said, but it worked. I got the call from Meg Holliday a few hours later."

Ms. Holliday, the foundation's eastern regional director, was not immediately available for comment late Tuesday.

Iiro also could not be reached because his host family in Maine would not let him comment. A family member said they had heard nothing about the transfer back in Farmington.

Kelly said she was not sure her boyfriend had heard about the news, but added:

"I'm glad it's over and I'm glad he's coming home. He considers Farmington his American home. Whenever he writes me he refers to this as home and says how much he wants to be back here."

Iiro will be staying with a new host family in Farmington until the end of the high school year, said Tsiros.

"Then he will either go home or stay here," Tsiros said. "It's his choice now."

The relationship between Kelly and Iiro began in September. On Nov. 11, the exchange program decided to transfer him. They said he was told to cool the relationship enough so that he could spend more time with his host family.

Susan Jackson, the foundation's regional coordinator in Berwick, Maine, said many aspects of an exchange experience, including the student's temporary "adoption" by an American family, were being overlooked as the story of thwarted young love took on a life of its own.

Iiro's host parents in Farmington, Mike and Diane Crowley, hardly saw him for days at a time, according to Jackson and Holliday. They said he would leave early in the morning for school and return late at night, acting more like a boarder than a family member.

"The families are volunteers and they expect and perhaps deserve some interaction with the student they are harboring," Holliday had said.

Missing reporter suspended on return home

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas radio newsman Salvador Valdez, missing for nearly a week in Central and South America, was immediately suspended when he returned home.

Sent to San Salvador Nov. 25 by Dallas-based Cadena Radio Centro, Valdez was not heard from between Nov. 28 and Monday, when he reached CRC officials to tell them he was all right. His disappearance prompted fears among friends and colleagues that he had been killed in Salvadoran violence.

When Valdez arrived at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport

Tuesday afternoon, he explained that he left El Salvador Nov. 29 to Colombia, where he planned to cover several stories.

"I tried and tried and tried to call," Valdez said. "The operator kept telling me she couldn't get a line to the United States."

CRC officials said they would suspend Valdez for one month without pay for "improper journalistic procedures."

"It came like a bucket of cold water to me," Valdez said of the suspension. "It's the last thing I would have expected."

Bush: U.S. should help spur democratic changes

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, seeking to disarm criticism from the right, says the United States should help spur democratic changes inside the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe despite persistent differences over Soviet aid to leftist regimes in Central America.

Bush was expected to review the dramatic events unfolding in Europe today in an Oval Office meeting with Bettino Craxi, the secretary of the Italian Socialist Party.

Meanwhile, the White House denied Tuesday there was any difference in attitudes toward the Soviets between Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle, who said in a newspaper interview that the Soviets were "a totalitarian government" that had not "changed much in foreign policy."

Bush, in his first public comments since returning to the White House from Europe on Monday, told a GOP fund-raising dinner Tuesday night that "there is no question that progress was made at

"I look at Malta as a hopeful step in a new relationship, the first step in the next decade and the new world that is taking place each passing day. It's got to be a new world of freedom."

He told the crowd of 600 at a $1,000-a-plate dinner for the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, "We have some differences obviously with certainly past performance of the Soviet and regrettably, I'm afraid, in the future."

"But we're going to keep on working this. I was up front ... about the destabilizing flow of arms into the region from nations that are receiving Soviet support."

He acknowledged: "When you go to a meeting of this nature, there's trepidation. People wonder how it's going to come out."

Bush earlier got a standing ovation from his Cabinet, gathered to hear firsthand about the talks with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Bush ignored questions from reporters about Quayle, who had voiced skepticism about the Soviets in an interview with The Washington Post.

"We have an administration that is very closely aligned but I think it probably not possible for people to speak literally with one voice," said national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, adding there was no difference in the "substance" of their views.

For months, Quayle has voiced a harder line than Bush toward the Soviet Union. It has been suggested the vice president was deliberately playing to the conservatives as part of a White House strategy to keep their support.

Quayle said Tuesday that "there's no good guy, bad guy strategy" between himself and Bush.

Quayle told Knight-Ridder editors and reporters he should have called the Soviet Union an authoritarian, rather than a totalitarian, state.

Quayle credited the Soviets with remarkable changes in economic reforms and their campaign of openness, known as glasnost.

"Where there has been a lack of

'new thinking' on the part of the Soviet Union is in the area of foreign policy, and particularly in Central America," the vice president said.

In his speech at the GOP dinner, Bush said:

"As long as these democratic changes keep moving inside the Soviet Union and in Eastern Europe, I think the United States ought to be out there trying to help, not in some kind of superior manner, but trying to say, 'Look. Here's what works.'"

Some conservatives have expressed unhappiness over the summit, saying that Bush gave the Soviets economic concessions without securing a commitment to keep Moscow-made weapons out of Central America.

At the summit, Bush endorsed giving Moscow observer status at the world's leading economic regulatory body and proposed June as a target date for completing a trade agreement granting the Soviet Union most-favored-nation status, which would result in an easing of trade barriers.

Computer industry facing economic slump

By PETER COY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The glamour is fading from the computer industry at the close of the 1980s, tarnishing one of the most remarkable success stories of American business.

The computer industry has behaved more like the auto or steel businesses this year, with numerous layoffs and other job reductions. While sales continue to rise, the single-digit growth is a comedown for an industry that was accustomed to bounding gains early in the decade.

The latest evidence came Tuesday, when International Business Machines Corp., the world's biggest computer company, announced it would cut 10,000 U.S. jobs without layoffs because of slow growth in its home market.

IBM and independent analysts cite several reasons, including an economic slowdown and sluggish capital spending by American companies.

But one of the biggest factors is that computer makers have worked their way out of sales. They have made machines so cheap and powerful that customers no longer need to shell out millions of dollars to get a job done. They can get by with spending a tenth or a hundredth as much.

There are some winners in this transformation: the makers of personal computers and engineering "workstations," such as Compaq Computer Corp., Apple Computer Inc. and Sun Microsystems Inc.

The losers are companies that get most of their profit from bigger, costlier computers, including IBM, Digital Equipment Corp., Unisys Corp., Control Data Corp., Amdahl Corp., Bull HN Information Systems Inc., Wang Laboratories Inc. and Prime Computer Inc.

All those companies have cut jobs this year, through layoffs or voluntary resignations and retirements. Their machines can't match personal computers for the combination of low price and high speed.

Personal computers won't take over entirely. Big mainframe computers remain irreplaceable for jobs such as controlling access to vast reservoirs of data and handling complex computing jobs that can't be split up among several smaller machines. Minicomputers, which lie between mainframes and personal computers, also have a valuable role in many corporations.

But more and more, personal computers are doing jobs that once were the exclusive reserve of bigger machines.

"The little guys are just creeping up everywhere and they're stealing their way into niches all over the place," said Doug Crook, a Dataquest Inc. analyst.

All this is good for customers but bad for traditional computer makers. IBM is a major factor in the personal computer market but makes very thin profit margins in that business, in contrast to its fat profits from its dominant market position in mainframe computers.

Digital Equipment is in a similar bind. This year, it introduced a speedy computer workstation to compete with companies like Sun Microsystems. The machine is so fast it threatens to cannibalize Digital's own sales of its bread-and-butter Vax large-computer line.

The danger to mainframes and minicomputers was obscured early in the decade by the industry's overall growth. With expansion slowing, the threat from personal computers is clearly delineated.

IBM said Tuesday its business was stronger in Europe and Asia than in the United States. One reason may be that personal computers are not as popular abroad. Once PCs catch on abroad, they may sap strength from those markets for bigger computers as they did in this country, said Don Bellomy, an International Data Corp. analyst.

Bellomy's company is projecting an 8 percent increase in U.S. sales of computers next year, about even with 7 percent this year but far less than the 30 percent a year in 1982 through 1984.

Woman who donated part of liver to daughter says she'd do it again

By CLIFF EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — It was more painful than she expected, but the woman who gave up part of her liver for her baby girl in the nation's first living liver-transplant donor insists she'd do it again.

"I feel real good," 29-year-old Teresa Smith said Tuesday during her first public appearance since she and her daughter, Alyssa, underwent the dual operations Nov. 27.

"There was a little more pain than I expected," Mrs. Smith added. "But this was our best option for Alyssa."

She told reporters she'd seen her 21-month-old baby girl — recipient of a portion of her mother's liver — several times since the weekend, when she had recovered enough to visit the child for the first time since the operation.

Much of their time together has been spent sharing books and getting Alyssa to play with her toys, said the fourth-grade teacher from Schertz, Texas, near San Antonio.

She appeared with her husband, John, at a University of Chicago Hospitals news conference.

"She usually wants me to hold her, which I can't at this point," Mrs. Smith said, adding she feels too weak to carry Alyssa.

While the operations have drawn international attention, "I don't feel like a 'first,'" she said. "I feel like any parent who is looking out for the best interests of her child."

Mrs. Smith will be discharged before the weekend, said Dr. Peter Whittington, director of pediatric services at the hospital, who also spoke with reporters.

And there is a 50 percent chance Alyssa will be released in time to spend Christmas outside the hospital, though she will have to remain in the area for a time, he said.

"The liver is still not functioning perfectly," Whittington said. "Right now, she's a little yellow. But all other functions have pretty much fallen into place."

Alyssa remained in serious but stable condition.

"She still has a lot of hurdles to cross," though the liver has shown no signs of rejection, Whittington said.

Increasing concentrations of troops signal possible blow against Contras

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A significant increase in Nicaraguan troop concentrations near the Honduran border camps of the Contra rebels is raising the possibility of a Sandinista attempt at a knockout blow against the insurgents, officials say.

At the same time, the officials said intelligence reports indicate the Sandinistas in two weeks will receive from the Soviet Union four helicopters with potential for military use.

The shipment reportedly left the Soviet Union by ship on the eve of the Mediterranean summit last weekend.

The sources said the Sandinista mobilization began to occur in late October when President Daniel Ortega called off a cease-fire in effect for the preceding 19 months.

There are no reliable estimates of the number of Sandinistas involved in the redeployment.

The Sandinista army is believed to be in a position to launch an offensive against the Honduran-based camps within 72 hours.

Alternatively, those forces could be earmarked for use against the estimated 5,000 Contras still inside

Nicaragua, said the officials, insisting on anonymity.

The new deployments reflect what has been a deteriorating peace process in Nicaragua, marked not only by the suspension of the cease-fire five weeks ago but also by the continued existence of the Contras despite calls by Central American presidents for them to demobilize.

Tuesday was to have been the deadline for the Contras to disband under a resolution approved in August by Ortega and four other Central American presidents.

But thousands of Contras continue to be deployed at the Honduran camps, subsisting on U.S. food and other non-lethal aid.

Despite Sandinista protests, the aid will continue until after national elections set for Feb. 25. U.S. officials are worried the election will be called off, but the Sandinistas deny any such intention.

The rebels note the five presidents specified the demobilization was to have been carried out "voluntarily" and they insist their return to their homeland cannot precede the establishment of democratic conditions in Nicaragua.

Mistrust between the Sandinistas and the Contras has accelerated in recent weeks, partly because of an abortive attempt by the two sides last month to restore the cease-fire.

The Soviet MI-17 helicopters left port last week on the eve of the summit and are due at the Nicaraguan port of Corinto on Dec. 18, the officials said.

Such helicopters normally are sent to Nicaragua without weapons, enabling the Soviets to say they are not prolonging the conflict in that country.

On Sunday, after the Mediterranean summit, President Mikhail Gorbachev reaffirmed that his country has long since ceased the delivery of arms to the Sandinistas.

President Bush has said he does not challenge Gorbachev's assertion, but the reported shipment of MI-17s appears to some officials to undercut the Soviet leader's claims of peaceful involvement.

The officials said MI-17s delivered to the Sandinistas routinely are converted to military use once they arrive in Nicaragua. They are used both as troop transports and as gunships.

The sources said the Sandinistas have about 38 MI-17s in their inventory.

The MI-17 is an advanced version of the MI-8 Hip helicopter and is more easily adaptable than the MI-8 for use as a gunship.

New drug may reverse baldness

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Baldness may be reversed with a new drug that blocks the male hormone testosterone on scalp cells without the side effects of steroid-based drugs, a dermatologist reported.

The drug Cyocotol helped hair growth in 10 of 12 men in a study, said Dr. Richard A. Strick of the University of California, Los Angeles, during a presentation earlier this week to the American Academy of Dermatology in San Francisco.

Cyocotol, a synthetic compound developed by Los Angeles-based Chantal Pharmaceutical Corp., will be tested by Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. to treat acne and baldness.

Strick's results sound as though they are at least comparable to the hair-growth gains men make with minoxidil, the only drug approved for use in the United States against male pattern baldness and marketed as Rogaine, said Dr. Dowling B. Stough, a dermatologist at the University of Arkansas.

Balding men who used a solution of Cyocotol had 12 percent more hair on a test patch of scalp than they had a year earlier, the Strick study showed.

Men who hadn't been treated lost 9 percent of their hair.

Previous studies found that minoxidil resulted in moderate to dense hair growth in 39 percent of men who used it for a year.

Rogaine, a 2 percent minoxidil solution, is the only FDA-approved hair loss treatment and is a non-steroid based drug. It has been on the market for over a year and costs about $60 for a one-month supply.

Strick suggested that perhaps using a combination of Cyocotol and minoxidil could produce dramatic results.

But Strick was cautious about directly comparing Cyocotol's results to those with Rogaine. The studies are not directly comparable, he said, because they analyzed different sections of the balding spot and also because they counted hairs in test sections differently.

In Rogaine studies, the hairs were counted by hand and the Cyocotol test used a new computerized method.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration also recently approved a Cyocotol analog as an investigational new drug against skin wrinkling.

Stough said the Cyocotol study was small and that baldness remedies frequently don't live up to their early promise.

He also said that if Cyocotol proves effective against baldness it would work best in men in the early stages of hair loss when most follicles have not died.

4-H'ers enter District Food Show

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Eleven Gray County 4-H'ers participated in the District 4-H Food Show in Hereford on Dec. 2. Earning the opportunity to participate in the State 4-H Food Show was Lori Sutton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Sutton. She was named winner of the Senior Nutritious Snacks and Desserts category.

The State 4-H Food Show will be in College Station on June, 1990.

Being named among the top four participants in their respective categories were: Laura Reynolds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Travis Reynolds - Junior Fruits and Vegetables; Laura Johnson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jay Johnson - Junior Main Dish; Brian Brauchi, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Brauchi - Junior Breads and Cereals; Amanda Kludt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fran Kludt - Intermediate Nutritious Snacks and Desserts; Kirk McDonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee McDonald - third place - Senior Fruits and Vegetables; Becky Reed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe VanZandt - second place - Junior Main Dish; and Heather Kludt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fran Kludt - second place - Senior Breads and Cereals.

Other outstanding participants from Gray County included: David Kludt, Intermediate Breads and Cereals; Sheila Sanders, Intermediate Main Dish; and Barry Brauchi, Junior Nutritious Snacks and Desserts.

All participants were judged on their 4-H food projects activities, leadership and community service; a day's menu planned by the 4-H'er; and an interview with the 4-H'ers concerning nutrition information, preparation principles and food habits.

Following are the winning recipes from the top participants at District contest.

Raspberry Yogurt Mousse

By Lori Sutton

2 10 ounce pkgs frozen raspberries
2/3 cup orange juice
4 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1 cup plain nonfat yogurt
1/2 cup evaporated skim milk
Put thawed raspberries through food mill to remove seeds. Add 1/3 cup orange juice to remaining pulp and juice. Add 2 tablespoons sugar and bring to a boil in a small saucepan over medium-high heat. Reduce heat to medium-low and boil gently 8 to 10 minutes until thickened and syrupy. Sprinkle gelatin over the remaining 1/3 cup orange juice. Let stand 1 to 2 minutes to soften. Add to raspberry mixture and heat until completely dissolved.

Puree in blender or food processor (you should have about 2 cups). Pour into medium bowl. Chill about 1 hour, stirring 3 times; until mixture thickens to consistency of unbeaten egg whites and mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Stir yogurt until smooth, then stir into gelatin mixture. Meanwhile put milk in small bowl and place in freezer about 30 minutes until it begins to freeze around edges. Beat with an electric mixer until foamy. Add the remaining sugar (2 tablespoons) and continue beating until stiff peaks form. Fold into raspberry mixture until blended. Spoon into 6 stemmed dessert glasses. Cover and chill at least 4 hours until set.

Spinach Salad

By Laura Reynolds

1 pound fresh spinach
2 slices bacon
1 tablespoon pimento
1/4 cup Italian dressing
1/2 seasoned croutons
1/4 cup cheddar cheese
Thoroughly wash spinach. Remove stems and drain completely. Tear into bite-size pieces. Place into large mixing bowl. Fry bacon until crisp, drain. (May be cooked in microwave.) ## Casserole wins recipe contest

CHICAGO (AP) — A crowd-pleasing casserole with Tex-Mex taste has won the grand prize in the 1989 PACE Picante Sauce "Pick Up The Pace" recipe contest.

Pace-Setting Enchilada Casserole is a layering of tortillas with a spicy vegetable-meat mixture, sour cream and two cheeses. The recipe was submitted by Alison Boyd of San Antonio, Texas.

Pace-Setting Enchilada Casserole

11/2 pounds lean ground beef
1 small onion, chopped
1 garlic clove, minced
1/2 cups picante sauce
One 10-ounce package frozen chopped spinach, thawed and squeezed dry
One 8-ounce can tomato sauce
2 medium tomatoes, seeded and chopped
1 large red bell pepper, diced
1 tablespoon lime juice
11/2 teaspoons salt
12 corn tortillas
1 cup dairy sour cream
3/4 cup (3 ounces) shredded Monterey Jack cheese
3/4 cup (3 ounces) shredded Cheddar cheese or additional Monterey Jack cheese
Shredded lettuce (optional)
1/2 cup sliced ripe olives
Brown meat with onion and garlic; drain. Add picante sauce, spinach, tomato sauce, tomatoes, bell pepper, lime juice and salt.

Use tortillas instead of lasagna for this layered gound beef and vegetable casserole. This dish by Alison Boyd of San Antonio won the 1989 Pace Picante Sauce recipe contest.

Simmer uncovered 15 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Arrange 6 tortillas on bottom and up sides of lightly greased 13 -by 9 -by 2-inch baking dish, overlapping as necessary. Top with half the meat mixture. Arrange remaining tortillas over, overlapping as necessary. Spread sour cream evenly over tortillas. Top with remaining meat mixture. Bake in a 350-degree F oven about 30 minutes or until hot and bubbly. Remove from oven; sprinkle with cheeses. Let stand 10 minutes; cut into squares to serve. Garnish with lettuce, if desired, and olives. Serve with additional picante sauce. Makes 8 servings.

MICROWAVE: Prepare casserole in a 13-by 9-by 2-inch baking dish or shallow 3-quart casserole. Cook uncovered at 100 percent power (high) for 20 minutes or until hot and bubbly, rotating dish once after 10 minutes. Sprinkle with cheeses; cover with wax paper and let stand 10 minutes.

Meatloaf lovers delight

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes & Gardens
Food Editor

There are two kinds of people in the world: those who love meat loaf and those who hate it. I'm in the first group. I love it even better the second day as a cold meat loaf sandwich. This moist, flavorful loaf will transfer anyone in the second group to my side.

Sour Cream Meatloaf

2 eggs
One 8-ounce carton dairy sour cream
1/4 cup milk
1/2 cup fine dry bread crumbs

1/4 cup finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons snipped parsley
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 1/2 pounds lean ground beef
One package brown gravy mix (3/4 ounce)

In a large bowl combine eggs, 1/2 cup of the sour cream, and milk; stir in bread crumbs, onion, parsley, Worcestershire sauce, mustard, salt and pepper. Add beef; mix thoroughly. Pat into a 9-by 5 -by 3-inch loaf pan or shape into the same size loaf and place in a 12by 7 1/2 -by 2-inch baking dish. Bake, uncovered, in a 350-degree F oven about 1 1/4 hours or until a meat thermometer inserted in center of loaf registers 170 degrees F. Let cool 10 minutes; remove from pan.

Meanwhile, for gravy, in medium saucepan stir together remaining sour cream and dry gravy mix. Add water as called for on package. Cook according to package directions. Slice meat loaf and serve with gravy. Makes 6 servings.

Pampa Fine Arts Association sponsors Madrigal Dinner

The public is invited to share a medieval evening with members of the Pampa Fine Arts Association during a Christmas Madrigal Dinner on Dec. 9 beginning at 7:30 p.m. at the First United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall.

The Chamber Singers from West Texas State University under the direction of Larry Brandenburg and dressed in medieval costumes will stroll among the diners singing and entertaining during the multi-course dinner.

Traditional madrigal dinners complete with a boar's head were popular in England during the end of the 16th century.

According to Susie Wilson, chairman, the entire family will enjoy the evening.

In keeping with a "Taste of Merry Old England" theme the menu for the evening includes:

wassail, bife and brothe, carettes and peas, browned rootes and-steamed pudding.

The musical text is secular with parts for three or more singers sung a cappella with an interaction of characters straight out of the 16th century.

For more information or to make your reservations call Betty Hallberg at 665-6063 or Susie Wilson at 669-3135.

Man's best friend helps him hear as well as see

DEAR ABBY: Most people are familiar with Seeing Eye dogs for the blind, but not many are aware that there are Hearing Ear dogs trained to assist the deaf.

I am a deaf person who has a Hearing Ear dog named Danny. We are a team. Danny goes everywhere with me. We have been stopped by grocery store managers who ask us to leave, saying, "We don't allow dogs in here."

Abby, every state in the union (except Hawaii and Alaska) has laws guaranteeing deaf persons the right to be accompanied by a specially trained dog. These dogs wear a bright orange leash and collar.

It cost more than $3,500 to train Danny. I also had to be trained to handle Danny. I keep him clean and well-groomed, so he's always presentable when we go out in public.

Please print this, Abby — then maybe people will stop complaining about "that dog" in stores where ordinary dogs are not allowed. Thank you.

S.G. AND DANNY, MILWAUKIE, ORE.

DEAR S.G.: Glad to help. And now for a related bone of contention: Readers — when you see a Seeing Eye or Hearing Ear dog, please do not pet it or try to make friends with it. The dog is "working" and should not be distracted from its duties.

DEAR ABBY: You advised a 17-year-old girl to dump her boyfriend for pushing sex on her. Three cheers!

Then, a couple of days later, another girl wrote to say, "If you don't give him what he wants, some little tramp will" and, "You'll go to your grave with your virginity," because all the other fish in the sea want the same thing.

I'm a young man (20) who has managed to struggle along with my virtue intact. I am proud of my virginity and have all intentions of taking it to my honeymoon. I also don't like the idea of giving myself to a "little tramp" who's already caught all the other fish out there. Moral issues aside, I'd rather go to my grave with my virginity than with AIDS.

I hope you will run this, because I haven't seen a male response yet.

TODD

DEAR TODD: I've heard from many male virgins who share your views. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in response to the letter from "Been There."

I am a 20-year-old male college student. I've gone with the same girl for almost a year, and we are both virgins. I have never put pressure on any girl to have sex with me. I couldn't live with myself if I had.

At a college of 30,000, it is easy to find a girl to have sex with, but I don't want a relationship like that.

Not all men are looking for a girl who will jump into the sack with them on the first date. And contrary to what most people believe, a man and a woman in love can sleep together without having sex. We have done this a few times. The pleasure I received from it was the feeling of having the person I love being next to me as I fell asleep and woke up.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Face it, "Been There," nice guys don't finish last, and good girls don't end up alone. Better to go to your grave with your virginity than to give it to a jerk.

HAPPY IN IOWA

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a bridal shower for a friend and gave her two beautiful nightgowns. (Not cheap, either.) She and her boyfriend became engaged shortly after she found out she was pregnant.

A week before the scheduled wedding, she called it off because she found out her fiance was using drugs heavily, and he told her that he had no intention of quitting.

She phoned me to tell me the wedding was off, then she asked if I wanted my gifts back.

I told her she could keep them if she wanted, or she could return them for the money, since times would be tight for her with the baby coming. Should she have kept them or not? I felt she put me on the spot by asking me if I wanted them back.

What is the correct thing for an ex-bride to do in that situation?
EX-BRIDE'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: When a wedding is called off, the "ex-bride" should return the shower and wedding gifts.

However, in this case, the ex-bride asked you if you wanted your gifts returned, and you suggested that she return them for cash because "times would be tight," which was a very generous gesture on your part. Please don't fault her; she's facing a difficult future.

Young Mustangs surprise of 1989

It must be that winning tradition carrying Wheeler's young football team deeper into the playoffs.

With only three seniors (quarterback-safety Shawn Bradstreet, running back-defensive end Michael Kenney and offensive end-linebacker Kyle Sword) on the squad, the Mustangs must certainly be considered the surprise team of the area.

Wheeler (9-3) finished runner-up to Sunray in District 1-1A and then proceeded to knock off Vega, 34-11, in the area round and Rankin, 13-12, in the first round of regionals.

"We've worked hard on defense. I feel like a good defense can contain a good offense most of the time," said Wheeler's Ronnie Karcher, who is in his second year as head coach.

Since a 15-0 loss to Sunray on Oct. 20, the Mustangs have reeled off five straight wins, including last weekend's big one over once-beaten Rankin, ranked sixth in the Harris poll.

Now, Wheeler has the opportunity to pull off even a bigger coup Friday night in the regional quarterfinals at Canyon High School.

The Mustangs' opponent is unbeaten Sudan, ranked No. 1 by Harris. One of the Hornets' victims was Sunray, which was steamrolled, 42-14, in the area round.

But perhaps the Mustangs' winning tradition can carry them through. It has Sudan coach Royce McAdams concerned.

"Wheeler is a team that always plays with a lot of pride and tradition, even when they're not having one of their better years. That always makes them tough to beat," McAdams said.

Wheeler won state titles in 1987, 1979 and 1977.

o o o o o

McLean's power offense and shutdown defense carried the Tigers to their most successful season in school history.

The Tigers posted a 12-1 record and won the district title outright for the first time since 1966. They were ranked as high as fourth in the Associated Press state six-man poll.

Unbeaten Christoval ended McLean's season with a hard-fought 32-24 win in the six-man regional quarterfinals last Friday night.

"It was a game between two good teams," said McLean mentor Jerry Miller. "They got the breaks and we didn't."

McLean played flawlessly for almost 39 minutes, but the Tigers coughed up the ball on a last-ditch drive and Christoval's Colby Donaldson recovered on the Cougars' 25 with 1:04 to go.

"I can't blame him," Miller said, referring to Dwayne Hill, who fumbled after catching a pass from Donald Harris. "He was just trying to get us another yard or two."

A 10-yard penalty for an illegal block on the preceding play may have been just as costly for McLean. The Tigers were facing a second and eight situation on Christoval's 10-yard line when the penalty was called.

To his credit, Hill, just a junior, played well enough throughout the season to be named to the second-team District 2A All-District Team.

The disappointing loss, though, doesn't take a thing away from McLean's super-successful season. The Tigers blew away most of the teams they faced this season, averaging 40 points per game. Their defense yielded just 13.8 points per game.

"We were a very physical team," Miller said. "That was our strength."

McLean was never challenged through the first nine games of the season, winning by an average margin of 37.7 points per game. The Tigers sneaked by Silverton, 12-8, in the regular-season finale to clinch the district title.

"Our defense was awfully strong. The running game was the biggest part of our offense," Miller said.

Tres Hess and Dennis Hill paced McLean's explosive offense. Hess, a senior, rushed for 24 touchdowns and 1,435 yards. Hill, a junior, rushed for 1,349 yards and 19 TDs.

Harvesters grab easy victory over Randall

Pampa two points shy of school record

By SONNY BOHANAN

The Pampa Harvesters remained unbeaten at home and posted their second-largest margin of victory in school history during a commanding 96-44 victory over Randall in the District 1-4A basketball opener Tuesday night.

The 52-point win was only two points shy of Pampa's all-time margin of victory, a 60-6 thrashing of Canyon on Dec. 7, 1940. It was the Harvesters' fourth straight victory at McNeely Fieldhouse this year and bettered their previous high score for the season, which was an 88-point effort against Dalhart in the season opener Nov. 18.

"It's always scary to start off league play, because you never know what will happen," said Pampa coach Robert Hale, whose team climbed to 1-0 in district and 6-1 overall. "We wanted to start off on the right foot, and I felt like we were well prepared. We knew what we had to do—I was just hoping we were ready to do it."

As it turns out, the Harvesters were ready to do all that and more. Senior Mark Wood, who paced all scorers with 21 points, wasted no time getting Pampa on the board. He scored the first seven points of the game and reached double figures before the end of the first period. On the night, he shot an amazing 96% from the field and pulled down six rebounds.

After eight minutes, the Harvesters were on top, 17-9, a lead that only grew with each tick of the clock. By halftime, Pampa owned a 42-24 advantage, but the real damage was done in the third period. The Harvesters outscored Randall 30-6, forced 10 turnovers and grabbed a 42-point lead in a matter of eight minutes.

"One thing that's been a goal of ours all season is we want to be a third-quarter team," Hale said. "We feel like the third quarter is the time that you win or lose a game. Of course you have to play well in the fourth quarter, but sometimes by then it's too late. Being a third-quarter team is one of the trademarks we want to establish in our program."

The loss left Randall without a victory this season after seven games.

"We were just outmanned at every position," said Raiders' coach Leslie Broadhurst. "If we'd played hard, it might have been a better ball game, but our hats are off to Pampa. They're just a lot better ball club, which is evident from the score."

Pampa used the fourth quarter to get some playing time for its substitutes while racing toward the century mark. Every Harvesters player saw valuable court time, and all but one added to the score, which ended only four points shy of 100.

"I don't think we played great, but I think we played well," Hale said. "We sent 11 young men into the game, and we got good performances from all 11 of them."

Wood was the only player to top 20 points, but three other Harvesters made it into double digits. Seniors Ryan Teague and Cornelius Landers each finished with 13 points, and they led the team with seven rebounds apiece.

Junior Jayson Williams pitched in 10 points, followed by sophomores Jeff Young and David Johnson with nine points and six rebounds each.

Sophomore Randy Nichols added six points, senior Landon Thornton tossed in four for his first points of the season, and junior Quincy Williams contributed three to the Harvesters' winning effort.

Chris Ray, a 5-11 senior, led the Raiders with 14 points, nine of them from the foul line. Two other Randall players, Michael Armstrong and Tim Thornhill, reached double digits by scoring 10 points apiece.

Mavs win third game under new coach Adubato

DALLAS (AP) — Rolando Blackman says the Dallas Mavericks have direction under new coach Richie Adubato.

"We know we're going to hustle and work hard every night," Blackman said following a 107-88 NBA victory over the Golden State Warriors Tuesday night. "If we do that, we'll be in every game."

Blackman had 22 points for Dallas.

It was the third victory in four games for the Mavericks under Adubato, who agreed to coach the team for the remainder of the season Monday. He had been interim coach after John MacLeod was fired 11 games into the season.

"We're swarming a lot more as far as giving defensive help," said Mavericks forward Herb Williams. "Richie has a different philosophy of the game. He preaches defense."

"We're running harder in practice and that seems to carry over into the games."

Derek Harper scored 27 points and Brad Davis came off the bench to score 10 points during a key second-half spurt. Davis led a 22-9 run late in the third quarter and early in the final period as Dallas built a 97-79 lead, then coasted to its seventh win in its last 10 games.

The struggling Warriors, who lost for the fifth time in six games, were led by Chris Mullin's 27 points and 23 from Mitch Richmond.

The Mavericks held a 52-36 rebounding edge, led by center James Donaldson's 16 boards. Donaldson had missed the previous three games with a hamstring pull.

"I thought that was the difference in the game," Adubato said. "We were able to utilize our size advantage. It was real nice having James back."

Adubato said he never felt comfortable until the final five minutes when his team opened a 20-point lead.

The Mavericks went over the .500 mark for the first time this season as they continue to show better effort for Adubato than they did for MacLeod.

Harper had the hottest hand for the Mavericks, hitting 11-of-17 from the field, three-of-five from three-point range. Dallas backcourt trio of Harper, Blackman and Davis had 64 of Dallas' 107 points.

"It was an excellent game for our guards," Adubato said. "Brad got us going in the third quarter. I thought we relied too much on the outside shooting. Thank goodness we were hot."

The Warriors have been struggling without big men Alton Lister (ruptured Achilles tendon) and Jim Petersen (right knee surgery).

"I don't know what it is, but we keep having horrible second halves," said Warriors coach Don Nelson. "I'm playing the same people I play in the first half."

"This team needs someone who can bang inside. We were getting beaten physically every night."

Dallas starting forward Sam Perkins left the game in the second quarter with recurring back spasms. Perkins said he hopes to play Thursday night in Utah.

Randall outhustles Pampa, 49-34

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

In Tuesday's District 1-4A showdown with Randall High, the Pampa Lady Harvesters learned that they don't have a monopoly on quickness.

Randall used a tenacious press defense, the first team to do so successfully against Pampa this season, and outhustled the Lady Harvesters to clinch a 49-34 victory at McNeely Fieldhouse.

"They're a lot quicker than we thought," said Pampa coach Albert Nichols, whose team fell to 1-1 in district and 4-3 overall. "The Raiders play real well—they remind me of some Canyon teams we used to play. They're gonna beat some people in this district."

The Lady Raiders definitely did it Tuesday night, thanks largely to 5-10 senior post player Leslea Rexrode, who poured in a game-high 17 points despite sitting out the majority of the second period after committing two fouls early in the game.

"The kid we put in for Leslea held her own, so we held her (Rexrode) out so she'd only have two fouls at the beginning of the second half," said Randall coach Jim Wilcoxson, whose Lady Raiders ran their undefeated district record to 3-0, 7-2 overall. "Leslea's been our leading scorer all season, and we're not near as good offensively without her."

But even without the services of Rexrode, Randall was able to outscore Pampa, 15-7, in the second quarter to boast a 25-15 halftime lead. On the night, the Lady Harvesters outrebounded the Lady Raiders, 28-26, but Pampa surrendered 24 turnovers to Randall's 18.

"I think we surprise some people with our quickness," Wilcoxson said, "especially when we put (sophomore guard Corey) Norman in the game. We've got four girls with sprinter speed, and the press has been pretty good for us all year because of our quickness."

The third quarter was a repeat of the second as Randall outscored Pampa by eight points, 16-8. Rexrode added eight for the Lady Raiders, then threw in five more for good measure in the final eight minutes. She scored 13 of Randall's 24 second-half points.

"We didn't have any intensity," Nichols said. "I thought (sophomore post) Nikki Ryan played real hard, but we need team intensity, not just from one individual."

Ryan led the Lady Harvesters with 12 points, followed by Bridgett Mathis with 8, and Crystal Cook and Christa West with 4 apiece.

Besides Rexrode, 5-10 senior Jana Mullins was the only other double-digit scorer for Randall. She added 12 points, followed by 5-9 sophomore Amanda Sandlin with 6.

The victory kept Randall tied for first place in district, while the Lady Harvesters are in second place.

"We feel good to come in here and win, because this is a hard place to do it," said Wilcoxson. "There'll be a lot of people who need to win here and won't."

Pampa travels to Levelland Friday to resume District 1-4A play. The tipoff against the four-time defending state champion Lobettes is set for 6:30 p.m.

'Buddy Board' adds fuel to fire

IRVING — On a bulletin board in the Dallas lockerroom, is a reminder of what happened Thanksgiving Day against the Philadelphia Eagles. It says unkind things about the Cowboys, who have a dozen NFL losses.

The "Buddy Board" is just another shot fired in the "bounty war" between Jimmy Johnson of the Dallas Cowboys and Buddy Ryan of the Philadelphia Eagles. It will all be settled on Sunday in Veterans Stadium.

"Emotions will be high," promised Johnson, who accused Ryan of placing a $200 bounty on placekicker Luis Zendejas and $500 on quarterback Troy Aikman in a 27-0 loss to the Eagles Thanksgiving Day. "And I think the officials will be on top of the game this time."

Johnson said linebacker Jessie Small deliberately went out of his way to hurt Zendejas. Johnson said he would have confronted Ryan on the field after that game but Ryan "hustled his fat rear end to the dressing room."

The NFL is investigating the bounty charges and Ryan called on Johnson to apologize for the charges, including the personal slur.

"Please!" Johnson replied on Tuesday when asked if he would apologize.

Ryan pressed the attack on Tuesday in a telephone call to Dallas media.

"My players will be ready because of what Johnson has accused us of," Ryan said. "We won't be flat."

Told Johnson wasn't going to apologize, Ryan said: "I'm sure the league will have him do that before long. This has been a bunch of bull. All the league had to do was look at our film."

Ryan said Johnson didn't even have the respect of his own players.

"If you took a vote of the (Dallas) players you'd find out they have more respect for me than Jimmy," Ryan said. "It would probably have to be a silent vote, though."

Asked if he would try to run the score up on the team with the worst record in the NFL, Ryan said "points are an important thing in this business. If we need them, we will. However, I'd take a win by one point."

Ryan said after the first game, "It's probably the worst prepared team that I've seen in the NFL since I've been in it."

Ryan added on Tuesday, "They weren't very well prepared, but they'll probably do better this time because they have longer to get ready."

Johnson said he hoped his players didn't fall for Ryan's emotional smokescreen.

"If we get caught up or distracted, then it will take away from our play," Johnson said. "We've been trying to downplay the incident."

Asked if that was so, why would he have the bulletin board material in place, Johnson replied, "We do want to remind 'em of what happened a little bit."

Groom cagers sweep McLean in doubleheader

GROOM — Groom swept McLean in a basketball doubleheader Tuesday night. Groom boys, led by Richard Jenkins and Mike Conrad, rolled to a 70-54 decision.

Shannon Fields scored 20 points to lead the Groom girls to a 56-32 win. Jenkins scored 20 points and Conrad 19 as Groom boys posted their third win against their opponents this season.

McLean got 19 points from Donald Harris and 14 from Bobby Sherman. McLean boys are 0-1.

In the girls' contest, Groom broke open a tight contest with a 28-point third quarter.

Alicia Reynolds was the top scorer for McLean with 17 points. Karen Babcock added 14 for Groom. Groom is 6-1 on the season while McLean girls dropped to 1-4.

WHITE DEER — Panhandle posted a 60-40 win over White Deer in a boys' basketball contest Tuesday night.

Greg Laramore paced Panhandle with 22 points, followed by Ken Howles with 15.

Panhandle also won the girls' game, 57-48.

Top scorer for Panhandle was Amy Throgmorton with 14 points.

Traci Lemons had 15 points and Julie Hilhouse 13 for White Deer.

White Deer girls have a 3-4 record.

HEDLEY — Kelton girls snapped a four-game losing streak and won their first game of the season by defeating Hedley, 62-26, Tuesday night.

Hedley's top scorer was Amanda Ward with 11 points.

Hedley won the boys' tilt, 57-45.

Curtis Neely and A. Carson scored 19 points each to lead Hedley's scoring attack.

Gene Kirkland had 13 points while Randy Singleton and Steven Bodine had nine apiece for the Lions, who fall to 1-5.

BRISCOE — Briscoe came from nine points down at halftime to defeat Darrouzett, 65-60, Tuesday night.

The Broncos, 7-1 on the season, had a 31-point performance from Dallas Fillingham. David Gilmer added 10 points.

Harris and Miller had 19 and 18 points respectively for the losers.

Darrouzett downed Briscoe, 68-31, in the girls' game.

Smalley had 18 points and Born 16 to lead Darrouzett's scoring attack.

Mandy Ferguson led Briscoe with 21 points. Tina Lehman and Elizabeth Hale had four points each.

Briscoe girls are still looking for their first win after seven games.

MIAMI — The Miami Warriors slipped by Follett, 53-51, in basketball action last night.

Don Howard had 13 points and Melvin Seymour 10 to lead Miami scoring.

Follett's high scorers were Howard and Schilling with 12 points each.

Follett notched a 63-29 victory in the girls' game.

Gillespie led Follett with 24 points and Alicia Walls led Miami with 15.

Although McLean's offensive success depended mainly on the two-pronged ground attack of the 'H & H' boys, the Tigers had a better than average air assault. Quarterback Donald Harris threw eight touchdown passes, Hess threw two, and Hill had one.

Hess and Harris were first-team all-district picks on offense and defense.

"We had a good year and I think we'll be good next year also," Miller said. "We only lose three players (Hess, Harris and second-team all-district linebacker Rob Sanderson). We've got a good group coming back."

Harris (125-pound sophomore) round out the nucleus for next year's squad.

"We should have another good team," Miller said. "I'm looking forward to it."

Pampa product Dustin Miller is starting for the Rangers of Northwestern Oklahoma College in Alva.

Miller, a 6-5 freshman, returned to this neck of the woods last weekend. He scored 16 points and was the leading rebounder with nine in the Rangers' 73-70 loss to West Texas State University. The game was played in Amarillo.

Miller, the only freshman in Northwestern's starting lineup, led Pampa to the District 1-4A basketball championship last season. As a high school senior, Miller set school records in points per game average (23.8) and points in a season with 739.

Flashback: December, 1981 — Canadian rallied in the second half to defeat Phillips, 40-35, in a high school basketball game. Lee Young led the Wildcats in scoring with 15 points and Guy Morrow chipped in nine.

Hogs rally in second half to down Ole Miss

By The Associated Press

Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson called it right when he predicted a tough gauntlet for the Razorbacks when they met Mississippi.

"I told them before the game we would probably be behind at halftime and we would find out what we are made of in the second half," Richardson said following Tuesday night's 90-76 victory over Ole Miss.

Richardson was exactly right. The Rebels held a 44-35 halftime lead.

But Todd Day, Ron Huery and Lee Mayberry scored in double figures in the second half as the 10th-ranked Razorbacks (4-0) came from behind.

Day scored 15 of his 18 points after intermission for Arkansas. Huery had 14 of his 21 points in the second half and Mayberry made 11 of his 16 in the final 20 minutes. Tim Jumper and John Matthews led the Rebels (0-4) with 18 each.

In other SWC games, Houston defeated DePaul, 65-49, and Centenary defeated Texas A&M, 89-82.

SWC roundup

Junior forward Craig Upchurch led Houston with 19 points as the Cougars defeated the DePaul Blue Demons 65-49.

Houston (4-1) won for the third straight time. DePaul (3-4) has lost four of its last five and is off to its worst start in 15 years.

Houston, which led 37-33 at the half, used a smothering man-to-man defense to start the second half and outscored DePaul 12-1 over a six-minute span.

Bryon Smith's pair of 3-pointers put Houston up 49-34 with just over 15 minutes left. Smith finished with 13 points.

DePaul's only point during the drought was a free-throw by David Booth.

The Cougars increased their lead to 56-38 with 9:02 left when center Alvaro Teheran banked two short jumpers.

DePaul put together an 11-1 run to close to within eight at 57-49 with 1:45 left, but the Blue Demons' offense stalled the rest of the way, and Upchurch scored five of Houston's final six points.

Booth led DePaul with 14 points and freshman center Stephen Howard followed with 11 points.

Larry Robinson scored 30 points and pulled down 16 rebounds in leading the Centenary Gents to an 89-82 non-conference victory over Texas A&M.

John Buckwalter added 15 points and Marro Hawkins had 14 points and 13 rebounds for the Gents, who improved to 3-2. Texas A&M fell to 2-4.

Tony Milton scored 19 points for Texas A&M while Darren Rhea added 18 points and 13 rebounds.

A&M held a 42-37 advantage at halftime but Centenary went in front 46-45 four minutes into the second half. A&M cut an 11-point deficit down to four, at 84-80 with 1:36 left, but that is as close as the Aggies got.

The Gents outscored A&M 55-48. Centenary is now 2-0 against Southwest Conference teams. The Gents nipped Baylor 89-87 in their season opener.
