Bill To Remit Penalties And Interest On Delinquent Taxes Argued

AUSTIN (AP)—An extension of the time limit for payment of delinquent ad valorem and poll taxes to November 1st, 1935, was voted Thursday by the house of representatives.

Final action on the bill to remit penalties and interest on taxes which were delinquent last August 1st, was delayed by debate over an amendment to make its application optional with cities, towns and school districts.

Priehard—A High Type
 Public Servant

If all men in public life were as honest and conducted their offices as well as the late J. I. Priehard did, there would soon be no talk of "corrupt officials."
 It is too bad that we always wait until a man can no longer hear before we say what we really feel about him.
 Mr. Priehard, although he served this county for nearly 32 years before sudden death overtook him, never presumed that the clerk's office was his office.
 Legion are those who can tell of the time he arose from his bed to open the office to render service. If called down at midnight to issue a license, he was just as pleasant as if it had been done within office hours.
 He remained in office for sixteen terms and won the Democratic nomination for the seventeenth term purely because he refused to campaign in the space of the few months ahead of election time. His was a constant campaign of unreserved, graceful efficiency, honesty, and friendliness.
 If the character of public life is to be held in higher esteem, we must have an increasing tribe of real men like Mr. Priehard.

All Major Texas Crops Far Under Normal, September Report Shows

Yield prospects of major Texas crops have not changed materially since Aug. 1. While the drought has not been effectively broken, beneficial rains have covered most of the plains area, bringing temporary relief. However, much additional moisture will be needed to bring about material improvement in range and feed conditions. Last year the drought was effectively broken late in August, and the plains district was able to mature a large crop of roughage and feed grains. It is doubtful, however, with rains coming so late, if other than roughage can be produced before frost this year. In drought areas other than the plains section only favored localities received moisture during August, and in these instances not enough to be of much benefit to crops.
 A cotton crop of 2,383,000 500-lb. gross, weight bales is forecast for Texas from a condition of 44 per cent of normal on the estimated 10,350,000 acres for harvest this year. The indicated yield per acre is 110 pounds, which is two pounds higher than was indicated on August 1. All sections show improved prospects with the exception of the High Plains and the Trans-Pecos districts. Indications are that the harvested acreage will be the smallest since 1910 when 10,212,000 acres were harvested.
Corn To Be Short
 The Texas corn crop is not turning out as well as was expected on August 1. The condition of the crop, at 32 per cent of normal, indicates a yield of 9.5 bushels per acre and a total production of 54,084,000 bushels. Last month the forecast yield and production were 10.0 and 58,830,000 bushels, respectively.
 Rice condition at 87 per cent of normal on Sept. 1, forecasts a yield of 55 bushels per acre and a total production of 7,590,000 bushels for Texas. This compares with 7,473,000 bushels produced in 1933 and the Aug. 1 forecast of 7,314,000 bushels for 1934.
 Grain sorghum prospects remain unchanged from Aug. 1. The forecast is for a yield of 8.0 bushels per acre and a total production of 33,824,000 bushels. Rain which came late in August and early in September may result in a larger production of roughage, but it is extremely doubtful if additional grain can be matured before frost.
Peanuts About Average
 The preliminary estimate of acreage of Texas peanuts to be harvested for nuts is 160,000 acres compared with 167,000 acres last year. The condition at 37 per cent of normal forecasts a yield of 300 pounds per acre and a total production of 48,000,000 pounds of nuts as against a yield of 250 pounds and a total production of 103,540,000 pounds in 1933.
 Texas hay crops show no change during the month and yields promise the same as on Aug. 1. The yield of all Tame Hay is forecast at 80 tons per acre from a condition of 34 per cent on Sept. 1. A total production of 453,000 tons is indicated which compares with 508,000 tons last year. The preliminary estimate of wild hay yield is 60 tons per acre compared with 80 tons last year. Total production is forecast at 137,000 tons as against 174,000 tons last year.
Potatoes Short
 Sweet potatoes at 29 per cent of normal on Sept. 1, promise a yield of 60 bushels per acre and a total production of 4,140,000 bushels compared with 80 and 6,240,000 bushels, respectively, in 1933. Prospects are unchanged for a month ago.
 Prospects are for a production of 2,200 tons of broom corn in Texas this year compared with 1,200 tons last year. Acreage has been materially increased this year while yields are expected to be somewhat lower than last year.
 Apples and peaches promise

Stanton Enrollment Has Increase Over Last Year's Total

STANTON (Special) — Stanton public schools have a slight increase in enrollment over last year, Superintendent A. M. Limmer said Thursday.
 A higher per cent of increase in the high school grades is evidenced than in the elementary schools, he disclosed. Limmer ascribed this to restoration of Stanton to the accredited list by the committee on Classified and Accredited Schools.
 Stanton schools lost their accredited rating a year before because of a school term too short by only a few days.
 Faculty members for this year are A. M. Limmer, superintendent;

W. C. Glasener, high school principal and science teacher; Mrs. W. C. Glasener, social science; Miss Evelyn Franklin, English; Res Hostie, mathematics and athletics; Mrs. G. L. Jones, home economics; W. V. Stephenson, elementary principal; Marcus Hale, Miss Iva Robertson, Miss Ida Fae Everett, Miss J. R. Lamar, Mrs. Larry Morris, Mrs. J. W. Maggart, Mrs. J. A. Farrell and Miss Beryl Tidwell, elementary teachers.

Under The Dome

At Austin

By GORDON K. SHEARER

AUSTIN, Texas, (UP)—Tom F. Hunter, recent candidate for governor, would not congratulate the winner because of things that occurred in the campaign. Hunter used "the short and ugly word" in referring to certain campaign statements.

What irked him most was contrasting pictures purporting to show his palatial home and a shack, which circulars said was the home he permitted his mother to occupy. That was a lie, he can't forgive, Hunter told the United Press. Judge John Sharp, Ellis county, won the race for a place on the Supreme Court bench, but he feels he was a "hard luck" candidate, nevertheless.

First his name got on ballots as a resident of the wrong county. The same mistake occurred for the runoff primary.

Then his campaign expense account was misfiled in the Secretary of State's office.

Capitol carpenters are beginning to wonder what physical changes "Jimmie" Allred will want in the governor's office. Every governor in recent years has had a different idea about the proper arrangement of the offices. Governor Moody had an east and west partition in the reception room. This changed it from an L shaped division of the room in Gov. Miriam Ferguson's first term.

Governor Sterling used the inner office nearest the capitol entrance for his private office. He had a north and south partition in the outer office. Governor Ferguson uses the inner office farthest from the entrance. He kept the north and south outer office partition but added a rail with a snap gate across the south end of the room.

time for inauguration depends on the opening of new legislatures. They open the second Tuesday in January of odd numbered years. The inauguration is one week later. If a woman calls a taxi, gets in and directs the driver to take her to a relief commissary, it will be no novelty in Texas, believes State Representative Harold Kayton, San Antonio. It's already happened there. One woman used the same taxicab to go to three different commissaries and get supplies, he said.

Handling relief in Texas will only add more "clients" to the list already under care of the state board of control. There are 19,000 permanently under the board's care in various state institutions.

Passing of the Texas Rangers is foreseen by some of them in efforts to establish a central state criminal bureau.

Rangers likely would be continued but they would be a division only of the proposed bureau. It would have its identification section either at Huntsville prison or in one of the large cities. The state highway patrol likely would be merged into the system and the Rangers form a detective and emergency section.

A law the Rangers would welcome would be one changing the designation of "Special Rangers." A "Special Ranger" is connected with the regular ranger force only by having his commission filed at Ranger headquarters. He is appointed by the governor on recommendation of his home county sheriff. He differs only from a special deputy sheriff in being permitted to act outside of the county where he is appointed.

ACTING CAPTAIN LAYS MORRO CASTLE FIRE TO ARSON OFFICER WARMS GREETED BY WIFE HOW FIRE RUINED PROMENADE DECK OF HUGE BOAT

This picture of the government's inquiry in New York into the Morro Castle disaster in which more than 100 persons lost their lives when the ship burned at sea shows William F. Warms (center, in light suit), acting captain and chief officer of the liner, being questioned by Dickerson N. Hoover (right, standing) of the department of commerce. Warms said he believed the fire was touched off by arsonists. (Associated Press Photo)

CROWDS ON JERSEY SHORE SEE SMOULDERING LINER

Asbury Park, popular New Jersey seaside resort city, became the focal point for thousands of visitors after the ill-fated Morro Castle, Havana-to-New York liner on which 133 persons either lost their lives or were reported missing in a fire that swept the ship, was beached within a few feet of the shore. Still smouldering, the boat is shown with crowds of curious lining the water's edge and boardwalk. (Associated Press Photo)

A striking textile picket is shown as he was dragged by a state trooper from the scene of rioting at Saylesville, R. I., where two were shot and many injured in a battle between pickets, troopers and mill guards. (Associated Press Photo)

TIGER ISLAND

By Gouverneur Morris

Chapter 14 GREAT MOMENT

Roughly speaking, the Boldero's course followed the east coast of Borneo.

She would, in the course of time, round the north end of that vast and mountainous island and shape a southwesterly course for Singapore. But reefs and islands not even noted on any but the particular charts made straight sailing out of the question. Yet these same reefs and islands in conjunction with the faroff mysterious profile of Borneo itself made the sea-scape varied and interesting.

The ocean waters, as is usual in the vicinity of coral-reefs, teemed with life. It was not unusual for the Boldero to chug her slow way through a jam of loafing sperm whales. Porpoises abounded; there were almost incessant silver flashes of flying fish and the air teemed with birds.

A Rhesus monkey died the third day out from unknown causes and Ivy wept. When she was not looking, Bowers lowered the pathetic little scrunched-up body overboard. At most instantly there was a great strong swirling of water and a shark took it.

At first the work of helping to look after a manager seemed an awful chore to Bowers, then it became interesting and then fascinating. Here and there he was beginning to make friendships.

One parrot, for instance, in a cage containing ten of the same species, would fight for his attention. The monkeys liked him. Whenever Helen felt that she had been misunderstood by her mistress, she would run to Bowers and tell him all about it, defying Ivy from the vantage of his shoulder and saying in monkey-talk that she never wanted to see her or hear of her again.

One day Ivy called to him from the front of the tiger cage. He was not yet on terms with the tigers, but he had hopes. On this occasion the male, as he often did, was pressing his head against the bars of the cage so that he could be conveniently scratched between the ears, and Ivy was scratching him when Bowers came up.

"See if he will let you do it," she said, "and get your hand away quick if he won't."

Bowers was not in the least anxious to scratch that particular tiger or any other between the ears. Nevertheless he did as he was told. The tiger instantly recognized the changed technique and growled. The tip of his tail twitched, but otherwise he did not move.

Bowers scratched more strongly, and dug the balls of his fingers into the thick loose scalp. Again the tiger growled, but more softly. It may have been a purr Bowers scratched and massaged the tiger's scalp until his fingers ached.

By that time the great cat was asleep, and the big-game hunter found himself in a confused and puzzled state of mind. He had made the first definite step toward friendship and understanding with a tiger and for the first time in his life he had an inkling that striking wild things suddenly dead is not all that it is cracked up to be.

The next day he went by himself to the tiger cage and spoke to the king of the Far Eastern jungle in casual and friendly tones. The female backed into a corner of the cage, flattened her ears and showed her teeth at him; but the male after hesitation came forward and after one short open-mouthed roar to show what he could do if he chose, bowed down his great head and pressed it against the bars.

Bowers remembered his first real tiger, a striped shadow in the night; the crash and jerk of a heavy express-rifle, also the crash and jerk of the second barrel. He had fired from a platform in a tree, where he was as safe as money in the Bank of England.

He knew that he had hit the tiger twice. He had seen the striped shadow lift and twist and thrash like a newly landed fish, and lie still. But he was not sure that it was dead, and he dared not go down from his platform until the day broke. The day had revealed a medium-sized rather mangy female tiger dead as a stone.

He had not, it is true, had himself photographed resting on his trusty rifle and with one foot planted on the tiger's neck to show the superiority of man over the beast; nevertheless the killing of that first tiger had been one of the great moments of his life. A boyhood dream come true!

Well, here he was massaging the scalp of a live tiger, a tiger trusting him had come to him of its own accord and literally asked to have its head scratched! When you come to think of it, it was another great moment. It was really a greater moment than the first, and far more promising of future thrills.

You can only kill one tiger once, but you can scratch a live tiger's head a dozen times a day if you feel like it, and he will let you.

One of the crew had made a fine medicine ball out of cotton rope and to begin the day Bowers and Flint, threw this at each other, caught it, and threw it back until both were in a lather.

Flint was wiry and tough, but Bowers had real power and enjoyed using it. He propelled the medicine ball with great force and the fact that Flint could not return it with equal force rankled in the wireless man's breast.

Flint had fallen head over ears in love with Ivy and was not able to hide his feelings. If he did not pester her with his attentions, it was because the opportunities were lacking. During most of the daylight hours the manager kept her engrossed.

RIVALRY FOR MAINE GOVERNORSHIP

Again the state of Maine may serve as a national political barometer this year when the early gubernatorial election, September 11, climaxes one of the most intense campaigns the state has had in 20 years. Gov. Louis J. Brann (left), democratic incumbent, seeks re-election against Alfred K. Ames (right), republican nominee. (Associated Press Photos)

When she rested, it was in one of the lounge chairs and Bowers was nearly always to be found in the other one.

Indeed, wherever Ivy was to be found at a given time, Bowers was seldom far off. Flint could not make love to her at mealtimes or from a platform in a tree, where he was as safe as money in the Bank of England.

To watch over her and protect her was his life's aim. Often the jealousy in his heart drew him forward. Sometimes Ivy and Bowers would be awake and he would hear the sounds of their voices, casual and even humorous.

The bows were a black triangle against the night. It was a blackness into which no eye however straining could pierce. Flint strained his eyes and stretched his ears, but something withheld him from going close enough to overhear what was being said. If he could have overheard the usual talk, he could perhaps have gone back to

-SPORT SLANTS-
By ALAN GOULD

The current discussion about the change in the size of the official football—making it in effect somewhat more cigar-shaped—is "sheer nonsense" to Mr. William S. Langford, the sage of St. Andrews and the secretary of the National Football rules committee.

Mr. Langford is referring, of course, to the suggestion that the introduction of the new ball will bring about some alterations in playing formulae and cause coaches to employ more speed on the attack—whatever that may mean. Just how the size of the ball will affect the speed of play, or the lack of it, is not clear either to Mr. Langford or myself.

"I feel," he writes, "that the change in the measurements of the short axis will have no noticeable effect on the action of the ball or the tactics of the game. Had the rules committee felt otherwise I believe it would never have consented to the change."

The feature of the attack which will benefit from the new ball is, of course, the pass. The ball will be a bit easier for the passer to handle and the trajectory perhaps a trifle flatter. The kickers also may find advantage but it will be scarcely noticeable. In short, nothing radical has been done in making the change and any suggestion to the contrary is so much hokum.

NOW I'LL TELL ONE—
Another pleasant fiction of recent origin is the claim that the major league club owners, already tired of the effects of the livelier ball, have had some of the jackrabbit juice extracted and the ball consequently deadened for experimental purposes during the last month of the season.

It is pointed out that there have been more low-hit games within the past few weeks than at any other stage of the season and that it is obvious either the ball is less lively or not that the pitchers have suddenly combined to put on more pressure than they have exerted at any other part of the proceedings.

All of which, to put Mr. Langford's expressive phrase into action again, is "sheer nonsense."

In the first place, the supply of baseballs for both major leagues, sufficient to last for the balance of the season, was made up about two months ago. There has been absolutely no change in the specification for either big league ball since the 1934 campaign started. The ball is identical the same for both leagues. In fact they both come from the same "hopper" in Philadelphia, the only difference being that one is stamped with the signature of John A. Heydler, president of the National League, and the other with the name of William Harridge, chief executive of the American league.

BETTER THAN 1933
The Giants of 1934 are a better club, better-balanced and smoother-working, for two main reasons—Travis Jackson at shortstop and young Hank Leiber in center-field—according to Terry's view.

"To my both make a tremendous difference," said Bill. "Jackson has had a great come-back. I don't have to use an alternating set of outfielders with Leiber playing the game he has shown since we recalled him."

"We have some other great young ball-players coming up, we have the pitching replacements when we need them and I do not see how anybody can keep the Giants from staying on the top of the heap for two or three more years."

Mrs. Shine Phillips Elected To Head Group Of Contract Players For Coming Term; Mrs. Bernard Fisher High Scorer

The Pioneer Bridge Club had an unusually interesting session Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John D. Biles, when the members assembled for the first time after disbarring for the summer.

The meeting also marked the end of the round of entertaining. Scores were announced for those making highest total during the past year.

Mrs. Bernard Fisher was the highest scorer and Mrs. C. W. Cunningham was second high.

During the afternoon play Mrs. Joe Fisher scored highest, Mrs. V. Van Gieson substituted for Mrs. R. H. McNew.

Mrs. Shine Phillips was elected chairman-reporter for the coming term. The house was beautifully decorated with fall flowers and the hostess served a salad and ice course at the close of the games.

Members playing were: Mmes. Albert Fisher, Bernard Fisher, Joe Fisher, E. O. Ellington, Dee Hilliard, C. W. Cunningham, J. D. Biles, R. C. Strain, John Clarke, W. W. Inkman, Harry Hurt and Shine Phillips.

Mrs. Clarke will be the next hostess.

City firemen are polishing fire trucks from stem to stern. Paint jobs are being retouched, and plate surfaces polished. Tires have been given a coat of special rubber paint.

Result of the work is a fleet of shining fire trucks.

Not been able to attend the afternoon games, particularly Saturday afternoon games—and 99 per cent of the games have been played on Saturday afternoons.

The installation stacks up as a victory for the bleacher fan, the more or less under-privileged sportsman. For several years school officials did not favor the move, but they capitulated yesterday—and now, at least, for the time being, all is forgotten.

The week following the Eastland engagement, Cicero is bracketed here. Then the Bobcats are scheduled at Abilene. An attempt, or maybe several attempts, will be made to transfer the Abilene conflict. After that comes Ranger, originally scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 13, but due now to be on Friday, Oct. 12.

McCamey To Have Lights

To Be Only Lighted Gridiron Between Abilene And El Paso

MCCAMEY—Football fans of McCamey and vicinity will have the opportunity of seeing night football games this season since the contract for the lighting of the McCamey football field was let the first of this week at a total cost of $1,750.

The McCamey field, when completed, will be the only lighted field between Abilene and El Paso, and the attendance at the games is expected to increase 50 to 40 per cent over the attendance of last year.

Most of the Badgers' home games this season will likely be shifted to Friday nights instead of Saturday nights as originally scheduled.

Phillies Wallop St. Louis Cards

PHILADELPHIA—The Phillies sank another harpoon into the pennant hopes of the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday when they suddenly turned on Dazzy Vance and Dizzy Dean in an eight-inning rally and scored all their runs for a 3-1 win.

Their attack came with two out in the eighth and at a time when the Cards' one run edge—gained, incidentally, through a long homer by the "Old Dazzler" himself—was looming larger and larger.

Touch Teaches Deaf To Hear

PITTSBURGH, (UP)—Deaf persons are now learning to hear through nerves of touch at De Paul Institute here.

By practice sensitivity of nerves in the chin may be increased. Sisters of Mercy found. Parvane sensations carrying sounds from the fingers or neck to the brain.

Difficulties are countless at first. Sisters said, but after preliminary training progress is rapid. The speaker must be close to the patient when speaking. Sensations must be stronger than average.

The sounds conveyed are "pure and rich," Sister Bernadette, who is in charge of instruction, said. Children, therefore, can learn to speak as well as normal persons.

Sisters at De Paul first heard of the method at International Congress of the Deaf, Trenton, N. J., a year ago.

Rebekahs To Hold Initiation Friday

All Rebekahs are urged to attend the meeting of the organization Friday at 8 p. m. in the I.O.O.F. hall.

Initiation will be the feature of the evening and members are instructed to come prepared for the ceremony. Miss Sarah Phillips will be initiated into the lodge, according to Mrs. W. O. McClendon, noble grand.
