Senate Approves Anti-Bombing Plan

Nixon To Lose Scott's Support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate has voted to forbid any further U.S. involvement in Indochina, and President Nixon's most important Senate backer, Republican leader Hugh Scott, says he will support the bombing of Cambodia for only two more weeks.

Pa. who has been an administration stalwart on the war, announced he would give the White House until June 30 to make certain all parties will adhere to the new cease-fire agreement worked out in Paris.

Scott made the announcement after attending an hour-long briefing for senators by Henry A. Kissinger, the President's national security adviser. Kissinger held a similar briefing for members of the House. Sources said he gave little assurance the bombing could be ended soon.

The Senate vote climaxed a four-year antiwar effort that began when a freshman senator named Charles Goodell, R-N.Y., introduced the "Vietnam Disengagement Act" in the winter of 1969 and was turned out of office the following year.

HALLS OF SUMMER — While most students use the summer to work or rest, a number find the opportunity to attend summer school to get ahead in courses or to catch up on work lost during the regular session. Only the first floor classrooms are in use at Pampa High School for the 533 students currently enrolled in the summer sessions.

CONTRADICTS HALDEMAN

Magruder Admits Lies In Previous Testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Job Stuart Magruder, involved from the start, says he went to the White House last January and described the full Watergate conspiracy to H. R. Haldeman, then President Nixon's closest aide.

Magruder said he embraced illegal plans because he saw others doing so. For example, he said, William Sloane Coffin, the Yale chaplain who taught him a course in ethics, was advocating the destruction of draft cards.

Magruder said it would be "natural to assume" that Haldeman, Nixon's chief of staff, was reading his detailed Watergate memos. They were delivered to aide Gordon Strachan for relay to Haldeman, he said.

Magruder also deeply implicated John N. Mitchell, the former attorney general and his former boss at the Committee to Re-elect the President (CRP), and John W. Dean III, a Mitchell protégé and counsel to the President, in both the nonchalant approval of the bugging plan and the frenzied attempt to conceal high involvement when it went awry.

Iceland Rejects US Base

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — Foreign Minister Einar Agustsson of Iceland said Thursday he plans to take steps later this month to expel U.S. troops from Iceland.

Agustsson told foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) meeting in Copenhagen that Iceland would begin the expulsion process by ending the American lease on the Keflavik air base.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers told an Icelandic television audience that he hoped to reverse the decision. Talks between the two men were considered possible sometime today, U.S. sources said.

A major element in the dispute centers on NATO refusal to become involved in the long-simmering "cold war" between Iceland and Britain, both members of the alliance.

Iceland unilaterally extended its territorial fishing limit to 50 miles, but Britain refused to observe it and later sent gunboats into the area to protect British trawlers.

Britain and Iceland took their argument before the ministers Thursday without result. Both restated their case, with Iceland demanding that Britain withdraw its warships and Britain saying it would do so only if Iceland promises not to harass British trawlers fishing in the area.

SHIP IN GOOD SHAPE

Astronauts Begin Final Week Of Space Orbit

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skylab's astronauts, beginning the final week of their four week orbital voyage, checked their Apollo command ship today and found it in good shape for the flight back to earth next Friday.

Mission commander Charles "Pete" Conrad spent four hours in the three-seat command module, which remained docked to the nose of Skylab, checking all the critical flight systems in the crew ferry craft.

"Our initial look is that the command module is looking real good," mission control communicator Richard Truly told Conrad, Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz.

It was the first detailed system by system test of the Apollo since the astronauts flew it to a rendezvous with the big space station May 25. Engineers wanted to make sure the unprecedented three-week orbital storage had not affected its delicate guidance and control systems.

"Some strange vehicle I'm in," Conrad jokingly told mission control when he moved from the big living quarters of Skylab through an airlock module into the Apollo. "I haven't been in long enough to remember what it's all about."

The checkout was the first operation aimed specifically at ending the record endurance mission. The pilots will brush up on the critical undocking and re-entry procedures Saturday.

"We're beginning to think about coming home," said flight director Neil Hutchinson.

In addition to testing their Apollo, the three pilots spent more time gazing at the sun through filtered telescopes. Weitz reported observing a surprisingly quick change in appearance of a bright solar feature during a 30-minute period.

The Apollo, which has been docked to Skylab since May 25, has already spent more time in space than any of its moonship predecessors. Engineers wanted to check all flight systems to be sure they are ready for the critical undocking and re-entry into the atmosphere next week.

The astronauts were already up and working before mission control called them at 4:25 a.m. CDT.

"Well ahead of schedule," Weitz said. "We've already weighed and are off doing other things," said Conrad, who was well ahead of the day's schedule.

Ground communicator Henry Hartsfield told the crew that NASA management was considering adding another earth resources survey Monday. The astronauts finished the 11th and last planned photographic sweep for their flight Thursday.

starting to close out some of the EREP (earth resources equipment), Hartsfield said.

Another uncertainty about next week's plans is whether the astronauts will be asked to erect another sunshade over Skylab during a spacewalk scheduled for Tuesday. Project officials met all day Thursday without reaching a decision and called another meeting today.

Judge Cain said he was asked in a letter last Feb. 13 from Pampa school superintendent James F. Malone relative to the effect of Amendment 14 to the Texas Constitution approved last November, and possible distribution by the county of permanent school funds.

An opinion was immediately sought by Judge Cain from the attorney general. It was received today.

Judge Cain said he is not certain that the opinion answers all the questions and copies of it were mailed today to school trustees, county commissioners and other interested officials.

Before the question is resolved, Judge Cain indicated, it will necessitate further study both by the County Commissioners Court and the Pampa school board.

The permanent school fund currently contains $471,000 in bonds.

After a study session with the mayor and two city commissioners yesterday afternoon, City Manager Mack Wofford today placed in the mail a report to the U.S. Treasury's Department of Revenue Sharing detailing how the city plans to spend its RS money.

The city manager told Washington it will use the $92,901 received between Jan. 1 and June 30 this year for capital expenditures.

These could include such things as fire department, sanitation and street department equipment, Wofford said.

The report filed today states the revenue sharing money will have no effect on Pampa's tax levels.

Magruder said he embraced illegal plans because he saw others doing so. For example, he said, William Sloane Coffin, the Yale chaplain who taught him a course in ethics, was advocating the destruction of draft cards.

FOR LOCAL RESIDENTS

New Freeze To Cause Few Price Reductions

By TEX DEWESE
President Nixon's freeze on consumer prices will result in very few, if any, rollbacks of current retail prices in Pampa.

What the President's freeze will do, however, is to prevent further increases in the June 1-8 standard set by the President.

Consumers seem to be mostly interested in food and gasoline prices.

A check made by The News today showed recent price increases in food items and gasoline in Pampa had been placed in effect before the June 8 deadline set by President Nixon.

Supermarket and grocery store managers indicated their prices were affected very little by the President's freeze other than to halt any further price advances.

According to a United Press story from San Antonio, Associated Milk Producers, Inc., said it plans to go ahead with a 10 per cent increase in raw milk prices and predicted that shortages of milk would result because of President Nixon's new guidelines.

City Sends Report On Use Of Funds

After a study session with the mayor and two city commissioners yesterday afternoon, City Manager Mack Wofford today placed in the mail a report to the U.S. Treasury's Department of Revenue Sharing detailing how the city plans to spend its RS money.

It also does not take into account $158,000 received in 1972 which could be applied to city sewage treatment plant improvements or some other capital expenditure item.

Meany Speaks Out

AFL-CIO President George Meany said Thursday the price freeze "represents a failure of policy" rather than a new policy.

Officers Arrest Youths On Possession Charges

Department of Public Safety officers Phil Altman and J. Fielding arrested 12 young Pampa men and a juvenile girl last night on charges of possession of marijuana and another substance believed to be either pure hashish or opium.

The 13 were arrested on a lease seven miles southeast of the city at a location commonly known as Screaming Wells.

Chad To Speak On Middle East

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—The Security Council planned to hear Chad's opinions today on the Middle East, then adjourn until after President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev complete their talks on the same subject.

Originally, the council was adjourning Thursday night, but Foreign Minister Baba Hassane of Chad, one of three Africans assigned to report on the Middle East situation, said he wanted to speak today. The council agreed to hear him before adjourning.

In their talks next week in Washington, diplomats said, Brezhnev and Nixon may decide a new Middle East peace move that could overshadow deliberations by the Security Council.

Ostensibly, the adjournment, until July 16, is meant to give its 15 members time to study speeches made so far. Actually, members will wait to hear what ideas Nixon and Brezhnev advance.

In the council debate so far, all major powers except China said they favor reactivation of the special mediation mission by Gunnar V. Jarring of Sweden.

But otherwise, the council, meeting at Egypt's request to review the Middle East crisis nine days ago, approached adjournment with little sign of any new breakthrough in its quest for peace.

The council also planned today to approve Secretary General Kurt Waldheim's recommendation for an extension of the U.N. peace-keeping operation in Cyprus until Dec. 15. The mandate for the 3,144-man force expires at midnight.

Waldheim recommended the six-month extension with a promise that by December he would find ways to cut back financing of the operation.

AMPI Sees Black Market For Products

SAN ANTONIO (UPI)—President Nixon's latest economic guidelines will produce "black market conditions" for farm products and possible food shortages according to Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI) president John Butterbrodt.

The dairymen's group plans to go ahead with a 10 per cent increase in raw milk prices announced earlier in the week because of increased feed and production costs. Butterbrodt said Thursday.

He said Nixon's price freeze on retail food would put a "practical ceiling" on raw agricultural products, even though unprocessed farm products are exempt from the move to halt inflation.

"There will be shortages at the ceiling price and black market conditions," he said. "Add to that the fact the farmer will not be influenced to produce food if he can't recover his cost of production and a reasonable profit and one has to arrive at the conclusion there will be absolute food shortages later on."

IN VIETNAM Fighting Rages Despite Truce

SAN ANTONIO (UPI)—The Army is investigating recruiting practices in San Antonio, Amarillo and other cities across the country because it appears recruiters are forging high school diplomas and helping young men to pass tests to meet monthly quotas.

A military spokesman said Thursday investigations in 24 cities, including San Antonio and Amarillo, have led to legal action against 107 of its 6,500 recruiters.

He said the malpractices, which also include doctored or ignored police records, appear to be a case "of individual recruiters going too far in trying to make their objectives" rather than some sort of widespread conspiracy.

From mid-1971 through last March, the Army uncovered more than 1,100 men who had been improperly enlisted among more than 300,000 soldiers, the spokesman said.

He said any enlistee found to have joined in the fraud could be court-martialed, and any innocent victim of the fraud might just be given a ticket home and allowed to leave the Army with no discharge needed.

The spokesman said there have always been some fraudulent enlistments, but "reasons would dictate it would be more serious now that the draft has ended and the pressures on recruiters are greater."

Jury Indicts Parr For Tax Evasion

CORPUS CHRISTI (UPI)—A grand jury investigated the finances of South Texas political boss George B. Parr for one year and on April 6 returned indictments against the Duke of Duval on charges of trying to evade $129,000 in income taxes.

On May 2 Parr won a dismissal of the charges against him on the grounds the San Antonio grand jury reached beyond its jurisdiction in indicting Parr.

A federal judge ruled the indictments should have been returned in Austin, where Parr's income tax returns were filed, or in Corpus Christi, where the grand jury sits that has jurisdiction over Duval County.

Thursday a grand jury in Corpus Christi indicted Parr on the same charges the San Antonio panel indicted him two and a half months ago.

It is the third time Parr, 72, has been indicted on such charges. He has also been accused of assaulting an attorney and ballot box stuffing in the 1948 Senate race won by Lyndon Johnson with a statewide margin of less than 100 votes.

Parr was also supposed to go before another grand jury today in connection with shooting incidents at San Diego where he was a deputy sheriff until he resigned last month. But District Attorney Randall Nye said Thursday this grand jury has postponed its hearing until July 2.

"Two persons who were to have been served subpoenas cannot be located," Nye said.

Nine persons have already testified before the grand jury and several of them have complained Parr shot at them with a high powered rifle. They said their complaints to local law officers produced no results.

One of those who testified was J.S. "Cheko" Garcia, who owns a car dealership in San Diego. Garcia said after his appearance at Parr, acting as an attorney for a water district, cut off the water to his dealership for 11 days.

Parr was indicted for income tax evasion in 1934. He was convicted, given a two-year suspended sentence and fined $5,000.

Beatrice Foods Gains Control Of SIC Firm

Beatrice Foods Co., Chicago, Ill., has received approval from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to acquire control of Southwestern Investment Co., Amarillo, pursuant to an agreement entered into before another grand jury today in connection with shooting incidents at San Diego where he was a deputy sheriff until he resigned last month. But District Attorney Randall Nye said Thursday this grand jury has postponed its hearing until July 2.

The announcement was made at Amarillo in a joint statement by R. Earl O'Keefe, president and chairman of Southwestern, and William G. Karnes, chairman, and Don L. Grantham, president of Beatrice.

Approval by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board was one of the conditions to the consummation of the Beatrice-Southwestern transaction and was required because of Southwestern's ownership of Security Savings and Loan Association of Colorado Springs, Colo. which will continue as a subsidiary of Southwestern.

The approval is conditional upon the transaction being consummated by Sept. 26, 1973, and the filing by Beatrice of certain customary certifications and other documents.

A meeting of the Southwestern stockholders to approve the transaction has been scheduled for next Tuesday. In addition to the approval of the Southwestern stockholders, consummation of the transaction is subject to various customary conditions. If all conditions are met, it is expected that the merger will become effective on or about July 23.

Connally May Leave Position

WASHINGTON (UPI)—John B. Connally, despite White House denials, is reportedly frustrated and disappointed with his new role of part-time adviser and will soon sever relations with President Nixon.

Connally, a Democrat when Nixon named him treasury secretary two years ago, rejoined the administration this spring after turning Republican, but his friends and political associates were saying Thursday that the former Texas governor and protégé of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson has found his position with Nixon less than he expected.

The White House disputed the reports, saying that Connally and Nixon enjoy a close relationship and that Connally "never considered this to be a full-time, long-term job."

Connally was said to feel that he has not "played a popular role" with Nixon and that he has had to talk to the President "like a Dutch uncle." His friends said he has described the situation at the White House as a "screwed-up mess" as a result of Watergate and an inflationary economy.

"I've done all I can at the moment," Connally was quoted as saying.

A Rockefeller Speaks up for Revolution

By RALPH NOVAK

NEW YORK (NEA) — We all know well that our economic system is not an unimproved blessing, that it is exploitive at times of both resources and people, that too few people share in ownership, that along with big government it has produced huge impersonal institutions which can be dehumanizing to the mind and spirit.

That is not Abbie Hoffman talking, nor Herbert Marcuse nor Ralph Nader nor George McGovern. It is not even Gloria Steinem.

If you are asking yourself what a nice rich guy like him is doing in a quote like that, the answer is getting greened—to borrow a phrase from Charles Reich, one of Rockefeller's favorite authors.

The passage is from Rockefeller's new book, "The Second American Revolution." And it is an ideological landmark that a Rockefeller (the name is practically synonymous with Big Business) finds himself accepting not only that what he calls "the runaway locomotive of change" is here but that it can turn out to be a positive force.

"We have a long, long way to go to lift this country, to realize the concepts that were the base on which this country was founded but which have not been fulfilled for all of our people," Rockefeller says, sitting in his snug 56th-floor office at Rockefeller Center. "But I think that the example of the early days of the Revolution of 1776 shows that we can meet our problems and the bicentennial could supply us with the lift factor we need if we look on it as an inspiration and not just a celebration."

Compare that with the unbridled optimism of Rockefeller's grandfather, who wrote in his memoirs, "Random Reminiscences of Men and Events," in 1909: "Our comforts and opportunities are multiplied a thousand fold. The resources of our great land are now actually opening up and we are scarcely touched; our home markets are vast, and we have just begun to think of the foreign peoples we can serve — the people who are years behind us in civilization. The men of this generation are entering into a heritage which makes their fathers' lives look poverty-stricken by comparison. I am naturally an optimist, and when it comes to a statement of what our people will accomplish in the future, I am unable to express myself with sufficient enthusiasm."

Today's John D. Rockefeller has inherited that optimism as well as the esse oblige impulses that led his grandfather to donate more than $500 million to various causes.

While his younger brothers Nelson, Laurance, Winthrop and David have largely concerned themselves with politics and the family fortune, John, now 67, has been a professional philanthropist for most of his life. He is best known for his work on population control and as one of the founders of the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts in New York. But he has also been involved in civil rights, education, urban housing and so many other issues that at one point he was actively involved in 22 philanthropic campaigns.

He has also shown an increasing concern with the "second revolution" and in 1968 went so far as to sympathize with the students acted that way. My hope is that the Establishment is increasingly realizing that a resolution of this country's problems is important to the long range interests of the Establishment itself."

Even though he argues for a new value system, a "humanization" of capitalism and wider use of planning techniques, Rockefeller himself stops short of advocating radical measures.

"I would like to see change within the over-all existing structures, not an overthrow of the system," he says. "I don't want to get away from the profit motive, I just want more emphasis on how profits are allocated in society."

It is conceivable, Rockefeller concedes, that he is too optimistic about the ability of American society to change. There is, after all, a granite tower kind of naivete that inevitably influences him.

But he contends that even all the Americans who aren't named Rockefeller are feeling more and more that they can help bring about a change.

"While there is still a lot of apathy that has to be overcome, people are getting involved," he says. "The activism of the civil rights movement after the Supreme Court's Brown decision in 1954 showed people they can influence change. Now we have the women's liberation movement, the consumers, the environmentalists."

That is the sort of comment usually calculated to get a member of the Establishment disestablished. But Rockefeller says that — so far at least — he has not been ostracized.

"I was a little worried that after the book came out I would be thought of as somebody who had gone a little haywire," he says. "But so far no one has re-

Underworld Finance Wizard Draws First Sentence

MIAMI (UPI) — Meyer Lansky, whose career as the reputed wizard of underworld finances spans five decades, was sentenced to a year and a day in prison Thursday for refusing to appear before a federal grand jury.

A federal prosecutor said he believed it was Lansky's first prison sentence.

The 70-year-old Lansky, a former associate of such mob figures as Charles (Lucky) Luciano and Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel, stood quietly in the courtroom in a blue sportcoat and blue slacks and assured U.S. District Judge James Lawrence King he would not skip town if allowed to remain free on bond while the sentence is appealed. Over the objections of Justice Department Strike Force prosecutor Dougald McMillan, King allowed the reputed boss of Mafia finances to stay out of jail on a $250,000 bail bond plus a $400,000 personal recognizance note. Lansky posted the note last Nov. 7 when he was arrested on his arrival here from Israel. Defense Attorney E. David Rosen was given 10 days in which to file an appeal of the sentence, which he argued was too severe. He said Lansky's failure to answer a grand jury subpoena was "a crime against the court" rather than against the public and should be penalized by "a nominal fine."

Crop Products Vary In State

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Rains over much of Central and East Texas during the week brought needed moisture to some counties but also caused some damage to young crops and delayed small grain harvesting and hay making. Spring planting was still active in the Rolling and High Plains and in parts of North Central and Southeast Texas.

The cotton picture is varied over the state, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service said. Cotton is blooming and fruiting in many southern counties and squaring in parts of Central Texas. The crop is making slow progress in the Far West Texas due to lack of rain. And some dryland planting is being delayed in the South Plain due to lack of soil moisture.

Corn and grain sorghum are generally making good progress although only a fair corn crop is expected in East Texas. Grain sorghum planting is still active in the plains.

Some rice still remains to be planted in Southeast Texas. About half the soybean acreage has been planted in that area. Peanut planting is active in North Central Texas.

The Extension Service said early peach varieties are being harvested but the crop is generally light in most counties.

The vegetable harvest continues active in the San Antonio-Winter Garden area but is slower in the Rio Grande Valley where trucks are in limited supply. Cantaloupes and watermelons are also being harvested in southern counties and along the Coastal Bend. Onion harvesting is active in El Paso and Presidio counties.

The pecan crop looks good in some counties and spraying continues to control the pecan nut casebearer. Walnut caterpillars are infesting some trees in South Central Texas.

Dear Abby

Slippery situation over who scrubs dad's back

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in disagreement about something. He wants my two well-developed teen-age daughters [his stepdaughters] to come into the bathroom and wash his back while he is in the tub.

I would be happy to wash his back, but Dad prefers that they do it. They reluctantly, have done so in the past but I have told them that they don't have to do it anymore. This has caused ill-feelings on my husband's part. He thinks that because he has provided them with a lovely home they should show their appreciation by washing his back when he requests it.

Your answer will decide.

AGAINST IT

DEAR AGAINST: I'm against it, too. The girls can show their appreciation to Dad on Father's Day, by providing him with a lovely long-handled brush with which to wash his own back.

DEAR ABBY: After my mother died 15 years ago, my oldest sister got all the family pictures. Among them was my mother's wedding picture which was in a beautiful antique frame. I always loved that picture.

Six months ago my sister died and left everything to her daughter. I asked this daughter for my mother's wedding picture and she refused to give it up. Abby, this girl hardly KNEW my mother. [I think she just wanted to keep it because of the frame.]

She offered to have a duplicate made for me, but I want the original.

Who do you think the picture rightfully belongs to? And how should I get it?

FAMILY FIGHT

DEAR FIGHT: Since the daughter inherited all of her mother's possessions, and the picture was among them, it belongs to her. Quit fighting, and ask that the duplicate be made by an expert. It could be every bit as good [or better] than the original.

DEAR ABBY: I am getting married soon and everything is going smoothly except for one thing. My grandmother is going to wear a white dress! From what I understand from knowledgeable friends, it is an unwritten rule of etiquette that only the bride may wear white. Have you ever heard of this rule?—And where did it come from?

My grandmother is getting on in years and I don't want to upset her or hurt her feelings, so how do you suggest I approach her — if at all?

GETTING MARRIED

DEAR GETTING: That rule originated years ago to discourage anyone who might try to upstage the bride. It's passe now. But it's not likely that your grandmother has that in mind, so simmer down and don't mention it.

DEAR ABBY: I sent 32 "R. S. V. P." invitations and received only 6 responses!

Obviously a hostess has to know how many guests to prepare for. After waiting two weeks, would it be appropriate for me to telephone those from whom I have not heard and ask if they are coming or not?

This strikes me as being somewhat pushy and I am reluctant to do it.

FRUSTRATED HOSTESS

DEAR FRUSTRATED: On the outside chance that some of them did not receive your invitation, telephone them.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest.

For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Double-Ring Service Unites Susan Tudor, Stephen Walls

The marriage of Susan Terry Tudor and Stephen Craig Walls, was solemnized at 4 p.m., June 2, in First United Methodist Church of Texarkana, Tex.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Leroy Tudor of Texarkana, and Mrs. Goen Cumpston, 627 N. West, Pampa, and John Walls of Amarillo, are parents of the bridegroom.

THE CEREMONY
Dr. Edwin Dodson officiated for the double-ring ceremony. Organist, Ms. Annie Weiszer, accompanied Mrs. Kenneth Richardson and Marsha Walls, sister of the bridegroom, as they sang, "Speak Softly Love," and the "Lord's Prayer." She also played, "Laura's Theme," and "Sunrise, Sunset."

The church altar was decorated with candelabra and basket arrangements of gold and white daisies, blue carnations and greenery. Pews were marked with blue satin ribbons.

THE BRIDE
Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white sheer organza and lace. The high-rise fitted bodice featured a lace yoke and a Victorian lace collar. The Juliet sleeves ended in wide lace cuffs and the floor-length skirt was highlighted with lace appliques.

Her imported mantilla of illusion was edged in scalloped lace and she carried a nosegay of blue split carnations, shasta daisies, centered with gold daisies with long white satin streamers.

ATTENDANTS
Mrs. William Meigel, Dallas, was matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Becky Pettus, Houston, Cathy Chapman, Dallas, and Diane Tudor, sister of the bride, Texarkana. All bridal attendants wore identical floor-length gowns of pale blue dotted Swiss, trimmed with white lace and carried nosegays of gold daisies.

Candlelighters were Tim New and Steve Grady, both of Pampa.

Serving as best man for his college roommate was Frank Grossman, Corpus Christi. Groomsmen and ushers were Brian Walls, brother of the bridegroom, Tim New and Stephen Thomas Grady, all of Pampa.

RECEPTION
Ellowship Hall of the church served as the setting for the reception. The table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with silver candelabra holding blue tapers.

The three-tiered wedding cake was topped with cone-shaped arrangements of white maline, blue velvet leaves and blue carnations. Mary Alice Tudor served the cake and Mrs. Kenneth Richardson registered wedding guests.

For the wedding trip to New Orleans, La., the bride wore a two-piece gray and white striped costume with white accessories and lifted the corsage for her bridal bouquet.

The couple will reside in Austin, where the bridegroom plans to complete work on his master's at University of Texas.

AFFILIATIONS
The bride is a 1973 graduate of UT, with a BA degree and served as president of Alpha Phi sorority. The bridegroom was salutatorian of the 1968 graduating class of Pampa High School and graduated with honors from UT in 1972 with a BA degree in Mechanical Engineering. He is a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity.

PRE-NUPTIAL EVENTS
A bridal tea was hosted recently by Mrs. David Wilson and Mrs. John Powell.

A miscellaneous shower was hosted by sorority sisters of the bride.

The rehearsal dinner was held at the Sheraton Inn in Texarkana.

SHE WON'T COME
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mrs. Leonid I. Brezhnev will not accompany her husband when the Soviet Communist party leader comes to the United States this weekend for an eight-day state visit.

President Nixon had invited Mrs. Brezhnev to make the trip when he attended the summit meeting in Moscow in May, 1972. White House officials gave no immediate reason for the decision of Mrs. Brezhnev not to accompany her husband. They said Brezhnev may be accompanied by other members of his family.

Basic Watergate or,

The more you know the less you understand

By RALPH NOVAK

With everyone talking about "Watergate" these days, it is important that we make it perfectly clear exactly what we mean.

So you might want to keep this glossary of Watergate terms next to your TV set.

WATERGATE COMPLEX — This is a newly coined psychiatric term used to describe a peculiar form of neurosis that has hit the United States recently, especially in the Washington, D.C., San Clemente, Calif., and Key Biscayne, Fla., areas. Its symptoms include loss of memory, aversion to crowds and an odd tendency to point one's index finger at whoever is standing nearby.

NATIONAL SECURITY — What we used to have but don't have any more. See NATIONAL INSECURITY.

INOPERATIVE STATEMENT — Do you remember how when you were a kid if you said something with your fingers crossed it didn't count? This is more or less the same principle only you don't have to cross your fingers.

SCORECARD — What you can't tell the players without. Of course you can't tell players with one, either, since there aren't any and nobody knows the score in the first place.

INVOLVED — Convicted of, charged with, suspected of, reported to be, allegedly or perhaps being mixed up with the Watergate controversy. So far this includes everybody in the country — except Dick Clark, the residents of Boys Town, Neb., and Harmon Kilbreth.

WHITE HOUSE AIDES — The old name for the people who worked as President Nixon's assistants. See OCCUPYING FORCES.

PLUMBERS — So named because they were highly paid, and took forever to do their job incompetently, these were the men the President's aides charged with making America safe for democracy. See NATIONAL SECURITY.

EXECUTIVE PRIVILEGE — This is the informal rule that gives 50-year-old government officials the right to use that time-honored retort of two-year-olds everywhere: "Won't!" See EXECUTIVE POPPYCOCK. No, not see ERVIN, SAM if you know what's good for you.

DENIABILITY — When you ask a friend who knows somebody to get you a pair of hot hubcaps but insist that he not tell you where he got them, you are seeking deniability. See WHAT I DON'T KNOW WON'T HURT ME.

RESPONSIBILITY — What

everybody used to want but doesn't want any more. See HOT POTATO.

ZEAL — Something that the OCCUPYING FORCES have a lot less of than did the WHITE HOUSE AIDES. But then again, they do have a lot more judgment. We hope.

EXECUTIVE CLEMENCY — The governmental equivalent of a mother saying, "He's such a good boy; I can't believe he really meant to do any harm." Used to win friends and influence sentences. See BRIBERY.

IMPEACHMENT — In football, this is known as being ejected from the game as a penalty for violating the rules. And in life as in football, everyone is supposed to follow the rules. See WISHFUL THINKING.

IMMUNITY — Something like a vaccination, this will protect you from contracting the Watergate Complex. It causes some unpleasant side effects, however, notably a loss of popularity and a lessening of the chances that you will ever be able to get a job with the Republicans again.

CIA — Formerly the nation's intelligence agency, this is now the federal government's miscellaneous department. Whenever somebody has an odd job they need done — like visiting a psychiatrist's office at 3 o'clock in the morning or holding a wig distribution or guarding the NATIONAL SECURITY of Chile — they get themselves a CIA man. Also known as the TAXI SQUAD.

CHECKS AND BALANCES SYSTEM — The basis of the American form of government, so-called because of the many exchanges of checks and additions to bank balances that occur.

PEACE WITH HONOR — The condition that can hopefully be brought to WASHINGTON, D.C., by negotiations and compromise if possible, by B-52 strikes on the Congress if necessary. See FOUR MORE YEARS?

In the actual hand East has no more trumps and the diamond play is essential.

West also knows that his partner has no more trumps because East ruffed the spade with the deuce and played the six-spot when trumps were led. Experts use a trump echo to show three. With a third trump he would have ruffed with the six and followed with the deuce.

1040 U.S. Individual Income Tax Return for the year ending January 1-December 31, 1972, or other taxable year.
U.S. Treasury Department—Internal Revenue Service
Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. I'm selling some real estate in a few months, probably at a big profit. I want to spread the payments I will receive over several years to avoid one big tax bill. What should I do?

A. You may use the installment method of reporting income to relieve you of paying tax on income that you have not collected. Under this method, you include in your gross income only the portion of each collection that constitutes profit. If a sale results in a loss, you may not use the installment method.

In general, you may use the installment method for the sale of real estate if: 1) the buyer agrees to make two or more payments in two or more of your tax years and 2) the collections, if you receive any, in the year of the sale do not exceed 30 percent of the selling price. You should make the election to use the installment method in your tax return for the year of the sale.

For more details, see IRS Publication 537, "Installment and Deferred Payment Sales." It's available free by writing your Internal Revenue district office.

Q. Last year I filed a withholding exemption certificate so I wouldn't have to have tax withheld from my pay. Do I have to file a new one to be exempt from withholding this year?

A. Yes. Withholding Exemption Certificates (Form W-4E) must be filed annually. So if you did not owe any tax last year, expect to owe none in 1973, and file a new Form W-4E with your employer, you will be exempt from income tax withholding throughout 1973.

Remember, if tax has already been withheld from your 1973 pay, you must file a tax return next year to have it refunded.

Q. When will I receive my refund check?

A. It normally takes six weeks, but it may take longer if you mailed your return near the April 16 deadline. Delays will also occur if the return is incomplete or inaccurate.

If you have not received your refund or a letter explaining the reason for the delay within 10 weeks after mailing your return, contact your local IRS office or write the IRS office where you filed your return. Give all details including your social security number, current address, and the approximate date the return was filed.

Q. Does the Internal Revenue Service pay interest to the taxpayer when it is late in issuing a refund?

A. Yes. However, the IRS has 45 days from the due date of the return or the date of filing, whichever is later, to issue a refund without payment of interest. If it takes longer than that, interest at an annual rate of 6 percent from the due date or the date of filing, whichever is later, is added to the refund.

Investment Chatter
NEW YORK (UPI) — The utilities are faring well despite the erratic behavior of the stock market in recent months because their dividend yields historically have resisted pressure, even in the credit crunch of 1969, and their earnings reflect an improved regulatory climate, says Walston & Co. The firm says the outlook for public utility common stocks remains selective but increasingly bullish for the long term (beyond 18 months).

Dean Witter & Co. Inc. says although the economic picture is brighter, it cannot argue for the position that the market is favorably priced on a historical basis and will respond to the current positive business news.

What is needed is not more good earnings," the firm says, "but more buyers." Professional investors are cautious, in fact, and individual investors are skeptical, it adds.

Hey, Folks, It's Armadillo Pageant Time Again

VICTORIA, Tex. (UPI)—The Miss Armadillo Beauty Pageant is restricted to burrowing mammals covered with bony plates. The Miss Vacant Lot Pageant is for beautiful girls. Last year's winner, Cindy Hudler, looked like an armadillo.

Fred Armstrong, who outwardly appears as normal as your run of the mill armadillo freak, feels that this nation needs something to celebrate during that dull lull between Flag Day and Father's Day. The answer, naturally, is a day honoring the armadillo.

"We think the armadillo is an awfully nice little creature," Armstrong, the chairman of the third First Annual International Armadillo Confab and Exposition, said today.

"He's the kind of creature that just ambles around doing his thing, never hurting anyone," he said.

The first two First Annual International etc. etc. etc. were huge successes for Armstrong and his co-organizers. This year's three-day gala, expected to lure thousands of visitors to the city, begins Friday.

Organizations in the community will establish 50 booths dispensing such goodies as barbecued armadillo and beer "at 1953 prices" and other delicacies.

Returning by popular demand at this year's extravaganza will be the World's Championship Armadillo Races and the Miss Vacant Lot of the World Extravaganza. The reigning Miss Vacant Lot, Miss Hudler, dressed up in an armadillo suit and danced around a vacant lot last year to capture the crown.

"What we're looking for is talent," Armstrong said. "We don't care if the girl is single or married or somewhere in between. We don't care what her measurements are. We don't care if she is sweet 16 or sweet 86."

"Look what happened to last year's winner," he said. "She must be famous today because I haven't heard from her since."

LONDON (UPI)—Home Secretary Robert Carr said Tuesday that British prisons will abolish bread and water diet punishments.

"Dietary punishment," he said, "is out of place in the 20th century."

Picasso Theft Suspect Arrested

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—Police say an unemployed waiter stole a 66-year-old Picasso drawing from a heavily guarded display at the University of Texas.

A theft warrant issued said Michael Sweeney, 23, ripped the 24 1/2 by 19 inch picture from its frame in the Michener Gallery last Friday. The charcoal drawing has not been recovered.

The drawing by the late Spanish painter was one of 19 of his works on loan to the university from the collection of the de Menil family of Houston. It was titled "Torso of a Man" and valued at $20,000.

University police chief Donald R. Cannon said "good investigative work" and "the cooperation of other law enforcement agencies enabled us to develop enough information to file the complaint."

Officers said Sweeney has been living in Austin in the past few months.

The Lighter Side

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It has long been part of the American dream that any citizen, no matter how lowly born, can grow up to buy an ambassadorship.

I remember once when I was but a lad, my old grandfather took me upon his knee, gave my tousled head a pat and asked what I wanted to be when I grew up.

"Shucks, Gramps, I really haven't given it much thought," I replied, "but I reckon as how one day I would like to be ambassador to Luxembourg."

The old man's eyes lit up. "And you can do it, too, by cracky," he cried. "You might have been born on the wrong side of the tracks, but in a democracy like ours that doesn't bar anybody."

As Much Chance as Anyone
"As long as you're honest and diligent and intelligent and energetic and make a big campaign contribution to the right presidential candidate, you've got as much chance as anyone."

Just how deeply these inspiring words were graven upon my brain may be seen in the fact that as recently as last April 15, I was still striving to carry out my grandfather's game plan.

While preparing my income tax return, I magnanimously Ten Student Leaders Sign Bomb Protest

AUSTIN (UPI) — Ten student leaders from universities across the state Thursday announced the formation of a "Texas coalition to stop funding the war" and called for citizen support of congressional efforts to cut off money for continued bombing in Cambodia.

"What do we possibly have to gain now by continuing to expend our resources and bring further devastation to Indochina?" the students asked in a capitol news conference. "We have come to the point where we must, as a civilized society, say that we have had enough."

Signers of the statement included Sany Kress of the University of Texas at Austin, Carol Muhl of Southwest Texas State, John Shackelford of North Texas State, Jim Liggett of the University of Houston, Russell Autrey of the University of Texas at El Paso, Ricky Alexander of Texas Tech, Joe Medina of San Antonio College, and Larry Zacharias of Sam Houston State. All eight are presidents of the student governments on their campuses.

The other two signers were Karen Brysch, editor of the campus paper at Texas A&I University, and Darwin McKee, former student body president at Austin College and current president of the Texas Intercollegiate Student Association.

checked the box authorizing $1 of my taxes to be channeled into a presidential campaign kitty. Admittedly, this gesture was somewhat overshadowed by the $300,000 that Ruth Farkas, the present ambassador to Luxembourg, contributed to President Nixon's campaign last year. But we all have to start somewhere.

It now appears, however, that those of us hoping for a fire sale of diplomatic posts may have our ambitions thwarted in Congress.

Drafting New Rules
The Senate Foreign Relations Committee is said to be drafting new policy rules that would deny confirmation, except in special cases, to ambassadorial appointees who also happened to be big campaign contributors.

Under this proposal, $5,000 would be the cutoff point. At present rates, $5,000 wouldn't even get you a job as a diplomatic courier.

The committee move smacks of discrimination and is certain to have a depressing effect on the national economy by destroying yet another incentive.

I mean, what's the point of working hard all your life to amass a huge fortune if you can't spend it on an ambassadorship?

What's money for anyway, if not to buy the things you want? Beyond that, it could lead to a constitutional crisis over filling a White House vacancy. For if the ambassadorial carrot is removed, campaign contributions may diminish to the point where neither candidate will have enough funds to win the election.

Europe Wary Of Washington

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst
In Copenhagen, Secretary of State William P. Rogers is dealing with a NATO in disarray and a Europe more suspicious than pleased with Washington's proclamation that this is the "Year of Europe."

River Canal Studied
WACO (UPI) — The Agriculture Department has authorized $12,000 for a study of the feasibility of building a barge canal on the Brazos River from Freeport to Waco, Rep. W.R. Poage D-Tex., and Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said.

Poage, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said it was conceivable that 15 to 17 dams would have to be built to make the Brazos navigable.

Poage and Butz were in Waco for dedication of the new Texas Farm Bureau headquarters.

The phrase itself is a source of European irritation on the ground that there would have been no need of a "Year of Europe" if the United States had been paying the attention it should have all along to its most important alliance.

Europeans also are confused and perplexed by U.S. maneuverings with the Soviet Union.

The trip to Moscow by President Nixon and now the return visit to Washington by Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev aroused suspicions that the two leaders were working on deals vitally affecting Europe but without affording Western Europe a voice in their decisions.

Arms Sales Defended
The perplexity arises from what would seem to be cold war echoes in utterances of top Nixon aides.

At the meeting of NATO defense ministers early this month, James R. Schlesinger, defense secretary-designate, declared:

"The prevailing winds from the East seem fair," but... whatever the current atmosphere, the specific military threats, nuclear and nonnuclear, continue to loom over us. We cannot ignore them and neither can we negotiate about them from weakness."

In Tehran, at a meeting of CENTO nations (Turkey, Iran, Pakistan and Britain with the U.S. as observer) Rogers defended American arms sales to Persian Gulf states as a "stabilizing influence for peace" and described Soviet sales in the same area as an "invitation to trouble."

Little Sympathy Given
In the Mediterranean, at a change-of-command ceremony for the U.S. Sixth Fleet, Melvin R. Laird, former defense secretary and now a presidential adviser, described the Sixth Fleet as "a realistic deterrent" not only in the Mediterranean but in the Middle East as well.

Schlesinger won little sympathy for his appeal for help on the balance of payment problem arising from the maintenance of 300,000 American soldiers, sailors and airmen in and around Europe.

Only West German Chancellor Willy Brandt seemed inclined to lend a hand.

Among others, notably among the smaller NATO allies, there was a continuing mood to cut back their own forces and to ignore both the U.S. appeal and the warning that their actions might adversely affect East-West negotiations looking toward mutual reduction of forces.

Kuala Lumpur is the capital of Malaysia.

Earthquake Report Included

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A rundown on the current state of earthquake research in American countries will be included at the upcoming "Science and Man in the Americas" congress.

The talk will be significant because of the recent Nicaragua earthquake that claimed more than 10,000 lives in the capital city, Managua, on Dec. 23, 1972.

About 5,000 scientists, engineers, industrialists and other experts from many countries will attend the congress between June 20 and July 4.

Speakers from more than 20 countries have been invited.

Let's Check Honesty Of Consumers

By DON OAKLEY
It may be useful, in this era of strong consumerism movement, to be reminded that there is a counterpart to the old warning of "caveat emptor" — let the buyer beware.
This is "caveat venditor" — let the seller also keep an eye out for sharp customers.
Not only does the consumer not always wear a halo as the innocent victim of rapacious retailers, but many of his actions, whether careless or deliberate, actually contribute to the high prices we all complain about.
Shoplifting is obviously the No. 1 cause. The National Retail Merchants Assn. estimates that the cost of shoplifting and related theft is about $3.5 billion a year.
Shoplifters ultimately rob the average family of something between $30 and $60 a year. This is the surcharge a family pays in higher prices to cover business losses due to shoplifting.
But even those who would never consider stealing an item from a store may be guilty of practices that amount to a form of theft, charges Beverly Henderson, a consumer economics specialist at the University of Wisconsin Extension.
One of these tricks, she points out, is switching price labels from low-priced to higher priced items. As a result, to the annoyance of honest customers, stores have retaliated by using sticky labels that are almost impossible to get off.
Then there's the classic example of the person who buys merchandise — a fondue set, say — and uses it for a special occasion. Then returns it to the store, saying it was not suitable. Such used merchandise will probably be sold at a reduced price, and again other customers share the cost of this loss to the store.
It's not unusual to see someone handling and squeezing fresh fruit and other produce in the supermarket, says Miss Henderson. Damaged food spoils quickly, and if some unsuspecting consumer doesn't buy it, it will be marked down for quick sale or thrown out.
"Maybe you've seen a misplaced package of frozen food on a shelf. Some thoughtless consumer changed her mind about the purchase and didn't bother to return it to the frozen food case.
Another common practice is to open a jar or package of food sample it, and put it back on the shelf. (Often the person doing this takes another jar or package that hasn't been opened.) This results in contamination or spoilage of some foods. The customer who buys it may be the loser, or if she returns to the store and gets a refund or replacement, this adds to the store's operation costs.
"Cartnapping" is another problem for supermarkets. Some stores report losing one out of every five carts they own, at a cost of about $35 each.
By no means are all our problems with the high cost of living due to irresponsible consumers. Yet it behooves all of us to examine our own shopping habits for ways in which we may have unconsciously been contributing to the rising costs of retailing.

The Judge and the Law

A judge is supposed to be an administrator of the law, he is not the law itself.
We believe that principle was lost to sight when U.S. District Judge Warren Ferguson sentenced four Army men after they had been convicted of a variety of corruption charges having to do with the operation of non-commissioned officer clubs.
The penalty prescribed by the law that the men were accused of violating is five years in jail, maximum. Judge Ferguson suspended the jail term, but as a condition of probation he ordered that the defendants should work three years for a charity. Furthermore he ordered that they should sign documents prepared by the U.S. Justice Department and the U.S. district attorney transferring all that they owned to the government.
I want the defendants penitents," the judge said.
He had a point there. One of the defendant's had admitted to the ownership of a secret bank account containing $120,000. Other hidden assets are a definite possibility. According to the published allegations, the network in which the defendants had been involved was grossing $4 billion a year. That estimate seems extraordinarily high, but at any rate the amount was of sufficient enormity that the judge had reason to suppose that some of the proceeds could be hidden. Judge Ferguson said he was more or less going on the theory of restitution when he imposed the unusual conditions of probation. He said he was trying to make sure that these people "don't profit" from their misdeed.
The judge had another problem, namely, that he tried to encourage the defendants to cooperate with the Senate Permanent Investigations Committee. They had given evidence. For that reason the judge felt he could not impose the five-year maximum. Even if he had the men would have been out in about two years because of "good time" practices in the prison system, according to the prosecution.
That is the rationale in favor of what the judge did. The other side of the coin is this:
First, the terms of probation are vague. No documents to transfer property had been prepared at the time that the judge passed sentence. The prosecuting attorneys had not identified the property to be transferred. The defense attorney, according to a statement made to this newspaper, thought the judge's instruction applied only to assets involved in the transactions for which the men were convicted or that might arise in the future from such transactions, but the judge's version was that the instruction applied to all the men's possessions except those specifically excluded.
Second, insofar as the judge's instruction regarding monies and property goes beyond restitution, it is not really a condition of probation. The fact that it is designated as a condition of probation merely a circumvention to arrive at the judge's objective, to wit: "I want the defendants penitents."
Now, a judge's wish may be perfectly just from a moral standpoint, but the element of justice in it does not transform it into "penalty prescribed by law." What we saw in this case was a penalty NOT prescribed by law. If it had been prescribed by law, the judge would have had no problem. He would not have had to use "condition of probation" as a means for impoverishing the guilty. He suspended the legal penalty and substituted another penalty that he believed would fit the situation better. Breadth of a judge's discretion cannot be made to claim that discretion has no bounds.
It will be argued, and has, that the defendants agreed to the substitution. We are not sure, that an expression of assent given under duress is any real agreement. Moreover, the purpose of probation is to provide for the adequate surveillance of a defendant during the period that his behavior is under the control of the court, it is not a custodial arrangement whereby a prisoner may be separated from his property. Probation is not a license for the invention of penalties.
From a practical standpoint, to convert the probation process to a mechanism for the transfer of marketable assets is greatly to enlarge the threat of its abuse.

RAY CROMLEY It's apathy that leads to scandals

By RAY CROMLEY
WASHINGTON (NEA) — Politics is what we make it. Corrupt. Honest. Slimy. Open and straightforward. A protector of special interests. A defender of the rights of us all. These are our choices.
All of us know instances of corruption, favoritism and influence peddling in our own communities. Mostly we do nothing about them. We shrug our shoulders and say "That's politics." Or we say we can do nothing. These little corruptions lead up the scale into vast and monstrous wrongdoing nationally.
Some years back, in one congressional district in my state both political parties regularly won votes by bribing poor, uneducated voters with a pint or a fifth of liquor (whichever it took) to win their votes. At party meetings this was defended with, "The other do it so we must."
But when one of the two parties concerned gathered the moral strength to put a stop to this practice in its own ranks, lo, and behold, it won the next congressional race, which it had not been able to accomplish in the previous 40 years.
This is not to promise victory with morality. It is to illustrate that if enough workers determine to do away with illegality, it can be eliminated in the party. This particular shift was accomplished by bringing in more of the citizenry who had never before been active in party work. They'd been too preoccupied with their own affairs. But when it became evident to the people of this congressional district that politics was their business and too important to be left in the hands of professional politicians, then changes occurred.
This is not to say that drives against corruption will always win, or that the road will be short and smooth.
In another congressional election in the state in which I worked, the opposition won a narrow race because of an extraordinarily heavy absentee vote. Because this mail vote was greatly distorted in favor of the opposition in an election in which the vote was otherwise quite close, our suspicions were aroused.
Thereupon, throughout the state those people whose names were used on absentee ballots in this election were canvassed personally in door-to-door visits by members of our party who lived in their neighborhoods. In some areas we found that fewer than one-sixth — in some areas less than one-ninth — of those in whose names absentee votes had been cast said they had voted in this election.
When these certified statements in which the election was held, the judge, who had been appointed by the opposition party which was in power in the state at the time, ruled against action.
So this opposition candidate kept his victory. But not for long. The people of that district were so aroused they threw the man out in a later election.
As noted in the opening of this column, the plain and simple fact is that all of us must remember that in a democracy we and we alone are responsible for the kind of government we get. We, as citizens, must do more than vote. We must take an active part, all of us, young and old, conservative and liberal, Republican, Democratic and Independent in the choosing and electing of candidates and in watching what our elected and appointed officials do after election, to get good government.
In the newspaper business we quickly learn that secrets cannot be kept if there are enough alert persistent people attempting to find them out — and willing to air what they learn. Corruption cannot be hidden. It lasts only because we put blinders on our eyes and do nothing until a juicy scandal erupts.
But the eradication of corruption is a day-to-day job.

What is Scientific Evidence?
By Lawrence E. Lamb M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Attached is an article from a spokesman of the egg industry that states there's no solid, scientific evidence that eating eggs leads to heart disease. Yet, many doctors of the national and state heart association say to limit the intake of egg yolks to three per week for people with heart conditions.
You state in your column that there is no scientific evidence that vitamin E helps with heart disease, yet two doctors in another country have written books citing cases and giving names about how vitamin E has helped people with heart disease. What does constitute "scientific evidence?"
Dear Reader — The American Heart Assn. has recommended that men, particularly, should not eat more than three egg yolks per week. More recently the Inter-Society Commission on Heart Disease has recommended that the total intake of cholesterol from all sources, eggs, meat, milk, fish, chicken, and all animals, should be limited to 300 milligrams a day (one egg yolk contains from 225 to 275 milligrams of cholesterol).
What constitutes scientific evidence? That is a good question. If individuals responsible for marketing coconut oil stated that, on the basis of their investigation, coconut oil contained no calories there might be some reason to have their observations confirmed by scientists not involved in marketing coconut oil.
Valid research or scientific evidence must be reproducible by other independent scientists. If one investigator comes up with a conclusion on the basis of his research observations, another competent investigator ought to be able to do the same experiment and come up with the same results. Sometimes this is not possible and it develops that there was some flaw in the original research project or the observations made. This is what's wrong with the vitamin E idea. Enthusiastic reports are no substitute for properly designed studies that permit valid conclusions.
The claims that vitamin E cures heart disease would have to be confirmed by other investigators using valid research methods designed to permit such a conclusion before they were accepted. The facts are just the opposite. Dr. Robert Olson, for one, has studied vitamin E with well-designed research projects and has been unable to confirm that vitamin E is useful in preventing or treating heart conditions.
The problems that can arise from misinterpretations of observations or improperly designed research studies is one of the reasons medical scientists have encouraged investigators to have their studies confirmed by other reputable scientists before they are publicized or recommended to the public. In this way the public is protected from misinformation that can be detrimental to their health. A case in point here would be the individual who has chest pain and decides to treat himself with vitamin E for heart disease rather than seeing a doctor. I've actually received letters from individuals who have done just this. If the diagnosis were correct, the individual needs proper medical attention as quickly as possible. This can have a major bearing on survival or a good recovery.

Bill Poses A Threat To Election System

By STROM THURMOND
South Carolina

A bill which passed the Senate early in May, cloaked in the guise of simplifying voter registration, actually poses a danger to our election system.
I opposed this bill at that time, and it is to be hoped that the House will exercise sounder judgment than the Senate on this matter.
The Voter Registration Act, as passed by the Senate, would allow voter registrations by merely dropping a postcard form in the mail. Proponents argue that this act would only simplify the manner in which Americans register to vote, resulting in greater participation in elections.
If that were the only effect, it would be desirable. The fullest participation in our democratic process should be encouraged for all eligible citizens. This act, however, could open the door to voter-registration frauds that would be very difficult to detect. It would also abolish our present system of elections where state and local officials administer the voting process.
The implicit danger of this legislation is described in the Post Office and Civil Service Committee's own report, as follows: "By the simple process of filling out a postcard form and mailing it to the local registration agent, the applicant avoids the requirements presently in existence in most states." Thus the state laws that have been enacted over many years to protect the voting process from fraud, would be simply and expeditiously avoided.
Postcards would be dispensed at local post offices in the same way that stamps are disbursed, except the registration cards would be free. This raises the very distinct possibility that a card would be sent to every address and placed in every post office box. Cards could be acquired simply by asking. Thus, it would be almost impossible to control fraudulent registration.
The argument most often propounded in favor of this act is the low participation by Americans in the voting process. However, there has been no evidence that mass registration will increase turnouts at the polls. To the contrary, conclusions from a 1968 Census Bureau report indicate that 60 percent of those eligible who did not register in the 1968 Presidential election were "not interested, never got around to registering or disliked politics." This is a strong indication that mail-order registrations would not be likely to lead to significantly increased voting.

Registration procedures should be simple and available to all eligible citizens. They should not be so lax as to allow manipulation and deception. The fullest participation in our elections is to be encouraged. The voice of the people must be heard through our voting system. We must insure, however, that it is a true expression of popular will and not a false decision that may result from mail-order registrations.
This Act would establish another Federal agency, the Voter Registration Administration, in the already bulging Federal bureaucracy. Although the actual cost of this program cannot be estimated, a conservative figure would be $100 million for the first year, with this amount increasing as the Administration expands its authority.
It is clear that this legislation is an attempt by some members of Congress to remove voter registration qualifications and procedures from the states. However, the arguments are not that individual civil rights are being violated but that state voter registration laws do not meet the convenience of some voters. The Voter Registration Administration, if established, would represent an unwarranted extension of federal power all the way to the grassroots ballot box.
These are only some of the problems with this needless legislation. I hope that either the House will defeat it or the President will use his veto power to prevent it from becoming a law. Our election process — the cornerstone of our democratic society — must remain free of any impropriety. This act could expose it to possible abuses and, at the same time, create unnecessary federal intervention in the election process.

SPRING AND FRESH HOPE
Despite a severe winter the wonders of spring are prevailing and shaping a new landscape and rekindling the warmth of man's heart. It's a glorious season when the thoughts of all of us turn to love. Family picnics and outings are again in vogue. Our family enjoyed one in Oklahoma just recently.
It is that time of the year when windows can be raised and a breath of fresh air welcomed. It is a good time to reflect, too. The gentle warmth of spring air may breathe new life into those long neglected New Year's resolutions. One of those resolutions most important to me is a rededication to applying my thoughts and strength to the betterment of Republic USA. It is worthy resolution that I am sure millions share.
There are so many things that all of us can do, like supporting our law enforcement officers, urging our leaders to strengthen our defenses against our enemies, rededicating ourselves to our families and churches and preserving our Republic and the profit-motive system, the most productive one in history. It can be done under our wonderful Constitution. Ours is a society of freedom and we should give thanks for it.
It is the season when the glories of Spring should reflect in our minds and our hearts. This is a lovely season in a lovely land. Nature's glories transcend all else at this time of the year.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The first automobile trip across the U.S. was made by Dr. Horatio Jackson and Sewell Crocker, a mechanic. They left San Francisco May 23, 1903, and arrived in New York City on July 25. The 64-day journey was made in a 20 h.p. Winton automobile; about 44 days were spent driving and 19 days were spent awaiting supplies. The World Almanac recalls.

National Council Statement Wipes Out Unification Try

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Through a bureaucratic bungle, the National Council of Churches has blown its best chance of becoming the kind of organization implied by its name.

At present, the council is composed only of Protestant and Orthodox denominations (and by no means all of them). In an effort to become more genuinely "national" in scope, the council has for several years been making overtures to the Roman Catholic Church.

The Catholic hierarchy was responsive to the idea of establishing some sort of official affiliation with the council. Joint working groups were set up to explore various bases for Catholic membership.

Meanwhile, the National Council and the U.S. Catholic Conference agreed to keep in close consultation and established liaison machinery to coordinate their public statements and activities.

All of that painstakingly achieved progress was wiped out last month when a public statement was issued over the name of the National Council of Churches blasting a proposal now pending in Congress to give tax credits to parents for tuition paid to parochial schools.

The statement submitted to a congressional committee not only opposed tax credits, but also contained an allegation that Catholics are not unable, merely "unwilling," to pay the cost of their own school system.

Catholics regarded this as gratuitously offensive, a deliberately insulting crack.

Bishop James S. Rausch, general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference, immediately withdrew all Catholic delegates from liaison committees with the National Council of Churches.

The National Council's general secretary, Dr. R. H. Edwin Espy, quickly repudiated the offending statement, declaring it was "not a statement of the National Council" and had not been cleared by the council's top officers. He wired an apology to the U.S. Catholic Conference two days later, a revised National Council statement, eliminating the bit about Catholics being unwilling to finance their own schools, was submitted to Congress.

There is no indication that the Catholic hierarchy has been mollified by this gesture. For one thing, Bishop Rausch notes, despite the understanding that the two organizations would consult each other in advance on public statements, neither the original nor the revised National Council statement was shown to the Catholic Conference.

Certainly, the idea of Catholic affiliation with the council has been put on ice for a long, long time.

This kind of shooting-from-the-lip has been going on in the National Council for years. It is one of the reasons why some major evangelical Protestant denominations will have nothing to do with the National Council. If the National Council ever dissolves or deteriorates into an impotent bureaucracy, its demise may be ascribed to an overworked mimeograph machine.

DAVID POLING, D.D. The preacher at the Watergate

By REV. DAVID POLING

Within a two-week period we have covered seven states from Iowa to Arizona. At every interval, every stop, every meal, the conversation of strangers turns to Watergate. The supermarket clerk, the gas station attendant, the motel keeper, the city editor and the local pastor are shaking their heads over the Watergate events.

Shock has turned to anger and alarm. An Iowa farmer states that he will never trust the "people in Washington again." A Kansas highway employe feels that "this is as close as America has come to its own brand of fascism." The citizens of mid-America are waiting and watching.

Sermons about Watergate have not been delivered in many pulpits. Most pastors want to reserve judgment, let the investigations reveal the crime. Yet the overhanging moral calamity rests like a London fog on the ethical countryside. Dr. Ernest Campbell of Riverside Church, New York, points to the double standard that rules so well in affluent America. It goes like this: If you live in a ghetto and break into a store, you end up in prison. Break into Watergate, mastermind political intrigue, spend millions secretly and you are excused with the country club phrase, "Everybody does it." In this double standard, which has so many racist overtones, the car thief serves time, while the Watergate planners are simply "between jobs."

The most instructive and helpful sermon on Watergate has been delivered by Dr. David H. C. Read, as guest preacher in Omaha, Neb. last month. His topic: Ezra—The Preacher at the Watergate. And his text from Nehemiah 8:1-2 is worth repeating across the land.

"And all the people gathered as one man into the square before the Water Gate, and they told Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses which the Lord had given to Israel."

In the development of this text, the senior minister from Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York City noted that the children of Israel had been ignorant of the Law of Moses. Many had only recently returned from Exile and were shocked to learn of the moral decay that had come upon them and their nation. Jerusalem was in ruins and their ethical, religious and moral standards were awful compared to the Law of God read by Ezra at the Watergate.

Ezra read from the Law of Moses for half the day. When he was through, the assembly was face down on the earth, filled with guilt and shame. Dr. Read notes three immediate results: repentance, reverence for God's law and world, and ultimate rejoicing in a new way of life.

The Water Gate text is a powerful message for it speaks to an entire nation as well as the present administration. It does not duck the soul-searching that must take place if this event is to have a cleansing, renewing effect on American life. And it does promise celebration, for when a massive evil has been corrected, there is joy and happiness for the community. We are quite a distance from the third condition of this text—there will be much more unhappiness through legal procedures before Watergate drifts into history.

The arrogance of power has polluted many lives, perverted justice, and mocked the people. The Law of Moses and the laws of the United States have just started to grind.

Tommy Bowers sang "All Around the Water Tank." A tap dance number by Max Presnell was accompanied by Jimmie Kay Williams at the piano. Jay Williams and Tommy Joe Bowers sang "Skip To A-Lou" accompanied by Tommy Bowers at the guitar.

A square dance by the "Flatfooters" was under the direction of Sammy Parsley and Jack Chisum. A modern dance was done by Phyllis Jane Reynolds.

The program concluded with a number of popular tunes sung by the entire cast, including "Are You From Dixie."

The skits for the "Showboat" were written by Mrs. Madge Zuerker and were directed by Mrs. Carolyn Smith.

Evangelists Decry Emotionalism Lack

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—Intelligence has replaced emotionalism and the "major routine is gone," a spokesman for the Southern Baptists Evangelists said this week in describing their evangelical activities.

Emerging from their "showcase" program at the civic auditorium where about 300 of the Southern Baptists gathered, Don Womack, secretary of the SBE, said his group "operates on faith. There is no salary."

Their program, featuring preaching and music for the public and delegates to the Southern Baptist Convention here, is a sort of "audition" for evangelists and their musicians.

Church Schedules Weekend Revival

A weekend revival will be held at Highland Pentecostal Holiness Church, corner of 10th and Banks, Friday through Sunday.

The evangelist will be Rev. Don Haddock of Borger. Pastor Cecil Ferguson extends a welcome to all to attend.

The Weekly Message Of Inspiration

St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church

Father Francis J. Hynes

FIDELITY TO GOD Therefore, when He creates the universe, and in particular, the eternal ages before time began. There we find the Trine God—Father, Son and Holy Spirit, existing all alone, has created man in His own self-sufficient, infinitely perfect and eternally happy. God needs nothing outside of himself. To say that man is made to be made to love God is the same thing. For man's true fulfillment, his complete and lasting happiness can come only from the possession of God by love. Man was made to love God, and it is only in loving God that he can find the satisfaction of the restless desire for happiness which is a part of his nature. That is the meaning of Christ's words: "You shall love the Lord your God with your whole heart, with your whole soul, and with all your mind. This is the greatest and first commandment (Mt. 22:37)."

However, the word LOVE must be correctly understood. It is the most over-used, the most misused and the most misunderstood word in our language. For some, it means only "that you never have to say your're sorry." For others, love spells lust. It is used to justify adultery, perversions and pre-marital sex. It glosses over parental neglect to discipline children. For many, the word has connotations of hippies, flower people and dropouts from society.

The real test of the love of God, on the other hand, is willingness to keep His commandments. Jesus declared:

"Not everyone who says to me: 'Lord, Lord,' shall enter the kingdom of heaven; but he who does the will of my Father in heaven shall enter the Kingdom of heaven (Mt. 7:21)."

He who has my commandments and keeps them, he it is who loves me." (John 14:21)

Love of God and love of our neighbor for the sake of God is a universal law. The ten Commandments are specific applications of this general law of love. The first three spell out how we are to love God. The next seven point out and direct us on how we are to love our neighbor. St. Paul tells us:

"Owe no debt to anyone except the debt that binds us to love one another. He who loves his neighbor has fulfilled the law. The Commandments: 'You shall not commit adultery; you shall not murder; you shall not steal; you shall not covet,' and any other commandment there may be all summed up in this: 'You shall love your neighbor as yourself.' Love never wrongs the neighbor, hence love is the fulfillment of the law. (Rom. 13:8)

Fulfilling this with the love of God is Fidelity to God.

Television In Review

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Love Thy Neighbor," a new half-hour ABC-TV comedy series that arrives tonight, is built around the theme of how a white couple and a black couple whose houses are next to each other get along.

The plot is triggered by the move of the young black couple into the previously all-white neighborhood, where the also-young white couple have been longtime residents. The two wives get along immediately in the premiere episode. The husbands have an edgier relationship.

Part of the problem for the men is their mutual sensitivity to the subject of race. The white husband isn't exactly thrilled with the idea of blacks moving in next door. He might make exception for baseball pitcher Vida Blue, one of his idols, but he sees most blacks in, shall we say, stereotypical terms. As for the black husband, he is touchy about whites who are uncomfortable at having blacks for neighbors, and who see them as stereotypes.

Secondary Problem
A secondary problem between the men in the premiere Friday is that the black husband turns out to be the efficiency expert hired at the plant where the white husband is a shop steward whose union is negotiating a raise. This situation eventually works out amicably between the two men, and as the debut unfolds, the white husband also makes an awkward attempt to show some friendship toward his new neighbors—but there's no question that race, and not working conditions, is what the comedy is going to be all about.

A summer series, "Love Thy Neighbor" starts off with a program that has some good moments, but all too often falls into the trap of by-now familiar interracial gags and plot twists. Nevertheless, ABC-TV at least is trying to give viewers something new and reasonably fresh for the summer season.

A Talented Performer
In addition, even though a show may not be exceptional, it is always enjoyable to come across a talented performer who finally gets a chance to make a name in a showcase part. In "Love Thy Neighbor," for instance, the white husband is portrayed by a fellow named Ron Masak who is ideal in the debut as the catalyst whose mixture of awkwardness and bravado provides the basis for the others in the attractive cast to react to.

Portraying Masak's wife is Joyce Bulifant, and the black couple are played by Harrison Page and Janeo McClachlan. They are not in a great show by any means, but it has the potential to be pleasant, especially if it avoids the more obvious and standard interracial comedy situations that are easy to fall back on.

Bob Hope received an honorary Oscar in 1959 as the winner of the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian award.

TV Spoils Many Stories for Hollywood

By DICK KLEINER
HOLLYWOOD—(NEA) — "Tom Sawyer" is one of the big hits of the season. What makes it nice is that it is a family picture, which means that parents enjoy it as much as the kids do.

It seems easy. Why aren't there more such films? Director Don Taylor, who made "Tom Sawyer," thinks he knows the answer to that puzzle.

"The big problem today," Taylor says, "is finding material. The major stumbling block is that television has moved in on the areas of story material for feature films."

Taylor says between TV's movies and TV's news coverage they've just about used up the story areas for features. News coverage of wars, violent crimes and such also encroach on feature film story possibilities.

"They do the things features used to do," he says. "We have to find films that they can't or won't do. It either has to be too sexy or too violent for the home screen, or too big and too expensive."

He says that accounts for films like his own "Tom Sawyer" (TV did a "Tom Sawyer," too, but not in the big, splashy, musical way) and films like "Last Tango in Paris."

"Tom Sawyer" is Taylor's fifth picture as a director and by far his biggest. You may remember him as an actor, who gave Elizabeth Taylor her first on-screen kiss, in "Father of the Bride."

DON TAYLOR

"Tom Sawyer" represents directing plateau for former actor who gave Liz Taylor her first on-screen kiss.

He always wanted to direct and did a lot of TV shows before he got his first crack at a feature film. Now, with "Tom Sawyer," he's firmly established as a top director.

What made it nice for Taylor and "Tom Sawyer" was that his film beat out the highly-touted "Lost Horizon" for the plum spot as the Radio City Music Hall Easter attraction in New York.

"When I first heard that," Taylor says, "I was terribly excited. However, the poor reviews of 'Lost Horizon' took some edge off my excitement."

WORRY CLINIC

George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Rex is the pioneering type of teacher who will make his course on "Practical Medicine" the talk of the entire school. For students relish useful information. So do their parents! And local doctors will gladly donate an hour's lecture, too!

CASE X-535: Rex P., aged 28, is a teacher.
"Dr. Crane," he began, "I want to follow your advice and schedule a high school class in 'Practical Medicine.'
"Have you any suggestions about what I should cover?"
"And are there any simple experiments or classroom demonstrations that would appeal to students and yet be relevant?"

PRACTICAL MEDICINE

Parents, as well as the students, will relish such a course, which may include these among other innovations:

(1) Ask students to come to the front and strike a safety match.

Most of them violate the safety rule of the Japanese and thus pull the match TOWARD them as they strike it.

You can later let a student try to whittle with a pocket knife, using a small stick of wood.

Again, be sure he pushed the knife AWAY from himself.

(2) Employ the "Dieting Booklet" below and have the pupils try to get their plump parents to stay on that diet for at least 10 days.

Let them learn the approximate caloric values of various food portions, such as a slice of bread, a hot dog, a banana, an egg, etc.

And teach them about the "specific dynamic action of protein," which loses 15 percent of its calories in the process of digestion.

No other food does this!
(3) Warn them, too, that there is no storage of protein, so their hearts need fresh protein every day!

There is plenty of sugar, fat and starches in the body, even when you are quite slender.

(4) Demonstrate artificial respiration techniques, including both mouth-to-mouth resuscitation as well as the Schaefer method.

The latter, if you place a folded coat or pillow under the abdomen, is still an excellent method.

(5) Explain that oxygen is the main remedy for heart attacks.

so victims should breathe deeply, to avail themselves of the 20 percent oxygen in the air.

(6) Invite local physicians to explain in simple language the mechanics of cataract removal from the eye, as well as other standard surgical operations.

An articulate doctor, with some appropriate charts or blackboard diagrams, can clarify surgery even better than if you were an eye witness at the operating table!

(7) Borrow a microscope from the botany department and let students see red blood corpuscles, as well as the various kinds of white blood corpuscles.

If you are near a hospital, its pathologist would gladly give you a superb demonstration with stained slides.

(8) Let the students take each other's blood pressure, using a borrowed stethoscope and blood pressure cuff.

(9) Invite a dental surgeon to explain the "drifting" of teeth, plus the methods for straightening of crooked teeth, etc.

(10) Ask a local obstetrician to explain the mechanics of birth and the dangers from venereal infection, abortion, etc.

Local dental surgeons, physicians and other experts will gladly donate an hour or more to help you pioneering teachers thus practicalize medicine!

But don't let your study of physiology and medicine become "high-brow" or academic. Instead, keep it PRACTICAL with many demonstrations!

Send for my booklet "How to Lose 10 Pounds in 10 Days," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Bldg., Madison, Indiana 47909. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Whatever became of the Doomsday Clock or, Learning to live with the Bomb

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Once, every day, usually at noon, an important but ignored siren blows in many U.S. communities — the routine testing of the Civil Defense emergency siren. On hearing it, citizens are supposed to stop work, take cover and contemplate their actions in event of nuclear attack. Instead, most people merely take it as a welcome whistle for lunch.

Atomic attack, once the conversational and political preoccupation of the nation, is now considered, like string ties and peg pants, part of the recent and ridiculous past.

"No problem" as the saying goes, "is so big or complicated that it can't be run away from." Even the bomb. After all, in these days of Watergate, energy shortage and social revolution, does anyone have time to wonder about radioactive holocaust?

Twenty-eight years ago, after Hiroshima, scientists began thinking about the unthinkable. Two decades ago, when the hydrogen weapon was introduced, America conducted air raid drills in schools, bought radios with CD markings on the dials, and dug family bomb shelters as if there was no tomorrow.

And just the other day, it seems, in 1963, when radioactive fallout was at its peak on the planet, every mother's child risked strontium 90 by drinking milk from potentially "hot" cows.

But now? Maximum issue attention has been followed by maximum issue inattention. We have, apparently, nationally, learned to live with The Bomb, even if we don't especially like it.

The magazine Science and Public Affairs is perhaps the most visual indication that America is no longer thinking about the unthinkable. Originally named "The Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists," the publication is known for its regular printing of a gloomy "Doomsday Clock" which ostensibly tells the world the time left before total nuclear destruction. The periodical published its first clock in 1947 when editors decided that because of America's atomic discoveries the earth had only seven minutes (a representative figure) until the Big Boom.

The clock kept ticking ominously for the next few years. When Russia exploded its first nuclear device, the doomsday hands moved to four minutes to midnight. And then in 1953, when the hydrogen bomb was introduced, the clock read 11:58.

Today, however, Science and Public Affairs has set its doomsday timepiece back to 12 minutes before 12 — and if that's still nothing to cheer, it's at least an indication, as the magazine editor Richard Lewis puts it, "of less ominous times."

Only once in the last quarter century has the clock been similarly set — in 1963 after the limited nuclear test ban. And today world tensions may be even more relaxed than then. Says Lewis: "People have tended to lose their fear of imminent catastrophe. It's difficult for the young especially to conceive of nuclear war any more. People may believe the possibility intellectually — but perhaps not emotionally."

If the emotional concept of doomsday has faded, it's not surprising. Besides the nuclear test ban, the great powers have also banned atomic weapons in space, signed non-proliferation treaties, and agreed to limit production of the arms.

Besides this, according to the Atomic Energy Commission, the United States and Russia are firing fewer underground tests than before — only four (U.S.) and two (U.S.S.R.) this year as opposed to seven and 14 in 1972, 11 and 14 in 1971 and 30 and 10 in 1970. Even the radioactive threat has lessened considerably; officials believe fallout has dropped tenfold since a 1963 peak.

Thus it is: issue apathy. While more than 450 nuclear related articles were listed in the library's 1962 "Reader's Guide to Periodic Literature," less than 50 were last year. The nation's Office of Civil Defense has changed its name to Civil Defense Preparation Agency and is more worried now about natural than unnatural disasters. The AEC says complaint letters and pickets have dwindled in recent years to "very few."

Is it good, all this forgetting? Perhaps. Only ill comes to a people wondering forever how many millions of them will be wiped out on a first strike. Too, there is opinion that the increase in nuclear apathy is the happy result of a decrease in nuclear possibility; and that's better than vice versa.

Yet, there are dangers in inattention. Some things demand the continual fingering of worry beads. Sanford Gottlieb of the antibomb group known as Sane, reminds that even with the SALT agreements, "the U.S. is authorized to increase its warhead pile from 5,900 to 9,800 by 1977 and Russia can increase proportionately." He says the dangers in these numbers are as great now as ever. He suggests that an inattentive public is in danger of losing ever more control over the why and what-for of nukes.

No one suggests citizens begin building shelters again. Yet a yawning public is a vulnerable public. Neither major power announces all its present tests; two nuclear nations are still testing above ground: two new nations, Israel and India, are capable of making the bomb if they have not already.

"The public shouldn't panic," says George Kistiakowsky, science adviser to two Presidents and a proponent of foolproof nuclear controls, "but it should be informed and wary." Else the next time the noon horn blows it may not be for lunch.

South Padre Island Cop Puts On Pretty Lipstick

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Tex. (UPI) — The head cop of the newest town in Texas stretched more than six feet from boot heels to straw hat and said with a curl of her lipstick, "If they ever call me pig, they'd better be careful."

Ronalyn Adams could disarm just about any criminal with her looks. She is pretty. And she is pretty tough.

"I'm a mean redhead," said the pistol-packing mother of an 8-year-old son and 6-year-old daughter. "I've always wanted to be a cop."

Mrs. Adams, 27, got what she wanted May 26 when she was elected town marshal of newly incorporated South Padre Island on the southernmost tip of Texas. She got 12 write-in votes, more than any of the 18 other write-in candidates.

Uncle Was Police Chief

An uncle was police chief in her native Poplar Bluff, Mo., and she and her husband used to run a tavern in this sandy island resort.

"I found I could handle the drunks better than he could," she said with a laugh that ruffled the curls of her red hair all the way to the middle of her back.

When she must, the 5-foot-9, 132-pound Mrs. Adams totes a bone handled six shooter. But by day, she is a beautician armed with nothing more lethal than a can of hair spray.

The lady of the law, 37-24-36, is really just an old softy.

"When I wear a dress, it's short. I like having my car doors opened for me and my dinner paid for. I like to be pampered," she said with a wink.

"The only thing I feel toward women's lib is that a woman ought to be paid the same as a man when she does the same job."

There is no sex discrimination in South Padre Island. Males and females alike work for free.

Town marshal is not a paying job. No city job is right now. We have no funds in the city treasury," said Mrs. Adams, wife of an air conditioning repairman. "In a year, maybe we'll get paid or get an allowance."

Duties are Parttime

Although her official duties are parttime, Mrs. Adams is the chief law enforcement officer within the city limits of South Padre Island, a town of 200 population. If there was a major crime in town that she couldn't handle, Cameron County sheriff's deputies are available.

Philip Adams said of his wife's job, "I think it's great." He said the only thing he doesn't like is that some townspeople call him "Chester," a reference to the old sidekick of Marshall Dillon on television's "Gunsmoke."

Mrs. Adams' island is peaceful most of the time, except for the Easter weekend when thousands of students jam the place for a surfing contest.

"My job will be more or less keeping peace on the beach," she said. "We don't have many major crimes. There's been one armed robbery since I've been here, but no real major problems. Just a lot of pot smoking."

The island may have law in lipstick for a long time. Mrs.

Adams said she plans to run again in next year's election.

"I figure if I get my training, by next year I will be the most qualified person for the job. But, really, I don't think anybody else wants it."

Kissinger Briefs Senators

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger briefed members of Congress Thursday on the new Indochina cease-fire agreement but offered little prospect of any let-up soon in the U.S. bombing in Cambodia.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said Kissinger, who also negotiated the original cease-fire for President Nixon last January, told a closed meeting of senators that "the Cambodian situation is pretty much where it was."

In other words, it is still a battleground, Kissinger was quoted as saying.

Backers of legislation to cut off funds for the bombing vowed to press anew their effort to pass the measure.

Humphrey said Kissinger made no appeal to the group to hold up the bill, but did defend "the right of the President to continue to bomb."

Kissinger made it clear in Paris, after signing Wednesday of accords with North Vietnam aimed at shoring up the shaky cease-fire agreements, that the bombing of Cambodia would not be stopped unless North Vietnamese forces are withdrawn from the country.

U.S. warplanes carried out raids in Cambodia for the 100th consecutive day.

Oxford University in England was founded in 1117.
