RESCUE ATTEMPTED

Men Trapped In Submarine

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI)—The Navy, using its most sophisticated underwater rescue equipment, tried desperately today to rescue four men trapped in a research submarine 360 feet deep in the Atlantic before they could be overcome by carbon dioxide.

A severe current kept a roving diving bell from San Diego, Calif., away from the 21-foot sub which was caught in the wreckage of a scuttled World War II destroyer while studying fish life in the Florida Keys for the Smithsonian Institution.

Describing the situation as "grave," the Navy sent the diving bell down a second time later in the morning, trying to catch a "slack" tide.

The designer of the submarine, Edwin A. Link, whose son was one of the four crewmen aboard, had put a noon deadline on the men's survival because he said a chemical that absorbs carbon dioxide would be exhausted by then.

The two men in the rear compartment of two-chamber Johnson-Sea-Link apparently were unconscious. They were believed to be Link's son, Clayton, 31, of Binghamton, N.Y., and Dr. Robert Meek, 27, an ichthyologist from Santa Barbara, Calif.

The crewmen in the front or glass viewing chamber—apparently the pilot of the craft, Archibald "Jock" Menzies of Vero Beach, Fla., and Al Stover, 51, Juno Beach, Fla., a diver, said by radio they could see the other men and "they're still breathing, but they're not moving." They said they couldn't tell whether the men were unconscious or resting.

The four divers aboard the diving bell, Navy spokesmen said, had several alternatives on reaching the sub. They carried cable cutters and underwater torches for use in trying to free the craft and scuba equipment to give to the trapped men if they decided to leave the sub.

Capt. Jeffrey McVey, chief of staff of the Key West naval base, said after the first attempt of the bell that the situation was "grave, but as far as I know all of the men are alive."

Rear Adm. John H. Maurer, base commandant, had said earlier that the men in the rear compartment "may already be in a comatose state."

"We have to be optimistic, but time is working against us," he said. "On the plus side, the most sophisticated equipment we could be using is being used."

Two of the men had reported earlier in the morning they were having difficulty with their air supply and had resorted to using oxygen in their scuba diving equipment.

The critical problem was in the buildup of carbon dioxide in the 21-foot submarine, divided into two compartments without a connecting door.

The supply of a chemical called barralime, which absorbs the carbon dioxide, was estimated to last only until around noon today. The Navy said that, when the temperature drops, it affects the absorbency of the barralime. The temperature in the rear compartment fell to 40 degrees this morning when the men reported trouble, the Navy said.

Nixon Welcomes Brezhnev To Summit Talks Session

Golda To Run Again

TEL AVIV (UPI)—Golda Meir, who once described her job as "impossible," ended months of suspense Sunday and reluctantly announced she would seek another four-year term as Israel's prime minister.

With the support of three-quarters of the Israeli public, according to a recent poll, the 75-year-old Ukrainian-born, American-educated grandmother is virtually assured of re-election.

Her announcement, made in a letter sent to governing Labor party Secretary Aharon Yadin and read to a cheering secretariat meeting, ended months of agony among her political allies who feared she would step down.

That would have left the party open to a factional war at the party's nominating convention for Parliament next October.

Mrs. Meir, who first assumed her post in 1969 as a compromise choice to succeed the late Levi Eshkol, said in her letter she had tried to explain her feelings to "my fellow party members amid an effort to persuade them to free me from presenting my candidacy. But I have not succeeded."

"Therefore," she said, "if the party so decides, I will not remove my candidacy."

Yadin said Mrs. Meir told him Saturday she had delayed her decision as long as possible in fruitless attempts to dissuade her colleagues from pressing her to continue. She also told him her decision did not mean other party members should not run for the post.

Prospects Grow For Peace Aim

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev today began their long-planned summit conference, each pledging that the talks would improve the prospects for world peace.

"The chance for peace is infinitely increased," Nixon said during a formal welcoming ceremony on the South Lawn that combined military pomp with Brezhnev's own style of personal politics.

Brezhnev promised the week-long conference would "justify the hopes of our people and serve the interests of a peaceful future for all mankind."

The bush-eyed general secretary of the Soviet Communist party slipped away from Nixon as the two men were reviewing an honor guard of U.S. military forces to do a little handshaking reminiscent of a U.S. presidential campaign.

Nixon predicted the conference would help "lift the burden of armaments from the world and build a structure of peace."

American officials said the President is hoping for a "turning point" in the Soviet-American talks at Geneva on a treaty to limit offensive nuclear weapons.

But there was no hope that such a treaty could be ready for signature before Brezhnev leaves the United States for a meeting in Paris with French President Georges Pompidou.

Brezhnev, looking tanned and rested after a weekend at Nixon's Camp David retreat in the Catoctin Mountains of Western Maryland, emerged from a black limousine and heartily shook Nixon's hand.

The two men smiled and greeted each other as old friends and both referred to the agreements signed last year during Nixon's Moscow visit.

Brezhnev said the Moscow summit laid "a good reliable foundation for relations of peace between our two countries."

Nixon said the May, 1972, talks "changed the relations between our two countries in a very profound way."

Brezhnev and his party arrived from Camp David in two presidential helicopters about 20 minutes late because fog and low clouds forced a slight change in flight plans.

The drizzle which had fallen in Washington in the hours before the arrival ceremony stopped shortly before the Soviet official arrived.

Brezhnev, about three inches shorter than Nixon, stood at stiff attention with the American President as a 21-gun salute boomed and an Air Force band played the U.S. and Soviet anthems.

The two leaders then trooped by an honor guard of Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine and Coast Guard units. Brezhnev twice broke into the ceremonies to greet part of the carefully selected crowd that was admitted to the White House for the ceremony.

Clasping his hands above his head like a victorious prize fighter, Brezhnev nodded to the crowd then began reaching for outstretched hands of the onlookers with both of his own hands.

"This year at the summit in Washington we will not only build on the foundation we laid last year but we have the opportunity to make even greater progress than we made last year toward the goals of better relations between our governments, the goals of a better life for our two peoples," Nixon said.

The President said that during his visit to Moscow last year he and the Soviet leaders had signed agreements "that changed the relations between our two countries in a very profound way."

"All the world is watching," Nixon added, because "the people of the world know that if the leaders of the two most powerful nations in the world can work together, the chances of peace will be increased."

"I am confident that in our meetings this week we shall not disappoint those hopes," Nixon added.

Nixon spoke in English and Brezhnev responded in Russian. Brezhnev promised to work hard in his talks with Nixon to "justify the hopes of our people and serve the interests of a peaceful future for all mankind."

Burglar Takes Fast Getaway But Falls Flat

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI)—A burglar who botched an attempted holdup by tripping a silent burglar alarm also botched his getaway by fracturing a couple of bones Sunday night.

The burglar broke into a night club in the downtown area and police answering the silent burglar alarm found him sprawled on the street outside the building.

It seems the burglar heard the police coming and the nearest exit was a window. The window was on the second floor.

The burglar was in fair condition today hospitalized with a fractured right leg and a fractured left heel.

Dean To Show Papers On Contacts With Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Ousted White House Counsel John W. Dean III has "the documents, papers" he exchanged with President Nixon that will authenticate his testimony before the Senate Watergate committee. Dean was reported today as saying in an interview.

"I think they will believe me because I've got the facts—and the documents, papers the President sent to me and papers I sent to him," Dean said in an interview with Mary McGroarty of the Washington Star-News.

Dean was going before the Senate committee in private session this afternoon in final preparation for his appearance at the public, nationally televised hearings Tuesday.

He reportedly was ready to testify that he had 35 to 40 contacts with Nixon this year before he was fired April 30. Some sources have said that at least some of the conversations were about the Watergate scandal.

Former White House Special Counsel Charles W. Colson, however, said that Dean saw Nixon only a few times before Nixon left the White House in mid-February, and that he doubts Dean saw him frequently after that.

In an interview with CBS News, Colson said Dean's seeking of immunity indicates he fears prosecution and thus may be making extravagant charges to make his testimony more appealing to the prosecutors.

With his attorney present, the Star-News reported, Dean said, "I don't blame anyone else (for the Watergate operation and subsequent cover-up). It wasn't loyalty. That would be John Dean saying he did not know what he was doing when he got into it. I knew what I was doing."

It just took me too long to stop doing it."

"I would characterize what I did as stupid," Dean said. "I knew what I was doing. I didn't like doing it. Obviously, I wouldn't be fighting for immunity if I hadn't been involved."

"But it was of lesser magnitude than what others did. I could have left. I didn't have the White House syndrome. I didn't want a White House car. I stayed on because I'd never see a presidential campaign from within. And I will say that I did put off more crazy, illegal wild schemes that came to me than anyone else. In my quiet way, I stopped some things."

Dean did not elaborate on these schemes, nor did he say the papers he possessed contained references to contacts with Nixon about a Watergate cover-up.

Skylab's Astronauts Set Space Endurance Mark

HOUSTON (UPI)—Skylab's healthy and spirited astronauts passed Russia's space endurance record of 24 days today and wished the Soviet cosmonauts good luck in the future.

Charles "Pete" Conrad, Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz aimed toward the four-week mark with a splashdown Friday.

They established the new record at 22 2/3 a.m. CDT while the space station crossed Africa on its 500th orbit. The pilots swept into their 25th day of flight at 8 a.m. as they went busily about their last full day of space research.

"We're homing in on the end of the mission," said flight director Neil Hutchinson.

In a morning telecast transmitted to mission control, Kerwin reported, "We've been remarkably free from illness on this flight." He is America's first space physician.

Ground communicator Henry Hartford advised the astronauts when they passed the endurance record and said they were the new "world's champs for longest space flight."

"OK, thanks for the note," Weitz answered casually, as he, Conrad and Kerwin nonchalantly went about a daily routine of weighing themselves on a special device that measures their mass in zero gravity.

The previous mark of 23 days, 18 hours and 22 minutes was set two years ago by the three Soviet Soyuz 11 cosmonauts who died when their ship suddenly lost cabin pressure just before re-entry because of a hatch leak.

Just after breakfast, Conrad asked Hartford to have astronauts Donald K. Slayton or Thomas P. Stafford relay a message to Soviet cosmonauts, Slayton and Stafford are members of the Apollo-Soyuz test flight crew in which an American spaceship will dock with a Russian ship in orbit in 1975.

"Relay to the Russian cosmonauts our respects to them and their comrades and wish them good luck from us in the future," said Conrad, who by this morning had logged 1,077 hours in space, the world's record for one man.

Skylab's astronauts have traveled more than 9.7 million miles around earth—also a record—and they have harvested an unprecedented crop of scientific data about the sun, the earth and man's ability to withstand prolonged exposure to weightlessness.

Their highly acclaimed solar research ends tonight when Kerwin is to train Skylab's seven powerful telescopes at the sun for the last time before the next crew arrives July 27.

Film Eagerly Awaited
Conrad and Weitz plan to walk in space Tuesday morning to retrieve film cassettes from the solar observatory. The film is anxiously awaited by scientists on earth because it holds the images of the first sun explosion ever seen by man from above earth's atmospheric screen.

In addition to the film retrieval, flight controllers asked the two spacewalkers to attempt to fix a faulty battery regulator by tapping it with a hammer. The idea is that the shock might free a stuck relay.

Conrad and Weitz also will attempt to brush a dust particle off a telescope lens and they will leave a piece of sunshade material outside the spacecraft so the next crew can retrieve it and see how it is affected by sunlight. This is to see how long Skylab's sun umbrella will last.

Before the astronauts went to bed at 6 p.m. Sunday, they talked privately to Dr. Paul Buchanan at mission control. He later reported the pilots were "in vigorous good health and spirits."

President's Invitation
The crewmen also talked to President Nixon Sunday and Conrad spoke to his wife, Jane, and three of their four sons. Weitz and Kerwin received Father's Day messages from their families on Skylab's radio teleprinter.

The President, talking via a radio hookup from Key Biscayne, Fla., said he will be in San Clemente, Calif., when the astronauts splash down 843 miles southeast of San Diego Friday morning.

"Maybe you can come up to San Clemente and we can say hello," he said.

Price Blasts Acid Rock Concert In D.C. Stadium

In letters to the House Public Works Committee, which has jurisdiction over D.C. Stadium, and the Members of the D.C. Army Board, and to Chief of Police Jerry Wilson, Congressman Bob Price of Pampa strongly condemned the use of D.C. Stadium in Washington for the holding of two "acid rock" concerts last week.

Citing newspaper accounts of the free and open use of various forms of drugs by many concert patrons, Price deplored the "hands off" attitude by police toward offenders as well as the decision by the D.C. Army Board to authorize such a function in the stadium built at taxpayers' expense.

"It is alarming enough to contemplate that the use of the stadium was granted in the first place, since this suggests that either we are being naive about what to expect at such affairs or

Armadillo Confab Gives Thrills.

VICTORIA, Tex. (UPI)—The First Annual Armadillo Confab and Exposition has never been any kind of a stepping stone, other than for hot pepper and beer distributors striving for a good profit report.

The lovely winner of the Miss Vacant Lot of the World Extraganza—sort of a beauty contest—last year, Miss Cindy Hudler, had only one duty during her reign over the South Texas armadillos and armadillo aficionados.

"The only thing they ever asked me to do last year was draw a stub out of a box to win a chicken," said the 21-year-old college student, who dressed up like an armadillo and danced in a vacant lot to win in 1972.

The winner during the three-day 1973 third First Annual Armadillo etc. etc. may reap even less from her honor. She might not even be found again.

She identified herself as Madine Gunch, an 18-year-old Victoria lass. No one could find any Gunchs listed in the Victoria phone book, but that was a small point.

She balanced on one hand while twirling a yellow hula hoop on one foot to win the Miss Vacant Lot title in a walk.

"She had on a halter top and real skimpy little pants," said Confab chairman Fred Armstrong. "No one is really sure she stood on her hand. She said she did and we took her word for it."

On winning the title, Miss Gunch disappeared into the crowd, perhaps to watch the armadillo races, participate in the Beer Can Smash, join the only one competitor who turned out for the "First and Possibly Last Tango in Victoria," or test her arm in the Simulated Armadillo Throw for the Ladies.

Armstrong said Chicken Mendez, an employe of Jesse's Bull Ranch outside Victoria, had been training his armadillo—Juan de Monte—Longo—for weeks prior to the races. Juan won easily and "broke all existing records, whatever they were," Armstrong said. "He was one swifter dilla."

There were 80 entries in the armadillo races, with the entry fee "a-dolla-a-dilla."

Armstrong said much of the entry fee money went toward purchase of advertised 1972 Beer at 1953 Prices.

The Simulated Armadillo Throw for the Ladies was a highlight, save that nobody wrote down the winner's name. The winner broke the old record by four inches.

The "First and Possibly Last Tango in Victoria" had a lot of amateur and unofficial entries, all tangoeing in the streets of Victoria. However, only one person showed up for the actual contest, and so the contest was cancelled.

"That's the trouble with this country," Armstrong said. "Too much apathy." It was thought the same fate might strike the Miss Vacant Lot of the World Extraganza. Friday there was only one entry and only three Saturday. However, 16 persons showed up Sunday and Miss Gunch—whoever she might have been—outshone them all.

Crowds Protest Brezhnev's Visit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Leonid I. Brezhnev's visit drew protest reactions today from musicians, dancers and fundamentalist Christians only hours after 8,000 Jews and Ukrainian exiles decried the Soviet Communist leader.

Leaders of the American Guild of Musical Artists said they would bring 5,000 persons to the State Department to protest the loss of jobs to touring Russian companies.

The Rev. Carl McIntyre said he would bring a "formidable following" to the Washington Monument to denounce trade agreements that McIntyre said would cost U.S. taxpayers $250 billion.

Sunday, while Brezhnev was at Camp David preparing for his visit with President Nixon, sympathetic congressmen joined Jews and Ukrainians in a demonstration at the U.S. Capitol and the White House ellipse.

Two teenage boys from Spearman were taken into custody shortly after midnight Saturday for having intoxicants in their possession.

Two officers on patrol observed the youths leaving a local lounge on Brown St. carrying a case of beer.

The youths face the "minor in possession charge" and local police said they plan to report the sales violation to the proper liquor control authorities.

'TO CONVINCe BRISCOE' Public School Finance Hearings To Convene

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, will convene two days of hearings today on public school financing, but the primary benefit—he said—will not be information.

He said last weekend he hopes the testimony will convince Gov. Dolph Briscoe to call a special session of the legislature to deal with the problem.

"The situation in all 1,143 Texas school districts is of crisis proportion," Kubiak said.

There is a much greater problem than the governor realizes. Many districts like Edgewood (in San Antonio) are not going to have a program unless they put back funds that they have now.

Numerous plans and hours of debate were aired during the regular session of the legislature, but nothing was done by adjournment May 28 toward providing financial aid to poorer school districts.

Kubiak indicated the second benefit from the hearings starting today will be to find out what kind of a plan would work, and then get it on paper in the form of legislation.

Both Daniel and Kubiak had asked Briscoe to call a special session, but Briscoe has said he will not.

Officials of all 1,143 school districts in Texas have been invited to the hearing, and such groups as the Texas State Teachers Association are making a big push to have a large turnout.

Kubiak said if the turnout is large enough, a special session might be forced.

Edgewood prompted a court challenge to the constitutionality of Texas' present system of financing public education.

The statement from James T. Lynn, secretary of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), came in rebuttal to criticism from host Mayor Joseph Alioto, who charged the cities have become "orphans" under the Nixon administration.

"We have never known who was in charge in the cities for Nixon," the San Francisco mayor said on the NBC television program "Meet the Press."

Lynn denied this, saying the cities were "not orphans at all, but vital elements in domestic planning."

He added that under the Better Communities Act (BCA), 30 out of 50 of the nation's cities would receive more federal aid in the future than they do under existing grant-in-aid programs.

BCA would provide direct grants to cities and states for programs to be determined by local governments rather than by federal mandate, he said.

Lynn also denied that older cities with Democratic voting records would come out on the short end of distributions. He said New York, for example, will get $700 million in the next five years, compared with $378 million received during the past five years.

IN WATERGATE AFFAIR Newspaper Says Nixon To Claim 'Misjudgment'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon is expected to defend himself from allegations of involvement in the coverup of the Watergate affair by saying he was misinformed by his former chief deputies, news reports attributed to White House and other government sources said today.

The Washington Post said in its morning editions it had been told by the sources the President no longer will broadly claim noninvolvement in the case. Instead, the reports said, Nixon will acknowledge misjudgments on his part and indicate they resulted from misinformation and unauthorized action by former Chief of Staff H. R. "Bob" Haldeman and former domestic affairs adviser John D. Ehrlichman.

The Post story, written by Pulitzer prize winners Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, said the strategy was designed to counter charges by John W. Dean III, the former White House counsel. Dean reportedly is ready to testify that Nixon, Haldeman and Ehrlichman knowingly participated in the coverup of Watergate and other illegal intelligence gathering operations.

In another development, Martha Mitchell, wife of former Nixon campaign director John N. Mitchell, said today that Nixon "always knew" what was going on.

"I'll be damned if I'll let my husband take the rap for Mr. President," Mrs. Mitchell said in an early morning telephone call from her New York City Washington. "Between you and me and the gatepost, Mr. President always knew what was going on."

Dean Testifies Tomorrow: Dean becomes a witness at the televised Senate Watergate Committee hearings when they resume Tuesday morning. He was interviewed for five hours under oath by committee attorneys Saturday and was expected to repeat his testimony to a closed meeting of the seven-member committee today.

Sources close to the Senate investigation told UPI Sunday Dean had told the committee staff he "assumed" the President was aware of the Watergate coverup within weeks of the bugging because he reported on it regularly to Haldeman and Ehrlichman. But the sources also said Dean testified he himself did not discuss aspects of the coverup personally with Nixon until last March.

Both Haldeman and Ehrlichman resigned from the White House April 30, the same day Dean was fired. That night, the Soil and Water Conservation Boards of Gray, Roberts and Hemphill counties will be at the meeting.

The project involves the proposed construction of, in connection with the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, approximately 20 dams in the three counties through which Red Deer Creek courses.

The purpose of the dams is to aid in preventing soil erosion along the creek. Of the 20 dams proposed, 10 are to be in Robert, six in Gray and four in Hemphill.

Youth Raise Church Funds At St. Mark: Youth groups of St. Mark C. M. E. Church presented a check to Rev. Monroe Woods Jr. at a service Saturday night for funds raised for the church.

The money raised in the youth project will be used for church expansion. Youth of St. Mark, because of the project, will be represented at the Northwest Texas Annual Conference in Wichita Falls July 3-6.

Honored at the carnival at the church Saturday were Lisa Johnson, granddaughter of Mrs. Faye Johnson, 636 S. Somerville, as princess and Aundrea Woods, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bertie Faggins, 1073 Prairie Drive, as prince of the youth departments.

Climax of the service included a "fun night" with carnival activities, apple bobbing, sack races, bowling and other fun games and refreshments.

US Dollar Slumps In European Trade

LONDON (UPI) — With concern running high over the Watergate scandal, the dollar slumped to record lows in Frankfurt and Amsterdam in early trading today and lost ground on other European markets. Gold prices surged ahead.

Nation's Cities To Have More Federal Aid

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The nation's cities will be getting more federal aid than ever, a Nixon administration official assured the 41st Conference of Mayors Sunday.

The statement from James T. Lynn, secretary of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), came in rebuttal to criticism from host Mayor Joseph Alioto, who charged the cities have become "orphans" under the Nixon administration.

"We have never known who was in charge in the cities for Nixon," the San Francisco mayor said on the NBC television program "Meet the Press."

Lynn denied this, saying the cities were "not orphans at all, but vital elements in domestic planning."

He added that under the Better Communities Act (BCA), 30 out of 50 of the nation's cities would receive more federal aid in the future than they do under existing grant-in-aid programs.

BCA would provide direct grants to cities and states for programs to be determined by local governments rather than by federal mandate, he said.

Lynn also denied that older cities with Democratic voting records would come out on the short end of distributions. He said New York, for example, will get $700 million in the next five years, compared with $378 million received during the past five years.

TO MEET LABOR COSTS First Class Mail Faces New Hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Postal Service probably will raise first class mail rates from 8 cents to 10 cents next January to meet increased labor costs.

Postmaster General Elmer T. Klassen said Sunday that "in all likelihood" the Postal Service will ask the Postal Rate Commission in September for the increase.

"I think we'll recommend a 10-cent stamp," Klassen said. "That's how we see the situation now."

Klassen was interviewed by U.S. News and World Report magazine. The increase would raise an additional $1 billion a year, Klassen said, and most of the sum would go to cover "very substantial wage increases" granted postal employees over the past few years.

Klassen conceded this was "a great deal of money...but so is the cost of union proposals."

Homosexuality is not a sickness

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: About a year or so ago you came out with the statement that homosexuals are NOT sick. Please try to find it, and run it again. This is important to me. Thank you.

DEAR READER: Homosexuality is NOT a "sickness." There are homosexuals who live socially well-adjusted, discreet, personally happy lives, whose homosexuality would come as a surprise to many of their close heterosexual friends.

The fact that homosexuality is morally condemned by most people in our culture makes it seem abnormal. In other times and in other cultures it has not always been so judged.

Much of the maladjustment seen in homosexuals is due to the rejection, persecution and guilt imposed upon them by an intolerant and unenlightened society.

One who labels all homosexuals as sick does a grave disservice to a large segment of our population.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very good job as a secretary, and my problem is a husband who likes to phone me twice a day just to talk—about nothing. Maybe there is something wrong with me, but I would prefer that he didn't call me at work unless there was some reason for it.

I have never been told it was against the rules, but I get very uneasy hanging on the phone listening to his pointless chitchat. I have asked him not to call me just to talk but he does anyway, and I have a terrible time getting off the phone.

I just this minute got off the phone with him, after cutting him very short saying I was in the middle of something important, so he called me right back to finish a long-drawn-out, boring story, so I cut him short again.

I offered to quit my job so I could stay home and talk to him whenever he wants for as long as he wants but he didn't like the idea.

How should I handle this? I am very upset.

BUGGED IN THE BRONX

DEAR BUGGED: How old is your husband? He sounds like a pestiferous little boy. Tell him his calls are upsetting you and to please cease and desist. And if he calls you anyway, keep cutting him shorter and shorter until he gets the message.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday I received a nasty letter from my mother. She tore me apart because I forgot to send my father a card or some kind of remembrance on his birthday. [It skipped my mind until the next day, so I called up to apologize.] My father seemed to understand, but my mother was furious. Now comes this letter telling me I'm a thoughtless, ungrateful, selfish kid, and she'd never forgive me.

Abby, I felt just terrible. I have been supporting myself for nearly a year. I live 200 miles from home and have a very good paying job for a kid my age [I'm 19]. My folks were always so proud of me—until now.

When I got mom's letter I dashed off one to her saying if that's the way she felt about me I would get out of her life. Now I'm sorry I sent it.

Do you think she'll forgive me? What should I do now?

FEELING LOW

DEAR FEELING: Of course she'll forgive you. Write her again and tell her that you wrote that letter before you had a chance to cool off. She'll understand. You probably inherited your hot temper from her.

DEAR ABBY: To the poor woman whose husband forces his harmonica playing on everyone even tho he can't play: Make a tape recording of one of his performances. He might realize how awful he is when it's played back to him privately.

This also works for teeth-clickers, snorers, ahem-ers, cursers, etc. I never believed I had a southern accent until I heard myself on tape.

Jim: "West was pretty sure of two things. The first thing was that his opponents were probably going to make a slam and win a big rubber. The second was that his partner, almost surely held an ace."

Oswald: "He could also be sure that an attacking lead in either diamonds or clubs was called for. What sort of player was East?"

Jim: "A very conservative one."

Oswald: "In that case a diamond lead was called for. East might well hold the ace of diamonds and not have doubled North's five-diamond bid."

Jim: "West did come to that conclusion and did lead the four of diamonds."

Oswald: "It looks as if West's lead worked out well, but for the wrong reason. South must have refused the diamond finesse; knocked out East's ace of spades and tried unsuccessfully to get two club discards on dummy's spades."

Sun Has No Energy Shortages

By DUSTON HARVEY
MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — If you're worried about the "energy crisis," there might be some solace in thinking about the sun.

In one hour, a storm on the sun's surface produced enough energy to meet the electrical needs of the United States for the next 100 years, at present rate of consumption.

When particles spewed out by the solar explosion reached the earth, they warped the magnetic field, causing power and communication blackouts in the northern United States, Canada, Sweden and Alaska. The storm last Aug. 7 was one of four that erupted in a five-day period in an earth-sized section of the sun's surface—and thanks to a fortuitous line-up of unmanned spacecraft—changed scientists' theories about the interplanetary medium.

Solar Wind Measured
Space agency scientist John H. Wolfe said increased knowledge of the medium may be useful in developing controlled thermonuclear fusion for power generation, long-term weather forecasting and preventing communications breakdowns.

The two spacecraft were the Pioneer 9, circling the sun 72 million miles out, and Pioneer 10, which is 204 million miles away on its trip to Jupiter and points beyond. They were both on a line straight out from the sun, 132 million miles apart.

The Almanac

By United Press International
Today is Monday, June 18, the 169th day of 1973 with 196 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini. American artist James Montgomery Flagg was born June 18, 1877.

On this day in history:

In 1812, the United States declared war on Britain for the second time in its brief history.

In 1815, Napoleon was defeated at the Battle of Waterloo in Belgium.

In 1953, Egypt was proclaimed a republic by the "Army Council of the Revolution."

In 1972, in Britain's worst air disaster, a jetliner crashed near London, killing all 118 aboard.

A thought for the day: French writer Sebastian Chamfort said: "The most wasted day of all is that on which we have not laughed."

The line-up permitted scientists to measure the solar wind as it moved out into space following the explosions.

What they found was unexpected.

When the ionized gases—protons, helium nuclei and electrons—making up the solar wind reached the second spacecraft, they were only moving half as fast but their temperature hadn't changed, indicating kinetic energy was being converted into thermal energy.

Knowledge Increased

The solar wind speeds at Pioneer 9 were more than 2,235,000 miles an hour, the highest ever recorded. They were about half that fast at Pioneer 10. The temperatures at both spacecraft were about one million degrees Kelvin.

Wolfe, Pioneer program director, said in an interview that the storm, along with cosmic ray readings sent back by Pioneer 10, indicated the interplanetary medium was more turbulent for longer distances into space than scientists had predicted.

The high heat and incredible speeds of the subatomic particles making up the solar wind have imperceptible effects on men and machines in space because of their lack of density.

He said increased knowledge of the sun's magnetic field may help nuclear scientists control thermonuclear fusion. They can look at superheated "plasma" from the sun and determine its properties rather than try to recreate it in the lab for mere microseconds.

Wolfe said scientists have found that magnetic storms from the sun rattle the earth's magnetic field, cause some type of upper atmospheric heating, and produce a low pressure trough over the North Atlantic four days after the sun spots appear.

"We don't understand why it happens, but it's a one-for-one relationship that occurs like clockwork four days later," Wolfe said.

"If we understood the interaction, we could produce better long-term weather predictions."

State Senator Candidate Files

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Austin minister Raymond Donley Jr. became the fifth candidate for a vacant Senate seat that will be filled by a special July 17 election, the secretary of state's office said.

Donley filed for the Senate race late Friday and listed his occupation as minister, but did not list any religious affiliation, the secretary of state's office said.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe called the election to fill the Senate seat vacated by Sen. Charles Herrington, D-Austin, who resigned to become general manager of the Lower Colorado River Authority.

Other candidates for the Senate seat are Rep. Don Cavness, D-Austin, former Rep. Maurice Angly, businessman Dave Shanks and attorney Lloyd Doggett.

Candidates for Cavness' House seat are former Austin municipal judge Ronald Earle and retired Air Force colonel Bob Crider.

BREZHNEV BELIEVES Watergate Internal Affair For Nixon

By PHIL NEWSOM

UPI Foreign News Analyst
Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev believes Watergate is an internal United States affair with which President Nixon must deal as he will.

He also believes that the question of Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union also is an internal affair for the Soviets to decide.

A direct question about Jewish emigration brought out the only show of irritation in an otherwise affable tour of the Kremlin's inner recesses conducted by Brezhnev for the benefit of 11 American newsmen just prior to his departure for Washington.

It was part of an obvious public relations campaign which began with his recent visit to the West German capital of Bonn and whose object is to present the West with a smiling Brezhnev in contrast with his sour image of the past.

Shuns Watergate
"We do not have in the Soviet Union any law forbidding a Soviet citizen from leaving the Soviet Union and going to another country," he said, "if that departure is justified. Now I'm sure that any nation has a law whereby it is forbidden for certain categories of people connected with what is called national security from leaving their country."

"I'm told that there is such a law in Israel, too. And I'm sure the United States has rules to that effect."

As for Watergate, the Soviet leader declared "I believe it would be quite indecent and quite unsuitable for me to intervene in that affair in any way."

As an issue there seems no reason to believe that Watergate enters in any way into talks between the two leaders. Of more importance is the Jewish question.

In the trade agreement reached last fall, the President undertook to extend credits for sales to Moscow and to obtain from Congress favored nations. Some of the agreement's provisions have been implemented, including Export-Import Bank credits already reported to exceed some $200 million.

Jackson Not Satisfied
The President has been unable to deliver on his promise of favored nations treatment because some senators led by Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington still are not satisfied with Soviet assurances that the U.S.S.R. is not blocking Jewish emigration. The Soviets, as a matter of fact, have gone to extraordinary lengths to produce such assurances.

As with all summit conferences, agreements to be announced already have been reached. They cover such items as cultural exchanges, transport and agricultural research and are not spectacular.

The talks also may produce some definition of strategic weapons so as to permit progress on SALT II, the U.S.-Soviet talks seeking limitation of offensive arms.

Ervin's Standing Is Impeccable, Even With Enemies

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Senior Editor
(First in a Five-Part Series.)

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — "Get some dirt on Ervin." This order was allegedly issued by H. R. (Bob) Halde- man, then White House chief of staff, to Republican officials in North Carolina. Though the incident is relatively old news, the reaction gives current insight into Sen. Sam Ervin, the North Carolina Democrat.

North Carolina officials considered the smear directive absurd because, said Charles Jonas Jr., who headed the last two presidential campaigns for Richard Nixon in North Carolina, "Ervin's standing is impeccable."

As for Ervin himself, he recalled that report now as he sat in his book-lined office in the Old Senate Office Building. "I wasn't concerned," said the 76-year-old senator, in his pebbled, easy resonance. "The statute of limitations long since run off on all my misdeeds."

When Ervin accepted the chairmanship of the Senate Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities (the "Watergate" committee) he did so with the knowledge that he would be taking some risks.

Ervin is among several men and women who have distinguished themselves in the otherwise squalid Watergate case. There is, for example, Chief Judge John J. Sirica of the U.S. District Court in Washington who faced possible ridicule and recriminations in his dramatic and successful attempt to probe deeper into the truth of the Watergate burglary.

There is, for another, Wash- ington Post publisher Katharine Graham. Despite one of the most blistering attacks by any administration ever upon a newspaper, she encouraged the continued investigative reporting on Watergate.

Ervin knew that his phone puncture a silly statement by a witness. ("When you've been interrogated by Sen. Ervin," said Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., committee vice-chairman, "you've been interrogated by the best.")

Though he is no clown, he can be clownish. When a crank in the visitors' gallery shouted that he was now running for president, Ervin retorted, "This is not the proper forum to announce a candidacy for president." Ervin's blue eyes were merry as the staid Senate hearing room broke up.

He is Southern homespun, but a graduate of Harvard Law School. He is avuncular, a Bible-quoter, but also pragmatic. "Don't be misled, he's a politician like the rest of us, only less so," said a peer on Capitol Hill who has known him for years.

In short, Ervin is human — a most appealing quality in an age and administration of impenetrable plastic.

"Watergate," said Ervin, "is a great tragedy for the country. But a government operating on a suppression of truth is worse. This country is no monarchy, where the king can do no wrong. And where it is treason to say so. We can't emulate ostriches and stick our heads in the sand."

Ervin had first to conquer himself before he could realize his own strengths. A problem in his younger days was his being "high-strung," as he puts it. He developed ulcers. He knew he had to curb his violent temper. He read Dale Carnegie's book, "How to Stop Worrying and Start Living."

"I learned not to regret yesterday and not to be concerned with tomorrow and the day after tomorrow," he said. "It's like the old black man who said, 'I have learned to cooperate with the inevitable.'"

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Elmer's case should alert every diabetic to the danger of zooming the level of sugar in our blood stream. But diabetics often live longer just because they are forced to rule their stomach by their brain, so it can be a blessing!

CASE X-537: Elmer G., aged 39, is a diabetic.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "I recently developed a severe infection in my right foot.

"For a time, it looked as if I might lose that leg.

"Now the doctors have warned me not only to take my daily shot of insulin.

"But to wash my feet every night and also put on a clean pair of socks every morning.

"Why this stress on a diabetic's feet?"

anti-cancer hormone to prevent the development of cancer cells.

But by middle age, many of us aren't secreting enough of that anti-cancer hormone (which he names Carcalon), so we also need to tap an outside source of Carcalon, as from horse blood.

Diabetics usually have run low on their internal production of insulin, so they "borrow" a daily outside "shot" via needle, to keep their blood sugar level in that 80 to 120 normal range.

If, however, they ignore their shots of insulin (or oral therapy), their blood sugar doubles, triples or may run 400 to 500 units of sugar instead of that 80 to 120.

That's dangerous because germs thrive in sweeter blood! So your feet thus need diligent care, for they are encased in shoes, where the heat, plus the much sweeter blood, may then let infection zoom fast.

Diabetics thus should be doubly careful not to pick hangnails or nick their skin when trimming their toenails!

They also need to wash their feet in soapsuds every night and be sure to wear freshly washed socks or stockings every morning!

Untreated diabetes likewise causes blindness, heart trouble and is often linked with lung infections, too.

But if you diabetics faithfully stay on your diet or take your daily outside shot of insulin, you can live to a ripe old age.

In fact, diabetics often live longer just because they are forced to rule their stomachs by their brain!

Dr. Andrew C. Ivy's theory of cancer, now admitted by our leading cancer research experts, also states that in youth most of us also produced enough could be tapped, his tax returns pulled, his state deprived of federal aid and projects. If the hearings were considered partisan or ineffective or laughable, he could be disgraced.

He knew he might incur the wrath of his constituents. And he was right — about some. He has been accused in recent weeks of "trying to crucify the President," of being a "disgusting publicity seeker," of being both a pawn of the "lying press" and a tool of the liberals. He also knew some people would be bored or made "sick and tired" of the continuing investigation.

Why did Ervin expose himself to such risks? "Duty," he said. "Duty is the sublimest word in our language. I remember reading something Robert E. Lee told his son, Curtis Lee, when the boy went off to school at West Point. He said, 'Do your duty in all things. You can't do more and you should never wish to do less.'

"I thought about the problem facing us now. I came to an intellectually honest conclusion, and then I did what I felt was right, regardless of the consequences.

"I also know this might not have been popular with a lot of folks. There is a human instinct not to want to face evil. For those people, the sun is always shining." (However, letters to the Senate committee were recently running 11-1 in its favor.)

"If I made any contribution to all this," said Ervin, "it is that I said the Senate committee, by decree of the United States Supreme Court, has the right to subpoena any witness it wants, with no exceptions."

Ervin, the highly respected constitutional lawyer, swept aside the President's umbrella-like interpretation of executive privilege by calling it "executive poppycock." And he seriously threatened to have any White House aide flung in the clink for contempt if he refused to comply.

"Sometimes," said Ervin, "it takes a whole lot to stir people."

He was chosen by a landslide Senate vote to head the Select Committee for three reasons

First, as Sen. Mike Mansfield said, "Ervin was the only man we could have picked on either side of the aisle who'd have the respect of the Senate as a whole."

Second, he had judicial experience — six years on the North Carolina Supreme Court and six years on the North Carolina Superior Court.

Third, he was not a presidential aspirant who could be accused of seeking national political gain.

And with the televising of the Watergate hearings Ervin has become a most highly recognizable national figure, this after 18 years in the Senate. If courage and principle make a hero, then Ervin seems to fit the description. Yet he is an unlikely looking hero, if one goes by raw-boned Hollywood ideals.

He sits in the middle of the long table in the hearing room as he and fellow committee members interrogate witnesses. His heavy eyebrows flutter nervously over dark-rimmed glasses. Jowls jounce. Lower lip is trembly. A fattish hawk nose Strands of white hair part from the middle of his forehead and resemble a bird's wings flapping.

He will jab the air with a craggy arthritic finger and

Miller Sets Record With Final Round 63

Eight Under-Par Wins U.S. Open By 1 Stroke

OAKMONT, Pa. (UPI) — They were still talking today about Johnny Miller's remarkable finish.

They were saying it not only ranked with the greatest finishes in the U.S. Open, but also alongside some of the other great ones in sports history.

Bobby Thomson's miracle home run for the New York Giants in 1951. Johnny Unitas leading the Baltimore Colts to victory in 1958 in football's first sudden death... the 1972 Olympic basketball final between Russia and the United States at Munich.

Joe Dey, commissioner of the PGA's Tournament Players Division, put it this way:

"I don't know that there ever has been a greater finish, except perhaps Gene Sarazen's great charge at Fresh Meadow (L.I.) in 1932 when he played the last 28 holes in 100 shots (and won the Open by three)."

Miller's finish was really unbelievable," Dey said. Set Oakmont Record P.J. Boatwright, executive director of the U.S. Golf Association, said "I still can't believe it" after Miller had posted an eight-under-par 63 Sunday to win the 73rd U.S. Open championship at the Oakmont Country Club and earn $35,000.

Miller conquered Oakmont in the final round and broke the all-time Open and Oakmont 18-hole records in the process. His five-under-par 279 total for 72 holes was four strokes better than anyone ever had done before at Oakmont.

In his record-shattering performance, Miller, 26, of San Francisco, had to pass Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player, Julius Boros and others. He was six strokes off the pace when he teed off for the final round. He then birdied the first four holes and "I was sky high and I said 'okay baby, let's go.'"

Miller picked up five more birds and a bogey during his phenomenal round, then waited in the clubhouse while the players on the course attempted to overtake him.

They never did. John Schlee, an astrology buff who said his horoscope told him he was in "a lunar high point" and would do well in the Open, had the best chance but never quite made it.

Palmer Expressed Shock Schlee shot a final round 70 for a 280 total and second place money of $18,000.

Tom Weiskopf finished third with a 70 and a 281 total and joked after successive back to back wins in the previous two weeks that "I'm not used to finishing third."

In a three-way tie for fourth place at 282 were Palmer, who had a final round 72; Jack Nicklaus, who had a 68 Sunday; and Lee Trevino, with a 70.

Boros, Lanny Wadkins and Jerry Heard were another stroke back at 283, matching the best previous 72-hole score ever recorded at Oakmont. The total of nine sub-par scores for the tournament tied the all-time Open record.

Palmer, shooting for a second Open championship, said he was "shocked" when he stood on the tee at the 12th hole and saw that Miller was five shots under par and leading the tournament.

"I had no idea. I thought I was in complete command," Palmer said. "I didn't have the slightest notion of what was going on."

Palmer then proceeded to bogey the next three holes to blow his chance.

Miller Was Super-Nervous Nicklaus came into this tournament highly favored to win his fourth Open championship and a record-breaking 14th major title. But he came up too late with too little, when he knocked in birdie putts at the 16th and 17th holes.

Miller is No. 7 on the tournament money list for 1973 and had finished in the top 10 in eight of the last 17 tournaments. But before Sunday, the closest he came to winning a major championship was in the 1971 Masters.

Miller admitted that during his round he had "choked" but that he kept telling himself to "keep cool, keep cool, don't let the gallery get you excited."

"Today I was so pumped up, I was super nervous," he said. "I can honestly say I gagged on those putts on seven and eight."

"One thing I kept in my head out there all day, 'Don't shank.' I was thinking, 'I was thinking that on almost every iron shot. I know that's bad thinking, but I couldn't help it.'"

"It was always up there in my mind."

Gary Player, who led the tournament after 36 holes, shot a 73 Sunday for a 287 total. He said he was going home to South Africa and work on his golf game for about a month.

Bourassa Is Leader

MONTREAL (UPI) — Jocelyne Bourassa, hoping to win her first professional golf tournament, carries a one stroke lead today into the third and final round of the $50,000 La Canadienne Golf Championship.

Miss Bourassa, who shot an even par 73 Sunday to give her a two day total of 141, has a one stroke advantage over Judy Rankin, who carded her second 71.

In third place with two round totals of 143 are Carol Mann and Jane Blalock, followed by Betsy Rawls with 144, and Sandry Haynie and Betty Burfeindt with 145 and 156, respectively.

Catcher Ellie Rodriguez, according to manager Del Crandall, is the spark that keeps the Milwaukee Brewers moving.

In his opinion Rodriguez has been the big sparkplug on this team," says Crandall. "Ellie has been so great that (Darrell) Porter has not been able to break in."

Porter got his chance Sunday and made the most of it as he and designated hitter Joe Lahoud each slapped grand slam homers in consecutive innings to lift the streaking Brewers to a 15-5 pounding over the Chicago White Sox.

Sitting atop the American League East by one full game over Baltimore, the victorious Brewers marked their 14th win in their last 15 games, their ninth in a row and six straight over the Chisox. In the sixth inning, Lahoud homered again, tying a club record with 6 RBI's in a single game.

Righthander Stan Bahnsen, who threw the grand slam pitch to Porter in the second inning, was lifted after consecutive singles by Don Money and Dave May in Milwaukee's six-run first major league homer and Jerry Bell, the Milwaukee starter, his seventh triumph against six defeats. Bell departed after five innings and a 14-1 lead.

In other American League games, Kansas City won a doubleheader from Cleveland 6-3, and 6-2. Boston trimmed Oakland 4-2. Detroit shutout Minnesota 6-0. Baltimore nipped Texas 5-4 in 16 innings and New York tripped California 5-1 in the second game but lost the first, 4-0.

In the National League, New York beat San Diego 3-1. Houston topped St. Louis 7-3. Los Angeles edged Montreal 3-2 in 12 innings. Philadelphia outlasted San Francisco 11-7. Chicago split with Atlanta as the Cubs won the opener 9-3 before losing 8-5 and Cincinnati swept Pittsburgh 3-1 and 5-1.

Amos Otis drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a single and Dick Drago, 7-5, hurled his seventh complete game in his last 11 starts to pace the Royals to a victory over Cleveland in the first game of a doubleheader. Ken Wright allowed three hits in 8 1/3 innings to boost his record to 2-1 with the second game victory. The two game sweep moved the Royals to within one half game of first place in the Western Division.

Luis Tiant gave up just four hits, two of them homers by Reggie Jackson, and Danny Carter drove in two runs and rapped out four hits to give the Sox a victory over the A's. Tiant was touched for Jackson's 12th and 13th homers in the sixth and ninth innings. The Red Sox, snapping a four-game losing streak, cracked 11 hits off loser Ken Holtzman, 11-5, with Cater striking three singles and a double.

Mickey Lolich handed Minnesota only its second shutout of the season with a seven-hitter and Al Kaline drove in two runs for the Tigers in victory over the Twins before 52,622 bat day fans. Norm Cash slammed his seventh home run into the upper deck in right leading off the fourth inning.

Oriole catcher Earl Williams doubled home the winning run in the last of the 18th inning, off loser Don Stanhouse, 1-6, giving Baltimore a victory over the Rangers. Williams ended the four hour marathon after Bobby Grich smacked a leadoff single, stole second base and watched Tommy Davis draw an intentional walk. Williams lined a two-bagger to right-center field to score Grich and give reliever Bob Reynolds, 3-3, the victory.

Sam McDowell, returning to the American League, pitched the Yankees to a victory over California for a doubleheader split after the Angels won the opener behind Clyde Wright's six-hit pitching. Purchased a week ago from the San Francisco Giants, McDowell allowed just four hits in 6-2-3 innings but seven walks contributed to his early exit.

Williams Has Talent He Hasn't Even Tapped

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (UPI) — "Steve Williams," said coach Jim Bush of national champion UCLA, "has talent he hasn't even tapped."

Bush made his observation in the wake of Williams' double sprint victory during the weekend in the national AAU track and field championships. The double was the first in the nationals since Ray Norton turned the trick way back in 1960.

"A lot of fine sprinters have come up the road since Norton," Bush said. "But Steve has a chance to make everyone forget their names in a hurry. He's really fantastic. There is no other way to describe this young man."

Williams, who starts at San Diego State this fall after transferring from UTEP, is only one of a flock of stars Bush will be taking to Europe in the weeks to come "for another shot at the Germans and Russians."

The tour starts in Toronto later this month, then moves on to Munich, Italy, Minsk and Dakar. The tour, as noted, includes meets against Canada, Italy and Senegal but only the ones in Munich and Minsk concern most of America's athletes.

Thomas May Return To Football Wars

DALLAS (UPI) — San Diego running back Duane Thomas, whose short-lived pro football career took him from the Super Bowl to near seclusion, may return to the playing field this fall, his new agent said.

ready to play." Abner Haynes, who heads Pro Athletes Enterprises, said Sunday "His attitude is very positive and I'm optimistic things will be worked out with the Chargers."

Haynes, a former American Football League star and childhood friend of Thomas, said the elusive running back have been working out in Dallas in preparation for the fall season.

Haynes said minor contract differences still exist.

"He's been spending a lot of time with his family," his agent said. "We've always been talking about something that might benefit underprivileged kids. He wants to get into something like that and we're considering opening some kind of camp."

Thomas, who helped Dallas to two Super Bowl appearances, was convicted of marijuana possession and was later traded to San Diego after missing training camp last year. Thomas suited out for the Cowboy-San Diego game, but never played. He was assigned to the Charger taxi squad.

"It was hard on him last year," Haynes said. "There were so many problems he couldn't get his mind ready to play ball. Now I think it is."

Coaches Game Is Saturday

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — Anyone who thinks he can tell what offense the East will be using Saturday night against the West in the 13th annual Coaches All-America football game just by looking at the quarterback's helmet may be in for the surprise of his life.

"Oh, sure, we've got two different kinds of quarterbacks in Alabama's Terry Davis and Virginia Tech's Don Stock," Auburn Coach Ralph "Shug" Jordan, head of the East squad said. "But the defense certainly won't be able to get set for the run or the pass based upon who we have in the game."

Kickoff is set for 7:30 p.m. (CDT) before 45,000 and a national television audience.

Davis, who finished fifth in the Heisman Trophy balloting, is one of only five players in this year's game who has not been drafted by the pros. Although primarily a running quarterback in Alabama's wishbone offense, he completed 97 of 174 passes for 1,228 yards and 14 touchdowns during the 1972 season. He also rushed 274 times for 865 yards and 16 touchdowns.

as the race was over he went over and hugged Buerkle.

Doug Brown sprinted into the lead shortly after clearing the last water hazard to beat Barry Brown with room to spare in the Steeple. His winning time was a fine 8:26.8 and he said he won because Barry made his move too soon.

Bolding's Good Timing Bolding, like Wohluter, made his move at the right time in the 440 hurdles, jumping into the lead on the last bend. Mann tried valiantly to catch up but ran out of room. The winning time was 49.2.

Hill won the high hurdles on Friday night in 13.2 as world record holder Rod Milburn stumbled over the next to last barrier and wound up fifth. But Hill, whose wife is expecting around the end of the month, will pass up the European tour, which means Tommy White and Charles Foster, who were second and third, respectively, will make the trip instead.

The Wyoming Tetons are still growing.

Wohluter forged into the lead on the final bend to win the 800 in 1:45.6 as Wottle made his move too late.

Prefontaine, given a hard push by unheralded Dick Buerkle, completed the three-mile run in 12:53.4, and as soon

Ruining The Country?

The latest bit of mythology being circulated is that current scandals rocking the national administration will ruin the country.

We are not surprised at such talk from political activists or from those who live with the delusion that high political figures are members of a royal family. And, we quite expect if from special interest groups who profit from close association with high political figures.

But when we heard the comment from a small businessman who owns his success simply to hard work, careful management of his resources and providing customers with a reliable product and attentive service we began to wonder just how widespread this infection has become.

We were moved to think of a parallel of a pagan society on some Pacific island where natives had built a huge stone idol. Witchdoctors over the years had sold the population the idea that the stone was their God and all good things came to them because they would perform daily rituals around the monstrosity.

Then one day the earth trembled and the huge stone idol began to shake and panic gripped the natives. Their God was falling and they feared their world was coming to an end.

Sure enough, the stone idol crashed to the earth and smashed into unrecognizable pieces. There was great moaning and gnashing of teeth. But then the natives realized they were hungry and went back to work, picking fruit and catching fish, preparing meals and caring for their children.

It wasn't long before life returned to normal with laughter and dancing. The moral of the story, of course, is that human beings make their own life profitable through their own labor. The economy of America does not stem from actions of political government and certainly not from actions of specific office holders.

People eat because private enterprise plants, harvests, prepares and distributes food. People ride in vehicles because private enterprise uses nature's resources, human energy and technological know-how to produce, distribute and service vehicles. It is the same with houses, clothes, medicine and entertainment.

Just as the island society did not disappear when the stone idol fell to earth, neither will this nation be ruined because scandal rocks the current administration.

We are not much different from the simple pagan society of that island. Even though those people discovered that life went on without their stone God, it wasn't long before they took time out from their fruit picking, fishing and dancing to build another stone idol and they then resumed their old rituals.

Why Lower Standard?

We do not know why politicians are so concerned about people's voting. If their chief concern is power, why would it matter to them whether they win that power by a plurality out of 75 million ballots or out of 75,000? But it does appear to matter. For, since the Republic was founded, men in office consistently have striven to increase the number of votes.

In recent years, the trend has intensified. We see this in the lowering of the voting threshold to 18 years of age and now again in the Senate legislation to permit voter registration by postcard.

We can only theorize as to the reason for the political zeal to increase participation in the political game. Power may not be the ultimate political aspiration. For the most that power could obtain—if that—would be happiness. But what brings happiness? Different things bring happiness to different persons. But it could be that a politician is a type who derives happiness from recognition. We see a hint of this political thirst in the behavior of the tyrants of old. When some of these achieved the pinnacle of power, having put down all enemies and returned in triumph to their capital, they demanded that they be hailed as gods and that the people fall down and worship.

So far the Potomac variety of politician has not asked us to bump our foreheads on the concrete. We have not yet arrived at that advanced state of affairs. We are at a preliminary stage during which persons of political character want reassurance of popular adulation. They see non-voters turn away from them in disgust, and they can't believe their senses. They conclude that some people really want to show their love for them, but can't do so because they are too young to cast their love ballot. Older people—those who are convinced—wish to love them, too, but are too feeble to travel to places of registration. So—to increase the number of political worshippers—the politicians reduce the voting age to 18 and provide for postcard registration.

Well, that's only speculation. Perhaps it's not even worth being called a theory.

A Look At Busing In Maryland

The latest area to be placed under the curse of compulsory busing of school children is Prince George's County, Maryland, where the pattern is the same as other places over the country.

First a court case is initiated by the NAACP against the local school board, pleading that all schools must have a certain racial mix. Second, county residents become excited that their kids will be bused away to some strange neighborhood and school. They form a local organization—generally with very little knowledgeable leadership. This group joins in the legal battle on the side of the school board.

This anticipated action falls right into the NAACP plan. The court then rules in favor of the NAACP order to mix all schools racially, and responsible parents become upset.

Comes the busing day and several things happen:

1. Some students are kept home from school for fear of their health or safety.

2. Others are placed in private schools, where they get a better education.

3. The rest are loaded on the buses and sent to some strange neighborhood. Extra police protection is provided at all the schools for a few days and no major incident takes place. Then when police surveillance is dropped, fights, robberies, stabbings, shootings, and even killings take place. Drug usage and interracial pregnancies will no doubt rise.

After several weeks of busing in Prince George's County, Maryland, the students have segregated themselves in the halls, cafeteria, restrooms, and even their new classrooms. School administrators refuse to allow volunteers from a local busing group to observe and monitor the corridors. The finale is yet to be acted out in Maryland, but it will follow a set pattern.

By the start of school next fall, many students will either enroll in private schools or move out of the county. The racial mix will change to a larger percentage of black and before another year, public schools in Prince George's County will be nearly all black.

A county teenager showed more intelligence and maturity than the federal judges and school administrators who ordered the busing. She said that busing 700 white students from their nearly all white communities into a school in nearby all black Palmer Park "is like putting a cat in a dog house—it will never work."

In order to stop students from moving to another county that is not busing, the court will no doubt rule it OK to bus children across county lines to arrive at a racial mix. This issue is now before the U.S. Supreme Court, with a ruling expected this year. Richmond, Virginia, and Detroit, Michigan, should be the first areas affected then.

ACTION NOW is still moving the direction of the theory that any right granted under the Constitution (busing) can also be waived. When a Constitutional right is compulsory, it ceases to be a right. Administrative remedies available are being followed in the county and the first move was a request for a transfer of the bused pupil back to his neighborhood school. If transfer is refused, an appeal from that decision will be filed under the county school board regulations.

GLOBAL VIEW

Viet missing list is likely forever

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA)—One continuing tragedy of the war is the unwillingness of Hanoi to cooperate in determining the fate of almost 1,300 Americans missing in Vietnam and still unaccounted for.

Another 1,100 have been officially declared dead—but their remains have not been recovered.

Especially agonizing are the cases of airmen seen on the ground after crashing and whose pictures as prisoners were published by Hanoi—yet who have not been released nor their deaths satisfactorily explained by the Communists.

Though the cease-fire agreements solemnly provided for sincere cooperation by the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese, U.S. teams have regularly been denied access to sites where American planes are known or believed to have crashed, and to reported graves of American servicemen.

The exceptions, where North Vietnam has provided some cooperation, have been even more frustrating. An American team, for example, was allowed to visit North Vietnam on May 11 and May 18 to see sites of graves in which Americans were allegedly buried.

But Hanoi curiously did not permit the American team to recover or identify the remains. (Does this suggest the North Vietnamese government was afraid of what a study of the bodies would show—in torture or other mistreatment?)

Most, and possibly all, the Vietnam missing are dead. But we have all heard stories of men mysteriously discovered years after a war, as with the Japanese soldier found on an island more than two decades after World War II. Any father, mother, wife or child of a missing serviceman desperately wants certainty.

A family with a husband or son missing in Laos must be in particularly great agony. From North Vietnam, 312 Air Force officers and men were returned and 322 still unaccounted for, roughly a 50-50 ratio. But only six Air Force men have been returned from Laos, with 308 yet to be accounted for, a ratio of one to 51.

The hairy jungle areas of Laos, in great measure uninhabited, can explain away a part of this difference. A flier with a broken back, for example, might well starve to death on the spot because no one would find him on time. Likewise, the thick jungle foliage would cover his body after death, and his plane as well.

But the difference between one returned for every 51 still unaccounted for in Laos as compared with one returned for every 1.03 still unaccounted for in North Vietnam is too great to be explained by a difference in geography.

There is suspicion here that some men may be still held captive. But it must be emphasized this is mere suspicion; there is no evidence.

The men working on the missing and accounted for problem in the Pentagon expect that many of the missing servicemen in Laos, North Vietnam and in Communist-occupied South Vietnam will never be found—or their deaths even be explained with certainty.

The search for the missing will take years at best. Non-cooperation by Hanoi could lengthen the task interminably. The longer the search takes, the less chance there will be of finding what happened to many of the men. Rapidly growing jungles wipe out almost all traces. The memories of farmers or tribesmen living near a crash site grow dim or confused. Local mountain people move away. The metal remains of the airplanes are carted away and transformed into building materials or other uses and their place of origin obscured.

For many wives, children and parents the vigil will never end.

Question Box

QUESTION: What reason was given to Americans when the federal government made it illegal for them to own gold?

ANSWER: The explanation at the time was that the government had to conserve its gold holdings as backing against its paper dollars and as a reserve to meet future gold demands from foreigners.

As readers of history and those who were of school age or more during the Great Depression the period was one of great general perplexity. Men lost their jobs and did not quite know why. Merchants saw plenty of people out on the street who would have been willing to buy their goods but who did not have the purchasing media to do so. The merchant wondered why he could not sell, and the would-be customer wondered why he hadn't the means to buy.

All were searching for answers. The situation was much like that of sheep looking for a shepherd.

In this state of affairs, a political shepherd stepped on the scene and offered his service. He told the people not to be frightened, he would find the answer. On April 5, 1933, just one month after assuming the Presidency, Franklin Roosevelt offered the answer. It came in the form of an executive order that forbade the "hoarding" of gold. It required Americans to surrender most forms of privately held gold to the Federal Reserve System. They were to do this before the end of the month—receiving paper money in exchange—or suffer a penalty of a fine of $10,000 or imprisonment of not more than 10 years, or both.

The confiscation was later contested in the Supreme Court, but that tribunal held that those who had not proved any loss.

At first the gold was stored, partly at Ft. Knox and in the Federal Reserve Bank in New York City. But rather quickly after 1965, as the Federal Reserve banks showed no sign of closing the valve on its issues of banknotes, the confidence of foreign dollar holding in those banknotes diminished. As a consequence they turned them in for gold.

Ironically, in 1967, the federal government removed any legal gold reserve requirements whatever against Federal Reserve notes. On Aug. 15, 1971, the federal government abandoned any further pretense of redeeming foreign-held dollars. It had run out of gold to redeem them with. So the original reason given for the prohibition of private gold holding has completely vanished.

Recomputation: A Victim of 'Not Now, But Later'

By Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON—The Senate Armed Services Committee will hold hearings on the long-pending legislation to recompute the pay of some 900,000 military retirees—at a still undetermined date later this year.

That's what this column has been told by Sen. John Tower, Tex., second-ranking Republican member of the Committee, and-author of a recomputation bill sponsored by a number of other Senators, foremost among them Robert Dole, Kan., former Republican national chairman.

Sen. Stennis promised there would be hearings, and I am sure he will make good on his word. Tower said in a discussion of the matter with this column, Stennis, seriously wounded in a hold-up last winter, is still convalescing, with no indication when he will resume the chairmanship of the committee.

"When do you think these hearings are likely to take place?" Tower was asked.

"I would say after the committee completes consideration of the ($27.5 billion) weapons authorization bill," Tower replied.

"When is that apt to be?"

"Probably around the middle of next month," Tower said. "That means there is virtually no likelihood of hearings before Congress shuts down in August for a month's summer recess?"

"Yes, I guess that's so," admitted Tower.

"So, in effect, there is little if any chance of hearings taking place on recomputation before the middle of September—at the earliest."

Tower nodded assent—then after a pause added reflectively, "Of course, the committee may not get around to holding hearings until after it has finished with the multi-billion dollar military construction authorization bill."

"That means at least another month or two."

"Could be," agreed Tower. "I hope the recomputation hearings can be sandwiched in between those two measures. Certainly I'll do my best to that end. But at this time, it is impossible to say what will happen. But I am still confident there will be hearings. Sen. Stennis said there would be, and I believe him."

Short-Circuiting 'Em If Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee, has his way, there may be need for committee hearings to force a Senate vote on recomputation.

He is all set to again offer his recomputation bill as an amendment to the huge weapons authorization measure—as he so successfully did last year.

On that showdown, the Senate overwhelmingly approved recomputation 82 to 14.

In the confident belief the Senate will repeat that this year, Hartke has served notice on the bipartisan leaders of the chamber of his determination to again attach his measure—to the first military bill taken up by the Senate.

"This legislation has been pending long enough," Hartke told this column, "and it's time we passed it once and for all. The President included the necessary funds in his budget, so there is absolutely no reason why Congress shouldn't vote the required legislation."

amendment is ready and waiting. I reintroduced it in January when this Congress convened, and I am set to again offer it at the first opportunity. I am certain it will again be passed by the Senate as decisively as last year. I know of no change in sentiment. Senators on both sides of the aisle are just as much for recomputation as they were last year. And I am prepared to make sure they will have the opportunity to vote on that."

Revealing Exchange Armed Services Committee staff members indicate they "expect" Sen. Stennis to resume the chairmanship in September—after the summer recess.

None would be quoted on that, but their opinion obviously is based on contact with him. It is known the Mississippian is in touch with the staff and is handling some committee and other legislative matters.

But unless Stennis personally intervenes, it is highly improbable that acting chairman Stuart Symington, D-Mo., will do anything about recomputation hearings.

On the basis of an exchange with him, he apparently doesn't even know what recomputation is—or is in any way concerned about it. Following is this startlingly revealing incident:

After the discussion with Sen. Tower, this writer sent in for Symington who was on the Senate floor. He sent back word by a page that he couldn't leave because of interest in the pending legislation. The writer thereupon instructed the page to ask Symington what he contemplated doing about recomputation hearings.

The page returned and told the dumfounded writer, "Senator Symington wants to know recomputation of what?"

"What does he mean 'recomputation of retired military pay. That's the only recomputation issue pending in Congress, and has been for years. Is he kidding or what? Go back to him and tell him what I said."

After a long pause, the page again returned and reported, "Sen. Symington said to ask Braswell about it."

T. Edward Braswell is chief counsel and staff director of the Armed Services Committee. He is a Stennis appointee, and is wholly an administrative official. Braswell has no decision making authority, and has nothing to do with setting policy.

The writer did not bother to "ask Braswell"—for the very good reason he has nothing to do with deciding whether recomputation hearings will or will not be held.

But what a joltingly revealing commentary on the acting chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee!

Wow!

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The World Almanac notes that the Lincoln Memorial, a large marble hall enclosing a heroic, larger-than-life statue of Abraham Lincoln sitting as if in meditation on a large armchair, was designed by Henry Bacon, and Lincoln's statue was made by Daniel Chester French. It was dedicated May 30, 1922.

While our engineers on the ground are magnificent in their launching preparations and techniques, it takes the experience of devoted men, such as our astronauts, to make the systems work. Personal initiative is paying off once again. We doff our hats to the work of the National Space Administration and particularly to those brave men who walk in space to make things go high up in the sky.

As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men.
