IRA No Longer Issuing Warnings On Bombings

BELFAST (UPI) — The Irish Republican Army, retaliating for the weekend deaths of two Roman Catholics, announced a major policy change Monday—it will no longer issue warnings prior to bomb attacks. IRA tactics in the past usually included telephoned alerts before bombings were carried out at public gathering places such as pubs and department stores.

But a statement issued in Belfast by the militant Provisional wing of the IRA said it would strike in the future without warning. The statement said the new IRA policy was based on the activities of a new Protestant extremist group, the Ulster Freedom Fighters (UFF), which claimed responsibility for the weekend deaths of two Roman Catholics. "In view of the activities of the Ulster Freedom Fighters, the Provisional IRA will no longer give warnings of its explosions," the statement said. Disclosure of the IRA policy change came as police appealed to the public for help in smashing the UFF.

US, USSR Sign Agreements For Artists, Joint Research

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States and the Soviet Union today signed agreements designed to increase the flow of artists and scholars between the two countries and to promote joint research of the oceans, farming and transportation. With President Nixon and Soviet party Chairman Leonid I. Brezhnev looking on, Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko signed the agreements during a brief State Department ceremony.

The pacts were the first concrete achievement of the current Nixon-Brezhnev summit talks, now in their second day. Both leaders have predicted the talks will broadly expand trade between the two former Cold War rivals and reduce the threat of nuclear war. One aspect of such cultural exchanges was the subject of a mild and orderly demonstration Monday, which neither Brezhnev nor Nixon saw. Dancers and other performers in colorful costumes paraded in front of the State Department to protest Soviet performers taking jobs from them.

The other agreements are all five-year pacts establishing U.S.-Soviet committees to meet annually on specific areas for joint research and information exchange in each of the three fields. The oceanographic agreement basically extends previous working agreements which have developed between the two countries. In the field of transportation the United States is interested in Soviet methods for coping with travel in extremely cold weather, and the Russians are interested in U.S. methods for packaging and computerizing products in transit.

Nixon and Brezhnev, who met for almost four hours of "philosophical discussions" in the first session of their summit Monday, turned their attention today to the tougher problems of trade and disarmament.

Spokesmen for both leaders said they hoped to establish a framework in which current nuclear disarmament negotiations can proceed quickly.

But before that subject came up this afternoon, Brezhnev invited members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and other key senators to lunch to try to persuade them to grant his nation trade concessions.

The Senate Monday attempted to improve the atmosphere for the summit talks by suspending for a week its hearings into the Watergate affair that have embarrassed Nixon's administration. House leaders of a discussion of the possibility of impeaching the President also announced they were delaying their inquiries.

Nixon Welcomes Brezhnev
Delighted by the opportunity to shift the focus of public attention away from Watergate, Nixon gave an effusive welcome to Soviet Communist party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev at the opening of the week-long summit Monday at the White House.

The colorful welcoming ceremony and first working session were followed Monday night by a glittering black tie dinner that saw the executive mansion bedecked with the Stars and Stripes of the United States and the hammer and sickle of the Soviet Union.

Nixon showered Brezhnev with gifts, including a dark blue Lincoln Continental sedan and a custom-made rifle.

It was the first visit to the United States for the stocky Soviet leader, who stood half-ahead shorter than his host at the welcoming rites, but he responded like an American politician, interrupting the proceedings three times to shake hands among the carefully screened crowd of 3,000 on hand for the welcome.

Traffic Barred
Security was so tight that all traffic was barred from a two-block area around the White House.

"We have recognized that despite the differences in our ideology and our social systems, we can develop normal relations," Nixon told his dinner guests, who included several prominent Jews.

"Shall the world's two strongest nations constantly confront one another in areas which might lead to war or shall we work together for peace? The world watches and listens this week to see what our answer to that question is."

Brezhnev pledged his nation to helping "overcome the inertia of the Cold War and its after-effects" both in international affairs and "in the minds of men."

"The peoples are expecting a great deal from our new meeting and I believe it is our duty to live up to those expectations," he said.

"I would venture...to express the hope and even the confidence that our present meeting will play an important role in further strengthening mutually advantageous cooperation between our countries in improving the international climate as a whole."

And in remarks that could have been addressed to allies of both countries fearful they will be forgotten in the rush toward better relations between the superpowers, Brezhnev said it should be "absolutely clear to anyone who is at least slightly familiar with the real course of events" that improvement in Soviet-American relations in no way prejudices the interests of third countries.

Nixon and Brezhnev, his dark suit bedecked with two Soviet medals, conferred for almost four hours in their initial session Monday.

Lawyer Denies Magruder Claim

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sharply disputing the testimony of Jeb Stuart Magruder, a lawyer for former White House chief of staff H. R. "Bob" Haldeman said today that Haldeman received no reports about the Watergate operation in early 1973.

Attorney John J. Wilson, speaking to reporters, also said that Haldeman did not talk with Magruder about Watergate until March this year, two months after Magruder alleged that a conversation took place.

Magruder, in the most explosive testimony of the Senate Watergate hearings, said Thursday that he kept Gordon Strachan — Haldeman's political liaison with President Nixon's re-election committee — fully informed of the planning of the Watergate operation and its subsequent cover-up.

Magruder, the deputy campaign director, said he assumed that Strachan kept Haldeman informed. Magruder also said he spoke with Haldeman in January and told him "the total context of the cover-up and the Watergate planning."

Wilson spoke to reporters at U.S. District Court, where Chief Judge John J. Sirica accepted sealed evidence that federal prosecutors have gathered against ousted White House Counsel John Wesley Dean III.

James F. Neal, assistant to Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox, told Sirica that the motion was necessary to prove that the evidence had been gathered in advance of Dean's testimony before the Senate committee now scheduled for next Tuesday. Since Dean is testifying under partial immunity from further prosecution, any evidence from his Senate testimony would not be admissible in a trial.

Wilson said that Haldeman saw Strachan infrequently, sometimes only once every two weeks, and that he received no reports from him about Watergate.

Wilson said that later, Strachan mentioned to Haldeman "one document that by some stretch of the imagination might be related to electronic surveillance."

"Bob doesn't remember that," Wilson said.

Wilson also said that Haldeman's logs show no record of any meeting with Magruder in January.

He said Magruder remarked to Larry Higbee, a Haldeman aide, in a telephone conversation in March or April—a call that Wilson said Higbee taped—that "in no way, shape or form" would Magruder's testimony harm Haldeman.

Cox Monday had "urgently" requested the hearing before Sirica. Dean had been scheduled to begin testifying at the nationally televised Senate Watergate hearings.

However, the committee late Monday voted 6-1 to postpone the hearings for one week so they would not interfere with President Nixon's summit talks with Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Dean had been expected to deliver explosive testimony, implicating high White House officials—and perhaps even the President himself—in the bug-ging of Democratic party headquarters a year ago and its subsequent cover-up.

Calley's Lawyers File For Records

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorneys attempting to overturn the conviction of Lt. William L. Calley Jr. have asked a military court to probe the role the White House played in investigating the My Lai massacre.

The attorneys filed a motion Monday with the U.S. Court of Military Appeals asking it to order the production of interviews, wiretaps, logs and other records collected by two former White House aides who have been mentioned in the Watergate case.

The lawyers cited published reports that former New York policeman John J. Caulfield and an associate, Anthony F. Ulasewicz, interviewed My Lai participants on behalf of the White House.

Caulfield and Ulasewicz worked on undercover projects for the White House for three years beginning the spring of 1969, principally under the supervision of John D. Ehrlichman, one of President Nixon's chief aides.

The two investigators told the Senate Watergate Committee they sought to ensure the silence of James W. McCord, one of the seven men convicted of burglarizing Democratic national headquarters.

Capt. J. Houston Gordon, Calley's principal military lawyer, said the attorneys asked the court to obtain the records to learn "everything the White House staff did that involved My Lai."

"We don't know what we'll find in the records because we didn't know about their involvement before," Gordon said.

Gordon said such material might raise doubts about the truthfulness of witnesses if they said one thing to the White House investigators and another at the court martial of Calley. It said the records also could supply evidence of a White House effort to convict Calley.

Calley's defenders already have charged that numerous high officials, including President Nixon and then Army Chief of Staff William G. Westmoreland, pursued a policy of punishing Calley "in order to cleanse the Army of any guilt." They have asserted that such "command influence" is grounds for overturning Calley's conviction.

Astros 'Repair' Broken Charger

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skylab's do-everything astronauts fixed a broken battery charger by slamming it with a hammer and retrieved 30,242 historic pictures of the sun today during a flawless walk in space.

Veteran commander Charles "Pete" Conrad and Paul J. Weitz, working smoothly and surely outside Skylab for one full orbit of earth, also removed an obstruction from a solar telescope to put the space station in top shape for the next crew in July.

The shock from the one-pound hammer freed a stuck electrical switch and Joseph P. Kerwin, who remained inside the station monitoring systems, reported that electricity surged into a dead battery.

"Thank you very much, gentlemen, you've done it again," said backup commander Russell L. Schweickart in mission control.

"I can't believe it," said Conrad.

It was another in a series of repairs accomplished by the crewmen of America's first space station. They have turned Skylab from a crippled spacecraft to an operational orbiting laboratory of unmatched sophistication.

The pilots, in their 26th day of orbital flight, were back in Skylab at 7:38 a.m. CDT after spending one hour and 36 minutes outside the station.

"We used a hammer and a feather out there today and did some good with both of them," Kerwin said in a report to scientists on earth.

Conrad, who freed Skylab's jammed solar wing with Kerwin on a spacewalk 12 days ago, pulled six film cassettes as big as small suitcases out of the ship's large solar observatory before he and Weitz returned to the safety of Skylab's airlock.

USES HYDROGEN, OXYGEN Pampan Builds 'Vapor' Engine

By CLAY LIVELY
Bill Gray, former Pampan living in Dallas, has completed work on a prototype engine he believes will help solve the pollution and energy crisis.

His invention (the Gray vapor generator) is an internal combustion engine that runs on hydrogen and oxygen instead of gasoline. Water is the only waste product of the engine.

The group tested the engine over the weekend in Dallas before going to Houston.

After a delay caused by a speck of solder lodged in the jet of a pilot flame, the engine was fired up and, according to one of the team, "ran like a charm."

The prototype, on which Gray has been working for three years, was built in a laboratory on the Southern Methodist University campus with the aid of Professor Gerald Wyatt, an SMU engineering instructor.

Fashioned of stainless steel and copper, the engine consists of a main cylinder which is linked to a turbine.

Hydrogen is burned with oxygen in the cylinder. Steam resulting from the combustion is so hot it would melt the cylinder walls were it not for an outer water jacket which enables the steam to be transmitted to the turbine at any temperature desired.

An ordinary automobile sparkplug, positioned atop the cylinder, connects with an automotive battery for ignition.

Gray says he built the prototype in about 40 hours at a cost of $200.

He admits there are some bugs to be worked out, but he believes the principle behind the engine is sound.

If so, the engine, the Gray vapor generator, may be an answer to the pollution and energy crisis.

Two Men Found Dead In Minisub

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — Two men trapped since Sunday in a midget submarine were found dead today when officials completed decompressing the vessel and opened the hatch.

The announcement was made by Lt. Cmdr. William R. Smith, Navy public relations officer, while the minisub mother ship, Sea Diver, was enroute to port with the submarine aboard.

Two other men aboard the vessel were removed from the minisub alive when the tiny submersible was brought to the surface at 3:55 p.m. CDT Monday.

The sub became ensnared 360 feet below the surface of the Atlantic in the wreckage of a scuttled destroyer while diving off Key West Sunday morning.

The victims of the mishap were Al Stover, 51, of Juno Beach, Fla., and Clayton Link, 31, of Binghamton, N.Y., son of the designer-builder of the mini sub.

The two who survived the accident were Archibald "Jock" Menzies, Vero Beach, Fla., and Dr. Robert Meek, 24.

All Alive About 8 p.m.
Cmdr. Don Disney, commander of the Submarine Research and Development crew from San Diego, Calif., said at the time that "all four are alive."

He later confirmed that all four men were alive when he left the Seadiver about 7 p.m. CDT Monday night.

But other naval spokesmen said they couldn't confirm the safety of all of the crewmen.

Disney said that Edwin Link, also the inventor of the Link flight trainer, was "quite relieved that his son was brought to the surface and was getting treatment."

The sub was rescued by the research ship A. B. Wood in a "last ditch attempt before the salvage ships left the scene," off Sugar Loaf Key about 20 miles east of Key West.

LA TIMES REPORTS

Connally Leaving White House

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — John Connally is leaving the White House after a clash with Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler which may have derailed Connally's chances for the Republican presidential nomination, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

In Washington, a White House spokesman said Ziegler and Connally are "on the best of terms." The spokesman said both men consider the Times story inaccurate.

Governor Connally and Ron Ziegler have talked at great length and will do so in the future," the spokesman said. "The tone and content of the Los Angeles Times story does not characterize those discussions. Implications of the story are without foundation."

The relationship between Mr. Ziegler and Governor Connally is on the best of terms."

The spokesman reiterated the White House position expressed last week that Connally has no plans to leave his unpaid post, but that he never viewed the appointment as a "long term assignment."

The Times' story about alleged friction between the two men quoted an associate of Connally who asked not to be identified.

The newspaper said Ziegler could not be reached for comment.

Heave the White House advisory position that he took just five weeks ago, after switching to the Republican party from the Democrats.

Connally told reporters in Washington Monday night he would hold a news conference this week—probably Wednesday—to clear up what he called "all those rumors" about the status of his White House job.

He made the comment during the White House state dinner for visiting Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Connally said he did not know where reports that he was dissatisfied with the advisory job came from and added: "I just wish all of you would let me speak for myself."

Connally advised President Nixon to fire Ziegler in the wake of Watergate "because Ziegler's usefulness as press secretary was limited because of Ziegler's role as a spokesman during the Watergate cover-up, and his fear that Ziegler might ultimately be tainted personally by the Watergate matter," the source said.

Connally personally confronted Ziegler and told him he should resign, the Times reported.

The President, instead of following Connally's reported advice, promoted Ziegler to special assistant and expanded his authority.

Meanwhile, reports appeared that Connally did not have access to the President and that he was upset that he had not been offered the post of secretary of state.

AT AGE 101

Last Surviving Veteran Of Indian Wars Dead

CHICAGO (UPI) — Fredrak Fraske was the last Army veteran of the American Indian wars. He died Monday at the age of 101, the last link to a long-past era.

"I don't have anything of his uniform. I don't think I have any pictures left," his daughter, Lillian Fraske, said in a quiet, sad voice.

"He was a serious man all his life," she said. "He didn't like to tell a joke."

Fraske was born in Hamburg, Germany, and emigrated to the United States with his family at the age of three. After his father died, he lied about his age to get into the Army.

"He thought he was going to get a few dollars that he could send home to his mother," she said. "His salary was $9 a month."

Served in Wyoming Territory

Fraske served in the Wyoming Territory during the 1890s. His date of service stretched back farther than any of the nation's 28.9 million veterans.

"I imagine he traveled to Wyoming on mules and wagons or maybe just mules. He said he lived mostly on beans and they used their horses' saddles as pillows," Miss Fraske said. She recalled one battle her father fought in. "It wasn't really too much of a battle with the Indians," she said. "There was a larger group of Americans so the Indians dashed to the woods because they knew they would be beaten."

"He said you had to be aware of the Indians constantly. When the wagon came out with the money to pay these soldiers off, they were waiting," she said.

When Fraske left the Army, he returned to Chicago, his daughter said, and worked as a painter and a guard.

"He didn't like to talk about his Army days. When we grow older, our minds change and we think differently," Miss Fraske said. She said he became practically blind, was often mentally confused and could not walk without support.

Waged a Public Battle Last year Miss Fraske, 68, waged a public battle to force the Veterans Administration to supply a nurse to help her care for the old soldier in his home.

Although the VA normally helps veterans only in veterans hospitals, it agreed to provide a licensed practical nurse at least on a part-time basis.

"He didn't know too much about (today's) world. When the men went up to the moon, he said, 'What are they doing there? We aren't throwing garbage on their heads. Why don't we leave the moon alone,'" Miss Fraske said.

"No matter how old he is you don't want him to leave," she said. Before he died she said he called out to her. "Lillian, Lillian are you here with me. I said yes I am here. I kissed him and he was cold already. I knew he was gone."

Miss Fraske said she wanted a military funeral for her father. "I certainly think he should have one," she said. "If they thought so much of him when he was alive, they will think of him now."

Cambodian Troops Meet On Highway

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodian troops today linked forces on a major supply highway south of Phnom Penh that had been under Communist siege for several days and for the first time in weeks no U.S. bombing was heard in the capital.

The successful ground operation followed by one day the arrival in Phnom Penh of a 13ship convoy carrying vital supplies up the Mekong River. Communist gunfire raked escort boats accompanying the convoy, killing a Cambodian soldier and wounding two others.

Reporters in the field said government troops linked up today on Highway 4. Phnom Penh's vital supply line to the nation's only seaport at Kompong Som. The reports said there was no Communist resistance and no bombing by either U.S. or Cambodian warplanes.

TO RAISE MONEY School Superintendents Pressure For Session

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Twenty school superintendents mustered by the chairman of the House Education Committee are pressuring Gov. Dolph Briscoe to call a special legislative session to raise money for impoverished school districts.

"To wait until the next session of the legislature will precipitate a real crisis in not only our district but by the entire state," G.H. Kirby, Wichita Falls school superintendent, said Monday. "The people of Wichita Falls will wholeheartedly support attacking the problem now."

Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, convened his House Education Committee overtly to gain information on the needs of the underfinanced school districts in Texas.

But the testimony presented to the committee by the 20 school superintendents, enlisted by Kubiak, and several representatives not on the House committee, was aimed at forcing Briscoe to call the legislature into special session.

Briscoe has already vowed he will not call a special session for school financing problems. Kubiak and Briscoe also were on opposite sides of the issue during the regular session. Kubiak proposed a longrange $1.8 billion plan Briscoe backed a stopgap $39 million proposal in order to keep his campaign pledge of no new taxes.

Geisel, 64, will take over as leader of Latin America's largest nation from Emilio Garrastazu Medici, who has headed the military government since 1969. Medici's four-year term expires in 1974 and he is scheduled to step down March 15.

There has not been a presidential election in Brazil since the military toppled the civilian government of Joao Goulart in a 1964 revolution. The formal election of Geisel will take place in an electoral college, but this is little more than a formality since the ruling party controls a vast majority of the votes.

Geisel will be the fourth president to take office since the revolution. Since then, Brazil has achieved one of the highest economic growth rates in the world and slowed its previously skyrocketing rate of inflation.

Medici met with his cabinet and members of the pro-government party Monday before announcing that Geisel had been selected for the job.

Medici called Geisel "the candidate who can guarantee that the nation will continue, in a climate of social and political tranquility, to work toward progress, well being and happiness."

Geisel retired from the military in 1969 after 44 years of service and became president of Petrobras, the nation's oil monopoly. Under Brazilian law, he must resign the post by July 15 to be eligible for the presidency.

Geisel is considered stern and tactful, but an able administrator. His brother is the war minister.

As leader of Petrobras, Geisel presided over an active expansion of the company in both the fields of marketing and exploration.

Son's Hair Keeps Reagan From Hotel

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan says hair style restrictions of the fashionable Clift Hotel in San Francisco will prohibit him from dining there with his 14-year-old son.

But Reagan nonetheless said Monday he opposes a bill by Assemblyman John Burton, D-San Francisco, which would make it against the law for a state-licensed business to refuse to serve customers because of their hair length or style.

"I just don't like to see government passing laws to force everybody to do whatever government thinks they should do," Reagan told a group of Sacramento area high school students at a question and answer session Monday. His son Skipper, a freshman in high school, wears his hair at shoulder length.

ATTORNEY BELIEVES Single Member Districts Ruled

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — An attorney and a member of the Texas House of Representatives believes the Supreme Court's decision upholding single member legislative districts for Dallas and San Antonio provides the wedge that will eventually force single member districts statewide.

The court ruled multimember districts are constitutional except in Dallas where such districts discriminate against blacks and in San Antonio where they discriminate against Mexican Americans.

But Rep. Bob Vale, D-San Antonio, said Monday the reason no discrimination was found in other cities which elect representatives at large was because evidence of discrimination was only presented for Dallas and San Antonio.

Vale said now other cities can file suits claiming discrimination against minorities and the court, under a precedent it set in Monday's decision, will grant them single member districts.

He said one of the first to file could be El Paso.

"There's not a single member of the House in El Paso who is a Mexican-American although Mexican Americans have a state senator," Vale said.

"Other people have got to file suit and prove that members of minorities are being unjustly denied their places in the legislature because they do not have single member districts. At large they cannot compete, because of money and so forth."

Travis County has Mexican American commissioner. They ought to be able to elect one Mexican American member to the House. Fort Worth should be able to elect a black."

Gov. William P. Hobby called the court's decision "a substantial victory in that it insures each Texas voter an equal voice at the polls. This apparently will be accomplished without totally disrupting the state's electoral system."

Two members of Congress from the Houston area said the decision will not alter the makeup of the Texas congressional delegation.

"It does not drastically alter any of the congressional districts," said Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex. "I don't believe there will be any political implications except possibly in the Dallas area. Most members don't believe there will be drastic changes."

There are approximately four million miles of streets and roads in the United States.

Vandals Break Windows At Baker School

Vandalism held the spotlight in Pampa police activity over the past 24 hours with domestic difficulties and traffic accidents close behind.

Principal Floyd Sackett reported vandals had broken 26 window panes with rocks thrown at Baker Elementary School.

Investigating officers found a rock fight had ensued between children Sunday night. Police said they believed four of these boys were responsible for the broken windows.

A car was vandalized sometime yesterday or late last night with some substance suspected to be sugar or syrup. The vehicle had been the center of a domestic dispute regarding possession.

A woman who said her husband choked her was advised to seek the help of the county attorney or a justice of the peace in the matter.

There were no injuries in the three traffic accidents investigated by officers Monday.

One involved a motorcycle out of control at an intersection, barely striking a passing pickup. A parked car was damaged by another vehicle backing up. In a third mishap one vehicle was pushed into collision with another by a third car. Citations were issued in all three accidents.

BARBECUE THURSDAY After The Armadillos, It's 'Fink Week' Time

FINK, Tex. (UPI) — It's Fink Week all week this week in Fink. But, no one may notice until Thursday.

Mayor Pat Albright will host the eighth annual National Fink Day celebration Thursday. The community's other five residents are expected to attend along with perhaps 2,000 other persons.

Mayor Albright has ordered enough barbecue beef for 1,500. There was barbecue for 1,000 last year and she ran out.

"This year Red Wilson is barbecuing enough beef for 1,500," she said. "We'll serve free barbecue from about 11 a.m. on Thursday until we run out."

The headquarters of the Fink Day will be Mrs. Albright's red store which offers food and fishing supplies for residents and tourists in the Lake Texoma area about an hour's drive north of Dallas.

She said parking for Thursday's crowds wouldn't be much of a problem since her store sits on an 11-acre plot.

The store is in a new building which was finished last winter. The Albright's lost their lease a year ago and construction on the new building was delayed for more than two months because of bad weather.

But the bad weather has left and Mrs. Albright is optimistic clear skies and warm temperatures will prevail Thursday.

"It's never rained on a Fink day yet," she said.

"Welcome to Fink, Texas" sign will greet visitors Thursday. The Fink museum will have a guest register for the dozens, or maybe hundreds of Finks expected to show up. Mrs. Albright says she has never really bothered to count the number of Finks who have shown up for their special day in the past.

The Fink population is only six this year, a loss of two from a year ago, but Mrs. Albright says things will get better.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see the population triple by next year," she said.

Kidnapers Free Victim, Fail To Collect Ransom

EVANT, Tex. (UPI) — Katherine Elam went home early from the bank Monday and as she fixed lunch she would share with her husband, Jack, the doorbell rang. She answered it and a young woman stood outside.

The woman held a gun. The woman and a man, both about 25 years old, took Mrs. Elam and left a note on the front door instructing her husband, president of Evant's National Bank, to gather $30,000 in small bills for her ransom.

According to FBI agents, Texas Rangers and Coryell County officers investigating the kidnaping, the money was dropped as instructed on a picnic table on U.S. 281, but the cash never changed hands.

But that did not keep Mrs. Elam from lying bound and gagged for hours in the brush.

Elam told officers he went home at 1 p.m. for lunch and he entered the house by the back door as usual, missing the note on the front door. He said he was not surprised by his wife's absence thinking she must have gone back to the bank for some reason.

He returned to the bank and 30 minutes later asked their daughter to check the house. She found the note but by that time the kidnapers had contacted him and instructed him how much money to gather and what to do with it.

He said he went to another bank to get the money because his bank did not have that much. He and a plainclothes officer dropped it as instructed and, as instructed, checked into a motel at Lampasas to await further instructions.

But the kidnapers apparently became afraid and while the drop was being made, they returned to where Mrs. Elam had been left and freed her.

They told her to give them 30 minutes before telling police and then they left. Mrs. Elam walked to a telephone and called the bank. Police picked her up and then retrieved the money.

But Reagan nonetheless said Monday he opposes a bill by Assemblyman John Burton, D-San Francisco, which would make it against the law for a state-licensed business to refuse to serve customers because of their hair length or style.

"I just don't like to see government passing laws to force everybody to do whatever government thinks they should do," Reagan told a group of Sacramento area high school students at a question and answer session Monday. His son Skipper, a freshman in high school, wears his hair at shoulder length.

Pentagon Civilian Posts Faced With Vacancies

WASHINGTON (UPI)—One-third of the top civilian posts in the Pentagon are vacant as the Defense Department continues to flounder in a transitional period since Melvin R. Laird vacated the post of secretary more than four months ago.

The top 33 jobs in the Pentagon are all presidential appointments. Eleven are vacant, including the post of Defense Secretary. It was held briefly by Elliot L. Richardson before he became Attorney General last month.

CIA Director James R. Schlesinger was nominated for the job a month ago but only now are Senate hearings starting on his nomination.

Six other posts are held by men who have announced their intention to leave in the near future. Eight are held by new appointees, leaving only eight occupied by holdovers from the Laird days.

The turnover is not a result of Watergate, according to officials. They say most of the vacancies opened up before the case broke open.

Approval Awaited
But some blame the length of the vacancies—the comptroller's post has been empty five months—on White House preoccupation with Watergate.

They say many names have been sent to the White House over the past few months. "The senior staff obviously had other things on their minds," one official said. "We didn't know what it was then, but it's obvious now."

One official said protocol allows each of the assistant defense secretaries to have a say in naming—or at least a veto over—his counterpart in each of the three services. Many selections for service posts have been tentatively made but are held up awaiting approval by an incoming assistant defense secretary, he said.

Four nominations that will begin to break the logjam have finally been taken up by the Senate Arms Services Committee but there remains a dearth of top management for the military's bases.

Air Force Hit
The assistant defense secretary for installations and logistics quit four months ago. His deputy, who became the acting assistant secretary, has just retired, and the assistant secretary posts for installations in all three services are vacant.

The Air Force is the worst hit of the services. Of six presidentially appointed posts, three are now vacant, including the secretaryship. In addition, two other office holders have said they will be departing. That will leave only one of the six posts filled.

On the military side, the term of the Air Force chief of staff is up July 1 and no replacement has been named. The Air Force vice chief of staff is already serving beyond his normal 30 years, and the post of Army vice chief of staff has been vacant since Gen. Alexander Haig went to the White House.

Reservists, Guardsmen Set Leave

Up-coming summer encampments and training tours for Reservists and National Guardsmen brought a reminder today from an official of the U.S. Department of Labor in Dallas.

Merle Rider, area administrator of the Department of Labor Management Services Administration, said citizen soldiers, sailors and airmen are entitled to take time off from their jobs to perform active duty for such training.

He explained they must request the time off from their employers in advance, and report back immediately after the summer tour of military duty ends.

When they return, Reservists and National Guardsmen have a legal right to be restored to their positions with the same seniority, status, pay and vacation rights they would have been entitled to if they had not been away for their training.

Federal law also prohibits any kind of discrimination against a Reservist or Guardsman because of his participation in the program, he said.

Additional information on the employment rights of Reservists and National Guardsmen may be obtained from the Labor Management Services Administration, 301 Post Office Building, Bryan and Ervay Streets, Dallas, Texas 75201.

Woman Parks At Hospital

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI)—Mr. and Mrs. Ruth W. Egan didn't want to pay a massive hospital bill so they parked the family camper outside a hospital for her last six weeks of pregnancy.

Mrs. Egan hoped to return home with her newborn baby girl after spending the seventh week in the hospital.

It all started on May 3 when Mrs. Egan's doctor told her she had a condition called placenta previa—a condition that can mean serious hemorrhaging and endanger the life of an unborn child.

"I had to decide whether to have the baby then or spend the remainder of my pregnancy in bed," she said. "Norman (her husband) and I decided we wanted to give our baby a better chance, but we didn't think we could afford the hospital bills so we had to come up with a solution," she said.

Their solution was the family camper.

The LDS Hospital administration gave the Egan permission and they parked their 11-foot camper outside the emergency exit.

"I became terribly jealous of other mothers arriving at the hospital with their suitcases. But it's all been worth it. Our little girl is so beautiful," she said.

Colette—the Egan's sixth child—was delivered by cesarean section Thursday night. She weighed a healthy 7 pounds, 3 ounces.

"My husband had a phone in the camper, so he could conduct most of his contracting business from the camper. And, when he had to leave, our friends from Holladay took turns staying with me. I had to have someone with me all the time—in case something happened."

"Everyone was so nice. I didn't have time to get depressed. But, it's been seven weeks since I've been home. I hope I can remember what it looks like."

Did the seven-week ordeal end Mrs. Egan's desire to have more children?

"We have four girls and two boys now. I'm looking forward to having two more," she added.

Haiphong Wearing Gray Look

SAIGON (UPI)—It looked like someone had taken a large paint brush and swished the place gray," said a recent visitor to North Vietnam's port of Haiphong.

The visitor, who speaks fluent Vietnamese, spent nearly a month in North Vietnam, much of it in and around Haiphong. He is familiar with Vietnamese customs and with life in South Vietnam. Because he may wish to return to North Vietnam, he asked that his name be withheld.

Buildings in Haiphong appear not to have been painted for years, he said, and their exteriors are gray and turning black. There was no sign of any new construction since the departure of the French in 1954, and the only structures being repaired were those that had suffered American bomb damage.

"Everyone on the streets wore black, white, gray, brown and blue," he said, all solid colors, no prints or patterned cloth.

Silence Startling
"I never saw an Ao Dai," he said, referring to the split dress worn over trousers that is the traditional national dress for both men and women in Vietnam.

The visitor found that "the silence was startling" in comparison with other busy Oriental and Occidental port cities, primarily because of the lack of motor vehicles.

While in Haiphong, he said he saw only five autos—four of them on government business—and two motorcycles, one of them ridden by a policeman on patrol. He saw more trucks but, even though truck traffic was scanty, he sometimes saw traffic jams at street intersections, several involving only three trucks.

Drivers refused "to yield an inch to anyone," he said.

Pedestrians too sometimes caused traffic jams, refusing to yield room on streets to the few passing vehicles.

"I wondered in how many other ways the Communist regime has experienced difficulty in establishing order over the naturally unruly Vietnamese," he said.

Only Two Theaters
For Haiphong's more than a quarter of a million people, the visitor saw only two movie theaters, two pharmacies, two restaurants and one beauty parlor in a five-mile stretch of the downtown section.

"A typical commercial block had four clothing stores, a tailor, two barber shops, a bicycle repair shop, a tobacco stand and a shop selling oil lamps, mirrors and picture frames," the visitor said. "The next block had the same assortment of stores with the addition of a book store."

He said the typical store was similar to Saigon's black market stands—a table or two set up in front of the owner's home.

Although North Vietnam has always officially denied that it has troops in South Vietnam, the visitor found that many of its citizens freely admitted it. When he asked a North Vietnamese photographer where he had obtained his Japanese-made camera, the camera owner replied, "We picked it up at Khe Sanh in 1968" (Khe Sanh is the former U.S. Marine base besieged by the Communists that year.)

The visitor said most North Vietnamese believed the Communists controlled much larger areas of South Vietnam than is the case. They expressed disbelief when he told them he had traveled freely through the Mekong Delta without meeting Communist road blocks on the highways.

Some 8,000 miles of new roads—enough to girdle the nation—are added annually to the United States highway system.

WASHINGTON WINDOW

Demos Suggest Nixon Resign For 'Coalition'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The suggestion is being made, mostly by Democrats, that President Nixon resign in a magnanimous gesture to get the government moving again.

Some—again mostly Democrats—go further and say that Vice President Spiro T. Agnew should also quit so that a coalition government could be formed with the aid of Congress, to take over for the remainder of the Nixon second term.

There's no reason to suspect that either will happen. But the suggestion has stirred a debate in Washington on the merits of resignation versus impeachment during a time of crisis, such as Watergate.

For Removal
Those who propose that Nixon and Agnew resign argue: —The government is paralyzed now; the nation cannot wait until the outcome of Watergate to end the paralysis; that impeachment is too tortuous a process for the nation to endure at such a critical time, so why go through such a traumatic experience when a much simpler method is available?

—If Nixon and Agnew were to resign, they would not be admitting any wrongdoing; they merely would be acting in the national interest, recognizing that paralysis existed.

—That a coalition government is the best way to get the nation moving again, even while the Watergate drama unfolds to its last act.

—A coalition government would be able to work closely with Congress; because it was clearly innocent of any Watergate connection, it would have the confidence of the American people.

—The temporary head of the coalition government would have no political debts and would be foreclosed from seeking election in 1976.

—Nixon and Agnew would be doing what Nixon asked top aides to do—H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and Attorney General Richard Kleindienst—at the height of the Watergate scandal. The President had no evidence linking any of them to Watergate, yet got them to resign. He and they recognized that their usefulness had ended because of events perhaps beyond their control, and so they resigned in the national interest in order to allow new people to take over who could carry on the business of government.

Against Removal
Those who dismiss the suggestions for the President to resign argue:

—Removal of the President from office is too important to indulge in any tampering or skirting with the Constitution.

—Let's not kid ourselves over what a resignation under Watergate circumstances would be: it would be a forced resignation under fire, and it would be compounding the difficulty by forcing the resignation of the vice president who was not linked in any way to the scandal.

New Zealand: New Frontier for Americans

By DICK KLEINER
(First of Three Parts.)

QUEENSTOWN, New Zealand (NEA)—There's no smog, no traffic jams, no unemployment and practically no problems. Small-town New Zealand is pretty much like the United States was 50 years ago, and maybe that's why so many thousands of Americans are immigrating here annually.

Parker Mudge is one of them. A product of Lynn, Mass., a veteran test pilot and commercial pilot, he came to New Zealand in 1963 and he's happy here. He says he has no homesickness at all and plans to live the rest of his life here.

Last year, 11,000 Americans were admitted to New Zealand. Chances are about a half of them will eventually quit and return home, but the other half will stay. For them, it is a chance to live a near-pioneer style life, something that can no longer be done in the United States. "Many Americans can't make it here," Mudge says. "It's a different life. The major problem for most of them is that they don't realize, when they come, that this is a foreign country, and it is."

"Despite the similarity in language, there are major differences in food and customs. There's no central heating in most homes—my wife had chilblains our first winter here."

Mudge flies now for Mount Cook Airlines, a small domestic New Zealand carrier. His wife is the secretary to an accountant. Their daughter, five years old when they arrived, is now thinking about college. Mudge has offered her her choice of where she wants to go—New Zealand or the United States—and she thinks she'll stay here.

To accommodate the increase in immigrants, as well as tourists, Air New Zealand has added direct DC-10 service, via Hawaii or Tahiti, from Los Angeles to Auckland. And the inbound planes are generally jammed.

But the New Zealand government's immigration policy is changing. While it is still ostensibly free and open, in practice every case is judged individually. They will gladly admit anyone who would immigrate whose trade is needed but will bar people in already overcrowded trades.

Mudge says he came to New Zealand not because of any dissatisfaction with life in the United States, "but because I wanted a life of pioneering." He's still a U.S. citizen and isn't about to give that up.

He came out with a stake of $2,000 and a vow to stay two years at least. He says he had to dip deeply into that stake at first, "but by the end of the first year I'd paid myself back."

Carolyn Oliver is another American—she's from Lewiston, Idaho—who is now a Queenstown resident. She's the barmaid at a local hotel. She's happy here, too, although she says she'd "give anything to have a real hot dog."

"I was surprised, at first," she says, "at how much resentment there was here against the U.S. But I found it is not only against Americans, but Australians, too—it's against tourists, really. Most tourists are so loud and boisterous."

"One lady said to me, 'You know, you're not at all what I expected an American to be.'"

Mudge says he's detected no anti-American feeling, however. He says that Americans are welcomed here—providing they aren't out for a job a Kiwi (New Zealander) could handle.

He has one message for any American who comes to New Zealand, either as immigrant or tourist:

"Tell the Americans who come here not to tip. They're ruining it for New Zealanders."

Dear Abby

She wants to marry but mother won't sign

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am nearly 17, and have two kids. They are both by Willie, who is 19. He's in the Army now. We're not married because my mom wouldn't sign for me. When I got pregnant the first time Willie wanted to marry me, but I was only 15, and Mom said I was too young. She said the same thing when I got pregnant the second time.

I work as a waitress, and I live with Mom. She's practically raising my kids. Once in a while I go out with a guy just to get away from the house so my mom made me go on the pill. I guess she doesn't trust me. She stands right there and says she wants to SEE me take it every morning. She says as long as I'm living with her she doesn't want any more kids to raise. This really bugs me. How can I get my mom to sign for me when Willie comes home in two months? WILLIE'S GIRL

DEAR ABBY: You can't wait until you are of age. Then if you and Willie still want to marry, you won't need anybody's permission.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a lonesome widower for a year. Three months ago I ran into a nice widow I had known in school 40 years ago. We are very much infatuated with each other.

The complications are: She has an ideal home in a large town. My home has fewer conveniences and is in a smaller town.

Each wishes the other to come to their home to live. What is the custom or general practice? PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: There is no "rule" concerning which house you should live in. Talk it over between you and decide where you will BOTH be happiest. If she refuses to move, then it's up to you to decide whether you would be happier without her in your own home, or WITH her in hers.

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently died of a heart attack. He was in his 50s and was in good health until his death.

His brothers and sisters are all furious with me because I didn't notify them of his death until after he was buried. [They all live out of the state.]

When I phoned each one, they said: "Why didn't you CALL me? I would have come in for the funeral!" They feel that I cheated them out of paying their last respects to their brother.

Abby, this bunch are all very well-heeled financially; they are constantly traveling all over the world. In the last five years ALL of them have flown right over our town on their way to some exotic vacation spots, and they have never stopped to see us. We wrote, phoned, and begged them to visit us, but none of them had the time.

When my husband died I decided that since his family didn't think enough of him to visit him once while he was alive, I didn't feel like entertaining them at his funeral. Bitterness on my part? You bet! I know how my husband's heart ached when they didn't stop.

Print this. It may give other thoughtless, selfish relatives a jolt. It's later than they think. PASSED UP

CONFIDENTIAL TO "BEEN THERE WITH CONTACT LENSES": Brother removed his contact lens at the dinner table in order to bug Sister, who was extremely squeamish about such things. Had he removed it at the table because he had an eyelash, air bubble, or foreign matter under the lens, I'd have said: "Take it out," and nuts to Sister.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Bridge score table showing results for North, West, East, and South (D) with various card hands and scores.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Fred Karpin has been collecting bridge hands for the last 40 years. Every so often he produces a book that shows how and why these hands were played.

Today's hand as played by Sam Stayman is taken from his latest book, "The Art of Card Reading at Bridge."

Sam opened one no-trump. His partner looked at his 21 high card points; wasted no time with the Stayman convention and just bid seven.

Sam looked over dummy and saw that he had 12 top tricks and two places to get the 13th. The contract was a very good one, but careless play would have left him one trick short.

Sam wasn't careless. He started by cashing three spades and discarding a club from dummy. East dropped the deuce of diamonds on the third spade.

Then Sam tackled hearts only to have East show out on the third lead of that suit also.

The next two tricks were taken by dummy's queen and jack of diamonds and everyone followed.

Now Sam stopped to count. West had started with six spades, four hearts and at least two diamonds. He couldn't have more than one club.

Sam cashed dummy's ace of clubs; led the 10 of clubs to take the sure-thing finesse against East's jack; cashed his queen of clubs; entered dummy with the ace of diamonds and made his grand slam.

The ABCs of pension plans

By GERARD M. BRANNON
(First of Four Parts.)

(Dr. Brannon is director of tax research for Tax Analysts and Advocates, a Washington, D.C., organization which provides research and analysis for the news media and engages in a public interest tax law practice. He also is research professor at Georgetown University and formerly was director of the Office of Tax Analysis in the Treasury Department.)

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — About half the working people in the United States are covered by pension plans established by their employers. These plans are now the subject of much open debate and quiet political maneuvering in Washington. What is ultimately involved is how ordinary people make out under these plans when they retire. Here are a few pertinent questions and answers.

Social Security Q And A

(Have you a question about social security? Address it to Howard L. Weatherly, Branch Manager, Social Security Administration, 1541 N. Hobart, Pampa, Texas 79065. You will receive an answer in this column or by mail.)

By HOWARD L. WEATHERLY
Q. I understand I can make more money this year and draw all of my social security benefits.

A. That's right. This year you can earn $2,100 in wages or self employment before it affects your benefits.

Q. I am 67 years old and still working. Last year I made over $4,000 and received no social security benefits. I understand that I may receive some benefits this year. Is that true?

A. It is possible that, with the changes in the earnings limitation you can receive some benefits. Your local social security office would be able to give you a definite 'yes' or 'no' to this question.

Q. I retired last year and this Jan. 1 I received an annual report card to fill out. Will I get one of these every year?

A. Not necessarily. You probably received a report form this year because your total earnings last year (including earnings prior to retirement) exceeded $1,680. Unless you return to work this year or in a later year and earn over $2,100 you will not be required to complete another report.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Jed wonders about the 2 vital languages required for success in business, industry and all the professions. One reason why physicians are often unduly criticized is their failure to employ that second essential language!

CASE X-538: Jed T., aged 26, is a young physician. "Dr. Crane," he began, "I got in late during your recent lecture to our group, so I missed part of what you said.

"But I was impressed by your remark that business and professional men need to be bilinguals in order to attain maximum success.

"What 2 languages did you have in mind as so essential?"

USE 2 LANGUAGES

Here in America, those 2 languages so vital to complete success are both English!

"But, Dr. Crane," Jed protested, "how can there be 2 English languages?"

Well, one of them is the technical vocabulary that is linked with every business or profession.

In law, for example, our attorneys employ technical terms such as "homicide," "manslaughter," "mayhem," "change of venue," etc.

These are ABC terms to them, but actually X-Y-Z even to the usual college graduate of a Liberal Arts school.

Many physicians and dental surgeons likewise become so familiar with their own technical jargon that they use it on 4th graders, failing to realize that such terminology is "Greek" or unknown even to highly educated adults in other fields!

When I addressed a dental convention at New Orleans, I cited this phrase that was printed in the local newspaper: "... the buccal aspect of the 3rd molar."

A dental surgeon was being quoted and I merely lifted that phrase to illustrate my stress on the need to talk the language of the customer, patient, pupil, client or parishioner if we wish to motivate them.

For people are NOT motivated properly when they don't understand. So I pointed out the fact that among my 300 senior Liberal

WHAT IS AN EMPLOYER PENSION PLAN?

It is a deal in which employers put funds aside to finance retirement benefits for employees. Sometimes it is set up as a profit-sharing plan, but the big money is involved in arrangements that ultimately provide retirement benefits.

WHY ARE PENSION PLANS A TAX ISSUE?

Because they involve tax benefits. Normally when an employer pays wages, the wages are deducted by the employer and taxes paid by the employee. In a qualified pension plan, the employer gets the deduction but there is no employe tax until the money is paid out as retirement benefits. In addition, the money in the plan can be invested and not even the investment income is taxed until it is paid out in retirement benefits.

This is a good deal for the beneficiaries. Postponing the tax for up to 30 years means that more money is available to invest and this will produce investment income which can be used to increase benefits. Moreover, the beneficiary probably will be in a lower tax bracket than he was when money was put into the pension fund in his behalf. If he had taken the money as salary, more of it would have gone to taxes than when it is paid to him in the form of pension benefits.

DOES EVERY PENSION PLAN GET THIS BENEFIT?

To get these benefits the employer's plan must be qualified which means that it meets some not-very-stringent rules which require that the plan not favor high-income or stockholder employees. Practically speaking, employers don't set up plans unless they are qualified.

One hooker in this is that the plan must go through the employer. If an ordinary worker just decides to start putting some of his cash wages into his own retirement plan, there is no tax benefit.

YOU AND YOUR PENSION

ASK DICK KLEINER

Historic West

DEAR DICK: Just how old is Mae West? And will she be doing anything more in show business? — RALPH BJORKLUND, Bemidji, Minn.

DEAR MR. BJORKLUND: The World Almanac, which is pretty accurate, says Mae was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., in 1892, which makes her 81. She doesn't look a day over 81, either — but she doesn't look a day under it, for that matter. I am not a big Mae Westophile. I think she should have hung up her spikes years ago and been a nice legend. She probably won't do anything more, except maybe talk show appearances. At her age, breathing is a triumph.

DEAR DICK: Are the Oscars honest? Would you explain the voting procedure, please. — MARYLN GILLIS, Sioux Falls, Iowa

DEAR MS. GILLIS: Books could be written in answer to your question. Basically, yes, they're honest — at least, nobody falsifies ballots or deliberately miscounts. But a case could be made that they are dishonest, at least indirectly. This indirect dishonesty takes several forms — first, usually only successful pictures are considered; second, there is a vigorous ad campaign conducted in Hollywood's trade papers and, of course, the wealthiest stars and studios do the most advertising; and third, studios bring pressure to bear on their employes to vote their way.

The voting procedure, for the major categories, starts with the members of the various craft branches (writers, musicians, actors) voting for the nominees. Then the full membership of the academy votes on the nominees and thus selects the ultimate Oscar winners.

DEAR DICK: What will happen to the three stars of The Mod Squad, now that their series has gone off? — CAROL ANNE SHAW, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

DEAR MS. SHAW: That's what they would like to know. As so often happens with kids who hit it big — too big, too fast — on TV shows, these three (Michael Cole, Clarence Williams III and Peggy Lipton) apparently developed large cases of cranial edema, otherwise known as swelled heads. They began to believe their publicity, and figured they could make it as movie stars. That's what they want. Maybe they'll make it. Maybe not. The odds are against them, because lots of others have tried and failed. They have talent and looks, but there is all the difference between TV and movie stardom as there is between being a college football star and a great pro.

DEAR DICK: Would you please tell me the age difference between Desi Arnaz Jr., Liza Minnelli and Peter Sellers? — LARRY KRAMER, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

DEAR MR. KRAMER: Reading from young to old, Desi is 20, Liza is 27 and good old Pete is 48. For Liza, it was a case of going from the sublime to the decrepit.

DEAR DICK: Is Katharine Hepburn still living? — CHARLES FURMAN, Oklahoma City.

DEAR MR. FURMAN: The sure is. She hasn't done much acting lately, but I hear she's about ready to sign for a big role in a major film. Only thing holding up the deal is the writers' strike. When that's settled, the announcement will be made.

Got a show business question? Ask Dick Kleiner. Send your questions to Dick Kleiner, care of the newspaper. Questions of general interest will be answered in the space. Kleiner regrets he is unable to answer questions personally.

The Lighter Side

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A survey of motorists in Great Britain shows that drivers who polish their automobiles are less likely to have accidents than those slovenly blokes who tool around in unsightly, dingy vehicles.

This is something our own National Highway Safety Administration might do well to keep in mind.

The safety agency has ordered the U.S. auto industry to install air bags in 1976 models to protect the occupants during collisions. But there are indications the deadline may be extended.

If so, the agency possibly could achieve the same results by setting up federal minimum polishing standards for cars.

In Love With Cars
Getting and keeping unshiny vehicles off the road should substantially reduce the traffic death toll.

The British survey appears to corroborate the school of psychologists who hold that many motorists are in love with their cars and that polishing is a form of caress.

A motorist who has spent 20 or 30 minutes affectionately stroking his beloved sedan obviously is going to be pretty cautious when he gets behind the wheel, lest he run into something smudgy. Presumably, this also is true

WHAT'S ALL THE SHOUTING ABOUT?

There are a lot of things to shout about, but it boils down to two main issues.

(1) The security of the pension promise. In a very large proportion of the cases an employee who thought that some of his earnings were going into a pension plan may find that there is nothing for him when he retires. This can be because the plan itself requires that an employee stay with the same employer until near retirement in order to be assured of benefits. (The technical term is to have a vested interest in his benefit.) Even with vested benefits, however, an employee can get much less than he expected if the employer doesn't put in enough money to cover the promises. The tax law does not require full funding.

(2) The extension of pension plan benefits to more people. At present, only about half of the workers are covered by pension plans and not much more than 50 per cent will retire with pension benefits.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Bankers Seeking Major Moves

By PHIL NEWSOM

Window on the World

No Action on Money Ills

London bankers say the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in September is unlikely to achieve anything useful to cure the world's paper money ills unless there is some new move soon by the major monetary powers towards reforming the world monetary system. Opinion is divided with one school led by the United States which wants to demonitize gold and another led by France which favors the return of the dollar's convertibility to gold. The United States is said for the moment to be content to let the dollar float along as it is.

New Hope for Concorde

British hopes are rising that China will buy Concorde supersonic planes now that Russia's Concorde has suffered a grave setback. The Chinese have been looking at Concorde and other planes during their official stay in Britain and are known to be interested also in military planes, especially the vertical take-off Harrier planes. But the sale of military planes is problematical because of security considerations.

Action Along the Suez?

Israeli military men would not be surprised if the Arabs were to generate some sort of incident along the Suez to emphasize Mid-East tensions during the Nixon-Brezhnev talks. The incident could consist merely of buzzing Israeli positions along the canal. They do not expect an incident that would cause Israeli casualties or provoke an Israeli counter strike.

Pompidou's health
The question of President Georges Pompidou's health continues to reverberate through the Paris political and diplomatic world. In an outburst against newsmen besieging him at his country home during a week's vacation, Pompidou commented: "You give me a pain." Apparently Elysee palace announcements that he is simply suffering from recurring influenza have not convinced everybody and the latest whisper in high circles is that Pompidou will go on television after the summer holidays and put his position plainly before the French people. What that position is remains a matter of conjecture.

PKM ELECTRONIC INDICATOR — Jack Curtis McDowell, employee of John T. King and Sons, is shown demonstrating a new device manufactured by King which measures the amount of oil on top of salt water in tanks, etc. See the device at John T. King and Sons, 918 S. Barnes, or call 669-3711.

King Has New Helper

John T. King and Sons is now manufacturing an electronic device which can measure the feet of oil floating on top of unwanted salt water in oil storage tanks.

The PKM Electronic Indicator can be an invaluable aid to a production foreman. The indicator can be used in all sorts of tanks — not just storage tanks — but well testers, sales tanks and salt water disposal tanks can be examined with the device and the level of oil measured.

A novel thing about this new invention is that it can be used in completely plastic coated tanks.

"Many a barrel of oil has gone down the sink," John T. King says, "because the pumper failed to have a friend tell him how many feet of oil he had sitting on his salt water."

Now he has that helper, the PKM-9 Electronic Thief Gauge, now being manufactured by John T. King and Sons, 918 S. Barnes here in Pampa.

King also carries a deep stock of mechanical seals for various types of pumps, such as Worthington, Marlow, Gould and Roper.

Other items on King's shelves are the famous line of Lovejoy couplers and spiders, fitted for all sizes of pumps and motors.

Also available are Kenco barrel sight feed gauges, safety switches, Major Engineering Tank Fluid Level indicators and Frank W. Murphy Mfg. products — allied to the protection of expensive running motors, compressors and the like.

For all your oilfield needs, go by John T. King and Sons, 918 S. Barnes or call 669-3711.

DO-IT-YOURSELF Condition Your Air Conditioner

By MR. FIX

Spring is the time to see that you are ready to cope with summer's indoors. If you have an air conditioner, get it set for summer use now. Take electric fans out of storage and make certain they are in condition to do you some good.

Fan blades and guards should be dusted and wiped clean. Look for oiling points on the motor and lubricate with light machine oil.

Take a good look at the electric cord for breaks in the insulation, frayed areas or a damaged plug.

Replace the plug if it is damaged. If the cord is damaged near the plug end, trim off the damaged part and attach the plug to the remaining wire if this does not leave too short a cord.

If the whole cord is in bad shape or has a break near the fan, replace it. With a little searching you can see where the cord enters the fan. Generally a base plate that is removable, or some similar arrangement, covers the place where the wire is connected.

Disconnect the old wire and connect new wiring in the same manner. The cord may be fastened to wires inside the unit, held in place with solderless connectors. Hang on to these and use them again.

Window air conditioners that have been in storage should not be put directly back into service. Find a level surface and place the unit upright and leave it there for 24 hours. This will allow the oil in the sealed system to drain back into the compressor.

CHECK WINDOW INSTALLATION. YOU MAY NEED NEW STRIP SEALS.

Dust and vacuum all surfaces. Outlets and inlets for air should get special attention. Soap and water are O.K. on plastic surfaces. Rusted areas on metal surfaces should be sanded and painted.

Give the unit a test run while it is still sitting on the floor. Pick a day when the temperature outside is in the mid-60s and in the 70s inside.

Run the unit for about 10 minutes. See how it cools. Listen for noises that are out of the ordinary. If it doesn't cool or if there are suspicious sounds, have the unit checked by a professional.

Oil the unit as outlined in the manufacturer's instructions. Put in a new filter if it is replaceable. Clean it if it is the permanent type.

Units left in the window all winter will need uncovering and oiling and a new filter. Check for rust spots.

If you have hung on to the instructions and parts list that came with the unit, you will have no trouble with routine maintenance. Small parts that need replacing should be ordered now.

Check the window installation. You may need new rubber or sponge stripping that keeps the opening sealed.

Plug the unit into the outlet which will be used this summer. You may have added items to the circuit since you last used the air conditioner. See if the unit blows a fuse when you start it up. If so, try to rearrange electrical items so that they will be distributed over other circuits. Don't wait until summer to find out you are going to have trouble.

Volkswagens No. 1 Import

DETROIT (UPI) — Many American parts are involved in building Volkswagens, the No. 1 auto import.

The shopping list for VW in the United States this year will involve transactions valued at more than $100 million, says Bruno Dehler, manager of Volkswagen of America's export purchasing department.

The devaluation of the U.S. dollar has made American suppliers considerably more competitive, says Dehler.

"However, since we have been expanding our purchases over here for years, we cannot trace all of the increase to the devaluation."

The $100 million being spent this year is going for raw materials, production machinery, spare parts, after-market accessories, service diagnostic equipment and components for new VWs.

More than 25 items made in North America, supplied by 20 American and Canadian companies, are used in the production of new VWs.

Expenditures up in the United States this year, expenditures for basic components will climb to $25 million, compared with last year's $15 million. In Canada, original equipment purchases should increase by $2 million to $5.6 million.

Not all purchases made through Volkswagen of America are shipped to Germany. An estimated $7.8 million will be spent this year with Dow Chemical for magnesium, some of which will be used in VW factories in Brazil and Mexico, where VW is the leading car producer.

VW of Brazil also purchases a significant amount of machinery in the United States.

Who gets the benefit of this overseas trade? Among the larger purchases — above $1 million — of materials and components planned for 1973 are seat belts from the Jim Robbins Co. of Knoxville, Tenn.; glass from Combustion Engineering of Lancaster, Ohio and Pennsauken, N.J.; alternators from Motorola's Arcade, N.Y.; plant, steering wheels from Swedish Crucible of Detroit; and a recently announced purchase of batteries from Gould Inc.'s Dallas plant.

Base Price Increases All told, says Dehler, VW's purchases of production materials and components in 1973 are expected to increase by more than 50 per cent.

The base price of a VW Beetle has increased from $1,780 at the beginning of the 1971 model year to $2,299 after the most recent increase in mid-May.

The purchase of equipment is two-way. When General Motors began production of the Chevrolet Vega in 1970, the three- and four-speed manual transmissions were imported from its West German subsidiary, Adam Opel, until demand grew large enough to warrant production in this country.

U.S. safety and emissions legislation accounts for some of the purchases VW will be making in this country.

Among developments this year will be expansion of seat belt purchases to include inertial reel belts to meet 1974 standards, automatic transmission parts from the National Seat Division of Federal Mogul and a stepped-up export of air conditioners from VW of America's subsidiary, Volkswagen Products Corp. of Fort Worth, Tex.

Leonardo Again Leonardo da Vinci probably invented the first mechanical air conditioner, a 12-foot waterwheel that scooped river-cooled air into a conduit that eased the heat in the palace of the Duke of Milan.

Auto air conditioning is another feature of the stores. Operating with the slogan, "complete stock auto parts," Dixie has in the stores such items as mufflers and tailpipes, starters, generators, shock absorbers, fuel pumps and brake shoes.

All automobile accessories are available. Professional and backyard mechanics are reminded that for the best replacement parts on any model of any make of automobile, they can give Dixie a call.

If they don't have the part or accessory in stock, they will be happy to make quick and special orders.

Years of successful business and many satisfied customers in the Pampa area testify to the quality of merchandise and service offered by the stores.

PERSONAL FINANCE Mutual Funds, Hot And Just Warm

By CARLTON SMITH

The rules for picking a mutual fund — one you can live with comfortably, over a long period of time — have changed in the past few years.

Until things started falling apart in 1969, it was great sport to follow the "mutual fund derby" and watch the high-performance funds roaring around the track, vying for honors such as the "top 10" list, or "top 25."

And small wonder that investors flocked to the winners. There were at least seven funds, in 1967, that doubled their investors' money. One fund posted a 300 per cent gain.

But then came 1969, beginning the worst period the market had seen since the '30s, and people with money in the performance funds were reminded of a Newton's law of the market: What goes up fast comes down fast. As the hot funds of '67 plummeted, you could stand on almost any corner of Wall Street and hear voices saying, "I told you so."

These voices went on to tell the mutual fund investor that now he had learned his lesson about chasing after those flighty blondes, the volatile performance funds, and he should settle down with a nice solid fund that could cook and sew, and take care of him in his old age.

So now we know. All we want is a fund that just does a little better than average — which shouldn't be too hard to find. There are some 500 funds in the country, among which there should be plenty of just "better than average" funds that stay out there in the kitchen with their aprons on, making bread.

A monthly magazine that analyzes fund performance — "FundScope," published in Los Angeles — in its current issue rates 481 funds on their eight-year performance records, 1965 through 1972.

Make a guess as to how many funds were above average in all eight years.

Two. Just two. Another eight managed to stay above average in seven of the eight years, and 22 were above the middle line six times during the period.

This seems to say that your chances of picking a fund that consistently above average are not very good. In fact, the FundScope figures show you have less than one chance in five of picking a fund that will be above average more than 50 per cent of the time.

And if your crystal ball can come up with the name of a fund that will be consistently above average, what investment results can you expect?

The following figures show the value, at year-end 1972, of an assumed investment of $1,000, less sales commission if any, at the beginning of 1965. And for something to shoot at, the fund that consistently shows up at the top of all the lists, in terms of long-range performance, is Rowe Price New Horizons. There the $1,000 investment grew to $5,953.

The two funds rated above average in all eight years by FundScope produced results of $2,693 and $2,078.

To compare that with the heroes of yesteryear, we took the top five funds of 1965, as rated by FundScope, and calculated the investment result. In order of their 1965 ranks, beginning with No. 1, $3,064, $3,265, $1,820, $703 (when No. 4 was last heard from), and $2,128.

If all this leaves you still confused about how to pick the right fund — think of all the company you've got.

Storage Industry Non-rational

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gross profits of the moving and storage industry are "unconscionable," says a Harvard Business School graduate who got into the business almost by accident.

"Moving and storage seems to be America's last nonrational business," E. F. Stenfoson told United Press International.

He heads Stenfoson & Sons, Inc., the former Kiraly Moving & Storage Co., New York. He took over the presidency of Kiraly last year when its owner decided to move to Florida and look after real estate interests.

Stenfoson, who was a fighter pilot in World War II and spent some months in a German prison camp, worked for various advertising agencies and for Best Foods and CPC International, the former Corn Products Co. He went to Kiraly simply to reorganize its marketing program.

He was shocked "I was shocked to discover how inefficient and uninnovative this industry is and how prevalent is the low estimate followed by a bill for two or three times as much without proven justification," he said.

He promptly persuaded the owner of Kiraly to cut rates from 11 to 14 per cent. Then he bought the company.

"The industry seems to lack rhyme or reason. Its last major contribution to the 20th century was the mover's doll," he said. "It is moribund and totally unresponsive to the consumer movement."

The sweeping change in American society after World War II which made Americans so mobile caused movers to feel they could charge ever higher prices, pass on wage increases, make unrealistically low estimates and then present bills for two to three times the estimate, Stenfoson said.

It's not surprising, he said, that a number of the bigger companies are in trouble with the Federal Trade Commission. "They have been cited for frequent failure to fulfill their orders on time, thus putting customers in violation of their leases," Stenfoson said.

Stenfoson said the small local movers tend to "march in lock step with big companies," thereby reducing price competition.

He said large moving companies have attempted to put pressure on him to rescind his tariff cuts but so far have kept their objections within legal limits.

The solution, Stenfoson said, is real competition — "consumers should demand flat contracts from movers with the total price guaranteed in advance."

HANOVER, N.H. (UPI) — A machine that delays a person's sight of his own actions by 1-30 of a second is making Dr. William M. Smith wonder if one sip of whiskey isn't enough to make driving difficult.

The Dartmouth College psychologist is working with a recently devised television apparatus that can slow down, in units of 1-30 of a second, the time between a subject's action and its playback on a television screen. The subject watches the screen rather than his hands and tries to control his actions that way.

That brief delay in seeing what you are doing can be enough to make simple actions such as drawing a straight line or writing your name "extremely difficult," Smith said.

Similar Delays in Driving Similar delays occur in driving, he said, with a delay of about 1-15 of a second between the time you turn the wheel of an automobile and the time the car starts to respond.

"You make the movement before you see any effects of it," he said. "Even such a slight delay we find disturbs behavior quite a bit."

"If that kind of disturbance is also subject to small amounts of alcohol, you might be amplifying the effects of the alcohol through the time lapse."

In other words, one small drink might have a much greater effect on a person's ability to drive than now is believed, he said.

"This time lapse research technique might turn out to be a very sensitive indicator of the effects of alcohol and might be

Judge Sirica kept faith in system

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Senior Editor
(Second in a Five-Part Series.)

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — The morning of Friday, March 23, 1973, was clear but cool. Not unusual for an early spring day here. The cherry blossoms were endeavoring to make their annual comeback. Otherwise, it was a typical Washington day. At 10 a.m., one of the most explosive moments in American history would occur.

The second-floor court room of the United States District Court House was uncommonly packed, and under unusually large and stern guard. Spectators who jammed the court room were required to pass through metal detector.

Chief Judge John Joseph Sirica appeared at 10 sharp. He looked in his black robes as severe as his reputation. He is supposed to throw the book at the convicted. Not today. He had delayed sentencing on James McCord, one of the conspirators in the Watergate burglary. McCord had presented him with a letter he, McCord, had written to the court. Judge Sirica had received the letter on Wednesday in his chambers, before a stenographer and a few other witnesses. He found it one of the most remarkable of documents. He sealed it, and said he would read it aloud on Friday.

Judge Sirica is 69 years old, but his dark wavy hair (Washington rumor has it that he dyes his hair) makes him look younger. His eyebrows are heavy, lips are thin and his nose seems a bit flattened, perhaps from his days as an amateur boxer.

He now read the letter smoothly, unemotionally.

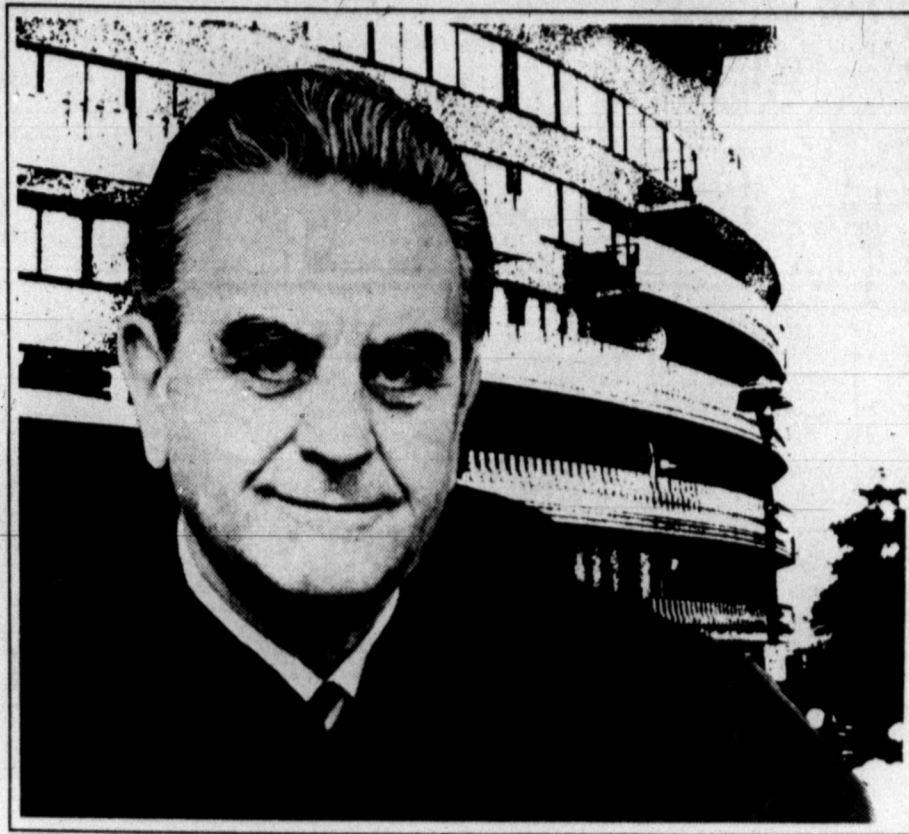

"Certain questions have been posed to me from your honor through the probation officer, dealing with details of the case, motivations, intent, mitigating circumstances."

The letter went on to link, for the first time, the White House and Watergate.

The impact in the court was startling. The spectators had come to hear something special, but they were not sure what. Even McCord's lawyers did not know about the contents of the letter that was the initial insight to the alleged network of obstruction of justice by the Nixon administration.

This letter, induced by Judge Sirica's actions during the course of the conspiracy trial, may be the document that will result in the present administrations being cleansed, if not in fact toppled.

Columnist Mary McGrory said that Judge Sirica is "the man whom we owe our liberty, if we still have any." Sen. Sam Ervin said that Judge Sirica "showed great courage and great wisdom, especially when it would have been easier for him to have drifted with the tide."

Through the several months of the trial Judge Sirica sat with growing outrage as he listened to the seven defendants give their bland testimony. He was certain there was more than this being just "a third-rate burglary," as the White House contended.

He gave the six besides McCord stiff sentences. Yet in an unusual move, Judge Sirica delayed sentencing of McCord, who admitted that he feared a severe sentence, possibly 20 years, if he did not cooperate fully.

Some critics said that Judge Sirica's action actually placed him in the role of prosecutor. There was concern that the means in which the letter was obtained would not hold up in the appellate court.

"You would have to be a nincompoop to play no role in this," Judge Sirica had said from the bench.

And more recently, in an exclusive interview in his chambers, the judge added, "I think when a judge sees that facts are not being developed, he has a duty to prosecute and defendant to get the full picture, regardless of whom it helps or hurts."

"I did only what I thought was right. By God, nobody can criticize you for that."

Was he concerned about a possible reversal by an appellate court?

"If a judge has one eye on what an appellate court might do then he should get off the bench," he said. "I never think about it. I've been reversed several times, and I've been sustained many, many times."

Because of his independent ways, the judge has been, as one writer put it, "rigorously above political considerations." Which meant that he couldn't be bought, but also that he would not necessarily be a prime candidate for promotion, either.

John Sirica has come a long way to be placed in so grand a position as a national hero.

"I've known poverty," he says of his childhood in Waterbury, Conn., and Jacksonville, Fla. He is the son of Italian immigrant parents. His father was a barber, "and I'm very proud of the fact he was an honest man." Judge Sirica recalls that he and his family slept in the back of a grocery store in which his mother worked. "She kept us clean and she got us to school," he says.

Through school, he greased automobiles and waited on tables. He worked as an athletic director for the Knights of Columbus in Washington to pay his way through law school. "I guess I always wanted to be a trial lawyer, but at one time I also considered being a boxer. I weighed 150 pounds. But I found that boxing was too rough a way to make a dollar."

He spent two years in law school and was admitted to the bar. That was all the schooling required for lawyers in the early 1920s, which may account for some saying his reputation for honesty is greater than his reputation for brilliance.

He began legal work in private practice. He met William E. Leahy, a little-known Washington lawyer, who the judge calls "my idol." Leahy's large portrait hangs in Judge Sirica's chambers. "I learned from him how to get the jury nodding in your favor, how to anticipate their questions, to let them know you aren't out to hoodwink them and the importance of the law," said Sirica.

Judge Sirica was appointed to the bench by President Eisenhower in 1957. He had campaigned for the Republican ticket since London in 1936. In fact, he had made speeches in 1932 and 1936 in support of Richard Nixon, the Republican vice-presidential candidate.

But partisanship never entered his courtroom, if he could help it. Now, he has caused havoc for the Republicans. Another time he nearly threw the former secretary of the Interior, Stewart Udall, a Democratic appointee, into jail for contempt.

Yet Judge Sirica not only admires toughness, but gentleness, too. One of his best friends today is Jack Dempsey, the former heavyweight boxing champion, whom he met while on bond-selling tours during World War II.

Judge Sirica also admires Vice President Spiro Agnew.

"He has not forgotten his heritage, where he came from," said the judge. "He once happened to join me at a naturalization proceedings I handled. I liked what he said. It was similar to what I usually tell people on this occasion. Naturalization proceedings are one of the things I enjoy most about being a judge."

"I tell folks that now you are as much an American as the President of the United States. It is something to be proud of, to be a citizen of this great country. Now, when people ask what you are, don't say, 'Italian,' or 'Chinese,' say 'I am an American.'"

He is sentimental enough to have framed, autograph pictures of both Agnew and Nixon at home in his den, which he calls "my hall of memories."

Yet he is not taken by lofty stature. He says he believes that "men generally are wise and good."

The most important lesson for me in this regard was gaining confidence in the jury system. I think it is the greatest system ever devised by man. In the great majority of cases I've admired the way juries, composed of everyone from taxi drivers to secretaries to economists, can assimilate facts and arrive at a fair verdict.

"I've been very impressed by that. I've found that the common man is really an uncommon man."

1040 U.S. Individual Income Tax Return for the year ending January 1-December 31, 1974, or other taxable year. Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. I don't think the agent who examined my return was right in disallowing some of my deductions. Is there anyone else at the IRS I can see about this?

A. Yes. You may request a district conference to discuss the disputed deductions. The way to do this is described on the notice you received explaining the proposed changes in your tax.

The conference provides you with an independent review of the questioned items. For more information, see IRS Publication 556, "Audit of Returns, Appeal Rights and Claims for Refund." It's available free by writing your Internal Revenue district office.

Q. I attended a $25-a-plate dinner for a local political candidate. Can I deduct this as a political contribution?

A. Yes. This amount is eligible for deduction or credit as a political contribution, so long as the dinner is clearly in the context of a campaign of an announced candidate and is not primarily a device to confer private benefits in the form of meals or entertainment to the contributor. For example, a traditional political testimonial dinner, where the meal is considered only incidental to the political speeches given for the candidate, would be eligible for the deduction or credit.

You may deduct no more than $50 ($100 for married taxpayers filing jointly) or you may claim a credit of one half of the contribution not to exceed $12.50 ($25 for married persons filing jointly).

Q. Does the IRS automatically impose a penalty on a taxpayer who underpays his estimated tax installment?

A. The 6 percent estimated tax penalty does not apply if each installment is paid on time, and the total paid (1) is at least 80 percent of the amount due on the basis of the final tax return for the year; or (2) is at least as much as would have been paid based on the tax shown on your 1972 return; or (3) is equal to a tax that would have been computed using last year's income, itemized deductions or standard deduction and this year's tax rates and exemptions; or (4) each installment is equal to 90 percent of the taxable income for the months preceding the month in which the installment is due, as if the period was the taxable year.

For more information on estimated tax and the special rules that apply to farmers and fishermen, see IRS Publication 505, "Tax Withholding and Declaration of Estimated Tax." It's available free by writing your Internal Revenue district office.

Q. My 17-year-old daughter qualifies as my dependent. This year she'll probably earn over $750 from a part-time job and receive about $20 in interest from her savings account. Will she have to file a return for 1973?

A. In General, an unmarried minor must file an income tax return if she had gross income of $2050 or more during the tax year. However, if the minor had any unearned income during the year (interest, dividends, trust income, etc.) and another taxpayer is entitled to claim an exemption for her, the minor must file if she had $750 or more in gross income.

Your daughter would have had to file a return anyway if she wanted a refund of tax withheld from her earnings.

Small Towns Get To Keep Radar Units

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe has allowed small towns to keep their radar units, but private security personnel will have to cancel plans to carry pistols.

The action came in vetoes over the weekend by the governor which increased the number of rejected bills to 29.

"With the mounting traffic accidents on our highways we obviously need all the help we can get in enforcing our laws," Briscoe said.

The bill would have prevented the use of radar devices to arrest speeders by towns with a population of less than 5,000. Sponsors of the bill said it would prevent the wide use of speed traps.

The governor said he vetoed the pistol bill to avoid delegating state police powers to private control.

Television In Review

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — This is a week when television programming is expected to have a news-oriented tone because of three separate stories and the live coverage the networks are scheduled to give them in varying degrees.

There is the planned Friday reporting of the splashdown and recovery of the Skylab mission's three astronauts. The splashdown area being aimed at is about 800 miles southwest of San Diego.

There is the American visit of Soviet Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhnev. In addition to live reporting, there is coverage that included a late-night CBS-TV half-hour broadcast Monday about the man and the visit.

And there is the continuing televising of the Senate Watergate hearings. The live telecasts of these hearings by the commercial networks are, by the way, regularly getting higher spot ratings in Los Angeles than in New York, and two reasons for this seem to stem from the time difference between the East and West Coasts.

—With the hearings starting at 10 a.m. in the East and 7 a.m. in the Far West, there is less competitive network programming against them at the earlier hour in Los Angeles as they get under way each day. The three commercial networks have recently been taking turns covering the hearings on different days.

—Because of the earlier starting time in Los Angeles, many people in the area have the option of watching the hearings for several hours before going to work, whereas in New York most working people are already at their jobs when the Senate proceedings begin.

On the other hand, persons in the New York area have wider access to the non-commercial networks' nightly taped broadcasts of the day's full hearings because —In New York and vicinity, the non-commercial network station is in the Very High Frequency (VHF) category and is available to viewers on the same primary channel-selection band as any major commercial station, without special hookups or installations, whereas —In Los Angeles and vicinity, the non-commercial network station is in the Ultra High Frequency (UHF) category, is therefore not as readily accessible all over as major commercial stations in the area, and thus requires special hookups and installations for many viewers.

It is common to assume that people invariably watch, or ignore, certain television programming because of personal tastes or often play a large part in determining the material which is fed to video watchers and which therefore influences their views. The process of self-determination is not as inviolate as we sometimes like to think.

Jocelyne Bourassa Wins 1st Tourney

MONTREAL (UPI) — Jocelyne Bourassa, her first professional golf win behind her, said she is confidently looking forward to the remainder of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, particularly the U.S. Ladies Open.

Miss Bourassa dropped a 28-foot pressure putt on the final hole of regulation play Monday to move into a sudden death round in the La Canadienne golf championship against Judy Rankin and Sandra Haynie.

Miss Rankin failed to make par on the second hole of the sudden death round and was eliminated. Miss Haynie bogied the third hole and Miss Bourassa dropped a three-foot putt for her par and the $10,000 winner's purse.

Miss Rankin and Miss Haynie tied for a share of the second place money of $5,100. Betty Burnfeind earned $3,100 for her fourth place finish with a 216 and Carol Mann won $2,400 for her fifth position at 217 for the 54-hole tournament.

Jane Blalock was sixth with a 218 and won $2,000.

"That's not going to be the last I'm going to win," an elated Miss Bourassa said. Quebec's first golf tournament was the first win in the LPGA tour for the 1972 LPGA rookie of the year.

"I don't know how many more tournaments I'll enter or win, but I'll be there," she said. "From here I'll be going to Southbury (Conn.) for the Heritage Village Open and I'll be trying to win that one too. "As for the U.S. Open, there's no way I'm going to miss that one. No way at all," said the petite 26-year-old native of Shawinigan, Quebec.

Miss Bourassa's $10,000 purse Monday moved her up into the top 20 money winners on the LPGA tour this year with earnings of just over $13,000.

Miss Bourassa missed seven of the first 14 tournaments this year because of a knee injury. Her win Monday marked the first time she had returned to her hometown to play since turning pro and the crowd of 11,492 who turned out to watch the tournament final loudly applauded her win.

Shaver Wins Fight Amidst Controversy

NEW YORK (UPI) — Controversy surrounded Earnie Shavers' entry into the big time Monday night when he knocked out former heavyweight champion Jimmy Ellis in the first round at Madison Square Garden.

Referee Harold Valan, who called the knockout at 2:39 of the scheduled 12-rounder, was adamant he had tolled 10 after picking up the count from timekeeper Joe Santarpia, but the Ellis camp thought otherwise.

"I heard seven and got up," a surprisingly cheerful Ellis, of Louisville, Ky., said in his dressing room. "My brain was clear and I was ready to continue."

Angelo Dundee, the fifth-ranked Ellis' trainer-manager, said he never heard 10 Jimmy appeared in trouble because he fell on his arm and was unable to get it out of the way as he tried to regain his feet.

The 27-year-old Shavers, who came in at 206 1/2 pounds against the 199 1/2 of Ellis, said, "I don't know about the count. I was just watching Ellis try to get up."

Valan said he had signalled the finish and then grabbed Ellis by the arms to make sure he knew it was all over.

Despite the controversial ending, there was no denying the unranked Shavers' punching power. Even had Ellis beaten the count, it is questionable whether he would have lasted the distance against the powerhouse punching of the man from Warren, Ohio.

The end came dramatically and suddenly. Ellis had Shavers in a neutral corner and was belting him with right crosses to the head after having opened him up with a left hook. He stepped back momentarily and that was it... a right uppercut ripped through his guard and caught him on the head. Ellis went down as though poleaxed and made two unsuccessful attempts to regain his feet.

Shavers thus followed former champions Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier to knock Ellis out. It was his 44th victory by the short route in 47 bouts. He has two losses.

In his crowded dressing room, where Shavers' wife LeVerne led the victory celebration, Garden matchmaker Teddy Brenner announced Shavers' next opponent will be Jerry Quarry. No date was announced.

Greg Pruitt Feels It Was 11-1 Season

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — In case there's anyone out there not quite sure of what Oklahoma's football record was last year — what with the forfeits and all — here's one bona fide all-America running back from that team who knows on what side of the hyphen to put all the numbers.

"Personally, I didn't lose any of those games they took away from us," Greg Pruitt said today. "To me, it will always feel like an 11-1 season."

Oklahoma finished as the second-ranked team in the nation with an 11-1 record, but recruiting violations recently caused university officials to announce they had forfeited all but three of the victories.

"When we beat people like we beat them, they still know they have taken a licking regardless of what future announcements say," Pruitt said. "Regardless of what they say, people will still think of us as having lost only to Colorado."

Pruitt said due to the publicity caused by the controversy and the publicity given the recruiting violation, along with the change in the head coach position, Oklahoma will probably be lacking a little on offense this season.

"The material is there, it is just that the coaches haven't had the time or opportunity to look at it as closely as they would like," he said.

"Defensively, Oklahoma will be the strongest it has been in years. But you can't keep a good defense on the field all day and get good results. The offense must come through if the Sooners are to stay on top," he said.

Pruitt is in Lubbock preparing for the 13th annual Coaches All-America football game Saturday night. Kickoff for that game, before a capacity 45,000 crowd and a national television audience is set for 7:30 p.m. (CDT).

Pruitt, only 5-9 and 177 pounds, was the second round draft choice of Cleveland. He has already signed his contract and will be on hand when the rookies report early next month.

He finished as Oklahoma's second all-time career rusher with 375 carries for 2,944 yards. He was third in the Heisman trophy balloting in 1971 and finished second last year.

"I haven't played football since January, and when you've been so much a part of the game all your life as I have, you miss it," Pruitt said. "I was thrilled when I was invited to the game, and wouldn't miss it for anything."

Baseball Roundup

By United Press International
Dock Ellis, one of the most outspoken men in baseball, knew when it was appropriate to sidestep a question.

The question was whether the Pittsburgh Pirates' "Great Experiment" of the spring-switching catcher Manny Sanguillen to the outfield and making Milt May the team's regular catcher—was a failure.

Sanguillen was the Pirates' catcher and Gene Clines was in right field Monday night when Pittsburgh beat the Chicago Cubs, 3-1. It was only the Pirates' third victory in 15 games and marked one of the few times this season that they have had good pitching and enough offense in the same game.

"What do you want me to say?" asked Ellis. "No, it's the same no matter who the catcher is."

"I've said all along I could help this team if they'd only play me," said Clines, who helped the team with four hits Monday night. "They know what I can do. I feel it's a matter of time now and that this home stand will start us on our climb."

The Philadelphia Phillies defeated the New York Mets, 9-6, the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Montreal Expos, 1-0, and the Los Angeles Dodgers downed the Atlanta Braves, 133, in other National League games.

American League scores were Texas 7 Minnesota 4, Detroit 5 Cleveland 1, Milwaukee 8 Boston 3, California 9 Chicago 2, and Oakland 9 Kansas City 5.

Clines went 4-for-4 in the leadoff spot and Rich Hebner and Bob Robertson homered for the Pirates, who dealt Ferguson Jenkins his fifth loss against seven wins. Ellis, bothered by a cold, struck out eight and walked none.

Ken Brett hit his third homer of the season and drove in another run with a sacrifice fly as the Phillies snapped the Mets' five-game winning streak.

Danny Thompson Won't Let Leukemia Stop Him

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — His lifelong dream was to be a big league baseball player and now that he has made it Minnesota Twins shortstop Danny Thompson isn't going to let leukemia hold him back.

"Really, it's the same for everybody on this earth," Thompson, 26, says. "You just have only so long to do your thing."

"You don't have time to get down? You've got to keep your head up and go right at it."

It was tough to accept last winter when Thompson found out he had leukemia. But fighting back is nothing new for Danny, an Oklahoman who doesn't drink or smoke and gets along with most everybody.

Danny had no advance warning of his latest problem. Last year, in his first full season in the majors, he led all shortstops in both leagues in hitting with a .276 average and, in January this year, he was feeling in peak condition when he reported for his annual pre-season physical.

Doctor Wants Tap
The team physician, Dr. Leonard J. Michienzi, called him back for more tests because of an "infection," then said he wanted a bone marrow tap.

"What's going on, Doc?" asked a curious Thompson. "What are you looking for?"

"We're checking for leukemia," Michienzi replied.

Thompson then was diagnosed as having chronic granulocytic leukemia which, under current medical knowledge, is usually fatal. Doctors gave Thompson five years to play baseball.

"Danny reacted with disbelief," said his wife, Jo, who is expecting their second child about July 4. "It was pretty hard to accept for someone who has always relied on his body for his livelihood."

In the four and one-half months since he was informed of his disease, Thompson has learned to cope almost unnoticed, keeping his feelings bottled inside.

"I didn't really want it to come out in the news last winter," he said. "It's a personal thing. But if you're going to have leukemia, I guess I've got the best kind to have."

The only symptoms I had is that my white blood cell count is high—about 25,000 instead of 6,000 to 8,000. They can't even treat it until it's 100,000 and it's not dangerous until it's 700,000."

Plays All But a Few
Despite a rash of arm injuries which may have contributed to his team high 14 errors, Thompson had played in all but a half-dozen games up until recently, batting about .260. Then he pulled a hamstring muscle June 13 and that was expected to sideline him at least a week.

Twins manager Frank Quilici said of Thompson's leukemia: "As long as Danny hits the baseball and fields, he will play. Our biggest problem with Thompson is over-hustle. He's a dedicated kid. He wants to play every minute of every game. If he has a mechanical error, he goes out and works and works until he gets it straightened out."

Thompson has closely followed the latest research toward finding a cure for leukemia and he talks optimistically of working being done by an Israeli doctor in Jerusalem.

"I am very religious," he said. "I'm a Methodist and I've gone to church all my life. I suppose I've said a few more prayers lately. You've got to believe in miracles."

NBA Bullets Hire Jones To Coach

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The professional sports boom in Washington has again tapped San Diego, with the hiring of former Conquistador head coach K. C. Jones to lead the Capital Bullets of the National Basketball Association.

Bullets owner Abe Pollin announced Monday that Jones will be expected to bring Washington a championship team.

Jones signed a three-year contract and becomes the first black coach of a team in Washington where 77 per cent of the population is black.

"K.C. was hired because he was the best man for the job, not because he was black," Pollin said.

Although the Bullets actually will be playing in nearby Largo, Md., pro basketball has drawn well among city dwellers when the Baltimore team played games at the University of Maryland near there during the past several seasons.

Jones, who helped the Boston Celtics win eight NBA championships, quit the ABA Conquistadors last week after his first season as a pro head coach during which time he led the expansion San Diego club into the ABA playoffs.

He had previously been an assistant under old Boston teammate Bill Sharman with the Los Angeles Lakers and had been an assistant at Harvard and head coach at Brandeis.

"I think my playing with people like Bill Russell and Bill Sharman for Red Auerbach had an effect in the final product," he said. "I'm terribly excited."

The Bullets will begin playing out of Largo this fall in Pollin's new 17,000 seat Capital Centre Arena, where an NHL hockey team will skate when the expansion franchise begins operating in 1974.

Golf Tips from the Old Masters

By The Editors of Golf Digest

BOROS EXPLAINS PROPER HAND ACTION IN GOLF

Julius Boros, winner of two U.S. Open titles, has been known as a "hands" player throughout his great career. He believes that many golfers misunderstand proper hand action.

"Too many golfers think hand action means rolling the wrists as you hit the ball. This is a misconception. The hands do come into play but they must work in unison. More importantly, they must come into the hitting area in the same position they were in at address—with the back of the left hand looking down the target line.

"Rolling the wrists over on the follow-through is usually a sign that the golfer's grip or pivot is faulty. Proper hand action means moving the hands through the shot along the target line without rolling or snapping the wrists," Boros says.

Nixon's Opportunity

With the White House team shattered by the liberal press yowling for his blood, with members of the press convinced they were misinformed, President Nixon still has one method for beating his enemies. The formula is simple: Prosperity. People are not inclined to vote against good times.

At the present time, prosperity is a shaky proposition for one principal reason: People do not have confidence in the monetary system. They do not have confidence in the system because the system is under political control. In other words, the value of the dollar depends on what politicians do. If politicians do the wrong thing—and you can't rule that possibility out—the people have no firm means of measuring values. That is, they can't write three to five year contracts with any assurance that the financial terms of the contract will remain constant.

The President's opportunity, therefore, lies in the area of restoring confidence. He can accomplish this. It is within his power. The means is gold. More specifically, it is the unrestricted private ownership gold.

When people have gold coin, they deal with one another without having to worry about what some third party (the government) says legal tender will be worth. When people own gold coin, they have money even when the government goes broke. When people can't own gold coin (as at the present time), nobody has any money when the government goes broke.

Apart from the confidence factor, legalized ownership of gold would create a job-making industry in the western states—Colorado, Nevada, California and Alaska. So strong is the motivation in gold hunting that even the hippies would be inclined to earn their bread. Think what that would do to the welfare roles.

The chance that the President will tie the political hands that fabricate the paper purchasing media of this country is not overly bright. But actually there is a precedent that does in that direction: Andrew Jackson's famous specie circular stripped then-existing paper money of its legal-tender qualities. President Nixon would not have to go nearly that far. Part of Jackson's motivation was his zeal for victory, defestation of his enemies, a marvelous will to survive. To what extent those qualities reside in President Nixon remains to be seen.

Extra Mile In The Tank

If you get caught out in the boonocks with a half tank of gas when the service stations are closed, here are a few tips that have been handed to us. Maybe they won't get you all the way home, but they could put you a few miles closer than you would otherwise get.

First, drive slower (not over 50) and steady. Changes in speed drink fuel.

Second, if you have to speed up, press the accelerator gently don't stomp on it.

Third, braking your car cancels out momentum that you already have paid for out of your gas tank. Keep a reasonable distance behind the car ahead in order to hold braking to a minimum.

Fourth, if you're really sweating out the probabilities of running out of fuel and you have ample daylight left, remove the belt from the generator. Every mile you roll is a mile that you don't have to walk.

Fifth, on the long term, keep your car in tune. Measure mileage to be sure you are burning your fuel, not blowing it. A good carburetor mechanic is worth an extra fuel tank to you.

We suppose it goes without saying that it's a major fuel saver to keep the air conditioner off, a point worth remembering when you're in a tight spot. Of course, the man in the house knows all this stuff, but the little woman may not.

Good Heavens!

Billions for defense, but nothing for the search for extraterrestrial life.

That is the lament of Dr. Carl Sagan, director of the Laboratory for Planetary Studies at Cornell University, who writes in Intellectual Digest that as many as a hundred billion stars in our own galaxy (which is only one of billions of galaxies) might have planetary systems like our own.

Just as the military brass raise the specter of the USSR every time they want a few more bombers or something, Sagan notes that the Soviet Union is now actively pursuing a radioastronomical search for signals from extraterrestrial civilization on planets of other stars.

For what we spend for a few bombers, says Sagan, we could build a major astronomical facility and be doing the same thing.

McGovern 'Ailing' In Home State

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
WASHINGTON (NEA) — Sen. George McGovern's reasoning for not speaking out more forcefully on the Watergate issue is that to do so would give it a partisan flavor it should not have.

He has been nearly silent in recent months, though as 1972 Democratic presidential nominee he called President Nixon's regime the "most corrupt in history." At that time, largely unnamed sources were just beginning to make links between the White House and the Watergate break-in and bugging.

Today McGovern suggests that his "I told you so" would not add but indeed might tend to subtract from the impact of the seemingly endless tale of Watergate.

He says the case against administration figures get proper nonpartisan force from the inquiries and comments of such Republicans as Ervin committee Sens. Howard Baker of Tennessee and Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, and the well-known Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona.

It is just possible, however, that another factor lies behind McGovern's declared reluctance to plunge heavily into the Watergate debate.

To do so would embroil him fairly steadily in the country's hottest national controversy. Most likely it would mean splashing his face across television screens much as if the 1972 campaign were still on. And that is just what George McGovern does not need right now.

He believes that he faces a difficult battle for reelection as senator from South Dakota in 1974. He lost the state to Mr. Nixon last fall. He is convinced that his hard two-year campaign for the presidency gave many South Dakotans a feeling of neglect, a feeling he had deserted them for the national scene.

So, as he sees it, McGovern's No. 1 task these days is to persuade South Dakota voters that he cares. Winning in that state strongly Republican state is never easy for a Democrat. His present situation is worse than usual.

Plainly, he doesn't consider himself barred from discussing national issues generally. His self-perceived necessity is to choose carefully, stressing economic and other problems which impinge most directly upon his home-state constituency. Watergate seems to interest nearly everybody, but it's Broadway-style stuff and what McGovern needs is a good local road show.

McGovern's home-state troubles consume him so thoroughly that he shows little of the evangelical fire which invested his presidential campaigning. Though he obviously feels as strongly about Watergate as ever, he won't discuss possible impeachment proceedings against the President, or even call for his resignation as such Democrats as Wisconsin's Gov. Patrick Lucey have done.

The most McGovern will say, and this quietly, is that Mr. Nixon in an orderly society should not be beyond the reach of the law if he is guilty of either participation in or prior knowledge of the Watergate affair, or later cover-up. Not to pay for such guilt, the senator argues, would be worse than any possible paralysis from drawn-out impeachment proceedings.

RAY CROMLEY Nixon has leverage for Brezhnev visit

H. L. Hunt Writes POWs AND AIR STRIKES

Returned U.S. prisoners of war stood and cheered recently during a party at the White House when mention was made of the B-52 air strikes against Hanoi last December. One former POW said he knew the minute the heavy bombs started falling on the communist capital of North Vietnam that he and his comrades would be freed soon and would be returning home. It was a striking tribute to the United States and its power. That power had gone unused far too long. When the decision was made to go into Indochina and fight communist forces here we should have used more force and brought our enemy to his knees in the early states. Political considerations by various administrations stopped us short of winning.

Meanwhile, our men were fighting and dying and many were being captured and tortured by the communist foe. There seemed no hope of getting them out except by force and once the decision was made to punish the enemy the bombers did their jobs. Hanoi was ready to talk and return the prisoners. All citizens who saw the touching scenes as the freed prisoners returned shall never forget them.

The United States must never use its muscle in aggression strikes. Our retaliation should be swift and sure, however, when our people and the security of our nation are at stake. The world applauds a firm stand in the cause of right. That is what happened when North Vietnam felt the weight of our bombs. Above all, the change in policy got our men home safely.

It will take us, as a nation, a long time to digest the lessons of the war in Indochina. The digestion will not be easy. If we are to survive in the future, we must take those lessons to heart and strengthen our foreign policy so that there will be no more settlements of the Korea and Indochina types.

Most of this sum will be used by college work-study programs at 2,654 institutions to create employment opportunities in 1972-73 for more than 530,000 students who must earn a portion of their expenses. The World Almanac says. The rest will go to nearly 250,000 exceptionally needy students.

Your Health

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Even One Cigarette Can Be Harmful

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am an ex-smoker and have recently read one of your articles about tobacco. Why do people who write about the dangers of cigarettes always say that when anyone smokes a day, and inhales them, it is harmful? The truth is that even under a pack a day is harmful to a person's health. I believe if you would say cigarette smoking in any amount is dangerous it would cause more people to give them up.

My husband has smoked for years and has a terrible cough, and he never feels good. He has left them off for as long as two weeks, and in that short a time he feels better, eats better, and his cough gets better, but he starts smoking one and eventually four cigarettes a day and the next thing you know, he's feeling bad again. He has never smoked two packs a day, but they definitely hurt him. Most articles leave the impression that up to two packs a day won't harm your health, so why don't you tell the people the truth.

Dear Reader — If I've ever given the impression that any amount of smoking is all right for a person's health, it certainly has not been my intention. Studies show that beginning with one cigarette, the more one smokes, the more likely there is to be difficulty.

I agree that a pack of cigarettes a day is harmful. Even three or four cigarettes a day can be harmful. A person who's been a reasonably heavy smoker and then cuts down, but continues to smoke even one or two cigarettes a day, will not get the full benefits that he should in reversing abnormal changes in the cells within the lungs. Some of these cellular changes seem to be maintained even by small amounts of the cigarette smoke. Certainly anyone who has a cough and other problems associated with cigarettes should stop smoking immediately.

If you've read very many of my columns you know that I also feel that being forced to inhale the cigarette smoke from other people is also bad for their health.

Dear Dr. Lamb — If exercise is so important how come bedridden patients can survive 30 or 40 years and live until their 70s without hardly moving?

Dear Reader — In the first place, not many of them do. So the basic assumption implied in your question isn't necessarily true. There are examples of individuals who do live a long time at bed rest or with other disabling factors that prevent physical activity. One safeguard these people have is that they are unable to go out and engage in physical activity beyond the limits of their capability. They are not likely to sit before the television set and stuff themselves with potato chips and cheese dips and then run to catch the bus.

Many disabled patients are under constant medical supervision, and problems which occur are often taken care of immediately.

Inside Washington

As Brezhnev Talks Peace, Soviet Actions Speak War

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — You will be hearing a lot about peace and trade this week during party chairman Leonid Brezhnev's summit discussions in Washington, but don't be lulled by any illusions about the real nature of the Soviet rulers and what they're up to.

The Russian bear hasn't shed his claws and fangs, and neither have the Communists.

A detente with the U.S. may well serve their purpose at this time. But simultaneously they are unceasingly continuing to arm to the hilt both at home and throughout the world.

Ideologically and militarily they are as ruthlessly aggressive as ever. And while they may talk peace and trade, they are also relentlessly gearing for war.

Even a cursory examination of their forceful and pervasive policies and operations around the globe makes that somberly and vividly clear. In every strategic area they are determinedly establishing their menacing military might — on land, in the air and on the sea.

It is an exaggeration to say flatly that Communist Russia today is militarily the most powerful nation in the world and is constantly extending and reinforcing this might.

Significantly, the Kremlin masters are pursuing this global policy unchecked, unhampered and unfettered by domestic dissent, discord or turmoil.

They handle that very simply: they just don't tolerate it.

While the U.S. is dizzily wallowing in a howling welter of media-fomented Watergate exposes with paralyzing administrative, fiscal and economic reverberations at home and abroad, the Kremlin disposes of infinitely more serious internal scandals with not a murmur and no repercussions.

When several months ago, graft, waste, corruption, mismanagement and other offenses surfaced in the Ukraine, second most populous Soviet republic, and in the Soviet republic of Georgia, the crack-down was as instantaneous and smashing as it was unpublicized.

There was no TV grandstanding or press fanfaring. Guilty heads rolled fast and furious from highest to lowest, and the first the public knew about it was the official announcement of their replacements.

Wrongdoing in public office in Russia isn't tolerated any more than in the U.S. — and it's dealt with far more speedily and harshly. And so are other important problems — foremost among them defense.

Contrasting Pictures

A graphic instance of the latter is the following: While in the U.S. the draft is being dismantled and at immense cost a greatly reduced all-volunteer Army is being established, Russia is making no change of any kind in its traditional compulsory military training system. It is continuing to call up all 18-year-old youths for two years military training and service — and there are no ifs, ands or buts about it.

There are no anti-draft marches and demonstrations; no anti-military-industrial complex' fulminating and tiring; and no Soviet defector and deserter colonies in Sweden and other neighboring countries. Also, no yammering and agitation for "amnesty."

Other grim realities: Item: Russia recently successfully tested improved versions of its giant SS-11 and SS-17 intercontinental ballistic missile, capable of delivering nuclear warheads up to 50 megatons and at a range of 6,000 — 7,000 miles. These new-model ICBMs are equipped with computers giving them a high degree of accuracy — and a MIRV warhead capability.

The U.S. already has MIRV warheads, as well as missiles equipped with computers.

Under the five-year interim U.S. — Soviet agreement limiting offensive nuclear weapons approved last year, Russia is allowed a total of 1,618 ballistic missiles, 1,000 of them SS-11s. As against that, the U.S. accepted an ICBM force of around 1,100.

The improved computer-guided SS-11s and SS-17s have the capability of destroying underground steel-and-concrete Minuteman silos anywhere in the U.S.

Item: The Soviet Union is now building a second aircraft Carrier — authoritatively slated to be named the Kiev. Like the first carrier, the 18,000 ton Moskva, the Kiev is being built at the Nikolayev Nesenke shipyard on the Black Sea. It will have a 900-ft. flight deck, more than twice the length of the Moskva.

Also significantly, the commander of Russia's naval air forces has been given the rank of marshal of aviation — rank indication of the size and importance of the force he directs.

Only a few years ago, Soviet naval and air authorities were deriding aircraft carriers as "floating coffins." Now the Kremlin is building two carriers and plans several more. Like the Kiev, all will be in the 45,000-ton class, with angled flight decks and capable of accommodating 40 to 50 supersonic planes.

Around The Globe

Abroad as at home, the Kremlin is busily arming and building up offensive strength and striking power. Following are ominous highlights: Item: Russia is extensively equipping Syria and Iraq with large numbers of late-model MIG supersonic fighters and TU bombers, as well as Powerful SAM anti-aircraft missile defense. More than 10,000 Russian military officers, technicians and specialists are now stationed in the two Arab countries.

After the Soviet Union's expulsion from Egypt, Iraq and Syria were assiduously wooed, and Russia is now strongly entrenched in both. Syria clashes frequently with Israel; Iraq is flagrantly threatening Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

Item: Also in the war-racked Middle East, Russia has established a long-range communications facility in the Somali Republic, on the east coast of Africa, that gives Moscow direct control of its naval vessels in the Indian Ocean and adjoining Red Sea and Persian Gulf. Also the Kremlin now has about 2,500 military advisers and technicians in Somali — whose entire military forces number only 13,500.

The less one has to do, the less time one finds to do it in.

Here's a brand-new idea in pickups that solves the annoying problem of where to carry packages, equipment, and supplies when you have three people in the cab. The answer is Dodge's new Club Cab. For 1973, the cab has been extended 18 inches in order to offer the pickup owner 34 square feet of extra storage space behind the seat. It is ideally suited to hold such things as grocery bags, golf clubs, chain saws, or any other type of equipment that you'd prefer to keep inside the cab rather than in the truck bed. Your valuables are safe from the elements and the possibility of being stolen. The new Club Cab also offers optional auxiliary jump seats that fold down from each side of the storage area. And with the optional 360 V8 engine and trailer-towing package, it makes an excellent recreation vehicle.

If buying your pickup is a budget problem, here's the way to skip the fancy stuff and get a basic, no-nonsense pickup at a price you can handle with ease. The Dodge Custom gives you a full day's work with economy in the truck bed. Your valuables are safe from the elements and the possibility of being stolen. The new Club Cab also offers optional auxiliary jump seats that fold down from each side of the storage area. And with the optional 360 V8 engine and trailer-towing package, it makes an excellent recreation vehicle.
