

JIM CRACKS

By JIM DEAN
Don't usually get to weighty with this effort each week, but after looking further into the provisions of the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority proposition, I am not surprised that the City of Pampa wanted to get out of the deal. The only surprise is that the idea ever got as far along as it did.

Pampa produces its water at about nine cents per thousand gallons, and pays eight cents more per thousand gallons to bring it to the customer's meter. Pampa's water consumption at its peak last year was in excess of 8 million gallons per day.

THE MAXIMUM amount of water Pampa could get from the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority was four million gallons per day and the rate was 22 cents per thousand gallons, delivered to the city gate. The city would still have the expense of eight cents per thousand gallons to deliver the water to the customer's meter.

In short Pampa would have to continue its present burden of expense on existing water plant and buy four million gallons of water every day at 13 cents more per thousand gallons than they could produce it for locally.

Now, if my mathematics is any good, that means an additional daily expense of $320! And on an annual basis, (because the rate was that the city must take the four million gallons every day of the year) the expense added to the water costs would be $189,800. And guess who would be paying $189,800?

CITY MANAGER Fred Brook said that if Pampa went into the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority it would be necessary to increase water rates in Pampa by approximately 40 per cent to meet the added costs!

Of course I am just beginning to touch on the added costs the proposition would require. There are such things as additional storage facilities to put all the water unused, especially during the winter months. A few bond issues would be forthcoming, no doubt.

No doubt there are cities which so desperately need water that the proposition can be made to look like an oasis to a dying man on the desert, and it could be that Pampa might eventually find itself in that condition. But right now, it is rather obvious that Pampa isn't that thirsty.

THE CRMWA recently spent some of its funds to advertise in newspapers in Pampa and Amarillo explaining to the citizens of the two communities that although their elected representatives had expressed a withdrawal from the authority, the rules wouldn't permit such a withdrawal.

The big page ads told the public that all they had to do was have petitions drawn up calling an election on the CRMWA and if the issue carries, you can still be in. In other words, your city commission has acted to keep you from wasting $189,800, but you can go ahead and waste it anyway if you want to.

The action of the CRMWA in this connection is considerably distasteful to me. In the first place, Pampa city commissioners and its family visited relatives in Memphis this week. Rupert has been on vacation from the Cicero Smith Lumber Co.

Benson Lauds Visiting Reds Scientists
WASHINGTON—UP—Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson Monday told a visiting delegation of Soviet farm officials they have been "good ambassadors" between the United States and Russia.

Benson complimented the Russians for the "friendliness and good will" they have shown in their 44-day tour of American farm lands. "The broad interest Americans have shown in your visit," Benson said, "comes from the hope they share with all people that there may be peace in the world—peace that must come in large measure from increased trust and understanding between the American and Russian nations."

Rio Grande Bridge Work Is Started
LAREDO, Tex.—UP—Construction was formally started Monday on the new four-lane prestressed concrete highway bridge over the Rio Grande at Laredo.

A jurisdictional dispute between labor unions that has held up the start of construction was settled Saturday in Mexico City.

More than 25 men began work Monday on the Mexican side of the river, erecting contractor's offices and construction headquarters, as well as putting up the fence to enclose the international work zone.

There will now be a steady flow of equipment and materials from company headquarters in Monterrey. The work is being done by Concrete, S. A.

Manuel Castillo, engineer for the contractors, said work will move swiftly as they make up for the time lost. The firm attempted to start the project on Aug. 2, one day after receiving notice from the joint construction committee to proceed.

On Aug. 3 work was stopped when members of a rival (CTM) union appeared on the job site and violence was feared. The original workers were members of the Sindicato de Jornaleros, local affiliated with the Confederacion Revolucionaria Obrera y Campesina (CROC). Whether the CROC union would now get any part of the work was not known here Saturday afternoon.

The contractor has 330 calendar days in which to finish the project. Time dates from delivery of the work order, Aug. 1.

Shivers Won't Call Session On Segregation
By O. B. LLOYD JR.
AUSTIN—UP—Gov. Allan Shivers says the school segregation problem does not necessitate calling a special session of the legislature at this time.

But he indicated that the outcome of a court suit scheduled to start Friday at Big Spring may determine the eventual decision.

This suit, filed by a group known as the Texas Citizens Council, seeks to enjoin the State Board of Education from allocating state funds to school districts that integrate Negroes with whites this fall. Specifically, the suit names the Big Spring school district, which has announced it will integrate children in the elementary schools this fall.

At a news conference Monday, Shivers said he saw "no present need" for a special session, at least until a decision in the Big Spring suit becomes final. He carefully pointed out that decision "may or may not necessitate a special session."

He declined direct comment when asked what might happen if the courts hold the state cannot furnish funds to integrated schools. "You'll have to ask the comptroller and (state education commissioner) J. W. Edgar about that," he replied.

The governor said he did not know how long the Big Spring suit might be in the courts. "Very often it takes a long time to get from one court to another—particularly the Supreme Court," he said.

The Berrys

School Begins September 5 In Wheeler

WHEELER — (Special) — The 1955-56 term of the Wheeler School will begin Sept. 5 according to an announcement made by A. E. Brown, superintendent and the board of trustees of the Wheeler Independent School District. The enrollment of all pupils will begin at 9 a.m. on that date. Buses will make their regular runs, books will be checked out and regular class work will begin and lunch will be served in the school cafeteria.

The following faculty and employees have been announced: A. E. Brown, superintendent; Bill K. Barham, high school principal, and science; O. K. Henson, Jr., high school math; Miss Jeanne King, high school English; J. D. Atwell, high school history and athletic coach; Mrs. J. D. Atwell, high school commercial work; Mrs. Glen Renner, high school home-making; J. G. Watson, high school agriculture.

Carroll Killingsworth, elementary principal and grades 4-7; James Brock, grades 5-8; Mrs. Gordon Whitener, grades 5-7; Mrs. Edna Yates, grades 5-7; Charles Abercrombie, grades 5-7; Novella Vampool, fourth grade; Elva Hubble, second grade; Lola L. Weems, first grade; Ida Farmer, first grade.

Mrs. A. E. Brown will be supervisor of the cafeteria, assisted by Mrs. C. H. Starkey and Mrs. J. B. Oglesby.

R. B. Mann, custodian; Henry Finney, custodian and bus driver; other bus drivers are J. D. Atwell, Charles Abercrombie, and M. W. Meadows.

Extensive repair work and interior painting has been done during the summer on the buildings.

The Territory of Wyoming passed a woman's suffrage law on December 10, 1869.

MAKING A GO OF LIFE

By ROY L. SMITH
Read Luke 9:28-35

Jesus prayed. When other men rested, he prayed. That was his way of resting. Prayer was never a duty with him, to be done as quickly as possible. There were no empty phrases in his prayers, and few petitions. Instead, a very great deal of his interest consisted of positive assertions of faith in God, and declarations of his confidence that power would be awaiting alongside every task.

His greatest prayer was the one he uttered in Gethsemane: "Thy will be done." (Matt. 26:42). Unfortunately this has been quite generally understood as a blind acceptance of the inevitable. It was rather a bold assertion of his determination to align himself with God's will and to do it with all his powers. His praying had convinced him that God's will must be done, and he proposed to do it with all the effectiveness of which he was capable. His confidence in God made it possible for God to help him. This is the way faith is designed to work. Jesus assured his hearers that the honest man can always get the ear of God, and he lived at all times in the belief that he had God's attention.

No man can live such a life of prayer without finding that the gates of his soul are somehow opened and that power flows in upon him from God. This is the effect of such praying. It opens the mind and heart toward God so that God gets his opportunity with the man. In Jesus, God had his one perfect opportunity, but it suggests what God can do for us when we give him even a small chance.

There are some things in my life which have thy approval, O God, I propose to give them my major devotion and attention. There are some other things which grieve thee; I propose to root them out relentlessly even though the struggle goes on to the end of my life. Amen.

You probably have some matter on your conscience with which you have been dallying for some time, unable to make up your mind. It has become a troublesome thing. Then why not decide now to settle it, according to God's preference, and get it out of the way?

Whoops! Sorry, Wrong Man

BAYTOWN, Tex.—UP—Patrolman Ray Turner heard a radio call from a fellow officer who said he was chasing a burglary suspect on the same street which Turner was patrolling.

Turner speeded up his patrol car, then listened again. "Hurry, he's speeding up," Deputy Sheriff M. M. Brown's voice said on the radio.

Turner whipped his car across the road as a roadblock. A car about 300 yards behind him skidded to a stop. Deputy Brown jumped out.

A FULL SLATE OF BRAND NEW LOOKS, bright and shiny as apples for the teacher, gives fresh fashion action to back-to-school clothes this year. Interest will be centered around the deep-plus-brilliant tones of fall; the grown-up theme of dyed-to-match in sweaters and skirts; the ensembled look, newly expressed in coordinated fabrics; the fashionable new suspended look of that perennial school favorite, the jumper; the new luxury of fur-look Orlon and Dynel pile coatings, most significant in a season that highlights the grown-up look of a teen's wardrobe. These are the findings of Women's Wear Daily's fashion editors after reviewing manufacturers' newest lines.

THE LONG TORSO is more so dress, sportswear and coat themes for fall. The enthusiastic reception to headline back-to-school styles already accorded this new silhouette inspires imaginative new through all categories of school over-blouse and long-line jacketed clothes, in interpretations from effects — these variations help to give the fall dress picture its new fashion face in years.

PARIS-INSPIRED designs hit the children's market with tremendous impact for back-to-school. The tunic, newest expression of the elongated look, appears in dresses with actual or simulated overskirts, elegant new silhouette in all size ranges. The "A-Line" is something to shout about in its fashionable exaggeration of the full-skirted or pendulum cut, combined with definitive buttons and beltings. Long coats, dresses and separates. Martingale backs, deep inverted back pockets are newly styled contributions to the fast-growing "French Look," beside being details that the young crowd always goes for enthusiastically.

THE LONG TORSO look is in the dress picture for fall bigger than ever and in more varied and sophisticated treatment. Smooth and supple, as worked out in torso defining tops with gently flared or pleated skirts or crisp, in jaunty blue and citron, brown and rust,

Fern Canady Feted With Bridal Shower

Miss Fern Canady, bride-elect of Lilburn Ritter, was complimented with a bridal shower Saturday evening in the home of Mrs. G. F. Baker Jr., 508 S. Reid. Co-hostesses with Mrs. Baker were Mmes. W. E. Baker and Evan Jones Jr.

In the receiving line were Mrs. Jack Millican, mother of the bride-elect; and Mrs. Forrest Ritter, mother of the prospective bridegroom. Guests were registered by Mrs. Jones.

The honoree was presented a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. Millican was given a corsage of white carnations, and Mrs. Ritter was presented a corsage of blue carnations.

The serving table was covered with a white crocheted cloth over blue satin, centered with a white umbrella to which white bells were attached.

Refreshments of white cake decorated with blue bells, fruit punch and white minis were served. Mrs. E. W. Baker presided at the punch bowl.

Nichols Tells Of Newest Events In Nation's Capitol

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
WASHINGTON — UP — What's new in Washington?
Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey apparently misses his buddies who used to put on the bib with him at lunch in his private dining room when Congress was still about. Now, it is a rather common sight to see the secretary and one of his assistants, Andrew N. Overby, following the common herd, trays in hand, through the line in the cafeteria — bean soup, ear corn, liver and onions, ice tea and a slab of pie. And matching for the checks.
The Civil Aeronautics Administration hardly knows how to answer a letter it got from a man in New York — Broadway address. The fellow wrote: "In connection with your recent plan to send a satellite into space... I am assuming that space travel may become a reality soon. Would you please tell me how I can buy some land on the moon?"
The promoters of the Carter Barron amphitheater here have been plagued with bad weather, with one hurricane after another, so for the Iccapades this week they have brought in some man-made weather. Twenty-five tons of snow. Kids had been invited to bring their sleds in the middle of the summer and have a lot of fun. It ought to work out fine if the weather doesn't last.
Lyndon Johnson, the majority leader in the Senate, is up and about and plans to celebrate his birthday on his ranch near Johnson

City, Tex., on Aug. 27. His medics are having a time putting a halter on the tough boy from the long-horn country, but they say he is getting along right well, and is a "fairly" good patient.
The junior senator from Kentucky, Alben W. Barkley, the former vice president, has been taking it easy in Washington but plans to get away quick to his little farm outside of Paducah. The "veep" maybe will look at his cattle and might even pitch a little hay. His secretary for many years, the lovely Mrs. Flo Bratten has advised her boss to take it easy on the pitching of hay. She admonished: "I have pitched some of that. And it's hard work. Before chow time, you are worn out and so hungry you could eat some of the hay in the field."
The phone rang the other day in Vice President Nixon's office when hurricane Connie was coming in. Drusilla Nelson answered and it was the weather bureau, wanting to know how much the rainfall was in the hole across from the Senate office building where a new edifice is being built. Miss Nelson said she was too busy with her wedding plans to run across the street in the rain and measure the puddles. They weren't very big puddles, anyhow.
President Eisenhower doesn't even have to take stick in hand to win a golf tournament. The chief already has been declared "honorary winner" of the $50,000 open championship tourney at the Shackamaxon Country Club, Scotch Plains, N. J., Sept. 6-11.

Magazine Says Truman, Ike In Real Feud

WASHINGTON — UP — President Eisenhower and former President Truman speak of each other in "top sergeant" language in a real hell-for-leather grudge, Look magazine reports.
The once warm friends, the magazine says, have developed a bitter feud which began during the 1952 presidential campaign.
A reconciliation still is possible, the magazine quotes friends of both men as saying, if one or the other would make the first move.
The Eisenhower-Truman friendship began to disintegrate during the 1952 campaign, the magazine reports, when Mr. Eisenhower endorsed the candidacy of all Republican candidates, including Sen. William E. Jenner (Ind.) and Joseph R. McCarthy (Wis.), without defending Gen. George C. Marshall.
Both McCarthy and Jenner had bitterly attacked Marshall, questioning his competence and loyalty. Mr. Truman several times had called Marshall the "greatest living American."
Look, in an article in its current issue, said the former Democratic President has been in Washington four times since he departed in 1953 but never has been invited to the White House.
When Mr. Eisenhower went to Kansas City in October, 1953, Mr. Truman telephoned the GOP President's suite at the Muehlebach Hotel to say he would like to pay his respects, the magazine said. It said the phone call was never returned.
Look said the Eisenhower staff professes total ignorance of such a call. But the magazine said this has only added to the antagonism that shows no signs of crumbling.
Quoting unnamed friends of both men, the magazine said both have spoken of each other in "top sergeant" language. It said Mr. Eisenhower has called Mr. Truman "that politician" in private while the Democratic ex-President has termed his successor a "phony" in certain traits.

Truman Gives Views On Delinquency

WASHINGTON — UP — Former President Truman thinks more stay-at-home mommas and poppas and more chores for children are the cures for juvenile delinquency.
Mr. Truman volunteered his views in a letter he sent July 19 to chairman Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) of the Senate subcommittee on juvenile delinquency.
Kefauver had written the former President to express regret that they had missed one another while in Chicago last month. Mr. Truman was leaving as Kefauver arrived.
In a reply disclosed Monday by Kefauver's office, Mr. Truman wished the Tennessee senator "every success" in the subcommittee work.
"If you want my opinion, which you did not request but which I gladly volunteer, the best cure is for the mommas and poppas to stay at home and raise their families," Mr. Truman wrote. "The responsibility of bringing up the next generation rests solely on their shoulders."
"I do not believe in babysitters or sending children to boarding schools just because the parents are too lazy to look after them. Besides, children nowadays have too many gadgets to fool with and not enough chores."

have been visiting their brother Lawson-Graham and family and sister Mrs. George Black and family this past week. Other visitors in the George Black home Saturday were Mrs. Phil Corcoran and children of Mobeetie, Mrs. Raymond Cox of Pampa, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Black and children of White Deer, and Mr. and Mrs. James Seitz and children.
