PLAY CLOTHES AND CASUALS are the thing right now. And a California designer has come up with some unusual new designs — and new fabrics, including a new treatment of denim. If your summer wardrobe is not yet complete, or if you're looking for new items for your vacation, you might look into these latest fashions.

FOR THE ESCAPIST whom pleasure lures and with whom the impression counts, Korea of California dresses denim. This fabric, Korndenim, is lighter weight, cooler, a black-filled material, softer in texture and subtly textured. Color combinations are radical and new. Black, gray and gold combine; gold, gray and purple join; apricot is mixed with gray and brown, and pink and gray and purple are contrasted.

This collection, casting denim in a new role, includes a wrap-around dress, casual and diletantish; a gay jumper, a camisole to go with a skirt or with shorts. A flaring beach coat, as colorful as Joseph's coat, is sleeveless, full and reckless.

Clipper Poplin in the brightest of colors gets accented with black trim and is made into a varied assortment of new playclothes. There's a middy, like the sailor boy's. It buttons way down on each side, beginning from the bottom and going part-way up and its huge sash spells of caprice. A toga play suit to make Julius Caesar and his Roman Legions envious, comes with one sleeve in — the other not there at all. Instead elastic banding secures it under one arm, causing the single sleeve to become more decorative, gay and different. A spaghetti belt slips in the toga at the waist. And its shorts are real short and trim. Bermuda shorts find accompanying halter and mandarin-like jackets in Clipper Poplin.

FOR COLORS AGAIN the choice is extensive. Black and white, always popular and always new, are arrayed together. Dazzle blue, hot pink, orange, lime, violet — the favored shades of Nature when spring comes round — all have been captured by Stephanie Koret's artist palette and brought to her designs.

Fabrics improved in the laboratory and refined for hard wearing also are used in the new line. Korndenim is a featherweight, linen-like weave of viscose rayon, cooler than linen and resisting wrinkles. Shannon is another linen-like weave whose bold texture has the hand-loomed look of County Cork linen. And Sorrento, combining 85 per cent cotton with 15 per cent nylon, even a silkworm would judge to be his product, for Sorrento is just like fine raw silk.

Stockinette is the name of a striped cotton jersey which goes into a new line of dresses. Relaxed and casual, these dresses salute the California look — that of graceful and easy living. As interest goes up to necklines in 1955 these dresses come hooded, for the sports car crowd; turtlenecked for the Marlboro Brando set; crew-necked for the sailorette at the Yacht Club; Italian styled for the devotees of Audrey Hepburn.

STRIPES ARE AS EXOTIC and bizarre as the pagodas of Chinatown. Mauve winds vertically, underlined by coral, reemphasized by yellow and heightened by a slate gray background. Coral takes to turquoise, lime and gray. And on a white background colors vibrate. Varied colored belts allow the wearer to play with any color fancy and situation dictate.

It's new fabrics — the big 10- and vibrant, pulsating colors that distinguish this collection and highlight these bold new designs.

CEREAL FLAKE FRUIT TARTS which need no cooking provide a dessert which brightens up dieting routine.

COOK'S NOOK

Calorie Substitution Plan Helps In Sticking To Diet

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food and Markets Editor
Let's face it. Even though overweight is a serious health problem, dieting is very difficult. Experts like Dr. Frederick J. Stare, head of Harvard's Department of Nutrition, believe that unless a person on a reducing diet gets some sense of satisfaction out of his meals, he will break the rules sooner or later. Also very likely gain back all the pounds he lost.

Select something you really want, then eat it. But cut out some other foods having the same amount of calories during the same day — some food you really don't want as much. Only be sure the desired dish is nutritionally sound.

Here's a crunchy sweet combining nutritious whole wheat flakes and canned fruit. It requires no cooking and few directions. Maybe this is the dessert you want most today.

Refrigerator Cereal Flake Tarts
Two cups finely crushed whole wheat flakes, 1/2 cup sugar, 1/2 cup melted butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons water.

1. Combine whole wheat flakes, sugar, butter or margarine and water.
2. Mix thoroughly with pastry blender.
3. Line pie pans with a sheet of saran large enough to extend three inches beyond all edges.
4. Press mixture evenly and compactly into six small individual pie pans.
5. Chill thoroughly before filling.
6. Spoon filling into chilled crust.
7. Remove tart from pie pan by pulling down on the saran from opposite sides of the pan.

Fill the crunchy cereal flake tarts with fresh, frozen or canned fruits. Allow 1/2 cup of fruit per serving. You may prefer to use ice cream, chilled pudding mixes, or chiffon fillings for the tarts.

Glaze for Peach Tarts
(Yield: Filling for six medium-sized tarts)

Two teaspoons sugar, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 3-4 cup syrup from canned peaches, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon butter or margarine, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 2 drops almond extract.

Mix sugar and cornstarch. Add peach syrup. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Remove from heat; add remaining ingredients; stir. Cool. Mix with peaches or pour over peaches after they are arranged in tart shells. Note: The almond extract emphasizes the peach flavor.

Ladies Golf Association Is Presented Golf Program By Pro Hart Warren

A program on beginning golf was presented by Hart Warren, Country Club golf pro, to the Ladies Golf Association, recently. He was assisted by Mrs. Lil Hall and Mrs. Sally McGinnis.

"People play before they are ready," Warren explained. He told of a golf course in Japan where there is a "beginners' area." Each person must pass an examination in the beginners' area before being allowed to play on the golf course.

Warren showed the women the proper grip of the club, assisted by Mrs. Hall and Mrs. McGinnis, and the proper way to swing. The two women then presented a skit on what not to do on a golf course.

"You must have the proper attire to play golf," Warren advised. He recommended "anything that is loose and comfortable" enabling the golfer to swing properly. He told the women to wear comfortable, rubber-soled shoes, explaining that "high heels are taboo."

Some rules of golf etiquette were explained by Warren. He said the word, "fore," means danger, or that someone has hit a ball in the direction of some other golfer. He said players should always look to see if someone is playing behind them. If the people in front are slow players or are looking for a lost ball, they should wave on the golfers behind, moving off the fairway and not resuming play until the group moving ahead is out of range.

He also explained that a handicap is an "equalizer," allowing a poorer player to compete with an advanced player on an equal basis.

The program was one of the first of three Warren will present to the Association. Friday's program will continue on the assumption that the beginning golfers have had two or three more lessons. He will be assisted by Mrs. F. M. Culbertson and Mrs. Lynn Boyd.

The program was introduced by Mrs. H. H. Hicks, president. She announced that Mrs. Lil Hall was the only Pampa woman to beat Patty Berg in the national golf-day competition. She also announced that Mrs. McGinnis won the third place prize in recent competition in Amarillo.

The Ladies Golf Association meets each Friday, with golf being played at any time during the day. Bridge sessions begin at 10 a.m. and continue through the afternoon. The luncheon is held at noon with the program to begin about 12:30 p.m. Deadline for luncheon reservations is noon Thursday, and they should be made at the Country Club.

BOARD

(Continued from Page 1) state board's policy for many years. "I don't think this board is even remotely dodging the question," Jackson said. Tate said his group is not planning to file any lawsuits immediately. "From now until the time school opens should be a period for good-faith negotiations," he told newsmen. Presents Petition Tate presented a petition at the session stating the responsibility for meeting the Supreme Court's decision rests "squarely upon the school officials of the state." The petition, signed by leaders of the Texas conference of branches of the NAACP, called upon the board to "command and use all of its powers, authority and prerogatives to press for prompt and efficient compliance with the court's decrees." The group also urged that the board use its powers "to prevent any willful or calculated actions by school districts under your jurisdiction to avoid, impede or circumvent the full realization of the spirit and purpose of the court's decrees."

CITIZENS

(Continued from Page 1) water system in the area, in view of the fact that the water line will not be dropped here by irrigation. Ivy Duncan, local real estate broker and property owner pointed out that he felt it "would be economic suicide" to go into the project. "There are more acre feet of water available to us underground than in the Canadian River," Duncan said as he quoted from a recent edition of the Texas Almanac. Reno Stinson, of the Cabot Companies, among those testifying at the meeting, said there was little need to consider the whole matter at the present time since the "thing is out as long as Amarillo is out." Duncan retorted that "I'm against it even if Amarillo calls an election." Duncan and M. K. Brown commended the commission for presenting so well-coordinated a picture of the dealings with the authority as well as a comprehensive picture of the contract. Merriman, in his report on storm drainage, said he felt other storm sewers were necessary for a complete system at this time. Among his recommendations were an $80,000 unit from McCullough to Wilks on Hobart; $45,000 unit on Wilks from Dwight to Hobart; $80,000 unit on Alcock from Roberta to Hobart. The second reading of close hearings on Craven, Louisiana and Georgia was approved by the commission. ## Big South American Nations Becoming Political Hot Spots

EDITOR'S NOTE: Charles M. McCann's foreign news commentary for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday will deal with the turbulent political situation in Latin America after the abortive revolt in Argentina. This first discusses Chile. The next two will take up Brazil, Ecuador and other countries where trouble is possible.

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Foreign Analyst

The "A-B-C" countries, the three largest in Latin America, are all politically hot and getting hotter. There has just been a brief, unsuccessful revolt against President Juan D. Peron of Argentina.

Whether Peron can keep on top of the situation remains to be seen. There are frequent reports of a possible coup in Brazil some time during the present campaign for the election of a president next October.

In Chile, third of the Latin American big three, a paralyzing transport strike started Friday.

Other Strikes Join Strike
Workers on the railroads, in the postal and telegraph services and in transport services in the big cities, joined in the walkout.

The postal, telegraph and railroad services are all owned by the state, so this was a strike against the Chilean government.

A nationwide 24-hour general strike has been called for this Thursday by the Chilean labor unions.

These strikes are all for higher pay. They are a reflection of a steadily worsening economic situation and causing increasing political unrest. As the result, 77-year-old President Carlos Ibanez Del Campo must be a worried man. Some army officers, who like strong-man rule, want to set up Ibanez as a dictator.

State of Emergency Called
Ibanez has resisted that suggestion. But as soon as last Friday's strike started, the government declared a state of emergency in big cities and industrial centers.

Ibanez was elected in 1952 for a six-year term. Chile has had 23 presidents since 1920. Eleven of them have failed to fill out their full terms, in addition to two who died in office.

Events may force Ibanez to resort to a dictatorship again. He ruled as dictator once, and made a remarkable comeback 21 years later. This time he seems disinclined to try one-man rule if he can help it.

Ibanez is a durable person. They used to call him "the iron man" in the old days. Then he was a swarthy, handsome, robust army man.

In Politics in 1924
He got into politics in 1924, when he was a member of an army committee which forced the resignation of President Arturo Alessandri.

Ibanez became acting president in 1927, then was elected for a full term. But he was forced out in 1931 and fled to Argentina. He went back home in 1937, when Alessandri was again in office.

Ibanez made his big comeback when he was elected for his six-year term in 1952.

Chile has enormous mineral wealth. Its copper reserves constitute 36.8 per cent of the world's total, for instance. But inflation is a difficult enemy to defeat.

JIM CRACK

By JIM DEAN

AN EXPOSE in Harper's magazine in which one John Fischer purports to tell the true story of Davy Crockett has apparently disturbed at least two Texas columnists, and unless I miss my guess, there will be many other writers to come out in varying degrees of indignation at this article which dares to separate fact from legend about a national hero.

The come-back of columnists on such a trivial matter may have little interest to readers here, but I should like to point out a striking difference in the approach of two writers in criticizing Fischer's article.

The two are Wes Izzard of Amarillo and Paul Crume of The Dallas Morning News.

Crume, perhaps Texas' most celebrated columnist, takes a light-hearted view of the debunker. Fischer wrote that Davy Crockett was a drunk, an illiterate, a wife and child deserter, a failure at everything he tried and a man who dodged army duty and took to the woods at the mention of work.

Crume says Fischer seems to feel that a hero cannot be a bum. Says Crume:

"We would remind him that this is a free country and heroes have the same rights as anybody else."

"It is painful to us to say also that a few people still don't like work. A few are able to escape to the woods like Davy. Others write newspaper columns, edit magazines, etc."

MR. IZZARD, on the other hand, is quite upset at this attack by the former Amarillo citizen who is now in the "big-time" magazine business.

He cautioned in a recent column: "Don't read the editor's page in the current issue of Harper's magazine. It will just make you mad."

Izzard's approach seems rather shallow to me. He contends that it isn't right that the true story should be told of the great Davy Crockett.

"Why can't debunkers let us have our heroes?" he asks. And he sums up his criticism with this:

"The main thing about this sort of debunking is that it makes the debunker feel slightly superior to the hoodwinked masses."

The thing that disturbs me here is that someone, especially a newspaper man, should find a reason to object to truth.

Why is it that we find it necessary to surround our heroes with unnecessary fantasy?

Is a hero less of a hero because he turns out to be a human being with the flaws of all human beings?

TRUTH WOULD never hurt the Davy Crockett story in our history if it had not been for all the lies that were told in advance of the truth. Even then, I doubt that Davy Crockett will suffer, but rather those who helped perpetuate the lie.

In the first place, the fairy tale part of Davy Crockett's life was brought out to appeal to children, and they took it in with such completeness that nothing will shake their enthusiasm until another hero comes along.

If you ask my youngest son, David, what his name is, he will insist that he is "Davy Crockett."

But he will grow up.

And when he does, I will not be afraid for him to learn, if he is interested, that Davy Crockett was, after all, a human being, with the generous mixture of the vices and virtues of all men. And that he was a man who apparently believed in individual freedom and liberty; that he believed in them enough to die for them — and that's why he is a hero.

But I would want him to learn further that after we put away our childish things and our childish thoughts, it is not men who are to be exalted, but rather ideals and principles which are not subject to the weaknesses of the flesh.

OVER IN MIAMI, Mr. Harvey L. Bailey has a unique problem. He writes:

"During my time in Japan, I married a Japanese girl. During the months she has lived here, she has been unable to make an acquaintance with anyone of her nationality, though I know there are a few in this area. I would appreciate it if you would mention this in your paper so we could get to know someone of her nationality. She likes it here fine but sometimes she wants to see and speak to someone from Japan."

Mr. Bailey may be reached at the Conoco Service Station in Miami, and I hope this will be of some help to him.

ON THE SUBJECT of persons of foreign nationality visiting or living in this country, Pampa folks were tremendously impressed with the two foreign exchange students who visited here last Friday as guests of the Kiwanis Club.

Husky-voiced Gabriella Micks, the 18-year-old charmer from Florence, Italy completely captivated the Kiwanians. And Jean Delhouse of Liege, Belgium proved to be quite the master of the quip. Both will do well.

THE POET'S NOOK
You lovers of poetry have a treat in the new radio program which began yesterday over KPAT. If you missed yesterday's installment, my sympathy.

Earl Davis played an RCA Victor album entitled "A Cure For Loneliness" with music by Wayne King and poetry selections read by Gahien Drake.

Drake is not the best in the field of poetry interpretation, but he is adequate, and with the music of Wayne King in the background, this album makes for a pleasant 30 minutes of listening.

The program will be daily — 1:30-2 p.m., music with poetry selections.

More contributions to The Nook today, and let's hope they continue. Mrs. H. J. Pickett, who recently had one of her poems published in a religious magazine sends the following:

DO I LOVE YOU
She: Do I love you; yes or no?
Love is hunger; love is woe.

He: Love is beauty; love is joy;
Love is wonder; girl and boy.

She: Love is fickleness; love is fever;
Love is just a gay deceiver.

He: Love is glory, love is true;
Both: Love is us dear, me and you.

Maclie Lester Pickett.
It appears they won that argument.

Thanks to Mrs. Pickett for that offer. It is a clever idea. There are other selections from Mrs. Pickett which will be used in the future installments of the nook.

DOUBLE TAKE

Movie fans will do a double-take when they see Columbia Pictures' new film "Picnic." It stars Rosalind Russell, often referred to as Hollywood's "glamorous clotheshorse."

Top picture shows her as she appears in the film — no make-up, no smart togs, no glamor. A far cry from her usual stylish self in the bottom picture.

Ike's Son Stationed Closer To White House

By MERRIMAN SMITH
WASHINGTON — UP — Backstairs at the White House:

Maj. John S. Eisenhower, his wife, Barbara, and their three children will arrive shortly at Fort Belvoir, Va., which is about a 20-minute drive from the White House.

This means for the next year at least the President and Mrs. Eisenhower will see more of their son, his wife, and the grandchildren than they have since entering the White House.

Even when the President and Mrs. Eisenhower are away this summer in Colorado, John, Barbara and the kids will be able to use the Gettysburg farm on weekends if they so desire.

And any day now the dolls and velocipedes will be showing up along the White House hallways, sure signs that the kids are in the vicinity.

Incidentally, some of John's classmates, at the staff and command school at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where the President's son was stationed for the past year, are quite irate at the Army for discharging that John was not in the first 10 of this year's class.

These classmates say it was almost unheard of to announce the top 10 in Leavenworth, thus showing that young Eisenhower was not in the group. They point out that the public did not know for years later that Dwight D. Eisenhower finished in the top 10 of his class at Leavenworth.

"Home" to Sherman Adam, the assistant to the President, and his wife is a modest barn-red crooked-house overlooking a broad bay field at Lincoln, N. H.

Lincoln has been their hometown since their marriage in 1923, and their present house was built in 1939. When the President and Adams recently visited Lincoln, they were both made honorary police chiefs.

The presiding officer, in handing the badge to Mr. Eisenhower, remarked: "That really makes you commander-in-chief of all the armed forces."

For the first time since television became a part of the President's news conference, the cameras ran out of film at Mr. Eisenhower's last meeting with reporters.

The cameras which record the conference for later showing on television can run about 31 to 33 minutes without re-loading. They ran out last Wednesday just as Mr. Eisenhower made his impassioned plea for congressional approval of his atomic ship project.

From now on, the company covering the conference on a pool basis will be permitted to install a standby camera to prevent a recurrence of last Wednesday's embarrassment.

First chickens on the Eisenhower farm at Gettysburg are gifts from New Hampshire, a breed developed at the state university.

Woman Says She Eluded Kidnapers

HOUSTON — UP — A 43-year-old woman called her sister in Houston from New York Monday, saying she was kidnaped by two burglars and taken to New York before she eluded the men.

The woman, Mrs. Mabel Greer, had been missing since last Wednesday and police feared she had met with foul play. Her car was found abandoned in Galveston Sunday and an empty wallet, a torn undergarment and a pair of high heel slippers were found in the car.

Mrs. Greer reported her Houston home burglarized last Monday night, and the following night she reported her car — the Sweet Tooth Palace — burglarized.

Mrs. Greer called her sister Mrs. J. B. Tarver, from a New York hotel Monday. She told her sister that the two men who burglarized her car had kidnaped her and forced her to drive to Galveston.

They took all her money there, with the exception of $100 which she had hidden in her clothes, Mrs. Greer said, then abandoned her car and took her to New York in another car.

Mrs. Greer said she eluded her kidnapers and checked in at the Tudor hotel in New York where she placed the call. She said she had not notified New York police for fear the kidnapers would catch up with her again.

However, Houston police contacted New York authorities. Later New York detectives notified Houston that Mrs. Greer had checked out of the hotel and was flying back to Houston.

MAKING A GO OF LIFE

By ROY L. SMITH
Read It John 8-11.

The sense of guilt is common to all men. A second fact with which we come in contact as we begin studying the spiritual nature of man is that all persons experience the sense of guilt. It is not necessary to go into an extended explanation of the various factors that educate the individual conscience, but we must observe that conscience is as universal as sex.

Deep down within the consciousness of every person there is an inner citadel of authority which passes judgment on every act of life. It never argues or debates issues; it only judges. But those judgments have a tremendous effect upon all of life. It appeals to us as authority. It is authority.

It interrupts us in the midst of even the most precipitate action to warn us that we are going in the wrong direction, and any defiance of the counsels of conscience leaves us with a compound of fear, weakness, and uneasiness which is commonly called "the sense of guilt."

This does not mean that the consciences of all men judge the same things to be wrong. It only means that the consciences of all men judge.

A long list of differences intrude at this point. But the spiritual effect of doing anything adjudged by conscience to be wrong is always the same in all individuals. One act may produce the sense of guilt in one life, and another act may produce the same sense of guilt in another life.

But the sense of guilt arises in each life because of a defiance of conscience and always results in uneasiness and fear. This is a spiritual fact of the utmost importance which any man must reckon with who undertakes to make a go of life.

This restlessness within me which I feel in the wake of wrongdoing is something holy, O God. It is not to be dismissed lightly, thrust back into oblivion, or treated contemptuously. In it there is the highest hope I know of coming out into the light of thy presence, Amen.

Go back into your memory to the last time you suffered a severe sense of guilt. Try to recall the physical sensations that accompanied it — nervousness, muscular uncertainty, sleeplessness, tenseness, and fears. Is this not a spiritual warning?

Air Force Academy Opens Officially Next Monday

Editor's Note: This is the first of three dispatches about the U.S. Air Force Academy, which opens next Monday at its temporary site in Denver, and the men who open it.

By JACK WILKINSON

DENVER — UP — The U.S. Air Force Academy will be officially opened Monday, July 11 to culminate seven years of planning, research and waiting and the realization of a dream that dates back to the early 1920's.

While the permanent site near Colorado Springs is being built, the academy will be housed on the northeastern corner of Lowry Air Force Base in Denver. Officials estimate the Colorado Springs site will be ready for occupancy by 1957.

The highlight of the dedication ceremonies Monday afternoon will be the actual swearing in of the first class of cadets. Principal speakers will be Secretary of Air Harold Talbott and Lt. Gen. Hubert R. Harmon, the academy's superintendent. Others on the program will be U.S. Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Nathan Twining; Gen. Thomas D. White, vice-chief of staff; Maj. Gen. Charles Carpenter, chief of chaplains; and Col. Robert Stillman, commandant of cadets at the academy.

An Air Show Planned

The air academy's eastern brethren, West Point and Annapolis, will be represented by marching corps of 50 cadets and 35 midshipmen. The famed air demonstration team, the Thunderbirds, are to give a 15-minute aerial salute. Also scheduled is a "fly-by" show of 24 B-24's, 12 B-29's and 24 F-86's.

The move to give the airman his own school began in earnest in 1947 when the Air Force "won its independence" from the Army. On Aug. 16, 1948, the Air Force Academy planning board was established to look into the situation.

In 1954, Congress authorized an expenditure of $126 million to establish the Air Force Academy. Eisenhower signed it into law on April 1, 1954.

Mr. Eisenhower's first move was to bring out of retirement a former classmate at West Point, Gen. Harmon, to take over as first superintendent of the academy.

Talbott Chose Site

Following an extensive search that took several months, Air Secretary Talbott chose the site for the academy. He picked a 17,000-acre tract of rolling ranchland at the foot of the rampant ranges of the Rockies just north of Colorado Springs.

Since an entire city had to be built to house the agency students and workers, the temporary site was set up at Lowry, where the President maintains his "Summer White House." Given 43 buildings at Lowry, the 66-year-old Harmon carefully selected a 350-man staff of professional educators and airmen to greet the first class.

The first class of 301 will test the strength of a curriculum devised by faculty head Brig. Gen. Don Zimmerman, who spent five years getting the study courses together.

To Spotlight English

"All the courses were carefully chosen and reviewed by professors from Columbia and Stanford Universities and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology," Zimmerman said. "Especially major field will follow a normal progression through four years. One chief departure from the usual procedure at West Point and Annapolis is our plan to spotlight English courses."

Zimmerman said the airman will spend most of their time studying in "the areas of social humanities and scientific studies." He said the airman's academic load will spread out over eight 17-week semesters and 2,799 hours — leading to and ending in a Bachelor of Science degree.

To be eligible for academy entrance, each potential airman must be a citizen of the United States; be of good moral character; be at least 17 years old and less than 22; never have been married; be physically qualified for flying duties and pass the mental examination.

For the first six years, the air force is asking 10 nominations by each congressman, instead of the normal two.

"We anticipate around 5,000 applications each year, Harmon said. Next — The site and the proposed architecture touch off a chain of controversy.

Once Into Pocket Enough

MANCHESTER, England — UP — Dr. T. E. Jessop, vice president of the Methodist Conference of England, Monday criticized churchgoers who sing hymns with their hands in their pockets. He said "the only time in a service when a hand may and should move into a pocket is at the offertory."

March To Feudalism?

Those who are confused by the picture of militant labor unions marching roughshod over our economy, may find some enlightenment in a statement the A. F. of L. recently made before the Supreme Court. In this utterance, the voice of union, in the person of Donald Richberg, said: "The worker becomes a member of an economic society when he takes employment . . . the union is the organization or government of his society . . . It has in a sense, the powers and responsibilities of a government. We can summarize by comparing union membership to citizenship in a political society. Both are compulsory upon individuals."

There you have it. The labor bosses, filled with the grace and charm of a Caesar Borgia, have set up and are setting up actual governments from which no individual is to be allowed to escape. Is it any wonder that violence ensues?

If one will permit his mind to explore the inevitable consequences of such labor governments, functioning in an area already ruled by still other governments, some interesting conclusions can be reached.

The first of such conclusions would be that the American people are rapidly becoming the most dominated, ruled and subjugated people in the world.

The second conclusion would be that our own legalistic governments must be lacking in something or they would never tolerate this intrusion of what amounts to a foreign sovereign over the denizens of their domain.

The third conclusion would be to question what good any of these rival satrapies accomplish in the way of permanent progress, when it is all too apparent that each of them owes its existence to its ability to filch money from its subjects.

With the rise of unionism, Americans have turned back the clock to the days of feudalism and banditry. Feudalism was characterized by the multiplicity of governments which could and did harass the individual citizen. Banditry has always been characterized as that activity which through force and violence produces plunder and booty for the bandits. It's an interesting, if depressing commentary.

The overall conclusion which is forced upon us by Mr. Richberg's testimony, is that there is supposed to be no escape for any of us. If the unions are successful in their drive for a universality of membership, then the very fact of employment places each wage earner in the position of double jeopardy, double taxation, and double punishment. This is really shocking as we view it for the first time, yet Americans are used to the quadruple threat of city, county, state and federal governments. So, one more government (that of the union) would merely make five instead of four.

If the trend continues toward multiplicity of government, we shall indeed live again under feudalism. Then, the only recourse left to us will be the raising of our own armies individually so that we can protect our own property from the predation of both "lawful" and unlawful gangs.

How could we ever have wandered so far away from the concept of individual liberty for which America was created a nation?

But an even bigger question is: Can we get back to individual self-reliance and forego this unparalleled descent into a state of serfdom?

Mac Says Baseball OK But Old Time Fans Are Gone

By HENRY McLEMORE

Baseball's High Commissioner, Ford Frick, wants to know what the fans are watching with baseball — as well he might.

With attendance falling faster than a hen's feathers at moulting time, what used to be the national game is anything but that. Few of the Major League clubs make money, and in the minors they are so bad the fans are afraid to go to a game lest the owner put the bite on them for the price of a ship ashore.

To aid him in diagnosing baseball's ills Commissioner Frick has issued a questionnaire (you probably saw it in your paper) which he hopes the nation's fans will answer. In it he asks a raft of questions. Do the tickets cost too much? Is parking too difficult? Would you rather watch the games on TV? Don't you like your home team? As a friend of Ford's since 1928 and a fan since 1914, when I broke a boyish leg sliding into second base, I feel it my duty to answer his quiz.

I don't think there is anything wrong with baseball. It is one of the most enjoyable games to play and the most exciting of them all to watch. And the baseball played today is just as superbly played as it ever was, possibly more so. Ted Williams, Willie Mays, Duke Snider, Robin Roberts and other present-day stars could have made any baseball team since Double Day's time.

Games today are played on better diamonds, in better parks, and there is even a tendency on the part of the owners to fret a bit about the comfort of the customers.

Some Gems From A Friend Of Man

I want to quote further from some gems from Charles T. S. reading's new book "Real Freedom." I call Mr. Sprading a friend of man because after reading his book I am convinced that he has no plans to enslave anyone.

Under his chapter on "Freedom of Thought" he makes some remarkable statements. Listen to these: "Whatever advancement has been made is due to freedom. Slavery is static; freedom is dynamic. Man can accomplish nothing without freedom to act. A hampered thought is worthless."

Unafraid Speakers "To get the truth, the speaker must be unafraid. Speech controlled by fear is of no value to the hearer. All believe in the free exchange of goods between the states but some do not believe in a free-exchange of ideas between individuals. A dealer in ideas is of more importance than a dealer in merchandise."

The above also applies to a newspaper as well as speakers. A newspaper that is afraid is of no value to its readers as far as interpreting justice and ideologies that promote peace and good will and develop character.

Teachers Who Are Afraid "The above also applies to teachers. Teachers who are afraid to think out loud on all social problems are really not educators. They can be of little value to their students. They cannot stimulate the youth of the land to inquire after understanding if they themselves are afraid to inquire after understanding for fear they might lose their jobs or "security."

It will be remembered that this column has been offering $500 to any superintendent of schools or any member of the board of education or any Protestant preacher holding a pulpit in any of the ten counties in which Freedom Newspapers, Inc. circulate if he would answer a few questions as to how he would before a court to determine whether tax-supported schools are in agreement with the Golden Rule. These superintendents and teachers and preachers are like the speakers controlled by fear — of no value to their hearers.

Then this wise, 38-year old liberal continues: "Freedom of thought is the force that creates that improves. Authority is the mental slavery of every period of history. Freedom of thought is the emancipator of the mind and the forerunner of human progress."

Freedom of thought is the force that creates that improves. Authority is the mental slavery of every period of history. Freedom of thought is the emancipator of the mind and the forerunner of human progress.

Guaranteed Wage Gets Cool Reception By Some Unions

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — Many labor leaders have begun to take a dim view of Walter P. Reuther's new "seigniorial unemployment compensation benefit" contracts as a result of further study of its possibly adverse political and economic effects. Its reception in union circles outside his automobile area has been less than enthusiastic.

The practical problem of persuading more than a score of states to change their unemployment compensation statutes baffles union politicians. They require amendment because they now provide that state payments shall be decreased in proportion to the companies' unemployment grants, thus robbing the Reuther-Ford-General Motors agreement of their essential gains.

In the past, especially during the Roosevelt-Truman era, the three big unions — American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the United Mine Workers — have been able to achieve their aims by concentrating and influencing a few high officials at Washington. They have centered their lobbies and public relations offices and activities at the Capital in fine new buildings.

Now, they will have to decentralize and fan out to more than 20 state capitals, where they do not possess the power and influence that they once did around the White House or on Capitol Hill. Moreover, most State Legislatures are dominated by rural members under lopsided and unrealistic apportionment arrangements. They may not be sympathetic to schemes which will undoubtedly raise the cost of living, especially as farm income has been dropping.

Thus, it may be years, if ever, before the Reuther program can spread throughout the nation. Indeed, there is some doubt whether it can be inaugurated in Michigan and Ohio, two leading automobile-making states, without revision of existing laws.

These labor missionaries will face stiff opposition in the Southern states, where the unemployment allowances are far below those in other manufacturing areas. In the South, introduction of the Reuther plan would destroy the wage differential which that section now enjoys over rival plants elsewhere. The textile industry would be especially vulnerable.

Labor may receive unexpected help, however, in its law-revision drive. Manufacturers' organizations, normally hostile to such demands, may favor them because, the more a state pays its jobless, the less the company has to hand out.

Incidentally, Reuther's rejection of the Ford offer to sell its stock to employees at bargain prices, to employees at bargain prices, is more difficult for middle-aged or older men to obtain employment. Partial compensation for acceptance of the reform is supposed to be greater productivity, and for that the young and strong and ambitious will be needed on the payroll.

The new financial burden on corporations may also make it more difficult for middle-aged or older men to obtain employment. Partial compensation for acceptance of the reform is supposed to be greater productivity, and for that the young and strong and ambitious will be needed on the payroll.

Union Bosses Hold Forth On Arkansas Power Project

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — After a visit to the sheriff's office in the courthouse of Crittenden County, Ark., a few miles west of the Mississippi, opposite Memphis, Larry McMullen, of the Press-Scimitar, drove me down a hard-shell road to the site of the Dixon-Yates steam power plant, which has been raising political commotion in Washington and Tennessee. Here is another opportunity for the construction unions of the AF of L to loot and extort as most of them did on the water construction and on the atomic plants at Paducah and at Jopps, Ill. There EBASCO corporation had to give up on a vast job in surrender to the great corruption. EBASCO is trying again at Dixon-Yates.

McMullen covers the Arkansas run for the Press-Scimitar. I felt that I was doing a Lincoln Steffens in draining him of information as that old Communist brain-picker did for his "shame of the cities" in the muck-raking days. But Mac said I was his assignment today and rattled off information which I might not have gathered in weeks.

Cecil Goodwin, the sheriff, had laid it down that he would enforce the Arkansas right-to-work law. I was wondering how a country sheriff would go about that. Orval Faubus, the governor of Arkansas, recently vetoed a bill to withhold "unemployment benefits" from picketing strikers. So an employer must pay taxes to support an idle employee parading before his place with abusive placards. Under Faubus, how much could the sheriff do against professional mischief-makers on a huge building job out in the cotton moon?

We have to at a spot where several hard-used sedans were parked. The hokey-poker wagon was open for business, offering sweet water and candy bars. There were half a dozen heavy rigs off in the field of 142 acres, manned by subjects of William E. Maloney, the boss of the operating engineer, with headquarters in Chicago, a winter palace on Miami Beach and a deluxe farm in northern Illinois. He used to race his own stable of thoroughbreds. There were visible to the naked eye not more than half a dozen grub-hog workers, subjects of Joe Moreschi, perpetual president-detector of the hoodlums and common laborers. Another car came up and two men got out and came over to us. McMullen introduced me to Joan Gorman and Ed Tate.

Gorman is president of the building trades council of Memphis and Crittenden county. He is about 65. I would say, gray, spare and of better countenance than Moreschi, Nick Strone, the racketeer of the Pittsburgh jurisdiction, and the late Mike Carozzo, of Chicago, who started as a bargaining agent for prostitutes and died owing the U.S. treasury $250,000 tax delinquency on his union graft. None of those parasites ever was elected to any union office. Gorman, I had learned, bears a decent reputation in Memphis. But even so he was a door-to-door peddler, selling stockings up to 15 years ago and then, about 50, became a laborer. Now he shows signs of substantial wealth so I am inquiring further. It would mean nothing in many of our states but, in Tennessee, the fact that he is a member of a lower house in the legislature seems to be a favorable distinction.

Tate is a younger fellow. He had a fine purple shanty on his right eye. He seemed a little morose, in the slave states of the northern but McMullen told me later that Tate had said, "well, that Pegler is like Davy Crockett. He says what he believes." Tate looked about and commented on the absence of police protection.

Mr. Gorman began it. He said he had read my work about unionism. I asked him how long he had been in it. He said 17 years. I asked whether he had attended the first convention and election in 32 years, held in St. Louis in 1921. He said no. I mentioned a character named Irving, boss of some Kansas City locals who had been a congressman from Harry Truman's home district.

"He had two Cadillacs in Washington," I said, "given him by his grateful boys." Mr. Gorman glanced a little away at his car. "We have one Ford," he said.

Tate said I ought to stick around and learn something about Arkansas. I said I had been over at Hot Springs and Little Rock last December and wasn't as green as I might seem.

"Did you see Joe Moreschi in Hot Springs? He goes there a lot," said Mr. Tate. "You ought to go there and get that off," pointing at my middle, a foul blow in view of my mannerly restraint about that shiner of his.

Gorman said not more than 110,000 common laborers would be hired on the whole job. At a minimum that would be $2,850 in fees and dues for this union alone. But that view leaves out of the reckoning the kind of extortion that went on at Jopps. EBASCO finally threw up the contract there. The total size of it was $128,000,000. They were making four electric plants for the atomic project at Paducah and certain bosses of the operating engineers' hogged it so greedily that there was no discipline at all. Evian Dale, of the common laborers, a big boss with 50 business agents under him, finally got 15 years and a fine of $10,000 from Judge Fred L. Wham in the federal court in East St. Louis, who said he had never heard of such extortion. Dale had control of most of the labor pool and he had asked EBASCO for one per cent of the total price for "peace" on the job. That would have been $1,280,000 for Dale and whomever else, if anyone.

"We screen all our officials," Tate said. "All our officers are members of the Masonic Lodge." This was a new qualification for union office. But I let it lie. We were getting friendly. We three lined up beside the road and George Pierce of the Press-Scimitar, snapped the first group picture since the world began of two executives of Moreschi's union on stinking terms with Pegler.

There has been a tussle between two locals of the common laborers. No. 1328 in Jonesboro claiming jurisdiction over "northeast Arkansas" and Gorman's local 141 of Memphis, with a rival claim. Gorman said Ivy Parks, of the Jonesboro local, showed no credentials. Parks later closed his field office at Hulbert, Ark., and went somewhere, but the fight is not settled. It may account, for Tate's black eye.

The little Arkansas towns, I had heard by the decline of cotton, want all the jobs they can hail down for their local people. Gorman says he has 650 Arkansas people in his Memphis council.

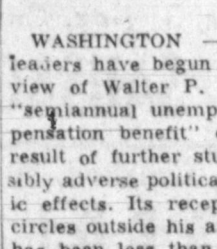

But the proposition that men should be able to work out their own salvation from any union seems entirely lost to view in the cotton belt as it has been for 20 years. He seemed a little morose, in the slave states of the northern but McMullen told me later that Tate had said, "well, that Pegler is like Davy Crockett. He says what he believes." Tate looked about and commented on the absence of police protection.

Mr. Gorman began it. He said he had read my work about unionism. I asked him how long he had been in it. He said 17 years. I asked whether he had attended the first convention and election in 32 years, held in St. Louis in 1921. He said no. I mentioned a character named Irving, boss of some Kansas City locals who had been a congressman from Harry Truman's home district.

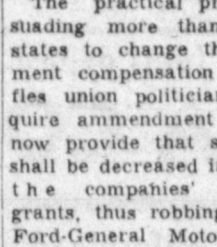

"He had two Cadillacs in Washington," I said, "given him by his grateful boys." Mr. Gorman glanced a little away at his car. "We have one Ford," he said.

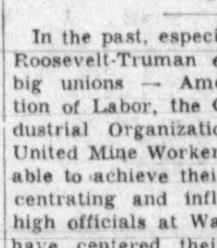

Eugene M. Zuckert, addressing the recent Philadelphia convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, said, "It is our great moral duty . . . to do all we can to exploit as quickly as possible the tangible benefits of nuclear energy to mankind."

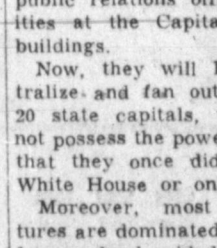

Zuckert, a former member of the Atomic Energy Commission, reportedly added that specific goals should be set up, and any barriers to meeting these goals "should be attacked with a philosophy analogous to that which enables us to meet objectives in wartime — subordination of concern about methods and cost." In the last seven words of that statement, Zuckert reveals what I consider to be a grave error in thinking. He seems to believe the collectivist doctrine that the end justifies the means.

The only possible benefits from "peaceful use of the atom" will be in providing services of a kind, and in a way, that leave us "better off" than we would have been without them. Following Zuckert's advice would, in my opinion, do exactly the opposite. It would leave us "worse off" both economically and in relation to the amount of freedom that would be left to us. Taking the wrong road is a poor way of getting to the right destination.

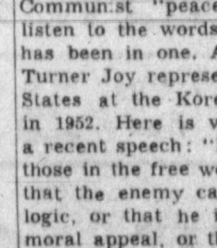

In order to reduce wage costs, it is expected that management will accelerate the "automation" process. Reuther has frequently assailed increased technology and mechanization as cutting down the number of jobs.

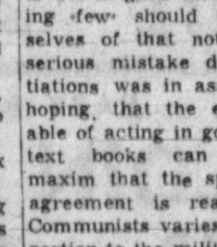

The new financial burden on corporations may also make it more difficult for middle-aged or older men to obtain employment. Partial compensation for acceptance of the reform is supposed to be greater productivity, and for that the young and strong and ambitious will be needed on the payroll.

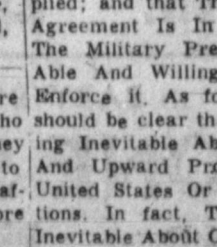

Incidentally, Reuther's rejection of the Ford offer to sell its stock to employees at bargain prices, to employees at bargain prices, is more difficult for middle-aged or older men to obtain employment. Partial compensation for acceptance of the reform is supposed to be greater productivity, and for that the young and strong and ambitious will be needed on the payroll.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — After a visit to the sheriff's office in the courthouse of Crittenden County, Ark., a few miles west of the Mississippi, opposite Memphis, Larry McMullen, of the Press-Scimitar, drove me down a hard-shell road to the site of the Dixon-Yates steam power plant, which has been raising political commotion in Washington and Tennessee.

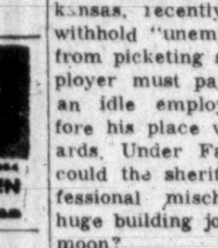

McMullen covers the Arkansas run for the Press-Scimitar. I felt that I was doing a Lincoln Steffens in draining him of information as that old Communist brain-picker did for his "shame of the cities" in the muck-raking days. But Mac said I was his assignment today and rattled off information which I might not have gathered in weeks.

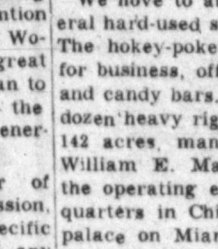

Cecil Goodwin, the sheriff, had laid it down that he would enforce the Arkansas right-to-work law. I was wondering how a country sheriff would go about that. Orval Faubus, the governor of Arkansas, recently vetoed a bill to withhold "unemployment benefits" from picketing strikers.

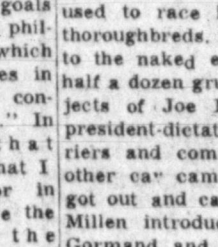

We have to at a spot where several hard-used sedans were parked. The hokey-poker wagon was open for business, offering sweet water and candy bars. There were half a dozen heavy rigs off in the field of 142 acres, manned by subjects of William E. Maloney, the boss of the operating engineer, with headquarters in Chicago, a winter palace on Miami Beach and a deluxe farm in northern Illinois.

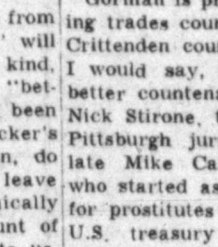

McMullen introduced me to Joan Gorman and Ed Tate. Gorman is president of the building trades council of Memphis and Crittenden county. He is about 65. I would say, gray, spare and of better countenance than Moreschi, Nick Strone, the racketeer of the Pittsburgh jurisdiction, and the late Mike Carozzo, of Chicago, who started as a bargaining agent for prostitutes and died owing the U.S. treasury $250,000 tax delinquency on his union graft.

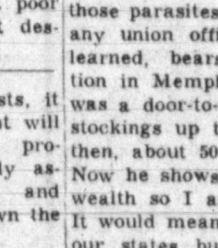

Tate is a younger fellow. He had a fine purple shanty on his right eye. He seemed a little morose, in the slave states of the northern but McMullen told me later that Tate had said, "well, that Pegler is like Davy Crockett. He says what he believes." Tate looked about and commented on the absence of police protection.

Tate said I ought to stick around and learn something about Arkansas. I said I had been over at Hot Springs and Little Rock last December and wasn't as green as I might seem.

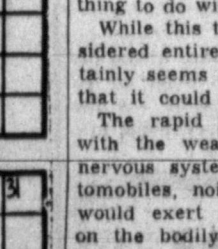

"Did you see Joe Moreschi in Hot Springs? He goes there a lot," said Mr. Tate. "You ought to go there and get that off," pointing at my middle, a foul blow in view of my mannerly restraint about that shiner of his.

The Doctor Says

By EDGAR F. JORDAN, M. D.

Ulcers occur both in the stomach proper and in that portion of the intestines lying next to the stomach which is known as the duodenum. The former is sometimes known as gastric ulcer and the latter as duodenal ulcer. Both of them are commonly spoken of also as peptic ulcer or ulcer of the stomach.

What cause or causes are responsible for peptic ulcer are partly unknown. There are some reasons for believing that the strain of modern life has increased the number of victims of peptic ulcer and has at least somewhat to do with its development.

While this theory cannot be considered entirely "proved," it certainly seems reasonable to believe that it could be true.

The rapid pace of modern life with the wear and tear on the nervous system of high-speed automobiles, noise, and all the rest would exert some kind of effect on the bodily functions which might easily be shown by an increased tendency towards stomach ulcers.

Regardless of this theory, it is certain that people with ulcers of the stomach who are getting along well may become much worse following an especially tiring or irritating conference, an emotional upset or a shock such as is brought about by a disaster in the family. This often happens even while the person is continuing a treatment which has relieved symptoms for a long time. The ulcer starts as a small defect in the lining of the stomach or mucous membrane, and becomes deeper and larger around as it develops. Eventually it may become deep enough to reach the tiny nerve endings which carry pain sensation to the brain.

Consequently, at the beginning, an ulcer rarely produces symptoms. The various medical treatments for ulcer have

THE TEAM THAT IS BEING given a good chance of taking over the league leadership in the West Texas-New Mexico League moves in for a two-game series with the Oilers tonight.

That would be, of course, the Amarillo Gold Sox. Fans won't recognize the Gold Sox from their previous appearance here, the Gold Sox having made numerous play changes since the start of the season.

Fans won't recognize the Gold Sox from their previous appearance here, the Gold Sox having made numerous play changes since the start of the season.

As that time the Gold Sox were 5 1/2 games behind the Oilers. Today, however, the Amarillos trail the Oilers by six.

But the fact that the Gold Sox are playing along at the same winning pace as the Oilers during the past two and one-half weeks means that our rivals 50 miles to the west of us have shown vast improvement.

The Gold Sox were buried in the cellar in the early part of the season and now rest in fourth place, 1 1/2 games out of third.

One of the reasons for the Gold Sox' upsurge is added pitching strength.

The Golden Hose have gotten a lot of pitching help from Beaumont, with whom the Sox have a working agreement.

One of these additions, Dave Sleich, will oppose the Oilers tonight. Sleich, however, lost to Red Dial in only time to face the Oilers since joining the Amarillo club.

Braves Aim At New Attendance Mark

MILWAUKEE —UP— The Milwaukee Braves are well on their way to another National League attendance record, with 1,006,215 paid admissions already recorded through the gates at Milwaukee County Stadium.

Despite a disastrous weekend, with the Braves losing four out of five games, an Independence Day crowd of 30,946 sat through heat in the mid-90s as the Braves dropped two games to the St. Louis Cardinals.

Last year the Braves didn't pass the million mark until the 14th of July, although they have been the first major league club to break the million mark for three straight years.

The Cardinals' double bill was the 35th home date and last year's millionth customer was counted at the 35th home appearance.

The weather has not had a great deal to do with attendance when the Braves are in town. The early part of the season usually sees many fans bundled in overcoats and hats, likely as not sweating out a cold drizzle but nonetheless present — and vocal.

Later on, the heat and humidity would give pause to fans of lesser heart.

There is, of course, no television of any Braves game in Milwaukee and this accounts for much of the attendance. Wisconsin fans may bring their own beer into the stadium, too, and many a thirsty fan can be seen at any game lugging his "six-pack" and followed by the wife and children, carrying their soft drinks and sandwiches. Parking is also very good and being improved all the time.

No one has made any definite predictions when it will happen, but with just a bit of luck and a decent performance on the field it's a safe bet the Braves will shatter their own record of 2,131,388 paid admissions well before the season ends.

Lefthanded Batsmen Dot All-Star Nines

CHICAGO —UP— The fans picked starting lineups loaded with southpaw sluggers for next Tuesday's major-league All-Star game, so rival Managers Leo Durocher and Al Lopez were faced now with a pressing need for southpaw pitching.

Each league, the fans picked a lineup composed of four lefthanded hitters, three righthanders, and one switch-hitter.

That could force Durocher of the National League to open the game with a lefthanded pitcher, such as Rookie Luis Arroyo of St. Louis, and Lopez of the American League to counter with lefties like rookie Herb Score of his own Cleveland Indians or Whitey Ford of the Yankees.

The need for a lefty seemed to be greater for Lopez, Indians' skipper who is directing the AL squad for the first time.

That's because the NL will open with a lineup including Duke Snider of the Dodgers and Ted Kluszewski of the Reds, who are tied for the major-league home run lead at 27, plus 20-homer slugger Ed Mathews of Milwaukee, and pesky spray-hitter Don Mueller of the Giants.

Ernie Banks of the Cubs, Del Ennis of the Phillies, and Roy Campanella is hobbled by a knee injury and may not even play. Red Schoendienst of St. Louis is a switch-hitter.

The AL will toss at Durocher a startling array including the great Ted Williams of the Red Sox, Yogi Berra of the Yankees, Mickey Vernon of the Senators, and Nellie Fox of the White Sox.

These southpaw hitters are a more dangerous group than the three righthanders — Jim Pflug of the A's, and Harvey Kuenn and Al Kaline of Detroit, Mickey Mantle of the Yankees is a switch-hitter.

Just how Durocher and Lopez will move to meet these threats will be known Wednesday when the pitchers and the substitutes on each squad are announced. The fans picked only the starting lineup, exclusive of pitcher. Player Mike Higgins' rampaging Red Sox.

There were many who felt downright sorry for Mike, the youngste-laden club was dumped into sixth place, 15 games off the pace, back on June 6.

But here they are one month later, only eight games behind the league-leading New York Yankees, from whom they swept a holiday doubleheader 4-2 and 10-3. That gave the Sox a streak of 10 victories in their last 11 games and 24 of their last 29. At that rate, they could make Higgins a top candidate for manager-of-the-year.

Can he keep this up? Well, throughout this streak the Sox have come up with solid pitching, plenty of power in Ted Williams, Jackie Jensen and Norm Zauchin, and some hustling, heads-up baseball.

To illustrate a point, take that doubleheader sweep against the Yankees, for example. Williams hit his 10th homer and a double to help win the opener; and Jensen connected for a grand slam (his 17th) and Zauchin for a three-run blast (his 16th) to clinch the nightcap. Willard Nixon demonstrated his customary mastery over the Yankees for five innings and then retired because of the heat. He Delock finished up with four shutout innings. After Mel Parrnell was knocked out in the second game, young Tom Hurd pitched 6 1-3 scoreless innings to earn the victory.

Major league clubs saluted Independence Day with a salvo of 37 homers — just three short of the all-time record for a single day. There were 20 hit in the National League and 17 in the American League.

The Cleveland Indians took over second place, five games behind New York, by taking both games of a twin bill from the Detroit Tigers 6-5 in 11 innings and 5-5. The Chicago White Sox dropped to third place when they split with the Kansas City Athletics, winning the opener 8-3 and dropping the second game 4-3. In the only single-game program, the Baltimore Orioles beat the Washington Senators 6-2.

In the National League, the Brooklyn Dodgers opened a 12 1/2 game lead by beating the Philadelphia Phils twice 11-2 and 4-3. Newcombe Gets 14th Win Don Newcombe pitched an eight-hitter for his 14th triumph and Duke Snider hit a pair of Dodger homers in the opening game. In the nightcap, Clem Labine pitched the full nine innings for the first time since his victory over the Giants in the 1951 pennant playoff.

Art Fowler's four-hitter and Ted Kluszewski's 27th homer played important roles in Cincinnati's victory, while Gene Baker's fifth-inning home run provided the Cubs with the margin of their nightcap win.

Pittsburgh won the opener from the Giants when walked McCall and Paul Giel each walked two batters in the ninth to force into the winning run. Willie Mays' 23rd homer — his second of the day — clinched the nightcap for the Giants.

Locals Capture Plainview Series

By BUCK FRANCIS Pampa News Sports Editor. Pampa's Oilers return to the friendly confines of Oiler Park tonight to open a two-game set with the Amarillo Gold Sox after splitting a July 4th doubleheader at Plainview yesterday.

The Oilers, by dividing yesterday's twinbill, gained the edge in both the series at Plainview and the overall five-game series that began here last Friday.

The Seitzmen won two of the three games at Plainview and divided the two games here Friday and Saturday, giving the Oilers a 3-2 edge in the overall series.

For the season, the Oilers now hold nine wins in 14 starts with the Ponies.

Buddy Woods is expected to draw the pitching assignment for the Oilers tonight. He will be opposed by Dave Sleich of the Gold Sox.

Tonight will be "Scotties Thrift Stamp Night" at Oiler Park. Game time is 8:15.

Yesterday's split enabled the Albuquerque Dukes to gain a game on the Oilers in the league standings. The Dukes swept a pair from the cellar-dwelling El Paso Texans yesterday to move within two games of the pace-setting Oilers.

Red Dial notched his 11th win of the season as the Oilers won the first game of the twinbill with the Ponies yesterday afternoon, 7-6, in 10 innings.

Dial, however, needed help from Tom Pollet in the 10th. Pollet got the side out with the Ponies falling one run shy of catching up.

The regulation first game ended at 4-4. The Oilers then pushed across three runs in the top of the 10th to take what appeared to be a comfortable lead.

But the Ponies bounced back to score twice and they had the winning runs on base when the final out was made.

A two-run triple by Dial forced the 10th inning Oiler rally. Dick Hairston started the 10th inning spree with a walk, and moved around to score the tie-breaking run on successive singles by Jim Martin and Pete Carmona. Then Dial pounded his triple to the right field corner to send Martin and Carmona in with run numbers two and three and what turned out to be the winning runs.

A hit batsman and a homer by Don Stokes got the Ponies back in the ball game in the bottom of the 10th. L. B. Palmer and Doug Lewis were retired following Stokes' homer. Pollet came on while Lewis was batting after Dial had issued two balls to the Ponies first sacker.

Dale Perry and Howard Bierman followed with singles and a walk to Joe Della Monica loaded the bases.

Pollet got John McCole an easy grounder to end the game.

A three-run homer by Rach Slider, the first of the season for the little second baseman, accounted for all but one of the Oiler runs in regulation time. A solo homer by Jim Martin accounted for the other Oiler run in the regulation limit.

Slider came back in the second game to hit another homer. Curtis Hardaway also homered in the nightcap for the Oilers.

Plainview exploded for six runs in the first inning to win the second game. Dean Higgins, after the bad first inning, settled down to hold the Ponies to two hits and one run until he gave way to Jack Venable in the eighth.

WAR MATERIAL MOUNTAIN GROWS

"You're looking at acres and acres of strategic metals, in stacks of ingots 10 feet high. That's just a "small" part of one of the nation's largest stockpiles of materials vital to the wartime operations of the armed forces. It's at the Sharonville Storage Depot of the General Services Administration, near Cincinnati, covering a 602-acre area, interlaced with 19 miles of railroad track. There are nine 1000x240-foot warehouses, which are full. Outdoor storage has hardly been started yet. Additional loads for the stockpiles arrive daily in trains and trucks.

Rogers Discusses Foreign Aid Bill In Weekly Letter

In his weekly newsletter to the people of the 18th Congressional District, Congressman Walter Rogers discusses the foreign aid bill. He says, "Blackmail is a bad word and is no doubt deeply frowned upon in diplomatic circles. However, if we are to follow the logic that was advanced in arguing for passage of the foreign aid bill to the tune of $1,000,000,000 a year from every man, woman and child in the U. S., we must reach the inevitable conclusion that Uncle Sam is being taken.

Expenditures could not, under any circumstances, be justified. In other words, the proponents were saying that so long as Russia was a threat to this country, we should continue to pay money to the several countries mentioned in the foreign aid bill. It would logically follow that if Russia ceased to be a threat to this country, then these payments should cease. As all of you know, Nehru, of India, has frequently expressed contempt for our government and has recently completed a visit to Moscow and Belgrade. Tito, dictator of Yugoslavia, openly and flagrantly brags that he has a communist country that is more communist than Russia. He, too, has recently completed some visits to Moscow.

Paul Lavalle Orchestra Has 2-Head Tuba

By H. G. QUIGG
NEW YORK — UP— Maestro Paul Lavalle says there may be crazier bands than his, but he's pretty sure his is the only one with a two-headed tuba.

It takes two men to play it. Both blow at the same time. But while both are blowing, only one is fingering. The thing has two horns and two mouthpieces but only one set of valves.

This leads to a certain state of nervousness on the part of the guy who only blows. He has a key his lipping and puffing to the other guy's fingering without looking at the other guy's fingers.

How Did You Pick Mate? Not Of Free Will, Doc Says

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON — UP— So you think you picked your mate of your own free will, do you?

Dr. Maurice Burton doesn't want to disillusion you so I'll do it for him. You were merely the agency that put the choice into effect. A glorified puppet, so to speak. Here, heredity, environment and other factors pulled the strings that swayed your heart racing, your pulse pounding and sprayed you with the scent of orange blossom.

"Or it's not that bad," protests the gentle scientist (gentle despite the fact he is a hulking six-footer with a broken nose from a youthful fight). "Man is a reasoning animal and he has some margin of choice, you know."

"How much choice?"
"Er... well, a percentage."

Choice Not So High
And under continued pressure Dr. Burton concedes over a cup of coffee that his studies of animals tend to prove that man's freedom of choice is about 5 per cent in most matters of taste and probably less than that in matters of sex and love.

Ah, you say, but I love redheads or men with curly hair or tall girls or fat men. Why do you say that?
In Dr. Burton's view you didn't just make up your mind that was what you were going to like. There were elements in your personality that reacted to elements in her (or his) personality. You had very little to do with creating these elements, ever which peeps the head of the musician who only blows.

Below his nose are the four valves which the other musician is twiddling, but the blower-only can't see the fingers because of the rat's nest of pipes, a maze that would make a plumber flip. So he, an LaValle puts it, "has to mentally finger."

ments — they were handed down from your ancestors or added on by your environment.

"There is very little free will in the world," says Dr. Burton, who is deputy keeper of the departments of zoology at the London Museum of Natural History and author of many works on animal behavior.

"From my observations I'd say that from 90 to 95 per cent of our behavior is intuitive. So margin of choice is small in any case and even smaller when the emotions are involved."

Gets Some Surprises

Yet Dr. Burton is always being surprised by evidence that animals sometimes do exercise that freedom of choice against all theory.

He tells of the touching romance of a pedigreed cow and an unpedigreed bull which came to his attention some time ago. The cow was destined, of course, for a pedigreed bull that she insisted on nuzzling over the fence with this poor but honest critter.

Every time she was mated to a pedigreed bull she threw her calf — and back she would come to try to get over the fence to her true love. Finally, says Dr. Burton, the farmer gave up. "If you want him, have him," he declared, using words often uttered by fathers whose daughters throw themselves away on the wrong man.

Back to humans, Dr. Burton remarked that he himself had always fancied red-haired women. But his wife is a brunette.

"I must admit," he added thoughtfully, "that in some lights her hair has reddish glints. And our son..."

"Yes?"

"Is a redhead."

They'll Do It Every Time

By Jimmy Hatlo

Wagnerian music.

"This new instrument is more piercing in sound than the baritone, and gets into a new tonal range with the highs of the trombone."

The third instrument is a tuba named "Big Joe" which LaValle claims is the world's tallest. It's eight feet high. The player rests it on the floor, and toots into a mouthpiece that's mouth-high when he's standing up. LaValle says big Joe gives the tuba section more penetration.
