WASHINGTON BY GEORGE DURNO
Scuttled
Senate Democratic leaders woke up from a nice nap at the switch a little too late to give a clear right-of-way to some important items on the Administration's legislative program. As a result these measures are headed for the slaughter.

JAMES V. ALLRED
James V. Allred, attorney general, and candidate for governor of Texas at the coming democratic primary July 28th, will speak in the interest of his candidacy this evening beginning at 8 o'clock on the lawn at the courthouse. WEATHERFORD, (AP)—After an all-night fruitless search in wooded sections near here, Parker county officers, assisted by officers of other counties, Wednesday renewed their search for two men who escaped Tuesday after wounding a policeman and a farmer.

Side-Step
A great deal of the marathon orator during last week's tariff debate was aimed at killing off the Wagner Industrial Adjustment bill. By holding the floor on the subject of tariff the Republicans were increasing the odds daily they would NOT have to vote on the Wagner bill.

Local friends and admirers of the gubernatorial candidate predict a large crowd to hear the speaker. Mr. Allred will be introduced by Judge James T. Brooks, local attorney.

WEATHERFORD, (AP)—A farmer was shot and a policeman beaten unconscious and badly injured late Tuesday in an encounter with two men, one positively identified as among the four desperate convicts who escaped from the Harlem state prison farm near Houston late Monday.

Homes
The bill to provide easy terms for old-home renovating and new-home building had developed snags even before the legislative jam became apparent at all.

Both Allred's grandfathers wore the uniform of the Southern Confederacy. His father, Renne Allred, was born in Grayson county, and grew up there, marrying Mary Henson, whose mother was of the Burleson family. Renne Allred and his bride moved out by prairie.

Police Chief Bert Reynolds of Weatherford and Policeman Layman drove out from Weatherford. As they attempted to question the men, one turned and fled but the other was captured. The prisoner suddenly struck Layman, who was guarding him and wrested the officer's pistol from him. Beating him over the head with it, As Reynolds approached he began shooting.

Tool Dresser Is Struck By Flying Piece Of Steel

A peculiar accident happened to George Bury, tool dresser on the Frazier No. 1 well, being drilled about miles southwest of the city, Tuesday afternoon about 1:30. Bury was engaged in work about the well when a piece of steel from a bit struck him in the left thigh, going to a sufficient depth to cut an artery. Other workers on the well were sharpening a bit in the usual process when a piece of steel about half an inch long flew off when struck by a sledge hammer, and struck Bury in the left thigh. He lost considerable blood before a tourniquet was applied. He was brought to Big Spring hospital, where the piece of steel was extracted and his wound closed.

BLAME LOCAL POLITICS FOR FEDERAL CONTROL

The first thought that hits you when you look at the new crime prevention program passed by congress is the fact that it gives the federal government a great new extension of power.

The second is that we have brought it on ourselves by permitting our state and city governments, especially the latter, to sink into plain incompetency in the business of dealing with crime.

Putting extra power to handle crooks into the hands of Uncle Sam is a move which takes us farther than ever away from the old theory that states and cities are self-sufficient political units. The whole inter-relationship of our federal and local governments points in the opposite direction.

And yet it is equally clear that the step is a necessary one.

The deprivations of organized gangs of kidnapers have created a situation that is simply intolerable. Something has to be done; the only thing that can be done, immediately, is to strengthen the hand of Uncle Sam and call on him to do what local authorities cannot do.

As we do it, it is important that we remember why we are doing it.

Primarily, it is because the average American police force is an inefficient and graft-ridden outfit which simply can't do the job itself. And it is what it is because our local politics is what it is. In other words, we are just paying the price for the slipshod way we have chosen to govern ourselves.

The average city government is a product of old-line political machines. Such machines exist by favors—the favors that their leaders can do for people outside of the machine, and the favors which the leaders in turn pass on down to their subordinates.

The logical result is that the city governments themselves operate for the sake of the political machines and not for the interests of the people. And, since they are like that, the police departments suffer in exactly the same way.

Because of all this, the average police department is unable to fight crime effectively. Now, because of that fact, we are about to give the federal government powers that traditionally belong to local authorities.

It is essential for us not to forget why we are compelled to do it.

WE MUST KNOW ALL

President Roosevelt's sharp attack on the uncontrolled traffic in munitions strikes a responsive chord in the breast of every man who hopes to see the world continue at peace.

So long as private individuals stand to make millions upon millions of dollars out of preparations for war, governments everywhere will be under tremendous pressure to continue with such preparations—and since human nature is what it is, that means the creation of rivalries, fears, and suspicions which make war more and more likely.

The president endorses the Nye plan to investigate the whole traffic in munitions, and it is to be hoped that the investigation will be as thorough and as far-reaching as the senators can possibly make it.

Before we can deal with the problem properly, we shall need all the information about it that we can get.

WOMEN'S LAXATIVE MUST DO THIS

Women, because of certain organic disturbances, need laxatives frequently. Feen-a-mint is the delicious tasting chewing gum laxative that contains a laxative ingredient, regularly prescribed by physicians. You chew delicious Feen-a-mint, and this chewing distributes the laxative ingredient more evenly into the intestines, thus giving a "full" more natural action. Non-habit forming Feen-a-mint never shocks nor irritates delicate organs. Don't suffer "laxative dread," take Feen-a-mint the first "dangerous" day that starts waste matter poisoning into the system. Feen-a-mint contains no richness to upset stomach or diet or to get stale. "Delay" is dangerous—chew Feen-a-mint for constipation. 15c and 25c at druggists.

Scott Scores Winning Run In 6th Inning

Butler Brings Scott In With Hard Drive Into Left Field

Carter Chevrolet, making a late rally in League No. 2 of the Big Spring Soft Ball Association, edged out the First National team Tuesday, 3 to 2.

The Knee Action team started the scoring in the first inning. Payne got on base on an infield hit and Kirk brought him in with a single over second.

The First National outfit came back in their half of the second to knot the count when a Banker got on base on an infield hit, went to second when the Chevy team erred, and raced home on a line drive over short-stop.

The Carter boys scored run number two in the second frame. Wood singled and came home when Kirk got a nice single to right field.

The winning Chevy run was tabbed in the sixth when Scott singled to left and Butler swatted a hard one into left field to bring Scott in.

Football season still is several months away, but Coach Ed Henning of the Sweetwater Mustangs is planning to start his young and inexperienced Ponies a little early this season. The first few sessions will be somewhat of an organization line-up. Plans for weekly work-outs and other training points will be stressed.

The Cosden Oilers have been invited to enter a baseball tournament to be held on La Grave field in Fort Worth June 17-23. However, the Oilers will not enter, Manager Spike Henninger said Tuesday.

An International News Service slant on the Carnera-Baer odds: "If the first tangible odds available are any criterion, Primo Carnera will defeat Max Baer when the two clash for the world title, June 14. Jack Doyle, Broadway betting commissioner, posted his prices which make Carnera a 3 to 5 favorite."

Strangely enough, the citizens and most of the critics too, insist that Primo Carnera is going to win over Max Baer with his left-hand jab. The scribes say that the Preem's port poke is a demoralizing dew-drop.

After winning two in a row, the rejuvenated Men's Bible Class took the short end of a 13 to 2 score in their soft ball game with the Kiwanis Club Tuesday evening on the city park diamond.

A first inning rally by the Indians netted seven runs, which put the game on ice for them. Four more were garnered in the second and the other two in the third inning. The Preachers then tightened up to put the Clubbers out one, two, three during the last four innings of the game.

The only scores tallied by the Preachers were in the fourth inning when Reed, Indian left fielder, mistook a fair ball for a foul and allowed two to cross the plate.

Sturdy Right Arm Gives Cards 6-3 Decision Over Cubs

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The sturdy right arm of Paul Dean Tuesday earned a sixth consecutive victory for his owner and gave the Cardinals a 6-3 decision over the Chicago Cubs.

Allows 7 Hits of the talkative "Dizzy" permitted Babe Herman and Jurgas a home run each. The two homers accounted for all Chicago runs. Otherwise Dean was a puzzle to the Cubs and permitted only seven hits.

The Cards paced by Collins, who slammed his tenth circuit clout of the season on the roof of the right field pavilion in the fourth, maltreated Lon Warneke for four innings.

He vanished in the fifth after pinch-hitter Galan struck out for him in that inning.

"Death Takes A Holiday" Now Showing At Ritz Theater Is A Picture To Be Appreciated

"Death Takes A Holiday" is without reservation, one of the finest shows we have seen on a great screen in some time.

It is far cry from the hey-hey romantic production chattering American theatres today and seems like an oasis in a desert. Almost as morbid as it is beautiful, it is a play to be appreciated.

Those who have an opportunity to see it at the Ritz this evening should do so. There will not be many laughs, but there will be genuine interest.

Provocative in the extreme, "Death Takes A Holiday" is what we might choose to call the realization of a sinister premonition. Chief criticism of the play is that it almost attempts the impossible, and in doing that it becomes far fetched. One can hardly refrain from regarding Death, masquerading as Prince Sergi, from a mortal point of view when in reality he is everything but that.

Indeed one is little different from the characters in the show who view the ending of life from the mortal side as in direct contrast to Death who can see the two sides—the one we know and the one which "no words can describe."

For that reason, Death cannot understand why mortals learn to love life and fear the parting. Anxious to know the human emotions, he visits the host of a house, Sir Guy Standing, and arranges to appear as a mortal for three days.

Three days, 72 hours respite from his inevitable duty, mere flashes of time in which all are safe from the Grim Reaper.

As Prince Sergi, Death is a fascinating gentleman. He almost develops a friendship. He takes a beautiful woman aside and analyzes her and is astounded when he has the beginning of an emotion.

He cannot understand the customs of man, why he will gamble in stuffy rooms when there are beautiful gardens. He hints that life is vastly more magnificent than silly mortals dream.

Freddie March, playing the role of Death, is excellent in his role. Opposite Evelyn Venable, former leading lady to Walter Hampden, he carries his difficult characterization with intricate artistry. And Miss Venable is highly commendable in her interpretation. To us it seemed she expressed the emotions of fear and terror perfectly. It seemed genuine and was not over done.

Sir Guy Standing has a hard part to play but he handles it well, squinting himself with due honor. Kent Taylor as the faithful lover of a woman, whom you feel from the very beginning, is only one breath removed from the inevitable, is to be praised. Others are good also. In fact, acting is above par. Briefly here is the crux of the story: Death wants to take a three day holiday as a mortal to learn of love of life and fear of death. As a house guest he gains respect of the men and admiration of the women. He is strangely impressed by the daughter of a princess, and she in turn infatuated by him. However, when she falls in love with him, he commands her to look in his eyes and there she sees—Death. But she has learned to love him, overcomes her fears and when her mortal kin try to persuade her to cling to life, she bravely goes with Death.

And there's the only crow we have to pick with the show. She goes with a supernatural being as a mortal. Under the circumstances there could be no corpus delict.

"Death Takes a Holiday" is a show you should see. But manage to get there at the beginning or you will miss full import of the play.—J. D. P.

'Love Of God' Sermon Topic By Rev Borum

Revival Services At East 4th Church To Continue Through Week

Rev. Winston Borum, now conducting a revival meeting in the East Fourth Baptist church preached this morning on the "Second Coming of Christ." Continuing along this line, he has announced that he will preach on the text, "He that Endureth Until the End Shall Be Saved." Tonight the subject will be "In the New Testament Lost and Found Columns."

Additions last night brought the total number to twenty for the meeting thus far. The orchestra continues to grow as well as the crowds, and the rousing congregational singing led by this aggregation plus two pianos and a big chorus choir, is the best ever heard in this church, according to the pastor, Rev. Woodie Smith.

In discussing the "Love of God" last night, the evangelist said in part, "It was the love of God that created this world. Every man and woman has a natural desire for children of their own. Little ones of their own flesh and blood who will love them and put their chubby arms about their neck, and whom they can lavish their love upon. We are made in the image of God and get this desire from Him, God set out to create such children for Himself, which was the motive for His creation of the world. He made a beautiful place with flowers, birds and trees, etc., for man to live in and enjoy.

"He made a perfect world for man in which was nothing to harm or hurt. It was sin that brought these in—thorns and thistles were put here as a part of the curse on sin.

"Again, we see that love manifested in the making of Heaven. In the heart of every man is the desire for a perfect city and everywhere good citizens are trying to make of the place where they live, a perfect city. This is seen in the slogans that cities adopt, and the money and energy expended to produce such. However, man has always failed and there has never yet been produced a perfect city. Every city large or small, has its underword, its undesirable characters, etc. But God has prepared a beautiful and perfect city to be inherited by His people—called the New Jerusalem.

"But how do I know the devil will not do it one day as he did to the perfect Eden?" Because God has promised me in Rev. 21 that such shall never be the case. To that end He made a Hell in which to put Devil, his angels, all sin and its consequences. Every city must have a place for its refuse, and Hell is Heaven's dumping ground. It was thus the love of God that made a hell—love for those who trust Him, and are thus headed for Heaven. He never made it for people. If any go there—and they will, it is their own fault, because they will not turn loose sin.

The minister then closed with stressing the love of God as manifested in redemption, by which "Whoever believeth on Him shall not perish, but have everlasting life.

Services will continue through the week with services every day at 10 a. m. and 8:15 p. m. The public is cordially invited.

MURDER AT MOCKING HOUSE

BY WALTER C. BROWN

MISSING REVOLVER

It was a quiet room of old stairs carpet. There was a scorched hole through the tough fabric and a further search showed a scar on the whitewashed boards where the spent bullet had hit.

"We're on the right road now," Harper exclaimed excitedly. "If we could only find that steel-jacketed bullet we'd have our proof complete."

"I'm afraid the killer would hold on to that," was Lafferty's surmise. "There's a natural urge to get rid of that sort of evidence," Harper countered, "and I'm counting on that."

They swung their flashlights about at random. "What's in that little empty-hole over there?" Lafferty poked his head down. "Looks for the fireplace," he announced.

They moved those from one side of the narrow bin to the other but found nothing hidden beneath them. Harper flashed his light around the sides of the bin and the beam came to rest on a rough board barrier set flush into the wall.

The detective unfastened the rusty hooks and pulled it free, after a struggle. A dark space filled with rubble was revealed, greeting them with a damp, musty odor.

"That must be the space under the front steps," said Harper. Lafferty suddenly raised his hand. "Listen!" he whispered. "There's some one on the stairs. I heard a board creak!"

He tiptoed silently in that direction, while Harper snapped off the light and listened, waiting in a little while Lafferty returned, disgruntled. "There wasn't a soul in sight," he growled, "but I'm sure somebody was listening in."

"I'm going to look in that hole," Harper declared. "Give me a boost up to the ledge." With his assistant's aid he scrambled on to the shoulder-high ledge, thrusting the torch ahead, he crawled forward on his hands. Lafferty heard a grunt of disgust as he brushed aside a black thing that crawled out from under a dislodged lump of mortar.

There was a cry, a scramble backwards and Harper slid down to the cellar floor in a shower of small stones and dirt. His clothes were soiled with lime and the soft, mossy dirt and his hands were brushing at the thick cobwebs caught around his head and shoulders, but in his stained fingers he held a lump of metal.

"Carlin was right!" he exclaimed. "It was a discharged .45 calibre steel-jacketed bullet!"

"But, Steve, I tell you I saw it—right here, buried under those handkerchiefs!"

Lafferty pointed to the open drawer of the highboy in Pierre Dufresne's dressing-room. There was palpably nothing there now but the neatly stacked handkerchiefs.

"I couldn't be mistaken about anything as important as that. It was not an automatic, but a heavy calibre revolver. Andrews was looking for Dufresne's extra pairs of glasses and they were in the drawer on the other side. The gun was not in a holster. I'd bet a month's pay the bullets would be .45's."

"I don't get this at all," Harper mused. "We went off by ourselves and made an important discovery last has to do with the gun used for this crime. No one knew anything about our suspicions, yet when we return to this room less than an hour later the revolver has been spirited away. That's more than a coincidence!"

Harper looked through the other drawers in the highboy. The contents were in meticulous order and it was apparent at a glance that nothing as bulky as the revolver Lafferty had described could be hidden there now.

To be doubly sure that Lafferty and he had overlooked nothing, Harper went through the drawers once more, and gave the pleasant room a hasty general search before either spoke again. There was nothing.

"Don't forget," Lafferty advised drily, "that this was a noise on the stairs while we were poking around the cellar. Some one in this house is trying to keep an eye on us. I think it's Andrews. That fellow can move around with less noise than a snake."

"If that was the revolver we're looking for," Harper went on, "it don't see why it would be left lying around all that time."

"But this gun was too big to be carried around easily. It really needed a holster. I think you'd better tackle Dufresne on the question."

"Not so fast. Let me think. If Dufresne did it and we talk him with it, he'll certainly deny there ever was such a gun. If Andrews did it, he'll lie, too. But if he didn't do it and doesn't know it's gone—you stay here, Jack, and look through these two rooms for that gun."

Harper went downstairs. He met Officer Albright, who had stood guard over Dufresne's room, standing in the hall, about to go off duty. "Has any one gone up or down these stairs in the last fifteen or twenty minutes?"

"Not a soul, sir."

"I want you to do something for me. I want to find out if any one left this house in the last hour, and if so, where they went. Can you manage that without arousing suspicion?"

Albright signified that he could. The officer at the front door informed Harper that no one had gone out by that way, whereupon the detective returned to the breakfast room. He pressed the servant's bell and signed to O'Connell to leave the field clear.

When Andrews entered he found the detective bent over the table, carefully examining under the lens the fingerprints of the dead man had left on the twin decanters. Sergeant Harper looked around, as if surprised, then said, "Oh, yes. Bit down, Andrews. I want to ask you a couple of questions."

CLAIMS DAUGHTER WAS MURDERED

"Andrews, we are trying to trace the movements of this man who was killed here last night. We know that he changed into some of your master's clothing. We assume that he lit the fire in the hearth. By the way, was that always prepared for the next lighting?"

"Yes, sir. In the season it would be cleaned early every morning and freshly packed."

"We noticed that there was quite an accumulation of ashes in the pit in the cellar. Was this hearth in use while the re-decorating was going on?"

"I couldn't say, sir. I have not been in this house for some weeks."

"How long has Mr. Dufresne been at the Austerlitz, Andrews?"

"Mr. and Mrs. Dufresne spent the summer at Moose Head Lodge, str. That's on a small island off the coast of Maine. We came back early in October, but we had only been here a week or two when we went to the Austerlitz."

"But Mrs. Dufresne has been staying at Mrs. Morlock's."

"Since the holidays, sir. The decorators have been very slow. Of course, Mr. Dufresne to see how things were progressing. Donaghy was here much of the time to bring back things that were needed."

"Was the house closed up while the Dufresnes were at Moose Head Lodge?"

"Oh, no, sir. The Whitmores looked after it all summer."

"How many keys are there to this house and who has them?"

"Mrs. Whitmore has the only complete set of keys, I believe, but I suppose you are more interested in door keys. Mr. Dufresne has a set and so has Mrs. Dufresne. I have keys to the front door and back door. Donaghy has a key to the back door. That is all, sir."

"The household keys seem to be fairly well scattered around," Harper remarked.

"Not unusually so," Andrews replied, with some asperity. "I'm not criticizing. Andrews," Harper replied easily. "This man who was killed showed a surprising familiarity with the place. He knew, for instance, how to get hold of those liquor bottles without turning the place inside out."

The butler looked at the twin decanters. "Then he must have found his way to the wine cellar. Those bottles were not kept filled. They were empty last time I saw them."

"But your wine cellar is kept under lock and key? When we searched down there we found the door securely locked."

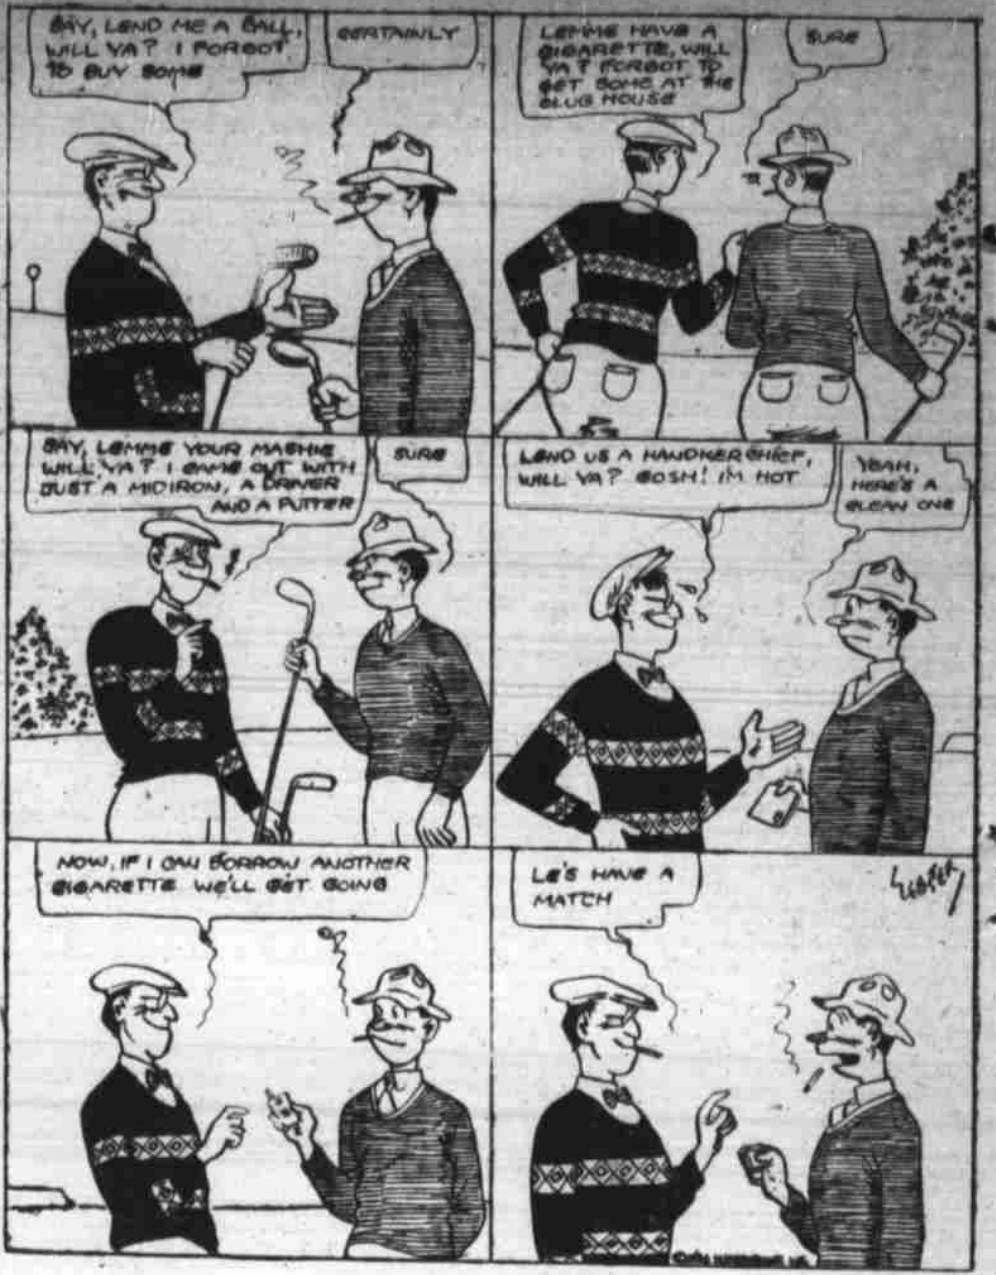

"Yes, but the key hangs behind a beam, easy to reach, but out of sight. You would have to know where to look for it."

"That's what I thought. Now, Andrews, one more question. I must file a report of whatever firearms are kept on these premises. Mr. Dufresne reports that he keeps a revolver in the house, a .45 calibre. That is correct, isn't it?"

Harper glanced up covertly but the butler's face was as impassive as ever, nor did he hesitate over his reply. "Yes, sir."

Eastern Star Chapter Holds Impressive Installation In Tuesday Evening Ceremony

The local Eastern Star chapter held an unusually large and impressive meeting Tuesday evening in the Masonic hall when new officers were installed and when members of the Coahoma chapter No. 499 were honor guests. Two grand officers were present, Mrs. Agnes V. Young and Mrs. Florence Reed. Members from four different states were present.

With Mrs. Agnes V. Young, past grand matron, acting as installing officer, and Mrs. Florence Reed, assistant grand conductor, acting as grand marshal, Mrs. Alma Baker, grand chaplain and Mrs. Lida Daniels, grand organizer, the following officers were installed: Mrs. Trule Jones, worthy matron; James T. Brooks, worthy patron; Mrs. Edna Plum, assistant matron; H. C. Hamilton, assistant patron; Mrs. Frances Fisher, secretary; Miss Marion McDonald, treasurer; Mrs. Edith Murdoch, conductress; Mrs. Bernice Wimble, assistant conductress; Miss Ala B. Collins, Ada; Mrs. Artry Bostler, Ruth; Mrs. Amanda Hull, Ester; Mrs. Blanch Hall, Martha; Mrs. Martha Wade, Electra; Mrs. Grace Henderson, warder; H. F. Jarret, sentinel; Mrs. Christine Robinson, chaplain; Mrs. Browning Dunning, marshal and Mrs. Alma Blount, organist.

Mrs. Kitty Bell Anderson sang "In the Heart of a Rose" as each officer presented a rose to the worthy matron. Mrs. Ruby Reed sang "This Is My Task" as a closing musical number. Mrs. Velma Baker was taken into membership. Delicious refreshments were served at the close of the installation.

Textiles

The textile argument isn't nearly as hopeless as steel's. It's understood here that textile labor leaders are willing to swap some reduction in hours (and thereby weekly wages) for union recognition and that mill owners—especially in the South—are in a mood to meet them half way. This solution may enable General Johnson to make a lightning shift from steel to here.

Unions

Local insiders are skeptical of the apparent meaning of the National Industry Conference Board's latest drape on unionization. Its figures show a rise in company union membership from November, 1933 to May, 1934, almost three times the increase for organized labor unions in the same period.

Notes

Don't be scared—a Congress filibuster can't stop the steam-roller. Republicans "Aw, what can you do when FDR sends in a war debt message that suits you?" House Democrats are urging FDR to drop the Wagner and housing bill so that Congress can adjourn before something happens.

Emergency Crop Loans Total Is Nearly $7,000

EL PASO—Arthur G. Wilson, alias Robert Jones, under arrest in Port of Spain, Trinidad, for the brutal murder of Mrs. Irene DeBolt, attractive Cleveland widow, near Van Horn last November, will go free unless residents of El Paso, Hudspeth and Culberson counties raise the funds with which to return him to Van Horn and try him. District Attorney Roy D. Jackson and Sheriff Chris Fox said Tuesday night.

Bill and John both demanded cheap gasoline and celebrated on five cents per dozen eggs. They influenced their many friends to do likewise. Business got bad. Bill, John and many of their former friends are now catalogued with the ten or twelve million who are looking for work. It takes profits to employ people, and people must be employed before we can have prosperity.

Messrs. Robb and Rowley
Gentlemen

It was my great privilege to witness the picture "Death Takes A Holiday" tonight. It is superb in thought, in inspiration, and in educational value.

The presentation of the different lines of thought about death is original and forceful. Every actor is perfect in expression and give to this remarkable production a finish that has scarcely been equaled by any of the outstanding pictures shown here in many, many months.

It has a stronger cast than had "Outward Bound." It has a better psychological field and range than any picture that has been presented here.

The great lesson is that perfect love is of God, is God, and lives beyond bodily dissolution, triumphing over Death and the Grave.

I commend "Death Takes A Holiday" to all thinking persons who should be interested in "What Is Beyond."

Again I wish to express my deep appreciation of this excellent portrayal of Life, set out so effectively often mis-taught in dark shadowy, fearful.

This is a fight for a clear brain in an unstaffed age," she says. "and one of the things the W. C. T. U. will do is to try to lead in the creation of a conscience and an intelligent understanding for total abstinence. There is a real value to a drinkless regime.

"We would like to impress society leaders with the deep wrong they do when they put liquor before young people or those who may not have the strength to resist. There ought to be a high premium in society in brains that are not stimulated by alcohol. This country should reach the point where amusements do not debauch the physical and mental nature.

"We are initiating a survey of the social cost of drink; this will relate to the cost of the drink habit and drink traffic on home conditions, taxation, crime in both cost and social effects and in all other phases of community life. If a town gets a thousand dollars from saloon licenses and pays out ten thousands dollars in charity for poverty caused by drink—that ought to show that taxing liquor is not a saving investment.

"We will magnify adult as well as school education in the findings of science and medicine relating to the habit-forming poisonous nature of the drug alcohol.

"There are thirty million young citizens in the schools. We hope to help educational systems of the country in their observance of the laws requiring the instruction in the nature and effect of alcohol and other narcotics upon the human system.

"We will extend our religious activities so that Christian people may realize their particular responsibility to rid the world of an evil which keeps men from the Kingdom of Heaven. Contacts with missionary societies will be strengthened as a part of this work.

"There is great need for citizens generally to recognize their individual responsibility for the nomination and election of citizens who themselves obey the law and who will perform their duty as sworn for its enforcement. This is a representative democracy. Law and order is not a matter of partisan politics.

"The program of the W. C. T. U. has always included all lines of Home Protection—not merely the fight against liquor. In the changing social order there is a new obligation to emphasize these additional aids to better social conditions.

As to liquor, the age old truths of science and particularly the newer discoveries prove that the W. C. T. U. Total Abstinence position is the only one the evolution of civilization can countenance.

"We are confronted with conditions. These must be dealt with as they exist. No just cause can afford to sleep on its rights. Certainly the W. C. T. U. will enlarge, not lessen, its activities. We will ADVANCE, NOT RETREAT."

PAYING A BASEBALL DEBT

A baseball oddity: two bases were stolen in a game between the White Sox and Yankees—once by Babe Ruth, one of the game's slowest runners, and another by Evar Swanson, probably the game's fastest foot-racer. . . . Eric McNair, shortstop of the Philadelphia Athletics, repaid an old debt of gratitude when he sold Connie Mack on the risk of signing up Charley Moss, Charley's uncle, Johnson Moss, a cotton broker, turned his back lot into a baseball diamond at Meridian, Miss., so the Meridian boys could play the game. Later, he developed a league which produced McNair and Moss.

Kiki Cuyler busts more bats than any player in the majors. He breaks on an average of 50 clubs a season. . . . Trainer Andy Lotshaw of the Cubs estimates he uses nearly nine miles of gauze and adhesive tape each season in treating the players.

Gabby Hartnett pays a visit every fall to an old friend, a priest, near Chicago and celebrates by showing the town natives how he hits the baseball. His most embarrassing game was against Sycamore, Ill., during one of those visits. The pitching pride of Sycamore struck out the big league catcher of the Cubs four times that day.

Wally Piatek, the much traded outfielder now with the Pirates, was an honor student at the university of Illinois. Wally turns out championship basketball teams during the winter at Illinois Wesleyan. . . . Holes-in-one were scored against Northwestern's golf team in two successive meets this spring. Hill won the meet for Illinois with one ace; in the next dual meet, Boehm of Chicago scored an ace, won his match, but not the meet.

RUDE AWAKENING

John Denny, Green Bay, Wis., professional, isn't interested in dreams any more. Early one morning, Bill Harper, one of his proteges, awakened him with some great news. "I just dreamed of a way to hit a golf ball—to hit a perfect drive," shouted Harper enthusiastically as he hustled Denny out of bed. "Come, I'll show you." They got outside and Harper teed the ball up carefully, took a couple waggles, and swung. The ball skidded sharply to the left, jumped once, and then landed in a cornfield. As Harper went searching for the ball and another experiment, Denny went back to bed.

Wally Langford former middleweight scourge of boxing, is a blind newsie in a familiar figure around the Chicago

Sailor Friedman, another ring great of the past, is a federal court bailiff in Chicago. . . . King Levinsky, Chicago's personality kid of boxing, says he'll take a bodyguard of four hard-boiled Chicago detectives along with him when he goes back to Los Angeles to keep that postponed fight date with Art Lacey. The King was suspicious of everyone in California except his sister-manager, Lena Levy, and Wallace Beery.

Harry Hall, star photographer for The Associated Press in Chicago, vouches for this one: In an American association baseball game at St. Paul a certain infielder had made two very wild pegs toward first. As he made his third stop and got ready to make the throw to first again, a woman seated in the box seats back of first jumped up and screamed: "Everybody duck! He's got the ball again."

Litz Rusness, coach of Northwestern reserve football teams, tells this one on himself with a deep crimson blush: Jumping at a last-minute invitation, Rusness took his Wildcat "B" team to Vermillion, S. D., for a game with the strong South Dakota eleven. Figuring his squad didn't have a chance against the mighty westerners, Rusness was elated when the game ended scoreless—or so he thought.

All the way back to Chicago, Rusness walked up and down the railway coach, congratulating his players. "You did great, great," he applauded. "I never expected you to hold that team to a tie." When the train arrived in Chicago, the players rushed out, bought a newspaper, and then handed him the big shock. Northwestern didn't get a tie at all. Northwestern had won by a touchdown. To this day, Rusness can't tell you how he missed
