Adlai Is Back In The Lead

By UNITED PRESS
Adlai E. Stevenson forged back into a front-running position in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination Saturday on the basis of a smashing victory over Sen. Estes Kefauver in the Oregon primary.

Returns showed Stevenson holding a commanding lead that virtually erased the effect of his defeat by the Tennessee senator in Minnesota.

President Eisenhower, running unopposed in the Republican primary, piled up a bigger total vote than Stevenson and Kefauver combined. However, Mr. Eisenhower's name was printed on the Republican ballot, whereas all of the Stevenson and Kefauver votes were written. No candidates name appeared on the Democratic ballot.

Stevenson "delighted." He said his victory margin was "much larger" than he anticipated. Kefauver had no immediate comment.

Both Stevenson and Kefauver were already looking ahead to their next head-on clash — in the May 19 Florida primary. Stevenson spent Saturday handshaking his way through Sarasota, Fla., and surrounding counties, and wound up with a rally and television speech in the evening at St. Petersburg.

Kefauver will resume his Florida campaign Monday. He will meet Stevenson in Miami Monday night for a television debate.

"Non-active" Democratic candidate Gov. Averell Harriman returned to New York from a delegate-hunting swing through the West, and prepared to enter a hospital Sunday for a minor operation.

Other Developments
In other political developments: Former Interior Secretary Douglas McKay held a substantial lead in a four-way battle for Oregon's Republican senatorial nomination. Sen. Wayne C. Morse, running for the first time as a Democrat, walked away with his party's senatorial nomination.

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty told reporters President Eisenhower "was not displeased" by the Oregon Republican returns. But Hagerty did not say whether he referred only to Mr. Eisenhower's own big vote, or to McKay's apparent victory.

Armed Forces Day Observances Held

By CHARLES CORDDRY
WASHINGTON, May 19 —UP—The United States Saturday put on a massive world-wide display of its military "power for peace" in the seventh and biggest observance of Armed Forces Day.

Marching men, swooshing jets, a galaxy of guided missiles and atomic artillery served as a stern warning to Russia that the free world is determined to keep up its guard in the "long pull" for peace.

President Eisenhower, who proclaimed the day in honor of all activities, highlighted special day.

Armed Forces Day was observed here by units of the Reserves in several different activities Saturday.

A breakfast, in the Pampa Hotel, began the day's activities with an address by Major W. J. Beale, regular Army advisor to the National Guard Battalion of the 57th Artillery Battalion. He discussed the importance of the Reserve in connection with the Armed Forces Reserve Act.

E. L. "Smiley" Henderson served as master of ceremonies for the occasion.

The National Guard Army, east of town, held open house to display a supply of equipment. Included in the display was a fifteen-ton prime mover for the purpose of towing and carrying the large 155 mm Howitzer also on display.

A two-and one-half ton and three-quarter ton truck were on display with a three-quarter ton ambulance and a quarter-ton jeep with a radio mount. Also on display were two handy talkies, a switch board and field telephones.

Weapons included a 3.5 rocket launcher, known as a bazooka, a 45-calibre sub-machine gun, a carbine with a bayonet and a M-1 Garand Rifle.

Airforce equipment two jet engines, was displayed in front of Cretney's Drug Store.

Several Squadrons of airplanes from Reese Air Force Base at Lubbock flew over the city during the day. The flights included B-26s and single-engine jets.

troops, sailors and airmen demonstrate to the world "our free way of life... (and) our aspiration to insure national security."

Tone of the celebration was set by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson who proclaimed that this country will maintain its 2,850,000-man fighting force into the "indefinite future."

Assuring that the force never will be used for "intimidation or aggression," Wilson said there never has been "no clear indication the world situation has improved to the point where we can importantly modify our policy of strength for the long pull."

Selective Service Director Louis B. Hershey, in a speech in Knoxville, Tenn., said the draft machinery is ready to roll if war should come. It was broken out Sunday, he added, the draft would furnish men "faster than anybody could take them."

Civilians poured into military establishments at home and abroad to see the demonstrations and inspect some of the deadliest weapons of the atomic age.

The world's first intercontinental guided missile—the sleek, red-painted Snark—was put on public display for the first time at the "open house" at the Bolling Air Force Base here.

The missile, powered by a giant J-57 jet engine with a 10,000-pound thrust, is 74 feet long and has swept-back wings that span 42 feet. It was designed to carry atomic warhead "over inter-continental distances."

In Detroit, the Army unveiled its 60-foot Redstone missile which is designed to strike targets at 200 to 300 miles at supersonic speed.

Planes Are Said To Be Usable For Paratroopers

By DONALD J. GONZALES
WASHINGTON, May 19 —UP— Reports circulated in diplomatic circles here Saturday that Russian pilots recently delivered 21 big planes suitable for paratroop use to Egypt.

The planes — already bearing Egyptian markings — were reported to have flown over Greece en route to their destination.

2 Paroles Are Revoked

Judge Lewis M. Godrich revoked the five-year parole of Jimmy Bond, 19, for burglary and the five-year forgery parole of Jimmy Ross of Enid, Okla., Friday afternoon in 31st District Court.

Bond was indicted by the grand jury for the April 1 theft of $130 from a Bell Service Station and Ross was indicted by the Wheeler County grand jury earlier on counts charging burglary and embezzlement. That he would plead guilty to both counts Monday in Wheeler.

The Gray County Grand jury recharged forgery against Roy Armstrong and another, against D. E. Hillman, charged indecent exposure before a child. The other indictment charged Bond with burglary.

The jury also heard several juveniles tell where they could obtain beer in Pampa. Testimony before the jury regarding sales of beer to minors was given by Gordon Steele, state liquor control board agent, and by H. A. Doggett, juvenile officer.

In a verbal report given to Judge Goodrich, the jury recommended that the county obtain a resident liquor control board agent due to the sparsity of agents in the Panhandle.

Like Says Tax Cut Is Not Justified

By JOHN A. GOLDSMITH
WASHINGTON, May 19 —UP— President Eisenhower has warned that the Treasury's anticipated $1.8 billion budget surplus is too small to justify a tax cut now, informed administration sources said Saturday.

The President, according to these informants, feels the present fiscal year surplus would have to be substantially larger—at least $1 billion more — to make a personal income tax cut a serious possibility.

These sources said Mr. Eisenhower plans to pass the word to his congressional leaders that he will not support a cut. He will have a chance to do so at his regular Tuesday conference with congressional leaders.

The Treasury estimated Thursday that greater than estimated federal receipts will more than offset increased spending and put the government $1.8 billion in the black at the fiscal year's end, June 30. That would be $1.6 billion more than estimated last January.

Mr. Eisenhower and Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey had previously taken the position the administration's final attitude on a tax cut would have to await this budget review.

Congressional economy advocates were already saying the Treasury's estimated surplus should be applied to reducing the huge national debt. Some Democrats contend, however, that the administration should survey the outlook for next year when the impact would be felt, before closing the door to tax reduction.

In its independent budget review, the congressional committee on internal revenue taxation put this year's surplus at $2.3 billion.

The congressional group also predicted a $2.2 surplus next year — a point not covered in the administration review.

Rep. Frank Icard (D-Tex.), a member of the tax-writing House Ways and Means committee, said that the administration should make public its estimates of next year's position and then tell Congress what it thinks about tax reduction. "at least for the remainder of the present session."

Artificial Insemination Is Denounced

By CHARLES W. RIDLEY
VATICAN CITY, May 19 —UP— Pope Pius XII Saturday denounced the practice of artificial insemination and the production of test-tube babies as unnatural and "an intrinsic evil."

In an address to 1,500 doctors and scientists, the pontiff stressed the church's fundamental objection to the use of an auxiliary father in cases where a husband proves sterile.

The experts, gathered for the address in the consistorial hall of the Vatican, opened the second World Congress of the International Fertility Association Friday in Naples.

The pope's 2,500-word address was so technical that in parts of it, he switched from French to Latin.

He described artificial insemination as "always an act against nature and an intrinsic evil."

The pontiff discussed the spiritual advantages of family life. "What you are striving for," he told the scientists, "is not just to increase the number of men but to raise the moral level of humanity, its power to do good and its will to increase its stature physically and spiritually."

The pope probed into the moral issues involved in the marriage contract. "Artificial fertilization goes beyond the limits of the right which married couples have acquired by the matrimonial contract," he said.

"Still less can it be made to derive from the right to have a child, the 'first object' of marriage," he said.

Tempest In Beer Barrel Rages In New York

CHAPPAQUA, N.Y. —UP—Tempest in a beer barrel raged among Chappaqua's parents Saturday over plans for the fathers to serve alcoholic beverages to high school graduates at their prom.

A decision to arrange for "controlled" drinking supervised by fathers, brought many complaints as well as charges that there is entirely too much drinking among adults in this Westchester county suburb of New York.

This town of 5,000 including a colony of editors, writers, artists, brokers and business executives, was so split over the matter that the minister of the largest local church said he would preach on the subject Sunday. He hopes to come up with a compromise solution.

Brems All Week
The storm has been brewing all week, ever since members of the Horace Greely high school graduating class sat down with a group of parents and discussed the matter of drinking. Some of the youngsters felt that they should be allowed to drink in the open, instead of hiding out between dances.

They thought there would be less chance of their over-indulging if they could have cocktails or the spiked punch at their class party.

Most of the fathers agreed. Among them was G. Norman Scott, a New York broker and father of Arden Scott, senior class president. Scott and other fathers decided to provide drinks stronger than dancing school punch and supervise their consumption at the party following the graduation exercises June 25.

It was decided that only youngsters 18 or over would be allowed to indulge. The rest would get soft drinks.

Cries of Alarm
The plans brought cries of alarm from some parents and from the Rev. Kenneth E. Nye, pastor of the First Congregational Church.

The school board voted not to have anything to do with such a party and ordered teachers to stay away from it. Nye's board of deacons authorized him to appeal in a sermon for temperance among teenagers.

The Country Club, where the party was to have been held, said it could not condone drinking by youngsters.

The pro-liquor parents and students backtracked slightly. They decided to serve beer, instead of anything stronger, but they still have not found a place in which to serve it.

Army, Air Force In Feud

By HARRY WILSON SHARPE
WASHINGTON, May 19 —UP— Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson Saturday sharply rebuked the Army and the Air Force for publicly airing "on a propaganda basis" a bitter backstage feud over national defense strategy.

Wilson spoke out after the inter-service quarrel spilled into the press through the "leaking" of supposedly secret Pentagon staff papers in which Army planners castigated the Air Force for demanding "more money, more money, more money."

Air Force leaders struck back with the charge the Army was attacking the "established national policy" of placing prime reliance on air-atomic power.

Far Beyond Public Testimony
The newly-disclosed papers went far beyond anything that service leaders have said in their guarded testimony before congressional committees. They made clear that inter-service differences have reached a pitch of intensity unequalled since the Navy and Air Force locked horns over control of strategic air power in acrimonious "admirals' revolt" of 1949.

The present cleavage is so deep, and the issues so vital to the nation's security, that President Eisenhower may have to step in to settle, or at least squelch, the quarrel.

The President detests public airing of service disputes, and no one here would be surprised if he shortly issues a stern "pipe down" edict.

Wilson, who has already ordered all of the services to fight their policy battles in private, deplored the new outbreak of "psychological warfare."

"Too Much Trouble"
"Trouble is the price of progress," he told reporters as he boarded a plane for Hot Springs, Va., to deliver a speech. "But this is more trouble than we should have to try our case in the public solve our problems. We have a well-organized way to get the facts together and reach agreement in the Pentagon. We don't have to try our case in the public and in the press on a propaganda basis."

In the present wrangle, the Army is manning the attack guns but the target is the same—Air Force dominance of the defense budget. (Nearly half of the fiscal 1957 military appropriation, now pending in Congress, is earmarked for the Air Force.)

Crashed Driver Escapes Unhurt

GALVESTON —UP—A car sped down 31st Street Thursday night, skidded across Seawall Blvd. and toppled over the seawall onto the rocks below. It landed wheels up. Onlookers rushed to the scene just in time to see the driver, George Williams Jr., slide out and brush himself off.

Williams, 24-year-old Negro, was unhurt. He waved to the gathering crowd and grinned as he waited for accident investigators.

Crazed Gunman Kills Two Before Being Shot Himself

CLEVELAND, May 19 —UP—A crazed gunman ran wild through downtown streets and stores during a Saturday noon shopping rush, firing fatal shots at a patrolman and store detective, then himself was killed by a police bullet.

The gunman was identified as Frank Williams, 43, of Cleveland. Williams, a Negro, was fatally shot by Sgt. Bernard Schweter of the Cleveland police hit-skip unit, one of the dozens of policemen who converged on public square to chase the killer.

Abandoned Clothing
As he ran, the killer abandoned his cap, a trench coat and sun glasses.

Finally, a half mile from where he killed two, Williams was cornered. The police radio reported "We've got him." Seconds later, the same radio reported "Gunman en route to the morgue."

Victims of the gunman were veteran traffic patrolman Joseph Haydu, 34, and store detective Frank Begin, 58. Detectives said that Williams had "an awful long record" of felonies here. They said the Williams record of one and one-half pages listed robberies, shooting and burglaries and that Williams had spent "a lot of time in the (Ohio) penitentiary."

They'll Do It Every Time By Jimmy Hatlo

Women In The Church

Ciriela Perez, 18-year-old Mixteca Indian girl of San Miguel el Grande, Oaxaca, Mexico, has taken on the task of teaching over 200,000 Mixteca Indians to read the Bible in their own language. Ciriela is the only woman of her tribe who has read the New Testament in Mixteca. She was an informant for Wycliffe Bible Translators, who did the epoch-making job of preparing the entire New Testament in Mixteca, a language heretofore unwritten. Following this service, she lived at the Presbyterian Girls' Hostel and studied in the city of Oaxaca.

Just 70 years ago, a woman missionary opened the first school for girls in all Korea's history. The school has a pupil. That school was the foundation of the present Ewha Woman's University, in Seoul. It is still a pioneer: the only Christian institution of higher learning for women in Korea. And it has stood the ravages of civil war, alien occupation and exile from Seoul (due to communist occupation), to be the most-sought institution of its kind in all Asia. From that one room, one teacher, and one pupil beginning "when men taught that girls could not learn," there has also grown in Korea a vast educational program for women which even the distresses of war could not stop. In 1955 there were more than 1,100,000 girls enrolled in the nation's elementary schools, 140,000 girls in the secondary schools, 8,000 more in colleges, and another 8,000 in specialized schools. Women are 37 per cent of Korea's school enrollment.

Gifts for flood relief have made possible the rebuilding of a school in Narowal, West Pakistan, extensively damaged by flood. The head of the school, Miss Kathryn Cox, had told the Church of England Zenana Missionary Society that the school would have to be closed. "But the people there refused to allow her to do so," she says. "The history of the school goes back to the early 1890's and the girls who have come out into the villages into the life of the country as teachers, nurses, wives of pastors, have made a great contribution." In faith that funds would come in, she began rebuilding. The World Council of Churches' gift of $5,800 will complete the task.

The Aiming Stake

By K. L. FANCHER
Yesterday was Armed Forces Day throughout the nation and the world, and Pampa units of the National Guard took part in the activities by holding open house at the National Guard Armory on Highway 40 in Recreation Park. The local units, consisting of Headquarters Battery, Service Battery and the Medical Detachment, all had equipment on display through the day, and there were men on duty at all times to show visitors around and explain the various equipment that was on display. The local units even borrowed a 155mm Howitzer from one of the firing batteries of the battalion which was also on display through the day. The local units do not ordinarily have a howitzer available as they are not firing batteries. Other units of the 474th Field Artillery Battalion held similar observances of Armed Forces Day in their respective communities. Each of the units, Battery "A" in Dumas, Battery "B" in Dalhart and Battery "C" in Shamrock along with the Pampa units each had a good turnout of visitors during the day. This coming week will be a big one for each of the units in the battalion as Brig. Gen. John L. Thompson, Commander of XLII Corps Artillery, arrives for his annual inspection tour. The General will arrive in Amarillo by air, and then will drive around to the various units during the week. The first inspection will be held in Dalhart on Tuesday, May 22, and the next day the General and his party will move on to Dumas for the inspection there and then will arrive in Pampa on the morning of 24 May, 56. The inspection here in Pampa will take place in two parts, the first phase in the afternoon and the second during an evening drill period. All three units here in Pampa will be inspected on the same day. The following day the General and his group will move on to Shamrock and finish the inspection tour. Back to Armed Forces Day, many of the officers of the Pampa

Units of the 474th were the guests of M. K. Brown Saturday morning for a very fine breakfast and program which was very much appreciated by all who attended. Along with officers of the Guard, there were also officers from all of the other Reserve units in Pampa and representatives from most of the civic clubs of Pampa. E. L. "Smiley" Henderson acted as Master of Ceremonies for the affair while Mayor Lynn Boyd and Brown both said a few words to those in attendance. The speaker of the day was our own Army Advisor, Maj. Warren J. Beale, who explained some of the why's and wherefores of the Armed Forces Reserve Act of 1955. The major gave a lot of good reasons during his speech, for "Keeping Your Guard Up."

Mother Attacks Dog Catcher
ALBERT LEA, Minn.—UP—A mother of four children paid a $25 fine Wednesday for beating up dog catcher James Doty. Doty said Mrs. Odessa Kulper attacked him with a garden rake and a three-foot stick when he stopped by her house to tell her to tie up a mongrel dog which had snapped at passing railroad workers.

Meeting Today To Decide If Pampa Has A City Band

Whether Pampa is to soon boast its own municipal band will be explored Sunday afternoon in the Palm Room of City Hall during an open meeting on the subject.

Promoting and organizing such a group is one of the 36 suggested new projects of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, Chamber President Ed Myatt said.

"Actual organization of the band will be determined solely on the active interest shown by Pampa's musicians, and such other persons who are in a position to actively help a helping hand irrespective of whether or not they play a musical instrument," Myatt added.

The meeting, set for 2:30 Sunday afternoon, is for the prime purpose of exploring the possibilities of building a municipal band which Chamber officials feel would have to be modest at the outset.

Membership in the band, if it is ever formed, would be open to both sexes and all ages.

Myatt pointed out the band would serve several purposes: It would give adults the opportunity to pick up their instruments again and play in a musical group. Many high school graduates lay down their instruments, or sell them, after commencement and never again have the chance to play. The same is true for college students.

The band would also provide additional entertainment for citizens through concerts . . . summer Sunday afternoon and indoor winter concerts.

Argument the marching band supply for such occasions as the annual Rodeo Parade, Santa Parade, or any other parades that may fall in between those times.

The band would also be available to take part in parades in neighboring cities and towns.

Chamber officials pointed out that several obstacles always face a new enterprise, and a municipal band is no exception. Among some of the questions to be brought up Sunday afternoon are:

"Can we obtain a director?"

"Are the more expensive instruments such as French horns, Sousaphones, baritone, altoes, and the like available?"

"If so, can we borrow them, or obtain them cheaply enough until the band has the opportunity to fill its treasury so its own, or additional instruments can be procured?"

The same question arises for the band's music.

But, other cities have worked these problems out, and Pampa can too, Myatt said. "If those who are interested will pitch in and try to work it out."

Interest among former high school and college band members has been shown during the past year.

So, Sunday afternoon, Pampa's musicians and non-musicians are being called out to talk the matter over and to start the wheels in motion which will eventually determine whether or not Pampa has its own municipal band.

Optimists To Install Officers

The annual installation of officers of the Pampa Optimist Club will be held at 7 p.m. Monday in the Palm Room. Jerald Sims is the incoming president for the year and John Scholfield is outgoing president.

Officers of the Opti-Mrs. Club will be installed by Mrs. Loraine Johnson of Borger. In coming president is Mrs. Newt Secret. Other officers are Mrs. Clifford Dunham, first vice president; Mrs. Clay Crossland, second vice president; Mrs. Sharon B. Haralson, third vice president; Mrs. Lester Mason, secretary; and Mrs. Ed Lowrance, treasurer. Mrs. James A. Jones is telephone chairman. Mrs. K. R. Dodd is reporter and Mrs. D. L. Tucker is in charge of the scrapbook.

The board of directors includes Mrs. John Scholfield, Mrs. Bill Stephens, Mrs. Jerald Sims and Mrs. W. A. Gipeon.

The program will feature the Berg Sisters of Panhandle, a singing group.

Guests and ladies from other civic clubs in town are extended an invitation, by Scholfield, to attend the affair.

By MRS. ELEANORE WAGGONER

By Mrs. Eleanore Waggoner Bernard DeVoto was, before his death early this year, one of the many people who regard the conservation of national natural resources to be of primary importance in the United States. Many of his "Easy Chair" columns in "Harper's Magazine" were devoted to this subject. This emphasis on natural resources is a part of this historian's feeling that the people of the United States are very closely linked.

Lincoln said once, "A nation may be said to consist of its territory, its people, and its laws. . . That portion of the earth's surface which is owned and inhabited by the people of the United States is well adapted to be the home of one national family, and it is not well adapted for two or more. . ."

In a three-volume study of America's westward expansion, DeVoto has written a story of the men who explored and, bit by bit, conquered this continent. He shows their impact on the wilderness, but more important than that for his thesis — the impact of the wilderness on them and the consequent gradual emergence of a new people in a new world.

In doing so, he has been able to relate the almost inevitable procession of human events on this continent to the pattern of land forms and watercourses that have been its background and a shaping force of our history, and to show that the existence of Lincoln's one-family nation is implicit in the map of North America. This emphasis on geography — on the physical reality of the land itself and the limits imposed by it on the political and cultural development of the United States — this realization of our national homestead and what it means to the people who occupied it has been DeVoto's major contribution to the thinking of our times.

"The Course of Empire," the first volume in the trilogy mentioned above, although the last to be written, is the most magnificent in scope. Starting in the early sixteenth century with Cortes and the other Spanish explorers, he goes on to trace the development and decline of New France, and the conflicts between French and British and Indians, and the slow realization of the concept of a continental American empire, which culminated 300 years after Cortes, when William Clark sighted the Pacific and wrote in his journal, "Ocean in view! O! the joy!"

But this book reads as no other history you have ever seen. Page after page reveals the discoveries and explorations made in an incredible atmosphere of wishful thinking, imagination, misinterpretation of Indian stories, what DeVoto calls the "geography of Phantasy." The Spanish, for example, set out to conquer Cibola, a country whose seven cities were walled with gold, on the word of one man that five emeralds which were not emeralds had come from there. Logic and desire imperatively insisted that there must be a water passage across North America; therefore any tales no matter how improbably about big lakes, or big rivers to the westward were accepted eagerly and the search for the Northwest Passage pressed on.

"In the mind's innocence men could pass, and did, from ideas that had a little empirical fact in them to ideas that had none, without ever knowing that they had crossed a line. (Who could draw the boundary between China, the actual land that was a little known, and Cathay, the land of fable and fantasy?) Logic, desire, or mendacity could invent geography that would influence thought and action quite as much as real geography." (Quoting from Chapter II)

And so, westward the course of Empire!

The notes assembled at the back of the book are interesting asides to the narrative, and the bibliographies for each chapter are tantalizing, particularly where our own Southwest is involved. There are excellent maps by Erwin Raisz which are an integral part of the written words.

Here are the men who came before the mountain men of "Across the Wide Missouri" and the settlers of "The Year of Decision" (the other volumes in the series) who thought not only in terms of nations but of continents. Mr. DeVoto combines a scholar's accuracy and judgment with a sweeping prose that sets before the reader all the excitement and grandeur of the still uncharted wilderness.

Long-Smouldering Dispute Over Oil Imports Explodes

WASHINGTON, May 19 — UP— The long-smouldering dispute over excessive oil imports exploded in Defense Mobilizer Arthur S. Flemming's lap this week.

Flemming was variously accused of breaking faith with domestic producers, trucking to the importing companies, jeopardizing the competitive market, going back on his word, and reversing Congress and the President's Cabinet fuels resources committee on import policy.

On the firing line were President Robert L. Wood and General Counsel Russell B. Brown of the Independent Petroleum Association of America. Wood bluntly charged Flemming with "abandonment of basic policy standards" and asked him for an early fact-on-the-line conference.

Brown asserted Flemming and the Cabinet committee, which he directs had indulged in dubious calculations to make it appear some importers were substantially complying with voluntary import restrictions.

Heat Turned On
Flemming had no immediate response. His office said none could be expected soon.

The heat was turned on the head mobilizer when he endorsed an import "re-evaluation" by the committee. The committee found current imports not too great a menace to a stable domestic market—in contrast to IPAA allegations—but recommended "appropriate action" if those in the future get out of hand.

Flemming further aroused domestic producer ire by inviting the importers to a public hearing next Oct. 1, if, in the meantime, it was found that the current voluntary import-curb formula is too freely violated.

"I hope," Wood said in a statement, "that this invitation includes those in the domestic industry who have a vital concern."

Says Promises Broken
"This is where we came in several years ago," a spokesman for independent producers said dolefully. "Promise after promise has been broken."

Wood said that under the new standard, which discounts imports from Venezuela and Canada and does not include imports into California, Washington, Oregon, Nevada and Arizona, "imports will take an increasing share of the U. S. market at the expense of . . ."

"In effect," he added, "this is a new invitation to higher imports which lead inevitably to increasing dependency on foreign oil."

Brown said excess imports will hit 322,000 barrels a day — in relation to domestic production — during the last half of 1956. He said crude imports for May, June and July will be 48 per cent over the 1954 average and 24 per cent over 1955.

Calls It Discouraging
Flemming's letter to the importers, he added, "was discouraging to those who hoped for a resolution of the problem." He said the letter "reflected an unbending determination by the importers to continue imports at an excessive rate."

"Second," Brown continued, "there is reflected in Flemming's office a willingness to excuse and justify any acts of these companies. By a process of germandering, there are excluded area and types of imports which, after deducting from the whole, leaves the appearance of substantial compliance by the importing companies."

Congress refused to enact import curbs last year but amended the trade agreements act to restrictions when imports reach a certain percentage of domestic production.

Flemming complimented the importers for keeping imports within bounds in the first quarter of 1956. But he said the increase planned for the second quarter "is a source of real concern."

Burbank And N.E.A.

Well, well, well!
Natt B. Burbank, government school superintendent at Boulder, Colorado, certainly told 'em.

At a recent meeting of some 1,200 delegates to the Colorado Congress of Parents and Teachers in the university city, Burbank had little good to say about the way the government school system is working. Considering the position he holds, this took considerable courage and personal fortitude.

Burbank left few areas untouched. He called upon his hearers to protest against the mediocrity of government education. He urged them to "tell your school board, your superintendent and your teachers that you are tired of paying taxes to encourage mediocrity, that you want good teachers paid good salaries and average teachers paid average salaries."

Then, without mentioning the National Education Association by name he let fly a salvo in that direction. "The most vicious segment of the cycle is the mass pressure by our professional organizations, local, state and national, against paying teachers for superior work."

Burbank's principal target was the practice of paying teachers on the basis of seniority rather than on the basis of proven ability. Said he: "The ability to keep on breathing for a specified number of years guarantees that one will move up to the very top salary level. How well he teaches is not considered. The gifted teacher who never stops working to improve his service to children is paid no more than the barely adequate person who will do nothing more than is absolutely required for his students."

What Burbank didn't mention was the fact that this idea of seniority "rights" is one of the fundamental themes promoted by all unions and that the NEA is nothing in the world but a vast labor boss lobby organized to create pressure against the taxpayers for the purpose of "equalizing" the pay of all teachers regardless of what they know or how they conduct their courses. In this respect it is no different than the CIO and AF of L. The theme of all collectivists is to arrive at mediocrity so that those who have (money or ability) will share what they have with those who have not.

However, Burbank did say that teachers were "the prisoners of their own professional organizations." They have a "fear of appearing different, the unwillingness to excel, the desire to be just like everybody else. . . This insidious philosophy has permeated our society to an alarming degree."

Then he went on to show that this attitude on the part of teachers finds its way into the social actions of student body. He revealed that in some cases students bond together and threaten superior students with bodily harm if they answer questions in class and thus show up the general ignorance of the rest of the student body.

Our hat is off to Mr. Burbank. We wouldn't be at all surprised to see the heads of the NEA taking action to elp Mr. Burbank's wings. But what he said was gospel, as any impartial observer of what has been happening in our government schools today could testify.

The difficulty, of course, is that Burbank didn't go far enough. Considering his source of income, this is scarcely surprising. Yet, how refreshing it would have been had he laid the blame for the mediocrity he found so abhorrent, on the system itself, which is where the blame must ultimately be placed.

Government, and consequently all agencies of government including the schools, must concern itself with equality. Government is incapable of differentiating. Whatever merit it has is found in equal treatment for all before the law.

Government schools, therefore, must and will practice the inescapable conformity demanded of all government institutions. The one complete cure would be to separate education from the government. Only in the realm of the free market can individuality thrive. We earnestly recommend the complete cure. Only by such a separation can we deal with the CAUSE of the evil in our governmental schools. Without it we will continue to deal with effects, and each apparent cure will in itself fall short of the required goal, since it will strive to remove an effect without eliminating the cause.

The Doctor Says

By EDGAR P. JORDAN, M. D.

One might paraphrase a well-known saying: "Eternal vigilance is the price of safety." Certainly this applies to one disease which I find I have not discussed for a long time—diphtheria. This is of real importance again because the past few months have shown a considerable increase in the number of cases of diphtheria in many sections. This in turn suggests that immunization of children has not been adequate everywhere.

Certainly up to the early years of this century, diphtheria was a disease which carried off many promising and attractive youngsters—and sometimes their elders as well.

WE DO NOT want this to happen again. Indeed, almost anyone over 60 can remember the loss of some valued relative or friend from this dread disease.

The success in combating diphtheria is the result of the discovery of its cause (a germ), of the development of an antitoxin which counteracts the poison produced by the growth of the germ in the body, and of a means of increasing resistance to the disease.

DIPHTHERIA is a terrible disease if it reaches an advanced stage without satisfactory treatment. The germs usually grow in the throat where they produce a grayish membrane from which the toxin or poison, is poured into the blood. The poison seriously affects the heart, the nerves, the lungs, and the kidneys. I have seen lovely children die unnecessarily from it because they did not receive antitoxin in time.

There is little excuse for this now, when the diagnosis is made in the first two days or so, injections of antitoxin can be given which will cause the symptoms to subside rapidly.

Today in the battle against diphtheria, we have a substance called toxoid which should be given to all children. This toxoid stimulates the body to produce its own antitoxin against diphtheria. Thus, if the germs gain entrance later, they find good resistance present and are not likely to be able to take hold.

This is the method which we must use if we would avoid serious danger.

Would That More Believed The Means Predetermines The Results

I am convinced that if more and more people actually believed that the means predetermined the results — that we reap what we sow — we would be in the predicament we are in today.

N. what does this statement really mean that the means predetermined the results? It has been said by wise men for ages.

St. Paul put it very concisely when he said, Galatians 6:7: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Jesus expressed the same idea in "The Sermon On The Mount." Remember he said:

"Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"
"Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit, but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit."
"A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit."
"Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire."
"Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."

This was not a new idea. Job, 4:8, expressed it when he said: "Even as I have seen, they that plow iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same." David declared likewise, Psalms 37:25: "I have been young, and now am old; yet I have not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

Horsea, 8:7, expressed it in a little different manner: "For they have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind. . . ." Emerson expanded the same idea: "The thief steals from himself." The swindler swindles himself." And when he said, "But it is impossible for a man to be cheated by anyone but himself, as for a thing to be and not be at the same time."

If people actually believed that they reaped what they sowed, they would be more careful as to what they attempted to do. The big problem seems to be to get people to return to this old-fashioned belief. What most people fail to see is that this rule applies whether it is done by an individual or by a group. They seem to believe that if enough people do a thing that violates the Golden Rule and the Coveting Commandment, that they will reap things that are in agreement with the Golden Rule and the Coveting Commandment. This is simply a moral law that is as immutable and eternal as the laws that govern the movement of the celestial bodies. It does not change with time or place or the number of people who so believe.

Most people seem to think that if we sow aggressive force collectively, we will not reap aggressive force; that we can sow initiating force and reap love, goodwill, peace of mind and prosperity. They seem to believe this when it is done collectively by the government, although few of them would believe they would get this kind of results if done by individuals.

They seem to believe we can sow "artificial" immigration quotas and not reap the whirlwind of wars and strife and ill will.

They seem to believe that labor unions that sow collectivism can produce individual responsibility and liberty and thus increase production and not cause unemployment and hate and ill will among mankind.

They seem to think that we can be richer and happier and wealthier by using the means of buying up farm products at a fictitious price and wasting or giving them away and promote liberty and human initiative and integrity and character and prosperity.

They do not seem to believe that we reap what we sow; that the means predetermine the results.

They seem to believe that we can measure value by valueless irredeemable paper money.

They seem to believe that we can educate the youth of the land to believe in liberty and justice and goodwill and love by using the means of aggressive force or legalized robbery.

If we are to do as Jesus said, know them by their fruits, with our enormous debts, our drafting soldiers, our sending them all over the world, our fiat money, our juvenile delinquencies, our discarding of the moral laws of the ages, we should see that the means we are using in education are not producing what educators proclaim they are producing. It certainly is not producing real religion, if religion is, as the word implies, to rebound, to collect together, to compose, to unite.

Yes, if people actually believed that the means predetermined the results and that man reap what they sow, we would have an entirely different world and we would live in greater abundance and have peace of mind that surpasses understanding.

Ike Administration Cool To Reds In NATO

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — The Eisenhower Administration will respond slowly and cautiously to our European Allies' suggestions that it terminate the cold war, and admit Russia to the family of presumably peaceful nations as a member of NATO. It has agreed, however, to study the possibility, although no decision will be made until after the November election for obvious reasons.

Despite the diplomats' restrained approach to the problem, all the recent proposals for expansion of NATO and fuller use of the United Nations' facilities in settling disputes have a single basic purpose. It is to try to enlist the Soviet as a co-partner in an international organization for maintenance of world peace. Once that is accomplished, it is believed that all explosive questions — disarmament, German unification, the Far East, the Arab-Israeli feud — can be adjusted peaceably.

The man who first warned of the Communist threat was the Iron Curtain, believes the time has arrived for such an effort, even though he shares Eisenhower-Dulles misgivings.

Sir Winston Churchill, however, is more willing than they to test the thesis that Russia's reformation under Bulganin and Khrushchev is real.

"If the Russian repudiation of Stalin is sincere," Sir Winston said at Aachen, "we have a new Russia to deal with, and I do not myself see why, if this be so, new Russia should not join in the spirit of this solemn agreement — NATO."

Otherwise, he added grimly, there will be only a "unity of ashes and death" from continued rivalry and enmity of the two worlds in an atomic age.

Thus, as he has done so often in other heroic and historic moments, Churchill epitomized the longings of peoples and statesmen everywhere. Whereas Gronchi of Italy, Pineau of France, Eden of England and Dulles have discussed only timidly retinkering of the U.N. and NATO, Britain's "grand old man" struck at the heart of the matter. He brought their diplomats dreams down to political earth. He forced them to face realities.

Secretary Dulles has had to concede that the more grandiose plan was worth exploration, and NATO's "three wise men" will undertake it during the summer. Otherwise, he would have confirmed the belief of many restless Allies and sullen neutrals that ours is a "dog-in-the-manger" attitude. Nor could he reject summarily the advice of the warrior who had fought Communism and Fascism alike, as circumstance decreed.

Dulles can afford to make this re-examination of the Kremlin's good faith without political embarrassment. Leading Democratic Presidential candidates have demanded a more dynamic and positive policy, including expansion of NATO's and the U.N.'s activities in the political and economic fields. Dulles himself has granted Russia the right to participate in any Arab-Israeli settlement.

George F. Kennan, former Ambassador to Moscow and a foreign policy adviser under Roosevelt and Truman, urges a more realistic attitude toward Russia, based on changes within that country since Stalin's death. The author of the program of "containment," which it is now proposed to modify, gains the Soviet "the beginning of that mellowing process which overtakes sooner or later all militant movements."

Both Churchill and Kennan may have in mind the monarchial Allies' treatment of Napoleon, who also advocated and fought for a unified European system. Many historians argue that, had the British-organized Coalition of Kings and Emperors not determined to crush the Corsican upstart because of his threat to their thrones, both France and Europe would be stronger and more united than they are today.

Anyway, in a wary and guarded acceptance of the Churchill idea, Eisenhower and Dulles appear to have nothing to lose, everything to gain. The stern British realist insists that we must deal from strength rather than weakness in the experiment and gamble he proposes.

A lawyer related the following story as an illustration of circumstantial evidence:
A young and pretty girl had been out walking. On her return her mother said,
Mother—Where have you been, my dear?
Girl—Only in the park.
Mother—With whom?
Girl—No one.
Mother—No one?
Girl—No one.
Mother—Then explain how it is you have come home with a walk-in stick when you started out with an umbrella!

FOR REFLECTION

...with JAMES C. INGEBRETSEN, President, Spiritual Mobilization

Sen. Estes Kefauver, who for some years now has hankered to live in the White House, is quoted as having said recently (in defending the Supreme Court decision on segregation), "It is ridiculous to say a Supreme Court decision is unconstitutional."

Is that so? Then the numerous former Supreme Court decisions that "separate but equal" educational facilities satisfied the Constitution must have been constitutional. But the latest ruling directly contradicts the former opinions. Nevertheless, according to Kefauver, "it is ridiculous to say" that either—or any—of these decisions "is unconstitutional."

Which seems to be saying that the Supreme Court needs not pay any attention to the Constitution in making its decisions—anything it says is constitutional. If this doctrine is correct, of what use is the Constitution any more?

Communist Threat Helps U. S. Prosperity?

By Thurman Sensing

One of the most widely known and most successful financiers in the country visited our home city the other day. While being interviewed by a newspaper reporter, he was asked if he saw any danger of recession or depression. He said to the reporter "I can't see a depression in our lifetime, so long as we continue to be faced with the Communist threat."

This financier may be right—but what a terrible way to depend upon prosperity! Does that mean that we are still on a war prosperity? Does that mean we shall always have prosperity so long as there is a threat of war? Does that mean that when the danger of war is no longer with us, then we shall have depression and hard times. These are questions worth thinking about and perhaps we need to do some soul searching in connection with them.

There is one thing we do know from our history—that this nation was not built on and did not grow under a war prosperity. Actually, of course, there is no such thing as war prosperity. Why, then, do we seem to have now reached the point where we must depend upon war or threat of war to keep our economy going?

Perhaps we do not have to search too hard to find the answer. When the New Deal took over the government of the country in the early 1930's, it refused to let the natural laws of economics work us out of the depression we were in at the time. We had always come out of depressions without government meddling before — and stronger than ever — but not this time.

This time the Government tried to bring prosperity back by dotes and aid and pump-priming of various sorts. It did not work.

Then along came the Second World War — and it seemed like we had prosperity again. With very slight recessions, it has seemed like we have had it ever since. It was this appearance of prosperity under World War II conditions that has undoubtedly led the people in to a war prosperity frame of mind.

Actually, of course, we did not have prosperity during that war. Our increased economic activity was financed with borrowed money. We increased our national debt from $38 billion to almost $300 billion. That is not prosperity.

The greatly increased economic activity following the war was also a type of war prosperity, because it was caused by the shortage of goods that had arisen due to the war. Then, when things seemed to be slackening again, along came the Korean War — and again we seemed to have prosperity. But it was a war prosperity and, we repeat, that is not prosperity.

Since the end of the Korean War we have continued to have the "Communist threat" which this financier says is protection against and generous way, that there is more in it for her with far less personal effort, so why bother to exert herself! If you tried to explain that "social security" is not "insurance" at all, or how there is no relationship whatsoever between a person's premium payments and his possible dividends, and no fixed "contract" of any sort, — she would undoubtedly answer: "Who cares! I can get more for less, can't I?" If you questioned her moral right to live her life on the assumption that other people owe her a subsidized old-age, she would laugh in your face, and tell you flatly that her idea of "morality" is "from each according to his ability, to each according to his need." And if you reminded her that this is basic Communist doctrine, she would probably look at you coldly and say: "Who are you? McCarthy or something?"

A gentleman reader also had a letter in last night's paper. He wrote: "The prompt passage of the bill (extension of social security) is a debt we owe to our older citizens. It would prime the pump; this money would go into circulation and be turned over many times, adding up to more living for living people."

Where does this money come from to "prime the pump" except from other "living people"? people who are trying desperately to pay for their homes, support their kids and save for their own old age? Why do they think the present elderly are finding it so difficult to live on $3 dollars, whereas these dollars are from private savings or from government hand-outs? Who do they think is paying for the redemption of the Social Security government bonds, or the accumulated interest on them, whenever they come due? Do they think the government has a "cash reserve" for this, a government which is 280 odd billion dollars in debt?

The probability is that most of them don't even want to think, nor do they really want to know the facts. "Their not to reason why, —thurs but to yell 'Gimme—or we'll vote against you at the polls!"

Somebody once said that civilization "is a race between education and disaster." Who is going to "educate" the non-educable who seem to constitute the majority? Not the politicians, that's for sure! Who wants to be a dead duck at the ballot box? The voters prefer politicians "bearing gifts," who charge the cost to the next generation. Sorry, kids, but that's the way it is!

This letter is now bringing in some angry replies, mostly from today's young people, which clearly reveals their attitude about "old-age security". One, appearing in last night's paper, read as follows: "What the faithful insurance agent neglected to state," she writes, "is the fact that the people who save money in a life insurance policy would have NO life insurance upon withdrawing their savings. To be blunt, who then pays their burial expenses? That is what an insurance policy was originally intended for. As far as retirement income policies go, social — security pays far more upon retirement per dollar than the average person can afford for the same amount in premiums. Would you name of the faithful army of life insurance agents like to live on the income that a few pennies or a dollar a week would buy in insurance? I don't think they would. Thanks, but I will collect my own 3 per cent interest."

This kind of thinking is so erroneous and so sad that one wonders vaguely whether anybody could even against it, since she is already sold on the idea that "the government way" is the easy

One nice thing about babies—they don't bore you with statistics about their parents.

The school superintendent was visiting the school to see how students were doing. In one classroom he posed this question: Superintendent—If the earth is 25,000 miles in circumference, a Niagara Falls are 113 feet higher how old am I?
Boy—you're 42, sir.
Superintendent—How do you arrive at that figure?
Boy—Well, I got a brother 21, and he's only half as tall as I am.

Good And Bad Of Weeks News

By CHARLES M. McCANN, United Press Foreign Analyst
 The week's good and bad news on the international balance sheet:
GOOD NEWS
 1. Soviet Russia's latest move in its westward and light campaign fell flat. The Kremlin announced it would reduce its armed forces by 1.2 million men. Allied leaders recognized it at once as an obvious attempt to weaken their defense co-operation. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said that by putting the demobilized men into industry and agriculture the Soviet government might increase its war-making power, not reduce it. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, Allied supreme commander in Europe, said the promised reduction would not lessen the might of the Communist bloc because of the development of nuclear weapons and other new instruments of destruction. French Premier Guy Mollet, arriving in Moscow for a state visit, announced firmly as soon as he stepped from his plane that France will remain faithful to its alliances.
 2. President Sukarno of Indonesia, a leading "neutralist," made a good impression on his arrival in Washington to visit President Eisenhower. No important agreements were expected. But the hope in Washington was that Sukarno's suspicion of the "imperialists" might be softened.
 3. Prime Minister Anthony Eden won a comfortable majority in the British House of Commons on a confidence vote concerning the recent embarrassing "frogman incident." Laborites tried to force him to tell just why frogman Lionel Crabbe snorped around the Russian cruiser Ordzhonikidze during the visit to Britain of the Kremlin's Mr. B. and Mr. K. Eden refused. He took the view that the disclosure could only cause trouble with Russia. Commons supported him by 316 votes to 229.
BAD NEWS
 1. Communist China scored two important successes. Great Britain announced it intended to relax some of its restrictions on the shipment of strategic goods to the Reds. These restrictions had been imposed by the Allies because of the Peiping Government's aggressive policies. Prime Minister Anthony Eden had tried vainly for months to get the United States to agree to a relaxation. Because of Britain's desperate need of foreign trade, Eden decided to go ahead on his own. The second success was the recognition of Red China by the Egyptian government, leader of the Arab nations in the Palestine dispute. It was reported that other Arab countries might follow Egypt's lead.

 2. The pro-Greek revolt in Cyprus continued unabated. Anger in Greece, which wants Britain to give up the island, blazed after the hanging of two Greek Cypriots convicted a assassins. The British ambassador in Athens was warned, because of the possibility of "personal danger," to stay away from a reception for visiting West German President Theodor Heuss.
 3. French troops fought full-scale battles with Arab rebels in Algeria. Bitterness intensified not

YOUNG LOVERS—Shirley Jones and Gordon MacRae, shown above in a scene from Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Carousel," which Twentieth Century-Fox has produced in CinemaScope 55, head the large cast which will be seen singing and dancing in this musical classic. The picture, photographed in the new process, will have its premier here today at the Lanora Theater.

Gordon MacRae Had Feelin' He Was Right For 'Carousel'

Gordon MacRae is a persistent fellow. He wanted to sing "Billy" in Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Carousel," which will be seen today at the Lanora Theater, ever since, while still wearing the uniform of an Air Force lieutenant, he saw the play in New York in 1945. He has sung "Soliloquy" and other songs from it in night club engagements for years and when he heard that Twentieth Century-Fox was to make a screen version, laid siege to the part.

He stirred his agent to frenzied activity and bombarded Production Chief Darryl Zanuck, Producer Ephron and others with telegrams proclaiming his suitability. He signed for a three week engagement in a stage production of the vehicle in Dallas so that studio folk could see how well he played the part. But before the opening curtain at Dallas, he knew Frank Sinatra had been signed for the role.

Appreciation Banquet Is Held Here

The appreciation banquet for service station, hotel, motel, cafe, beauty shop and barbershop operators Thursday night in the Palm Room featured an address on public relations by W. A. Anderson of Clovis, N.M.

Anderson, a public relations specialist who owns two curio shops, pointed out that it isn't what you have to sell. It's the way you sell it. He said to sell good will.

The affair was sponsored by the tourist development committee of the Chamber of Commerce. The first such banquet was held in 1951.

Ben Ogden served as master of ceremonies and the invocation was given by Rev. Don Speaker, pastor of the Church of the Brethren. Dinner music was provided by Miss Ramona Hudgins at the organ.

Jack Vaughn, chairman of the tourist development committee for 1955, made a review of the committee activities.

The Plainsmen, a musical group from Frank Phillips College in Borger, furnished a program of entertainment.

Senator Grady Hazlewood of Amarillo was one of the guests at the affair.

VA, FHA Study Home Buyers

By ROBERT F. MORISON

WASHINGTON, May 19—UP— Studies by the Veterans Administration and the Federal Housing Administration give a good idea of what a large portion of the home-buying public is like.

Purchasers of new homes using VA-backed mortgages last year averaged about 32 years of age.

The average FHA-insured mortgage home buyer was about three years older.

The difference was due chiefly to the lower down payments required by VA which permits younger ex-GI's to buy homes without prolonged saving.

The average price for new homes purchased under the VA's program was $11,800 compared with FHA's $12,110.

Down payments are harder to compare because, before last summer, VA guaranteed mortgages without down payments. However down payments for those who made them averaged slightly more than $1,400. For FHA - insured mortgages down payment averaged around $1,815. Neither figure includes settlement or closing costs.

The veteran's average monthly bill to run his house, including payments on interest and principal, taxes, utilities and a portion set aside for maintenance, totaled $96.75. For an FHA mortgage this was about $98.

The difference is mainly the longer average period over which VA loans are repaid and the 1-2 of 1 per cent additional mortgage insurance premium FHA home buyers must pay.

Incomes of GI buyers, before taxes, averaged $500.80 a month. For FHA home buyers the after-tax monthly income figure was about $488.

48th Year

The monthly cost of running the house has been increasing steadily in the postwar years. From 1954 to 1955 average FHA payments went up about $6. For FHA home buyers this year-to-year increase was about $5.

A further increase is expected this year as the price of homes goes up, reflecting higher labor, material and land costs.

Both Have Own Rules
FHA tends to let its local insuring offices judge whether individual applicants have the financial means and resources to buy a home with an insured mortgage. They must be sure a prospective home buyer, within "reasonable limits," has the income, savings and earning potential to meet his mortgage obligations, and that he is not weighted down by other debts.

'Rail Dynamics,' Brought Cook Fame

By PRESTON MCGRAW

United Press Staff Correspondent
The record that put Emory Cook on the track of fame and reputed fortune was "Rail Dynamics."

He introduced "Rail Dynamics," actually the third record he made under his own label, at the New York Audio Fair of 1951.

Audiophiles jammed his exhibition room for three days, reveling in the sound of locomotive whistles, bells and wheels against rails.

It is still a 10-inch standard at $2.98, in Cook's catalogue, which now contains 90 titles. Cook keeps looking for new ideas all the time.

With every record he sells is a postcard, which he asks listeners to mail back to him, telling what sounds they would like to hear.

Cook, while a highly practical man and a shrewd salesman of his own products, has a reputation of being one of the best audio engineers alive.

Personal View of Science
Early in his career, long, actually, before he had made any records of his own, he arrived at a personal view of the science of recording.

"My friends didn't seem to grasp the fact that the reproduction of sound must be a blend of two sciences — engineering and acoustics," he said.

"They didn't dissect the sound of a record. If they had, they would have realized that there is that added dimension of acoustics."

"Take the recording of an orchestra, for instance. I'd found that it was perfectly possible to reproduce the music on a record so that it was nearly perfect from the technical point of view—very little distortion and a wide frequency spectrum.

"But it still sounded lousy acoustically, as if the orchestra had been jammed into a telephone booth.

"I was looking for a vivid, exciting performance that would give you the feeling that it had been recorded in its proper setting.

"I was talking about having a guitar sound as if it was being played in a patio, not in a studio."

To help achieve this, Cook says he keeps his hands off the controls while he is recording.

Exactly Like Artist
"The musical expression is exactly as played by the artist; no change in volume to compress or expand was made during the entire recording session, and this range has been untouched from the condenser microphone pickup to the final pressing," he says in a forenote to his catalogue.

Cook has lately started making records by a process called "microfusion." This, he explains, means that the records are pressed out of powdered vinyl, instead of the customary solid vinyl.

The result of this has been, he says, to reduce scratch almost to the vanishing point. All of Cook's records play at 33 1-3 rpm's.

He also makes binaural records. One of these is his "Voice of the Sea," which may be played with one pickup, or, with the addition of a clip-on head, as a binaural record.

120 Insurance Firms May Fail
AUSTIN —UP— Some 120 insurance firms may be put out of business sometime after May 31, according to the Texas Insurance Commission.

A commission spokesman said May 31 is the deadline for returning a questionnaire sent out by the commission earlier this year. License renewals are effective for the year starting June 1.

The spokesman said it appeared that 20 stock life insurance companies fail to meet the requirements of state law, along with approximately 100 mutual insurance companies.

Many of the mutual companies are small firms, he said, adding that some of them might correct their defects before the May 31 deadline.

ROBERT ADAMSON Ass't County Agricultural Agent PAT BROYLES

Ass't Home Demonstration Agent We have just returned from the Sixth Annual Southwestern Recreation Leaders Laboratory that was held at the Mountain View Ranch at Cowles, N. M. from May 6 to May 12. Cowles is 20 miles north of Pecos, which is between Santa Fe and Los Vegas.

This lab was primarily for people who work with young people; persons interested in recreation had an excellent opportunity to receive training in several phases of recreation at this lab. There were 62 people there representing the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls, YWCA, 4-H clubs and various other youth organizations. Attendance at this annual meeting was limited to persons actively interested in community service work.

The purpose of the Southwestern Recreation Leaders Laboratory was to foster, promote and encourage all types of creative recreation, particularly stressing the development of leadership. To achieve this objective the lab meets annually for a week of instruction, discussion and sharing in the philosophy and practice of recreation. The recreation training included crafts, visual aids, outdoor cooking, games, folk and square dancing, ceremonies, dramatics, discussion on recreation, song sessions and party planning.

The recreation training that we received will help us in our 4-H club program in this county. A rundown on the activities are as follows: The crafts included simple jewelry making with stones and wire. Jewel Middleton, associate county extension agent at Roswell taught this craft. Indian Tepees and drums were made. They are easily designed and offer a chance for developing one's ability in Indian art of design making.

It has many uses besides being a decorator's item at banquets, parties, and workshops. Lamp shades, incense burners and many lighting effects are other popular uses of the Tepee; outdoor cooking was taught by Stewart Case, Extension Recreation Specialist of Colorado. A cook-out is a form of recreation which can be not only tops in good eating but also gives one a chance to display his skills in woodcraft.

Games were taught by many of the "labbers". The "get-acquainted" games were very beneficial to us in learning some very efficient methods of ice-breaking; folk and square dancing was taught by Bertha Holck, a professional caller of Austin. She introduced many new mixtures, folk dances and square dances. Also included in her course was the training of

Weekly Grain

FORT WORTH —UP— USDA Weekly grain:

Wheat broke 4 to 6c a bushel this week as the first offerings from the new crop arrived at southwest cash grain markets, the U. S. Department of Agriculture reported Saturday.

Milo and corn went down, too. But barley held steady and oats edged forward. Quality of the new wheat is good, but high in moisture content. No. 1 hard offerings, ordinary protein content, were quoted Friday at $2.41 to $2.47 a bushel.

Milo lost a penny per cwt. Monday, Wednesday and Friday, closing at $2.40 to $2.45. Although supplies of free milo are rather tight, there was little demand to support prices.

No. 2 white corn declined 2 to 3c a bushel and No. 2 yellow, 2 to 2½c. This left white corn at $1.93 to $1.95 and yellow at $1.81 to $1.83.

Barley remained at $1.40 to $1.42 where it has been since early May.

Contrary to the rest of the cash grain trend, No. 2 white oats from the North moved up ¼c a bushel. They closed the week at 8½c to 9¼c a bushel.

These are net price changes from Friday through Friday, based on wholesale carlots, Texas common freight rate points.

Wheat slipped mostly a cent a bushel in Oklahoma. No. 1 hard ranged from $1.97 at Guyton and Hooker to $2.04 at Bison and Hennessey. Cash wheat brought $2.02 at Clinton, Enid, Oklahoma City, El Reno and Kingfisher.

persons who wanted to learn to call. She gave these persons the six main requirements that a caller must fulfill to become a good caller.

In the discussions on recreation, various ideas on recreation were presented by members of the laboratory. We can make use of these ideas as they were presented here in our county; visual aids were used in presenting the words of songs in our song sessions conducted by Loemna Brookley, a former home demonstration agent. Group singing is one of the most necessary phases of a successful club program. Music is the universal language of mankind. It creates and sustains good fellowship. Planning is one of the most important phases of a successful party. At the lab each person was assigned to a committee to plan one party. Games, stunts, skits, and ceremonies were well-planned in advance of each party.

Doug O'Bannon, owner and manager of Mountain View Ranch, contributed much to the success of the Southwestern Recreation Leaders' Laboratory through his generous co-operation.

GRAY COUNTY Soil Conservation District News

By JACK DOUGLAS

A complete soil conservation program for a farm or ranch in the Gray County S C D will consist of a combination of various soil and water conservation practices. This combination is essential in preventing erosion, whether the land is producing grass or cultivated crops.

No single soil conservation practice can control erosion and conserve moisture, that explains why a sloping field needs more protection than terracing, for example contour cultivation, cover crops, crop rotation and crop residue utilization, all support the practice of terracing. In order to keep terraces ends from washing out the terraces should be emptied on a good grass sod. In some cases graded waterways may be needed to carry the water from the terrace system to a natural drain. These waterways are excellent for use as meadow or pasture.

Not all cultivated land, of course, will require all these practices. Generally speaking, the steeper the land the more conservation measures that will be needed for protection. If the land is too steep for safe cultivation, or the soil too shallow, the District recommends that it be returned to grass.

For permanent profitable use, grasslands also require a combination of practices. Regulated grazing, stocking according to forage production, good distribution of water, salt and feeding locations may give and equate protection to grasslands. Enough grass should be left on the land at all times to protect it from washing or blowing. The most desirable plants should be allowed to reseed. The landowner will need supplemental pasture and a good reserve feed supply in order to make the most of his grasslands.

When these practices have been established the landowner can expect not only to have his land protected from erosion but also get greater production. That has been the experience of landowners who have been using soil and water conservation farming and ranching systems.

UCLA Bruins Get 3-Year Probation

VICTORIA, B. C., May 19—UP—The Pacific Coast Conference Saturday slapped a three-year probation on UCLA and "fined" the Bruins the equivalent of $93,000 for violating conference rules in giving financial aid to athletes.

The ruling barred the defending Coast Conference football champions from the next three Rose Bowl games and placed the school on probation until July 1, 1959, and thereafter until such time as the PCC may terminate the probationary status after satisfactory evidence and assurances are supplied by the school that the athletic situation has been cleaned up.

Saturday's action put UCLA even deeper in the doghouse than the University of Washington, which was found guilty earlier this month of almost an identical offense. Washington was placed on two years probation and fined the equivalent of $52,000.

No Rose Bowl Receipts
 UCLA was fined $15,000 outright because its chancellor, Raymond B. Allen, denied Conference Commissioner Victor Schmidt the opportunity to conduct an investigation of financial aid given to athletes at the Los Angeles school. In addition, UCLA will not be permitted to share in receipts from the Rose Bowl game.

Other penalties levied against UCLA included:

1. UCLA shall not be permitted to participate in any other post-season athletic event or divisional or conference championship event.
2. The school will not be eligible for listing or consideration as divisional or conference champion in any sport, regardless of what its actual record in competition against other schools may be.
3. UCLA will be ineligible to participate in any NCAA sponsored event after Aug. 1, 1956. However the UCLA track team would be eligible for this season's NCAA track meets.

PANHANDLE OUTDOORS

By S. V. WHITEHORN
 Game and Varmint Calling

According to the story back about 1915 there was a Mexican shepherd who migrated into the country around Albany, Texas, and went to work on one of the ranches in that territory. At that time the county was paying a bounty on coyotes. The herder had devised a contraption that he employed in luring coyotes into gun range. It wasn't long until the man exhausted the money put up by the county in the control of the coyotes. In fact, according to the story the herder put the county out of the bounty system due to the fact that he slayed the coyotes at such an alarming rate. No one at the time knew the method of success but after the herder's death some of the cowhands, going thru the deceased cowboy's belongings, come across a small device that unfolded the secret. It was the end of a cows horn, properly fitted with a piece of brass from a 30-30 hull, used for a reed, that when blown would sound very much like a rabbit squealing. In a short time the cowboy was calling coyotes with the caller. Not too many years after other men of the range copied the caller and soon there were several of the callers in use around the Albany county. In the early 30's some of the boys began making a selling the calls, usually for the price of $7.50 each.

One call went to a shepherd in Wyoming and soon a letter came back that went something like this — "You don't know how much I appreciate the caller recently purchased from you". For years, said the man, "I have put on my own shoes, traveled many hours thru the snow only to see a coyote at a distance for a split second". "Now I can walk only a comparatively short distance, carefully hide, and call them to me". Coyote calling is a new sport by comparison. The last few years have seen several manufacturing concerns go into the business of perfecting and marketing the invention of the lonely shepherd. Rhea Gunn, of Borger recently received a shipment of Weem's callers, which I have found to be excellent in this area.

Varmint calling is at first something like the man that was driving along a country road and had a flat tire. Being a pessimist and alibi having the habit of talking to himself he dismounted and related "Haven't got a jack, can't get it fixed." After standing there a while he noticed a large house up the road about a half mile and started walking in that direction. "Well he said, there is a rich man that lives there, maybe he has a jack, he has lots of money but he probably won't loan me his jack." The closer he approached the more he talked. "He has lots of money but he won't loan me his jack". Finally he knocked on the door and the man came and asked him what he could do for him. In disgust the jack seeker related "Just keep your jack, I didn't want to borrow it anyway".

That's the way it is the first few times out calling. But when you do call up a coyote or cat, "Your temperature will shoot up to a 140 degrees". According to R. A. Gunn, who after several futile attempts, is outsmarting the predators constantly.

Red Leg Report
 The day is fast approaching when A. S. Jackson will release from the holding pen the one hundred and thirty Spanish Redlegged partridges that are on the Tubbs ranch in Lipscomb county. Any type of fowl so penned, in the open country will draw all types of predators, so do these but only for once. Mr. Jackson has a net of steel-traps surrounding the pens. Once a hawk, owl, or coyote comes near the pens the would-be partridge eater leaves with a trip on his foot. This is done in order to prevent the disturbing of the birds.

I wanted to get a close up picture of these beautiful birds but Mr. Jackson said fifty feet was as near as he allowed anyone to the pens. The birds will not be disturbed as long as it is possible to keep them from being alarmed.

There were several shipments of partridges from Spain that have made their way to the Texas Panhandle. First release around Chidress wasn't a success but we hope these birds will "take".

Mr. Burl Stuard, former Agriculture Attaché to Spain, was greatly instrumental in Texas receiving these game birds. Mr. Stuard is a Texan and surmised that the country here was similar enough in these parts to allow the red leg a good chance of survival.

Golden Terror To Be In Main Event

The Golden Terror, hated by one and all, fans and wrestlers alike, takes the middle of the ring in tomorrow night's main event at the Top O'Texas Sportsman's Club. And his most worthy opponent will be the fighting Frenchman, Andre Drapp, making his second appearance in the local ring in as many weeks after a two year's absence.

The two will battle for one hour, or the best two falls out of three.

In a two-out-of-three fall semi-final event, Sonny Myers, one-time heavyweight champion of Texas, meets the Terror's equally masked and unloved manager, Marc Anthony.

For an opening event, the youngster, Red McIntyre appears against a crafty veteran, Frankie Hill Murdock, the fabulous Texan from Waxahachie. Their battle is a one fall, twenty minute affair.

Advance tickets for the program are available at Modern Pharmacy.

Nashua Ready for Race
 NEW YORK — UP — Trainer Jim Fitzsimmons said Wednesday Nashua is as ready as he'll ever be for next Saturday's assault on the world's money-winning record at aqueduct. Nashua trails Citation by only $8,145 for the all-time mark for a thoroughbred's winnings.

Mantle Leads Record
 By ED SAINSBURY
 CHICAGO, May 19—Mickey Mantle, the New York Yankees' star outfielder, not only was ahead of Babe Ruth's record setting home run pace Saturday; he also was well ahead of Mickey Mantle.

Mantle collected both his 14th and 15th homers of the season in New York's 8-7 win over the Chicago White Sox Friday night, tying the game in the ninth inning with his second homer of the game to give his team a chance to win in the 10th.

He hit the first homer off Billy Pierce, batting right handed, while the second was off Dixie Howell and he batted left handed. Thus he became the first player in major league history to hit a home run both left and right handed in one game twice.

The only other American Leaguer to perform the feat was Johnny Lucadello of the St. Louis Browns, and Mantle who earlier did the same trick against Detroit last year.

Mantle also collected 4 hits in the game, including a double and a single to raise his batting average to .409 for the year. And the 11 total bases gave him a slugging percentage of .891.

Left-handed his slugging percentage was .944.

Mantle was 33 games and one month ahead of his own home run pace of last year when he led the American League with 37. Last year he collected his 15th homer in his 62nd game on June 17. Friday night he got his 14th and 15th homers in his 29th game.

Compared to Ruth's 1927 pace, when he set the major league record of 60 home runs, Mantle was leading in all departments. Ruth had only nine homers in 29 games, six behind Mantle's pace.

Peg O' Pampa

IF WE PAUSE A MOMENT while I wipe my brow, maybe Peg can get this column on the road. . . . The days sure have been beautiful . . . but Peg isn't quite acclimated to the change yet. . . . Every little movement is exhausting. . . . of course, there might be some spring fever mixed in with it. . . . but, while she can, Peg will blame it on the weather—the perennial scapegoat for not feeling like working. . . . Peg's youngsters are waiting with bated breath for the pools to open . . . speaking of pools . . . have you seen Country Club pool? . . . no water in it yet, but it's been painted a lusciously cool shade of green . . . makes you want to run out and dive in despite no water. . . . Well, all this anticipation will come to an end in the near future. . . . Peg thinks we can safely say, summer is creeping up behind us at a fast pace. . . . too fast for Peg, who hasn't been able to get the family's summer apparel in shape yet.

Every tomorrow has two handles. We can take hold of it with the handle of anxiety or the handle of faith. (H. W. Beecher)

PEOPLE SURE ARE BUSY this time of year. . . . everyone looks a little hurried. . . . with all the clubs and individuals trying to squeeze everything in before June. . . . One of the very busy women in Pampa is Mrs. John Holt Jr., chairman of the Girl Scout Day camp. . . . and she sure is doing a bang-up job! . . . Fern Dawson and Marian Osborne can testify to that. . . . after the extremely harrowing experience of registering 200 girls in two days time. . . . both Fern and Marian looked like they'd been run through a wringer. . . . Registration closed Saturday and Peg hasn't got the latest figure on how many registered. . . . but she'll guess it's somewhere between 325 and 350. . . . a calculated guess based on rumors from the Girl Scout office on how many had registered by Thursday. . . . And in case you don't know it, one of the unsung heroes of Day Camp each year is Fern Dawson. . . . she's the baby sitter. . . . takes care of all the little ones while their mothers are helping with the camping program. . . . she's had them from babies-in-arms up to school age and over. . . . which is quite a job keeping all the youngsters entertained. . . . especially that wide age range. . . . but I don't think anyone enjoys it more than Fern!

The best preparation for the future is the present well seen to, and the last duty done. (G. Macdonald)

THE PAMPA LITTLE THEATER group is really going great guns. . . . and Peg thinks they've made a lot of progress in the short time they've been organized. . . . Pampa has seldom seen a more polished production than the first workshop play. . . . "The Importance of Being Earnest". . . . Jack Miller is to be congratulated for a fine job of directing. . . . and the second production, "Fun With Shakespeare" was a scream! . . . The three witches. . . . (no inference to anyone living or otherwise is intended) . . . portrayed by Carol Cooper, Gladys Howard and Pauline Smythe were really convincing. . . . although they don't ordinarily look the part. . . . and Cleo Wesley did a wonderful job in amusing, but difficult, role of Thelma in "The Most Tragical, Lamentable and Strange Tale of Pyramus and Thisby". . . . Phew! . . . That's quite a handle! . . . Peg suggests you take a big deep breath before beginning to say it aloud! . . . Yes, but really. . . . Peg thinks Old Bill would be proud of our budding thespians if he were here. . . . we get so used to hearing so much of his tragedies that we forget that he himself had a lot of fun with his productions in Merrie Old England. . . . If you don't agree, read his comedies sometime. . . . Some of them come awfully close to what we call "slapstick" today. . . . of course, that's Peg's very uneducated opinion. . . . That's a good way to escape the wrath of the devout and devoted fans of the Bard—in case they disagree!

That tomorrow starts from to-day and is one day beyond it, robes the future with hope's rainbow hues. (Mary Baker Eddy)

POTPOURRI. . . . Have you seen that intriguing purse Elma Vandenberg has been carrying? . . . It's the cutest little barrel-shaped purse. . . . in white. . . . with navy blue or black dots. . . . Peg wasn't close enough to distinguish the exact color of the dots. . . . Saw Vera Lard the other day in the cutest baby-blue dress with baby-doll lace ruffles down the front of the bodice. . . . Decorations for buns (hair) seem to be quite the rage. . . . saw Al Curry this week with the most intriguing ivory "bones" decorated with gold sticking out on either side of her bun. . . . very, very clever! . . . Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Frasier are all excited over the forthcoming graduation of their son, Gordon. . . . he'll receive his master's degree from Colorado A & M in June. . . . Peg heard this week about some boasting enthusiasts in Pampa. . . . The Raymond Jeffreys. . . . seems they and their children attended the boat races in Wichita Falls and Raymond came in first in two races and came in second in another. . . . Congratulations! . . . Spent a few minutes talking with Frances Hofeses who says she hasn't quite recovered yet from having overnight guests. . . . 13 of them at one time. . . . seems her daughter had a pajama party which is oodles and oodles of fun for the girls. . . . but rather wearing on the parents of the hostess.

"I never think of the future. It comes soon enough. (Albert Einstein)

A DAY AT THE COUNTRY CLUB. . . . is so, so relaxing. . . . getting out in the nice warm sun. . . . acquiring a comfortable tan. . . . and using up a little energy on the course. . . . it looks like a "little energy" the way Peg comes dragging in to the clubhouse. . . . but it's so healthy. . . . you can go home for a change being dead tired from nothing more than having a good time on the course. . . . The Ladies Golf Association has really built up a large group of active golfers. . . . Thursday Peg spied Meador in an adorable white golfing hat with visor and all. . . . Melba Lemmons. . . . Lois Watkins, who Peg hasn't seen in ages. . . . Hortense Rose in a beige sheath dress. . . . and carrying the most unusual purse. . . . looked like a straw. . . . only pressed into plastic. . . . quite different! . . . Faye Sidwell, busy checking in the luncheon guests. . . . Ted Hicks relaxing after being so busy lately. . . . Fern Parker. . . . and Maige Eaton, who looked almost as bushed as Peg. . . . and of course, Hazel Nation, who is doing a marvelous job as president. . . . Miriam Luedders was there, too, and Ted made the nicest little talk about her and gave her a lovely yellow orchid corsage from the Association. . . . Miriam and Carl are moving up to Michigan to relax, fish and play golf. . . . and do all the things they've been longing to do for years. . . . sure hate to see them go! . . . Seems some other affair was going on beside the Ladies Golf Association luncheon. . . . saw Betty Marx looking fresh and cool in a pretty rose print dress. . . . and Beulah Merchant in a black figured skirt and black peasant blouse that really set off her lovely hair.

How many deeds of deathless virtue and immortal crime the world had wanted had the actor said, "I will do this to-morrow." (Lord John Russell)

WELL, PEG HAS GOT TO TAKE. . . . off like a great big bird. . . . and accomplish something. . . . but this sure has been an enjoyable interlude between housework. . . . and more housework. . . . But, although Peg likes to gripe about it now and then, she really thinks it's the greatest. . . . and most rewarding profession there is. . . . don't you? . . . especially after last Sunday? . . . Well, toodle-oo. . . . and still that. . . . until next week.

As ever,
Peg

MR. AND MRS. ROY N. THOMAS

Miss Peggy Solomon And Roy Thomas United In Marriage In Double-Ring Rite

Miss Peggy Laverne Solomon and Roy N. Thomas were united in marriage at 4 p. m. May 12, in the First Christian Church. Rev. Richard Crews officiated for the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Leonard, 726 N. Nelson, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Thomas of Kosciusko, Miss.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of chantilly lace and tulle over satin. The fitted lace bodice was styled with a Peter Pan collar and long sleeves that came to points over her hands. The bouffant, waist-length skirt of tulle was fashioned with a lace panel down the front. Her finger-ring veil of illusion fell from a tiara accented with sequins and rhinestones. She wore white satin shoes and carried a bouquet of white gamellas and carnations over a white, jeweled Bible.

Miss Treva Dean, maid of honor, was attired in a ballerina-length princess-style gown of turquoise crystaline. Her headpiece was a band of pleated turquoise crystaline, and she carried a bouquet of turquoise carnations and pink gladioli.

Candlelighters were Miss Judy Price of Panhandle and Miss Sue Flakin of Perryton. Both wore orchid crystaline dresses identical to that of the maid of honor, and their corsages were of pink gladioli.

GRACE FRIEND

Dear Grace
Please help me.
May I wear black shoes with pink or white accessories or must my shoes match?

Does one wear gloves when in the receiving line?
Mrs. J. M.

Dear Mrs. J. M.
It depends a great deal on what type of dress you are wearing as to what shoes are correct. If your dress is a print or in a pastel, black patents would be good. Suede shoes in dark tones are correct with dark fabrics but not with light summer things.

Usually gloves are worn in the receiving line.

HOME WEDDING
Dear Mrs. Friend

Is it necessary to provide chairs for everyone at a home wedding? How should they be arranged? Should there be ushers?

We are planning to have a wedding in our home but I am not sure about seating and if you will help me I'll be most appreciative.
Mrs. K.

Dear Mrs. K.
It isn't necessary to provide chairs for all of the guests at a home wedding. They are expected to stand during the ceremony.

There is little for ushers to do except take their parts in the wedding party.

PENPALS
Dear Grace Friend

I think that a little while ago you printed some addresses that you could write to get the addresses of people in other countries who would like penpals in America. Would you please print them again or write and tell me what they are?

I'm enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. If you print this please just use my initials.
Thank you
Yours truly
C. T.

Dear C. T.
Write to the International Friendship League, 40 Mt. Vernon St., Boston, Mass., and tell them you would like to have three names for 50 cents the League will send you three names of the nationality, sex and age you prefer.

MATURE PARENT
By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE
About five months ago Mrs. X. was wheeled into a hospital delivery room to have a baby. It was born with the physical defects of mongolism.

Mrs. X. was given psychiatric treatment for shock. Now she's home with the baby. But the treatment seems to have merely diffused the shock into a pervasive sense of depression.

"Something has gone out of me," she writes. "Even the simplest decisions are too much for me. There is only grayness ahead as far as I can see."

Since the baby was born, Mrs. X. has how many people have called him a "mongoloid idiot?" How many have told you why you should keep him at home; why you should "put him away?" How many have said, "Face reality—the fact that this child is doomed to hopeless mental and physical deficiency?"

Of course you are indecisive. You don't plan on a handicapped child. Its arrival produced certain uncertainties in us. They are the perfect echo for inferring voices, giving us no peace, driving us deeper and deeper into confusion.

Let me tell you a story.
Some years ago, a mongoloid baby was born to two eager and expectant young people. Like yours, their natural uncertainties were increased by other people's opinion of their baby as a hopeless idiot.

But they were unusually strong young people—self-respecting ones who somehow knew that since our "reality" is as individual and different from other people's as we are, nobody else can tell us what it is.

So, instead of listening to the dictating voices, they sought what has real for them in what had happened to them. And they found it in what the father was saying, "making our whole focus the training of Johnny."

Johnny's first teacher said, "He'll die soon." His dentist said "His teeth will decay prematurely."

Today, Johnny is 12, a student in his school's special class. He's had one cavity in nine years.

If his parents had not claimed their individual reality from the kinds pressed on them by prejudiced relatives and medical opinion, the work of the Association for the Help of Retarded Children might never have begun. For Johnny's father is its executive director. In the very handicap that was to doom him and his wife to unrelenting guilt or hopeless slavery, he's found the inspiration for understanding guidance to other parents of children like his own.

Write to him in care of the Association for the Help of Retarded Children, 200 Fourth Avenue, New York City. His suggestions will be practical. More valuable, they will persuade you that you are not alone.

New Officers Of Council Of Clubs Installed During Presidents' Reception

New officers for the Council of Clubs were installed by Mrs. J. B. Veale, Jr. during the Council's annual presidents' reception honoring incoming presidents of all clubs in the council.

A western theme was used for the ceremony, with Mrs. Veale presenting each officer with a pink and blue hobby horse.

Installed were Mrs. N. G. Kadlango, president; Mrs. N. Dudley Steele, vice-president; Mrs. Gene Fathereq, secretary; Mrs. Bob Sypert, treasurer; Mrs. Jess Clay, parliamentarian; and Mrs. Tom Rose, reporter.

To Mrs. Kadlango, Mrs. Veale presented a hobby representing a combination of the Tennessee Walker and Pegasus. "to get around to make contacts, to guide the others and to keep them together," Mrs. Steele received a hobby representing "Francis, the talking horse," to help her "kick a lot of horse sense into the rest." A Clydesdale, or work horse, was given to Mrs. Fathereq, secretary; and Mrs. Sypert, treasurer, received a race horse "to race around to get in all the money."

As parliamentarian, Mrs. Clay received a cutting horse "to keep to the rules and cut from the herd those making a disturbance."

RECEPTION
In the receiving line for the reception were Mrs. Julian Key, out-going Council president; the incoming Council officers; and the incoming presidents of the clubs in the Council.

The serving table was covered with a green net cloth over green and was centered with May baskets filled with spring flowers. Refreshments of tea, sandwiches, punch, nuts and hills were served. Mrs. A. D. Hills, Beta Sigma Phi Woman of the Year, presided at the punch bowl.

Other decorations included a large Maypole with interlarded streamers.

RUTH MILLETT

"Too many women today are finished in their fifties," says an intelligent woman. She happens to be one who has managed to keep her own creative interests alive while her children were young and still has interests to give meaning to her life now that she is a grandmother.

"For all that they are taught about being good wives and good mothers," she continues, "the education of women for the years beyond 50 has been sadly neglected."

She is right, of course. And right in her contention that "busy work" dreamed up by women's clubs isn't enough to give the past-50 woman any sense of personal worth or accomplishment.

In time, we may—in fact, we must—do something to teach women how they can make the later years of their lives blossom and bear fruit.

But until our educational system starts preparing young women for the years ahead each woman is going to have to figure out her own course.

The important thing is that she must not wait until she is in her fifties to face the problem of making a good, later, life for herself.

The best way for a woman to make sure that she isn't finished in her fifties is to maintain her interests and develop her talents during the busy years of her life.

If she "gives up everything" for her family she is almost sure to feel lost and unneeded once her children grow up and leave home.

Cook Nook
By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food and Markets Editor
Mrs. Charles Ullman of Balboa Beach, Calif., is an expert fish cook. She and her husband love sailing and the whole family spends nearly every week end afloat off the southern California shore.

Often their tuna catch is so big over the fishing weekends that they take it to a local tuna cannery and exchange it for 7-ounce cans of the fish, which they store in the pantry or give to friends. Frequently Mrs. Ullman serves this tuna specialty at home.

Tuna Bake (4-6 servings)
One egg, 1/2 cup evaporated milk, 2 cups soft bread crumbs, two 7-ounce cans tuna, drained; 1 tablespoon parsley flakes, 2 tablespoons minced onion, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine, 1 tablespoon lemon juice.
Beat egg in bowl; add milk, bread crumbs, tuna, parsley, onion, salt, pepper, butter or margarine and lemon juice. Mix well. Turn into greased 1-quart casserole or loaf pan. Bake at 375 degrees F. for 45 minutes or until silver knife inserted in center comes out clean.

Creamy Caper Sauce (4-6 servings)
One can cream of celery soup undiluted, 1/2 cup light cream, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1/2 cup capers.
Place soup in saucepan. Stir in cream, lemon juice and capers. Heat thoroughly. Serve with Tuna Bake.

Linen Still Tops Hope Chest Linens, But Synthetics Increase In Popularity

By KAY SHERWOOD
NEA Staff Writer

A hope chest of plain and fancy household linens, lovingly selected and carefully tended, is a source of pride to today's bride even as it was to her grandmother. But the variety of its contents has changed considerably. Modern synthetics take a liberal share of space and bring with them tasteful designs and minimum demands on care.

Yesterday's painstakingly crocheted cloth may be replaced by today's nylon lace cloth which can be washed and drip-dried with no need for blocking or ironing.

Nylon sheets, plastic place mats and blankets that never shrink or felt are some of the other products that have jumped from test tube to hope chest.

Fine, traditional linens, however, show no signs of going out of style. Taking conscientious care of them will enhance their beauty and add to your pride in them.

For example, it's advisable to wash new linens before you add them to your hope chest. Washing removes the factory finish, any soil from handling, labels or lettering.

It softens linens and help to prevent yellowing if they're to be stored. Terry towels need the laundering to regain their fluffiness. The pile tends to mat and settle when they're stacked on store shelves.

An expert in laundering tells me that "real" linen cloths should be washed separately from cottons as they are apt to pick up lint. Lace and openwork cloths are best hand-washed, although some, if they're not to fragile, could be machine washed if encased in a mesh bag to protect against snags and "roping."

The best place to dry fine linens is in the sun. They should be folded over the line. Pinning to the line may cause them to dry out of shape.

Another word of caution from the experts: very hot, dry air is damaging to linens. If linen is machine-dried, the temperature setting should be as close to room temperature as possible.

Proper ironing of fine linens is at least as important as careful washing in preserving their beauty. If you're not sure how to proceed, ask the advice of the best house-

Elegant nylon lace tablecloth is one of the modern "linens" that will never see an iron. After sudsing it clean, the slightly damp cloth is spread over the table, surface of which is protected by a plastic cloth underneath. Lace is smoothed with palms so that cloth dries smooth and even.

BAUBY

Food contours affect Baby's appetite, in addition to food color. He is more likely to eat something tall and mountain-like than something flat. Gelatin dessert in a tall glass often appeals where a glop on a plate doesn't.

Poor menu for Baby: mushroom soup, white bread, milk and vanilla pudding. Its dietary lacks show up in the lack of color appeal. Generally speaking, a balanced meal will have color variety.

Hand foods are Baby favorites. He may take to eating everything, including soft-boiled eggs, with his hands, in fact. Don't fret about the manners, they are easier to teach later on. Be glad he has a good sound appetite and let him eat.

MATURE PARENT

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE
Writes Mrs. A. "Our youngest boy—a child of five—stammers.

His trouble developed after a sickness of mine when he and his sister stayed with our aunt. She's always favored the girl. I am sure she had some trouble with Eddie that caused his stammer. How can I find out what it was?"

I don't know. Neither do you have to know what caused Eddie's stammer, Mrs. A.

Contrary to what we've been told by parent educators, mere knowledge of the causes of children's problems is no solution to them.

All that false idea has done is encourage us to ignore our own responses to the problems and turn us into a nation of amateur child psychiatrists. Its promotion is particularly irresponsible, since these so-called educators know that any productive psychiatrist is always more concerned with his own response to the patient's behavior than with the causes.

They know that if his response is unjudged, loving and intelligent, the patient himself reveals his behavior's causes.

So I suggest that what Eddie needs from his mother is not pryings into the how, where and when he was made afraid of free speech—but a new, unfrightened, unprejudiced view of it, the view of love.

Instead of hating it, let her begin to respect it as a safety device Eddie discovered all by himself when he needed it. In his stammer, he found a compromise between silence and free speech that he turns to for protection when he's disturbed.

We wouldn't attack him with our critical anxiety for depending on the banister to descend stairs too high for his short legs, would we?

We have no more right to hound him to discard his stammer than we'd have to shove his hand from the banister. If we love Eddie with unprejudiced intelligence, we respect his childish solutions to fear instead of letting him develop shame of them because some thoughtless prejudice says they're clumsy and inconvenient.

If he feels our friendliness toward the stammer that has been his solution, he will gain new confidence in his ability to solve problems—and with it, develop the strength to discard his old safety device.

To help Eddie, we need more love, not psychological information.

Lesson In Language Of Flowers And Early Preparation Vital To Bride-Elect

By GAILE DUGAS
NEA Women's Editor
NEW YORK—(NEA)—The first thing that you as a bride-to-be should learn is that procrastination and wedding preparations go together like lemon pie and cat-sup.

Second thing to straighten out is who gets the bill for what. Third thing is to delegate as many tasks as possible to other people: aunts, cousins, friends, tiny tots.

One of the things about a wedding that confuses most people is this: who foots the bill for the floral decorations? This is not a clean-cut issue, since your side pays for some of the flowers and his side pays for the rest.

Your father traditionally gets the bill for: Your flowers and those for your attendants, flowers for the reception and your mother's corsage. Your groom pays for his mother's corsage, boutonnières for himself and his ushers.

But it's becoming customary for the groom to send his bride her wedding bouquet. And sometimes, in some towns, the groom pays for all of the wedding flowers.

Your florist will, of course, design bouquets and floral decorations for your wedding to suit both your personal taste and your budget.

The matter of price varies throughout the country so the first thing you should do is tell your florist just how much you can afford to spend.

Flowers which are in season are the least expensive, so if you've a low budget and a yearning for those little, pale green orchids, smother your yearning and get down to brass tacks.

Prices for an individual bridal bouquet usually start at $7.50 and move upward.

Best year-around bargains in wedding flowers are carnations and roses. Both come in a number of colors. Lilly of the valley costs more, but it is a traditional favorite. A bouquet costs from $25 to $50.

Cutting the cake is one of the big moments of the wedding. But beforehand, be sure it's understood who gets the bill for the flowers—including the bride's bouquet and the posies which surround the cake.

The use of color in flowers for the bridal bouquet is on the increase. This means you've a wider variety from which to choose.

The summer bride can plan on cornflowers or delphiniums, geraniums or other pastel blooms, often combined with white.

If you choose seasonal flowers, bouquets for a wedding with four attendants need not cost more than $100. Church and reception decorations are extra.

Some churches prohibit extensive floral decorations. In such instances, the florist is limited to one or two floral arrangements for the altar or chancel. If aisle markers or pew-end bouquets are used, they will cost from $7.50 to $25, again depending on the flowers used.

A punch of thyme on a meal tray, under the cloth, may give off just the appetizing odor that will make a convalescence easier. A few grains of lavender may do it, too.

Changing pictures on the wall that a sick child faces may cheer him. He may want to clip out magazine pictures to hang. A prism hung in a sunny window or a mobile ornament may make the sick room more interesting to a child.

Bridal Beauty Requires Advance Work Which Includes Proper Rest, Diet, Soap

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

As wedding plans and increasing festivities draw her closer and closer to her wedding day, a gal needs to keep a level head on her shoulders about beauty. Wedding-day beauty is the kind that no one-day, slap-dash effort can produce. Like a photographic model's, it needs to be through-and-through beauty, built with the solid material of lots of sleep, sound diet and lots of soap. No amount of cosmetics can rectify the damage that too much partying and not enough rest can do. And a gal really wants that clear, translucent glow of happiness and beauty on her wedding day.

LESSONS FROM A PRO—Golf pro Dick Sleichter is helping eight-year-old David Eisenhower select the proper club as the youngster took a golf lesson in Gettysburg, Pa. Young David and his sister, Barbara Anne, spent a few days on the farm of their grandfather, President Eisenhower, and the boy wasn't wasting any of his time.

CHANGE OF FACE—Swapping their ice skates for roller skates, some shapely professional skaters went over to a skating rink in New York's Central Park in their spare time. Framed in the legs of June Payne and Sharon Kelly are, left to right: Bea Flanagan, Jane Pearce, Peggy Wallace and Lorraine Litter, and they all know their way around on the ice.

SOCCER SAVE—Goalie Orlandi, of Rome's Lazio Soccer Club, hurtles through the air in spectacular fashion to make a twisting save during a game between Lazio and a visiting Brazilian team. Playing in the semi-deserted Rome Olympic Stadium, the Lazio team won, 4-2.

TRIGGER-HAPPY FAMILY—Rifle shooting is the hobby of the Dunstall family of Hove, England. Father, mother and son are all members of a rifle club and participate in annual shooting meets. Young David, right, is the club's youngest member and he learns plenty from mom and pop.

WHAT AN ARMFUL!—French strong man Charles Ricoulot, who's more accustomed to lifting dead weights, is hoisting something different in Cannes, France. Those three beauties on hand for the International Film Festival are, left to right: Genevieve Cluny, Gisele Galois, and Wanda Formanoska.

FLEXIBLE—There are no flat spots in this tubular glass fishing rod thanks to a new type of one-foot rod guide now on the market. The scientifically designed and tested guides are the result of three years of laboratory development for increased accuracy and distance.

RACING WITH THE BALL—White Sox shortstop Luis Aparicio isn't playing bounce-the-ball on the outfield grass in New York; he's reaching for a pop fly that fell safely for a hit as Larry Doby rushes up to assist. This took place in the 6th inning of the second game of the Yankee-Chicago double header.

HE'S A HIGH FLIER—An aerial salute in reverse was staged at Cypress Gardens, Fla., for world water ski champ Alfred Mendoza. The local aquamaids are skimming over the waves as Mendoza soars through the air above them before making a landing.

A WORKOUT—Middleweight champion Sugar Ray Robinson is shown at work on a heavy bag in a practice session at his training camp in Greenwood Lake, N. Y. The champ will meet Bobo Olson in a title bout in Los Angeles on May 18th.

HOW HE DOES IT—Australian runner Jim Bailey is demonstrating in Los Angeles how he works out to become the second fastest miler in history. The University of Oregon student will next run for his own school team.

BLOCKING BY BERRA—During the Yankee-Kansas City game in New York, Yanks' catcher Yogi Berra used his catching know-how to block at home plate. He's trying to prevent the A's Harry Simpson from scoring. Despite Berra's efforts, Simpson beat the play to tally as Hank Bauer's throw from right field was too late. Yanks won, 10-8.

Federal Government May Be In Corner Over Tidelands

By ROBERT F. COLL - WASHINGTON, May 19 - UP - The federal government may have maneuvered itself into a legal corner in its court battle with Louisiana over oil-rich tidelands.

The legal fight was touched off by two injunctions issued against federal leasing of the lands by Louisiana District Judge Mark C. Pickrel.

The U. S. Supreme Court has the over-all question of Louisiana's boundary before it, but no ruling is expected before next fall.

Totten Is Speaker For API Here

Bob Totten, district geologist with Sun Oil Company of Amarillo, presented a historical sketch of the development of the Anadarko Basin in this region Friday night in the Palm Room at the final spring meeting of the Panhandle chapter, API.

Totten pointed out that wildcatting has been very successful in the Anadarko area. Under normal conditions, he said, about one wildcat out of 10 is a producer, but the percentage north of Pampa has been between 20 and 25 percent.

A lot of development in the area is expected within the next three years, he said, because leases are expiring during that time.

In Ochiltree County alone, five important wildcats promise to open up new fields.

Totten illustrated his talk with slides on a projector.

Rainy Day Fun With Popcorn

Making popcorn jewelry and teepees keeps children quietly busy when confined by illness or rain. Popped corn, colored gundrops, and candy corn—all inexpensive—are strung with thread and beads for the jewelry.

When bad weather keeps the family poppous out of their Happy Hunting Grounds, or when the medicine man says they'd better stay in bed for awhile—they'll enjoy making popcorn "Indian jewelry" and a village of popcorn "teepees."

ZIV, the film syndicate outfit now shooting "The West Point rights to the Naval and Air Force Academies."
Steve Allen has hit paydirt again — he penned the lyrics to the new hit song, "Picnic." The McGuire sisters have a big record of the George Duning tune.

"Medic" could use a transfusion — it's losing both its sponsor...
Brod Crawford, star of "Highway Patrol," has dropped 15 pounds since he kicked off the series.
Sam Cowling of ABC radio's "Breakfast Club" sends along this definition of a "smart guy" — one who remembers his wife's birthdays, but forgets her age.
