And when you see the medallion "Body by Fisher" on an automobile it means much the same thing-quality all the way through, in things unseen as well as on the visible, gleaming surface.

The significance of this emblem cannot be tested on the showroom floor. Its meaning was not built up in a day but only after long years in which owners learned that "Body by Fisher" was a veritable symbol of solid, enduring satisfaction

Only one who has owned a Chevrolet for several years can fully know the deep sense of satisfaction this emblem pledges. It is the warranty of an inner soundness that your eye or your touch cannot test. And only Chevrolet in the low-price field is entitled to wear the small, proud plaque that proclaims "Body by Fisher."

Government Schools

There are a great many persons who are normally conservative. Their views on free enterprise, and the individual right to work could not be questioned. They support the individual's right to worship as he sees fit and to live according to his own individual desires, subject to the pangs of his own conscience and governed by his own

These same persons, however, seem frequently to have a blind spot respecting government education. They seem to feel that the government schools are fine and wonderful and in the American tradition. Occasionally they go so far as to try to sustain their viewpoints by insisting that all authorities on the subject agree with that point of view.

But here, our "Conservative" citizen gets away from fact into the realm of fancy. He confuses the names of promoters of education with being the same person who promoted GOVERNMENT education. He says that George Washington favored education. Why, so he did. But Washington did not advocate a vast bureaucracy of government controlled and inspired instruction.

He cites Jefferson. Yet Jefferson never envisaged anything like the monstrous cancer of government indoctrination we have in the nation today. The proprietor of Monticello wanted tax-supported schools for males only, and then for just three years. A student who showed promise during that time would have to make his own way beyond that minimum.

And he fails utterly to mention such savants as Herbert Spencer, Albert Jay Nock and others who early saw the fallacy of using aggressive force to educate while avoiding aggressive force to instill religious learn-

One of these defenders of government schools recently revealed albeit unwittingly, the unmistakable theme of the governmental educationist, and thereby put the onus right where it belongs. He said: "The education of the people is not only a means, but the best means, of attaining that which all allow to be a chief end of government.

Precisely.

Strong governments must depend upon a school system which they own and control. If this spokesman will take the time to examine the school system of the Soviet, he will see that the Communists have long since recognized that they cannot control the populace unless they have trained the populace. Government schools are the major instruments of socialistic propaganda in all

It is such an important matter that Marx even included government schools in his Communist Manifesto as an absolutely essential prerequisite to taking over a

This same spokesman finds much comfort in the fact that the Pilgrim fathers established the first government schools in this country. Had he studied the history of the Plymouth colony a little more carefully, he would also have discovered that Plymouth colony was founded as a commune; that it practiced communism and socialism; that this practice brought the colony close to ruin; and that only after these policies were abandoned did it survive and thrive.

We agree with our opponent when he says that every sneer at education is a blow struck against freedom. That is why we are FOR education. We believe in education. That is why we oppose so consistently the government schools, which in fact, do not educate so much as they indoctrinate. Theirs is the blow struck against both education and freedom. Their compulsive taxation, their watered-down instruction constitute a tremendous drain on real, sound education.

We certainly concur in the thought that people who are truly educated have less inclination toward crime than those who are uneducated. But the facts of our times show that as government schools exoand and gain power there is a startling rise in the incidence of crime, particularly among those of school age. If our children were being educated, and if, as we concur, education would help to prevent crime, then we would not have this

We can only conclude that our novernment schools are NOT helping to prevent crime. Therefore, they are not helping to educate.

Perhaps the answer to this puzzle is found in this person's own conclusions. He says that government schools are primarily concerned with teaching our youth how to earn a living. And, while he concedes that there ought to be a moral base for such teachings, he shies away from the responsibility. Morality isn't the sole responsibility of government schools he warns.

But he should point out that government schools cannot possibly teach morality, since their program of collecting taxes and using compulsion is fundamentally immoral and opposed to both the Golden Rule and the Ten Commandments.

We hope that as time passes, true conservatives will have the courage to face up to the contradictions thus revealed in their philosophy, respecting government schools.

A Big Lie Labor Bosses Use To Keep Their Soft Jobs

In the last issue I was quoting from the AFL-CIO's "Economic Review." In this April issue they were denying Secretary of Agriculture Benson's contention that labor unions were the primary cause of the farmers having to pay so much for what they bought. One of their statements in the Review, as quoted in the last issue.

"Increased industrial prices have not been warranted by higher wages. Recent worker gains could well have been absorbed out of corporate savings which higher labor productivity - and the consequent lowering of unit labor costs-increasingly brings about."

This is the crux of all labor unions' defense for getting an arbitrarily high non - competitive wage. This big lie has been repeated so often that many people believe it. In fact, they have been so successful in making the public believe this big lte that it is even included in a lot of our textbooks. And even the Supreme Court has ruled recently that the employer must show his profits, if he uses as a reason for not granting a raise that he cannot afford it. No employer who understands a free economy ever uses lack of profits as a reason for not granting an increase. He knows that if he is losing money he cannot expect his workers to work for less than other employers will pay them

Politicians and most newspapers have swallowed this labor union bosses' lie that profits in a free economy can be so high as to hurt the employees and customers. If they are too high due to low wages and high prices, the employer loses both his workers and his customers, and thus loses all his profits.

Profits in a free economy are simply the wages for efficiency just as high wages in a free economy are the rewards for el-

Labor bosses never explain that higher profits are due to better tools and efficient management and not because of labor union, but in spite of them. Nor do they tell how high profits should be, because no one knows. The higher the better for everyone in a free economy where the gain of one is the gain of all.

Now let's analyze that statement. that free market profits can be reduced to give a monopoly wage without reducing total wages, to see if there is a grain of truth in it. It is, in fact, contending that profits can be too high under a free economy.

Probably why a lot of people beis that they can be too high under a non-free enterprise economy where the government grants mo-When in the past centuries people believe in the divine right of kings and that the government could determine what each segment of the economy should get, then profits could be too high. But under a free economy where jobs are interchangeable, no worker can get too high a wage and no entrepreneur can get too high a profit The minute the worker tries to get loo high a wage under a free economy, some other worker gives a better service for the same money or the same service for less money. The same applies to the business man when he ries to make too big a profit under a free economy. He is inviting somebody to reduce his profits which they will, as free capital always goes where it believes the profits will be the largest. Thus, under free economy all workers, all producers get all they produce. And each and every man getting all he produces is justice. What those who do not understand this big lie, that profits can be too high in a free economy do not see is that all profits, , all wealth has to be distributed in order to benefit its owner. It has to be consumed by its owner for his enjoyment, or it has to be given away for the owner's enjoyment or it has to be reinvested for future enjoyment. And the more these profits are invested in tools, the more the owners of these tools have to bid against the owners of other tools to get workers to operate these tools. This increases the real wages of all workers. And again, the production from these tools have to be sold and the owners have to compete with the owners of all other products to get the consumers' dollars. Thus, this extra production reduces prices which increases the real wages of all consumers

Now let's follow the big lie continuously used by labor hosses, that profits can be diminished by labor unions getting a non-competitive price without harming other workers. Then there will be less profits to be invested in tools. Then the workers will have to take less pay because they can produce less with poorer tools, as result of this retarding of the increase in tools.

Or if this arbitrary monopoly wage is made temporarily possible by increased prices of the products produced by the monopoly wage, so as to have the same profits for investment in tools, then all workers who are consumers have their real wages lowered because the dollar they gets buys less, This is what the labor bosses do not want to admit. It would tend to kill their soft jobs.

Thus, in either case, the big labor union lie that profits can be arbitrarily limited in a semi-free economy without hurting the employees, is a fallacy.

No labor leader will answer the question as to how what each man produces, and, therefore, what each man should get, can be arrived at when jobs are not interchangeable, as is the basis of arriving at by all collective bargaining labor unions. Has any believer in collective bargaining unions an answer to that question? This contention of all labor busses that profits can be reduced in a free market without reducing wage levels or total wages, is a hig lie that has been told so often that people believe it Any questions on this most important subject?
