Movie Scoop Of The Year Is 'Flying Saucer' Film

By ALINE MOSBY
HOLLYWOOD — UP — The movie scoop of the year is not a new blonde, but a motion picture that claims to show actual film of so-called "flying saucers" taken from government files.

The motion picture, "Unidentified Flying Objects," is a documentary account of the flying saucer history from the time the first such object was sighted in 1947 and the nation went saucer-crazy. Producers Clarence Greene and Russell Rouse used eyewitness accounts of sightings and the Air Force investigation of same.

The movie was made in cooperation with three key men of the Air Force saucer investigation: Capt. Edward Ruppelt, former director of the investigation, called project bluebook; Albert Chop, public relations chief for the group, and Maj. Dewey Fournet, liaison officer between the Pentagon and Project Bluebook.

Through various connections Greene was able to obtain docu-

Long-Hair Goes Out In Symphony

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
WASHINGTON — UP — The National Symphony doesn't go in for the long-hair business much any more.

Fact is, the members of the orchestra have kicked up their heels so high they have fans among the you-play-and-we'll-do-the-swooning younger set.

Dr. Howard Mitchell, the conductor, has a lot of fans, and his fan mail comes in mountains. Or did. Most of the "teen-agers" wrote in to ask if he was married. He gave them an honest answer: "I have five kids."

Dr. Mitchell started out as a cellist—the head man on the cello row. He sawed away there for 15 years.

He hasn't forgotten the trick, either. If one of the boys in the cello section comes down with a sore digit, the maestro can still pick away his stick, run into the pit, and pick up a bow and start whacking away.

As Dr. Mitchell puts it: "There is nothing worse than a bandaged finger in an orchestra pit."

It seems fittin' and proper to mention one fellow in the cello row—John Martin, tall, slender and a "doll" in the eyes of the teeners.

A young lady wrote in to the symphony manager, Ralph Black, and asked: "I love him, I love him, is John Martin married? Your answer will allow me to decide whether to forget him completely — or to go on dreaming."

John is.

"I notified the Pentagon what I was doing. I also notified my congressman, Joe Holt. I divorced myself from anybody who might be a crackpot. We stuck to the facts."

IN THE RACE—Hoping President Eisenhower and Adlai Stevenson will be his opponents, Henry B. Krajewski, left, files petitions at Trenton, N.J., as 1956 presidential candidate of the "American Third Party." Krajewski, 43, is a former pig farmer now operating a tavern in Secaucus, N.Y. With him are Mrs. Anne Marie Yezzo, vice presidential running mate, center, and Robert Falcey, clerk in the office of New Jersey's secretary of state.

Backstairs Scenes At White House

By MERRIMAN SMITH
WASHINGTON — UP — Backstairs at the White House:

Every presidential campaign year produces curious complications which frequently escape the public until they burst upon the electorate as drum-beating news stories.

For example, because of President Eisenhower's illness last fall, his doctors' plan to issue another extensive report on his health before the campaign gets under way in earnest.

A similar report was issued on Mr. Eisenhower at the start of the 1952 campaign, long before anyone dreamed of his having a heart condition.

Which brings up this question: Will the Democratic nominee undergo a similar examination and make it public?

Think of the complications that might develop if the Democratic nominee turned out to have a higher blood pressure than Mr. Eisenhower's.

The health issue could then become a snarl of confusion and a battle of medical statements. For a time at least it could take precedence over discussions of such issues as farm, taxes and foreign policy.

Another factor in the President's effort to win re-election is how far he should go in projecting himself as a personality and still preserve some form of private life.

It is difficult to get across one's personality to the voters merely by making speeches and waving to crowds from a passing automobile. Yet the President is determined to do as little barnstorming as possible.

Mr. Eisenhower, however, may do a good bit more campaigning than originally envisioned when he announced in February that he was available for another term.

Mr. Eisenhower likes his privacy and intends to retain as much of it as he possibly can. For the present, his campaign aides are more than willing to go along, because they believe their man is just about as well known now as it is possible to make him.

Mr. Eisenhower attracted an unusual crowd when he left Augusta, Ga., last Sunday. He has made so many trips to Augusta since his election, that the people frequently take him in stride much as the people of Washington. Thus they usually turn out for him only in small numbers.

But this most recent occasion was different. It was a warm sunny afternoon and there were almost solid crowds along the eight-mile route from the Augusta National Golf Club.

In his sermon last night, Dr. Ball used the sixth chapter of Isaiah as a basis for his sermon during which he made the statement that there are three things that God doesn't know. He doesn't know a sin. He doesn't know a sinner. He doesn't know a better time than now to accept his salvation. Dr. Douglas Carver, pastor of the church, has announced three services each day: 7 a.m., 10 a.m. and 8 p.m. Tonight has been designated as guest night when 70 members are urged to bring a guest to the revival services.

SHOWERS

(Continued from Page One) five or six feet, sending water into some homes and business houses in the city when the drainage system became overtaxed. One unofficial station reported 10 inches. The official weather station reported 6.25 inches from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. A rainfall of 4.13 inches was reported at Fentress, 40 miles south of Austin. Port Isabel, at the southern tip of the state, had a total of 7.10 inches during the day. Five inches fell up to 5 p.m. A total of 2.10 inches fell in another deluge between 6:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Light flooding occurred in streets and gutters. A general rain fell throughout the Rio Grande Valley, and farmers hoped Tuesday it would aid the critical water supply in Falcon Reservoir. Thundershowers Develop Thundershowers developed along the leading edge of the cold front as it pushed into North Texas. A warning of wind in excess of 30 miles an hour was issued at Lake Texoma. "It's the worst flooding I've seen in Corpus Christi and I've been with the public works department six years," Sam Davidson, an engineer in the public works department said. "The unaccustomed rainfall flooded many stores in downtown Corpus Christi. Water rose to the door handles of automobiles. One man reported he could feel his flooded automobile rocking with the flood. A low pressure wave, in the Panhandle, was the cause of it all. Forecaster John Geyer of the Dallas weather bureau said it "looks like the best chance this spring for the whole state to get rain." The wave pulled moisture from the Gulf over the state. The prospects for rain looked good for every place except the El Paso and Big Bend areas. Hill Hills Taft Hill, along with heavy rain, hit Taft, Tex., 35 miles north of Corpus Christi. One street caved in at Corpus Christi. A signal light and a street light fell at Morgan Street and Ocean Drive. A storm sewer caved in on Shelly St. in a residential area. Water poured into houses in the Westchester and Donna districts. Police warned motorists not to drive at the height of the flood. At one point, 25 automobiles were stalled in the length of a block south of the downtown section. By Monday night, the rain area extended along the whole Texas coast as far inland as College Station, and Austin. Early Tuesday, the weather was warm and humid south of the front. North of it, temperatures got as low as the middle 30s in the Panhandle. The cool air will continue slowly southward to about a Beaumont-Austin line by Tuesday night and then move on eastward, the weather bureau said. Occasional showers can be expected over the state through Wednesday, the bureau said. Rainfall amounts in Texas for 24 hours ending at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday: Taft, 8.75 inches. Corpus Christi, 8.25 inches. Ingleside, 5 inches. Brownsville, 3.17 inches. Port Arthur, 2.12 inches. Bannette, 1.96 inches. Palacios, 1.30 inches. Beeville, .97 inch. Mathis, .4 inch. Victoria, .91 inch. Galveston, 1.07 inch. San Diego, .86 inch. Jourdanton, .70 inch. San Antonio, .47 inch. Austin, .45 inch. Houston, .39 inch.

Callahan stated, "any man between the age of 17 and 18 stands a 99 per cent chance of seeing military service under the present laws so I urge them to come by and see what the Reserve units of the Army can offer them." The local unit is composed of four officers and 24 enlisted men at the present time. As soon as the total strength of the unit reaches 50 men a new armory will be constructed. A small section of the battalion will be formed at McLean in the near future. The section will be under the direction of Sgt. George Terry, and will be mainly a communications unit. The meeting night of the McLean section will be the same as the local unit, at 7:30 p.m. each Monday. Sgt. Terry urges all those interested in the McLean area to contact him.

THE SHAPE OF THINGS TO COME... an exciting new silhouette, "The Draped Sheath," emerges as the newest figure-flatterer on the summer scene. Rose Marie Reid creates an entirely new shape: A long fitted bodice smoothed faultlessly by long line stays; a high moulded bosom, gently flaring to width at the sides to give body balance; and most significant of all, taut horizontal draping across the lower torso, gently camouflaging and proportioning. Four exquisite swimsuits created in the draped sheath silhouette are "Rhapsody," "Kymote," "Limelight," and "Enchantress."

Important silhouettes of the season... the sheath; the tulle shorts suit, a boy's short with cuffs which lie gently against the thigh; the long-leg shorts, cut with a trim close body line; the hour-glass, Rose Marie Reid's fabulous shape-maker; and the newly important two-piece suit. Each silhouette in the collection has this in common — each is designed to give the utmost in figure flattery, first through the unchanging use of inner construction which moulds the figure like a fine foundation garment; secondly, through the clever design that puts fashion on the outside but brings the figure the look of perfect balance.

Come summer, thoughts lightly turn to those of pretty cottons. But what of the figures which need more than a mere bit of shirring for control? Rose Marie Reid solves the problem cleverly... gives you the cotton look with the latex fit. Her "Farrish Patterns", a collection of ribbon-crisp checks, satin stripes, pastel plaids and floral ticking, have a quaint turn-of-the-century look. Actually they couldn't be more modern. The fabrics are Celanese. Its locked-in colors have top resistance to fading. There is a variety of silhouettes from which to choose, each provocatively named to call up memories of girls in their summer dresses... "Hayrides," "Gingham Doll," "Miss Calico," "Pinafore," "Spring Fever," "Candy Stix," and "Sun-bonnet."

For those of you who wear junior sizes, Rose Marie Reid presents the junior collection. You'll find all

Expectant Mother Needs Pretty Clothes, Should Plan Ahead On Fashion Budget

By GALE DUGAS
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — The expectant mothers in this country spend an impressive amount on maternity clothes each year — over 200 million dollars worth. Just like all other women, expectant mothers are heard frequently to complain that they have nothing to wear. Only too often, they're quite right.

The expectant mother (particularly the girl who's having her first baby) usually decides she'll be practical about maternity clothes. She'll spend as little money as possible because she'll wear these clothes only a few months. Then she'll throw them out.

But in actuality, it doesn't work out that way. She finds herself wearing a few cheap clothes for a total of about 180 days, or two seasons. She finds herself feeling lumpy and unattractive.

She wishes she had put her money into some good things that would take the necessary washing and cleaning. She wishes she'd bought enough clothes so that she isn't frequently stranded, literally with nothing to wear, while clothes are at the cleaners or in the laundry.

She buys cheap shoes on the theory she won't want to wear flat-heeled shoes forever. Then she finds they don't hold up under hard wear. She has to replace them with expensive shoes.

She learns a lot about maternity clothes but she learns it the hard, expensive way. It's the uncomfortable way, too.

Solution: plan your maternity clothing budget ahead. Decide what accessories (that you now own) will be useful to you during your pregnancy. Then put your money into the very best clothes you can afford. Remember that they take additional strain through added weight.

Be sure to include at least one really pretty dress. We show two such here. Hand-screened floral-printed organza top (left) with satin velvet trim is worn with silk-faced peau de soie skirt. Floral-printed cotton (right) is trimmed with washable nylon velvet. Both styles are by Lisa Kay.

Program On High School Requirements Presented To Junior High School PTA

Jack Edmondson, high school principal, and Miss Evelyn Milam, high school counselor, presented a program on credit requirements at the recent meeting of the Junior High School Parent-Teacher Association.

Edmondson told of the history of the schools, explaining the three-fold development from the Latin Grammar School in the Boston area, 1635 to 1750, to the period of the Academy which grew in the Philadelphia area, to the English Classical, which developed into the high school or secondary school of today.

"In the last 60 years, we have seen our program progress to what it is today with industry and economy being the greatest influences," he stated.

Edmondson urged a complete program planning for students entering high school. He added that in deciding a curriculum it should be considered that each person is an individual. An important factor in deciding a curriculum is to look four years in the future and decide what one wants to be before deciding upon elective subjects and the kind of diploma desired, he pointed out. The sooner a student decides which college he wishes to attend the better, he explained.

A total of 71 different courses are offered in high school, he pointed out, adding that Pampa High School is in good standing with the Texas Accrediting Agency and affiliated with the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

A tentative schedule is submitted by the students and from this the school schedule is compiled, Edmondson told the group. Split lunch periods also help the student work in the subjects he wants and periods last about 55 minutes, he stated. He stressed regular attendance, requesting the cooperation of parents. He also explained the workings and purpose of the student council.

Miss Milam explained the adjustment made by the student as he enters high school, after which comes planning for college or for business and work immediately after graduation.

She told the group of the two types of diplomas — pre-college for those planning to enter college, and vocational for those who plan to enter the business world.

Miss Milam explained the counseling program at high school, with educational, vocational and personal counseling offered. Material on college requirements is available, she pointed out, adding that a student is encouraged to figure his expenses in deciding upon a college. Occupational listings are also available, with requirements, apprenticeships and other information included.

Miss Milam invited parents to visit the school to talk with teachers. She explained a brochure on requirements and credits will be sent to all students and parents of the eighth and ninth grades.

BUSINESS SESSION

Mrs. Jack P. Foster, president, led the business session. She introduced Rev. James E. Harrell of Harrah Methodist Church who gave the devotional. Mrs. Fred Vanderburg gave the board meeting report, and Mrs. A. W. Skewes gave a treasurer's report. Mrs. Elmer Darnell, city council representative, told of the recent visit of Mrs. Frank Ogle of Borger, district president.

Appointed as auditors for the term were Mrs. A. W. Skewes, McHenry Lane and Jack Nichols. A report of the district conference, held recently in Childress, was given by Mrs. Silar Hopkins. Mrs. Gene Fatheree, program chairman, introduced Miss Eloise Lane and her eighth grade choir which sang several selections. They were accompanied by Miss Sus Foster and Miss Annette Flynn.

Refreshments of cake and ice cream were served. Entertainment consisted of playing games. Guests were Walter Roy Todd, Jimmy and Ted Reeves, Sondra Laddler, Marilyn, Rickie and Mike Young.

BABY

By BETSY WADE
NEA Staff Writer

Guarding a wooden kitchen cabinet against invasion by a curious Baby may be important, if there are nonedible or breakables inside. Do it with a hinged hasp and a snap catch. Metal cabinets need a light chain and a snap catch.

It isn't wise to offer Baby his choice from a plate of assorted cookies. He shouldn't eat ones with nuts or extra-rich ones. Graham crackers or oatmeal cookies suit him as well and are safer for him.

Games were played and refreshments of Cokes, candy and cakes were served.

Dali Announces Fashion Design Debut And Creates 'Unorthodox' Silhouette

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK — UP — That Paris designer, who once decreed a flat bustline, was an ultra-conservative compared to fashion's newest rear-ranger.

Salvador Dali the surrealist painter, said a girl should have a bustline fore and aft. Dali sketches this unorthodox picture of the feminine silhouette in announcing that he has turned to designing fashion fabrics.

The Dali fabrics already are in production; the clothes he would shape them into still are the surrealist's dream and may be several seasons off.

But the Spanish-born artist with the lyre-shaped moustache talked enthusiastically of the dream, in a blend of Spanish, French and English.

"I would turn every woman into an angel... for a couple of seasons anyway," said Dali. She would be angelic right down to springs in her shoes, "to give her the feeling of soaring instead of walking."

She would have a "winged look, with bustline at the back also," said Dali. "Where the shoulder blades are now... a natural location." Dali explained that at present, the feminine form was a little unbalanced and this change would be a diplomatic compromise.

We talked with Dali just before he left New York for several months in Europe. Dali's actual foray into fashion consists of several fabrics for Martha Mills, New York. These will be seen in summertime cottons and also will be made later into silks and synthetics.

The designs included what Dali called "the double image of a horse" — two animals facing each other but looking the other way too; and a striking print of white rhinoceros horns on a dark background. Dali said the white horn ("my latest obsession") symbolized chastity.

Abbe Lane Has Undercover
Report On Italian Warfare

By ALINE MOSBY
HOLLYWOOD — UP — Abbe Lane came home from Rome with an undercover report on Italian warfare: Gina Lollobrigida and Sophia Loren not only feud with each other but are so jealous of Abbe they snub her.
Voluptuous Abbe compiled a dossier on this sizzling international plot while she was making five movies in Rome.
When Hollywood producers didn't do right by the Latin from Manhattan (actually Brooklyn) Abbe accepted overseas offers and, according to her press clippings, has become Italy's third big glamour star.
Abbe reported sadly today that this did not set well with Gina and Sophia.
Curis On Sofa
"There were only these two big glamour stars in Italy and when I arrived—well!" she said as she curled up on a sofa in her Brentwood home with her husband, Xavier Cugat.
"I wanted to be friendly with the girls. I'm not one for petty jealousies. But they avoid me. I can't go close to them. Every time we meet they stick their noses in the air."

The highly-publicized feud between Gina and Sophia is for real, Abbe went on.
"They hate each other," the red-haired singer said with a shrug, which was dangerous as she was wearing a black cardigan sweater opened to the waist, plus black-and-white checked slacks, very tight.
Battles of the Chest
"Gina and Sophia are like Pola Negri and Gloria Swanson of the old days in Hollywood. They have this terrible battle of the chest. Some of the dressmakers say one is padded, others say the other wears pads. It's ridiculous. They think if you don't stand out like a sheaf, you're nothing!"
Abbe, of course, holds herself aloof from such competition.
"That's so unimportant," she shifted. "A man looks at the whole figure. I sing and dance in my films in Italy. I just don't do that earthy business."

Harmon Nichols' Washington Report

WASHINGTON — UP — What's new in Washington:
The women's press corps pitched a hoe-down for visiting editors and some political wheels made speeches.
Helen Hill Miller, the lady prexy, announced that each speaker would be limited to eight minutes and that she had a watch.
James Finnegan, campaign manager for Democratic hopeful Adlai Stevenson, said he would talk for only seven minutes, 58 seconds.
At the count of eight minutes, Helen stepped behind Finnegan; said not a word. Soon there were chuckles in the assemblage. Finnegan caught on and sat down in mid-sentence.

The Daughters of the American Revolution own about $10 million worth of property in the District of Columbia alone. But they haven't lost sight of the penny.
They sent out a plea for members around the country to mail in old sheets and pillow cases. Dust rags are needed.

This department apparently goofed a little last week in reporting that the nation's capital generally is the only place where a man can belly up to the bar on election day.
A flood of mail from the state of Wyoming did us in. The state Tribune, in Cheyenne among others, informs us that since repeal election day is like any other day in Wyoming.

Charles Corddry, our reporter who covered the demonstration flight of the F-104, the fastest fighter plane in the world, overheard this one at Palmdale, Calif.:
"Pilot to ground: 'I'm over the ocean at the controls of a combat plane with a potential of 1,400 mile an hour.'
Man on the ground: "Which ocean?"

The American Automobile Association reports that Robert Kretschmar of its Boston office got a call not long ago for "service on an ostrich."
Seems a motorist left his car unlocked and the door open. An ostrich, apparently a household pet in the neighborhood, sneaked in, somehow got the keys out of the ignition switch, and swallowed them.

Rather than molest the bird, the AAA tried a lot of keys until it found one that fit.
The Army is going for short-pants this summer — if the men agree. The order is out that all men who want to wear short sleeves, shorts and knee length socks, starting July 1. This sort of thing could run into trouble for the men who visit some fancy hotels and restaurants around the world where even a tie is required.

The Army Times has printed a cartoon showing a man about to jump out a window. A tough sergeant shouted at the lad:

"For heavens sake, don't! Your replacement hasn't arrived yet."
The United Mine Workers Journal reports:
"The village sage, speaking of the juvenile delinquency problem, said: 'It 'pears to me that a juvenile delinquent gets on the wrong side of the track because of a misplaced switch.'"

Groom Play Is Contest Winner

GROOM — (Special) — A one-act play entry from Groom High School took top honors at Canyon last Thursday night at the district conference "B" play contest at the Branding Iron Theatre on West Texas State College's campus.
They presented "The Last Page" and placed two on the all-star cast. Bidean Craig and Doug Whatley. Dan Witt, the third member of the Groom cast, received honorable mention.

The play was directed by Mrs. Robert Newton, a teacher in the Groom Schools.
Second place went to Nazareth High School, which presented "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals." Other student-actors named to the all-star cast included Linda Hindman of Nazareth, Phyllis Rockway of Friona, Ted Conrad of Nazareth, and Jimmy Whitfield of Silverton. J. H. Flathers, Amarillo High School speech teacher, directed the contest, which was entered by Groom, Silverton, Friona, and Nazareth High Schools.

Easy Carpet Cleaning

Discovery Hailed
What is said to be the easiest and "cleansingest" home rug cleaner, known as Blue Lustre, is now available after years of research.
Blue Lustre leaves no foreign residue to cause rapid resoiling. The pile is left open and fluffy as the colors spring out like magic. So easy to apply with a long handle brush (like playing shuffleboard) and is safe for all types of carpets.
Use Blue Lustre to clean the entire carpet or remove spots and traffic lanes. It's economical to use as 1/2 gallon of concentrate cleans three x 12 rugs.

The Situation In Cyprus Is Getting Angrier Each Day

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Foreign Analyst
The situation in Cyprus is getting angrier day by day.
Field Marshal Sir John Harding, British governor and commander in chief of the island, is cracking down hard on extremists.
He has succeeded, by means of a tight coastal patrol, in cutting down the supply of arms to the extremists to a trickle.

But the extremists, in open rebellion against British rule, continue their attacks. They are using home made bombs and, lacking submachine guns, are utilizing shot guns.
For the moment, the extremists are concentrating largely on attacks against their fellow-islanders: Cypriot Greeks whom they accuse of cooperating with the British authorities. They are shooting down men in their homes, in movie theaters, in churches.

Some of these men, undoubtedly, are suspected by the extremists of being among the masked men — informers — who accompany British troops and police in raids on rebel hideouts.
But some of the attacks are indiscriminate. At least two children, both Greek Cypriots, have been killed recently by crude bombs thrown at British military vehicles. In neither instance were British personnel hit. Other children have been wounded and Cypriot men bystanders have been killed or wounded.
Harding is responding to each rebel attack by imposing strict curfews, lasting up to one week, on big cities, villages and entire rural areas.

The Turkish islanders, who number 100,000 of the 500,000 population, are getting increasingly angry over the turmoil. The threat of new riots between Greeks and Turks has arisen.
Harding, fearing an outbreak, forbade the celebration the Turks had set for Monday, which is Turkish republic day, 14th anniversary of the overthrow of the sultans.

Following the presidential veto of the farm bill, prices fluttered uncertainly as the market ran into a new set of uncertainties growing out of the government's program for sale of the raw cotton surplus in world markets at competitive prices.
Some disappointment also was expressed at the parity support rate of 82 1/2 per cent, set for the 1956 crop on middling 7-8 inch cotton. This would figure out to around 32 1/4 cents a pound for middling one-inch cotton. Some quarters recently thought the figure would be nearer the 33 cent mark.
But other quarters pointed out the rate for one-inch cotton was just a little more than 2 1/4 cents a pound under the rate for the current crop for the same grade, and compared with a three-cent drop originally indicated, during debate on the farm bill, as desirable by Secretary Benson.
Moreover, the Department of Agriculture figured that if the quality of the crop equals the average of last year, the support price will average 86.4 per cent of parity.

S.ILES OF VICTORY—Yale's Rex Aubrey, left, and Robin Moore of Stanford were happy about the results of their efforts in the NCAA 50-yard race held at Yale University's pool in New Haven, Conn. They tied when the time for each was recorded at 22.1 seconds, the same as the record made in 1943.

COMING ALONG—Lou Lindsay, who's now in his second year as volunteer coach of Stanford's crewmen, is shown standing in the boat at right as he instructs the team near San Francisco. This sport was somewhat neglected financially by the school until Stanford University voted an allowance of $3,000 as a result of last year's surprise performances.

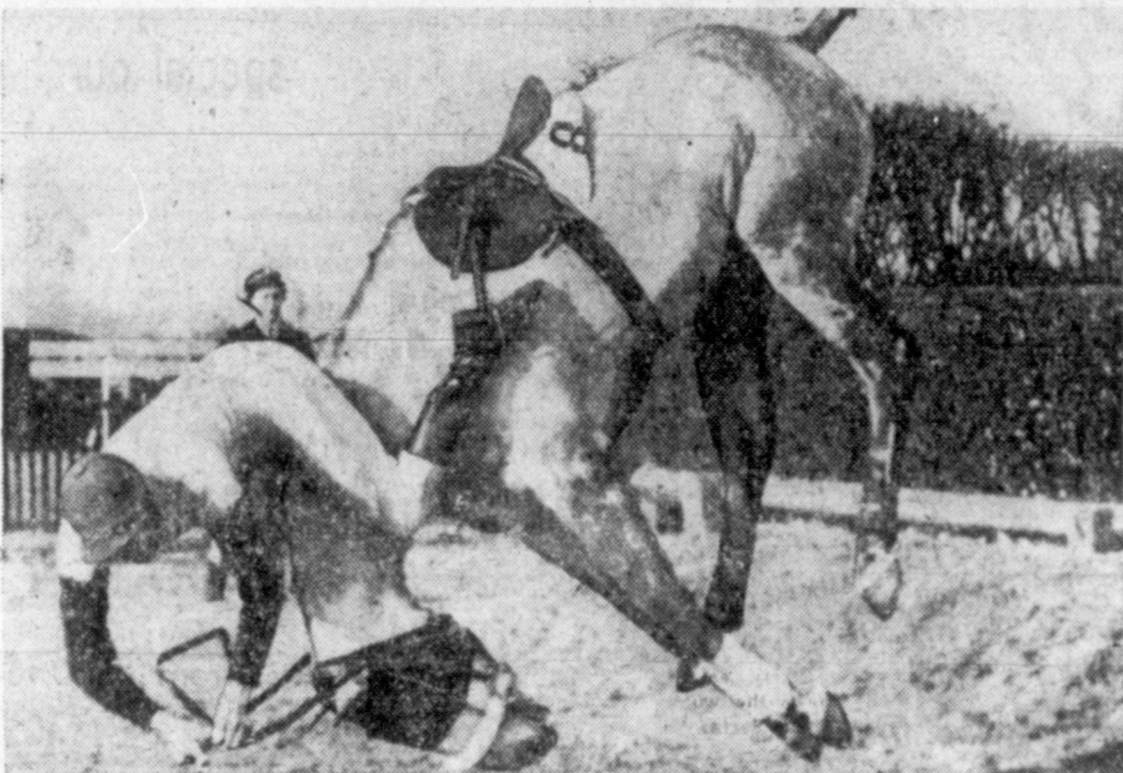

BENDING LOW—Brooklyn featherweight Carmelo Costa, in dark trunks, crouched down from the onslaught of the invader from Algeria, Cherif Hamia, in their 10-round main event contest at Madison Square Garden. The 126-pound Hamia, making his first American start, won an upset split decision over the third-ranked Costa. Hamia's win in this bout made him a contender for Sandy Saddler's crown.

PICTURE NEWS

AROUND THE SPORTS WORLD

MAJOR UPSET—Major R. C. P. Murray and Easter Breeze are bowing out of competition with a flourish during the Grand Military Gold Cup Steeplechase at Sandown Park, England. The upsetting situation occurred at the last fence in the big race.

SEA NYMPH—Dancer Elaine Deming makes a mighty pretty picture as she sails toward the skin-diving area in the Bay of Gonaves, Haiti. The clear waters of this popular vacation spot were the lure that had taken Elaine on a visit to the tropical paradise.

UP FOR THE PLAY—Olympic hopeful Jim Paxson (15) of Dayton, a starter for the East, and West's Carl Cain (20) of Iowa are soaring into the air under the hoop at the East-West College All-Star basketball game in New York. East's Bill Uhl, of Dayton, and West's Bill Russell, of San Francisco, are also standing by.

PRACTICING UP—When the Tournament of Champions golf tourney takes place in Las Vegas, Nev., starlet Leigh Snowden will be on hand to reign as its queen. She's getting a few tips from Eric Monti, who competed in the event last year.

RINGING THE BELL—A Parisian rings the bell while fishing along the Seine River in the French capital. His catch is the traditional decorative symbol with which the French welcome the season. The good weather is especially welcome after the worst winter in years.

TAKING IT BIG—Kenneth Gray, 19, is certainly a man five-foot-tall Donna Kjenast, also 19, can look up to when he's on those still skates in Oconomowoc, Wis. Of course, Donna can look up at Gray when he's not on the 13-inch-high skates, too, but when he performs difficult stunts on them, it's the natural thing to do.

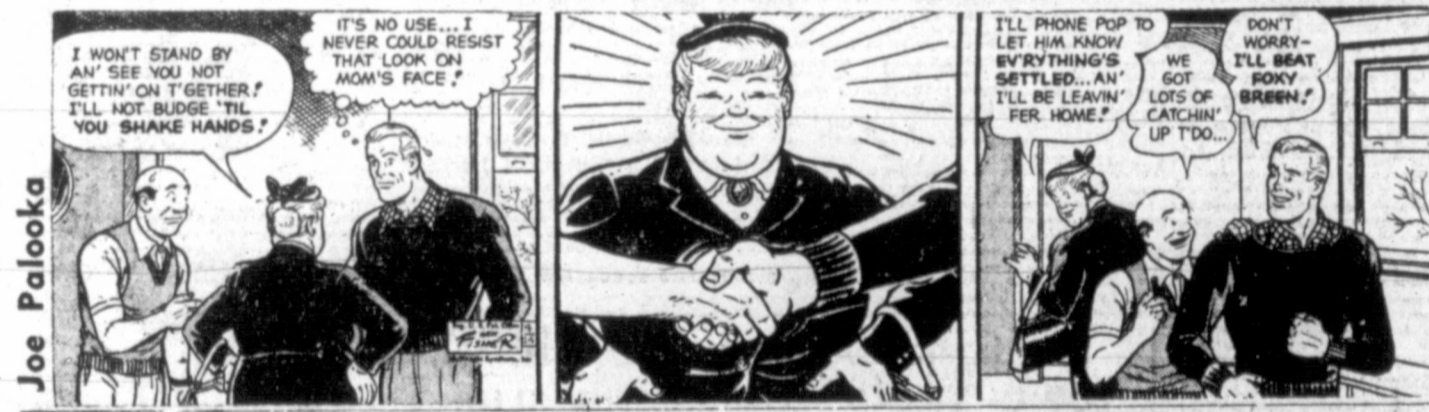

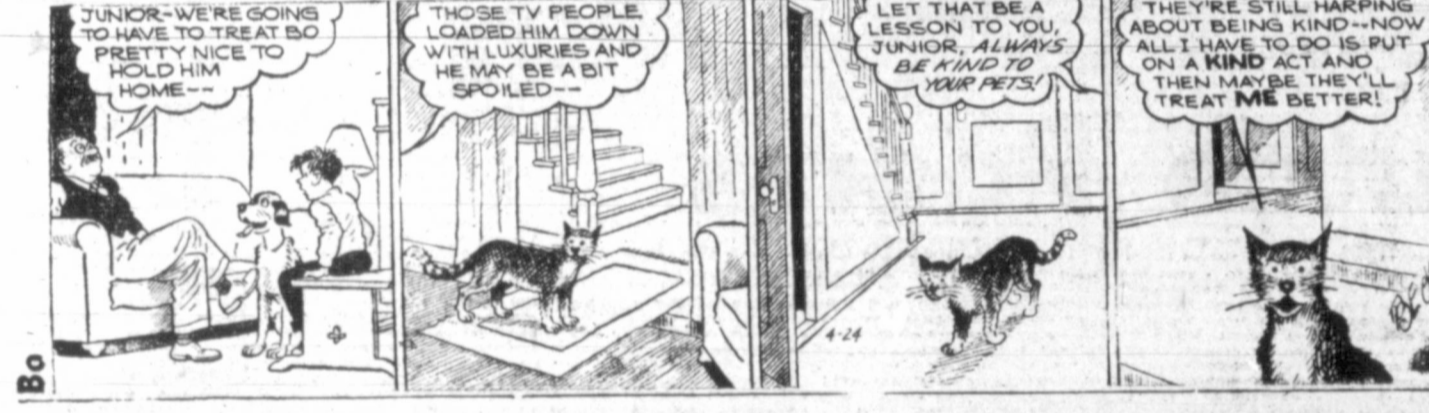

CLOSE ATTENTION—Even while engaged in the routine task of taping a bat in Phoenix, Ariz., Giant slugger Willie Mays has a hero-worshipper audience in nine-year-old Terry Klindt, of Lusk, Wyo. Willie is undergoing spring training with his team.

FULL CYCLE—Veteran cycling star Fausto Coppi is lost in thought as he rests on a milestone during a practice spin at Novi Ligure. Back at the grind after a recent illness, Coppi may pass up this year's gruelling Tour de France and similar events in which he excelled.

Old Hollywood Landmark To Be Torn Down Next Month

By ALINE MOSBY
HOLLYWOOD — UP — After 53 years of high living and then quiet old age, Hollywood's famous landmark—the Hollywood hotel—has been condemned to oblivion.

Since 1949 the new owners have been threatening to tear down the faded, crumbling hotel on the corner of Hollywood Blvd. and High Land Ave. Next month they'll at last get around to it and put up an office building and a new hotel.

It dropped in for a last look at the landmark and found Manager Leslie Jeffries waving tourists around the lobby.

"Hundreds come here every day for a last look since the razing was announced," he said.

"We knew the end was coming." "But," he sighed, "it was quite a blow."

The Hollywood hotel is the symbol of early Hollywood. Then stars were truly flamboyant, there was no television and Southern California was young and smogless.

The hotel opened May 3, 1903.

Hollywood then was country. Barley fields and orange groves surrounded the hotel and cows wandered down the dusty road out in front. The hostelry was an hour's ride from Los Angeles.

In 1912 wild men of the movies replaced the wild oranges and Hollywood became a bustling place. Rudolph Valentino, Gloria Swanson, Pola Negri, Charlie Murray and Mary Pickford were among stars who thronged to the hotel.

On the old-fashioned dining room ceiling still can be seen a few painted stars embellished with their names. The celebrities danced under those stars every night to "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and "Kiss Me Again."

In the lobby the piano on which one resident, Carrie Jacobs Bond, wrote "The End of a Perfect Day."

L. B. Mayer and Irving Thalberg, MGM executives, shared a room at the Spanish-style hotel. William Farnum arrived with a retinue of 17 people and had the walls of three rooms torn out to make a suite. Greta Garbo registered incognito.

Life was gay in Hollywood then. Once the manager had to nail the first floor windows shut to train merry guests to enter in the front door.

There was a movie and radio show called "The Hollywood Hotel." But when plushier hotels were built in other parts of the city, the Hollywood hotel became an inexpensive home for tourists and elderly film workers. Actor Grant Mitchell is one of 80 permanent residents now searching for another place to live.

Today the old hotel sits out its last days almost unnoticed while streetcars clang by. Some old timers turned out Thursday for a farewell party in the lobby.

Valentino's old bedroom is empty and dark. Tourists and old ladies rock on the long front porch. One of them said, "I don't want to die and go to heaven. I just want to stay in the Hollywood hotel."

Six Die in Fire
WASHINGTON, April 21 — UP — Six young children were burned fatally and three others critically injured Friday when a fire swept through a row house here while the children were alone.
