

Social Security Starting On Supplemental Income

The Pampa social security office is now taking applications for supplemental security income payments, a federal program scheduled to start in 1974 that will establish an income floor for people in financial need who are 65 or over, or blind or disabled, according to Howard L. Weatherly, social security branch manager.

But people already getting state old age assistance, or state aid because they are blind or disabled, don't have to apply, he said. They'll be getting more information later this year about how the program will help them.

The first monthly payments under the federal program will be made in January, 1974. Until then, public assistance will continue to make payments in the usual way.

People not getting public assistance now who think they may be eligible for the new federal payments should call or write social security to find out if they should apply.

Federal supplemental security income payments will be made by the Social Security Administration, but the program will be financed by federal general revenues — not by social security contributions from workers and employers. It's not the same as social security.

The aim of the new program is to provide supplemental payments in cases of need so that people 65 or over, or blind, or disabled will have a basic cash income or at least $130 a month for one person and $195 for a couple.

This doesn't mean that every eligible person or couple will be getting that much from the federal government every month. The amount of the federal payment any person gets will depend on how much other income he has.

Eligibility for federal payments will depend not only on the amount of income people have but on the value of their assets.

If single — or married but not living with a husband or wife — one can own things worth up to $1,500 and still get federal payments. A couple can own things worth up to $2,250 and get payments. Not everything one owns has to be counted toward total assets, however.

A home of reasonable value will not be counted as an asset. Personal effects and household goods won't count in most cases. Insurance policies or a car may not affect eligibility either, but it will depend on their value, Weatherly noted.

Certain income also will be disregarded in deciding on an application for supplemental security income. The first $20 a month of income generally won't affect the federal payment at all.

In addition, people who are working part time should know that the first $65 a month of earnings won't be included in counting their income and only half of the rest of their additional earnings will be counted, he added.

Apart from earnings, other income above the first $20 a month generally will reduce the federal payment. This includes social security checks, veterans payments, workmen's compensation, pensions, annuities, and gifts.

And if one lives in someone else's household, the basic federal payment will be reduced by one-third before other income that may affect a payment is deducted.

People who need more information to decide whether they might be eligible for the federal payments should call social security at 669-3381 or write to the office at 1541 N. Hobart, Pampa. A friend or relative can make the call if the person in need isn't able to.

Even though payments cannot start until January, 1974, we're starting to take applications now so we can process them ahead of time and avoid delays that might occur if there's a rush of applications right at the end of the year," Weatherly said.

Men's wear

Comments on hair by Vidal Sassoon

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gentlemen, you may start trimming off your sideburns now. Vidal Sassoon has spoken. It's all right to keep your beards and moustaches if they make you look better, but hair is getting shorter, and with it the sideburns.

Sassoon, 45, probably is the supreme authority on men's hair styling — and women's too — and has haircutting salons for men in such diverse places as New York, Beverly Hills, San Francisco, Toronto, London and Manchester, England.

They aren't called barber shops, of course, and aren't really called salons. The cards merely say "Vidal Sassoon for men" and the great and near great, the rich and near rich, flock in. Clients range anywhere from Hugh Downs of television-fame to British designer Hardy Amies and actors Peter Lawford and David Hemmings.

Sassoon has nothing against long hair, really, but finds that the trend is to somewhat shorter hair with locks sort of swept down over where the sideburns would be if they had not been trimmed off. But Sassoon cuts hair to the individual look so there is no set rule.

Sassoon, in the midst of packing for one of his frequent trips to London and other places, chatted in the drawing room of his East Side Manhattan apartment while his actress-wife, Beverly, radiantly beautiful and eight months pregnant, listened in.

His own hair was slightly shorter on top but well over the nape of his neck and about half over his ears. He was ideally dressed for packing for a trip to London — bare feet, velvet slacks and a flowered sports shirt open at the throat. In the background was the noise of a couple of his kids banging some toys about.

"We're taking away sideburns now and hair is being worn shorter," he said. "But not as short as some of my Canadian relatives who really cut theirs off and I must say it does look rather odd to see someone with such short hair."

"I was in Bonwit Tellers a couple of days ago and the first three men I saw were wearing short hair but they had beards and moustaches. The beards and moustaches are being worn, not so much to compensate for a lack of hair but to give balance to their appearance."

"Hair, or a lack of it, can suit almost anyone. If a man is going bald he can compensate with a moustache or beard. And if his head is shaped like Yul Brynner's he will look quite handsome bald. The worst is if a man is going bald and tries to cover it up by parting his hair lower or trying to curl it around to cover the bald spot."

"Hair originally was worn long to express some feeling of dissent, to show one's feeling of anti-authority. Fortunately it doesn't mean anything any more. Hair is making a social statement, but from a point of fashion. We have come a long way from the youths who wore so much long hair it became a uniform."

He laughed at a report he had just read of football coach, Tony Simpson, of Geleena Park, Texas, Junior High School, who had ordered his football players to cut off their long hair on grounds it made them look effeminate and sapped their strength.

"Isn't that wild?" he asked. "Well, there goes the story of Samson and Delilah."

Sassoon said there is not only a trend toward shorter hair among athletes but they are shaving their arms and legs to lessen the drag as they rip through the water. "All except Mark Spitz, of course, with his moustache."

Sassoon cautioned that with men's hair becoming shorter there was no return to the GI crewcut of World War II and said that cut was a deliberate attempt to eradicate individuality — "the easiest way to control people is to have them all looking alike; that crewcut was also a way to de-sex people, castrate them in a sense."

"The ridiculous cut with the short back and sides and little hairs sticking out looked like a disease of the scalp. Men will still be having length but at the sides, and hair at the back, but it will be cut shorter, to the shape of the head. I think the era of scapling and cookie jar cuts is gone forever in men's styling."

The Lighter Side

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The human race progresses by solving problems. If there were no more problems, the race would soon become static and probably begin regressing.

Already this has happened in some places. The town of Farthing, S.D., became a problem-free area about 10 years ago and hasn't advanced a lick since.

Other communities brought to a standstill by a shortage of problems include Sinking Hills, Mont., Buttermilk Falls, Wis., Tinker's Dam, Alaska and Puma City, Ariz.

But these are freakish phenomena. Fortunately for the race as a whole, some problems defy solution. The very act of grappling with them moves man forward.

Have You Considered? Have you, for example, ever considered how much the onward and upward movement of the human race has been stimulated by the dandruff problem?

Man's age-old fight against dandruff has built giant industries, provided gainful employment for thousands, and inspired chemists and advertising copywriters to new heights of creativity.

Scores of dandruff removal shampoos have been formulated, but all do just that — remove it. None actually conquers dandruff in the sense of vanquishing it, the way man has eradicated razor drag for instance.

No, dandruff keeps turning up like a bad penny. The most that can be said is that we have managed to "control" it. Which is a heap of progress itself.

The extent of that achievement can be seen if you picture to yourself what the world would be like if dandruff should ever get out of control.

Reasonably, then, we could expect the dandruff problem to be with us for years to come. But that rosy outlook is now threatened by an ominous action by the Federal Trade Commission.

Definition Required Shampoo manufacturers who claim to deal with the problem are being required by the FTC to define what they mean by dandruff.

Suppose they are unable to come up with an acceptable definition? Where will that leave us?

In limbo, that's where. It will mean that all these years we have been struggling to overcome a problem that technically doesn't even exist.

Proud parents
AUBURN, Ala. (UPI) — When Debbie Lowe of Orlando, Fla., won the Miss Auburn election at Auburn University, her parents wanted the world to know how proud they were.

A billboard was erected at the Auburn city limits extending congratulations from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David M. Lowe, and her brothers and sisters.

African Nations Embroiled In Struggles

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst
Burundi and Rwanda, two African countries with strange euphonic names, lie amid green hills and blue lakes. The Nile has its source in the region and Stanley met Livingston there.

The two small, landlocked countries share more than the beauty of their setting. They share grinding poverty, overpopulation and a heritage of violence going back hundreds of years ago to feudal days. They are the home of the Tutsis, the masters, and the Hutus, traditionally the servants.

In Rwanda, in the first week of July, the government of President Gregoire Kayibanda fell to a military coup which he himself had predicted.

The coup leaders said they dissolved the government "because it has done nothing." Army leaders were reported unhappy with Kayibanda's dispersal of jobs and privileges to people from his own region and with the country's general economic and social stagnation. Only about 85,000 of Rwanda's 3.5 million people have steady jobs.

From refugees escaping from Burundi have come new reports of slaughter of Hutus by the Tutsis, apparently a carry-over from last year's ill-timed coup attempt by the Hutus and savage reprisals by the Tutsis.

The Tutsis are a Hamitic people, who came from the north with their cattle. Their features are finely chiseled in the way of the Ethiopians or the Somalis. Many are close to seven feet tall.

The Hutus are of a stocky build and came from the southwest. The Tutsis provided them with cattle and the Hutus, in turn, provided services, forming the background of a feudal society which continued first under German and then under Belgian rule.

In both countries the Tutsis are in the minority, making up only about 15 per cent of the population.

Both achieved independence from Belgium in 1962, but the ethnic struggle between the two groups goes back to before independence.

In Rwanda, the majority Hutus overthrew the Tutsi leadership in 1959 after a series of clashes that took 20,000 Tutsi lives and drove 200,000 into exile.

Two Weeks of Terror
In Burundi, the Tutsis have continued to rule despite several violent attempts by the Hutus to overthrow them.

Last year bands of dissident Hutus invaded Burundi from neighboring Tanzania and conducted a reign of terror lasting about two weeks before the Tutsi army regained control. The Hutus reportedly were drugged and believed themselves impervious to bullets.

Using the Hutus invasion as a pretext, the Tutsis then set about the systematic elimination of all Hutus capable of leadership. They included the wealthy, soldiers, civil servants, teachers and students.

An estimated 100,000 Hutus were killed. Some 75,000 more fled into exile, many to Tanzania.

The phrase "survival of the fittest" was coined by Herbert Spencer, an Englishman.

Central Baptist Schedules Film

"FOR PETE'S SAKE!" — Skip (Nicholas Surovy) and Carol (Pam McMyler) roar along the street on their bike full of the joy of life in this scene from World Wide's feature motion picture, "For Pete's Sake!", in wide-screen Eastmancolor, to be shown Sunday at Central Baptist Church, Starkweather and Browning, beginning at 6 p.m.

"For Pete's Sake!" a film credited as "unique in its capacity to reach out to meet the problems of people," will be shown on Sunday evening, July 15, at Central Baptist Church, Starkweather and Browning.

The full-length comedy-drama, filmed in brilliant Eastman-color by World Wide Pictures, will be shown once beginning at 6 p.m., and is open to the public at no admission charge.

Filed entirely on location in Denver and the Colorado Rockies, "For Pete's Sake!" is the story of Pete Harper, a family man and service station owner, who is knocked flat by unexpected problems, but finds the strength to stand up again, to face life anew.

"For Pete's Sake!" has been seen nationwide by over three million persons in theatre premieres, and has been cited by one film critic as "the perfect mixture — it's drama at its boldest, comedy at its lightest, and action at its liveliest."

"For Pete's Sake!" is a family film, not only because it is good family entertainment, but because through its storyline, families can see and feel exactly what is needed to develop deeper understanding and build stronger ties.

"For Pete's Sake!" stars Robert Sampson, who also starred in World Wide's "The Restless Ones." Pippa Scott, as Pete's wife, Marge, is well known for her Broadway appearances and numerous television roles. John Milford and Sam Groom are both familiar to television audiences.

A cordial invitation is extended to all families of the community by Central Baptist Church, which has made arrangements for this special showing of "For Pete's Sake!"

Graham Says Pace Slowing

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — Age and the pace which has kept evangelist Billy Graham preaching the Gospel since 1947 may finally be taking their toll.

Graham told a news conference Monday that the upcoming 10-day upper Midwest crusade which begins Friday at the Minnesota State Fairgrounds in St. Paul "may be one of the latter stadium crusades."

"I'm physically unable to do it," Graham said.

The evangelist, who has drawn millions to his crusades for 25 years, is now 55. He said that the flamboyant style that has been his trademark takes too much out of him.

He said the animated technique has got to become more subdued because he can't preach "from second base anymore."

The reference was to the holding of crusades in ball parks, which were frequently the only facilities large enough to hold the crowds he drew.

Graham fielded numerous questions at the news conference. Among them were questions about his current controversial statements in South Africa and the Watergate situation.

REV. EARL MADDUX

Ecce Homo, said Pilate pointing to Jesus crowned with thorns, and the bruises of the scourging covered with a purple cloak. Ecce Agnus Dei! said John of Jesus, just after his baptism and at the opening of His ministry. Behold the man who is the Lamb of God!

The world has beheld Him ever since; for He fills the horizon of history. He cannot be hid. But men gaze on Him and turn away, or gaze on Him and follow Him to the end. It is with deep insight that Studdert Kennedy describes Jesus as he appears to the modern world:

3. "He looks as contemptible as ever, with His ragged rabble of a church, that shouts Hosanna on Sunday and runs from the Garden of Gethsemane on Friday; the protests like Peter and then betrays, that disputes who shall be greatest and thinks it is extravagant to wash men's weary feet; with His crowd of wretched parsons, poor human folks like me, who preach the gospel and cannot live it, who try to be loving are not even amiable. He is as ridiculous as ever, just the same Christ that sat with a purple cloth on His bleeding back, and a crown of thorns set sideways on His head, with a mock sceptre in His hand, and the spittle of a drunken soldier rolling down his face, just the same Christ, but I am afraid of Him, as in his heart of hearts, I believe the modern man, the fiercest of the beasts of prey, is frightened of Him. He is disturbing, unnerving. He saps self-confidence and murders pride. He makes men want to go down upon their knees, and no strong man should do that, except to the Almighty."

Christ is the Lamb, which God provides as propitiation and sacrifice for sin. In Jesus, as the Epistle to the Hebrews teaches so distinctively, we have fulfillment of all the Old Testament teaching, concerning the blood that atones for sin. Here is the great anti-type to all the sacrificial ordinances and rites of humanity. The Lamb of God, who is the desire of all Nations.

Contrasting the glory of Mount Sinai and the giving of the moral law with the greater glory that's found for us in Mount Zion, the writer to the Hebrews comes to an astonishing climax. "Ye are come," he writes, "unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to innumerable host of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first born who are enrolled in heaven, and to God the judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect and to Jesus the mediator of a new covenant and to THE BLOOD sprinkling."

How does the shedding of blood give remission of sin? What is the origin of sacrifice? Whence its universality? Not only in religion of the Semites, but in the sacrificial rites of all nations we find three fundamental ideas in the propitiation, namely substitution, satisfaction and sufficiency. The same is true of the sacrifice of Jesus on the Cross. Christ died in our stead, just as truly as the ram was the substitute for Isaac on Mount Moriah. Christ's death gave satisfaction for sin, appeased justice, purchased pardon, more than the blood on the lintel did, when the avenging angel slew Egypt's first-born. Christ's death is sufficient. He dieth no more. He made on the Cross by His one oblation "a full, perfect and sufficient sacrifice, oblation and satisfaction for the sins of the world."

Trumbull, in his interesting study of the "Blood Covenant" gives an excellent summary of early Semitic teaching, with many parallels from the Old Testament, to show that to these people, "without the shedding of blood there was no remission of penalty and no peace of reconciliation." To understand what John meant, when he called Jesus the Lamb of God, we must read the Old Testament Scriptures that are the basis of all New Testament thoughts.

Baseball Roundup

By United Press International
Houston's Jim Wynn pulled a slick play in the field Thursday night that brought him out of a prolonged slump with a pair of homers to lead the Astros to a 7-6 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

With Del Unser aboard on a walk in the eighth, Mike Schmidt dropped what appeared to be a sure single into right. But Wynn in right field, faking like he was going to catch it, decoyed Unser into heading back toward first and managed to get a forceout at second. It was the second time this week that Wynn had pulled off such a play.

"If that ball had gone for a hit it could have been disastrous right there, but I think my throw took the heart out of it," said Wynn, who seemed more impressed with the play than with his homers.

As for the homers, the second of which came off a slider in the ninth and snapped a 6-6 tie, Wynn said, "it's the first time in a month and a half I've seen one of those mistakes hanging. The pitchers haven't been throwing me their mistakes."

In the only other scheduled game, Willie Stargell delivered a three-run homer, his 28th of the season, and Bob Robertson added a solo shot as the Pirates swept their three-game series with the Padres to move within one game of third place in the NL East. Luke Walker went the distance for the Pirates, allowing only five hits.

Andy Messersmith gave up seven hits and tossed his second NL shutout as the Dodgers beat the Cardinals and moved six games in front in the NL West. Messersmith, boosting his record to 8-6, received batting support from Bill Buckner, who drove in three runs with a homer and a single, and Willie Davis, who collected four singles.

Two Long Car Races Slated For Weekend

LEXINGTON, Ohio (UPI) — Two of the longest races in the Midwest will be staged here this weekend in the Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course's second running of the International Motor Sports Association Twin Sixes.

The first of two six-hour endurance races, the B. F. Goodrich Radial Challenge for "baby grand" autos, is scheduled to get under way Saturday at 4 p.m. on the twisting 2.4-mile course. The final hour of the $12,000 "baby grand" will be run in the dark.

Sunday's finale for GT cars, the $31,900 Camel GT Challenge, will begin at 1 p.m., featuring an anticipated battle between the powerful Corvette and the limber Porsche Carrera.

In 1972, it was a Porsche 911 that won the battle with Mike Keyser of Towson, Md., and Bob Beasley of Richmond, Va., aboard. Both are paired again this year in a Porsche Carrera and are considered strong contenders for a second consecutive Mid-Ohio GT victory.

Among the top Corvette drivers are LeMans veterans Bob Johnson of Marietta, Ohio, Candidates for double wins are Bob Johnson, Ike Kurray of Southfield, Mich.; Murray, Mike Downs of Galtersburg, Md.; Gene Felton of Atlanta; Pete Harrison, Atlanta; Joe Amato and Bill MacFarlane of Baltimore, Md.; and Toby Milne of Jacksonville, Fla.

Gene Littler goes one up on cancer

By Ira Berkow

(First of two related articles)
NEW YORK — (NEA) — The galleries, trying so hard to be respectful, tumble after this soft-spoken, smallish man, then stop in a hush as he prepares to hit.

The crowds are larger for him than they have ever been. At first it embarrassed him, made him feel kind of like a freak, he said, but now he has adjusted and in a way it inspires him, makes him feel he is a crusader of sorts, demonstrating that it is indeed possible to battle back from cancer and be productive again.

He is again playing top-level golf. And whatever morbid interest there may have been among some of the crowd, it has surely given way to appreciation for one so resolute. And if there is such a thing as Arnie's Army and Jack's Pack and Lee's Pleas, could there not be Gene Littler's Litters?

He says he enjoys the people as he never has before. Once, Littler appeared shy to a fault, fearful of coming out of himself. He would hide under the shadow of his golf cap or behind a thin smile. "On the golf tour," he says, "you have a tendency to think about yourself a little too much. It's not a team sport. And it's just you against the world."

Since the operation in April 1972, to remove a cancerous lymph node on the side under his left arm, he says he has begun thinking about people — seeing people — as he never had.

"I know it sounds corny, but there are many, many nice people," the 42-year-old Littler continued, as he sat on the back of a golf cart after a recent round. "I got dozens and dozens of letters of encouragement when I made my comeback. People told me that they had played golf after a similar operation. But none of them had tried it professionally."

One former pro golfer was able to empathize. Ben Hogan sent a letter to Littler. Hogan had been in a near-fatal car accident over 20 years ago and returned to play championship golf. "I don't remember what Ben wrote," said Littler, "except to lift my spirits. But he even had more of a disability than me; he had a couple of legs that wouldn't hardly move."

Littler says that for weeks after the operation — in which a muscle was extracted — he was unable to lift his arm "this far" off the table. He was dogged about trying to come back, since golf was his occupation. "I wouldn't think about doing something else until I was sure I couldn't play golf again," he said. Two months later he was chipping and putting. Two months after that he was driving. Two months after that he was back on the tour.

"I haven't cut it very well yet," he said. "I'm just biding my time and trying to get in the swing of things." That remark is a remnant of former times, when, he says, he was never very much of a positive thinker on the course, never thought he was as good as he was. In fact, before the cancer operation he believed he might have been headed for ulcers. "It was eating myself up inside," he said, because of a mild slump over the past few years. "I was miserable."

Then real trouble. On a routine checkup, the doctor discovered a lump. Littler and his wife waited for the results of tests that would not be known for 10 days. There were tears of bewilderment and dread. "Things looked gloomy," he said.

The operation cleaned out all the cancer.

He now considers himself blessed. He feels it is important to play good golf but golf is no longer so important to him as it once was.

"I would like to win a tournament again," says the man who has won 24 tournaments (including the 1961 U.S. Open) and nearly $900,000 in 19 years of pro golf. "I would like to win one — it may never er happen — but I'd like to show people who might have been afflicted with the same thing that they can be productive. I would like to think some people see in me a symbol like that. If I had to see something like that after my operation, I would have had a lot more hope."

He is closing in on his goal. This season he has lost a few tournaments by only two strokes. Recently he shot a 66 at Firestone, a monster course. His swing, one of the most mellifluous on the golf tour, retains its tempo. He hits a ball nearly as far as he ever has. And this 5-9 and one-half, 160-pounder emphasizes his endurance is fine.

Now, he stood and took off his golf cap to wipe his forehead. One noticed the delicate but creased features and the red around his fair eyelids.

"Hi, Gene," a passerby said, "beautiful round today."

"Thanks, Gus," said Littler.

Gus stopped in his tracks.

"How did you remember me? How did you remember my name? You meet so many people."

"I played with you in this pro-am last summer, didn't I?"

"Yeah, but — that is really something."

Damaged Engine Cause Of Clemente Air Crash

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An overloaded plane carrying baseball star Roberto Clemente crashed when an engine—damaged in an earlier accident—failed on takeoff, government safety investigators said today.

The Pittsburgh Pirates outfielder and four other persons died Dec. 31, 1972, when the four-engine DC7 carrying relief supplies to victims of the Nicaraguan earthquake crashed shortly after takeoff from San Juan, Puerto Rico.

In its report on the accident, the National Transportation Safety Board said:

- The plane was 4,193 pounds overweight when it took off.
- An engine failure was blamed on an earlier taxing accident.
- The plane had not been flown "in approximately four months" prior to the crash.
- Another engine failed to develop "full power" on takeoff because of "excessive wear."
- The board said the co-pilot of the plane, who was also president of American Air Express Leasing Company—the firm which provided the chartered plane—only had six hours of flight experience with a DC7. The flight engineer also was unqualified for his job, the board said.

According to the board, the plane was involved in an accident Dec. 2 when it ran into a drainage ditch as it taxied around the airport.

Two propellers were replaced, but the board indicated that only minor checks were made to spot possible engine damage.

Tom Kite, Two Vets Share Robinson Lead

ROBINSON, Ill. (UPI) — Putting was the name of the game Thursday in first-round play of the $125,000 Shrine-Robinson Open Golf Classic and the players who haven't been in the chips thus far this year held the hot hands.

Locked in a three-way tie for first with five-under-par 68s after the opening 18 holes in the four-day tourney were rookie Tom Kite and veterans David Graham and Labron Harris.

But the putter of Homero Blancas, the top money winner thus far this year among the entrants in the sixth Robinson tourney with earnings of $72,327, was so cold that Blancas slammed it against his toe on the 12th hole, breaking the club.

He used a No. 3 iron as a putter the rest of the way and finished with a 75 over the 6,556-yard, par-71 Crawford County Country Club course.

Harris and Graham, an Australian who now lives in Hollywood, Fla., each needed only 29 putts Thursday.

Kite, 23, in his first year on the PGA tour after starring in golf at the University of Texas where he was a co-champion in the NCAA tourney, took 30 putts.

Mike Higgins got by with only 25 putts for a 67 and was alone in fourth place one stroke behind the leaders. He played with a pulled chest muscle on his right side and was in such great pain he almost withdrew on the first tee.

Higgins received medication from a doctor after his first 18 holes and was expected to be back today for the second round.

Seventy-seven of the 144 starters Thursday equaled or were under par and 51 finished under par.

Defending champion Grier Jones was among a dozen players clumped at 68 and two other former winners were within hailing distance. Dean Refram, with a 70, and Bob Goalby, with a 71. Bobby Nichols, Wednesday's pro-man winner, carded a first-round 70.

Tom Weiskopf Runs Into Early Trouble

TROON, Scotland (UPI) — Overnight leader Tom Weiskopf immediately hit trouble when he started his third round in the British Open Golf Championship today as his tee shot found the rough.

Weiskopf, who held a three-stroke lead over U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller and Bert Yanney, bogied the hole as he started his round in pouring rain and thick mist.

Yanney also started badly when he bogied the first, but birdies at the second and third left him only one stroke off the pace.

Tournament favorite Jack Nicklaus, who was another stroke back at the start of the day, birdied the par four, 391-yard second hole when he canned a 12-footer to join Miller in a tie for third.

The rain turned the greens on Troon's 7,064-yard par 72 old course into soggy carpets.

Lee Trevino, the defending champion who was seeking his third consecutive British Open title, had putting troubles and finished with a 73 and a 54-hole score of 221—five over par.

Arnold Palmer, aided by some exceptional iron play, shot three birdies on the back nine for a 70 and led the early finishers with a two-over-par 218.

Nicklaus said he planned to take up the challenge as he bid for an all-time record 14th major championship.

At the conclusion of the second round, he said "I have to play better golf than I have in the last two days." He went out with a determined air to take command.

Tom Stincic Now Doubtful

KERRVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — Coach Bill Peterson added another "doubtful" in the starting column for his Houston Oilers Thursday—veteran middle linebacker Tom Stincic.

"Right now, I'd say he's probably not coming," Peterson said after the Oilers' fourth workout in full pads. "I hear he's having trouble with his knee."

Stincic, who was traded from New Orleans with former Texas A&M quarterback Edd Hargett and former Dallas Cowboy veteran Dave Parks, has a history of injuries.

And with more than 30 veterans due in camp by Monday, Peterson said some of the new faces will be gone before they're ever known.

"There will be three or four gone tomorrow," Peterson said. Among rookies who left camp Thursday were Darrel Vaughan, the Oilers' 10th round draft choice.

Rose Becoming Known As Comeback Player

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (UPI) — Long-hitting Dayton Morris Rose is quickly becoming known as the comeback player of the 70th annual Trans-Mississippi Amateur golf tournament.

Rose twice battled from behind Thursday. The Oklahoma City University senior from Midwest City, Okla., ousted Brady Miller of Orange, Tex., 1-up in 22 holes, and Carlton Dienstbach of Wichita, Kan., 1-up.

Against Miller, Rose was 2-down at the turn. Against Dienstbach, he was 3-down at the turn and 1-down with two holes to play.

"I've always had a problem with my attitude toward this game," said the 21-year-old player. "It used to matter everything in the world whether I won or not. Now, I've sort of changed. If I win, that's good. But if I lose, that's good, too, as long as I'm having fun."

When he was 3-down to Miller, a University of Houston golfer, at the turn Thursday morning, Rose said, "All I was thinking about was how long it was going to take me to get home. He's a good player, he had me out."

Rose fought back to tie the match, then won on the fourth extra hole with a 20-foot birdie putt.

He was erratic in the afternoon round, too. He bogeyed six of the first nine holes, but birdied four of the last nine. He knocked in a 7-foot putt on No. 17 to tie the match and a 12-footer on No. 18 to win it.

Golf Tips from the Old Masters

By The Editors of Golf Digest

SNEAD TELLS HOW TO PLAY SIDEHILL LIE WITH BALL ABOVE FEET

A shot that perplexes many golfers is trying to play a sidehill lie when the ball rests above your feet. Sam Snead, one of golf's all-time master players, explains how to play this shot:

"The greatest danger of the sidehill lie with your feet below the ball is that you have a tendency to stand away from the ball and use a baseball swing. Instead of doing this, you should adjust your stance by concentrating your weight on the balls of your feet and toes. If you swing with your weight on your heels, you'll fall away from the shot and either miss it entirely or top the ball."

"Play the ball about midway between your feet and choke up a bit on the club. There is a tendency to hook shots from this type of lie, but you can compensate for this easily by aiming slightly to the right of your target."

TEACH YOURSELF TENNIS

8. The Backhand (II)

At the conclusion of the backswing, the shoulders have pivoted so that the top of the body faces the alley line and the racket is pointing to the rear fence. Both feet are pointing to the alley but no step has been taken yet. The feet have simply pivoted from their net-facing position to a leftward position. As the player is about to hit his right foot will step forward (toward the net) so that the body will then be completely sideways to the net. As he makes this step with his right foot toward the net, his weight transfers with him from left foot to right and he meets the ball not only with his racket but with his weight as well.

The arms are slightly bent throughout the stroke. This means that the backhand is hit with the shoulder, arm and racket, rather than with any wrist action.

Kitchen Exhaust Fan—a Must

By MR. FIX

A kitchen without an exhaust fan may be barely bearable most of the time, but come summer, it can be really uncomfortable. The steam from cooking, washing dishes, the heat from the stove and the oven, even the warmth from the electric lights all push the thermometer up. This also is the most uncomfortable kind of heat, the heat you find in the kitchen. It's humid heat. Making the kitchen more comfortable is a matter of getting rid of the warm air. The method can be elaborate or simple, depending on your skill and/or how much you can spend. The best method is the modern kitchen exhaust system—hood, fan and vent—mounted right over the cooking area. These are generally hung on the bottom of kitchen cabinets with duct work running up through the cabinet and through the dropped wall and ceiling that fills the area between the top of the cabinet and the true ceiling. These are best installed during building or remodeling.

In older kitchens, exhaust fans are best installed directly in the ceiling (in a one-floor home) or in the wall. In a ceiling installation, cut a hole big enough to fit the unit. Don't worry about ragged edges. A trim plate will cover them. The duct can be run straight up through the roof or out the side of the house. A cap on the end of the pipe will keep out the rain. Be sure to caulk around it. Electric wires are exposed in an unfinished attic making wiring of the unit fairly easy if you have any experience with that sort of work. If you are uncertain of electrical work, call in an electrician. When you install an exhaust fan in an outside wall you don't have to bother with pipes. Such fans are equipped with a cap that opens when the fan is turned on. Be sure to caulk around the opening. Wiring of a wall unit is a little trickier since the wire may have to be fished up from the basement inside the wall. If you are not handy or are fearful of cutting holes in the wall (or you rent) then consider using a window fan. You can find them either double-hung or casement windows and all you have to do is plug them in at the nearest outlet. You can make a unit by opening the top half of the window and covering the opening with a piece of hard-

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)—The "phantom limb" phenomena is a very real thing, although the leg or the arm the patient "feels" has been amputated. Dr. Ronald Melzack, a professor of psychology at McGill University in Montreal, explains that persons with phantom limbs continue to feel pain but physicians do not yet know the reasons why. It is not uncommon for a woman with an amputated hand to reach for a glass of water with the hand that is no longer there, or for a veteran with an amputated leg to get out of bed and expect to take steps. About 10 per cent of persons with amputations suffer from what physicians call phantom limb pain. The subject was discussed at length at an international symposium here recently.

Mysterious Memory System
Phantom limb pain is characteristically very persistent, lasting for decades in some patients, Melzack said. "We have to begin looking for mechanisms in the nervous system which may cause this pain to continue for so many years." He said such pain is more likely to occur if a patient has had pain in the arm or leg before it was amputated. He told of a man who had a painful splinter in his hand. A week later the patient was in an automobile accident which cost him that hand. After amputation, the patient continued to feel pain caused by the splinter. The fact that pain is so long lasting and occurs most often in persons who have pain in a limb later amputated suggests that some mechanism in the nervous system has a memory for pain. "We don't yet know where this memory system occurs," Melzack said, "but it is something which must be studied." Two Treatment Methods

Another problem associated with phantom limb pain is the fact that stimulation of areas far from the stump can evoke pain in the phantom limb. For example, a girl who lost her arm in a bicycle accident and had phantom limb pain said the pain was intensified when pressure was applied to the opposite shoulder. Melzack said there were two opposing methods for treating phantom limb pain. One was to reduce pain by blocking it with local injections of an anesthetic into the stump. The second method is to intensify the patient's pain at the site of the amputation by pounding the stump with a rubber mallet or touching it with an electrical charge. In the first method, the relief often lasts for many days while the actual anesthetic is dissipated within the body in a few hours. The second method intensifies the pain for about 10 minutes but then the phantom pain disappears, often not returning for many months.

By BRUCE MEYER
United Press International
The transformation of Paul Simon has been a long, slow process. But before our very eyes, he has developed from an adept manipulator of clever phrases into a truly gifted songwriter, and a perceptive observer of humanity as a whole and America in particular. Over the past 16 years—beginning with a hit single called "Hey Schoolgirl," when Simon and Garfunkel called themselves Tom and Jerry—Paul Simon's music has been evolving. He made a gradual, difficult transition away from the grating washiness, the college-boy cleverness, of his early work. And he has grown musically, combining a natural gift for melody with a variety of forms and rhythms, new and old. The last Simon and Garfunkel album, "Bridge Over Troubled Water," was a major turning point. Not only was it the end of Simon's long, close association with Art Garfunkel, but it was also the first indication of his rapidly expanding musical base. With his first solo album, Simon stretched his new wings a bit, and ended up with a sprain. But for a trial run it wasn't bad, and it introduced the Jamaican reggae beat to his music for the first time. Paul Simon is not one to make the same mistakes twice. His new album, "There Goes Rhymin' Simon" (Columbia KC-32288), is a very nearly perfect realization of his development as a songwriter. "From the gently rocking "Kodachrome" to the spiritual power of "Loves Me Like A Rock," the album is both a serious musical portrait of Simon's America and a commercially viable product. His Opposite Paul Simon occupies the opposite pole in the American pop music spectrum from Alice Cooper. Alice plays on the darker realms of the American psychology—the violence, the preoccupation with sexual fantasy and chrome-plated gimmickry. There's a good deal less fanfare to Simon's approach, of course, and he manages not to be hopelessly cynical, despite his recognition that all is not as it should be. They do have one thing in common, however: A feel for what makes this country tick. It's this intuitive power that makes "Rhymin' Simon" work so well, whether it is an intensely personal song like "Something So Right," or the melancholy wide-screen power of "American Tune." Simon continues his exploration of Caribbean rhythms, especially in an odd little vignette called "Was a Sunny Day" about a sailor named Speedoo and a high school queen named Lorelei, if you can dig it. I guess my favorite tune on the album is "Loves Me Like A Rock," which rightfully belongs in a little rural church in Mississippi, or maybe a storefront meeting-house in Chicago. Simon owes a lot to his backing group, the Dixie Hummingbirds, for the success of that one. As for "Kodachrome," the single from the album, it's likely to become one of the monster hit tunes of 1973, if for no other reason than that it has one of those melodies that simply will not turn loose of your head. If you haven't gotten the picture in nice bright colors yet, I'll say it another way: "There Goes Rhymin' Simon" is a brilliant album. Here's hoping Paul Simon has a million of them. Jack Gaver

Getting too far away from it all...

Rural aged face special problems

(Ed. Note: This is another of a series of articles about America's elderly which will appear throughout 1973.)

By Tom Tiede

OAK CREEK, Colo. — (NEA) — When Esther Lewis was younger, settling down from a brief career in vaudeville, she thought the Colorado Rockies would be an ideal place to live out her life.

Now that she's old, however, has a bum leg, has cramps in the arm and needs help she can't get, the mountains are not so lovely as they are looming. "Stuck away like this," she says, "why, I suppose I could die and not be found for days."

Mrs. Lewis is 72. She lives at the end of a barracks-like row of weathered apartments in this community of 500 people. Her husband died years ago. Most of her friends are gone. Her neighbors give little indication they know she exists. She is lonely, isolated, ignored and, most of all, vulnerable.

"Once I had to go into Denver to get a brace for my leg. There is no train so I made it down to the highway to catch the bus. It's 150 miles to Denver and with my leg and all it was very uncomfortable. Then when I got there I had to carry my own bag. I asked a policeman for help and he turned away. My cabdriver said he didn't like picking up handicapped people. Oh, it was an awful trip. But I haven't any choice, living out here."

Mrs. Lewis is not unlike hundreds of thousands of other rural elderly. Not many of them have any choice. Only one or two per cent of Americans move when they reach retirement age; thus, not able to seek out anything better, they must rely on their communities for old-age assistance. And in many instances, in rural America, there isn't any assistance.

Growing old anywhere has its problems. But growing old in rural America can be severely difficult. Oak Creek is a good example. One of four communities that make up a region known as South Routt County, it has neither the time nor money to help its aged. Once a mining center, Oak Creek almost folded (in the 1950s) when its coal industry did. It hung on, to some extent, because many of the older citizens had nowhere else to go.

WORRY CLINIC

Airlines, you better heed Andrew's shrewd advice! The railroads failed to make consumer surveys until airlines diverted much of their passenger business. So you better perform some consumer surveys before it is too late. Hungry passengers resent delay!

CASE X-558: Andrew R., aged 44, is a management expert. "Dr. Crane," he began, "I recently referred a conflict between the airplane pilots and the airlines."

"Many pilots are brilliant professional men, such as psychologists, lawyers and other specialists who enjoy flying, both for their high salaries and the rest of the game. "The salary scales range from about $17,500 to $49,000, with extra pay for those who operate the gigantic 747 planes. "These pilots and co-pilots must take frequent rigid medical exams. "So they know their future (like that of professional athletes) may not continue for many years. "That's one reason they now demand such high salaries and other fringe benefits that are no longer compatible with large scale aviation. "For example, in the 1920s when prop planes were in vogue and took maybe 20 hours or more to cross the country, the pilots were paid a premium for bringing their plane to its destination an hour early. "They also received extra bonuses for reduction in gasoline consumption, etc. "But pilots, I am sure, would be willing to negotiate for even lower pay if they were also guaranteed jobs after an adverse medical exam stopped their actual flying duties. "Thus, if they could go into Public Relations or Management or other phases of the huge airplane industry, they would not have that insecurity of wondering when they might suddenly be medically grounded. "In meeting the zooming costs, moreover, airlines have often offended their passenger clientele. "For example, I recently returned via plane from New York to Chicago. "And I clocked the time it took the stewardesses to run up and down the aisles, taking orders for whiskey. "They devoted 90 minutes to their liquor customers, leaving us only 30 minutes for getting our dinners.

ESTHER LEWIS' PROBLEMS with the outside world begin at her door.

Mrs. Rossi tried to organize some relief for the elderly. She instituted a telephone re-assurance system where every retired person in the area was called daily. She organized a transportation fleet to get the aged back and forth (the nearest hospital here is 40 minutes from Oak Creek).

Says Margaret Rossi, wife of a local rancher: "The usual things happened here. The tax base fell away. Young people started moving out. Existing services went to pot. When our one doctor retired we couldn't get a replacement. It became difficult to make it around here... for the old people especially. As it happened, the old people made up a significant part of the population. The old-young population ratio in America is 1 to 10 (20 million to 210 million), but the ratio in rural America is often 1 to 5. In South Routt County, for a time, says Mrs. Rossi, 26 per cent of the people were over 65.

State Farm person to person health insurance. being old in america

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

"Actually, what I did was to try to get everybody interested in helping the old people. We didn't have any community money to begin grand schemes, but we had people. I figured if all the people got together, young and old, we could do a lot for one another. A nice thought. Unfortunately, it was not shared by the majority. Mrs. Rossi found some nursing cases of helpless old people — I insisted on taking one lady to the hospital and she passed blood clots right in my car, and then she just went unconscious" — but she could find little public support. "People just couldn't care less. I don't know why that is. I guess it's just inborn in them that out here everybody has to fend for themselves. People in the mountains hate charity, you know, and any time you try to help them they think it's charity. Even the old people feel this way. "Mrs. Rossi says most old people subscribe to a stark code: They go over the hill quietly, never complaining, never requesting. "Even when I was able to help someone, they always insisted on reciprocating. They'd give me something for the favor. That's the way they are." Fortunately for this sense of rugged individualism, as well as minimizing suffering among the old, things have begun to pick up economically in South Routt. Money being spent for the development of nearby Steamboat Springs (a skiing area) is creating area-wide jobs. Young people are once again coming in. Oak Creek has been promised a new ambulance. A full-time doctor is expected to occupy the local clinic. In addition, Margaret Rossi's pleas for mercy have sunk in a little. "The game warden no longer throws the confiscated meat away. He gives it to me and I in turn pass it on, very discreetly, to the old folks." Still, the elderly here, as in many other parts of rural America, are shamefully neglected. Esther Lewis for one. Even revitalized, Oak Creek continues to forget the lady's alive. "The worst thing," she says, "is I can't leave my apartment. There's no one to take me. I use to try to get around by myself, in the summer, but now I can't even do that. There are all kinds of dogs outside my door. I'm afraid one would knock me down." She sighs, then points to her rigidly braced leg. And though she does not say it, Esther Lewis must sometimes wonder, in this careless world, if she was knocked down would any of her otherwise occupied neighbors bother to pick her up?

The Almanac

By United Press International Today is Friday, July 13, the 194th day of 1973 with 171 to follow. The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury and Venus. Those born on this date are under the sign of Cancer. Mary Emma Wooley, president of Mount Holyoke College, was born July 13, 1873. On this day in history: In 1863, opposition to the Federal Conscription Act led to riots in New York City, in which more than 1,000 persons were killed. In 1865, Horace Greeley wrote an editorial in the New York Tribune in which he said "Go West, young man, go West and grow up with the country."

In 1878, the Russo-Turkish War ended. In 1972, Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern chose Missouri Sen. Thomas Eagleton as his running mate (later replaced by Sargent Shriver).

Television In Review

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A foreigner who visits America and hears about economic problems in the country might well be confused after noticing the luxury items being offered in television commercials. Take, for instance, some of the automobiles advertised on the home screen. In addition to lower-and middle-priced cars like Chevrolet, Ford and Dodge, we also see such makes as Cadillac, Lincoln Continental and Mercedes-Benz being extolled in commercials. Television ads are getting more aware of the social changes in the land — in fact, they help create them — and it is no longer a big surprise to see commercials for, say, flying lessons, mutual funds or expensive perfumes. They're More Imaginative But getting back to cars, the foreign automakers seem to have better, more imaginative commercials going for them overall than American manufacturers. What is best about the foreign car ads is that they seem to stress practical points more than the U.S. auto commercials, which in the main continue to emphasize trivial factors in their selling pitches.

Among the foreign car ads, for instance, Volvo has had very sound presentations focusing on how long its cars last. Audi does a clever job indicating how it combines the good elements of some other autos. Fiat does nicely too. Mercedes emphasizes its maneuverability and engineering. Volkswagen, which has long had the wittiest television commercials of any car, makes its points succinctly. On the other hand, Opel has a commercial now with a kind of oom-pah-pah music that does not set my heart aflame. A Sense of Fun and Pleasure The Japanese cars, like Toyota and Datsun, have, of course, done wonders for themselves on American television, and they, too, have emphasized practical matters. And then there is Mazda with its major selling point, the rotary engine. But the few British car ads I've seen on American television are just about as practical as U.S. auto commercials. The thing about the British car ads, however, is the sense of fun and pleasure they have effectively associated with English-made autos. But there haven't been many British car ads here.

It is surprising that so many commercials for U.S. autos have a sameness, an unimaginative flavor, to them. There are some splendid-looking American cars — not only Cadillac and Continental (both of which are shown off very well visually in their commercials), but also autos like the Grand Prix and Firebird and Charger and a number of others; and it seems to me that video ads for many domestic makes could be more effective in terms of emphasizing both practical matters and individual styling.

Robot control MENLO PARK, Calif. (UPI) — Robots still aren't a part of everyday life, but scientists who are looking ahead have developed a way to control the cybernetic beings with a blink of the eye. The Stanford Research Institute claims it developed an eye-tracking system that can make robots perform tasks based on eye movements. No knobs to turn or buttons to press. Just stand a safe distance away, gaze at the point where you want the robot to go and it's on its way to do your bidding.
