Heart Attack Kills Alben W. Barkley

By DONALD F. MARTIN
LEXINGTON, Va., (AP)—Alben W. Barkley, the nation's beloved Vice president, died of a heart attack late Monday in the midst of the lively political activity here.

His Wit Is Ranked Close To Abe's

WASHINGTON — (AP)—Alben Barkley ranked close to Abraham Lincoln as a master story-teller and political wit.

Perhaps his classic late was one Barkley called "the true story of the ungrateful constituent." It involved a farmer for whom Barkley had done many favors in Washington.

"Yeah," the farmer sneered, "but what have you done for me lately?"

When the wedding reception was over after his marriage to the present Mrs. Barkley in 1949, the bride ruefully observed that she intended to leave and go out and face that mess again, meaning a mob of well-wishers.

"That's no mess," Barkley told her, "that's the American people."

Barkley was fond of quoting a letter, supposedly addressed to Dorothy Dix.

"Dear Miss Dix," it said, "I am in love with a beautiful girl of fine character, and I want to marry her. But there are some things I am ashamed of. She knows about my sister who is a prostitute, my brother who is in the penitentiary and my uncle who is in an insane asylum. But she doesn't know about my two cousins who are Republicans."

"Should I tell her?"

When Barkley was Senate majority leader, there was an occasion when former President Truman forgot to keep in touch with him about legislative strategy on a suddenly proposed change in the tax laws.

"I feel like a caterer in a tight ball game," Barkley told a White House aide. "They not only fail to give me signals from Truman but sometimes they switch off the lights just as the pitcher throws the ball."

Nation Mourns For 'The Veep' Pampa Gets Rain!

WASHINGTON — (AP)—President Eisenhower and former President Truman Tuesday led the nation in mourning the death of Sen. Alben W. Barkley.

Mr. Eisenhower said in a statement issued shortly after he learned of Barkley's death that he was shocked by Barkley's "sudden" passing.

"As vice president of the United States, a member of congress and senator from Kentucky, Mr. Barkley had a long and distinguished record of public service for the people of his state and country," the President said.

"Mrs. Eisenhower and I join with all other Americans in extending our heart-felt sympathy to his family."

The President also sent a personal message of condolence to Mrs. Barkley.

At Pampa, D., where he made a speech Monday night, Mr. Truman expressed his sadness. It was the "Truman-Barkley team that carried the Democrats through their finest hour in the surprise 1948 presidential election victory."

"I'm just as sorry as I can be to hear of Sen. Barkley's passing," Mr. Truman said. "He was one of the finest men I ever knew."

"He was a great congressman, a great senator and one of the greatest vice presidents of this nation, and I believe that the United States can always be proud of it."

"Sen. Barkley was loved and respected by all those who were privileged to know him, regardless of their political affiliation," Nixon said.

"I am willing to be a junior... I would rather be a servant in the House of the Lord than to sit in the seats of the mighty."

Barkley fell to the floor behind the microphone. The hubbub of clapping suddenly stilled.

Flash Floods Hit West Texas Towns

By UNITED PRESS
Flash floods forced hundreds of persons from their homes in central West Texas Tuesday, and heavy flood threats came from a three-day period of turbulent weather which spawned a tornado and up to 11 inches of rain.

The contract for one of the largest paving projects planned by the city of Pampa, covering 29 jobs in 38 units, was awarded this morning by the City Commission to Ernest Lord of Fort Worth.

Broad, director of the Brown county emergency unit, said the main threat at Brownwood came from a seven-foot rise on Lake Brownwood, nine miles northwest of the city.

Contracts For Paving Are Awarded

The zoning commission was also heard in public hearing.

The Commission agreed to leave out one intersection, which had been included in the paving plan, but obtained the option of adding it at a later time.

Official Says Better Interceptors Coming, However

By JOHN W. FINNEY
WASHINGTON — Gen. Earle E. Partridge, air defense commander, has warned Senate investigators that a new Russian jet bomber may be able to fly higher than any U. S. interceptor now in use, it was learned Tuesday.

Partridge said, however, that the United States has some new supersonic interceptors coming along that will be able to recapture the defensive advantages over high-flying jet bombers.

Partridge's warning comes on top of one by Gen. Curtis E. LeMay that his Strategic Air Command will lose superiority in long-range striking power to Russia by 1960, unless the United States moves to increase production of intercontinental bombers above present plans.

Capitol Hill Roundup

WASHINGTON — (AP)—Chairman Walter F. George of the Senate Foreign Relations committee Tuesday warned the administration to plan to lose more than it wants for foreign aid.

The administration is seeking a $4.9 billion foreign aid authorization for fiscal 1957. It also wants a $100 million fund for making long-term foreign aid commitments.

'Neutralist' Leader Is Ceylon Head

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Foreign Analyst
Prime Minister Solomon Bandaranaike of Ceylon is getting off to a fast start as South Asia's newest "neutralist" leader.
In the 13 days since he took office, he has reversed completely the pro-Western policy of Sir John Kotelawala, his predecessor.
He has made it known he will take no nonsense from either Great Britain, to whose commonwealth Ceylon belongs, or from the United States.
Like his fellow-neutralist, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India, Bandaranaike is casting friendly eyes toward Peking, capital of the Chinese Communist regime.

He plans to make Ceylon a republic and is not sure whether he will keep it in the British commonwealth.

He has announced that Britain's Transomales naval base must go. He has embarked on a sweeping program of nationalization.

Now he has made it known that the United States "Voice of America" station in Ceylon, which broadcasts to a large area of Asia, will be strictly censored.

Starting Tuesday, every program of the station must be submitted in advance for approval of his communications minister.

Communications minister C.A.S. Marikkar has announced that the station will not be permitted to broadcast American propaganda, "either open or concealed."

Bandaranaike's father, a rich plantation owner, was knighted by Britain for services to the empire. The young Bandaranaike was baptized as a Christian. At Oxford, he leaned to smart Western dress. But back home, he "went native." He shed his Western clothing for the Ceylonese white shirt and white skirt and became a Buddhist.

Baseball's Near Great Bad Writers

By WARREN W. NICHOLS
WASHINGTON—UP—Trouble with picking all-time greats in organized baseball is that for each great there are hundreds of near-greats who think they were great. Most of the latter are nasty letter writers.

Add these notes to the mail from fans of the almost-made-its and you have a pretty big bundle.

My friend, Ira L. Smith, has been taking abuse in this matter for several years. He is in the middle of a series of books on famous diamond stars. First there were pitchers. Then outfielders. The most current volume is "baseball's famous first basemen."

But Ira, who has one of the finest collections of baseball anecdotes anywhere, bucks up and plods along. He says he isn't as bogged down as Liberace on the way to the bank, but he likes his work, nonetheless.

Here are some facts you might not know about first basemen. More than 8,000 players have been in the majors, and about 1,000 of them at one time or another have pitched on first base. From one game to 22 seasons. All but 188 of them also have appeared in other positions.
Most of the great players who caught the fans fancy at other positions, had short trips to the initial sack. To name a few: Ty Cobb, Ed Delahanty, Pie Traynor, Wilbert Robinson, Christie Mathewson, Joe DiMaggio, Rogers Hornsby.

HEART-STOPPING PROGRESS—Another medical frontier has been crossed. Surgery on a completely stopped and bloodless heart has been reported for the first time by a team of Cleveland, Ohio, surgeons. The new operation, developed at the Cleveland Clinic, defies one of the most basic concepts of surgery, using the dread "cardiac arrest" for the benefit of both patient and doctor. Potassium citrate is injected into the crown of the heart after heart and lungs have been bypassed by the now familiar heart-lung machine. When the operation is over, the heart resumes its rhythmical beating automatically. The operation, which requires a team of 15 surgeons and nurses, above, has been performed successfully on eight children.

Backstairs Scenes At White House

By MERRIMAN SMITH
WASHINGTON — UP — Backstairs at the White House: Budget Director Percival Brundage seldom holds press conferences. When he does, he tries to make his bewildering world of government finance seem as logical and understandable as possible.

At the White House late last week, Brundage was trying to explain a new system of federal cost accounting on an accrual basis. The reporters must have appeared puzzled, so the dignified budget director shifted his fiscal gears.

"Suppose you go to the liquor store and buy four or five cases of whiskey on a cash basis," he said hopefully. "Your books would show an outlay of several hundred dollars for April, but would show nothing for May or June when, presumably, you still would be consuming your original purchase."

Whether Brundage was "talking down" to the reporters or trying to be understandable is a moot point. But one newsmen observed: "It could have been worse—if he'd said 'suppose you go to your dope peddler and buy four or five decks of heroin on a cash basis.'"

Fletcher Knebel in Tuesday's issue of a national magazine catalogues President Eisenhower's personal dislikes. Women in tailored suits is among them.

If the girls on the White House staff take this seriously, Knebel may be responsible for a lot of new spring dresses and strained charge accounts.

And, if Knebel is right, Mr.

Eisenhower must have spent many moments of frustrated irritation since he has been in office. The suit is a favorite working costume not only for many of the White House girls, but the ladies in all the government departments.

Mr. Eisenhower, as every president does, receives a wide variety of gifts. Well-wishers have given him just about everything from a Black Angus heifer to a tractor with back-up lights, from his portrait done on a typewriter to a 100-pound halibut.

Comes now to the White House something new in the haberdashery line, a button-down tie. Abraham Schreter of Baltimore, Md., sent Mrs. Eisenhower a special set of the new-fangled ties for the chief executive.

The first lady's secretary, Mary Jane McCaffrey, thanking the inventor, wrote: "What wonderful 'good luck' omens they will be for the President when he is playing golf!"

The President probably would be willing to wear a necklace of new eyes if it would improve his game. More often than not, he plays tieless in a sports shirt, but designer Schreter says he's sure Mr. Eisenhower can cut his score by eliminating "flying, flapping" ties.

The Schreter tie has three button holes at the narrow end. The wearer puts the small end through a loop sewn on the wide end of the tie, then buttons the whole thing to his shirt.

Ought to go great with the sports car set.

Ionosphere Rocket Blast Is Today

By PRESTON MCGRAW
WHITE SANDS PROVING GROUND, N. M.—UP—The Navy expects to blast into the ionosphere 185 miles above the earth Tuesday. A rocket that may help to tell scientists how to build the first U. S. Earth Satellite.

It is the pencil-slim Aerobee-HI, weighing 1050 3-4 pounds and propelled by a venomous mixture of red-fuming nitric acid, aniline and alcohol.

Actually, 170 Aerobees have been fired by the Navy and other agencies to arrive at the design of the Aerobee-HI. The one today was the first production model.

Scientists and technicians worked over it all night, making last-minute checks and computations. Navy men in special raincoats, boots and hoods, to protect them against accidental acid splashes fueled it.

145 Pounds of Instruments
In the nose of the Aerobee-HI was 145 pounds of cameras and delicate instruments to tell Navy scientists what goes on 185 miles above the earth, where a man's blood would boil from lack of air pressure.

Among the equipment was a microphone, so sensitive it could pick up the sound of a grain of sand dropped from four inches.

The idea of the microphone was to pick up and transform into radio impulses the sounds of meteor dust hitting the sides of the rocket's nose. These impulses can be picked up and monitored on the ground.

Before the United States fires its first Earth satellite toward the sky, probably 1958, scientists will first have to know how thick to make the shell, to allow for the eroding action of the meteor dust.

John W. Townsend Jr., chief of the Navy research laboratories rocket section, said there is some suspicion, from a previous experiment, that the shower of meteor dust constantly blowing from outer space is heavier than first expected.

Thickness Determines Size
This would act somewhat like an unsending sandstorm on the metal shell of an earth satellite, eating it away. The size of the satellite will depend upon how thick the shell must be.

The Aerobee-HI, 28 feet long and about 15 inches thick, with a thin, sharp nose, was eased into its launching platform last Thursday. The platform is 143 feet high.

Three guide rails inside the tower guide the missile into the sky as the barrel of a rifle guides a bullet. For about 10,000 feet upward, the rocket is propelled by a booster—like jet assisted take-off (JATO) on a plane.

This falls away, and a 4,000 pound thrust liquid motor takes over, driving the rocket upward like a meteor trailing a shower of sparks. The red-fuming nitric acid, aniline and alcohol are injected into the combustion chamber of the rocket by helium gas under pressure.

It takes about 58 seconds for this to burn out after which the thrust already developed drives the rocket on. Weeks ago, mathematicians, figured out how long the rocket will soar into the air.

To Travel 4,850 mph
They figured it would travel upward for a total of 340 seconds at a speed of 4,850 miles an hour. On the trip downward, at about 210,000 feet the charge was set to blow off the tail. This causes the rocket to fall more slowly and over and damage the equipment in its nose less than if it plunged to earth point down.

An intricate system of radar was fixed on it to follow it almost to earth. Helicopters and planes were ready to locate the wrecked rocket so that recovery crews can bring it in.

The highest that a prototype of the Aerobee has gone so far was 114 miles. The Army once fired a gigantic two-stage rocket 250 miles into the air but the Aerobee is a single-stage rocket.

Lt. Cmdr. E. W. Diehl said the Aerobee-HI has no military application.

DES MOINES, Iowa—UP—Iowa treasury agents halted trucks along the Illinois and Iowa state lines Tuesday to learn whether some were carrying more than 20 gallons of gasoline in their tanks.
