HOPPER UNAWARE — Grasshoppers in Gray and Wheeler Counties are munching away at native grass and eyeing irrigated and dryland crops today. The methodical destruction of rangeland is destined to halt Wednesday, however. The droves of grasshoppers are in trouble. Ranchers in the area have banded together, and, with aid from state and federal agencies, scheduled an eradication party in honor of the pests. A fleet of planes will spray a chemical harmless to fish and wild life over the area in a giant effort to stop the advancing hordes of hoppers.

SPRAYING ATTACK PLANNED

Ranchers Declare War On Grasshopper Horde

By ALETHA DAVIS
Gray and Wheeler County ranchers have declared war against an invasion of grasshoppers eyeing grazing land and irrigated crops.

The first attack is scheduled for Wednesday, morning and odds are in favor of ranchers. However, Mother Nature will in reality be calling the shots.

According to government experts, wind and rain could throw a wrench in the works and cause delay.

Delay at this point would be critical, according to Charlie Gatlin, local co-ordinator and rancher for the state-federal and land-owner financed battle which will employ a fleet of five duster planes and one observation plane.

Bids for the spray job, executed by specialized equipment which spreads eight ounces of the "deadly to grasshoppers" chemical over each acre of hopper infested grassland, will be let today.

Gatlin said the critters were a product of the hot dry period about 30 days ago. The warm days provided excellent incubators for the 1972 batch of eggs, and the pests hatched in droves unmatched since a similar good hopper year, 1966.

The grasshoppers, now peaking at epidemic level, aren't really travelers. The experts observe they seldom move on from the grassland...until...the grass is gone. Then the picture changes.

The grasshoppers this year are already eyeing irrigated and dryland crops, sometimes just across the road. With native feed damaged by hoppers, the ranchers just can't afford to sit back and allow cultivated cattle feed and "money crops" to be devoured also.

USDA and state agencies have already checked out areas in Wheeler and Gray County, declaring the infestation has reached a point of some 45 hoppers per square yard of grassland. Ranchers are talking about 37,063 acres.

There are 640 acres in a section — that means a LOT of grasshoppers!

Gatlin indicated government sources said mid-June was the latest effective spraying time, according to government rules. The guidelines indicate spraying before that time in order to effectively eliminate a hatch in 1974 from eggs being deposited now.

Gatlin said experts have determined the pesticide to be used in the program is safe for wild life and fish in stock ponds in the eradication areas.

Police Investigate Possible Murder

By CLAY LIVELY
DALLAS — Dallas County sheriff's deputies are investigating the possibility that the death of Doyle Harry Ward, Jr. over the weekend, may have been an "underworld killing."

Ward, 34, former resident of Pampa, was found dead Friday morning on a farm-to-market road in northeast Dallas County by a man on his way to work.

He had been shot four times, once in the mouth, twice in the abdomen and once in the chest.

Ward was out on bond in Tarrant County after being charged and receiving and concealing stolen property in connection with a boat theft ring operating in the county and the surrounding area.

Officers from both Dallas and Tarrant Counties are investigating the murder.

Ward's death was termed a homicide by Dallas sheriff's deputies after results of an autopsy were announced. He had been shot between 2 a.m. and 5 a.m. Friday.

He left his home in Euless, a small town 10 miles east of Irving, Thursday morning after receiving a phone call from an unknown person. Before leaving his house, Ward told his wife Beverly Ann that he would call her before noon of the same day.

When he had not called nor returned home by Thursday evening, Mrs. Ward notified Euless police, who then notified Dallas and Tarrant County sheriff's officers.

Sheriff's office spokesmen in Dallas said that the only clues found at the scene of the murder were a set of bare footprints and a spent cartridge found near the body.

Ward was identified through fingerprints and a student identification card from Texas Wesleyan University in Fort Worth.

Funeral services for Ward were conducted this morning in the First Baptist Church in Pampa by Rev. Calude Cone. Burial followed in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Carmichael - Whatley Funeral Directors.

Born in Borger, Ward was a 1957 Pampa High School graduate.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a son, Phillip, of the home; his mother, Mrs. Doyle H. Ward, Sr., Pampa; a sister, Mrs. Benny Stout, Pampa; and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E.L. Anderson, Pampa, and Mrs. Minnie Fischer, Irving.

Warm-blooded creatures suffer no effects, but grasshoppers succumb with in minutes of application.

The planes and chemicals are scheduled to be dispatched from the Charlie Webb ranch 25 miles southeast of Pampa, if the weather permits.

Ranchers are discussing "seven year hoppers" at this point since this is the second seven-year interval between grasshopper invasion.

With so many landowners getting heads together and arming for the insect war, things don't look good for the pesky, grass-eating armies.

Atlantis 'Search' Started

CADIZ, Spain (UPI) — A team of scuba divers set out today to search the floor of the Gulf of Cadiz for Atlantis, a continent that legend says sank under the sea thousands of years ago.

"We expect to find an entire city or at least evidence of ruined buildings," said Jacques Mayal, the team leader and a veteran seeker of Atlantis. "But our first task is photographing and surveying. We will not pull out any artifacts or fragments of buildings."

The divers are part of a 70-member expedition of U.S. students, teachers and adventurers who arrived a week ago to study the area off southwest Spain—and to search for what legend describes as the cradle of a supercivilization that once spanned the Atlantic Ocean.

Six divers planned to go down today in shoal areas 12 miles off Cadiz.

"It looks hopeful," said Phil Farrell, a diving instructor from California and one of the six divers going down today. "Diving off local beaches last week, we saw a Roman column and amphora. If we can find a 2,000-year old amphora close to shore, we can find many interesting remains out in the ocean."

Most archaeologists have dismissed previous reports of ruins off the Spanish coast. But Mrs. Maxine Asher, co-director of the project, said she believes she and other spiritualists have psychic proofs of Atlantis' existence.

"I simply know we will find it because I am psychic and the highly civilized people of Atlantis were very psychic," she said. "How strong the vibrations are these days!"

As evidence that Atlantis once existed, Mrs. Asher cited the dialogs of the Greek philosopher Plato, who in the fourth century before Christ described an idyllic civilization beyond what is now the straits of Gibraltar. It reputedly sank into the sea 13,000 years ago after a cataclysm of undetermined origin.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Defense Department acknowledged today that B52 strikes were made in Cambodia prior to 1970 despite public assertions at the time of U.S. respect for the neutrality of Cambodia.

Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger, in a letter to the Senate Armed Services Committee, said raids "had been conducted for some period of time and were fully authorized" before the United States publicly announced attacks in May 1970 into so-called sanctuaries areas of Cambodia near the South Vietnamese border.

"At this period of time, you will remember over one half million men were stationed in South Vietnam," Schlesinger said. "Because of the sensitive operational and diplomatic situation, special security precautions were taken to ensure that the operations would not be compromised."

Schlesinger sent the letter to the Senate panel as former Air Force Maj. Hal M. Knight testified under oath that he falsified records of B52 strikes in early 1970.

He said he acted under orders from superiors that he burn all documents, computer tapes and other materials that would expose the strikes in Cambodia.

Knight was asked if he ever questioned the procedure. "I asked who authorized this procedure," he replied. "I was told not to ask."

He said there always was a cover target with "a strike order in Vietnam" to account for the actual mission in Cambodia.

The Air Force chief of staff,

Gen. George S. Brown, in another letter to Chairman Stuart Symington, D-Mo., of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said it was not correct to characterize as falsification the security precautions pertaining to the raids.

"So long as the reports met in every detail the requirements imposed, they were not intended to deceive those with a security 'need to know,'" Brown said.

"The reasons why special security precautions were directed were not a reporting issue so long as a responsible higher authority knew in fact what was done and judged it to be in accord with instructions."

Knight said 40 to 44 raids were conducted in Cambodia in early 1970 and that he doctored reports to make it appear they took place in South Vietnam.

Knight said that after a raid he was instructed "to take all the paperwork and when daylight came to go out and burn it."

Reading from a letter he said he wrote to Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., last January, Knight said when he inquired about the reason for falsifying reports he was told to "ask no further questions."

The raids were conducted, according to Knight, prior to the May, 1970, U.S. ground and air incursion into Cambodia. At the time, the United States was publicly proclaiming respect for the neutrality of Cambodia under Prince Norodom Sihanouk, since deposed.

Knight said he was assigned to the First Combat Evaluation Unit at Bien Hoa Air Force Base in South Vietnam, supervising three air crews in early 1970.

Congress Seeks Decision Power

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress is preparing to send President Nixon a demand for a share in future decisions to commit U.S. troops in conflicts abroad.

Approval of legislation limiting the President's troop commitment powers may come in both houses of Congress this week. A presidential veto is likely.

The resolutions prepared for debate in Congress are aimed at answering the constitutional questions left unresolved when Congress passed a compromise

Doctors Report President Better

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon continued to show improvement today in his battle with viral pneumonia, his doctors said.

"He is progressing satisfactorily," reported Dr. Sol Katz, pulmonary specialist from Georgetown University School of Medicine, one of the team of doctors treating the President at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon's progress is such that he will be able to meet as scheduled with three state visitors in the next two weeks—the Shah of Iran on July 24, Australian Prime Minister Gough Whitlam on July 30 and Japanese Prime Minister Takeji Tanaka July 31-Aug. 1.

Nixon's spirits were described as "just fine" and Katz predicted he will be able to leave the hospital by Thursday or Friday.

"He's vivacious, loquacious—an excellent patient," said Katz.

Nixon's doctors said they were having a tough time convincing him he had to slow down and curtail his schedule. His work load is said to be only about a quarter of normal because of the illness.

Doctors Report President Better

Nixon awoke at 8 a.m. after a good night's sleep, Dr. Walter Tkach said. The President was given four chest therapy treatments Sunday.

The treatment resulted in "considerable improvement in his chest congestion and chest discomfort is now at a minimum," Tkach said in his morning medical bulletin.

The therapy did cause the President to experience some fatigue to the point where he was given mild pain killers for relief, Tkach said.

KALMBACH CLAIMS

Aides Suggested Defendants Fund

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Herbert W. Kalmbach, President's Nixon's personal lawyer until May 1, said today he raised money for the support of the seven original Watergate defendants on the instructions of "The No. 2 and No. 3 men on the White House staff."

Kalmbach did not identify the men but it was clear his reference was to John D. Ehrlichman and H. R. Haldeman, Nixon's two closest aides until they resigned April 30 as the Watergate scandal deepened.

Kalmbach made the statement in written testimony prepared for delivery at the Senate Watergate hearings. Kalmbach denied any personal wrongdoing.

"My actions in the period immediately following the break-in which involved the raising of funds to provide for the legal defense of the Watergate defendants and for the support of their families were prompted in the belief that it was proper and necessary to discharge what I assumed to be a moral obligation that has arisen in some manner unknown to me by reason of earlier events," he said.

"The fact that I had been directed to undertake these actions by the No. 2 and No. 3 men on the White House staff made it absolutely incomprehensible to me that my actions in this regard could have been regarded in any way as improper or unethical."

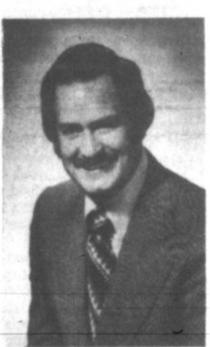

Kalmbach was fired by Nixon on May 1 after it was disclosed that he had paid between $30,000 and $40,000 to Donald Segretti, the "dirty tricks" lawyer accused of attempting to sabotage Sen. Edmund S. Muskie's 1972 campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Kalmbach, 51, of Newport Beach, Calif., is believed to be a key witness in the Senate committee's attempt to determine who ordered the wiretapping of the Democratic headquarters of the Watergate and how much the President knew of the cover-up effort to conceal high White House involvement after the bugging plan went awry.

In his prepared statement, Kalmbach denied "any prior knowledge of the Watergate break-in or participation in the formulation of any planned conspiracy to cover-up that incident or acts of campaign sabotage or unethical activity." He said he was testifying without seeking immunity from prosecution because he simply wants to tell the truth.

"It is not my purpose to testify for or against any individual," he said.

FOR FURTHER TESTIMONY

Jury Reconvenes In 'Payoff' Case

The Gray County grand jury reconvened at 9 a.m. today to hear further testimony in the panel's continuing investigation of statements made in early July by a KVII-TV news reporter that law officers in the area allegedly suspected a "pay off" at the District attorney level in cases involving narcotics.

District Attorney Guy Hardin in turn called for the grand jury investigation and asked that all law officers here be subpoenaed. Forty-four persons, including all law officers, were subsequently asked to appear before the panel.

Reports today indicated only one new witness had been subpoenaed to appear for today's session. However, other sources said "voluntary witnesses" would also appear.

Gray County Attorney John Warner was acting as district attorney during the proceedings this morning and could not be contacted to confirm this report.

District Judge Grainger McIlhenny will not be in Pampa until Wednesday. However, no date for the panel to turn its findings over to the judge has been set.

The present jury was subject to a 90-day extension when proceedings ran over its term date, June 30. This action was taken after testimonies in the matters remained incomplete at the July 1 date new panel members were scheduled to assume duty.

The time element for a report remained the big question today. Other court commitments prevent Judge McIlhenny from remaining in Pampa throughout the hearings. The judge is in Wheeler County today, with court dockets calling for his presence in Lipscomb County Tuesday.

He is scheduled to be in Pampa for a short time Wednesday, but will not be back here for a full day until Friday.

If the jury should reach a decision during his absence, a report would be withheld until court schedules permitted his presence.

LT. PHILLIP MURPHY

MRS. PHILLIP MURPHY

New SA Officers Arrive At Pampa

Lt. and Mrs. Phillip L. Murphy are the new commanding officers of the Pampa Salvation Army Corps.

They succeed Capt. and Mrs. L.Z. Sullivan who have been transferred to Big Spring, Texas.

Lt. and Mrs. Murphy both were commissioned as ministers in the Salvation Army last June 10 in Atlanta, Ga., after completing a two-year training course at the Salvation Army School for Officers Training, the equivalent of seminary schooling.

Mrs. Murphy is a Salvation officer in her own right and as such is an ordained minister and holds the same rank as her husband.

Lt. Murphy is originally from Memphis, Tenn., and attended Memphis State University before entering full time work in the Salvation Army. Mrs. Murphy attended Marshall University in her hometown of Huntington, W. Va.

Lt. and Mrs. Murphy have resided in Dallas, where he was program director for the Salvation Army Community Center in the Pleasant Grove area.

The Murphys reside at 2104 Lynn in Pampa.

AT REBEKAH HOME

Evangelist Asks Girls To Defend 'Treatment'

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (UPI) — Evangelist Lester Roloff is asking former residents of his Rebekah Home for Girls to come forward in defense of the home, which the Nueces County prosecutor wants the Texas attorney general to enjoin. Assistant County Attorney Wallace Woodruff said Saturday he had 16 signed statements from inmates of the home, or parents, about beatings and spankings and had sent a report to the attorney general.

"This thing needs to be set right and you former residents call the Caller-Times and tell them about the home and whether you have been punished or not," Roloff said Sunday in a radio sermon.

The Caller-Times is a Corpus Christi newspaper that printed a new story about punishment at the home. Roloff, a radio evangelist for 29 years, now broadcasts over 100 stations throughout the country.

What He Said
He also went to the home Sunday and preached. At the home, Roloff said:

"It's not like Liberty Hill (apparently referring to Artesia Hall in Liberty County). 'It is an honor to be criticized when you are working for the Lord. And you girls who don't like the home and the people in the city can't stop it.'"

Roloff accused the county attorney's office of talking to only a few girls and then not the good ones.

"There will always be some who will like to close it so they can get back to their bad ways and hippie houses," he said.

Two former, unidentified residents of Rebekah Home and another Roloff home praised the operation.

A Corpus Christi girl, who said she once had a drug problem but now is a non-drinking, non-smoking secretary, said spankings at the home were not like those described in news accounts of the investigation and were administered only when a girl did something wrong.

"You could hear the spankings through the door. I never did hear anybody gream bloody murder," another girl said.

A man who now teaches at the home said he was cured of drinking in another Roloff institution. Of Rebekah Home, he said: "Most of the girls who testified about it were new and they naturally rebelled when they came here. Anything to cause trouble."

Woodruff said some of the girls who made statements probably stretched things but there was enough continuity in all of the statements to show a pattern.

He said the parents of one girl told him that while they were visiting the Rebekah Home, male attendants slapped and beat a girl in the dining room while she was held dangling by her heels.

Woodruff asked the state attorney general's office for an injunction to stop operations at the home run by Roloff, who has been preaching on radio for 29 years. His "Family Hour" program is carried by 100 stations.

Roloff said some attendants used spanking as punishment, but he denied the charges of brutality.

Freed Canadian Officers Tell Of VC Experiences

SAIGON (UPI) — Two Canadian officers freed after 18 days as captives of the Viet Cong said today they were captured because the Communists thought they were American spies.

Capt. Ian Patten, 31, and Fletcher Thomson, 25, were released Sunday along with two captured South Vietnamese drivers. They appeared healthy and fit.

They were flown by helicopter to Saigon and described their experiences at a news conference today.

"We were told to be recognized as Americans on an intelligence mission," Patten said. "They could not distinguish us from Americans."

The two officers are members of the peace-keeping International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) and were captured June 28 in an area 35 miles east of Saigon that is claimed by both the Viet Cong and the South Vietnamese government. The Viet Cong did not acknowledge they were holding the men until last Monday.

Patten said he and Thomson were driving along a road when they saw three Viet Cong guerrillas talking to a group of rubber plantation workers. "I approached them and identified myself and a pistol was put to my head," Patten said.

Countdown Starts For Skylab Flight

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — The countdown rolled along smoothly today toward the July 28 launch of three more Skylab space explorers who plan to man the orbiting station for a record 56 days.

The count was kicked off on schedule at 10 p.m. CDT Sunday, 12 days before astronauts Alan L. Bean, Jack R. Lousma and Owen K. Garriott plan to ride an Apollo command module up to the lab for another scientific research journey.

The first hurdle in the countdown is a practice launch at 6:08 a.m. CDT Friday. The countdown clock will then be turned back to T-47 hours and started again two days before the real launch of the space crew by a Saturn IB rocket.

Launch officials will spend most of today running tests of the command module and rocket systems to make sure they will function properly on launch day.

The Skylab 2 countdown is the first time the dress rehearsal has been combined with a real launch.

Officials said they adopted the new countdown schedule because of the proven reliability of the Saturn launchers, the rockets that almost flawlessly boosted men toward the moon. The astronauts won't take part in the dress rehearsal for the first time, too, because of the Saturn IB's good record.

Garriott, a civilian, is the first physicist-astronaut and his expertise is expected to add knowledge about the sun and about man coping with weightless space for long periods.

The astronauts will also be continuing research begun in the 28-day Skylab manned mission about how the body reacts to prolonged space voyages, and what can be learned about the earth's natural resources from orbit.

Bean, Garriott and Lousma passed their next-to-last major medical examinations last week, and are continuing training in semiquarantine, to keep them from getting sick, at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

Man's destiny had been set on a new course. Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, who died in 1967, had been given the task of building the bomb. Out of that assignment a new city was born — Los Alamos — with the first years of French officials in Tahiti and Paris, however, did not indicate when the first blast might come at the Mururoa atoll test site 720 miles southeast of Papeete.

Australia, New Zealand, Japan and several other countries oppose the tests on grounds radioactive fallout may endanger their populations. Roman Catholic bishops in France also oppose the tests. France has ignored their protests.

French planes and helicopters have stepped up their activities in the Mururoa zone, according to newsmen aboard the New Zealand warship Otago, cruising near the test site in a protest gesture.

No Celebration At Trinity Site

TRINITY SITE, N.M. (UPI) — The 28th anniversary of the detonation of the first atomic bomb — an event which scientists said would "change the whole course of human history" — will pass almost unnoticed today.

Trinity Site, located deep in the southern New Mexico desert near Alamogordo, holds little evidence today of the event July 16, 1945, that sent the world into the nuclear age.

Bunkers and buildings built for the test of the atomic bomb have crumbled into the desert. Ground zero is now only a shallow depression in the desert floor.

Tiny pieces of "tintite," sand melted into a greenish-colored glass by the explosion's heat, still can be found around the area.

Surrounding a single stone marker at the point the bomb impacted is a cyclone fence that holds a weathered sign reading simple: "Trinity Site".

On the monument is a plaque that reads: "Trinity Site, where the world's first nuclear device was exploded on July 16, 1945."

The bomb was dropped from a 100-foot steel tower at 5:30 a.m. and, at the moment of detonation, a light brighter than the midday sun covered the surrounding mountains.

Then came the shock wave that rippled the earth 30 miles away. It was followed by a deafening roar. The blast was seen hundreds of miles away in all corners of the state and in El Paso, Tex., to the south.

Three weeks later, on Aug. 6, the second atom bomb was dropped on Hiroshima. Three days after that the third fell on Nagasaki.

Man's destiny had been set on a new course. Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, who died in 1967, had been given the task of building the bomb. Out of that assignment a new city was born — Los Alamos — with the first years of French officials in Tahiti and Paris, however, did not indicate when the first blast might come at the Mururoa atoll test site 720 miles southeast of Papeete.

Australia, New Zealand, Japan and several other countries oppose the tests on grounds radioactive fallout may endanger their populations. Roman Catholic bishops in France also oppose the tests. France has ignored their protests.

French planes and helicopters have stepped up their activities in the Mururoa zone, according to newsmen aboard the New Zealand warship Otago, cruising near the test site in a protest gesture.

Officials said they adopted the new countdown schedule because of the proven reliability of the Saturn launchers, the rockets that almost flawlessly boosted men toward the moon. The astronauts won't take part in the dress rehearsal for the first time, too, because of the Saturn IB's good record.

Artesia Reports Studied

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A House subcommittee says Welfare Commissioner Raymond Vowell was urged to investigate reports of abuse of students at the Artesia Hall Youth Camp three months before a girl died from swallowing rat poison.

Vowell, in a reply read into the records of the House Subcommittee on Public Welfare Saturday, said he told concerned parties on Aug. 23, 1972, that "everything possible" would be done to protect the students, but no investigation was conducted.

A 17-year-old Houston girl died when she did not receive treatment for rat poisoning.

Her death was three months after an exchange of letters between Vowell and Charles Wakefield of Stafford, Tex., who requested an investigation after reading Houston newspaper reports of discipline abuse at the school in Liberty County.

Vowell, in his response to Wakefield, said, "Our institutional licensing worker currently visits Artesia Hall on a regular basis and we find that this institution continues to comply with minimum licensing standards by the state."

"We appreciate very much your interest and concern, and you have our assurance we will do everything possible to protect the well-being of children."

Dr. Joseph P. Farrar, director of Artesia Hall, was indicted for murder for allegedly withholding medical treatment from the girl after she swallowed the poison.

A welfare official testified he checked the facilities after the indictment and learned that improper disciplinary action had been used at the school for 15 months.

James W. Rowell, director of the field state for the Welfare Department, told lawmakers Saturday he did not recall Vowell's reply to Wakefield, although the commissioner's letter indicated Rowell was sent a carbon copy.

Legislators asked Rowell about a Sept. 2, 1971, meeting of Welfare Department officials where a caseworker's report was disregarded and an outside psychiatrist hired to investigate the school. That report was later used in a decision to license the school Nov. 19, 1971.

Kids won't be fooled by attempt to buy love

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: We have two grandchildren whose other grandparents have taught them that grandparents always bring presents!

When we go to visit them, they run to greet us with open hands, asking: "What did you bring us?"

And when they come to our home, they keep waiting for us to bring out some special gifts for them because their other grandparents always have something for them. When they came here last Sunday, before they were inside the door they asked: "What do you have for us?"

I replied: "What did you bring for us?" That stopped them cold!

Abby, we don't want to buy their love, but now that they have been spoiled by their other grandparents we don't want to suffer by comparison. I spoke to the other grandmother about this, and she said: "Giving presents is a grandparent's pleasure."

So what's the answer? FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Children are smarter than you think they are. Spending time with them, and showing honest affection and genuine interest will net you more love in return than a carload of presents. Continue to follow your own philosophy, and let the other grandparents follow theirs.

DEAR ABBY: "Grandma's" letter struck a familiar chord with me. It isn't thanks we want from our grandchildren when we buy them gifts, it's an expression of love. To be totally ignored is to be deeply hurt.

We give them presents because we love them. When one grows old, every phone call and note is doubly appreciated.

Our children try to make excuses for their children. They say: "The grandchildren are too busy to write or call."

We notice, however, they are never too busy to cash our check as soon as it arrives.

GRANDMA IN THE SAME BOAT

DEAR GRANDMA: Judging from my mail, that's a large boat you're in.

DEAR ABBY: How would you answer a 4-year-old, born out of wedlock, when she asks, "Why don't I have a daddy?" STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: Tell her everyone has a daddy, but not all daddies live with their families, and hers does not.

No need to go into explanations. At her age, she wouldn't understand anyway. Just answer all questions as they arise, one at a time—and honestly.

DEAR ABBY: My mother in law seems to think that she should sit next to her son in the car when the three of us ride together.

As my husband holds the door open for us, out of respect for his mother, I let her enter ahead of me, which puts her next to my husband.

I think my place is next to him. What do you think? BOILING IN BALTIMORE

DEAR BOILING: I think you're wasting a lot of energy over a trivial matter. Quit boiling, simmer down, get next to yourself, and skip it.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90009. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90009.

Women of 1973

Honor where honor is due

By HELEN HENNESSY
NEA Women's Editor

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — For a long time Lenore Hershey, managing editor of the Ladies' Home Journal wanted to run a contest in the magazine that would prove the wide interest which exists today in the achievements of women.

Her hopes were realized at last in the national television special broadcast May 14 from the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts for "Women of the Year — 1973."

A full-page ballot in the February issue of the magazine drew 40,000 responses. So there was public interest. But money mattered, too. LHJ approached Clair to sponsor the hour-long special because of that company's well-known policy of supporting women's interests. It was this firm that instituted the Teen-Age Leadership Program, a 10-week course designed to enhance self-esteem of 13-to-17-year-old girls from poverty backgrounds. It also established the Women's Leadership Council, coalitions of outstanding women in various cities who work together to solve community problems. And it proudly sponsored this event, too.

Women have long fought for recognition. Some have had to fight in today's strident militant movement for the right to be proud of being mothers and homemakers. Others have had to cope with the many who feel a woman's place is in the home whether she could do a better job somewhere else or not. Human rights have been sabotaged by selfishness and the recognition accorded the Women of Achievement-1973 should be the beginning of the end of all such nonsense.

A prestigious jury selected the women to be honored. And the awards were presented by a spectacular group of women including Former First Lady Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower and Sen. Margaret Chase Smith. Over 1,000 attended the awards program hosted by Rosalind Russell, gorgeous in a glittering Galanos, and were offered good entertainment by such talents as Renee Taylor, Joseph Bologna, Sandy Duncan, Jack Klugman, Marlo Thomas, Helen Reddy, Cloris Leachman and Tony Randall.

But most important were the award winners and the categories of achievement for which they were honored. They were: Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm for Public Affairs; Actress Helen Hayes for Arts and Humanities; Washington Post President Katharine Graham for Economy and Business; Dr. Virginia Apgar for Science and Research; black consciousness poet Nikki Giovanni for Youth Leadership; Ellen Sulzberger

Strauss, founder of the Call For Action radio "hot line" for Volunteer Action; national beautification advocate and supporter of medical research Mary Lasker for Quality of Life and active member of the Commanche Indian Tribe, LaDonna Harris for Human Rights.

Washington truly turned out for the event from Henry Kissinger to Sen. and Mrs. Edmund Muskie, Eunice Kennedy Shriver, other dignitaries and the Washington press corps en masse.

It was a great night for women — long overdue — and it was a lot of fun. But members of the out-of-town press were staying at Watergate and so ensued the peris-of-Pauline. You know how difficult it seems to be to stay out of trouble there.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JULY 17

Your birthday today: Action comes more readily than planning this year, may bring unanticipated side effects. Material well-being improves while pleasure-seeking is squeezed out. Extra time is needed for consolidating gains, shoring up weaknesses. Today's natives have a propensity for visionary idealism, and the ability to analyze situations.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Act alone on behalf of those you cherish. What you do is to the point; it's unlikely people too close to the issues will understand.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: You may have to choose between home affairs and business. Being patient is not easy, but it is essential.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Many preparations, with little time for doing them, insures enough work for you—it can be real fun!

Cancer [June 21-July 21]: The day goes well, pretty much as expected, the later hours shift to different tracks, subtle benefits.

Leo [July 22-Aug. 22]: Your way of doing things comes into question, possible criticism—you must conform with existing situations.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Cooperation lags, so you carry more than your share of most activities. Complaint would make things worse—don't.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Events sweep you along. Emphasis builds on the coming weekend's possibilities. You'll have to back up whatever you say.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Difficult adjustments are achieved today with just a little more effort than normal, and a bit of extra time.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Movement, exchanges, distribution are the keywords applying to most of today's activities.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: An early start is one thing; an orderly beginning free from haste is something better.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Differences of viewpoint come into the open, particularly where the progress and problems of younger people are concerned.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Continue your projects quietly, as far from public view as conditions permit. Sentiment will get you nowhere right now.

You are invited . . . to good times, good food

. . . in your own backyard with an outdoor gas grill and gas light. You can cook up a party at a moment's notice, because a gas grill is ready to cook in minutes. And it's so easy to cook on because you can control the heat. With a gas grill there's no charcoal mess, and you still get that delicious, outdoor char-broiled flavor that comes from the smoke of meat juices dripping on permanent ceramic briquets.

Besides the good times you'll have cooking out, you enjoy the convenience of having a gas grill. You'll probably find yourself cooking on it just because you wanted to get out of the kitchen or didn't want to mess up the broiler of your kitchen range.

Turquoise Takes Special Care

By JOAN CROSBY

LOS ANGELES—(NEA)—It's not that Indian jewelry has taken such a sharp increase in value, says Jon Mondale, who is a co-owner of Hiatt's Indian Crafts in San Juan Capistrano.

"Indian jewelry has always been fairly expensive," he says. "But look how prices on everything have increased over the last quarter of a century."

True, a good Navajo squash blossom necklace made of heavy silver and with some turquoise, cost $50 some 20 years ago. And $50 then would be a lot more in today's devalued dollars.

But the point Mondale was making is that people have been investing in Indian jewelry for years. Yet, now that it's a rage, many are spending a lot of money on it, with absolutely no idea of how to care for it.

Turquoise is a very porous stone and exposure to oily skin, detergents, perfumes and hair sprays can change the color. Remove turquoise rings when washing your hands. Put the jewelry on after you have used all the sprays necessary to keep body and soul together.

Mary Rhotan, who with her husband, Speed, owns the Turquoise Kiv in Cave Creek, Ariz., says she only uses a polishing cloth on her silver. "I never use a kitchen silver polish and toothbrush, because you can never get all the polish out of the designs."

Some women, like Jill St. John (who has been collecting the jewelry for years and, recently, selling it), say they like the jewelry better when it gets a bit of tarnish on it.

That however, can cause a problem, since the tarnish on a necklace can transfer to a dress. Beverly Hale, who with her husband, Joseph (a cartoonist for Walt Disney Productions), owns Two Moons in Burbank (Ann-Margret and Jonathan Winters are among their clients), has a trick.

The soft touch in cleaning Indian jewelry, in this case a silver concho belt, is demonstrated by Beverly Hale of Two Moons.

"I take a clear acrylic spray and spray it on the back of the necklace. But be very careful that no turquoise is exposed. It will eventually wear off, but meanwhile, it does protect your clothes."

Stories have been floating around that if you want to test turquoise, you either hold a lighted match to it or you rest a hot pin on the surface. Both procedures are very dangerous and can easily do damage to even the very best grade of turquoise.

The idea of the heat, of course, is to reveal plastic. But no reputable dealer will allow a customer to so treat his turquoise. So if you ask to try this and get a refusal, it still doesn't mean the turquoise is not genuine.

"Generally, if the necklace or bracelet or pin is of heavy silver and the craftsmanship is good," Beverly Hale says, "the turquoise will be of top-grade."

There is treated turquoise on the market, lacking in a brilliant color, which is dyed under pressure. Then there is reprocessed, which is low grade.

Mary Rhotan says she rents the discounting of Indian jewelry, as some stores are beginning to do in Arizona and California. Generally it is not a quality product.

While experts can look at a piece of turquoise and tell you what mine it came from, and while some old-timers can even tell you the year it was mined by the color, most people can still detect good turquoise by the look of it. Color should be deep—either green or blue, but deep. Some stones have a matrix (pieces of the mother stone which houses the blue gem), and a good matrix design can enhance the value of the stone.

In a well-made necklace, craftsmanship and design are apparent. So also is the matching of the stones. If a piece of jewelry has weak-colored stones, or stones that range from pale to dark, avoid it.

Silver, as it is mined, doesn't look like silver as we know it. The literal translation of the Navajo word for it is "white metal."

Silver in its natural state is dipped in sulphuric acid, then in hepar (a sulphur compound), which turns it a gunmetal blue. Then it is given a good buff. But some silver from the post-World War II era did not get the second dip and, as a result, it doesn't oxidize. But it is still good silver.

Where will the Indian jewelry fad end? Some pessimists say by December it will have reached its peak and then will begin a slide down. Some say, today, to meet the demand for the product, the Indians are rushing and turning out shoddy jobs.

But the more optimistic dealers say the true Indian jewelry collector will always be with us—just as he has been in the past. And the odds are, he will know how to care for this very beautiful and truly native craft.

DAVID AGAINST GOLIATH?

Switzerland Facing Oil Battles

By NORRIS WILLIOTT
London Financial Times - UPI

LUGANO, Switzerland—The signing of the agreement between the major oil producing and consuming countries, affording the former an increase of almost 12 per cent in prices to compensate for the devaluation of the dollar, has been followed by increases in the posted price for gasoline in Britain, the United States and Italy, for example.

But in Switzerland, a similar move has been blocked by the Office of Price Control.

Leo Schurmann, head of the office, thus has cast himself in the role of a David challenging the Goliath of the major international oil companies. It is a fascinating confrontation, especially since Switzerland consumes about 80 per cent of all its energy in the form of imported oil, but accounts for only a few percentage points of its total world consumption.

Nevertheless, Schurmann has rolled back the increase of two to three centimes per quart posted at service stations all over the country at the end of May and the beginning of June on the grounds that it was unjustified.

The Swiss are now waiting to see whether Schurmann can make his ruling stick. The powerful interests with which he has chosen to do battle may not give in without a fight. In fact, they can legitimately seek recourse with the Federal Department of the Public Economy or the Federal Tribunal, which acts as a high court of appeal.

Some of the majors are reported to be considering such procedure.

Meanwhile, Swiss motorists and foreigners visiting the country will benefit from the stabilized price, which seems likely to prevail at least until the oil companies can exhaust their appeal procedure.

Probably more American states have names of Indian origin than any other source.

The Almanac

By United Press International
Today is Monday, July 16, the 197th day of 1973 with 168 to follow.

The moon is between its full phase and last quarter.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Cancer.

Mary Baker Eddy, founder of the Christian Science Church, was born July 16, 1821.

On this day in history: In 1790, Congress designated the District of Columbia as permanent seat of the United States government.

In 1862, by an act of Congress, David Farragut became the first American admiral.

In 1945, the first test of the atomic bomb was conducted in New Mexico.

In 1969, three American astronauts headed for the moon aboard Apollo 11.

A thought for the day: Christian Science pioneer Mary Baker Eddy said, "Divine love always has met and always will meet every human need."

1040 U.S. Individual Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. How does a taxpayer take the IRS to Tax Court if he disagrees with the results of an audit?

A. If, after an audit, the IRS proposes an increase in your tax, you may receive a statutory notice of deficiency. This notice, commonly called a "90-day letter," is sent to you upon request (if you wish to begin litigation immediately) or if you fail to use the IRS appeals procedure.

If you disagree with the proposed increase shown, and want to file suit, you may appeal to the U.S. Tax Court by filing a petition with the Clerk of the Court, Box 70, Washington, D.C. 20044. You have an absolute deadline of 90 days from the date the notice was mailed to you to petition, 150 days if the notice was addressed to you outside the United States. All the necessary forms and information on court procedures are available by writing the Clerk.

If you wish to dispute a tax deficiency of $1,000 or less and you want to employ a simplified and less formal procedure, you may request that your case be handled under the small tax case procedure of Tax Court. Just file the original and two copies of the petition form for small tax cases, Form a-S (available from the Clerk), together with your copies of notice of deficiency and a fee of $10. The same deadlines apply. You have 104 cities to choose from as the place for your hearing. This hearing is conducted informally. You can appear without a legal representative if you want to.

Instead of petitioning the Tax Court, you may pay the additional tax and file a claim for refund with the IRS. If the claim is disallowed or is not acted on within 6 months, you may file suit in a Federal District Court or U.S. Court of Claims.

Q. I just started working as a waiter. When do I have to report tips to my employer for withholding purposes?

A. You must give your employer a written report on or before the 10th day after the end of each month in which you received cash tips of $20 or more while working for him. You may use Form 4070, Employee's Report on Tips, for this purpose. It's available at IRS offices.

Q. I have a revolving charge account at a local department store. If I don't pay in full within 30 days, I must pay a "finance charge" based on the unpaid balance of my account at the beginning of the month. Is this charge deductible?

A. Yes. Finance charges added to revolving charge accounts solely for the privilege of deferring payment are deductible as interest.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Heed Hardy's butcher dilemma re food psychology? Remember, our food likes are dependent chiefly on our early childhood training. Dog meat nauseates Americans, though is a delicacy in the Philippines. But over there, they retch at eating rabbits!

CASE X-561: Hardy G., aged 32, is a successful butcher. "Dr. Crane," he began, "our wiener business is threatened by psychology!"

"For the United States Department of Agriculture has been under a lot of public pressure.

"By-products have not been allowed in all-meat hot dogs. "But they have been permitted, along with cereals and dried milk, in the plain type of wieners.

"Some faddists are now trying to prevent the use of animal by-products, such as lips, snouts and spleens. "But isn't it chiefly psychology that determines whether a food is appetizing or otherwise?"

MEAT "FEELING TONE"

Yes; what advertisers call "feeling tone" is a matter of habit.

Americans usually abhor the idea of eating dogs.

But they have long been a delicacy in the Philippine Islands.

One of my sisters was married to a Methodist clergyman who was stationed over there.

And whenever they saw a native sauntering out of the village, with a few dogs following him, they realized a family feast on dog meat was soon to occur up in the hills.

But the Philippine people were horrified at our dining on rabbits.

"We'd rather eat rats," they exclaimed, in horror.

Many native people in lands not as lush as the U.S.A. also dine on ants and worms.

When my wife first encountered shrimp at a fancy New York night club, she was nauseated by them.

For they reminded her of the fat white grub worms she and her father had used as fish bait back in the Midwest.

On Page 551, of my college textbook "Psychology Applied," I mention that a fly in adult, though it has little adverse effect on a child. Why? Because adults associate flies with filth and germs!

On Page 552, I list these 5 meats and ask the college students to list their order of preference if they HAD to dine on them:

- (a) Dog (1) _____
- (b) Cat (2) _____
- (c) Horse (3) _____
- (d) Snake (4) _____
- (e) Monkey (5) _____

You readers might try that little test and then compare your choices with those of college students, as appended below.

Also, if you faced 2 bowls of soup, one of which contained a housefly and the other a honeybee, which would you prefer to consume, if you were forced to make a choice.

The honeybee won, as per our college polls.

A couple of years ago, Col. John Vann took my Congressman son, Dr. Philip Crane, up into the mountainous Viet Cong area of South Vietnam, to give him a native feast.

Philip said the raw meat was almost black with a cloud of flies!

And when he almost retched, Col. Vann said, "Cheer up, Phil, they pour boiling water over the meat and vegetables, so that will sterilize it."

But when time came to eat, the fat proprietress jerked a pair of chop sticks away from an old man who had been using them, and gave them to Philip, without washing them or even wiping them off with a napkin! Ugh!

Answer (1) Horse; (2) Dog; (3) Monkey; (4) Cat; (5) Snake.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Bldg., Mellett, Indiana 47624. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of our booklets.)

What Do We Have Here?

Backing off a bit, a young San Franciscan suddenly has the happy answer — recognizable scenes of his native city decorating a new sculptured fountain. Already a landmark, the fountain is the work of many artists, all under 14. Under the direction of sculptor Ruth Asawa, dozens of schoolchildren created thousands of bas-relief scenes of San Francisco. Some can be a bit of a challenge to figure out, but others are as clear as traffic on the Golden Gate Bridge, below. (Photos by John Arms)

Moving American style or, Pity the white-collar nomads

By HELEN HENNESSY
NEA Women's Editor
NEW YORK — (NEA) — "Even if you moved every two years or so because of your husband's career, there's a terrible feeling of uncertainty at some point in the process of being relocated," is the way one corporate wife summed up her feelings.

In 14 years of marriage she and her husband moved nine times until he switched employers. Today they and their two sons are settled into a northern New Jersey suburb where they have lived for a record three years.

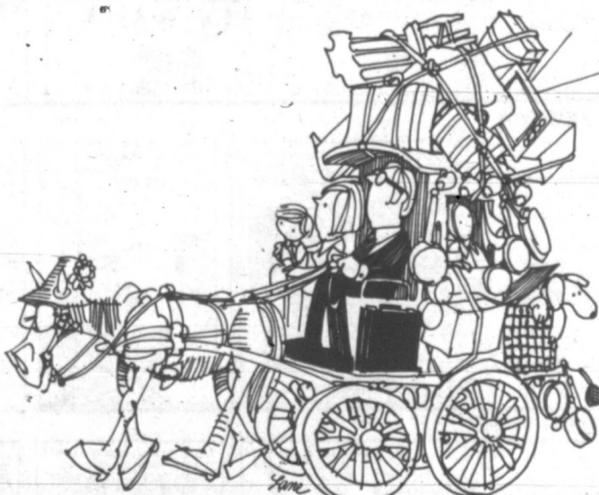

"You can deal with all the details of the move, which luckily will take your mind off the reality of what moving per se means to each of you, but eventually you have to face reality. What about schools in the new location? Will there be a Little League within walking distance of your new home so you aren't trapped into being a chauffeur mother? Is there a chapter of the League of Women Voters or the American Association of University Women — instant sources of friends? These are all big, real questions and until they're all answered and neatly in place you find yourself feeling very uncertain about life in general."

Each year, according to the U. S. Census Bureau, some 10 million American families change residences. Of these more than a million families move from one city to another because the head of household is transferred by his company to a more responsible position. American industry spends more than $1 billion a year to transfer key personnel. And in some cases corporations face hidden costs far exceeding the reimbursement of moving expenses when transferees encounter real estate problems.

These hidden costs can arise from employe dissatisfaction, distraction, refusal to transfer or even occasional resignations to escape a change. The forced sale of one home and purchase of another are matters not to be taken lightly.

Even under the most favorable circumstances, a transferred family can also face a substantial financial loss if their previous residence fails to sell quickly. Adding to these traumatic factors is the possibility of having to "carry two mortgages at the same time."

At least a partial solution to these problems exists today — through members of Inter-City Relocation Service. Ten leading real estate brokers serving 50 key residential markets in the U. S. organized the not-for-profit ICRS in 1960. They recognized the need for a coordinated, personalized relocation service that would help solve transferees' housing problems in both the old and new community — and at no obligation or cost to the transferee. Today, there are more than 600 members serving more than 6,000 cities and towns in the United States and abroad. Here's how it works.

An executive who is being transferred lists his present home with an ICRS member firm in his old community. As a leading broker in the community, this realtor is familiar with fair market value and general real estate trends and can promptly merchandise and sell the transferee's residence.

When the Inter-City member lists a transferee's home for sale, he obtains information on his client's preferences — whether the home must be new or old, size of family, number of bedrooms and bathrooms, special features desired, the kind and amount of furniture the family owns, type of neighborhood sought, church and school requirements, etc. These details are referred immediately to an Inter-City member in the destination community.

When the member at destination receives a referral, he is obligated to telephone the incoming client within 24 hours and establish contact. He then surveys available homes and matches the transferee's descriptions and photos of suitable properties to send to the family that intends the move together with key information about the new community. This not only provides the prospective residents a preliminary look at suitable homes but gives them a feeling of knowing someone in that community.

When they are ready to visit their destination and inspect homes, the ICRS member in that area will serve as their guide.

An official of Thorsen Realtors, ICRS member in LaGrange, a western suburb of Chicago, recalled one such incident, where a transferee bought a home in a day or two on his first visit to a new community.

"A friend of mine who works for one of the major airlines and lived in Wilmette told me he was about to be transferred to Washington, D.C. We referred him to Hicks Realty, a member in Alexandria, Va. He and his family flew there on a Saturday morning and by Sunday afternoon they had bought a house in Alexandria." At the same time the Thorsen official referred the executive to another Inter-City member which listed his Wilmette residence, near Chicago, for sale.

"Within a week, the Wilmette house was sold," Burnett said. "We were able to work out closing dates for both transactions so there was no need for interim financing. From the time they knew they were going to move until they had bought and made a sale, only 12 days had elapsed."

Owen E. Hall, president of ICRS and a Birmingham, Mich., Realtor, acknowledged that both ends of a transaction are seldom concluded that rapidly. "But the incident does illustrate how members can help clients at both ends."

In the 12 years in which Inter-City has been in existence, there have been many occasions on which broker members have helped solve unusual problems in the course of handling thousands of more routine transactions.

One realtor found the perfect house for a transferred family that had only one specific problem: their horse. Their new home has four bedrooms, two and a half baths, a double garage — and a much-needed pasture.

Sounds as though the white-collar nomad has finally found a friend.

PUB KEEPERS ANNOYED
YORK, England (UPI) — Pub keepers are annoyed because the York Arts Festival flew in Kevin O' Mahoney, 51, an Irishman, to play the role of a drunk in the opera Katya Kabanova.

Festival director Gavin Henderson contended that York men who auditioned for the role did not look drunk enough. But pub keepers, Vincent Coulson who is president of Britain's Licensed Victuallers Association, disagreed.

"It's ridiculous to say they couldn't find anyone in York to be a drunkard," he said.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The Boy Scouts of America were incorporated Feb. 8, 1910, following a visit to England by William D. Boyce, a Chicago publisher. The World Almanac recalls. In England Boyce met Sir Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the Scouting movement, and was inspired to bring the idea to the U.S. Today there are about 5,000,000 boys and about 1,600,000 adult leaders in the Boy Scouts of America.

FRANK BEARD wonders where he has gone wrong.

Beard has himself, game together again

By Ira Berkow

Second of two related articles.

NEW YORK — (NEA) — After a year-and-a-half of a slump so horrible he felt he was on the brink of death ("melodramatic but true"), Frank Beard sees a rainbow at the end of the fairway.

The allusion to death was in psychological terms, says Beard, and the erosion of his golf game attacked his pride, attacked his masculinity and attacked notions of his own infallibility.

"Nothing in my life had prepared me for bad times," said Beard, as he walked, talked, tossed grass into the air to measure the wind, and whacked a number of handsome shots in the Amana pro golf tournament at Iowa City recently. "My whole career had been straight up. I didn't know how to cope with it. I never built up an immunity to disaster."

In 11 years on the professional golf tour, the 34-year-old Beard had become one of the finest players and a money-winner to rank alongside Palmer, Nicklaus, Trevino, Casper and Player. In 1969, he led all golfers with earnings of $175,224. But in 1972 he was the 40th on the money-winners list, his worst finish since his first full year on the tour, in 1963.

He had begun to experiment with hitting the ball straight instead of hooking it, as he had always done. One bad round led to another. He soon repaired the mechanical aspect of his game but now his confidence was ebbing.

"I began to fear," he said. "Once, I just approached the ball and knew I would hit it right. Now, I began to ask myself, 'Can I do it?' A champion never asks himself that question. It's paralyzing."

"I began to fear playing bad, feared what people might say. But I wouldn't admit fear, and so I kept on, with my confidence devastated. I was like a dope addict or an alcoholic. I couldn't belly up to my problem."

"Maybe the most important reason I wouldn't face it was that it attacked my manhood. Me, afraid? No! Can't be."

Beard had been an outstanding athlete all his life, and had once even considered professional baseball as a career. His brother, Ralph, was an all-American basketball player. His father, though, was a teaching pro and both saw greater financial possibilities in golf. Everything, until recently, had gone according to form.

Like many athletes, Beard had defined himself in terms of athletic success. Shoot below par, you are a good and worthy human being. Mess up on the putting green and you're a worm.

"It was syndrome of you seeing yourself and others seeing you for what you did instead of for what you are," said Beard.

"That hurts, but it's true. When I began to play lousy the phone stopped ringing as much as it used to. But there were a few friends who stayed with me, who asked my wife and me to dinner not because I was Frank Beard the Golfer, but because we were 'the Beards' and they enjoyed our company."

"Until I came to the realization — and it was a gradual thing — that golf is not the most important thing in my life, that there are other things to live for, until then I thought I was really on the brink of death — if I hadn't already died and just nobody had informed me."

Beard says he has gone through what for him are drastic changes. On the outside, his brown but graying hair is longer, his pants are slightly bell-bottomed, his shirts are blue, red, green and not always white as they once were. "I may still be drab to most people, but to me this is practically going to hell," he said.

And inside, the changes are manifold. For one, he says, "I'm not chasing the buck the way I used to. Once, if I went home supposedly to relax instead of going to a tournament, I'd be reading the papers and saying, 'There's $150,000 in prize money and I'm not going to get any of it.' And when I'd read who won, I'd say, 'I could have beaten his butt.' I might as well have been at the tournament. Now, I still follow the tournament when I'm home but I don't agonize as much. I spend that time enjoying my family."

He has recently gone on another of his many diets. "I figured if I can't control myself at the table how could I expect to control myself on the golf course," he said. The 6-foot Beard went from 205 pounds to 180. The intelligent, solidly good-looking face with wire-rimmed glasses is not as round as previously.

"The confidence and stroke are just about back completely," said Beard. He said this shortly after he had finished ninth at the Firestone. "It was about 20 spots higher than I had been finishing."

"But I never gave up the faith," he continued. "It never occurred to me that I wouldn't play well tomorrow. And I did have a few good rounds that kept my hopes up — and also contributed to my letdowns."

"I look back on all this and I don't believe it was the best year-and-a-half of my life," said Beard. "It attacked my manhood but it made me more of a man."

Deane Beman Wins Robinson Classic

ROBINSON, III. (UPI) — Deane Beman was happy to pick up the $25,000 first prize money in the $125,000 Shrine Robinson Open Golf Classic, but he was even more pleased that he put his game together again.

"I played very solid golf," said the 35-year-old Bethesda, Md., title winner after his victory Sunday. "I drove the ball very well and the way I am playing now you can put me on any golf course in the country and I can play it."

Beman, with rounds of 69-68-67, had a total of 13-under-par 271 on the par-71, 6,556-yard Crawford County Country Club course to win by one stroke over Bunky Henry and Bob Dickson, each of whom picked up $11,562.

Chuck Courtney was alone in fourth with 273 for $5,875 while Larry Hinson was fifth with a 274 and earned $5,125. A tie for sixth at 275 gave George Archer and Andy North $4,250 each.

A birdie that Beman scored on the 68th hole proved the deciding stroke and kept the tourney from going into overtime for the fifth consecutive year. The last four Classics were settled by sudden death play, a PGA record. Beman, whose last victory came in the 1972 Quad-Cities Open following a 1969 win in the Texas Open and the 1970 Milwaukee Open, gave a large share of credit in his victory to a friend, Carl Lohran, golf pro at the Glenhead North Shore Country Club in Long Island.

"He helped straighten out my game," Beman said. First money brought the former U.S. amateur champion's career earnings to $364,067.

Craig Morton Facing Fines

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (UPI) — Veteran quarterback Craig Morton, who arrived at the Dallas-Cowboys training camp early but walked out in a salary dispute, faces daily fines if he doesn't report with the rest of the team's veterans tonight.

Morton, who has battled Roger Staubach for the starting position the last two years, says he wants to change some of the incentive clauses in his present contract for a higher basic salary. He said he is prepared to quit football if the team does not meet his requests.

A team spokesman said Cowboys president Tex Schramm did not talk with Morton Sunday, and that the team was not trying to trade the former University of California quarterback.

Last year's starting Dallas center, Dave Manders, also is not in camp because of a contract dispute.

Dallas rookies scrimmaged the Los Angeles Rams' rookies during the weekend.

Weiskopf Doesn't Have To Praise His Talents

TRON, Scotland (UPI) — "I won't consider myself a great player until I've won a major tournament," said Tom Weiskopf.

dismissed his own achievement as of almost no importance.

"This has been Tom Weiskopf's tournament," said Nicklaus, whose last round brilliance pulled him into fourth spot at eight-under-par 280.

"Weiskopf has more natural talent, more shots, than anybody playing here," said Nicklaus.

Nicklaus's golden words were echoed by Lee Trevino, British Open champion in 1971 and 1972, whose bid for first-in-a-row ended with a one-over-par 289—13 strokes behind Weiskopf.

The merry Trevino, whose quipping and merriment diminished after a disastrous first round of 75 showed his game would not match his pretourney confidence, said: "Tom Weiskopf is a very good player. He's just beginning to realize how good a player he is."

Johnny Miller—who tied for second place with veteran Briton Neil Coles after a great battle with Weiskopf, said: "Tom played well today."

Bears Lose 3

RENSSALAER, Ind. (UPI) — Three players on the Chicago Bears—Jim Cadlie, Steve DeLong and Ross Brubaker—are retiring from pro football, club owner George Halas announced Sunday at the team's training camp.

Cadlie, 33, is an 11-year Bears' veteran, mostly an offensive guard, and one of only two team members of the 1963 National Football League championship team. DeLong, 30, a defensive end, came to the Bears last year in a trade with the San Diego Chargers.

Ryan, a fireballing 26-year-old righthander from Alvin, Tex., struck out 12 of the first 14 batters he retired as the California Angels blanked the Tigers, 6-0. Ryan finished with 17 strikeouts—the most ever in a no-hit game—before a Cap Day crowd of 41,411 in Detroit. Ryan walked four batters.

Johnny Vander Meer, who pitched consecutive no-hitters with Cincinnati in 1938, Allie Reynolds of the Yankees in 1951, and Virgil Trucks of Detroit in 1952 were the previous pitchers in major league history to throw two no-hitters in the same season. Jim Maloney of Cincinnati threw 10 innings of hitless ball but lost, 1-0, on a home run in the 11th inning in 1965. He came back later that year with a 10-inning no-hitter which he won.

The victory broke a four-game California losing streak and snapped a winning string of five games for the Tigers. It marked the second time this season that a no-hitter has been thrown against Detroit.

"I really wanted it," said Ryan, who rarely talks about himself. "The club needed it and I needed it."

The Angels, in third place, are 4 1/2 games behind the Oakland A's in the American League's tight Western Division scramble.

"I haven't pitched that well recently," said Ryan, who places a high premium on the club's overall success and accepts personal achievements with modesty.

Ryan, who was the major league's strikeout leader last season, has had difficulty in getting batting support from his teammates this season. The victory improved Ryan's record to 11-11 but California Manager Bobby Winkles is banking heavily on Ryan in the second half of the season to lead the Angels into the playoffs.

Nolan Ryan really wanted a no-hitter Sunday, but not for himself, for someone else.

Corny as it sounds, he wanted it for the California Angels, and they needed one more than Nolan Ryan did.

He had pitched a no-hitter against the Kansas City Royals on May 15 and when he duplicated the feat against the Detroit Tigers Sunday, Ryan became the first pitcher in 20 years to pitch two no-hitters in the same season.

Ryan, a fireballing 26-year-old righthander from Alvin, Tex., struck out 12 of the first 14 batters he retired as the California Angels blanked the Tigers, 6-0. Ryan finished with 17 strikeouts—the most ever in a no-hit game—before a Cap Day crowd of 41,411 in Detroit. Ryan walked four batters.

He is a person who believes that he has no call to interfere in anybody else's life as long as the other fellow is not endangering anybody.

But where does society fit into that scheme?

Suppose an offender really isn't harming any other person, but he is doing something that clearly harms himself and, thereby, is setting an example that, in the long run, could be attractive to other persons, could spread, with consequent damaging effects? Doesn't society have a stake in that situation? If so, what remedy does the Libertarian propose?

Well, frankly, we don't think that all Libertarians would agree on a solution. They are notoriously individualistic in the answers that they offer to the problems. We can guess that some Libertarians would say that society does not really exist; that which is called "society" is just an abstract term that describes individuals who deal with one another in varying degrees. Others might say that, even if society can be said to exist, the community or the government cannot justifiably prevent a man from damaging himself even though he is setting a bad example for others. Still a third point of view is that there is no objective way of deciding whether a man is harming himself or not. If you start out prohibiting the clear-cut cases of self-damage — such as excessive drinking, smoking, or the like — very soon you will be suppressing behavior that in later knowledge may turn out to be not harmful at all but beneficial. Many historical examples can be pointed to.

All of that is a good deal speculative. The word "exists" means different things to different persons. To some, it means a physical being, and so these would say that only individuals exist. To others the word expresses also the being of relationships, and this school of thought would say that a society also "exists." The meaningful question is on a practical level, what is the correct remedy for the type of bad example that falls short of injuring some other person?

When the question is put in such a manner, the obvious answer is that good example is the appropriate remedy for bad example. Predictably some members of "society" — which is to say some individuals — will be drawn one way and some another. Some will be injured and some bettered. As the contrast develops, all will have an improved opportunity to see which example was the wiser.

From a practical standpoint, Libertarians agree that society — however you define it — will tend to be better off when the individuals in it compete and/or cooperate rather than they interfere with one another.

That is to say, when human beings refrain from trespassing on one another's domain, society will come out all right.

Two Kinds of Store Thefts

Consumers who think high prices these days amount to robbery are closer to the truth than they may think.

Theft actually adds between 15 and 30 per cent to the cost of every article purchased in retail outlets, merchandisers estimate.

The thefts come in two forms — shoplifting and pilfering, according to Newspaper Enterprise Assn. And the latter, theft by a firm's own employees, is by far the most prevalent and costly. In one investigation of massive inventory losses in a major department store chain, old-fashioned shoplifters accounted for only 25 per cent. The rest of the chain's losses were at the hands of its own employees.

Since department stores are not organized as philanthropic institutions, the bill for thefts is not absorbed but is passed along to customers. An expert in the field, Guardsmark, Inc., a major private security service, estimates the bill, the total annual loss through employee pilfering, at a minimum $5 billion and probably close to $15 billion.

While occasional, and usually petty, pilfering is widespread, only a small percentage of employees — estimated at 7 to 8 per cent steal systematically. But these are responsible for most of the losses.

Pilfering has spurred the growth of a new industry, the professional security service which has largely replaced the local store detective in large enterprises. The services bring greater sophistication in the task — trained personnel, electronic surveillance devices, scientifically devised screening and hiring procedures — but at a cost which, since stores are not philanthropic...

It is indeed a problem, most of all for the consumer who one way or the other ends up paying for the high cost of pilfering.

I believe that anyone can conquer fear by doing the things he fears to do, provided he keeps doing them until he gets a record of successful experiences behind him. — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

Guerrillas Are Upstaged By Hanoi

By RAY CROMLEY
WASHINGTON (NEA) — A Vietnamese-speaking friend for five years a prisoner of Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese, and I had a four-hour talk a few days ago on the bitter in-fighting now going on between the VC guerrillas and forces from Hanoi.

In our minds was the belief that if disunity among the northern invaders and their southern allies was great enough, then South Vietnam has a chance of surviving as a nation.

This would lessen chances of U.S. reinvolvement and be a major step toward stability in Southeast Asia.

As my observant friend described what he heard and saw while being taken from place to place in South and North Vietnam over the years, every month it seemed the struggle between the southern VC and the Hanoi forces grew deeper. Lesser-educated and less efficient men got the promotions in the army. Better-trained, more highly educated and efficient southern Communists were passed over.

As time went on, the incoming officers and civilian cadres sent from the north grew younger — and more arrogant. These inexperienced young men made certain their southern allies knew who gave the orders and who obeyed — regardless of rank.

The territory occupied by the mainline northern troops was clearly marked. Southern Viet Cong units could not move through — they had to go around. They moved when the northerners said move and stayed put when the northerners said stop. The southerners were used in screening and assault probing actions taking the heavy casualties.

Despite talk that northern mainline troops would go underground, my friend was emphatic in his belief these foot soldiers would be ineffective as guerrillas or civilian cadres. They'd likely do more harm that good to the Communist cause.

Both the North Vietnamese and VC, however, have a major capacity for organization within the territories each holds. Their tenacity and their skilled and persistent propaganda, their active adult education programs which combine teaching and mind control, their ever-present, mutual-development projects for rebuilding the countryside, were and are effective organizing tools.

But if the VC - North Vietnamese conflict deepens, if resentment of the northerners as foreigners grows deeper among the VC, and if disdain of the southerners as inferiors continues to increase among the Hanoi invaders, then in fact there will be three "states" in South Vietnam — the South Vietnamese nation government by President Thieu, the Viet Cong lands and the southern territory controlled directly by Hanoi troops.

This is the situation now apparently developing also in Cambodia and Laos.

It may be the United States will, in the end, have enabled the South to "win" the war (in the sense that Saigon will be able to keep its independence) — and that Hanoi, finally, will lose because it did not follow Mao Tse-tung's advice and pull out of its armies.

BRUCE BIOSSAT Crisis on crisis is Nixon dilemma

By Bruce Bioassat

WASHINGTON (NEA) — In the constantly evolving speculation over President Nixon and Watergate, a current favorite is that he will be conducting a crippled presidency for more than three years if he hangs on.

Left out of the guesswork, because so difficult to gauge, is what the effect of such circumstances would be upon the President as a man.

Implicit in his evident conception of his life as a succession of crises which could be met, mastered and learned from is the idea that each one has some sort of terminal point. But a continuously hobbled presidency trying to function in an age of shattering problems is a lot graver and more taxing crisis than a Watergate which, as a thing itself, might somehow get past.

Some knowledgeable sources in Washington are painting a dark picture of how the federal establishment is working right now, and an even blacker one for the months just ahead. — I know one dedicated, talented public servant who says he is just sickened by the chaos he confronts almost daily as he tries to perform in his insistent efficient way. He loves the tough challenge, but right now he is ready to toss in the sponge.

Another who deals closely with government at high levels thinks Mr. Nixon, Watergate aside, is heading into a series of dilemmas that may make the United States seem as ungovernable as New York City has been reputed to be for years.

Most acutely obvious is the rash of shortages in farm products and the attendant food price furor they are causing. That this problem is going to get worse is a common Washington forecast. Beyond this, dispiriting general inflation seems far from any sort of effective control.

And it's being suggested that automobile gasoline, shortages, real or contrived, may be a nothing compared to the truly menacing prospect of a wintertime home fuel oil shortage — particularly in landlocked parts of the country where difficulties of transportation and distribution could aggravate the problem.

These economic hazards for the home front can't be separated, of course, from our ties with our great trading partners in Europe and Japan. They have their own stake in seeing us get onto a stronger, clearer course, and the September world trade talks will be bent toward that end.

But those talks won't get far if our foreign friends don't hear well-thought-out policy lines delivered with the unmistakable firmness of commanding White House authority. Today that authority is in just about the same short supply as soybeans.

In this town — and the word spreads fast — the White House is seen this summer as a disintegrated establishment. John Connally is yesterday's consultant. The current betting concerns how long the skilled, seasoned Melvin Laird will last.

Given all this, given a President who needs to get on top of things, the question may

Your Health Reader Losing Sense of Smell

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am a steady reader of your column and have been helped from your advice and explanations of many ailments. Now I am writing to you for help in my own problem. I have slowly lost the sense of smell. It is so bad now I cannot smell even the strongest odors — except once in a long time I can sometimes faintly smell a very strong perfume.

There isn't any trouble in breathing, as my nose is never blocked, also it's not sore. It doesn't bother me at all, except I cannot smell. The doctor told me that everything is all right and not to bother about it, but would not give me any treatment, or even advise me what I could do so I could smell. He simply laughed it off but I am worried as sometimes it is really dangerous. As I cannot tell when something is burning, or gas is escaping from the stove unless someone comes in and smells it.

I get sick sometimes, then notice the stove is turned on, but not lit, so the gas comes into the room. I live alone which makes it hard not to be able to smell these odors. Also smoke from burning food or something that's caught on fire doesn't bother me until I see it. I feel that sense of smell in my case is important to me. Could there be anything done for this loss of smelling?

What do you advise me that I may do to restore the loss?

P.S. My taste is okay and also my hearing.

Dear Reader — The loss of smell certainly can be a troublesome, even though in some instances it might have some advantages. Loss of smell may be associated with either a problem in the nose or from changes in the brain. All of our senses, including hearing, sight, smelling, taste or touch, must end up registering a signal in the brain before we are conscious of the effect. If the cells in the brain are not functioning in some way it doesn't matter if the peripheral organ, for example the eye or nose, is working normally or not.

There is no way I could tell you what's causing your difficulty or whether it could be cured. There has been precious little work done on solving the problems of loss of smell.

Unfunded OTA: Kennedy Vehicle for 1976 Run

By Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — Among Sen. Edward Kennedy's colleagues you can get almost any opinion about him personally, but on one thing there is virtual unanimity.

This is that Teddy is definitely in the 1976 presidential picture.

So far as his colleagues are concerned, he is a very probably White House aspirant — if these experienced politicians know one. They just are not buying his repeated and, to them hollow-sounding, disclaimers.

Significantly indicative of this widespread conviction among these pros is what is happening backstage on funds for the Office of Technology Assessment (OTA).

That is the little-known new federal agency Kennedy slipped through unnoticed last October in the closing rush-filled days of the 92nd Congress with no discussion and no record vote.

Avowed purpose of this creation (potentially a huge bureaucratic empire) is to "provide Congress with impartial and objective information on the whole range of technology, such as supersonic transport (SST), anti-ballistic missiles (ABM), nuclear power plants, military and economic security problems, etc., etc."

Strongly suspected by Democrats as well as Republicans is that OTA would give Kennedy a highly useful and effective instrumentality for furthering his personal political ambitions.

In other words, OTA has a dual function — to serve Congress and to serve Teddy.

Strikingly revealing of the extent and depth of this backstage belief among his colleagues is that OTA has yet to get off the ground. It exists on paper, and that's about all.

Thanks to Kennedy's sonorous assurances and facile parliamentary maneuvering in the confusion and hubbub of an adjourning Congress, the agency was authorized — but it has yet to be voted any operating funds.

Neither Kennedy nor anyone else has made a move to get an appropriation. With very good reason.

The moment such a bill surfaces it will immediately become the target of vigorous opposition. Hostile colleagues have been lying in wait for such a move for some time and are all ready to nail it.

What's wanted? Strongly suspected is that Kennedy is playing a wily waiting game — in the hope of repeating last year's successful strategy and popping up with an OTA money proposal just as Congress is winding up.

Reputed aim is a $5 million appropriation.

That would be a cozy starter to hire a $40,000-a-year director, a $38,000-a-year deputy director, set up a 12-member advisory council of scientists, engineers and other experts with a per diem at the rate of $28,000 a year, and a staff of around 50.

Reportedly slated for director is former Rep. Emilio Daddario, D-Conn., ardent Kennedyite, loudly vocal dove.

and unsuccessful candidate for governor in 1972.

There may be a way out for OTA on the seemingly stymied fund question.

This possibility is for Teddy to give up the chairmanship of the agency's 12-member governing board — consisting of six members of the Senate and six of the House, each group divided equally between Democrats and Republicans.

That came to light during a canvass by this column of these legislators.

It was pointedly suggested that, if Kennedy ceased being boss, prospects for obtaining funds for OTA would definitely be improved.

House "governors" particularly stressed that. They also went out of their way to evince sharp resentment at being "pushed around" by Kennedy staffers cockily throwing their weight around in his name. Said one veteran Congressman:

"If this is an example of the way they're going to run OTA, I don't want any part of it."

Insiders doubt Teddy will relinquish the chairmanship. Having OTA under his thumb offers too many golden opportunities for personal and political promotion and publicity.

Instead, they expect him to try to finagle operating funds in the closing hours of the session as he did last year when he slipped OTA through with virtually no one aware of it.

This strategy worked once. It may again.

Old Story

That insulting July 4 greeting Uganda's burlly dictator, Gen. Idi Amin, sent President Nixon was not unexpected.

U.S. authorities had been anticipating a hostile move by the East African blowhard. In fact, only surprise about the independence-day outburst was that it hadn't been doing anything for him lately.

Since the former British colony gained independence a decade ago, the U.S. has ladled out some $50 million in economic aid of various kinds — plus other assistance, including a large and popular Peace Corps contingent.

But the U.S. started phasing out its money and technical aid programs soon after Amin's brutal expulsion of 40,000 Asian residents and his series of explosive disputes with neighboring countries. In February, the U.S. Ambassador was recalled, and it was made plain to the beefy dictator that the envoy would not be replaced.

Amin irately resented this, and a public blast by him was expected sooner or later.

Addendum: With last week's coup d'etat in Rwanda, about two-thirds of the black African nations have had military upheavals since gaining independence. Three of Rwanda's four neighbors are now ruled by military dictators — Uganda, Zaire and Burundi.

All have received many millions in U.S. economic aid and technical assistance.

The Lighter Side

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Now that the military draft has ended, the Army and Navy are having trouble meeting their manpower goals.

Army enlistments were about 10 per cent under the June quota and the Navy fell some 40 per cent short. Which suggests that something is wrong with their recruiting programs.

I would advise them to study the techniques colleges use to recruit high school football and basketball stars.

Like the armed forces, colleges are limited as to the financial benefits they can legally offer. But the colleges have done a better job of improvising fringe inducements.

Anyone who reads the sports pages is familiar with the following type of item:

The Item

DEERHORN, Mont. — Whambo Blintzkeig, reputedly the best high school fullback in the nation last season, announced today he will enroll in Antler Tech this fall.

Asked what prompted his decision, the Sump City, N.J., star, who was sought by every major college team, pointed out that Antler Tech is noted for its excellent taxidermy department.

Although he has no plans to become a taxidermist himself, Whambo said he wanted to attend a school with a good academic, as well as athletic, reputation.

Young Blintzkeig, whose parents are on welfare, arrived on campus in a new Rothchild-Howitzer 12-cylinder sports car. Asked how a college freshman could afford a $20,000 automobile, he told reporters he got it from the "tooth fairy."

Last season, he explained, one of his bicuspidas was knocked loose. He pulled the tooth later and one night, after being visited by Coach Herb Flingnall of the Antler Tech Gomers, he put it under his pillow.

The Tooth Disappeared

When he awoke the next morning, the tooth had disappeared. In its place was a set of car keys, which luckily fit the Rothchild-Howitzer that had mysteriously appeared in his driveway during the night.

"That was when I became so impressed with the fine taxidermy department at Antler Tech," Whambo said.

End Item.

I'm not suggesting the tooth fairy would be equally generous with military recruits. But the Army obviously needs some sort of wizardry to spur enlistments.

Maybe it would help to have recruiting sergeants dress like fairy godmothers. Prospective volunteers would be given a pumpkin. Then the sergeant would wave a wand and turn it into a pair of glass PPC stripes.

At midnight, the recruit might be busted for wearing non-regulation chevrons. But by that time he would already be signed up for a three-year hitch.

Chip champ

BEAVER, Okla. (UPI) — Gov. David Hall of Oklahoma is the 1973 cowchip throwing champion in the politician's class. He threw a flat, rounded chip of cow manure 101 feet to win the event.

MOVING OUT: For the next phase of the Skylab mission, a Saturn 1B launch vehicle is transported to Complex 39-B at Kennedy Space Center, from which the second orbital space station three-man crew is scheduled to lift off July 28.

Danger in your garden

By David Hendin

There's a good chance that some of the beautiful garden plants adorning your property are poisonous.

Although the percentage of poisonous plants isn't very high, many do exist and they are so beautiful and so well known that it is hard to believe they may be lethal.

The United States Public Health Service reports that about 12,000 children eat potentially poisonous plants every year.

But just because plants or flowers may contain poison is no reason you should stop growing them — just teach your youngsters to keep them out of their mouths. And remember that adults are not above some unconscious nibbling while working or relaxing in the garden.

Plants can be tricky in that frequently one part of a plant is not only edible, but nutritious, while another part can harm or kill. Twigs of cherry trees release deadly cyanide when eaten and the leaves of peach trees contain hydrocyanic acid, one of the most dangerous poisons known.

(First in a series)

Rhubarb, whose delicious stalk is used in cooking, may be the most dangerous plant in your vegetable garden because its leaves contain oxalic acid which turns to crystals when it reaches the kidneys, and causes severe damage.

Would you have guessed that the beautiful, flowering oleander bush contains a deadly heart stimulant? Its poison is so powerful that a single leaf of oleander can kill a child. Oleander is so potent that people have died just from eating steaks that were speared with oleander sticks and roasted over a fire.

Do you have hyacinths, narcissus or daffodils around the house? Poisons from their bulbs cause nausea, vomiting and diarrhea, and may be fatal.

Lily of the Valley

Rhododendron, azalea, daphne and wisteria have leaves, stems and berries that can kill your child.

Larkspur, lily-of-the-valley, iris, sweet peas, autumn crocus and bleeding heart are a few more familiar plants which have poisonous flowers, stems, leaves, seeds, roots, berries or bulbs.

There is enough poison in a tiny packet of castor beans to kill half-a-dozen youngsters. One rosy pea seed can kill a child.

Yews, common garden evergreens, are related to the poison hemlock, and poisons abound in both its tiny leaves and colorful berries.

To prevent poisoning accidents of this nature, take the time to learn the poisonous plants in your neighborhood. You also can:

—Impress upon children never to eat any unknown garden or wild plant, herb, shrub or tree.

—Keep dangerous prunings, clippings or garden cuttings away from children and livestock.

—In case of poisoning or suspected poisoning, call your physician and be prepared to tell him the name of the plant involved.

For a copy of the 96-page book, "Save Your Child's Life," send your check for $1.25 to Child Safety, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York 10019.

No Ambassador Yet Named To Soviet Union

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite improving Soviet-American relations, the United States has had no ambassador in Moscow for more than six months and President Nixon has given no indication he will announce an appointment.

Several Soviet diplomats have said they had expected that an announcement might be made during the recent summit meeting between Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and Nixon.

But Nixon made no announcement to a successor to Ambassador Jacob D. Beam, and checks at the State Department and the White House revealed no expectation of a new ambassador being named soon.

In one sense, the absence of an ambassador in the normally important Moscow post does not present any immediately difficulties.

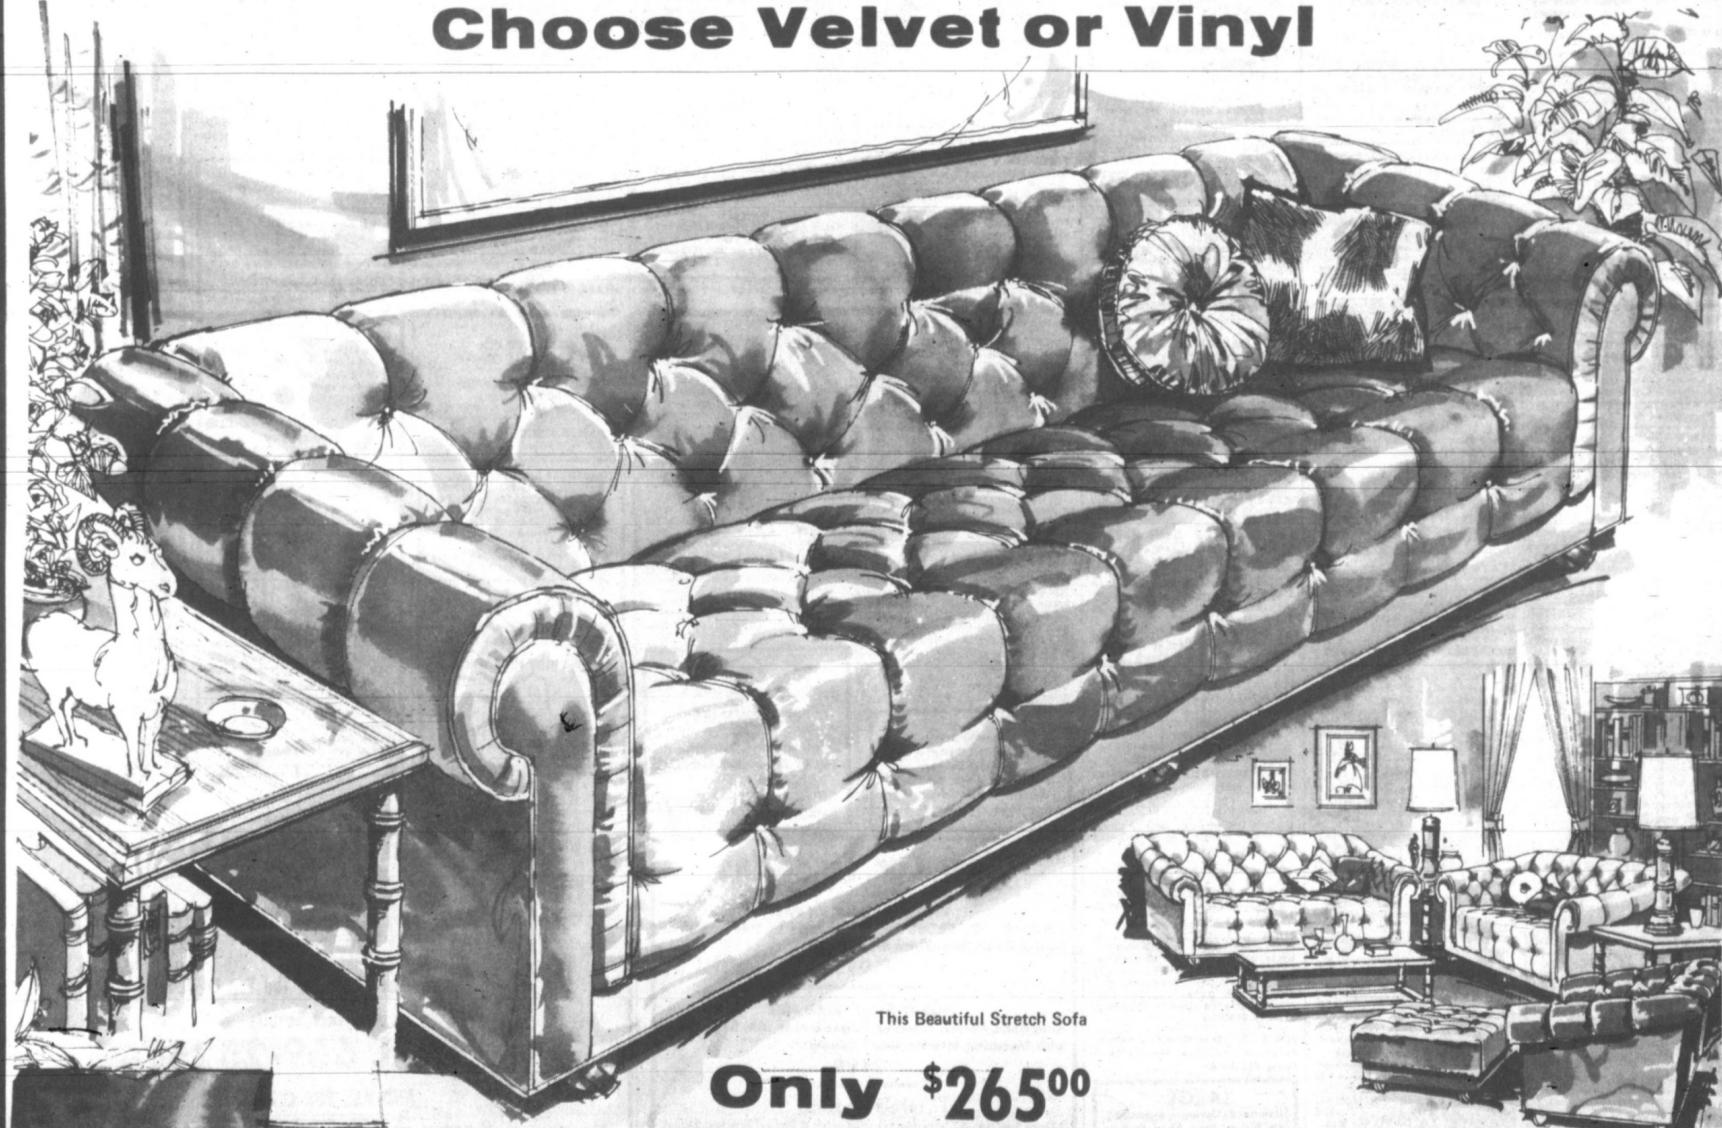

Nixon and Henry A. Kissinger, his national security affairs advisor, have preferred to depend on Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin and his deputy, Yuli M. Vironosov, as their main channel of communications with the Kremlin.

Soviet diplomats said that during the summit meetings Brezhnev decided to keep Dobrynin and his deputy in Washington for yet another year.

In the absence of an ambassador, the U.S. Embassy in Moscow is headed by Adolph Dubs, a career foreign officer.
