LaRUE TESTIFIES

Magruder Aware Of Break-In Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Frederick C. LaRue, testified today he believed that Jeb Stuart Magruder, deputy director of President Nixon's reelection campaign, knew in advance that the Watergate break-in would occur in the early morning hours of June 17, 1972.

"That would be my assumption, yes sir," LaRue replied under questioning during his second day of testimony before the Senate Watergate Committee.

During an appearance before the committee in June, Magruder left the impression that he was taken by surprise when word reached him on June 17 of the break-in and the arrest of five persons in the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate building.

LaRue, who agreed to plead guilty to a charge of conspiring to obstruct justice and is expected to testify for the prosecution at any future Watergate trials put Magruder's account in a new light.

He said Magruder received a telephone call about the break-in during breakfast in Los Angeles, he returned to the table and told LaRue that "last night was the night" for the wiretap and bugging.

Sen. Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., asked LaRue if he was under the impression Magruder had advance knowledge that the entry would take place. LaRue said he was.

LaRue said Magruder "made that statement (about 'last night') to me as an aside," without making it to other high campaign officials who were there at the same breakfast table.

In his sworn testimony before the committee, Magruder did not specifically acknowledge or deny advance knowledge of the bugging.

Magruder related being with LaRue and others at breakfast in Los Angeles when he got a telephone report on the arrests, including that of James W. McCord Jr., then security chief for the Nixon campaign organization.

"I blanched; to say the least," Magruder testified June 14.

IN DECISIONS

LaRue Implicates John N. Mitchell

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Frederick C. LaRue is the first major figure in the Nixon reelection committee and in the Watergate cover-up to plead guilty, seek mercy and offer testimony for the prosecution in the expected trials of his former associates in those enterprises.

But, peering through thick lenses at the select Senate Watergate Committee Wednesday, the Mississippi offered recollections just as imprecise as those who preceded him.

He did implicate his old friend and colleague, John N. Mitchell, more deeply than Mitchell admitted last week. And he pointed to lawyer Charles W. Colson as applying pressure from the White House staff for getting the Watergate wiretapping approved. Colson has denied that.

While LaRue was questioned the committee awaited President Nixon's response to its request for the secret White House tape recordings which would show what his closest aides were telling him through the months Nixon insists he was in the dark about his administration's involvement.

Ervin Asks for Meeting
In his letter to Nixon Tuesday, Chairman Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., asked for a meeting "within the next day or two." So far he has heard "not a word," he said Wednesday.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the request was under study. He said "not to my knowledge" when asked if anyone at the White House was reviewing the tapes. He refused to say if Nixon will continue taping conversations in his offices and over his phones.

LaRue, a social friend of Mitchell and his right hand man at the Committee to Reelect the President (CRP), told of Mitchell's reaction when, for a third time, G. Gordon Liddy's bugging plan came up for review at a strategy session March 30, 1972.

As LaRue recalled it, Mitchell said, "Well, this is not something that will have to be decided at this meeting."

Mitchell, last week, said what he said was: "This again? We don't need this. I'm tired of hearing about it. Out! Let's not discuss it any further."

And Jeb Stuart Magruder, deputy campaign manager and the only other person there, has testified that Mitchell at that meeting gave his approval to the plan—albeit "reluctantly."

Testimony involves Mitchell LaRue's testimony also involved Mitchell in the payment of $220,000 in "hush money" to assure the silence of the seven original Watergate defendants. Mitchell had said he had nothing to do with that.

LaRue disputed a suggestion by another committee member, Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, that Watergate burglary planning sessions always seemed to have occurred at sites near where President Nixon was staying.

Inouye called particular attention to a March 30, 1972, meeting attended by LaRue, Magruder and John N. Mitchell at which Magruder testified final approval was given to the plan.

The meeting was said to have taken place at Key Biscayne, Fla. LaRue said the site had no significance and President Nixon was not at his Key Biscayne compound at the time.

Inouye had asked whether it was "coincidence that the President was nearby" when the bugging plan allegedly was approved.

Baker asked LaRue if he had any impressions about whether Mitchell, on March 30 or anytime later, approved the bugging plan proposed by G. Gordon Liddy, then counsel to the campaign committee.

"The only impression that I got was that this was something that Mr. Mitchell certainly was not enthusiastic about, and was trying to terminate any discussion of it," LaRue replied.

During a recess in this morning's hearing, Samuel Dash, chief committee counsel, noted that the special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox was visiting Capitol Hill today but Dash said he did not know why.

The Cox visit could be in connection with the committee's efforts to obtain tape recordings of President Nixon's White House conversations in two of his offices. Cox is said to have submitted his own request to the White House for the tapes.

A former White House aide testified Monday that tape recordings are made of most of Nixon's conversations and telephone calls in his offices.

Dash said the committee chairman, Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., "is pretty hopeful" that the committee staff and the White House staff will meet soon to discuss release of the tapes. He said if no agreement is reached the next step would be to subpoena them.

New Phase IV Programs To Increase Food Prices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Except for beef, President Nixon's price freeze on food was lifted today and he and his chief advisers acknowledged there will be a quick and substantial rise in what it costs to feed American families.

This was the element of the new Phase IV economic plan, unveiled late Wednesday, that will be most immediately felt and Herber L. Stein, chairman of the President's economic advisory council, admitted today, "nobody is going to be very happy about what we did."

The program also includes a continuation of controls on wage increases to about 5.5 per cent and stipulates that a business firm can raise certain prices only so much as production costs increase. Besides most food, the price freeze imposed June 13 was lifted immediately on health care fees.

It was the food segment of the program that drew the greatest attention, from the President on down. In a written statement, Nixon said, "There is no way, wit or without controls, to prevent a substantial rise in food prices."

Stein echoed this today, "My personal view is that we will have a bulge over a period of some months," he said, but like Nixon he insisted the price rise would be much less in the latter part of the year and continue to level off in 1974.

"Nobody is happy" "Nobody is going to be very happy with what we did, we're sure of that," said Stein. "It is clear that the big increase in the supply of meat is about a year off because we have this fall the big increase in the crops of corn and soybeans — the things that animals eat — and it takes a year for the animals ... to come to market."

"But the whole process that we are engaged in is one of a delicate balance in our interest in restraining the prices and our interest in getting the output out."

John T. Dunlop, chairman of the Cost of Living Council, and Stein both refused to predict how much food prices would rise, although a food chain spokesman forecast a 4 to 5 per cent jump in the next two months.

The expectation is that by the time housewives do their weekly shopping at the supermarket next week, they will see the effects of the removal of the freeze on food prices. The freeze on beef lasts until Sept. 12.

Stein and Dunlop were interviewed on the CBS-TV Morning News program and Shultz on the ABC-TV Today show.

Nixon said in his statement that food price increases in the latter part of 1973 "would be less than in the first half of the year but greater than anyone would like."

He still vowed to "do everything in my power" to end all economic controls by the end of this year. But he said a "move to freedom now would most likely turn into a detour back into a swamp of even more lasting controls."

Wages Under Control
The statement said wages will be under mandatory controls in Phase IV—just like those in Phase II. Rents, interest rates and small businesses with 60 or fewer workers would be exempt.

Consumers should begin to see these effects of Nixon's new policy: —Grocery prices will probably begin to escalate in a week, as wholesalers and retailers begin adding on the costs they absorbed during the freeze.

—Every gasoline pump at retail service stations will be required, by Aug. 12, to have a sign listing both ceiling prices and octane rating.

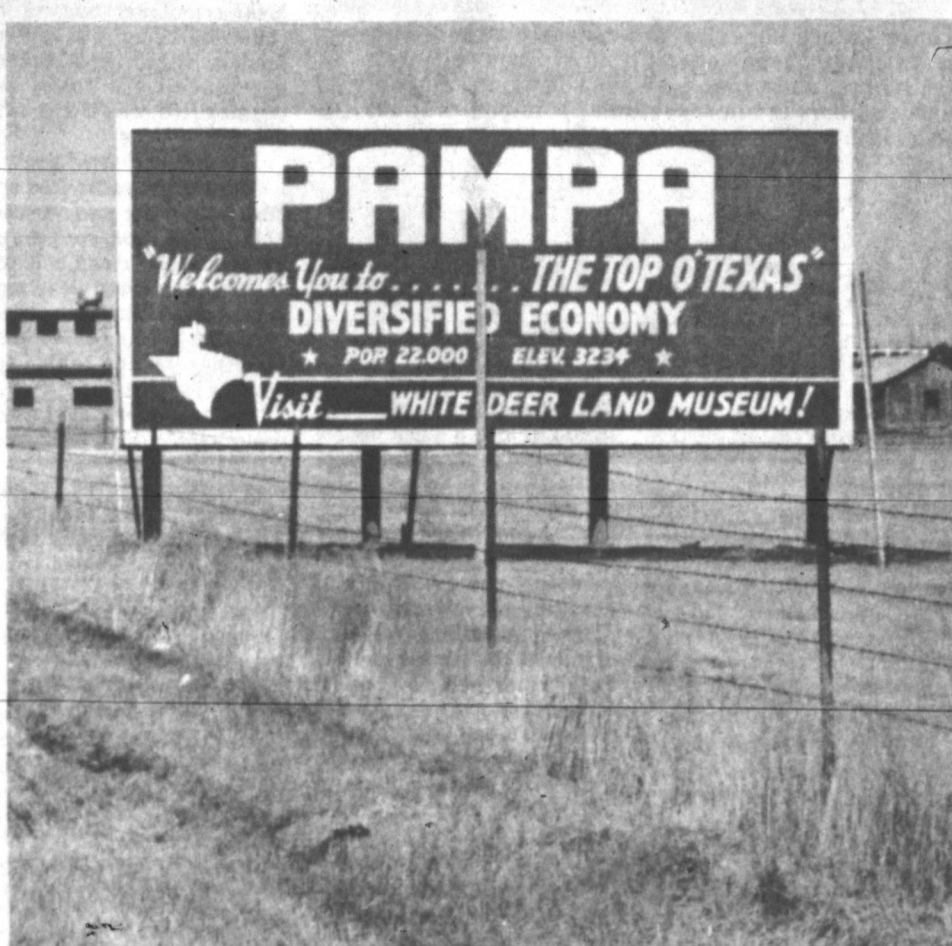

—Telephone, electricity and natural gas rates will be free to climb although increases still must win approval of local regulatory commissions.

In order to prevent a sudden surge in prices, Nixon ordered the freeze lifted piecemeal. Food prices—with the exception of beef—plus doctor, dentist, hospital and other health care fees are immediately exempt from the freeze.

In other areas, the freeze remains in effect until Aug. 12. Current ceiling prices on beef stay in force until Sept. 12.

Public May Comment
In a departure from past practice, the public will be allowed to comment directly on the stabilization rules during the next two weeks.

The full Phase IV package will be in place Aug. 12 and will, according to Nixon, be a "tough ... selective" system designed to bring the soaring cost of living under control.

IN ALLEGED PAYOFF CASE

Grand Jury Deliberation Believed To Have Begun

By ALETHA DAVIS

The Gray County Grand Jury today was believed to have begun deliberation of testimony in hearings investigating a television news report some Gray county - based law enforcement officers suspected "payoffs" in the handling of narcotics cases.

District Attorney Guy Hardin called for the grand jury investigation after the June 22 broadcast by Sandy Wright, KVII-TV, Amarillo, which aired the alleged suspicion of officers in the county area.

Miss Wright broadcast the report with the statement attributed to law enforcement personnel after reporting the alleged dismissal of all charges against three persons arrested in a recent drug raid in Pampa.

District Attorney Hardin said today, in fact, charges were never brought against those three persons.

Miss Wright further stated in the report, of 45 arrests made in recent months, only five cases had come to trial. It also was indicated in the television report that in the other 40 cases, charges had been dismissed by Hardin.

In an interview today the district attorney said the information used by Miss Wright concerning the 45 cases did not come from his office, and indicated he had no knowledge of her source of information.

Hardin used the outcome of 21 indictments in drug cases handed down in late 1972 as the basis of his, and the court's recommendation the 21 cases be dismissed with the condition the items would be re-presented to the next grand jury.

In early 1973, the evidence was again presented for grand jury scrutiny, according to Hardin, and the record shows all 21 cases were no-billed. The no-bill action is executed when the grand jury panel fails to conclude there is basis for indictment, said Hardin.

Court House sources today speculated a report from the grand jury may be forthcoming Friday, when District Judge Grainger McIlhenny is scheduled to be in Pampa.

Rogers met with Park for an hour and 20 minutes, at Blue House, the South Korean presidential mansion in Seoul.

There was no comment from American officials traveling with Rogers, but backing for Park's June 23 proposal for the Korean problem at the United Nations was in line with Rogers' previous statements during his current visit to South Korea.

Earlier today Rogers made a public promise that there would be no hasty cuts in the 42,000 American troops stationed in South Korea and said U.S. military policies and relaxation of its relations with China could mean peace for Asia for the rest of this century.

The government also published details on the introduction of conscription, announced earlier this week. The draft, first for Cambodia since the war began three years ago, will exempt a large number of men, among them heads of families and students.

his understanding Gray County contributed a part of the funds to help with expenses of an undercover agent after he and Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan concurred with a request by Chief of Police Jim Conner that the county aid the city in efforts to investigate the drug problem here.

Hardin said today evidence which was studied following the 21 indictments in 1972 was the basis of his, and the court's recommendation the 21 cases be dismissed with the condition the items would be re-presented to the next grand jury.

Local Markets Delay Reaction

By CLAY LIVELY

"We'll just have to wait and see what we can do" has been the prevalent local reaction by food store owners and managers regarding yesterday's announcement by President Nixon that the price freeze on certain food products has been lifted.

In making the announcement, the President said that food prices can go up only to reflect the increased cost of raw agricultural products to food wholesalers and retailers.

When their stores at that level have interpreted just what increases may be made, only then will local residents see an increase in the cost of food on the shelves.

Frank Morrison, owner and manager of Frank's Foods, 638 S. Cuyler, stated that he will have to find out how much wholesalers increase their prices to him before he will make any changes in the cost of food to the consumer at his store.

So, apparently the increase in food prices on local grocery store shelves will not take place immediately—not today or tomorrow at any rate.

All consumers and food store operators alike have to "wait and see" what price increases wholesalers make before the cost of food goes up at the local level.

Midnight Friday is the deadline for entering contestants in the Top O' Texas Beauty Pageant Aug. 11 in the M.K. Brown Auditorium here.

As reported previously in The News, the Pampa girl who places highest in the final judging will represent Pampa in Perryton's Miss Wheatheart of the Nation contest later in August.

The Top O' Texas Queen will be selected from contestants from Pampa and other area towns.

Pageant officials said morning 25 entries had been filed in the beauty contest and reported additional entries were expected today.

That compromise spared the nation a fiscal crisis—Congress threatened to halt general government funds — but did nothing to resolve the long-standing question of whether a President can carry on a war when majorities in both houses oppose him.

TO CONDUCT WARS

House Votes To Limit Powers Of President

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House passed legislation Wednesday to take away the President's power to reject congressional orders to halt unauthorized war. The measure probably will not become law this year since President Nixon has said he will veto it.

The provision was contained in a landmark resolution that passed the House 244 to 170 to limit presidential warmaking powers and reassert Congress' role in decisions to commit troops overseas.

Nixon said the measure was "dangerous and unconstitutional" and promised to veto it. The House, although easily rejecting all amendments to meet Nixon's objections, is at least two dozen votes short of the two-thirds majority that will be needed to override a presidential veto.

The War Powers Resolution, spawned by the long and furious debate between Congress and two presidents over the war in Indochina, would require a president to seek congressional authorization any time he sends combat troops to foreign soil or "substantially enlarges" the number of American forces in a foreign land. If he does not get congressional approval within 120 days, the troops would have to be withdrawn.

But the key provision in the bill would permit Congress, at any time, to end U.S. involvement in a war that it has not authorized by passing a concurrent resolution ordering it halted. This type of resolution does not require a president's signature to become law.

The controversial provision is the House's response to Nixon's veto last month of an appropriations bill that contained a clause — approved by overwhelming majorities in both Houses—cutting off funds for the bombing of Cambodia. The veto threatened a constitutional collision, but this was resolved when Congress sanctioned continued bombing until Aug. 15 and the President agreed to termination of U.S. involvement in the Indochina War on that date.

That compromise spared the nation a fiscal crisis—Congress threatened to halt general government funds — but did nothing to resolve the long-standing question of whether a President can carry on a war when majorities in both houses oppose him.

Food Rush Of The 70's

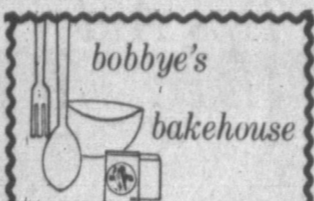

COLLEGE STATION - Food buying is like prospecting - it takes a loner, planning and picking.

"Homemakers can get more from food dollars by shopping at their best advantage," Judy Grubbs, foods and nutrition specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, said.

"One rule of thumb is to shop when rested and not to shop hungry - but after eating." "Another idea, important for most people, is to shop without children - and for many wives, without husband. A shopper needs to concentrate, so anyone who provides distraction can mean money lost.

"Shop with a list," Miss Grubbs continued. "Include items to meet menu plans for the week, items you want on hand, and items to restock low supplies. Keep the list flexible to utilize specials and in-store sales."

She advised buying only what can be used or stored before use - "food loss as a result of poor storage is waste and money lost. Also, avoid buying unnecessary items on impulse."

SOURDOUGH CORNBREAD
1 1/2 cup cornmeal
1 1/2 T. sugar
1 1/2 t. salt
1 1/2 t. baking soda
6 T. melted butter

1 1/2 cup sourdough Starter
1 1/2 t. cream of tartar
2 eggs, slightly beaten (or use powdered egg mixture)
Combine cornmeal, sugar and salt in a mixing bowl. Scald milk, pour over cornmeal; cool to lukewarm. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Pour into buttered 9 inch square pan. Bake in 425 degrees oven for 40 minutes.

MISSISSIPPI FUDGE CAKE
2 sticks oleo
1/2 c. cocoa
Add: 4 eggs
1 1/2 c. pecans
Add: 1 1/2 c. flour
2 cups sugar
Mix and pour in floured and greased pan. Bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees. (It will be soft when it comes from the oven). Put 1 small pkg. miniature marshmallows on top. Keep away from the sides of the pan. Put in oven to melt or soften marshmallows. Cool. Spread with the following icing:
1/2 c. butter
one-third c. cocoa
1 tsp. vanilla
1/2 c. canned milk
1 box powdered sugar
Whip until smooth, spread on top of marshmallows, sprinkle with pecans.

Austin Woman To Represent State In Cooking Contest

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Mrs. Judson Doss of Austin, Tex., has cooked her way into the final competition of the National Chicken Cooking Contest as the official representative of her state. She will be competing against 50 others for prizes totaling $20,000.

Mrs. Doss will receive an all-expense - paid trip to the National cook - off in Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 11, to prepare her "Sweet and Sour Chicken Fritters" for final judging. She may return to Austin with a first prize check for $10,000, or a second prize of $4,000, a third prize of $3,000, a fourth prize of $2,000, or the $1,000 fifth prize.

The National Broiler Council which represents America's chicken industry sponsors the contest. Mrs. Doss will be hosted in Little Rock by the broiler industry people of Arkansas and the contest co-sponsors; the makers of Ac'cent, Alcoa Wrap - Wear - Ever cookware and Mazola corn oil. Each finalist will also receive $100, a year's supply of co - sponsor products and a state winner's trophy.

An independent judging agency evaluated the recipes on the basis of suitability, flavor, ease of preparation, idea and clarity of directions. The number one position in the state was determined either by local cook - off or through kitchen testing procedures.

Following is the recipe for "Sweet and Sour Chicken Fritters."

SWEET AND SOUR CHICKEN FRITTERS
1 whole broiler - fryer chicken
2 1/2 teaspoons Ac'cent
1 1/2 cups sifted all - purpose flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 beaten egg
1/2 cup milk
1 quart Mazola corn oil
Sweet and Sour Sauce (recipe below)
To prepare chicken; sprinkle Ac'cent on outside of chicken and in body cavity. Place chicken in 13 1/2 x 9 1/2 x 2 1/4 - inch baking pan. Cover tightly with Alcoa Wrap aluminum foil. Bake in 355-degree oven 1 hour or until done. Cool; skin and bone. Dice into 1-inch cubes. Measure 1 1/4 cups diced chicken. (The remainder of the chicken can be frozen for another meal.)

With a fork, mix flour, baking powder and salt with egg. Add enough milk so mixture resembles "biscuit" batter; stiff but a little lumpy. Add the diced chicken and mix well. Pour corn oil into a Wear - Ever Registered 5 - quart Dutch oven, filling utensil no more than one-third full. Heat over medium heat to 355 degrees. Carefully drop batter by teaspoonful into the hot corn oil. Fry about 3 minutes, turning once, until browned. Drain on paper towels. Serve with Sweet and Sour Sauce. Makes 36 fritters.

SWEET AND SOUR SAUCE
1 jar (10 ounces) sweet and sauce
1 cup pineapple cubes, drained
2 firm tomatoes, quartered
1 green pepper, cut in strips

In a small saucepan, heat sweet and sour sauce. Add pineapple, tomatoes and green pepper; simmer until hot. Take care that tomatoes and peppers maintain crispness.

Playground space
CHICAGO (UPI) - To find out if there is enough playground space in your neighborhood, imagine two individuals on a 9x12 rug.

Each would be allotted 54 square feet which, according to Encyclopedia Britannica, is the approximate area recommended for neighborhood playgrounds by recreation experts.

The standards require about one acre of playground for each 800 persons in a neighborhood. Although it would be rare for everybody to show up at the same time on the theoretical acre, most Americans would find considerably less than 54 feet available as urban areas generally are far from meeting this space standard.

Charles A. Lindbergh made the first nonstop trans-Atlantic flight, New York to Paris, May 20, 1927.

Tips Aid Hurry-Up Sewing

For "hurry-up" fashions to sew and wear, homesevers take short cuts with patterns, fabrics and techniques.

Look for a pattern with few design details and pattern pieces, suggests Miss Jimmie Lou Wainscott, county Extension agent.

Many pattern books contain special sections with easy-to-sew patterns labeled as time savers. These patterns feature details that involve less actual construction time.

Some details that are faster include styles with facings—rather than bindings or fancy collars that require hand work. Raglan or kimono sleeves are less time consuming than set-in sleeves.

Conventional zippers are faster than bound buttonholes.

Learn basic construction techniques beforehand to economize time.

Avoid handwork whenever possible. Pin baste at notches and at the beginning and ending points of seams.

Do as much work as you can while the garment is still in its flat stage. For example, apply pockets and trim to the front—and zipper to the back—before joining side seams.

Fabric selection is also critical in speeding construction time. Choose a fabric that doesn't need underlining or lining.

Designs which require matching or special cutting procedures take more time. Unusual fabrics never seen before—while a challenge—frequently require extra time.

As a rule, a medium width, firm fabric is faster or easier to work with than one that's fragile, slippery or extra stretchy.

Utilize short cuts that save construction time—but don't sacrifice quality methods, the agent concluded.

Galahad played the last two trumps, stopping in dummy. Mordred did his best by discarding the three and 10 of spades, but it wasn't good enough.

The six-spot was led from dummy. East went up with the nine, but Galahad played his queen. Mordred took the trick with his king and led back the seven-spot and this allowed Galahad to win the trick with dummy's eight-spot.

Galahad was lucky at that. If East held 9-7 of spades there would have been no way to bring the contract home.

Woman To Woman

By PATRICIA MC CORMACK
NEW YORK (UPI) — The washer or dryer this day hums an unhappy tune. Instead of going—ummmm, ummmm, hummm, it goes ummmmm-lick or ummmmm-plinkety-clink.

The unusual sounds indicate something's not right. So you call the repairman. Sometimes, however, the motor makes odd sounds then resumes the usual droning.

In the latter case, it may be due to the power works—the electric company—reducing juice by five or 10 per cent to spread available energy during peak use periods. That's one way of avoiding a power failure in these days of stretching available energy.

Blackouts and power reductions can do tricky things to motors of appliances. Actually there are certain things you should do about appliances when voltage reductions take place or power fails all the way. Not taking the steps recommended by appliance engineers can mean the motors fry or burn out.

Very briefly, immediate steps in the event of a power reduction or blackout: turn washer, dryer, dishwasher off. Do not open the refrigerator or freezer door, conserving the cold already built up.

The main reason: when power comes back on or up to normal the washer, dryer, dishwasher motors may not be able to take the sudden surge. The refrigerator motor isn't so fragile. The reason you don't open the door while the power reduction or outage is in force is that you want to keep the cold. In case of an extended power failure keeping the cold as long as possible means food inside will be protected longer.

Specific guidelines, from the consumer affairs division of a major appliance manufacturer (General Electric), apply to most appliances, regardless of the maker.

—How to tell a voltage reduction is in progress. An alert observer will notice an unusual humming or droning from the motor in a washer, dryer, or other piece of heavy electrical equipment; a dimming of lights; or the shrinkage of the picture on the television screen.

—When voltage in a motor-driven appliance is reduced to an intolerable level (more than 10 per cent) motor tries to compensate for reduced voltage by working harder. It begins to overheat, its overload protector turns it off before any damage can be done—most of the time. But not always.

—During any period of voltage reduction exceeding 10 per cent, all electric appliances not needed should be turned off. This will protect the appliance and help the power company to reduce the load on utility lines.

—After voltage returns to normal, keep the appliance off for at least another five minutes to allow time for the voltage to stabilize.

Refrigerators and freezers can tolerate rather drastic voltage reductions, too, without suffering damage.

Now if power fails completely, turn off all appliances except the refrigerator or freezer. To turn off the fridge you'd have to open the door, leading to the cold loss described earlier. The refrigerator will hold cold for four to 24 hours; the freezer, for 24 hours or more.

If the failure goes beyond a few hours, put dry ice in freezer and refrigerator to extend the cold. If frozen foods thaw, cook them or use them at once to avoid loss by spoilage.

POLLY'S POINTERS

She Has Eyes But Doesn't See

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns that hook and eye on the back of the neck of a dress or garment. I do wish they would use metal eyes like the hooks as the thread ones soon fall out and the metal would be so much easier to find when one is groping around trying to locate the eye for the hook. — MADELYN

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I do wish some reader would tell me how to introduce another color to a pastel pink and blue bathroom. Tub, bowl, sink and hamper are blue and the walls pink half way up and then papered with a depressing gray, tan, pink, blue and white wallpaper. I have haunted paint stores and poured over magazines but with no luck. — MRS. R. J. C.

Knowing Fashion Notions

COLLEGE STATION — Notions counter visits should happen right after fabric purchases.

This might save the homesever another trip to the fabric store. Marilyn Brown, consumer education—clothing and textiles specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University, said.

Some notions should be purchased each time a fabric is purchased to insure a proper match and appropriateness to the particular garment and its style.

Buttons, threads, zippers, bindings, trim and tapes are examples.

Consumers should use the back of the pattern envelope to guide selections, she suggested.

Generally it's a good idea to keep on hand a supply of the more standard notions, such as pins, needles, hooks and eyes to save frustration and sewing interruptions.

Other notions are so specialized they're only purchased for specific garments, such as trouser hooks and eyes, weights for tailored—jacket hems or lace seam binding.

Tapes, laces and bindings in matching colors will give the inside of the garment a custom-made look, not to mention perfectly finished edges.

This couture finishing—which makes a garment a delight to wear—requires proper sizes and types of notions," she added.

The California system of libraries began under the Spanish between 1769 and 1823.

Business Today

NEW YORK (UPI) — Once upon a time, the South was the land of cotton, and cotton was king of the world's fabrics. King Cotton has been dethroned but the South is the home of the new monarch of the textile world, Emperor Polyester.

Polyester, a synthetic resin that can be made into yarns or molding compounds to encase fiberglass strands, last year surpassed nylon as the world's most widely used synthetic fiber. It passed nylon in the United States two years ago.

Derived from coal-tar by way of terephthalic acid and petroleum (ethylene glycol, also used as an anti-freeze), more polyester is made in the South than anywhere elsewhere. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. alone has six plants in the South making polyester resins, yarns and tire ingredients. Other tire companies and many chemical and basic textile producers also make polyester products in Dixie.

Hold Dominant Position
In the fabric world, mixtures of polyester and cotton or wool, or all-polyester fabrics such as Dacron, now hold a dominant position even though continuous filament polyester yarns appeared on the market only in 1962.

Before then, polyester was available only in staple (chopped fiber). Even then it made inroads against nylon.

More Beneficial Role
It is in the tire industry that polyester may play an even more beneficial role.

Rubber tires originally were reinforced by cotton cords. Rayon succeeded cotton, and nylon succeeded rayon. Now the industry has moved to polyester cord for all but the cheapest tires because polyester had greater strength and dimensional stability.

A Mitchum masterpiece: 'Eddie Coyle'

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — (NEA) — It doesn't seem too long since Robert Mitchum was Hollywood's enfant terrible. The years roll along, even for film stars, and now he's one of Hollywood's elder statesmen.

Gradually, he's gotten the recognition as an actor he always deserved but never received. Like the great stars of the past — Tracy, Bogart, Gable — Bob Mitchum is always in there, doing a great acting job. He'd be the last to admit it.

Coyle. This one he is enthusiastic about.

"It's the best thing I've done in a year," he says, which may sound like high praise, except it happens to be the only thing he's done in a year. Even when he's immodest, the modesty shines through.

Scripts continue to pour in to him but he's grown more selective lately.

"I use two criteria in judging what films I'll do," he says. "The first is — is it a picture that I can damage too badly? And, the second, will it be comfortable and convenient?"

"I don't like doing things which involve too much work. Yet, curiously, I enjoy working — when I'm working. It's just that I hate thinking about working."

He has gotten himself trapped in some dreadful films in the past. He says he's often been working on a picture and goes off by himself, sits on a rock and asks, plaintively, "What am I doing here?"

That probably won't happen as much in the future. He's being more careful, more choosy and it seems to be working. As Eddie Coyle, he gives a brilliant performance, even speaks with a Boston accent. I didn't think the picture worked too well but he did.

"The Friends of Eddie Coyle" was filmed entirely in and around Boston and the locations help. Mitchum, surprisingly for one who is away from home as much as he is, says he doesn't like to travel.

"It's funny," he says. "I just don't like to travel — but I like being places. I liked being in Boston. Not that I did much there. I holed up in my motel room most of the time. One good thing was that it was colder season so I spent most of my time drinking cider and eating cheese."

He didn't go to the movies much as a diversion. In fact, not at all. He's a confirmed nonmoviegoer. He just doesn't like them.

Dear Abby

Mom should start a 'get tough' policy

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Our son is 34. He has a shaky marriage and two fine children, ages 10 and 12. He has changed jobs frequently and is always in debt.

We like his wife. My husband and I have pulled them out of debt several times. It has cost us a total of $3,000. They have never mentioned paying us back.

The problem: Our son has won a trip to Hawaii on his job, but if he wants to take his wife he will have to pay her way. He doesn't have the few hundred dollars it would cost to take her, so naturally he is sort of looking in our direction for it.

They have never taken a trip together. [No money.] I think the trip might help their marriage and have told my husband how I feel, but he says I am a soft touch.

What should I do? GOOD OLD MOM

DEAR MOM: Offer to lend him the money on a business basis. Ask him to sign a promissory note with a date set for repayment. And this time insist that he live up to his obligation.

And don't lend him more than the few hundred he needs. Good Old Mom has to be Tough Old Mom if she wants her son to be a real man.

DEAR ABBY: My sister, who is 62, and my brother in law, who is 57, have been happily married for 28 years.

Because of health reasons, my brother in law is contemplating retiring and will in time be collecting social security. Since my sister will also be eligible to collect social security, my brother in law suggested that my sister get her birth certificate. This is frightening to my sister as she has never told her husband that she is five years older than he is. [He thinks they're the same age.] She was afraid if she told him her real age, when they first met, he wouldn't marry her.

Now my sister is afraid of repercussions, as she has always been completely honest with her husband.

Do you think she should tell him now? MINNIE

DEAR MINNIE: After 28 years of marriage, I doubt that your sister's husband would hold it against her for having knocked five years off her age. I think she should tell him and get it over with. A 62-year-old woman who can pass for 57 needn't be ashamed.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, Pam, was invited to be a bridesmaid. She was thrilled because she had never been in a wedding party before. The bride's mother invited all the girls in the wedding party over to plan a shower for the bride.

We have a nice large finished basement party room, so Pam offered to have the shower here. The bride's mother said: "Oh, no, I want it at the _____" [and she named an expensive restaurant.] The girls just looked at each other in amazement. Pam then asked the mother if she planned to help them financially, and she said: "Emphatically no, you girls are supposed to give this shower!"

The girls agreed to have it at a restaurant, to please the mother, but they chose a less expensive one. The next day the bride called my daughter and coldly said: "Pam, if you couldn't afford to be in my wedding party, why did you accept? I think it's best if you drop out, so I'm sending the $20 deposit you put on the bridesmaid's gown, and I'm asking someone else instead. Goodbye."

My daughter couldn't believe her ears.

Now, listen to this. This girl had the gall to send Pam an invitation to her wedding.

If you were she, what would you send her? MOM

DEAR MOM: My regrets!

CALLS FOR 2ND PANEL
COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice Byron R. "Whizzer" White called Friday for creation of a second panel to handle the 95 per cent of the cases the high court has no time to consider.

"When one stops to think how many cases that deserve Supreme Court review are passed by," White said at a conference of the 8th and 10th U.S. Circuit Courts of Appeal, "it is time to consider the possibility of an ongoing court to take discards from the Supreme Court."

Sino-Philippine trade
MANILA (UPI) — Trade with China has shifted heavily in favor of the Philippines since the two countries began trading last year. From May 19, 1972 to May 30, 1973, Philippine exports to mainland China totaled $23,508,550 while imports amounted to $19,352,020, according to official figures.

The Philippines has no diplomatic relations with the Peking government. But a government decision last year to trade with all Socialist countries enabled Filipinos to do business with China.

FARR FAMILY — Appearing at 8 p.m. Friday at the Church of the Brethren, 600 N. Frost, will be the Farr Family of Middletown, Pa., nationally known for their singing and interpretations of religious music. The concert, presented in conjunction with the annual convention of the South Plains District of the Church of the Brethren, is centered around God's love for man, through Christ, and the power of that love available to all. The musicale is non-denominational, with the public invited to attend.

How do we measure up

We're mighty fussy about the appearance of Kentucky Fried Chicken stores. We keep them neat and clean so folks will know the food's good. The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Thanks to the Watergate hearings, Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. is well on his way to becoming an authentic American folk hero in the traditional of Dan'l Boone, Davy Crockett, Paul Bunyan and Bobby Riggs.

Sam Ervin Fan Clubs are sprouting up all across the land. "Senator Sam" sweatshirts, T-shirts, buttons and bumperstickers are appearing in increasing abundance. And even now, you may be sure, some country-western troubadour in Nashville is recording "The Ballad of Senator Sam."

(Chorus: "Senator Sam, Senator Sam — the greatest thing since country ham." Watch for it on next week's "top 40" list.)

Will success spoil Sam Ervin? Can a 76-year-old backwoods lawyer from North Carolina find happiness as a "pop" culture celebrity?

Will Become Apparent
The answers to such questions will become apparent in the days ahead. Meanwhile, it is easy to understand why Ervin is being lionized.

In these days when the Liz Taylor-Richard Burton marriage is floundering, and the world seems fraught with uncertainties, many folks are desperately seeking something solid to cling to.

Those who follow Watergate committee investigations have found a security symbol of sorts in the chairman's eyebrows.

All viewers are aware that Ervin's eyebrows are exceedingly kinetic. When their movement is coordinated with what he is saying, they are wonderfully expressive—accentuating a point here, underlining a postulate there.

The Woman's View

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — As a girl growing up in New York, Veronica Nelson was the family and neighborhood pet doctor.

So it was only natural that she wanted to grow up to be a veterinarian. But circumstances intervened in her formal education. As a result her career is about the closest thing to veterinary medicine.

She's a keeper at New York's Central Park Zoo, the only female keeper at the regular zoo although the Children's Zoo has a couple of women on the staff.

Papa is Clever
The day we called on Miss Nelson, she was getting ready to give Patty Cake, who will be a year old Sept. 3, her supplemental feeding—a bottle of milk with fruit pulp-added, which she gets four times daily. The keeper also was filling a couple of bottles with cherryade for the mother and father—"It keeps them from distracting Patty Cake while she eats," Miss Nelson explained.

"Kongo's terribly intelligent," said Miss Nelson. "Sometimes I think I'd like him better if he were dumber than I."

"Gorillas are the closest to us," she said. "The females have the same cycle, the same gestation period as women."

Special Case
"They can't vocalize much, but their eyes can tell you a lot. Kongo, for instance, is occasionally sneaky...and it always shows in his face."

When Patty Cake was reunited with her parents, news accounts told of Lulu's "screams of maternal joy." Patty Cake now often rides around on her mother's back, as kids do when daddy plays "horse" with them.

Although about 40 gorillas have been born in captivity, the case of Patty Cake is of special note because of her reunion with her parents, now eight and nine, after so long a separation.

Gorillas are an endangered species, so Patty Cake's future as a potential mother also is of great concern.

Miss Nelson, 24, a slim and handsome brunette, said the park's zoo director, John Fitzgerald, had elected that she work with the gorilla family because of her previous experience with primates.

Jessica added
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jessica Tandy has been added to the cast of "Butley", starring England's Alan Bates.

But, as viewers also are aware, Ervin's eyebrows frequently get out of synch and begin racing wildly ahead of his thoughts.

Thus at a time when the senator's lips are professing his faith in something, his eyebrows may be registering incredulity.

Square-Shooting Eyebrows
It is this autonomous motion—this spirit of independence—that gives Ervin the most upright, candid, square-shooting eyebrows on the scene today.

There isn't a devious hair in the lot. Seeing them in action, you instinctively know those eyebrows are incapable of one false move.

Even if Ervin wanted to pull a fast one, his eyebrows wouldn't let him get away with it. They would give him away as surely as John Dean blew the Watergate cover.

If Ervin told you something spurious, his own eyebrows would shoot up in disbelief and frantically begin to signal you with a series of wiggles and other gyrations that you should discount what he is saying.

Honest eyebrows! What a rare possession in an age of half-truths and blatant distortions!

Some day in the folk hero hall of fame they may rank with Crockett's coonskin cap.

MD Group Okayed For Federal Help

Muscular Dystrophy Associations of America has been approved for participation in the government's Combined Federal Service Campaign for the 18th consecutive year, it was announced today by Mrs. Paula Hungerford, president of the voluntary health agency's Greater Plains Chapter in Amarillo.

"Our participation in the 1973-74 means that MDAA has once again met the government's stringent standards, she said. "Only 12 other agencies have been so approved."

Mahan Leads Rodeo Circuit

DENVER (UPI)—The Rodeo Cowboys Association has said Larry Mahan of Dallas is the leader so far in money winnings on the professional rodeo circuit.

Mahan, a world champion five times, has won $33,746, compared to $28,230 for second place Bob Ragsdale of Chowchilla, Calif. Tom Ferguson of San Martin, Calif., was third with $23,793.

The next major event for the cowboys will be this weekend's 77th annual Cheyenne, Wyo., Frontier Days Rodeo.

In making the announcement, Mrs. Hungerford said the benefits of MDAA's involvement in the government's campaign will be relayed directly to patients through local patient services programs.

"The Association's patient services program," explained Mrs. Hungerford, "is one of the most extensive offered by any health agency in the country. It includes a wide range of free medical, recreational, vocational and educational services administered through our nearly 300 chapters, located in every state, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and Guam, as well as through the Association's nation-wide network of 118 clinics."

Mrs. Hungerford added that funds raised in the federal establishment will also help support more than 200 MDAA research projects throughout the world which are seeking to unravel the mysteries of muscular dystrophy and related muscle-wasting diseases.

The national voluntary health organization is noted for its spectacularly successful coast-to-coast Labor Day weekend telethons headlined by its national chairman, Jerry Lewis.

Local Students At Band Camp

AMARILLO — Five young musicians from Pampa are currently attending the 21st West Texas Instrumental Music camp being held on the West Texas State University campus July 15-27.

They are Marsha Holland, Clifford Stephens, Kathy Davis, Vincent DiCosimo and Stan Williams.

"Interest and enthusiasm is really high this year since the ceiling for camp enrollment was reached May 1," said Dr. George Umberson, camp director. "This is the earliest date we have ever closed the camp."

Regarded as one of the largest camps of its kind in the nation, the camp features band, orchestra and baton instruction along with private lessons.

"Seventy string instrument students, which is the largest number ever enrolled at the camp, will be attending, which should make this year's string and symphony orchestra the best ever," Umberson said.

Dr. Gary Garner, professor of music and director of bands at West Texas State, will conduct the honors band which is composed of the most advanced instrumental players. Michael Matesky, assistant professor of music and orchestra director at WTSU, will direct the string and symphony orchestras.

"Goals we have for the camp are, first of all, to make the students better players," Umberson said. "But we also want them to leave better leaders, that is, to take positions of leadership in their bands at home."

"Many directors have told me that students who attend our camp are at least one semester advanced over what they would have been without attending the camp," he added.

Graduate credit of two semesters are being earned by directors who are enrolled for the Music 475 workshop that is being conducted during the camp.

Ancient Corn
Though corn did not spread throughout Europe until the 18th century, it had long been the principal food crop of the Mayas, Aztecs, Incas and other Indian tribes. Corn pollen taken from drill cores 200 feet below Mexico City was about 60,000 years old.

In Paris 'in' night life, the boys are in the band, chorus line, everywhere

FRANCOIS SAVEL sees his transvestite shows as a new avenue of creative expression.

MAKE-UP IS PERFECTION and costumes are elegant, but otherwise there is no attempt at La Grande Eugene to disguise the masculinity of the performers.

By Rosette Hargrove

PARIS — (NEA) — Transvestites have suddenly become the bright stars in the galaxy of Paris night life. The four leading cabarets — the Alcazar, Chez Mitsou, La Grande Eugene and Uomo — catering to this form of entertainment are filled to capacity every evening.

Critics rate La Grande Eugene as far and away the most inventive, intellectual, original entertainment, a unique show of its kind.

On a confetti-sized stage, 11 young men act, sing and dance at a frenzied pace in a nonstop production. The skits are international, there is no language barrier, the play-back loud and strong. Result: sophisticated professional entertainment very far removed from the usual dreary drag show.

The show is the most elaborate of its kind, a subtle combination of the blackest humor and parody. Twenty tableaux are organized around immediately recognizable themes — "Love Story," Josephine Baker and Angela Davies; Marlene Dietrich; Lili Marlene; "Tea For Two" and others. No need for wordy explanatory scenes.

The creative mind behind this unusual revue (which is never pornographic) is a burly, blonde, bearded giant, 45-year-old Francois Savel, a man of many talents. Accomplished painter, decorator, yet he is essentially a man of the theater and music. He worked with Jean Cocteau and has been asked to compose for the Paris Opera.

Savel did not plunge into his transvestite creations unwittingly. He did so because he considers this form of art opens up new avenues of expression.

"Every member of my cast is a full-fledged actor," he declares. "I find men are more amenable to authority. They accept rigorous routines. The travesty is of the same order as an actor's disguise. After all, the appearance of women on the stage is relatively recent. In Shakespeare's time, women's roles were played by youths. This also is true of the Greek theater and in the Far East women still do not figure in the Japanese NO performances."

"A woman impersonating Marlene Dietrich would not get beyond the footlights. The act would be sad, fall flat. With a man it assumes an altogether different dimension."

The show at La Grande Eugene might be unacceptable, or even not understandable, to the middle-aged spectator, but the young get the message instantly.

"This is an epoch when the picture reigns supreme and I am in harmony with this means of expression. The young prefer pictures to ideas," says Savel.

There is no attempt to lend false feminine "charms" to the cast. While the chorus bumps and grinds with a certain ferocity, ultra-decollete spangled dresses hang from masculine shoulders over flat chests; scorning the vulgarity of false bosoms. Make-up, however, has reached a point of perfection rarely achieved outside the Orient.

Here is the theater of masks, attitudes and gestures. Nothing in common with the conventional, sophisticated Paris revue, with its nude models and elaborate scenery. The performances of a transvestite star such as Belle de May, for example, reveal a genuine talent for mime.

The present cast has been with Savel over three years. He admits that a few years ago this type of show would not have been possible. But times have certainly changed. So much so that Savel is scheduled to take his company to the Edinburgh Festival in August.

Up at Uomo's (Man) in Montmartre, the mood is totally different. There is no intellectual appeal in the all-masculine, all nude routine, the only one in the Pigalle strip-alley.

The cast of 12 are all professional dancers. Vic Upshaw, the choreographer of the Crazy Horse Saloon, the veteran strip-dance cabaret off the Champs Elysees, says he auditioned over 100 young men for the job.

The idea behind the show, according to Andre Dahan who manages several Montmartre cabarets, including a couple of female nude shows, emanated from his wife.

"One day she declared that it was unjust that nude shows should be always entirely feminine. She thought the time had come to launch the masculine edition. Since then the boys have been playing to full houses. And why not?" he asks with a Gallic shrug of the shoulders.

GOP Committee In Financial Straits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nine months after its presidential ticket won landslide re-election, the Republican party's national committee is in such financial distress that it is firing 25 per cent of its staff and its chairman is taking a 10 per cent pay cut.

Without blaming its problems on the party faithful's reaction to the Watergate disclosures, the GOP national committee said it was making the cuts now because a drop in expected contributions so far in 1973 indicated a $1 million deficit by the end of the year.

The effect of the staff reductions will be to eliminate 30 to 35 jobs, spokesman Robert Rousek said. National committee chairman George Bush is voluntarily making a 10 per cent cut in his $42,500 yearly salary, Rousek said, and some other committee officials also were taking pay cuts.

Rousek said small donations — under $100 — actually were up compared to last year, but there had been a decline in larger contributions. As a result, the committee's financial officials projected a shortage of more than 20 per cent to meet the original $5.5 million 1973 budget.

The reductions come at a crucial time for the national committee.

There have been some suggestions from Republican leaders in the states that the Committee for the Re-Election of the President turn over its 1972 campaign surplus — estimated in some quarters as more than $4 million — to the national committee. But Bush is understood to feel that this would not be advisable at a time when the re-election committee is involved in damage suits claiming millions of dollars arising from the Watergate affair.

The first sign of GOP fund raising problems came earlier this year when a party fund raising dinner, planning to bring in $2 million, was scaled down to a $1 million goal and actually realized about $750,000.

Each province of the People's Republic of China has an agricultural college, some with 5,000 students.

TV profile

Judy's family life unlike 'Waltons'

By Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Judy Norton, who plays Mary Ellen, eldest daughter of "The Waltons," leads a vastly different life from the girl she portrays on the highly rated series.

Mary Ellen enjoys the security of a large and loving family on the tube, surrounded by siblings, parents and grandparents.

At her home in the San Fernando Valley Judy, 15, lives most of the time, with her divorced mother, alternately spending months with her father. The parents were divorced seven years ago.

Brother David, 11, lives with Mrs. Norton. Judy's older sister, Ricki, 16, lives with Judy's stepmother who is in the process of winning a divorce from Norton.

Despite the unsteady family life, Judy is a naturally ebullient teen-ager who enjoys sleeping late and doesn't appear to be concerned about the present or the future. She would, however, like to have her own automobile one of these days.

As it is, her mother drives her to Warner Bros. studios every working morning at 8, and takes her home again in the evening. Judy is in the 10th grade at a public high school. She has no plans to go to college.

When "The Waltons" is in production Judy attends classes near the set with other minor members of the cast. Her schoolmates are Kami Cotler (Elizabeth), David Harper (Jim-Bob), Mary McDonough (Erin), Eric Scott (Ben).

Richard Thomas is 19 and attends college in the off-season. Judy is required to spend three hours in the studio schoolroom every working day when the public schools are in session.

She thinks she learns about the same amount of material at the studio as she does in normal high school classes. Judy isn't fond of school and anticipates the day when she won't have to study. Monday through Friday evenings, working or attending school, finds Judy attending Scientology meetings.

Weekend schedule

On weekends she catches up with such personal items as manicuring her fingernails, changing her hair styles or hanging on the telephone with girlfriends, whom she sees infrequently.

Judy plays the guitar sporadically and admits she is not really an expert at it.

She and brother David share ownership of a dog named Rusty, a cat who answers to Rascal and a tankful of tropical fish.

Currently Judy is caught up in redecorating her bedroom. She is antiquing the furniture. She is changing the color scheme from yellow, red and black to muted blues and greens.

Judy dates several boys but hasn't singled one out as a steady beau. All her boy friends drive automobiles. She is taken to movies, out to proms and occasional concerts.

"Once in a while my date takes me out to dinner," she says, "but it depends on how much money he has at the time."

Because she plays a depressed child Judy's wardrobe on the CBS show is threadbare. She makes up for her public image by wearing dresses, stylish pants and mini-skirts. But she also conforms to teen-age uniform codes by wearing jeans.

Judy Norton enjoys acting more than anything else, and hopes to continue to work in movies and television when she is an adult.

Television In Review

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — On Aug. 3, Gene Roche bows in as co-star of a returning ABC-TV summer series, "The Corner Bar," and a lot of viewers will look at him and say, "There's that guy from the commercials."

As it happens, he is an actor with years of experience. But, as ABC-TV notes, nowadays he is recognized by many television watchers as the genial gent (who) intones: "Professionally speaking..." and then urges viewers to buy a dishwashing detergent.

Commercials are a tremendous source of income for performers, and the public knows that. But the same public would probably be very surprised to see the list of acting credits for some of the veteran performers who do commercials but are not major headliners. Take, for instance, the case of Roche, who, in "The Corner Bar," a half-hour situation comedy series, plays the co-owner (with Anne Mearns) of a neighborhood New York City tavern.

An ABC-TV Summary

According to an ABC-TV summary, his early involvement in the acting profession was indicated when he majored in drama (and English) at college in Boston, and participated in school theatricals. Later, adds the network rundown, "Gene, with ecumenical impartiality, played roles in Yiddish theater English-language productions, including 'The Dybbuk,' and with the National Catholic Theatre... between legit engagements, he worked as a standup comic."

Roche's credits, according to the ABC-TV summary, include performances in San Francisco productions of "O'Casey," Brecht, Beckett and Ionesco plays. He played... in "Waiting For Godot" for two years.

In New York, he appeared in such stage productions as "Under Milkwood," "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," "Mother Courage," "Blood, Sweat and Stanley Poole," "All in Good Time," "Great Day in the Morning," "In the White House" and "The Price."

Has Movie Credits Too

He also has movie credits, among them "Slaughterhouse Five" and "Cotton Comes to Harlem." Furthermore, he is in the forthcoming film "W" with Twiggy and in the soon-to-be released "Newman" with George Peppard. He has also been in a number of television shows.

The first public telegraph message sent by Samuel Morse in 1844 was "What Hath God Wrought!"

Dear Consumer

Truth In Savings

By Virginia Knauer
Special Assistant to the President and Director
Office of Consumer Affairs

How much do you really know about savings accounts?

For example, should you have your account at a savings and loan association, a mutual savings bank, a credit union or a commercial bank? Should you have an account where the interest is compounded on a daily basis or on a quarterly basis?

Depending on the way you choose and use your account, you can get four, five or six percent interest. To help you choose an account that offers the highest interest or dividends, you may want to keep the following points in mind:

- Look for the stated annual percentage rate in any account. Earnings calculated on the day-of-deposit-to-day-of-withdrawal plan is best, especially if you deposit and withdraw frequently. With this plan, you earn interest for each day your money is deposited with no lost days of interest.

- Keep in mind if the account offers the bonus of a "grace period" when depositing. With some accounts, deposits received up to the 10th of any month will earn fully from the first of the month, providing the deposit remains to the end of the quarter.

- See if interest or dividends on the account are credited on a frequent basis. If interest is credited quarterly, you may not earn as much as you think if you make a withdrawal before the end of the quarter. Similarly, determine how often your interest is compounded. Daily or frequent compounding will give you a better yield than semiannual or annual compounding of the same rate.

- Check for penalties or charges for withdrawals and any special charges that will reduce your earnings. Also, check to see if there is a required minimum balance for the account. If so, determine what, if anything, you will earn if you don't keep the

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Reported growth in the third quarter will be more rapid than during April-June," according to Chase Manhattan Bank's International Finance. The letter says many industries will shorten or eliminate their regular plant closings for vacations and equipment changeovers. And the automobile industry has scheduled production during July through September at 21 per cent over the previous record for the period, it adds. "Thus, there is still much leeway for continued expansion," says the letter.

Investment Chatter

Selected silver stocks now present an opportunity for investors to make great fortunes in the market, says Indicator Digest. "Whenever there has been a sustained flight to gold as a storehouse of value during crisis periods," it says, "there has inevitably developed a concomitant surge in the price of silver." The letter also says industrial consumption of silver has surpassed production for some time and silver has benefitted from "runaway inflation on the prices of all commodities."

undergoing rapid appreciation, the striking gains in house values over the last two years may diminish once inflation rates are brought under control, it adds. "But whether houses go up fast or slow," the institute says, "fairly stiff inflation is going to characterize the near and far term future, so a house is still an excellent investment."

"Like the ill health of our stock market, the sickness apparent in the dollar is a manifestation of a widespread national inferiority complex," says Reynolds Securities Inc. Although the dollar has regained some strength in recent days, the firm says there is a worldwide feeling "American inflation appears to be no better than those of its competing trading partners." But the relative rates of depreciation of buying power are less in America than elsewhere, it adds.

It's Easier to Fit an Elephant

By JOANNE SCHREIBER

If you should ever find yourself sewing for an elephant, you'll be glad to know that elephants are easier to fit than people.

And the only way to dress a camel is to make a hole for his hump.

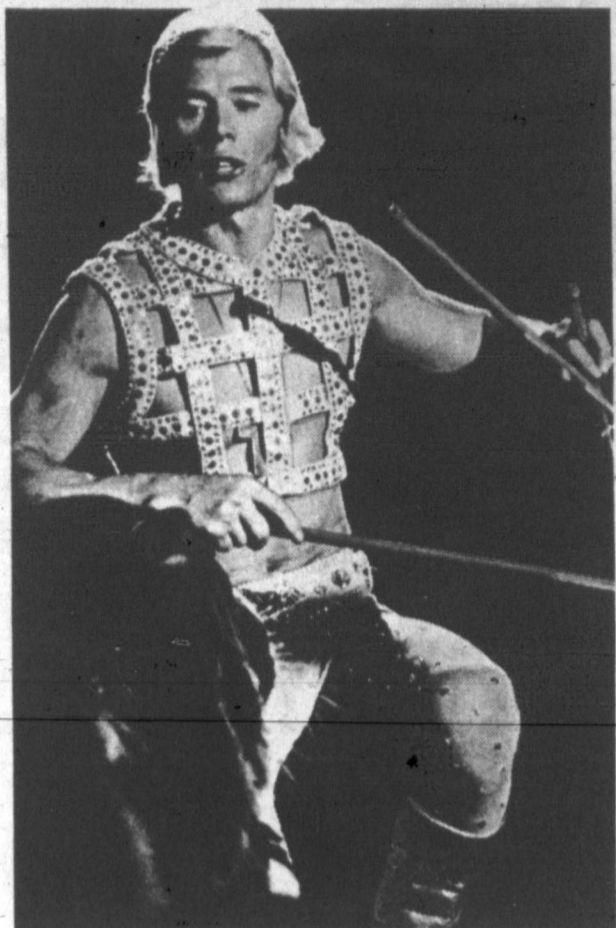

These are some of the trade secrets revealed by Don Foote, the terrifically talented young designer for Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus. He designs the hundreds of costumes needed to clothe the circus family, slipcovering elephants and dressing aerialists with equal skill and artistry.

It takes better-than-ordinary fabrics and sewing to create circus costumes to stand up to two full years of extraordinary use. Foote insists on quality fabrics. For basic tights and leotards, he uses an imported heavy duty stretch ski cloth and top-quality Helanca jersey.

He insists on pure silk satin and make a butterfly spectacular of floating, shimmering, tie-dyed China silk. Only silk, he says, is lightweight, strong and colorfast enough to do the job.

The elephants are dressed in German upholstery velvet backed in heavy awning canvas.

There are no shortcuts in circus stitching. Iron-ons and fusibles, beloved by home sewers because they speed up construction details, are rejected in the circus worknecting thread to break under strain.

Maintenance and cleaning are important considerations. The costumes are feather-dusted after each performance, spot-cleaned as needed and dry-cleaned about eight times a year. The circus smell is a built-in part of the costumes and no-one tries to get rid of it.

After two years, usable parts of costumes are salvaged for re-use, much as clothes are in families. Perhaps the most impressive example of coordinated costuming occurs in an animal act. Star trainer Gunther Gebel-Williams, his elephants, horses and tigers are outfitted identically in basic white, trimmed in sequined wine-toned scallops. Each set of scallops and sequins is scaled up in perfect proportion to the size of its wearer.

Currently, the Red Unit of the circus is moving westward from New York into Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas. The Blue Unit is heading south into Virginia and Louisiana. They tour from February through November, covering 83 towns in the United States and Canada. And Don Foote is heading home to Fort Lee, N.J., to start preliminary costume sketches for the 1974 edition of the Greatest Show on Earth.

WORRY CLINIC

Teddy is at one of the greatest milestones in a toddler's development! So learn the simple 7-point strategy for helping your kiddies imitate adults by taking over full responsibility for their toilet habits. And use the positive (not the negative) method!

CASE X-564: Teddy Z., aged 1½, presents a widespread problem.

"Dr. Crane," his grandmother began, "Teddy's mother uses these disposable modern diapers with Teddy."

"Maybe that is the reason she has been slow to try to teach him to tell her when he needs to go to the bathroom."

"So can you please tell young modern mothers how to toilet train their children?"

TOILET TRAINING

Some youngsters are more precocious than others about learning the greater comfort of dry diapers.

By the age of 18 months, however, the usual toddler should be launched on proper toilet habits.

Alas, some kiddies still are not toilet trained when they enter kindergarten at the age of 5.

And about 25 percent of 4-year-olds still wet the bed at night!

In helping a child break his slavery to soiled diapers, follow these important psychological steps:

(1) Use the positive or "Compliment Club" strategy to show your approval of his successes.

You can do this by expressing your praise verbally when he tells you he needs to go to the toilet.

Or merely withhold such compliments when he errs.

(2) Since children strain to imitate their parents, it is often effective to let the little boy remain in the bathroom with his daddy as the latter voids urine, and flushes the toilet.

Then daddy can urge Junior to imitate, and as a reward, let Junior also flush the toilet!

Mother and the little girl toddler can follow much the same routine.

(3) Don't let the child flush the toilet except as a reward for correct toilet behavior!

(4) Use the onomatopoeic terminology of "inkle" and "grunt" to designate those two toilet functions!

For kindergarten teachers now face a wide range of words to denote such actions so it is time to standardize these verbs in simple onomatopoeic fashion that befits the acts.

(5) During this toilet training period, omit the usual unwieldy diapers, so the toddler can merely lower his or her panties quickly, without aid from Mamma.

(6) It often is helpful to buy your toddler a modern doll that drinks and then voids water.

Use this doll as an object lesson for showing your toddler that after imbibing fluids or food, he must soon patronize the bathroom.

(7) By all means encourage your youngster to assume full responsibility for being "Big," like Daddy or Mother.

Don't continue as a psychological crutch for your youngsters, for they relish "being Big," which means, imitating adults!

To cure older victims of bedwetting, send 25 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope, for my booklet on how to construct the "N-Uroclast," with a few dry cells and a doorbell buzzer.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Bldg., Mellett, Indiana 47552. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Be prepared to treat shock

By David Hendin

The symptoms of shock include:
—Cold, clammy skin.
—Faintness and lightheadedness.
—Rapid, weak pulse.
—Irregular breathing.
—Paleness.
—Chills.

5. If the child is conscious (and there is no injury to the abdominal area) you may let him drink warm, nonalcoholic fluids.
6. Call a physician, police or hospital.
7. Keep the child still and calm.

Tourniquets are not recommended and should be used only to control bleeding from amputated or crushed limbs or for any profuse bleeding that can't be stopped otherwise. The tourniquet should be released briefly every 15 to 20 minutes.

(NEXT: a burn epidemic)

Fourth in a series

If these symptoms occur, treat the victim this way:

1. If possible, correct the cause. (Stop bleeding, etc.)
2. Keep the child lying down. If possible lower his head and chest below the rest of the body. At the very least, keep him lying flat. (This assures a good blood supply to the brain.)
3. Keep breathing passages open. Allow for plenty of fresh air.
4. Keep the child warm with blankets or clothing.

Shock is a complication that frequently accompanies other injuries, especially in children. It can be caused by a blow on the head, a broken bone, severe bleeding, poisoning, burns, electrical shock or any number of other injuries.

It may also be caused by severe allergic reactions to animal or insect bites or stings, medicine or poisonous plants. Any person with known allergies to medicines or other substances should wear a bracelet or necklace with a warning. Special jewelry is available from your doctor or druggist.

Basically shock occurs because of an interruption in the flow of blood to the major organs such as the heart, brain or kidneys. In the case of any accident or injury be on the lookout for shock. Often shock may be more severe than the injury that caused it. Shock can cause death. Whenever you give first aid treatment, be prepared to administer first aid for shock.

In the case of severe bleeding, such as spurting blood, always treat for shock. The best way to stop bleeding from a wound is to apply direct pressure. Put a clean cloth or gauze dressing directly on top of the wound and press firmly (keep dirty fingers away). Hold the cloth in place with a strong bandage made of tape, a belt or necktie.

Remember, shock can be more dangerous than the original injury. Be prepared to treat it. Don't panic. Your confidence will be transferred to the victim and will help his condition.

Unless bones are broken you should elevate the bleeding part to above the level of the heart.

Bob Lilly Still Hasn't Reported

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (UPI) — Dallas Cowboy's head coach Tom Landry, conducting a training camp with one eye on the players on the field and the other on the players who aren't there, Wednesday allowed a negative note to escape to reporters.

Landry, usually the most positive of people, was commenting on the holdout status of veterans Bob Lilly, the star defensive tackle and 12-year veteran, quarterback Craig Morton and center Dave Manders.

"I can't speculate on what he (Lilly) will do," Landry said. "I don't know all the reasons for his not reporting."

On the larger scale of the effect the holdouts will have on the other players, Landry slipped to the negative near the end of a typically upbeat statement.

"I felt better going into this camp than I've felt in some time," he said. "We had an excellent off-season program, and the best quarterback school we've ever had. I get a good feeling now around a lot of our players."

"I'm not naive enough to think that if we don't solve our problems we'll get the benefit from what we see. I am very confident we will solve them, but you never know for sure."

Defensive back Mel Renfro, a veteran who is practicing, indicated what Landry's problem might turn out to be.

"If these guys (the three veterans) don't show," Renfro said, "it'll be interesting to see what I do. I wouldn't just sit. There's too much discontent. Something's wrong somewhere and it's just no isolated case."

"But where does the real problem lie? Is it the players' fault, or is it management that's fouled up? Who? Where? What?"

General manager Tex Schramm said he had talked by telephone with Lilly and that Lilly "told me why he was not here and beyond that, I do not care to disclose the content of our conversation." Schramm's statement was not particularly inclusive, but he was pleased, suggesting that perhaps some of the Lilly-Cowboy problems have been eliminated.

Manders has officially announced he will retire. However, Schramm said the team's position is that negotiations are still underway with Manders.

There was no word on the status of Morton's holdout.

Both Squads Little League Stars In Playoffs Tonight

Both of Pampa's Little League All-Star teams play tonight in the finals of their respective district zone playoffs.

The National League all-stars meet the Carson County team in Optimist Park at 7:30 p.m. while their American League counterparts take on Borger North in Borger at the same time.

The winners of tonight's games will play in Borger Monday night at 7:30 p.m. for the outright district championship. The winner of the league crown will then move on to the regional tournament.

Pampa's National League reached the finals of zone play by beating the Memphis All-Stars, 7-2, earlier this week.

Carson County moved into the finals by getting past Clarendon, 6-3, and by beating Childress, 10-7.

National League president Gene Bynum urges all Pampa baseball fans to support the All-Stars by coming out to tonight's game.

"I believe you can safely expect some kind of expansion beyond the current 17 teams

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Los Angeles Dodgers, who didn't have one player in the top four at any position in the fans' All-Star balloting, made a comeback Wednesday when Sparky Anderson named the pitching staff for the All-Star game in Kansas City on July 24.

Anderson, the Cincinnati Reds' manager, selected Don Sutton, Claude Osteen and Jim Brewer of the Dodgers among the eight pitchers he named for the classic.

Tom Seaver of the New York Mets is the senior hurler on the NL squad for the mid-season classic against the American League. He was selected for the seventh time.

Anderson chose six righthanders—Seaver, Sutton, his own Jack Billingham, Rick Wise of the St. Louis Cardinals, Wayne Twitchell of the Philadelphia Phillies and Dave Giusti of the Pittsburgh Pirates—and southpaws Osteen and Brewer.

Coleman Coasts To 15th Victory Aided By Four Detroit Homers

By United Press International Mickey Stanley and Duke Sims hit solo homers while Gates Brown and Dick McAuliffe each slammed three-run home runs to help Joe Coleman coast to his 15th victory as Detroit trounced Kansas City, 14-4, Wednesday.

Stanley's 11th homer, one of 18 Detroit hits, broke a scoreless tie in the third and he singled home a run in the fourth. But Stanley seemed the most dejected person in the victorious Tiger dressing room.

"I didn't have as good a night as I should've had," Stanley said. "I had a chance for a good night. I'm just not satisfied with my play this year."

Coleman, who has lost eight, spaced eight hits and walked six. Steve Busby dropped to 7-10 by giving up the first six runs. In other American League games, Boston nipped Chicago, 6-1, Minnesota downed New York, 3-0, Milwaukee blanked Texas, 3-0, Baltimore tripped Oakland, 5-2, and Cleveland outlasted California in 11, 10-8.

In the National League, San Francisco topped St. Louis, 8-3, Pittsburgh nipped Los Angeles, 3-2, Montreal edged Houston in 10, 3-2, San Diego downed Chicago, 8-5, New York trounced Atlanta, 12-2, and Cincinnati stopped St. Louis, 7-3.

Boston ripped Chicago as Tommy Harper cracked his fourth homer in the space of a week, a three-run blow in the fourth inning. Reggie Smith then led off the fifth inning with his 11th homer of the year. All-Star Bill Lee went the route for his 12th victory against only three losses.

Jim Kaat gave up six hits and Tony Oliva stroked a two-run third inning homer to give the Twins their victory over New York. Mel Stottlemyre, who set an American League record by starting his 242nd consecutive game without a relief appearance since 1966, suffered the loss.

Dave May established a new Milwaukee record by hitting in his 14th consecutive game and his two-run homer, his 17th of the year, provided all the help All-Star Jim Colborn needed to lift the Brewers past Texas. Jim Bibby was the loser.

Merv Rettenmund's two home runs in the first two innings powered Baltimore's victory over Oakland. The slumping Rettenmund led off the game with a solo shot and then cracked a two-run blast following a walk in the second inning.

Johnny Ellis' two-run homer with two outs in the 11th inning boosted Cleveland over California as the Angels blew 5-0 and 8-3 leads. Cleveland was behind, 8-3, in the sixth inning when Jack Brohamer hit a two-run double in the sixth inning to knock out Rudy May. Dave Sells came on and was touched for a sacrifice fly in the eighth and two runs in the ninth as the Indians tied it.

Golf Tips from the Old Masters

By The Editors of Golf Digest

SNEAD SAYS BE BOLD ON PUTTING GREEN

Sam Snead has always been a bold golfer, some said too bold. But Snead disagrees, especially when it comes to putting.

"It may be wise to play conservatively elsewhere, but it's best to take the initiative on the greens," Snead says. "Try to make every putt, no matter what the distance. Whenever you can, put pressure on your opponents. Even when it appears safe to lag a long putt because you're a shot up on your opponent, I wouldn't do so. What if your foe makes his putt? Then you have to make yours, and if it's more than four inches, baby you could be in trouble."

"I believe it's always best to keep the initiative, even on an 'all or nothing' basis, rather than to depend on what someone else might do," Snead says.

TEACH YOURSELF TENNIS

12. Correcting Service Flaws

Check yourself on these common errors.

Insufficient spin. The toss and grip determine the spin. Heavy spin can be imparted to the ball by throwing it well in front of the body.

Insufficient power. This can be caused by a poor toss (not far enough, in front of the body), lack of wrist snap or weight moving backwards rather than forwards. A good serve must have wrist action, and this is easiest to achieve with a backhand grip. The beginner's greatest problem will occur in achieving the proper weight shift; the grip, toss and hit may be good, but the weight is not coming forward. A corrective measure is to concentrate on transferring weight from right to left and on moving the hips into the court.

Rocking. Many beginners "bow" as they are preparing to toss. As the left arm comes down, the novice rocks forward instead of shifting his weight backwards. He can correct this failing by not allowing the left arm to drop

Ho-Hum, Another Crisis

The central bankers of the world are out to save the dollar again. This will be the third time they saved it this year. The last two savings didn't last very long.

You need not worry about the dollar per se. What you have cause to be concerned about is not the dollar, but what the central bankers through the governments are doing to the dollar, having already done enough that they seem now to not know what else to do. When you get to thinking the subject through, you don't have any immediate influence as to any decision that central bankers and governments arrive at. So really there is no point in wasting energy in that direction. The real focal point is to plan your own survival in event of a panic of long or short duration. What others do is uncontrollable, what you can do is the framework that guides the constructive expenditure of time and energy.

As most people know, the dollar crisis is not a recent creation. There has been time to study the causes, possible cures, and probable consequences. We will offer a couple of considered premises that may assist you in any personal planning you undertake.

First, the U.S. government has plenty of remedy at hand if the authorities decide to avert a panic. But you have no way of being certain that they will apply the corrective. The individual is on good ground if he makes arrangements as though the authorities were not to be relied on. If they happen to do something right, he is even better off.

Second, the mere fact that the political machinery fails to function in a crisis does not mean that individuals must stand alone. Other people are in the same boat as you. If any of your friends happen to share our concern, and view forthcoming events seriously, you can make some voluntary arrangement with them for mutual protection. Some churches have been instructing their members for years on the advisability of laying in basic food supplies.

We aren't crying "wolf!" and we don't have a crystal ball. A reasonable person, however, will take into account the possibility that a strike temporarily could shut off supply lines to a metropolitan area if monetary inflation reached the runaway stage.

A Zany World

If thy eye offend thee, cut off thy foot.

If floods threaten, order fire extinguishers.

If fire rages, pour on the gasoline.

If speed and careless driving kill, stomp the gas pedal and careen down the highway at breakneck speed.

The ravings of a madman? Yes, indeed, and it would be so judged if seriously proposed. Yet, the suspicion grows that it is upon some such rationale that governments act.

And not without reason. There is perverse method in such madness. So long as government can avoid removing the cause of chaotic conditions, it can act indefinitely with no prospect of solving the problem — growing like Topsy in the process.

Thus, when bureaucratic planning creates "mess," commission and council broaden the scope of their activities; assuring an even bigger "mess" at some future date. Bigger messes call for still further bureaucratic intervention; according to the rationale employed; and the cycle repeats without end.

Government meddling and obstructionism create an energy crisis. Does the government act to remove the cause. No, it does not. Instead, the tempo of meddling and obstacle-erecting is stepped up to a faster pace and, of course, the crisis deepens.

The market place is gorged on government created dollars and prices head for the stratosphere. Do the planners shut down the money creation and give the law of supply and demand a chance to get in its curative work? Unthinkable! Speed up the process and meddle with prices instead — via Phase 1 and 2 and 3 and 4. Government "logic" at work.

Fifty thousand American males dead in Vietnam; hundreds of thousands crippled or maimed — "fighting communism," we were told. Finally, with the screams of protest of the nation dining in its ear; the government agrees to withdraw from that bloodied land. And, as the smoke begins to clear, through a rift we see President Nixon and Communist boss Brezhnev toasting each other and exchanging gifts in a prelude to the further giving away of U.S. taxpayers' wealth.

Truly, as columnist Russell Kirk is wont to say, "It's a zany world we live in, my masters."

He who is small in faith will never be great in anything, but failure.

$13 Billion Going For Foreign Aid

WASHINGTON — On May 1, four months after the opening of this session of Congress, President Nixon finally sent a message to Congress calling for $2.9 BILLION to finance foreign aid in the next fiscal year beginning July 1.

This confirmed our worst fears that despite cut-offs, cut-backs and impoundments of funds for domestic spending, the administration is determined to continue borrowing and shoveling out money through foreign handout programs.

As we have so often pointed out, this one message and this one bill, even though it calls for almost $3 BILLION, is only the tip of this iceberg. What the press and television-radio seldom tell the public is that through other channels and programs the annual expenditure for foreign aid is four times that amount.

In the current fiscal year, for instance, approximately $13 BILLION is being expended for foreign aid in all its ramifications, including hundreds of millions in dues and assessments to international organizations and billions to international "lending" institutions.

And, it should be noted that in his proposals to Congress on May 1, President Nixon requested no money for North Vietnam. He has made it completely clear, however, that such a request would be made later. It will be remembered that a little more than a year ago the administration proposed that $2½ BILLION be made available for reconstruction and rehabilitation of Communist North Vietnam.

In his May 1 message, and attempted justification for spending $3 BILLION on foreign aid, the President said: "America's fund of goodwill in the world is substantial, precisely because we have traditionally given substance to our concern and compassion for others."

Yes, Mr. President, American taxpayers have given of their substance—TWO HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE BILLION DOLLARS WORTH—to foreign aid but where is that "substantial fund of goodwill?"

The recent anti-American votes in the United Nations and other anti-American acts around the world make it clear that the United States has fewer friends and less goodwill than when the foreign aid programs were started. Meanwhile, the $225 BILLION has made one of the largest contributions to the staggering debt, deficit and inflation that now has this nation floundering in a financial swamp with chaos threatened.

In his message to Congress and in further attempted justification of foreign aid, Mr. Nixon said: "Suppose my neighbor's home catches fire and I have a length of garden hose four or five hundred feet away. If he can take my garden hose and connect it up with his hydrant, I may help him to put out his fire."

It was my privilege to respond on the House floor by saying the President's $3 BILLION proposal would be "the most expensive garden hose in the history of mankind," and reminding him that drastically reducing foreign aid would be a big help in quenching the fires of inflation that are burning in this country.

Not a Dry Eye in the House

BRUCE BLOSSAT Mitchell never solid with Nixon

By Bruce Blossat

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Even as he was testifying before the Ervin Senate committee on Watergate, myths about former Attorney General John Mitchell's status with President Nixon in earlier times persisted.

Consistently he has been identified as the "man Nixon chose to manage his 1968 campaign." Yes, indeed, but very late in the game — after others had served for many critical months and a diligent but unsuccessful search had been conducted for still another.

I have written earlier that Mitchell's vaunted closeness to Mr. Nixon was to a large extent a fantasy, and not just as applied to recent times when he couldn't even get to see the Big Man in the White House.

I hold to that, notwithstanding recent surprisingly one-sided sympathy portrayals (how sad the fall of the strong man), which etch Mitchell as the Great Rock, the secure one on whom the President relied principally for political guidance virtually from the beginnings of his 1968 campaign.

Actually, the first official Nixon campaign manager was Dr. Gaylord Parkinson, California Republican state chairman, who was chosen early in 1967 — not least to give the President's campaign a national scope and flavor and blunt the fact that at that stage it was heavily anchored mostly by widespread support among carefully cultivated southern GOP leaders.

Mr. Nixon quickly discovered that Parkinson's flamboyance and lack of organizational skills were a handicap. But he was saved having to dump him when the illness of Parkinson's wife caused him to withdraw.

The next manager, picked in midsummer after a long lapse of time, was former Oklahoma governor Henry Bellmon. He took the job reluctantly on an interim basis, since he planned to run for the Senate (which he did, victoriously.) Bellmon was mainly a figurehead, with the advertised real manager the Washington-based Robert Ellsworth, a former Kansas congressman.

By late winter, 1968, Bellmon was gone. Officially "executive director" Ellsworth continued in charge while Nixon forces looked hard but vainly for an effective, prestigious replacement.

Spring was far advanced when the quest was abandoned and the job was given to John Mitchell, almost by a process of osmosis. He had been managing a tight organizational ship in Mr. Nixon's New York headquarters, had done a good job setting up primary operations in Wisconsin and some other states.

Ellsworth meantime had committed a grievous error or two, and had failed to crack the inner circle rooted in Mr. Nixon's law firm.

Yet, for all his official advancement, Mitchell missed two of three major meetings key Nixon men held with their boss at Key Biscayne and Montauk Point, L.I., in June-July, 1968, at which they laid the groundwork for the fall campaign.

And the evidence is compelling that almost up to election time, Mitchell felt insecure in his post, resented anyone who gained access to the candidate over his head, and was particularly suspicious of an old Nixon political maneuverer, Murray Chotiner, whose poor public image kept him necessarily out of sight.

The "Great Rock" even then seemed to some insiders as made of Hollywood's papier-mache.

Your Health Medicine Doesn't Cause Tremors

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am 75 years of age and retired a year ago.

My weight varies between 135 and 140; am 5-foot, 6-inches in height. Don't drink or smoke.

For some years I weighed 150 and suffered high blood pressure. Now this appears to be under control, although my doctor has me taking a pill every other day. Preventive medication perhaps.

Have always been an active shooter, both large and small bore and shotgun, and still enjoy these hobbies, as well as fishing. I have given up hunting and now have a strong aversion to killing. I get my sport from trying to break clay "birds." And punching holes in paper targets.

Two years ago, my doctor discovered that I have a malignancy of the prostate and put me on some sort of a hormone. I have to take these the rest of my life.

Do these pills (or the pressure pills I have taken) have any insidious side effects. I am somewhat worried about this possibility because during the past year I have noticed a tremor of fingers and hands, along with what I would say is a lack of control of my thumbs. This difficulty manifests itself especially as I attempt to separate pages of books or magazines.

My doctor of many years, and in whom I have full confidence, told me this tremor condition is normal in many persons of my age. He evidently feels that the condition cannot be helped. Can you give me any suggestions as to what might be done to help this shaky situation? There must be something.

Have always been proud of my steady nerves and good coordination, so am really shook up by this development. (And you can easily imagine what it's doing to my rifle scores.)

If you can give me any help, I would surely appreciate it.

Dear Reader — Your tremor is not caused by your medicine. As your doctor has told you, this commonly occurs in individuals as they get older. Some people have more trouble with this than others. Often it is associated with atherosclerosis, or fatty blockage of the arteries, which increases as people get older in our society. This is particularly true if one has had a problem of high blood pressure.

It seems to me that you've done rather well since you have reduced your weight, which in turn, along with your doctor's help, has resulted in decreasing your blood pressure which is the most important thing that could be done. The hormone pill has no effect whatever on your tremor. It is a female hormone used to neutralize male hormone. This is a common treatment for individuals with malignancy of the prostate and is a very useful approach to the problem in many cases.

I would think that your tremor should emphasize the need for you to eliminate any excess amount of body fat that you might have, even though I know you've already lost some weight, and particular attention to dietary management which I've discussed often in my column for the prevention of atherosclerosis, or fatty blockage of the arteries.

Pressure Building For Recompensation Hearings

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — More pressure is building up for hearings by the Senate Armed Services Committee on the long-pending legislation to recompute the pay of some 900,000 military retirees.

Sen. Harry Byrd, Ind.-Va., World War II Navy veteran and member of the committee, is throwing his influential weight behind the effort for hearings.

It was authoritatively learned that Byrd, at a closed-door committee meeting, noted that hearings on recompensation had been promised and urged they be conducted "as soon as possible."

The influential Virginia legislator has long supported recompensation, and took the occasion to stress that and the commitment to hold hearings. The committee is in the process of "writing up" the multi-billion-dollar military procurement bill, and the expectation has been that this major measure would be sent to the full Senate for consideration by the middle of this month.

However, the inside word now is that it is unlikely; that this legislation will probably not emerge from the committee until after Congress's annual August vacation. That means the big and controversial procurement bill will not be taken up by the Senate until sometime in September.

In turn, that means there is little likelihood the Armed Services Committee will get around to holding recompensation hearings until after the procurement measure has been disposed of — probably not before early October.

Last month, Sen. John Tower, Tex., second ranking Republican committee member and author of a recompensation bill co-sponsored by a number of other Senators, told this column he expected recompensation hearings after the procurement measure had been acted on.

"Sen. Stennis promised there would be hearings," Tower said, "and I am sure that commitment will be met. My best judgment is that will be done after completion of consideration of the procurement authorization bill."

"When is that apt to be?" "Probably not before Congress shuts down in August for a month's summer recess."

"That means there is virtually no chance of hearings taking place before fall."

Tower nodded agreement.

Waiting In The Wings

The question of whether hearings will or won't be held may turn out to be moot — if Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee, has his way.

The Indianan is all set to again offer his recompensation bill as an amendment to the $27.5 billion military procurement measure — as he did so successfully last year.

On that showdown, the Senate overwhelmingly approved recompensation 82 to 4.

Hartke is firmly confident the Senate will do that again this year and has served notice on the bipartisan leaders of the chamber that he will offer his measure as an amendment "to the first military bill taken up by the Senate."

"Recompensation is long overdue," Hartke told this column. "President Nixon included $360 million in his budget for recompensation, and there is absolutely no reason why Congress shouldn't vote the necessary legislation to put recompensation into effect. My amendment is ready and waiting, and the Senate will again have the chance to vote on it. I have absolutely no doubt as to the outcome; it will be just as decisive as it was last year."

The Promise

While Sen. Byrd will vote for Hartke's proposal, he still feels it is worthwhile to continue pressing for committee hearings.

In his opinion, that is advisable to further the recompensation cause.

It is also Byrd's belief that Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., committee chairman, recovering from bullet wounds sustained in a holdup last December, intends to make good on his promise to conduct hearings.

"Sen. Stennis is a man of his word," said Byrd, "and I know he favors hearings and intends to have them at the first opportunity. He doesn't make a promise lightly and always follows through."

Stennis made his promise to hold recompensation hearings last October, when a House-Senate conference committee discarded the Hartke amendment approved by the Senate by an overwhelming 82 to 4 majority. Following is the verbatim exchange between Hartke and Stennis on the floor of the Senate:

Stennis: "I am now in the process of arranging for someone to be chairman of a subcommittee that will hold hearings on this matter."

Hartke: "Can the Senator give me any kind of time reference; can we anticipate a bill coming to the Senate floor by March 1, 1973?"

Stennis: "April 15 to 15 — let us put it that way."

Hartke: "We have assurances then that hearings will be commenced as early as possible, that a subcommittee will be appointed within a few weeks and that the chairman will urge them to consider this matter and report a bill not later than April 15. That is the announced intention of the chairman (Stennis)."

Stennis: "I will certainly advise the Senator on this matter, and that is my intention."

The only genuine superiority is that of mind and character; all other kinds are fictitious, affected, false; and it is good to make them feel that this is so when they try to show off before the superiority that is true.
