Agriculture Department Ups Farm Income Estimate

Expert Says Return Still To Run Under '55, However

By BERNARD BRENNER

WASHINGTON —UP— Rising farm prices will lift farmers' income above earlier government estimates for this year, an Agriculture Department expert predicted today.

Don Paarlberg, an economist aide to Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson, said 1956 net farm income will "still probably run under 1955." But the decline will be less than the five per cent drop forecast earlier, he said.

The department's monthly price report yesterday showed farm prices up 3 per cent in the month ending May 15. The index of prices received by farmers stood at 242 per cent of the 1910-14 base period, the highest level reported since last June.

In another report, the Agriculture Department said substantial price increases for fruits, vegetables, meat and coffee pushed food prices to the highest level of the year May 13.

It said higher coffee prices reflected an anticipated shortage in mild blending types. Retail meat prices rose because of a corresponding boost in farm prices for live animals.

Paarlberg said the climb in farm prices is not going to keep going indefinitely. It will be limited by the still-heavy government surplus stocks of wheat, cotton, corn and other farm products. The existence of these surpluses tends to hold prices down.

Squall Line Has Moved Over State

By UNITED PRESS

A squall line that generated thunderstorms, high winds and tornado funnels over a vast area of Texas yesterday had moved through most of the state by this morning.

The U.S. Weather Bureau at Fort Worth reported it had reached a Lufkin-Austin-Junction-El Paso line shortly after daybreak.

Temperatures in the lower to middle 60s were reported in the cool air while readings in the 70s prevailed south of the front. The only rain reported early this morning was a very light drizzle at Lubbock.

Kansas Worth Millions
Thunderstorms and heavy rains worth millions of dollars to farmers and ranchers fell in vast areas of the state yesterday. The heaviest rains fell in vast areas of Texas where amounts ranged between a half inch and one and a half inches.

A two-inch rain fell at Bonham in a two-hour period, and Denison got an inch of rain in about 45 minutes.

A blinding downpour at Denison was responsible for the deaths of three persons—one an expectant mother—when their automobile was struck by a Katy passenger train at a crossing. They couldn't see the approaching train because of the rain.

Baby Also Dies
The victims were Mrs. Johnny Stark, 20; her father, Herbert W. Hamilton, 56; and his son Bobby, 15.

When physicians saw that Mrs. Stark's life couldn't be saved, they operated on her in the hope of saving her baby, but due to three months. But the baby also was dead.

Numerous tornado funnels were reported to weathermen in both Texas and Oklahoma. The highest winds hit Central Texas, where Austin reported winds clocked at 61 miles an hour, and Waco reported gusts up to 74 miles an hour, with blowing dust.

There was a report of a funnel in the Waco area, but it was never confirmed.

Dope Bill O.K. Is Seen

WASHINGTON —UP— Rep. Hale Boggs (D-La.) predicted today the House will unanimously approve his bill next week to "throw the book" at narcotics smugglers and peddlers — without a death penalty.

Boggs' bill would impose jail sentences up to 40 years and forbid paroles or suspended sentences for anyone convicted of selling or smuggling heroin to adults.

The Senate yesterday passed a similar bill aimed primarily at stamping out the use of heroin. It would permit a jury to impose the death sentence for conviction of selling heroin to a juvenile and for a third conviction of selling or smuggling heroin to adults.

Boggs said his bill would "throw the book all the way across the board" at peddlers or any kind of narcotics. He told a reporter that bootleg penalties just on heroin will force peddlers and addicts to switch to something else.

Boggs said he was concerned about the Senate death penalty provision. He said juries might think it too stiff and decide instead to go lightly on the offender.

The Boggs bill, approved unanimously by the House Ways & Means committee yesterday, provides:

That narcotics smugglers and peddlers get from five to 20 years on the first offense; 10 to 40 years on the second and subsequent offenses, and be fined up to $20,000.

Selling to a minor would mean up to $20,000 fine and from 10 to 40 years. (Under present law, they get two to five years on first conviction; five to 10 years on the second and 10 to 20 years on the third, and a fine up to $2,000.)

That narcotics agents have sweeping new powers, including the right to carry guns, serve search warrants and make arrests without warrants when they have cause to believe they have found a violation. The government would also be allowed to use wire-tap evidence in narcotics court cases, a provision which was also in the original Senate bill but which the Senate later knocked out.

Shay, Whassa Big Idea Anyway?

HOUSTON —UP— Charles Bentley Bostick, 45, was ticketed late yesterday by traffic officer J. W. Carter for running a red light.

Bostick kept driving when Carter blew his whistle, but had to stop a short distance away behind piled up rush hour traffic.

Bostick stubbornly denied running the red light. "I did not run the ticket and I will not sign the light," Carter quoted Bostick as saying.

Bostick tore up the ticket in front of the officer and flung the tiny pieces out the car window.

Patrolman Carter then brought Bostick to the city jail and filed charges of driving while intoxicated against him before Justice W. C. Ragan.

Citizens For Eisenhower Are Losing 'Dump Nixon' Vigor

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON —UP— There isn't much left of dump-Nixon vigor in the Citizens for Eisenhower organization which will end a three-day convention here today.

The delegates seem to like the vice president and to accept him as President Eisenhower's ticketmate this year. They had a chance to show their feelings when Nixon addressed the convention this morning. Undersecretary of Commerce Walter Williams got a big hand yesterday with a speech which plugged for the vice president.

There has been a lot of behind-the-scenes infighting in recent months involving Nixon's friends and spokesmen of the citizens organization. Nixon's friends went all-out for an endorsement of their man and a change in the organization's name to make it read: Citizens for Eisenhower and Nixon.

The organization would not budge and will not, although some of its top people would welcome an immediate Nixon endorsement.

Organization Republicans generally would welcome an immediate endorsement. Typical of that sentiment was last week's action by the Senate Republican campaign committee urging a unification of all campaign efforts in behalf of the Eisenhower administration.

The committee significantly added: "Such unified efforts should include in campaign activities generally the coupling of the names of President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon and the urging of voters to support the entire Republican ticket."

That will not budge the citizens' group either. Their plan now is to ignore Nixon until he is forced upon their attention by the Republican national convention next August in San Francisco. Only then, if he is re-nominated, will the names of the two men be linked.

Kefauver Burning Bridges To South

By RAYMOND LAHR

WASHINGTON —UP— Sen. Estes Kefauver seems to be burning his already rickety bridges to the South just as he did in his unsuccessful bid for the Democratic presidential nomination four years ago.

Both he and his chief active rival, Adlai E. Stevenson, were in California today in the home stretch of their campaign for the state's 68 national convention votes. The delegate will be chosen in the primary next Tuesday.

Kefauver cut loose from the South at the 1952 Democratic convention when his supporters sided with those northern Democrats who resisted seating Southern delegates in the fight over the so-called loyalty oath. Stevenson backers then sided with the South and eventually won him the nomination, although he was not an avowed candidate.

Manager, F. Joseph Donohue, have used harsh language in referring to some Southern Democratic leaders.

Although Kefauver is a Tennesseean, many Southerners regard him as a renegade and he has picked up no substantial Southern delegate support this year. While he and Stevenson both have said the Supreme Court decision against school segregation was carried out, Stevenson has been tagged as the more "moderate" candidate by many in the South.

Shivers Wants Congress To Curb Supreme Court Powers

DALLAS —UP— Gov. Allan Shivers today called on Congress to take "immediate and positive steps" to curb the powers of the Supreme Court.

Shivers, in a speech prepared for delivery at the mid-year meeting of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, assailed what he called a "situation wherein a single individual — the fifth member of a Supreme Court 5-4 majority — can, in effect, rewrite our constitution without regard of reference to the constitutional processes of amendment."

Gov. John Simms of New Mexico, chairman of the commission, told delegates from 26 states that the oil and gas industry can shed its illusion that it can get consideration from the federal government. There must be a line drawn somewhere, he said.

Shivers warned of a "sweeping epidemic of federalists," and said unless "those who believe are willing to act as well as talk, this is indeed the sundown hour for the states."

He specifically recommended that Congress enact a law spelling out congressional intent that state legislation shall be invalidated by federal legislation on the same subject "only when the federal act contains an express provision to that effect."

Shivers referred earlier to recent Supreme Court action which erased the laws of 42 states prohibiting Communist activity "or other advocacy of the overthrow of our government on the ground that there is a federal law against sedition."

"In recent weeks the flow of Supreme Court opinions adverse to state government have almost reached flood stage," he said.

"The nation needs now, as never before, men who believe in the integrity of state government and are willing to defend it," the governor said.

Simms called a recent presidential veto of a bill that would have removed federal control from gas production an immolation, which he said means "kill as a sacrificial victim."

Shivers attacked a "situation wherein a single individual — the fifth member of a Supreme Court 5-4 majority — can, in effect, rewrite our constitution without regard or references to the constitutional processes of amendment."

"From now on we know what to expect," Simms told the oilmen, from 28 states. "By this time we should be free from the illusion that we can expect consideration — not 'special' consideration — just consideration (from the Federal government)."

"Somewhere in this continuing struggle the line must be drawn. It is the duty of the oil compact commission to consider... the growing peril to the basic police power of states to regulate the development and production of oil and gas."

Roomer's Get '57 Meet
Gary devoted nearly all of his speech to the natural resources of Oklahoma. He said he felt that the commission ought to know something about this, since the 1957 fall meeting will be held in Oklahoma.

He said he feels that the future of Oklahoma depends upon its young citizens, and "we can be extremely proud of our young citizens." He said a number of states, including Texas, have reason to remember the accomplishments of the Oklahoma football team.

Southern Baptists To Name Convention City

KANSAS CITY —UP— Southern Baptists met today to choose their 1956 convention city and take part in a "youth day" program. Some 10,000 delegates are attending the week-long meeting.

The convention elected Dr. C. C. Warren, a Charlotte, N. C., minister, to his second term as president of the church's national conference yesterday.

Dr. Warren's re-election was in keeping with a custom of the conference, which gives the president a second term.

Other officers elected were Dr. Conrad Willard, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church in Kansas City, first vice president; the Rev. D. L. Stennis, Meridian, Miss., second vice president; James W. Merritt, Gadsden, Ga., senior secretary; Joe W. Burton, Nashville, Tenn., secretary; and Porter Routh, Nashville, Tenn., treasurer.

The State Department expressed surprise today that Russia complained through diplomatic channels about the so-called telephone-tapping tunnel into Communist East Berlin.

The Soviet Union charged in a note to the United States that it had proof that American spies dug the tunnel and filled it with communications-tapping equipment.

Oil Compact Commission Hears Dignitaries In Meet

DALLAS —UP— Undersecretary of State Herbert Hoover Jr. and Gen. Allan Shivers of Texas, John F. Simms of New Mexico and Raymond Gary of Oklahoma all spoke before the mid-year meeting of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission in a single session today.

Hoover warned the oilmen to expect the importation of "appreciable quantities" of oil in future years. Shivers urged Congress to take "immediate and positive steps" to curb the powers of the Supreme Court. Simms said the oil and gas industry can't expect any "consideration" from Washington.

Gary praised the natural resources of his state, saying that Oklahoma's most precious resource is its youth. He also praised the University of Oklahoma football team, New York Yankee baseball player Mickey Mantle and National Champion Cowboy Jim Shouder, all of whom are Oklahomans.

Hoover, a former mining engineer, said he believes that oil can be imported without "endangering the basic prosperity of our domestic fuel industries." He said there are many "complex and difficult" problems to be solved and appealed to the industry to help solve them.

He said U.S. oil policy must be to encourage maximum exploration efforts at home. At the same time, he said, U.S. policy must be to see to it that petroleum supplies not available at home are "readily obtainable from other friendly nations."

Shivers attacked a "situation wherein a single individual — the fifth member of a Supreme Court 5-4 majority — can, in effect, rewrite our constitution without regard or references to the constitutional processes of amendment."

"From now on we know what to expect," Simms told the oilmen, from 28 states. "By this time we should be free from the illusion that we can expect consideration — not 'special' consideration — just consideration (from the Federal government)."

Capitol Hill Roundup

WASHINGTON —UP— The Senate and House may split over whether to make narcotics peddling punishable by death.

Rep. Hale Boggs (D-La.) predicted Friday that the House next week will unanimously approve this bill that would "throw the book" at narcotics smugglers and peddlers. But the bill does not include the death penalty.

The Senate yesterday passed a death-penalty bill aimed at stamping out the use of heroin. It would authorize the death penalty for selling heroin to juveniles and for a third heroin-peddling conviction.

Boggs said he is afraid juries might think the death penalty is too stiff and there fore let offenders off lightly.

He also said stamping out the heroin traffic isn't enough. He said his bill hits "across the board."

Jane Talk

By JANE KADINGO
Pampa News Women's Editor

AS HE MAKES HIS ROUNDS day after day, the postman is to be considered a friend by many people on his route. He seldom people get a chance to help out their friend, the postman, but now they can help him help others. I'm talking about the Postmen's March on Cancer now in progress. It is the postmen's way of trying to save lives, of doing a service to their fellow man.

EACH POSTMAN is proud of the contributions he brings back from his route, but it is up to the people to help make his efforts a success. And it is so simple. All you have to do is put your contribution in an envelope addressed to "Postmen's March on Cancer, Pampa, Texas," place a 3-cent stamp on it, and slip it into your mailbox for the postman to pick up. And you help save lives too, by supporting the American Cancer Society's three-fold program of research, education and service to cancer patients.

I was talking to Mrs. H. H. Hicks yesterday. She originated the idea of the Postmen's March and makes the arrangements for it each year. She said that she read where $50 million is being spent a year to defeat cancer — but six times that much is spent on chewing gum! So why not forgo a package of gum and help save someone's life. If everyone in Pampa gave 10 cents to the Cancer Crusade through the Postmen's March, Pampa would have made its goal! It seems so little to ask. We can all afford at least that much!

Help make your postman proud of his route!

BUYING a bottle of your favorite fragrance is only the beginning. Knowing where to put that fragrance on the body in order to get the best effect from it is even more important.

According to Juneeuse Cosmetics Inc., exclusive distributors of Perfume Oils in our country, a fragrance must react to the individual skin for its real and final effect. That is why a scent in the bottle is different after it is on the skin. This is especially true of Perfume Oils which are undiluted with alcohol and so do not evaporate and are three times longer lasting in their concentrated fragrance than perfume.

For best effect the fragrance should be placed, just a few drops, on the pulse at your wrist, behind the lobes of the ears, at the lowest point of the neck-line, or on your hair.

When a lady is going dancing she should put a few drops of fragrance in the bend of her leg just behind the knee, for with exercise the blood circulates with increased warmth and carries the fragrance upward over the body. This has long been a secret of women on the continent, and it's time the American woman should be told about it to "add to her charm and to accent her personality."

SOMETHING very old is some women that they are discovering now — the genuine fragrance of real Perfume Oils made available by Juneeuse.

For centuries, in fact before and since Biblical times, women of the Old World of Europe and the Orient have used perfume oils for their lasting fragrance which is 3 to 4 times more enduring than perfume.

Unlike perfume which is always diluted with alcohol and therefore evaporates both in the bottle and on the body, perfume oil contains no alcohol at all and so cannot evaporate. Because of this potency it can and should be used sparingly. Just a few drops on the skin or hair linger in fragrance from 12 to 14 hours, whereas perfume lasts only from 3 to 4 hours at the longest. This has the advantage of economy as well as effect.

White Deer Bridge Club Has Meeting

WHITE DEER — (Special) — Mrs. Sam Christy and Mrs. M. A. Gann were honored at a meeting of the Luncheon Bridge Club in the home of Mrs. Everett Butler.

Following the luncheon, a pink and blue shower was held for the honorees.

Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Bill Abbott, high score; Mrs. L. A. Puckett, second high; and Mrs. Horace Williams, traveling.

Members attending were Mrs. Wayne Jordan, T. C. Jackson, Richard Barnes, W. T. Townsend, L. A. Puckett, Vic Bates, Horace Williams, Alvin Williams, Bob More, Bill Abbott. The group will resume meetings in September.

Soap, hot water and the heat of ironing may set a stain in good clothes forever. The best plan is to remove the stain as soon as possible after it occurs. Then launder.

Whichever she chooses, she will simmer it long and slow, and finally add some of the cooking juices of the fowl.

The French sauce is usually thinner than the American. If you wish to thicken yours with flour, be sure to allow the flour to cook into the flavor of the sauce.

At Maxim's we often serve Sauce Champagne with roast chicken. Sauce Diable is tangier, the classic sharp sauce. It is versatile, and takes nicely to the addition of curry, parsley flakes, and other seasonings.

With the poultry is served a crisp green salad, crusty French bread, and succulent fruit for dessert. It's a meal that's just as much at home in America as it is in France.

RUTH MILLETT Children's Reading Club Starts Today

There are some things women could learn from men. Here are a few of them:

They could learn to keep small change in their coin purses the way men keep it in their pockets. Then they would have the correct bus fare, the coin for the parking meter, the right change for a fifteen-cent purchase. And they wouldn't have to make a special trip to the cashier for change with which to tip the waiter.

They could learn not to interrupt when someone else is talking. Get a group of women together and they all fight to finish a sentence. But men, as a rule, let a man finish a story before getting into the act.

They could learn to take what they hear with a grain of salt instead of swallowing whole every bit of gossip that floats by and immediately giving it the dignity of fact.

They could learn to delegate heads to figure out ways of making their daily chores as easy and businesslike as possible.

They could learn to delegate work. There's no more reason for a homemaker to do everything herself when she has a family who could spare in home responsibilities than for a businessman to type his own letters when he has a secretary.

They could learn to spend just as much time on trying to work out a problem and then put it out of mind. They would then be free to concentrate on something else instead of worrying a problem the way a dog worries a bone.

They could learn to create a little excitement in their lives instead of meekly settling for a dull routine. A man, fed up with responsibility, takes time off to go fishing.

GOLDEN BROWN, skin crisp and buttery, these chickens have been cooked to a perfection which is the French genius.

COOK'S NOOK

Treat Poultry Reverently. Add Emphasis With Sauce

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food and Markets Editor
The Frenchman treats all foods with respect; but poultry with reverence. We asked Louis Yaudable, proprietor of the world-famous restaurant Maxim's in Paris to give American brides some of the French chef's secrets. Here is his advice: Learn to roast chicken as the French housewife does, for unadorned — of flavor. First, she chooses two small chickens rather than a single large one, each weighing not more than 3 pounds (broiler fryers).

Next she rubs the birds all over gently with soft, sweet butter, and sprinkles them nicely with salt. She doesn't stuff them. She doesn't want outside flavors to compete with the bird's own. She simply ties the legs together, and the wings close to the body.

The birds, arranged in a shallow pan, go into a preheated oven (400 degrees) to bake just one hour, or until the juices run out clear — not pinkish. They are brushed occasionally with more soft or melted sweet butter. When done, they are golden brown and the skin is crisp and buttery. Serve on a platter, binding strings removed, and surrounded with watercress.

Of course there's a sauce! Like "love and marriage" the French sauce and the French dish go together. No hasty, last-minute choice, but a carefully thought-out decision.

THE PAMPA DAILY NEWS

Jon Jones Is New Preacher Here

Jon E. Jones, new preacher for the Mary Ellen and Harvester congregation of the Church of Christ, arrived in Pampa Wednesday to assume full time duties with the congregation.

Jones has been preaching for the congregation on Sundays since about the first of February. He has been driving from Abilene each week where he was Alumni Director for Abilene Christian College. He left that position this week to take over the work here in Pampa.

He considers Amarillo as his home but stated that he was glad to be in Pampa. "I have met a lot of friendly people in Pampa and feel that my wife and I will enjoy the work here," Jones added.

The Joneses moved into the congregation residence located at 1717 Duncan Wednesday. Mrs. Jones is the former Joan Brooks of Amarillo.

Jones is a 1953 graduate of Abilene Christian College and has been associated with the Alumni work of the school since receiving his degree. He has preached at several churches throughout Texas, while in college and during his work with the Alumni group.

Women In The Church

By MARY FOWLER

After fifty-six years of consideration, resolutions, and debate, women ministers may now be admitted to all the rights and offices of the "travelling ministry" of the Methodist Church. They may even be appointed as district superintendents, and could be elected bishops. This granting of "full clergy rights" to women within the Methodist Church was voted by the denomination's recent General Conference on the basis of more than 4,000 "memorials" (petitions) presented to that body from all parts of the nation and church. For more than thirty years Methodist women could be ordained as deacons and elders, but could not until now be admitted into membership in the annual conferences. For the present it is not expected that many women will be encouraged to enter the theological seminaries and prepare for the ministry. More than 30 Methodist women are now serving as "supply pastors" of churches.

Dr. Georgia Harkness, believed to be the only woman teacher in the United States whose exclusive field is theology, has been named as professor of Christianity at the International Christian University in Tokyo, Japan. Dr. Harkness, an ordained local preacher of the Methodist Church, will be on sabbatical leave from the Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, California, where she has been professor of applied theology since 1950. Her term of service at International Christian University will be from September to December, 1956, and from April to July, 1957. She will spend the months between semesters in either Formosa or the Philippines.

The church in West Pakistan has "rallied splendidly to the help of their stricken brethren" who suffered in the autumn floods there, according to the Rev. Clyde B. Stuntz of the committee on relief and rehabilitation of the West Pakistan Christian Council. "We asked for a gift of 10,000 rupees from the church and already have received 15,000 rupees besides outright gifts of clothing and quilts for which no cash value was assigned. Sewing groups have been formed in most centers preparing children's clothing, quilts, thereby making our funds go further."

MIAMI — Mrs. Regina McClinton, on why she's organizing a war on "rock and roll" music and dancing:

"This warm wiggle... is dangerous for children. They get on the floor, give out with a contortion, get up and wiggle. These vibrations are a definite trend toward something worse."

Among the passages to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy is the following (69:13): "Spiritually to understand that there is but one creator, God, unfolds all creation, confirms the Scriptures, brings the sweet assurance of no parting, no pain, and of man deathless and perfect and eternal."

The Weekly Message Of Inspiration

Rev. W. E. West, St. Matthews Episcopal Church
Pampa, Texas

GOD'S TIME

Once two strangers seated together on a train started a conversation. One man was telling of the many things he had been doing for his church and the various places his work for the Lord took him. The other man congratulated him for his efforts and time and said, "And you do this all on your own time?" The first man replied, "No, I do all these things on God's time."

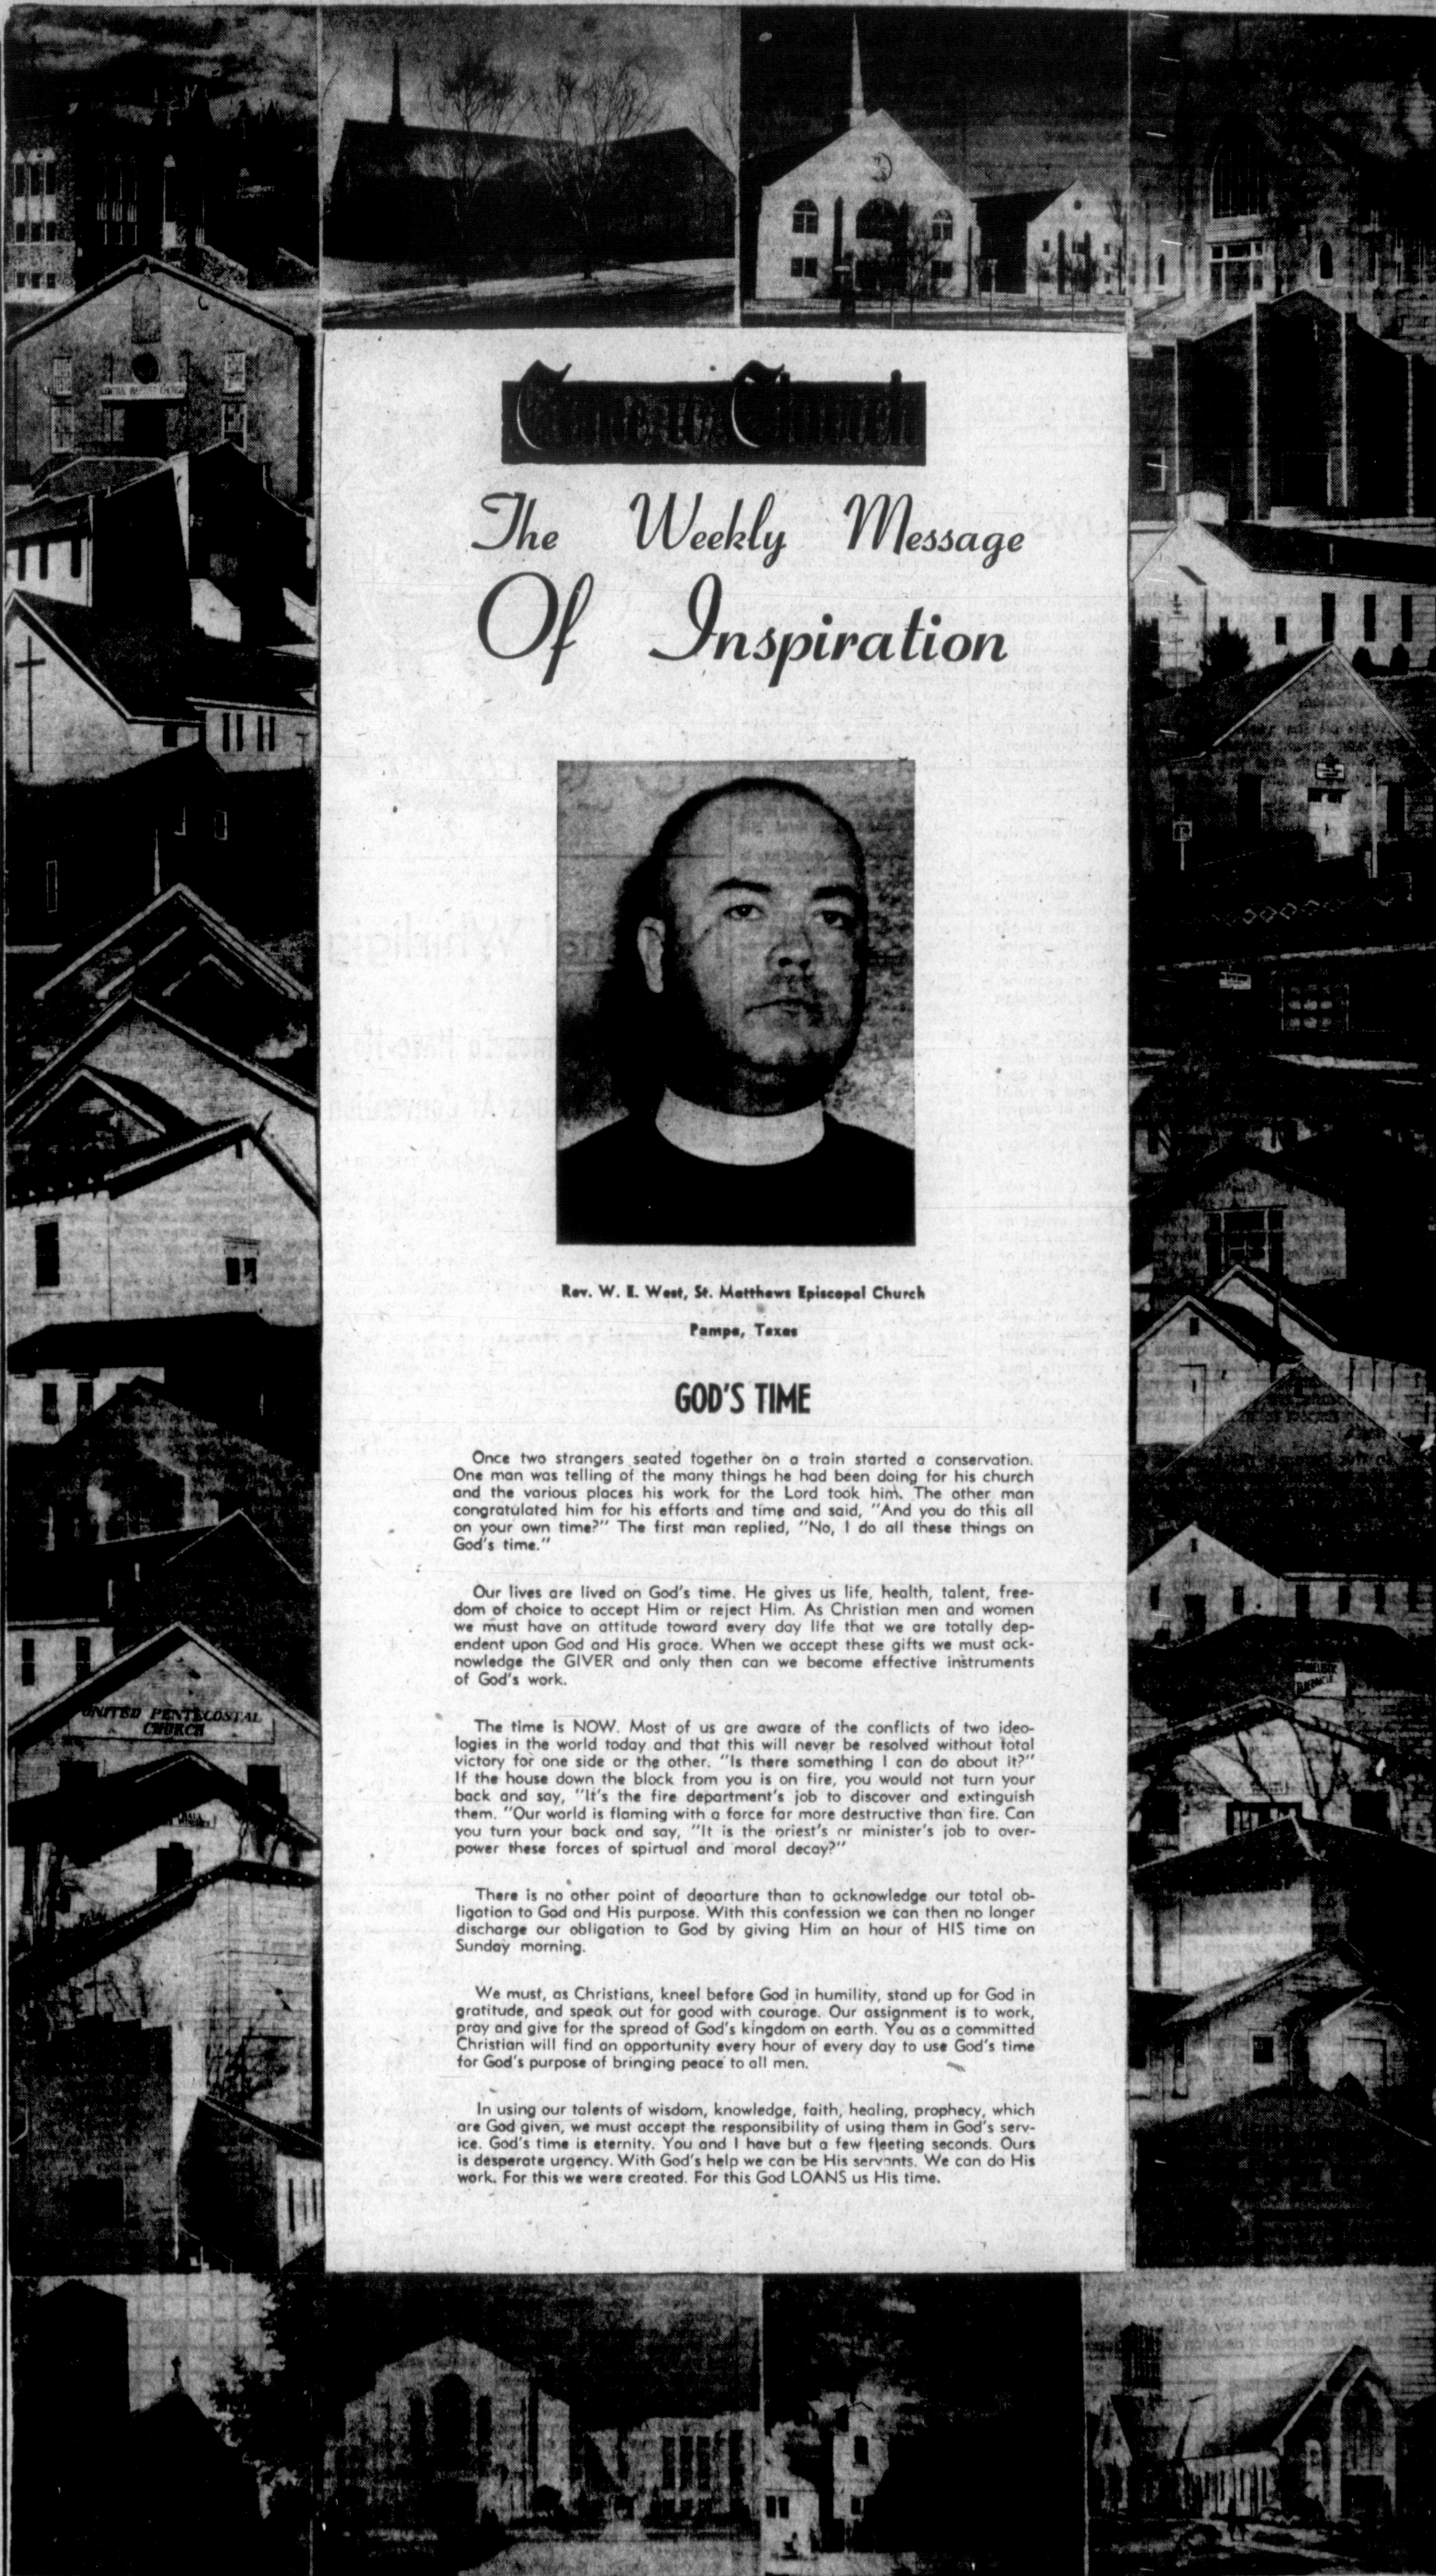

Our lives are lived on God's time. He gives us life, health, talent, freedom of choice to accept Him or reject Him. As Christian men and women we must have an attitude toward every day life that we are totally dependent upon God and His grace. When we accept these gifts we must acknowledge the GIVER and only then can we become effective instruments of God's work.

The time is NOW. Most of us are aware of the conflicts of two ideologies in the world today and that this will never be resolved without total victory for one side or the other. "Is there something I can do about it?" If the house down the block from you is on fire, you would not turn your back and say, "It's the fire department's job to discover and extinguish them." Our world is flaming with a force far more destructive than fire. Can you turn your back and say, "It is the priest's or minister's job to overpower these forces of spiritual and moral decay?"

There is no other point of departure than to acknowledge our total obligation to God and His purpose. With this confession we can then no longer discharge our obligation to God by giving Him an hour of HIS time on Sunday morning.

We must, as Christians, kneel before God in humility, stand up for God in gratitude, and speak out for good with courage. Our assignment is to work, pray and give for the spread of God's kingdom on earth. You as a committed Christian will find an opportunity every hour of every day to use God's time for God's purpose of bringing peace to all men.

In using our talents of wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, prophecy, which are God given, we must accept the responsibility of using them in God's service. God's time is eternity. You and I have but a few fleeting seconds. Ours is desperate urgency. With God's help we can be His servants. We can do His work. For this we were created. For this God LOANS us His time.

Court's New Laws

The Supreme Court of the United States is certainly taking a great deal on itself in recent days. Its original and, so far as we can find, exclusive function is to determine, in the light of the Constitution, the validity of legislation passed by Congress, and to serve as the final court of appeals in legal disputes which bear on the Constitution.

With all the various laws and legal tangles resulting from an excessively ambitious batch of politics, one would think that the Supreme Court would have enough to do minding its own business.

But such is apparently not the case. There are three cases at point which will bear the most careful scrutiny.

The first is the decision respecting desegregation. Here the Supreme Court has exceeded its authority. Various southern states had passed and enforced a number of laws which called for segregation of the Negro race. The Supreme Court was not called upon to examine these laws in the light of the Constitution. In fact, it could scarcely have been called upon to so examine, since these laws had been made within the sovereign rights of the separate states.

Instead, using the book of Gunnar Myrdal, a Swedish socialist, it discovered precedent, certainly outside the Constitution, to compel desegregation in all government buildings in the southern states. And it ruled that this desegregation must occur not only in federal buildings, where presumably the Supreme Court might have exerted some sway, but in all government buildings, including local government schools.

In making this decision, the Supreme Court was not acting as a court. It was rather acting as a legislative body of superior status. Its decision had the effect of passing altogether new laws and at the same time nullifying old laws. Regardless of the merits or demerits of the issues involved, the action of the Supreme Court far exceeded its Constitutional privileges.

A second instance is more recent. Some 42 of the 48 states have passed laws respecting the handling of subversives. Only this year the Supreme Court has rendered a decision which sets aside all of these separate laws of these individual states, and has ruled, in effect, that the only government on these shores which can take action with respect to subversives is the federal government itself.

In this instance, the Supreme Court not only set aside the separate laws of 42 states, but in effect set aside the Constitution itself which reserves the right to legislate separately to the 48 separate legislative bodies.

There is yet a third instance. The Arkansas Oak Flooring Company refused to recognize the United Mine Workers District 50 on the grounds that the head of the Mine Workers' John L. Lewis has refused to file an oath to the effect that he and his co-workers are not communists. The Taft-Hartley Act has this as one of its provisions.

The Supreme Court, in this case, has reversed the findings of the NLRB, and has upheld the right of a union official not to file an anti-communist affidavit.

Thus, with this finding, the Supreme Court has ruled that an employer must bargain with a union official even if this official is a communist and despite the fact that there is a law on the books which has not been found unconstitutional, which says just the opposite.

In this instance the Supreme Court had an excellent chance to find the Taft-Hartley Act unconstitutional, had it so determined. It did not. Instead, it makes it optional for a labor boss to obey that law.

Yet, it compels the employers to obey the law. Here again, the Supreme Court is acting in a manner greatly removed from its fundamental purpose. Once more it has invaded the field of legislation and has made a decision which in effect produces a new law.

The truth of the matter is that the Supreme Court was not supposed to pass laws. Article I, Section 1 of the Constitution says: "All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States."

It appears now that the Supreme Court is jealous of the Congress and intends usurping its function. And the nature of its decisions reveals its purpose.

The Supreme Court has become an agency in a revolutionary movement within this nation which is making every effort to erect a monolithic, single, all-powerful government which will make all decisions for all people. This is in violation of the federation concept and at a complete variance with the Constitution which it is the duty of the Supreme Court to uphold.

The danger to our way of life is apparent. Where does one go to appeal a decision by the Supreme Court?

Man (having given up his seat in the street car)—I beg your pardon.
Man—Sorry, I'm sure. I thought you said "thank you."

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

Ability To Pay Wage Theory
The recent decision of the Supreme Court in the Truitt Manufacturing Company's case, that they must show their books to the union as proof of their statement that they were not able to increase wages, brings up the fallacy that wages are based on ability to pay.

Once that theory is established, we are turning our backs on the competitive free private enterprise system. Such a theory of ability to pay would mean that employees would share profits but would not share losses. That's simply a form of Socialism or Communism.

The Truitt Company was probably not enlightened on what the free enterprise competitive system means. If they had been, they would not have used that argument that they could not afford higher wages against a wage increase demand by the union.

The employers, if we believe in free enterprise, has an equal right to sell his dollars to the person who will give the most for them—just as the worker has an equal right to sell his labor to the world's highest bidder. That's what liberty or the competitive free enterprise system means.

If workers are to share profits and not share losses, they, in a way, become subservient and wards of their employer. It has a tendency to make them lose their self-reliance and their integrity. Then they begin to fawn on the employer rather than improve their facilities so that they can produce more and thus earn more. Sharing profits with the workers also tends to retard the accumulation of tools.

And if the employer is to pay more than a free market for labor, just who is to get these gift wages?

What an employer should pay is determined by what other workers are willing to do the same work for. There's no reason why an employer should pay some workers more than his customers are willing and able to do the same job for, and thus either reduce his profits and retard the accumulation of capital or raise his prices and pay these gift wages and thus reduce the standard of living of his customers.

Supreme Court Example of Corruption
Remember, Lord Acton contended that all power (political) tended to corrupt; absolute power (political) corrupted absolutely. Many Communists and Socialists quote Lord Acton as contending that power that was not political corrupted. Therefore, they want to have every creator of wealth limited in his ability to make two blades of grass grow where one grew before. That kind of power never corrupts. Creating wealth is beneficial—never harmful.

But the political power, granted to Congress and assumed by the Supreme Court is a splendid example of the truth that all absolute political power corrupts absolutely.

The Supreme Court and the Congress should have nothing to do with voluntary exchanges of labor. All business is nothing in the final analysis, but an exchange of labor. The Congress and the Courts should have nothing to do with making contracts. Their only mission is to see that contracts are carried out or a just payment for breach of contract. But the political power granted the Supreme Court seems to make these men believe they are made of different cloth than those who are paying their salaries. They have become masters in their own opinion rather than servants.

It would be hard to imagine what rule of justice they use to determine how the government should be limited. Certainly none of the members of the Supreme Court or the Congress would contend that they, as individuals, had a right to use aggressive force to make an employer pay a wage to suit their fancy or to show their books to determine what wages should be paid. And when they do things with the power of a tax pistol, they are substituting might for right. They are saying they can do collectively what they know would be unjust and unethical and immoral and wicked for them to do as an individual.

They, in short, are completely denying the ethics of the first official document of the United States Government—the Declaration of Independence. Remember, it said governments derive their just power from the consent of the governed—not from the consent of the majority, but from the consent of the individual.

And where does the Supreme Court or the Congress get the right or the wisdom or the integrity to compel citizens to exchange goods and services to suit the whim of members of the Supreme Court or Congress?

Man (having given up his seat in the street car)—I beg your pardon.
Man—Sorry, I'm sure. I thought you said "thank you."

Demos To Have No Issues At Convention

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — The Democrats will enter the 1956 Presidential campaign almost bereft of major and provocative issues as a result of their legislative record on Capitol Hill at the current session. The legislators have knocked the platform—any platform—under from under the man—any man—whom they nominate as President Eisenhower's opponent.

The opposition had expected to carry several farm states because of reported resistance to the administration's program, and especially in view of Ike's veto of the original measure containing provisions for 90 per cent parity supports. But they have abandoned this field by enacting a bill which the President is expected to sign.

Now, there is no noticeable difference, except vocally, between the two parties' stand on this question. The only effect of Democratic maneuvering will be a delay in distributing Federal funds to farmers.

Another vanished issue is the Democratic liberals' charge that the Eisenhower-McKay program has amounted to a "giveaway" of natural resources. This indictment will hardly hold up under factual examination.

In the first place, it was the Rayburn-Johnson leadership which sponsored legislation for state rather than national control of two of the nation's richest resources—natural gas and tidelands oil. They sided with Ike on this question rather than with the leftwing faction of their Party.

Had Stevenson, Kefauver or Harman been President, they would have opposed both proposals, even though it meant a break with their Congressional leadership and spokesmen.

Nor is there solid ground for Democratic liberals' indictment that the Administration has turned over valuable water-power sites to "the interests." Although it may be begging the question, former Interior Secretary Douglas McKay notes that, except when congress provides otherwise, it is the Federal Power Commission which has the disposition of these licenses.

Even granting that the FPC responds to Presidential suggestions, this agency has split the difference on two of the greatest undeveloped hydroelectric projects. It awarded Hall's Canyon to the Idaho Power Company under the "partnership idea." But it handed the St. Lawrence River program to the New York State Power Authority.

Fair Enough

States Were Sovereign To Federal Government

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York — The Supreme Court has invalidated the Pennsylvania law forbidding treason and sedition against that state and providing punishment therefor. This decision probably destroys all similar laws of other states. Few Americans realize that we are primarily citizens of our respective states and that citizens of the states were not held to be citizens of the United States until after the Civil War. The states have their own constitutions, and they are sovereign but amenable to the authority of the Federal Government only in specified, restricted phases of politics—meaning government.

The states long ago recognized the danger of treason and sedition against themselves, and adopted laws defining such crimes and providing penalties up to capital punishment. The Federal Congress never has had the effrontery to challenge the states' right to do this, but the Supreme Court has done just that in the Pennsylvania case of Steve Nelson.

Senators McCarthy, Jenner, Eastland, Walker and others have attacked the court with facts which plainly disprove the court's contention that Congress intended to usurp for itself alone, all authority to legislate against treason and sedition. The court did not even attempt to support its gratuitous and false claim that Congress did try to usurp this power. But even if Congress had done that, still the court would have been obliged to disallow the usurpation. In this case, not only did the court with flagrant arrogance set up a dishonest pretense that Congress had claimed for itself authority to deal with treason and sedition in all the several states, the court went further in setting up a pretense that Congress would have had a constitutional right to do so.

This is one of three recent decisions by which the court has insulted the states and their citizens by decision striking down their laws. The other two are the so-called integration case wherein the court waved the bloody shirt and appealed to racial passion in renegeing rights plainly reserved to the states, and the open-shop case which was decided in favor of the closed shop and the yellow-dog union contract and against the power of the states to protect the rights of their citizens to work subject to no limitation by private organizations. In the yellow-dog case, Congress had actually usurped the states' right to forbid such conditions. But the court should have acknowledged that in so doing, Congress violated the federal constitution. Congress has no right to enact a federal law over-riding any state laws which might conflict with it in that field of individual relations between worker and employer. Congress might just as well have passed a law requiring citizens to join the Ku Klux Klan as a pre-condition of employment. Or even of marriage.

The Federal Government has been terribly guilty of treason against itself, the states and their people in the years since Roosevelt's first inauguration in 1933. The State Governments have not been vigilant or diligent against Communist traitors and non-Communist traitors acting in treasonous collusion with them. But the states actually lacked experience and they were, admittedly, throwing themselves more and more into dependency on Washington. They did not do this by actual statutory surrender of their sovereign powers. They did it by inattention because of inexperience and emotional devotion to F. D. Roosevelt.

But the permeation of the Federal Bureaucracy from 1933 until the post-war period when Harry Truman still snarled that the Alger Hiss case was just a red herring, was not the fault of the states. That was accomplished by design of the Roosevelt administration with Roosevelt's knowledge. When the Alger Hiss case was reported to him during the war, on the initiative of Whitaker Chambers, Roosevelt scoffed and actually ordered his informant, holding a naval commission, to keep quiet and leave it all to him.

Aside from the constitutional outrage in the Pennsylvania case the court has awarded sole authority to a jurisdiction which has been disloyal to the nation, the states and the people.

It was the Federal Government, not the states, which brought all this about. And it was done by the guilty design of Federal Bureaucrats, including cabinet members and judges, who were themselves disloyal.

How do you feel about the Kremlin Kut-Ups being invited to visit the United States?

They're just dying to, you know. It's common knowledge that Bulganin and Khrushchev keep their little suitcases packed, and their flasks filled to the brim with vodka, so as to be ready to take off the second the President asks them.

You can't blame them, at that. They were taught in school that a Russian—Ivan Columbuski, I believe his name was—discovered America. And they'd like to meet the people who knew all along that Stalin was a bum.

I say, let them be invited. For one thing, I'm curious to see what kind of reception they'd get from us Americans. I can't figure out just how they would be welcomed, especially after Khrushchev got a little tight one day and started belting this country.

B. and K. most certainly wouldn't receive the tumultuous open-armed reception they got in India. Nor would they get the polite but cold shoulder treatment that England offered.

If I had to guess how they would be welcomed, I'd guess that they would hear more Bronx cheers than a baseball umpire does in a lifetime, that they'd be laughed at a lot, and would be given to know by the crowds, if any, that they were just another couple of guys with funny names.

This wouldn't help to better relations between the U. S. and the Soviets. Both of the Russians have thin skins. They lose their tempers easily, particularly Khrushchev. And if he started shaking his fists, as he did on several occasions in England, he would find a lot of takers. We Americans don't have the coolness, the restraint, of the English. If B. and K. asked for a fist fight, they'd get one. And wouldn't that make a whale of a story for Pravda and Tass and the Daily Worker!

But the laughs and the snickers would be the major factor in making B. and K. uncomfortable. We just wouldn't take them seriously, no matter what happened. They'd sense right off that they weren't impressing us a lick, and they'd be hopping mad.

I'm not saying this would be the proper way to treat B. and K., nor am I advocating it. But I have lived in these United States long enough to know what sort of people we are, and how we act when we are confronted with people who have made it plain they have no use for us. We can be pretty rough on our own folks, so I don't believe the Russians would find us gentle, tactful, and reserved.

If they do come over here, I suggest that Sid Caesar and Gracie Allen be named to the welcoming committee—Caesar as interpreter and Gracie to answer any questions B. and K. asked.

Caesar is the world's best at double talk. He speaks double talk in any language and without an accent. As for Gracie, well, she'd have the perfect, unintelligible answer that is the keystone of diplomatic talk.

In England, B. and K. fussed because they were not allowed to meet enough of the common people. If they come over here I'll be glad to put them up in the spare bedroom and introduce them to my set. That would show 'em.

FOR REFLECTION
...with JAMES C. MOOREHEAD, President, Spiritual Mobilization

We have had set before us "success" as the goal toward which we should strive, and "success" has usually meant a million dollars or as much of it as we could lay our hands on. We have been taught to live like a potato on an onion or a pansip instead of like a lily or a rose or a stalk of corn.

We have made the test of a man's life the size of foot he can develop—the amount of earthly things he can take unto himself. We have said, "Consider the potato," and we have missed the true meaning of life. Jesus, who understood life, said, "Consider the lily."

Khushy And Bulgy Are Anxious To Visit U. S.
By HENRY McLEMORE

How do you feel about the Kremlin Kut-Ups being invited to visit the United States? They're just dying to, you know. It's common knowledge that Bulganin and Khrushchev keep their little suitcases packed, and their flasks filled to the brim with vodka, so as to be ready to take off the second the President asks them. You can't blame them, at that. They were taught in school that a Russian—Ivan Columbuski, I believe his name was—discovered America. And they'd like to meet the people who knew all along that Stalin was a bum. I say, let them be invited. For one thing, I'm curious to see what kind of reception they'd get from us Americans. I can't figure out just how they would be welcomed, especially after Khrushchev got a little tight one day and started belting this country. B. and K. most certainly wouldn't receive the tumultuous open-armed reception they got in India. Nor would they get the polite but cold shoulder treatment that England offered. If I had to guess how they would be welcomed, I'd guess that they would hear more Bronx cheers than a baseball umpire does in a lifetime, that they'd be laughed at a lot, and would be given to know by the crowds, if any, that they were just another couple of guys with funny names. This wouldn't help to better relations between the U. S. and the Soviets. Both of the Russians have thin skins. They lose their tempers easily, particularly Khrushchev. And if he started shaking his fists, as he did on several occasions in England, he would find a lot of takers. We Americans don't have the coolness, the restraint, of the English. If B. and K. asked for a fist fight, they'd get one. And wouldn't that make a whale of a story for Pravda and Tass and the Daily Worker! But the laughs and the snickers would be the major factor in making B. and K. uncomfortable. We just wouldn't take them seriously, no matter what happened. They'd sense right off that they weren't impressing us a lick, and they'd be hopping mad. I'm not saying this would be the proper way to treat B. and K., nor am I advocating it. But I have lived in these United States long enough to know what sort of people we are, and how we act when we are confronted with people who have made it plain they have no use for us. We can be pretty rough on our own folks, so I don't believe the Russians would find us gentle, tactful, and reserved. If they do come over here, I suggest that Sid Caesar and Gracie Allen be named to the welcoming committee—Caesar as interpreter and Gracie to answer any questions B. and K. asked. Caesar is the world's best at double talk. He speaks double talk in any language and without an accent. As for Gracie, well, she'd have the perfect, unintelligible answer that is the keystone of diplomatic talk. In England, B. and K. fussed because they were not allowed to meet enough of the common people. If they come over here I'll be glad to put them up in the spare bedroom and introduce them to my set. That would show 'em. FOR REFLECTION ...with JAMES C. MOOREHEAD, President, Spiritual Mobilization We have had set before us "success" as the goal toward which we should strive, and "success" has usually meant a million dollars or as much of it as we could lay our hands on. We have been taught to live like a potato on an onion or a pansip instead of like a lily or a rose or a stalk of corn. We have made the test of a man's life the size of foot he can develop—the amount of earthly things he can take unto himself. We have said, "Consider the potato," and we have missed the true meaning of life. Jesus, who understood life, said, "Consider the lily."

Kline Posts Fourth Win By Blanking New York Giants

By UNITED PRESS
Ronnie Kline, the "forgotten man" in Pittsburgh's spectacular rise, moved front and center today to receive his rightful acclaim with all the other Pirate heroes.

"A different guy picks us up in manager Bobby Bragan. 'One day it's Long, the next time Friend and then maybe Thomas or Walls.' Last night it was Kline's turn as he limited the Giants to four singles, allowed no walks and struck out three. It was quite a performance for the six-foot-three righthander who had a sour 0-7 record with the Pirates in 1952 and won only six games last year after returning from service."

Wilmer (Vinegar Bend) Mizell gained his fifth victory and had a two-hitter until the ninth inning when Gus Bell, Ted Kluszewski and Frank Robinson hit successive homers. Milwaukee held on to first place by crushing Chicago 15-8 with a 15-hit bombardment that included five homers. The barrage of homers gave the Braves a total of 15 for their three-game series with the Cubs, equalling the major league home run record for three consecutive games by one club.

Mantle Most Popular Person In High School Senior Class

EDITORS NOTE: The following dispatch is the second in a series of three.

By CARTER BRADLEY
COMMERCIAL, Okla. — UP — Mickey Mantle is the "most popular boy" in his graduating class but he didn't show up at June night in 1949 when the Commerce high seniors got their diplomas. As might have been expected, Mickey was playing baseball. He got four hits for the Commerce "Whiz Kids" against the Coffeyville, Kan., team. After the game was over, sitting in a parked car, Mickey's dad threatened a contract for him with a Yankee scout tying him to the Yank farm organization.

In the American League, the Yankees increased their league lead to 8 1/2 games with a 9-4 decision over the Senators. The Yankees collected 12 hits, including a homer by Hank Bauer, but Mickey Mantle, the league's milk bill ran $40 a month. Mantle is pretty inarticulate in New York but he was active in school. He sang in the quartet, coached the junior play and wrote for the paper. In one issue he advertised for a date, remarking that he was a "free agent."

Oilers Are Dumped By Rockets, 8-3

Taking the rubber tilt of the three game series, the Roswell Rockets blasted the Pampa Oilers, 8-3, Thursday night in Oiler Park. The Rockets tallied four big runs in the second frame. Roswell's second sacker Bobby Tombs singled driving in Joe Bauman and Oilers pitcher Jerry Tucker's wild pitch brought in Jordan who had singled earlier. Then Don Howard, the Rockets right fielder, drove in Tombs with a single. Ed Konick, Roswell's starting pitcher, tallied the last run of the inning. Konick's score, which came after he walked one to Oiler right fielder Jim Robinette, who juggled the ball and then dropped it.

Robinette singled sending Guzman home. Roswell had to bring in another relief pitcher, Jim Kenne, before the Oiler side was retired. In the eighth, Don Howard, Rocket right fielder, homered with Tombs aboard for their last scores of the game. The Rockets pitcher, Kenne, who came in in the fourth allowed only four hits and no runs while Zierla, Oiler relief hurler, gave up three hits for two runs.

The Oilers start a seven game road trip tonight, meeting the Clovis Pioneers in the first of a two game series.

Government To Study Mental Problems

WASHINGTON—P—The government is getting set to launch the greatest co-ordinated attack ever attempted on the problem of mental retardation and cerebral palsy. The program will cost many millions of dollars—$4.5 million for the coming year alone—and it will run for more than a decade. It will involve five government agencies, several private organizations, and hundreds of scientists, physicians, sociologists and educators. Officials disclosed that the program calls for history's first experiments with pregnant monkeys, an unprecedented study of infants from their first moments of life, and for a vastly expanded effort to develop better methods of treatment and rehabilitation. The goal is to reduce—if not to wipe out—the great human waste which cerebral palsy and mental retardation cause every year. There are an estimated 4.5 million mentally retarded Americans, many of them victims of cerebral palsy. Some 1.5 million of these are children. They are an immense problem for themselves, for their parents, and for society as a whole. In many cases, their brains are so undeveloped or so damaged they cannot even feed themselves. The new government program is an answer to the demands of Congress and parents groups for action in a field which, by general admission, has been notoriously neglected for years. It also is an effort to exploit recent scientific discoveries which offer some promise of progress for the first time. Noted Doctor Dies WAUSAU, Wis.—UP—Dr. Kate Pelham Newcomb, the "north woods doctor" whose appearance on the "This Is Your Life" TV show brought viewer contributions of $150,000 to carry on her work, died undergoing surgery Tuesday. Tito May Ask Reds To Loosen Grip On The East

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Foreign Analyst
President Tito of Yugoslavia is likely to ask Russia next week to loosen its grip on its eastern European satellite governments. Tito, the only Communist leader who ever successfully defied Josef Stalin, is due to arrive in Moscow Tuesday. He is returning the humiliating visit which Soviet Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin and Communist party leader Nikita S. Khrushchev paid him one year ago this month. Mr. B. and Mr. K. went to Belgrade to apologize for the savage attacks which Stalin—and they themselves—had made on Tito as the result of his break with Kremlin communism in 1948. Mr. B. and Mr. K. invited Tito during their visit to go to Moscow. Picks Best Time It has taken him long to pick the time. It seems pretty clear he has decided to go now because he thinks the situation which arose from Stalin's debunking is developing favorably. Tito told a United Press correspondent last week in Belgrade he intends to discuss a wide range of subjects including Yugoslav-Russian relations and international diplomatic problems. Tito said he regarded the debunking of Stalin as marking a "great historical change" in Russia. This change, he said, would affect future developments both in Russia itself "and in other eastern countries." He especially emphasized the change has brought about "the possibility of different states being able to take different paths to socialism." That referred to Russia's satellites, it means Tito feels the time has come for the Kremlin to give the satellite governments more freedom in running their own affairs. Plans to Raise Issue Belgrade dispatches seem to leave no doubt that Tito means to raise this issue, and to make it a major one in his talks. Tito will be in the Soviet Union for three weeks. It is his first visit since he went to see Stalin in May, 1948. It is obviously an important one. It will be watched in capitals all over the world. Read The News Classified Ads (Advertisement)
