Herter To Nominat Nixon At Convention

Governor Says Nixon 'Pleased'

BOSTON - UP - Massachusetts Gov. Christian A. Herter said today he will be "honored" to nominate Vice President Richard M. Nixon as President Eisenhower's running mate at the Republican national convention.

Solons Dispute Stassen

By RAYMOND LAHR

WASHINGTON (UP)—Managers of the Republican campaign to regain control of Congress today disputed Harold E. Stassen's claim that the renomination of Vice President Richard M. Nixon would weaken their chances of winning.

Sen. Andrew J. Schoepel (Kan.) and Rep. Richard M. Simpson (Pa.), chairmen of the GOP Senate and House campaign committees, both disagreed with Stassen. Both said an Eisenhower-Nixon ticket would be the "strongest possible" one to help the Republicans win back control of Congress in the election next November.

These viewpoints were expressed while Republican professionals were writing off Stassen's proposal to substitute Gov. Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts for Nixon as the GOP vice presidential nominee.

The Stassen proposal, Stassen, White House disarming adviser, made his proposal Monday after notifying Mr. Eisenhower in advance of his intentions.

The announcement created a day of uncertainty among GOP leaders who had believed Mr. Eisenhower had given his blessing to the renomination of Nixon but wondered whether there was a White House plot to dump the vice president.

The Stassen statement said public and private polls showed an Eisenhower-Nixon ticket would be six per cent weaker than one composed of Eisenhower and Herter. He said this difference could mean the difference between victory and defeat in the GOP drive to regain control of Congress.

Schoepel told the United Press: "I subscribe to the theory that the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket would be the strongest possible ticket for the Republican Party. I am sure it will contribute to the greatest possible degree to insure the election of a Republican House and Senate."

Simpson also used the "strongest possible" label for the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket. He said the fact that Nixon is well known and an "efficient campaigner" would help restore a GOP majority in the House.

On Race Issues

Texas Sets Referendum

AUSTIN (UP) - Texans will take part in the rarely used referendum technique when they vote on three racial issues at Saturday's Democratic primary election.

The voters will be faced with the question of the "three I's" - integration, intermarriage and interposition.

The issues were ordered placed on the ballot after a campaign produced petitions bearing more than 150,000 signatures and calling for a vote "for" or "against" on these propositions:

- 1. "Specific legislation exempting any child from compulsory attendance at integrated schools attended by white persons and Negroes."
2. "Specific legislation perfecting state laws against intermarriage between white persons and Negroes."
3. "The use of interposition to halt illegal federal encroachment."

Three Previous Votes
Texans have voted only three times previously on referendum questions - in 1906 on state-wide prohibition, in 1916 on prohibition and the Robertson insurance law, and in 1929 in connection with a constitutional amendment dealing with home ownership.

The three racial issues were put on the ballot by the state Democratic executive committee after petitions were circulated by the Texas referendum committee, headed by Robert Cargill of Longview.

The election code provides referendum questions calling for specific legislation shall be placed on the ballot if supported by petitions with signatures representing at least 10 per cent of the qualified voters at the last preceding Democratic primary election.

A section of the state constitution states "separate schools shall be provided for the white and colored children, and impartial provision shall be made for both."

Intermarriage Laws
State anti-miscegenation laws provide criminal penalties for intermarriage between the white and Negro races.

Three county Democratic executive committees have voted to defy the state committee and leave the issues off the ballot. They are in Bexar, Kleberg and Uvalde counties.

Backers of the three questions contend that both races are entitled to free choice on school attendance, that stronger state laws against intermarriage are necessary, and interposition should be used to fight against federal invasion of states' rights.

Critics argue that the balloting would have no effect, beneficial or otherwise, and would tend to create ill will and possible violence.

Reds Admit Unrest

LONDON (UP) - Soviet Communist party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev admitted Tuesday that life is pretty miserable for the workers on the collective farms in his pet project, the Siberian "virgin lands" cultivation drive.

And, he said, certain state and local government and party officials were not facing up to the facts. He singled out for special criticism the ministers of agriculture and state farms and the minister of tractor and agricultural machine building, Gregori Khramov.

Khrushchev has been making a tour of Siberia. Tuesday he spoke to agricultural workers at a conference in Novo Sibirsk.

No Social Facilities
Khrushchev said there was a shortage of housing, no clubs or other cultural or social facilities, poor shops and only sporadic delivery of goods to the new farms.

Many youths who responded to his appeal to "go east" had no place to spend their free time, he added.

It is possible that the executives of the ministries and the local party and Soviet organs lack the strength and ability to get to the bottom of this state of affairs," the Communist party chief said.

Wrong Machines
Khrushchev criticized Khalmov because he failed to change harvesting machine production to cope with the fact that collective and state farms are now switching over to harvesting in stages.

As before, the enterprises of the ministry are producing wide-sweep combines which are completely useless for harvesting in stages," Khrushchev said.

Girls, 3-0

The girls edged out the boys on the maternity floor at Highland General Hospital Tuesday with the stork bringing three girls and failing to deliver a boy.

A girl, weighing 7 lbs., 7 1/2 oz., became the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rychlik, 228 Miami, at 9:52 a.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Price, Pampa, became the parents of a 6 lbs., 4 1/2 oz. girl at 1:16 p.m. and the final tally of the girls came at 7:22 p.m. when Mr. and Mrs. R. F. James McDonald, 513 S. Cuyler, became the parents of a girl weighing 5 lbs., 13 1/2 oz.

Hopes Soar For Strike Settlement

By ROBERT G. SHORTAL

NEW YORK (UP) - Hopes soared today for settlement of the 35-day steel strike before the end of this week.

The Big Three steel and union wage negotiators met for almost three hours Tuesday and broke up with the announcement they had "made progress" toward settling the labor dispute which has idled 650,000 steelworkers.

The negotiators-four from each side-are scheduled to meet again today in an effort to hammer out a new contract that will end the strike which already has cost the nation $1 billion.

Committee Standing By
David J. McDonald, president of the United Steelworkers of America, has notified the union's 70-man Wage Policy Committee to "stand by" for a Thursday afternoon meeting.

Industry observers interpreted this move as an indication McDonald is confident of a settlement before the end of this week. The Wage Policy Committee has the authority to accept or reject any contract proposal.

Governor Hopefuls In Stretch Drive

By UNITED PRESS

Desegregation drought and George Parr continue to be main subjects in the governor's race.

All six candidates are engaged in last minute scrambles for votes in the Democratic primary, to be held Saturday.

Former Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel, who spoke in Marine Park in Fort Worth Tuesday night, accused the Supreme Court of following the advice of "pinks and reds" instead of the constitution in the desegregation decision.

Historian J. Everett Haley denounced desegregation in speeches in northeast Texas.

Bureaucrats Demanded
"When the right of Texas to segregate the races is challenged, and faithless spokesmen decline the challenge, then most surely are all our other rights in danger from a power-mad bureaucracy in Washington," he said.

Attorney Ralph Yarborough appealed for the huge labor vote in Houston and Harris county.

He charged that out-of-state money is paying for costly campaign gimmicks of some of his opponents "and it isn't the working men's out-of-state money."

He said that the "junior senator (Price Daniel) spent too much time away from his job in Washington."

"I'm a liberal if that means being for better schools, soil and water conservation and drought relief - the things I've been urging for four long years," Yarborough said.

Daniel received the endorsement of Dr. W. R. White, president of Baylor University. Dr. White said he was "speaking as a Texas citizen and not in any official capacity."

Daniel, in speeches in Arlington and Dallas, said that both anti-Parr factions in Duval county are backing him, which proves that Parr is not doing him any favors.

"The true test in the Texas governor's race is the test of performance versus promises in fighting for Texas and against crime and corruption," Daniel said.

This ends the six-week swimming program in which several hundred Pampa children and adults have taken part.

Ike Calls Meet On Legislation

By WARREN DUFFEE

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower summoned Republican congressional leaders today to discuss the fate of his legislative program as Congress sped toward adjournment.

The President called the White House meeting with time for congressional action this year now numbered in days.

The House again scheduled an early session to act on compromise housing legislation. The bill calls for construction of 35,000 housing units in each of the next two years as requested by the administration.

A Senate-passed housing bill calls for construction of 135,000 units in each of the next three years. Its passage has threatened to block all housing legislation this year.

Minor Senate Legislation

The Senate also met early to clean up minor legislation. It handed the President a major victory Tuesday in passing 60-30 the administration-backed $4 billion foreign aid money bill. But it also dealt the President a defeat in approving a ban on nearly all future military aid to Yugoslavia.

The bill was sent to a Senate House conference committee. The best total figure, the administration will get is a compromise between the $4 billion voted by the Senate and $2.4 billion voted previously by the House.

Last-ditch attempts to force the administration's civil rights bill to the Senate floor failed. Later the GOP Senate leadership stated it would not press for action on the House-passed bill, leaving it where Southern Democrats buried it.

The House gave the President a victory by killing the Democratic-sponsored $400 million program to speed development of commercial atomic power. The House defeated the Senate-passed bill 203-181.

The House also passed a $1.9 billion appropriations bill mostly for the Atomic Energy Commission. It is the last big money bill of the session. The Senate Appropriations Committee boosted it to $2.3 billion and the Senate planned to act on it Friday.

Other legislative action:

-The Senate gave final congressional approval to one of the President's major health program recommendations and sent the bill to the White House. The legislation includes grants to nursing schools and an advanced public health training program.

-The President signed a bill providing stiffer penalties for persons convicted of seditious conspiracy. The bill boasts the maximum penalty from six to 20 years imprisonment.

In Court Martial

Parade Of Survivors Nears End

By H. D. QUIGG

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. (UP)—The prosecution in the McKeon court martial trial today neared the end of its parade of survivors of the Ribbon Creek death march.

A few more former members of Marine Recruit Platoon 71 were scheduled to testify during today's session about the "discipline" march that was mostly horseplay until the teenage trainees panicked in the ebb-tide current. Six recruits drowned.

Maj. Charles B. Sevier, the chief trial counsel, said he would permit seven more witnesses after finishing with the survivors. He expects to clean up his direct testimony case by the end of Thursday's session.

The accused junior drill instructor who led 74 members of the platoon on the tragic march, S-Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon, now has three of his brothers and one sister in the courtroom daily to bolster his morale. His brothers, Edward, 30, and Francis, 28, both of Worcester, Mass., and his sister, Mrs. Thomas Costello, of New York, arrived Tuesday and said they would stay until the trial ends.

Mrs. Costello is the wife of one of McKeon's six defense attorneys. The defendant's brother, James, also of Worcester, has been here since the trial began on Monday of last week.

McKeon, 31, a Marine veteran of eight years who saw combat in Korea and who served aboard fighting ships as a seaman in the second world war, could get a maximum prison term of six years and three months on conviction of manslaughter, oppression of troops, and drinking against regulations.

All the survivors have given evidence of the confusion that existed as the 74 recruits stumbled through the clinging muck and ebbing water. One of them, asked if the platoon was in a column of two's, said it was supposed to have been, but actually it was in a "column of bunches" - about five feet apart.

Absentee Votes Number 234

A total of 31 ballots are still out and must bear a postmark prior to midnight Tuesday and be received by 1 p.m. Saturday to be counted in the election. Thut reported.

NEW ORLEANS (UP)—A hurricane hunter plane took off today to investigate a "suspicious" squally area in the southwest Gulf of Mexico. The plane flew out of Jacksonville, Fla., to a spot about 200 miles east of Brownsville, Tex. A P-2V Neptune, piloted by Lt. (jg) Peter Wendler of Gibsonburg, Ohio, was ordered to take a look at an easterly wave that passed south of Florida Tuesday. The wave runs along a line from east of Brownsville south to Tampico. The plane was slated to arrive in the area at mid-afternoon and probably will land at Corpus Christi, Tex., at the end of the flight. A second aircraft, a Super Constellation, has been ordered to stand by at the naval air station at Jacksonville to relieve Wendler's crew if there is any evidence that the season's first tropical storm may be forming.

Car Escapes Washing

DETROIT (UP)—Richard T. Murt, 47, of Lincoln Park, was wondering today how human his car could be. Monday night he wanted to wash it but decided to first move it further up the driveway. Murt was treated for minor injuries. The car remained unwashed.

Jaycees Hear Talk By McIlhany

GRAINGER McIlhany, representative for the 87th legislative district, was guest speaker of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at its regular luncheon meeting yesterday. The program was presented by the club's Americanism Committee, of which Benney Waller, chairman, was in charge. McIlhany appealed to the club to aid in getting an amendment made to the Texas State Constitution for adequate sessions and wages for the state legislature. "The legislature now meets every two years for 120 days," McIlhany said, "and we do not have adequate time to investigate thoroughly the bills that are presented to us. Last year, the legislature worked a month overtime without pay just in finishing up what had been started."

McIlhany stated that the state constitution, which was written in the horse and buggy days, is still, in many ways, a horse and buggy days constitution. The constitution makes the state legislature a limited time, limited pay proposition. "With annual sessions of the legislature Texas can have a more streamline, more efficient form of government," McIlhany stated.

A round-table discussion was held following the state representative's speech. Preceding McIlhany's talk, J. C. Hopkins told the club that this amendment to the constitution is the number one project in the state this year.

Visitors at the meeting were Travis Lively, Jim Leverich, Murry Sealy, Johnny Willis, candidate for State representative, Grainger McIlhany and Gene Hollars.

Jim Brown, Luffkin Foundry, was accepted as a member.

George Whitten gave a report on his trip with the winners of the Jaycee golf tournament here to the state tournament.

Ray Duncan announced that Aug. 11 will be Jaycee Day at the Sweeney Diabetic Camp in Gainesville, and all Jaycees are invited. Arrangements were made for the club to operate the loud speaker for the elections all day Saturday asking the people to get out and vote.

G. I. Bill Ends For Most Today — WASHINGTON (UP)—The GI bill of rights, which sent 2.2 million ex-GI's to college and trained another 5.6 million in various vocations, dies Wednesday for all but a handful of World War II veterans.

Veterans of the Korean war, both able and disabled, will continue school and vocational training for several years under other laws.

After Wednesday the sole right remaining to veterans under the 12-year-old GI bill of rights will be under the home and business loan provision. This does not expire until July 25, 1957, and there is a good chance it will be extended.

Stassen Furore Quiets Down

By LYLE C. WILSON

United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON (UP)—There wasn't much left of Harold E. Stassen's stop-Nixon campaign today except the mystery of who said what to whom last Friday at the White House.

Stassen's proposal that the Republicans drop Vice President Richard M. Nixon and nominate Massachusetts' Gov. Christian A. Herter for his job was a two-day wonder while it lasted.

It lasted until 5 o'clock Tuesday night. Republican National Committee Chairman Leonard W. Hall announced that Herter would nominate Nixon for vice president at next month's national convention.

The Friday Huddle — That collapsed the Stassen trial balloon in flames. It enabled Nixon's closest associates to smile again for the first time since Monday when Stassen announced a national campaign to bounce Nixon.

It led them also to give attention to a question which occasionally baffles a Republican Party professional. It goes like this: "Why does Ike do some of the things he does?"

There is, for example, that Friday White House huddle between the President and Stassen at which Stassen told Mr. Eisenhower in advance of his stop-Nixon drive. Who said what to whom? What were the circumstances under which Stassen immediately thereafter decided he had a go-ahead to start a campaign to keep Mr. Eisenhower's young friend off the 1956 Republican ticket?

The President did not pull his party rank on Stassen. Instead, he permitted his cabinet subordinate and disarmament adviser to pot-shot Nixon where it hurt. Stassen called on Nixon to withdraw and on the President to think the situation over and take a firm public position on the issue raised.

Stassen's Statement — "It is for each of them to make their views known at an appropriate future time," was the way Stassen put it, which is about as bluntly as a subordinate could tell his boss what to do. Stassen hurried his statement to the public just in time to take the publicity shine off the President's return from the Panama conference.

Hall said Herter telephoned him Tuesday morning saying he would "consider it a privilege" to nominate Nixon. Herter and Nixon also discussed the matter. Nixon authorized Hall to say he was "very pleased" by Herter's action. Herter told Hall he would have a further statement today in Boston.

Some of Nixon's friends suspected a White House plot against the vice president. Others could not believe such could be. They found comfort in Mr. Eisenhower's

Texas Soil To Come Home — DALLAS (UP) — Thirty-one pounds of much-publicized Texas dirt, riding a round-trip ticket from Tokyo, will arrive at Love Field in Dallas today for display in a downtown office building.

The old soil, rescued from a Japanese grave by movie actor and war hero Audie Murphy, will be picked up by an armored car and two policemen. They will take it to its resting place, a glass case in the downtown building.

The 31 pounds of soil was originally sent to the Tokyo Press Club as a stunt for Texas night. But Japanese officials wanted to "flame fumigate" the dirt to kill bacteria and plant roots and then bury it.

Solon Seeks Funds In Shrimp Probe

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (UP)—Rep. Joe Kilgore today sought federal funds to help investigate seizures of U.S. shrimp trawlers on the open sea which he said netted commissions to a Mexican gunboat captain who made the captures.

Bascom Cox, attorney for the Texas Shrimp Association, said he received a telegram from Kilgore saying that the captain of the Mexican gunboat "Blas Godinez" receives 3,000 pesos ($240) for each 15,000 pesos fine levied against the confiscated trawlers.

Cox said the new evidence gave added emphasis to statements of the captains of the shrimp vessels. The shrimp trawler captains have said "The Mexican gunboat is interested only in taking the shrimp we catch and seeing that the fines are collected."

The Mexican gunboat captain contended the four boats were within the nine nautical-mile boundary claimed by Mexico as that country's exclusive fishing waters. The four shrimp trawler captains have claimed they were well outside the nine-mile area.

Kilgore also, said in his telegram that he is seeking a supplemental federal appropriation to investigate the seizures.

HERTER (Continued from Page One) probably the work of a crank but we are taking precautions." His first comment on Stassen's statement was that he would "do anything the President thought would be helpful to the party."

Herter, who announced last February that he will not seek reelection as governor, has made no indication on what his political plans are.

The six-foot, six-inch governor was as non-committal about the threat on his life as he was when first notified of Stassen's backing. An unidentified man telephoned Boston police headquarters Tuesday morning and said he was "going to kill Herter within the week." The call was traced to a suburban (Lexington) drug store phone booth but the man had disappeared by the time police arrived.

Virus Named In Illnesses — YPSILANTI, Mich. (UP)—A typhoid-type virus was found responsible Tuesday for hospitalizing at least 40 Eastern Michigan College summer students with food poisoning.

Dr. Otto K. Engelke, Washtenaw County health director, said the disease was known as "salmonella typhi murium." He said the sickness was a form of typhus but "not nearly as serious."

"While very distressing," Engelke said, "the sickness is almost never fatal." The students, 38 of them women, were stricken earlier this week and are now reported in good condition at the hospital.

Engelke said the germ probably was passed on to the students by food handlers in one of the college's dining rooms or by infected poultry.

Allison School Suit Scheduled — CANADIAN — Hearing of a civil suit by property owners in the Allison School District, located in Hemphill and Wheeler Counties, against the Allison School District was expected to begin in the 31st District Court in Canadian today.

The suit was filed by several land owners in the school district against the high tax rate the school maintains would be necessary to build a new school building that has been proposed, according to the District Clerk's office in Canadian.

Men Seeking Answer To 'Pole' Dispute

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UP)—Four men somewhere on the icy slopes of towering Mount McKinley may have with them information needed by a Buffalo, N. Y., woman to vindicate her dead father's honor.

An expedition that has been trying to scale Mount McKinley's 20,270-foot peak, the highest in North America, is to descend the mountain some time this week.

Eagerly awaiting the findings of the four mountain climbers is Mrs. Helene Cook Vetter, daughter of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, whose claim that he was the first man to reach the North Pole and the first to climb Mount McKinley have been hotly disputed.

Cook's claim he was first to scale the great peak in September, 1906, was officially recognized until Adm. Robert E. Peary attacked it. Mrs. Vetter said in Buffalo that Peary attacked her father because "he (Peary) returned from the North Pole to find my father had beaten him there."

Mrs. Vetter said her father and two Eskimos reached the North Pole on April 21, 1908—almost a year before Peary's officially recognized arrival date of April 7, 1909.

"Although Peary attempted to discredit every phase of my father's polar journey," Mrs. Vetter said, "He and his advisers made Mount McKinley the focal point of their attack.

The expedition now on the mountain, headed by mining engineer Walter L. Gonnason of Seattle, set out to follow Cook's route up the mountain. Photographs made at points along the way will be compared with those made by him.

Mrs. Vetter has no illusions that the terrain will be the same now as it was 50 years ago. Since then, it could have changed completely by action of landslides and glacier movements. But she said she is willing to abide by the expedition's findings.

Written for NEA Service North didn't enjoy raising no-trump with a singleton, but he thought it would be easier to make a nine-trick game than an 11-trick game. He was partly right, for the game at clubs and the game at no-trump depended equally on guessing which foe had the queen of diamonds.

Against three no-trump, West opened the queen of hearts. South won with king, lost the club finesse, and won the heart return. He then ran the rest of the clubs, hoping to embarrass the opponents.

East discarded the 10 of spades followed by his two other spades. West likewise discarded three spades, from the bottom up. South discarded one spade. It was a very unpopular suit.

South could tell which opponent had the ace of spades from East's signal. He therefore knew that East had begun the hand with four spades and two clubs. That gave West eight red cards, while East had only seven red cards.

South remembered, moreover, that East had played the nine of hearts at the first trick, evidently welcoming the lead. At the third trick, East had returned the three of hearts, and West had dropped the ten. This looked as though West had led a four-card suit and was unblocking to get out of his partner's way.

South suspected that West's eight red cards were four hearts and four diamonds. This would leave only two diamonds to find a home in the East hand. The odds would be 4 to 3 that West held the queen of diamonds.

After working this all out, South took the ace of diamonds and returned the jack through West for a finesse. This succeeded, and South made his contract with three diamond tricks, four clubs, and two hearts.

Footsteps To Ruin

We have a suggestion for the bureaucrats in Washington. We would like to see them dig out some picture books and skim through the photographs which depict the "glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome."

We want them to note particularly the structure of the Acropolis, the Circus Maximus, Hadrian's palace and the Roman forum. And we hope that while they are looking at these relics of by-gone governments, that they take especial note of this one fact. These relics are ALL in ruins. The governments which taxed the citizens of Greece and Rome to build these magnificent edifices have vanished from the earth. Only the sad traces remain in the form of broken pillars, scattered capitals and shattered structures.

Yet at one time, the men who inhabited those governments were the proudest tax collectors in the world. They thought there was no end to the people's ability to pay taxes. Their only aim was to build and build and build, never mind the burden. The ruins store coldly through the ages, mute testimony to the miscalculations of greedy and ambitious politicians.

There is no force on earth more dangerous and deadly than that of rampaging, unchecked, aggressive, predatory government. And here in America, which is saddled with a debt of more than $275 billion dollars, the ancient thinking of the Greeks and Romans is all too much in evidence.

The Attic and Latin empire builders are with us again. And no force of argument or reason seems able to check them in their mad rush to out-build Pericles, Augustus and Vespasian.

Right now the planners and schemers in Washington are blue-printing "little Pentagons" for 4000 American towns. The Defense Department is even planning a second "big" Pentagon to take care of the overflow from that five-sided palace for the God of War on the south bank of the Potomac.

Congress is about to build itself 100 million dollars worth of new office building, so that every Congressman can have for himself a luxurious three-room suite. $42 million more is going to be spent to add 36 feet of space to the front of the Capitol building itself. General Services Administration, one of the giant bureaus, is about to erect 100 federal buildings in as many cities, at a cost of more than $600 million.

The Post Office is calling for 3500 new postal buildings at a cost of $230 million.

The Central Intelligence Agency is planning an office which will cost $56 million.

The State Department starts work this fall on its addition to the already colossal structures which house it. This addition will cover a four-square block area and will cost at least $50 million.

The Smithsonian Institution is planning $100 million dollars worth of new structures.

In New York City, the teeming mad-house called the United Nations is about to expand. A 7-story office building to house the American delegation is being planned for a site across the street from the headquarters of the glass menagerie.

The Veterans Administration is launching a relocation program for its hospitals. By July of 1957 it will have spent $50 million for this purpose.

Health, Education and Welfare is planning to pour out more than $100 million for new school houses across the nation.

The Bureau of Standards expects to erect a one million square foot edifice at a cost not yet specified.

And the biggest of them all, not counting dams and foreign air fields, is the recently approved highway building program which will spend $1.5 billion a year for new roads until more than $36 billion has been spent.

In olden times it was axiomatic that "all roads lead to Rome."

In current times it is clear that the road being taken by our government will lead us all to bankruptcy and ruin.

Yes, there is a great-objection lesson in the pictures of the ruins of former splendid public buildings. But apparently our politicians cannot and will not learn, even from pictures.

The Doctor Says

By EDGAR P. JORDAN, M. D.

The writer of today's first letter raises a difficult technical question.

Q - I have had albumin in the urine since I was a little girl or perhaps even when I was born. It can be traced definitely to when I was 11 years old. It has never given me any trouble except when I was pregnant. I have a five-year-old child and would like to have one more but have been advised not to. I recently went to the hospital and had kidney tests but no damage was found in my kidneys. What would you advise? - Mrs. L. F.

A - Here is the problem of a young woman who would like another child but apparently not at the expense of disaster to her or her family. The most exhaustive study of the source of the albumin, the state of the kidneys, the effect of the previous pregnancy and like matters is indicated. It is possible that the albumin in this instance is one of those rare forms which does not indicate disease and that the writer could go through another pregnancy without harm. The risks involved in doing so, however, should be carefully evaluated and discussed with the young mother and her husband.

Q - I am a young matron of 33 and mother of three children. Recently our bridge group had a discussion on a new operation which we understand involves the use of a plastic insect to build up an underdeveloped breast. What do you think of this and is it safe? - Mrs. G.

A - I have no personal knowledge of this operation but am dubious of the safety of any operation designed to increase the size of the breast.

Q - Please discuss pitiriasis rosea and its cause. How long will the rash last? If a person has one attack is he apt to have repeated ones? Is it unusual for a young person of 21 to have it? - A. K.

A - This is a mild inflammatory disorder of the skin characterized by rose colored patches chiefly on the trunk of the body. Its cause is not known. It is mildly contagious. Recovery occurs without treatment in a few weeks, and it is not unusual for a young person to develop it.

Q - Would it be injurious to the eyes to wear sun glasses constantly? - H. M. W.

A - I believe most eye specialists frown on this practice but I am uncertain as to exactly why, or what injuries from it would be expected.

Q - Would you please explain the term keloid. Is this a form of cancer? - R. L. L.

A - This is a kind of tumor of the skin which consists of whitish or colored ridges or nodules often occurring at the place where a scar exists. Keloids tend to recur after removal and sometimes are tender or painful. They are not cancerous.

How Our Government Has Promoted Strikes

While the steel strike is on it might be well to consider what means the unions and those who believe in collective bargaining have used to promote strikes.

Of course, the first cause of strikes is because too many people do not understand private competitive enterprise. They do not realize that private competition enterprise is in perfect harmony with the Jewish-Christian ethics. Nor do they realize that it is the American way of life. They have the impression that it means chaos instead of order. They believe competition between workers hurts the working class of people. They do not seem to realize that all our progress comes from competition.

And these beliefs resulted in laws that promote strikes. If it were not for the laws that have been passed in the United States and the government's failure to protect men's lives and property, we would have few, if any, strikes and we certainly would not have any strike that amounted to anything.

These laws that favor strikes are a complete reversal of the ideologies as set forth in the Declaration of Independence - that all men, not just some men, are endowed by the Creator with certain inalienable rights.

One of the first laws, and one which has had as much to do with promoting strikes and hurting everybody in the long run in the country, was the Clayton Amendment to the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. It gave members of labor unions and farmers the right to combine and create a monopoly and a plot to injure other people and exempted them from the Anti-Trust Law that made such acts a crime. The Sherman Anti-Trust Law included labor unions and farmers from the time the Anti-Trust Law was passed in 1890 until the Clayton Amendment was passed in 1914. Thus, the government in effect was telling the working men to combine and it would be no crime according to the government. In other words, the United States Government was denying that all men were equal before the law. It was placing itself in the place of Providence or God.

Later the Norris-LaGuardia Law was passed that interfered with injunctions against strikes and made it a crime for the employer to require that his employees should agree not to enter into a conspiracy to rob him and his customers. The employer had no legal right to show preference to Christian men who believed in individual responsibility to the extent that he required all his employees to agree that they would not simultaneously quit in order to get a non-competitive monopoly wage.

Later, of course, we had the Wagner Law which made it a crime to have company unions. It also made it a crime to show preference to a Christian American who would make a binding contract rather than a worker who would promise nothing.

Of course, the biggest harm that these kind of laws do is that they degrade the character of those people who do not want to make a binding contract, but want an option that they can work if they want to but want to bind the employer to give them preference over a man who believes in the competitive American system.

Then we had the Taft-Hartley Law that altered the Wagner Law to some degree but still left it a crime, subject to a fine, for an employer showing preference to Jewish-Christian American citizens over collectives who denied individual responsibility.

These various laws, of course, made it very difficult for the employer who believed in the competitive system and the American way of life and Jewish-Christian ethics to protect himself against these passans who believed in no moral principle. Had it not been for these laws employers with foresight would have seen what the end result was bound to be when preference could not be shown in selecting employees of character rather than employees that are collectives who believed in no moral law.

So we might conclude that the primary cause of our losing billions and billions of dollars worth of production by way of strikes is due to government laws that violate the higher moral law of "Love thy neighbor as thyself" and the Covenants Commandment.

We are reading exactly what we have seen by our laws and the failure of local state officers to protect men's lives and property. The only way we can correct this error is by education - creating public opinion that understands that collective bargaining, instead of raising wage levels are keeping wages levels down.

Those relatively few workers who temporarily get a monopoly wage are paying a terrific price for this temporary material advantage because they lose their own self-respect and their own soul. They have to live the life of a free and open discussion. They, like every exploiter and dictator and robber, have to refuse to answer certain questions.

And this believing in favoritism and "might makes right" is largely the result of government schools. They are also based on the same theory as collective bargaining. They contend that the collective majority group have a right to force the minority to pay for anything the majority believes in education.

The same reasoning applies in establishing wages - that the majority determines wages and that the individual is of no consequence.

Yes, strikes are largely the result of government laws. Any questions on the subject?

Steel Strike Expected To Rush Automation

WASHINGTON - Many industrial and labor experts in and out of government predict that the current steel strike will accelerate the postwar trend toward automation among basic industries. In their belief it must hasten the day of further mechanization and reducing the power and membership of the unions.

Oddly, the man who has felt the impact of automation most keenly has no fear of its long-range, ill effects. He is John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers and founder of the CIO. As a result of mechanization, between 300,000 and 400,000 miners now produce more coal than 600,000 once did with pick and shovel and explosives.

An American miner turns out 10 times as much coal as his hand-digging opposite in Britain, where the nationalized industry is languishing. In fact, John L. and several operators recently bought a shipping company to supply Britain's needs.

The miners' experience with machines may serve as a helpful guide to other labor leaders who fear and oppose automation. During the postwar period of change, John L. has obtained unprecedented gains for his men in the form of shorter hours, peak pay, a welfare and retirement system, a hospital chain and other fringe benefits.

And since he broke with F.D.R. in 1940, he has won them without White House help - in fact, in spite of Roosevelt-Truman opposition. He has found that he can make better bargains with the owners and operators than with the politicians.

Human nature admittedly aided John L. in facing the automation challenge. There was a natural reduction in the coal-mining force because so many sons would not follow their fathers below ground when the finished school.

But the significant fact is that, with increasing mechanization, the second generation of prospective miners entered the factories which make the machine tools for the miners. That industry has blossomed since and just before World War II, for there must be men behind the machines.

Others shifted to trades and service establishments, which have absorbed hundreds of thousands of former workers in mines and factories. In many of these lines, it has been found, age is no bar, and there is a minimum need for previous experience.

The five-day week, fatter envelopes and assurance of security in old age through pensions, retirement pay or Uncle Sam's benefits have created a new leisure class in the United States. It is a phenomenon which is only beginning to make itself felt, economically, on a national scale. To service, entertain and cater to their holiday needs requires a vast force of men and women displaced by machines.

Senator Wayne L. Morse is depicted as the most expensive member of the United States Senate in the "documented record" of his career, recently issued by the Republican State Central Committee of Oregon.

Morse, erstwhile Republican turned Democrat, opposes Governor Arthur B. Langlie in November, whose entry was sponsored by the White House. The GOP figures it has a good chance to gain this seat.

From 1945 to May 31, 1956, according to the hostile computation, Morse had cost the taxpayers $320,410.78 for publication of his speeches and other entries in the Congressional Record. When he set a Senate record for the length of an unsuccessful filibuster - 22 hours and 28 minutes - the bill for his locuquacity was more than $9,000.

Ironically, Morse rarely has a hand of listeners. He usually takes the floor late in the afternoon, which has led newspaper correspondents to dub him "The Five O'Clock Shadow." He usually empties both the Senate and the Press Gallery by merely signalling the presiding officer that "I have something to say."

Every Greek Has Uncle In U.S.
By HENRY McLEMORE

ATHENS - Notes Written on a Grecian Urn: I always try to offer at least one vital statistic about each country I visit, and my statistic on Greece is that every Greek has an uncle living in the United States.

That's a lot of uncles, to be sure, but if you will walk around the streets of Athens, shop in its shops, and eat in its restaurants, you will come up with the same statistic. Since I have been here I have yet to talk (using my citizenry house Greek) with a citizen who did not have an uncle living in our country. Only this morning, on my way to the colorful spectacle of the Changing of the Guard, I talked with Athenians who have uncles in Brawley, Calif., Binghamton, N. Y., and Columbus, Ga., and one whose uncle is in "beeg town where he grows lettuce."

Right off, I couldn't think of any big town that grow lettuce, and my new friend was very disappointed. He wanted me to look up his relative the next time I passed through the place. On my next visit to Greece I am going to bring a Postal Guide with me, as well as a Department of Commerce booklet. Then I'll be able to quote the facts and figures to my Greek acquaintances.

The people here are really puzzled, as well as disappointed, if you are not familiar with the localities in the States where their uncles are living. On the lovely little island of Santorin, recently ravaged by an earthquake, I talked with a shopkeeper whose uncle was in Toledo. Somehow I mentioned the name of the newspaper there and the merchant's face lit up. Quickly, he rooted behind his stock of shirts, blouses, and caps, and came up with an old, old copy of the paper. He wanted to know all about Toledo, and I told him all I knew, and a lot that I didn't. He couldn't have been more pleased, because he is hoping to make a trip to Toledo some day himself.

THE NATION'S PRESS

FISCAL INTEGRITY (The Methodist Challenge)

"There is such a thing as fiscal integrity," remarked President Eisenhower to the reporters of his press conference recently. Where is it? Back in the not too distant past a President of the United States by official edict, cut the American dollar into halves and made it worth fifty cents. He did this as a butcher would take a meat cleaver and dissect a piece of meat. A farmer went to bed one night worth $20,000 and awakened next morning worth $10,000. Was that "fiscal integrity"? Some people think it was robbery.

When the national debt, which in fact is a debt that stands against the American people, began to pyramid and leaped from millions to billions, some of us were agast. We had been taught that such was the road to insolvency. But a group of bright, young economists, who seemed to be born for the hour, appeared and informed us that we would never have to pay this debt. They taught us that the way of prosperity was that of debt. Immediately, the markets of the world were flooded with bonds and we were urged to buy. We bought. The thousand dollars worth of bonds we bought then is worth not quite four hundred dollars today. Of course we collected a percent interest but even then our dollar remains shrunken to less than 60 cents. And yet the President assures us that "there is such a thing as fiscal integrity."

Our national debt amounts to 300 billion dollars. That means that the American people owe that amount of money. The radio and television are blasting away day and night, urging us to go to the loan companies and borrow more. Automobile companies, salesmen of gadgets of every character, installment artists and experts at persuasion by the thousands are pleading with us that we go further in debt. With subtle eloquence, the advertising artist assures us that though we owe more on the old car than it is worth, we can exchange it as a down payment on a new car without batting an eye and actually drive a new car, all shiny and multi-colored, on the cuff. Maybe that's "fiscal integrity."

Along comes the election and we are urged to vote sewer bonds, school bonds, airport bonds, every kind and character of bonds that the politicians can invent. Then there's our taxes, income taxes, sales taxes, hidden taxes, property taxes, dog taxes, gasoline taxes, taxes, taxes, taxes, which today total more than 25 percent of a man's earnings, by leaps and bounds, if he earns a little more. All of this means debt, whatever nice name you may give it, and obligates you to pay it or have the sheriff sell whatever you have, even your home, under the hammer. "Fiscal integrity!"

Certainly, if you live in town or in a county or in a state, or in all three, you pay taxes, little and big, small and great, of every conceivable variety. Now add it up and try to think of what I have unintentionally forgotten. I confess that I can't add it up. I'm afraid it would scare me to death. It is the mounting fagot pile that will one day become a bonfire, of more tragic import than the explosion of a hydrogen bomb. Our old fathers who actually believed that solvency was the only sure pathway to success are out-moded by a "fiscal integrity," depending upon our creditors never foreclosing.

But, say the experts, look at what this policy of "put it on our account" has done. It has produced prosperity. We rattle more coin in breeches pocket than ever before. We have set up the United Nations, built the outfit-millions of dollars worth of mansions, financed a multitude of nations, armed a fourth of the world, poured a steady stream of billions of dollars into the pockets of friends and enemies, and watched some of them carry their loot right over to our enemies without a blush. Indeed, we are getting ready, in a kind of secret way, to finance a one world government and possibly turn it over to Russia to control. Really, my good brother, this is not an impossibly picture by any means!

When our good President told the reporters that there was "such a thing as fiscal integrity," I began to look around to see if perchance I'd overlooked it. There was a day when we did not live on debts that we could never pay. There was a time when American men would have died rather than load their unborn grandchildren with financial obligations they could never meet. As a boy, I lived in an America where the bank did business on the character of the customer. Today we must produce all characters of security, even to the amount of gold in your mother-in-law's teeth. But not then. The old rough-handed farmer who walked into the bank fifty years ago was his own security. His world was as good as his bond. He met his obligations. Death was the only thing that kept him from paying his debts. But not in this gadget day. The Republican and the Democrat have alike found a new way into the financial stratosphere. Only a few old fossils like Senator Byrd of Virginia remain who believe in "paying your debts." Really, that old benighted Virginian still believes in not making debts you can not pay. Which is the "fiscal integrity" of bygone ages!

But the President says, "There is such a thing as fiscal integrity." We should move its dust and ashes to Arlington!

Jane Talk
By JANE KADINGO
Pampa News Women's Editor

LET THERE BE ANY CONVERSATION about money, and sooner or later someone will come up with the bright observation "after all, women own most of the wealth of the country." The implication, of course, is that women control the wealth of the nation and that perhaps, Amazon-like, women will one day convert the U.S.A. into a horrendous matriarchy.

IT'S PERFECTLY true that a good deal of the nation's wealth is in the names of women. One of the reasons for this is the growing earning power of women. With more women working outside the home than ever before in our history, it naturally follows that women have been gaining more direct control over a greater number of dollars.

It's also true that there may be a trend toward joint ownership of savings and material possessions by husband and wife. Joint bank accounts are commonplace today. So are homes jointly owned. But these examples do not bolster the theory that women have control of the nation's wealth; rather, they emphasize that the nation's money is in the hands of families, where it is being used for the benefit of husband, wife and children — not women alone.

Take the matter of life insurance, which is primarily used by families for family protection. Men own more life insurance than women, according to the Institute of Life Insurance. This is logical enough, since men are family breadwinners in most instances. And it's logical for wives to be named as the beneficiary of their husbands' policies because if the husband should die first it becomes the wife's job to preserve the family. Put another way, the millions of dollars in life insurance benefits received by wives whose husbands have died, are not used to expand any kind of purely feminine economic power; instead, the funds are spent for the family — to continue payments on a home, to feed and clothe the children, to pay for their education.

In most families men contribute the greatest number of dollars toward family income; wives as homemakers are their very real partners. With more and more women taking jobs outside the home, the women's share of direct financial contributions has been rising. More than one-third of women of working age are now employed outside the home. Half of them are married. Even among farm wives, who were once isolated from job opportunities, there is now a larger proportion — one in five — who bring home a paycheck.

By and large, wives take jobs to increase family income, to improve the family's standard of living. To help ease the children through college a mother may earn extra money, or a wife may work to help pay off the mortgage on the family home.

So closely is the working woman linked to family needs and aspirations that well over half of all employed women consider themselves the support of dependents.

In still another area, women are proving that they are more concerned with family economics than with feminine economics. The Institute of Life Insurance has found that nearly seven out of ten women have some form of life insurance. Since life insurance is purchased for family protection, the wide ownership of life insurance by women in additional testimony of their concern for the welfare of their families.

The 1956 sheath look is the evening look for autumn, 1956. We show here the short version and the long version, both with the graceful panel back. Ice pink silk satin sheath (left) by Branell has Empire bodice embroidered in crystal beads and a graceful, loose back panel. The long slim evening dress (right) by Roxane for Samuel Winston is in a very fine pale blue silk faille with rhinestone embroidery at bodice and slit hemline. Slit reveals fan-shaped pleat of pale blue chiffon. Huge bow with wide streamers creates panel-effect back.

For 1956 Autumn Eve, The 1912 Sheath Dress Returns To The Wardrobe Again

By GAILE DUGAS
NEA Women's Editor
NEW YORK — (NEA) — The 1912 sheath complete with floating panel, bugle beads and soft draping brings an entirely new look to this year's evening gowns, both short and long.

Strapless necklines are used for both short and long gowns of great elegance. Panels may float front or back. For the sheath, the panel is attached at the back. For the Empire look, it floats from just under the bustline in graceful, fluttering drapes both short and long. The sheath is worn for 5 o'clock dinner and evening in various versions. It gets crystal beading on chiffon and silk satin, appears with high shawls and in tunic effects.

There are still bouffant gowns, lovely ones, in both short and long lengths. But the freshest evening look is via the softened sheath and in delightful colors: pale, soft blues and pinks, pale peaches and the Edwardian pastels (dove gray, pale mauve).

Black silk crepe appears in slinky dinner sheaths and there are many black silk evening dresses with white trim. Silk satin is an important evening fabric this year; so is chiffon. There are more metallic fabrics and brocades, more shine of jet and rhinestones.

Higher waistlines are used for all evening gowns from 5 o'clock on. These may be done with crush.

Stockings Or Not For The Summer

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor
Stockings or not in the summer? This is a question many women past 40 ask, as soon as the weather turns warm.

It can't be settled categorically. Some mature women have very youthful skin. They tan with ease and the skin on their legs has remained firm. Certainly these women have no more need to wear stockings on casual occasions, if they wish to go without, than their daughters do.

Women who have conspicuous veins in their legs and women who wear elastic stockings for medical reasons know the answer before they ask. They hope only that someone will give them an excuse to do what they know they ought not to do.

Women whose skin remains pale throughout the summer and women who are severely under or overweight ought to decide about wearing stockings on the basis of whether the comfort is worth the price they will pay in attractiveness.

Some women who wear longer dresses and who have no circulation trouble may find that knee-length stockings that stay up by themselves give the benefits of comfort and looks. But, if one's skirt hops up above the stocking line when one sits down, one ought not to wear them. Pregnant women should, in no case, wear stockings with elastic at the knees.

Women who don't feel the need of stockings should wear nylon foot-covers to protect the insides of the shoes and their feet. They should not wear socks with pumps.

She is one of the few wives in her neighborhood who doesn't work. Consequently she and her husband can't "keep up" with couples who live on a double income.

Their neighbors drive new cars. Theirs is old. Their neighbors have more money to spend on entertaining. They also have better furniture. It didn't begin to bother her until her children got old enough to want more than she and her husband can afford to give them.

Now she is wondering if she should go to work instead of staying home and managing to get by. Their children are 14 and 12. On her husband's income.

Panhandle Ladies To Sponsor Tournament

The Panhandle Women's Golf Association will hold its annual three-day tournament at the Amarillo Country Club beginning Aug. 1.

At the regular Panhandle Ladies Day, July 31, qualification for the tournament will also be held. All women who plan to go to the tournament are to register in the Pro-Shop at the Pampa Country Club. Names must be sent in. Registering women are to state whether they plan to play in the tournament or just plan to play for Panhandle Ladies Day.

If your clothes come out brown when you use a soap and a bleach together, your water has manganese in it. You can get out the brown stains with a detergent.

If bleach is not thoroughly rinsed out of clothes, they will scorch when ironed. Detergents do not react with hard water to form insoluble compounds that cause graying, stiffening and specking of clothes. Consider this if you're in a hard-water belt.

Bridge Tournament Continued Monday

The Pampa Duplicate Bridge Club met Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Elks Hall for the third game of its tournament series. The Howell Movement was played.

Mrs. Knox Kinard and Miss Aline Walker won first place honors; Mrs. M. G. Rogers and Mrs. Haskel Maguire won second place; and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Nation, Mrs. W. D. Murphy, and Mrs. T. V. Rowe, all tied for third place. Mrs. I. B. Hughey won the door prize of $5.

Anyone desiring to play may do so without competing in the tournament series. Next Monday night, being the first Monday of the month, will be master point night. First place winners will receive 100 points toward one master point.

Even the Eastern and Western Little League All-Stars here are doing quite well for themselves. In the first round tournament play held at Dumas Monday, the East team blanked Dumas, 2-0, and the West club dumped Childress, 7-5. The Little League park at Dumas has been reported to be a new playing area, and well equipped for baseball tilts.

The Pampa Pony All-Stars will try their next step at district competition to be held at Monahans, July 30-Aug. 1. The Pony group have a well balanced crew with almost everyone capable to play anywhere. Coaches for the Pony group are Bill Ridgeway and Gerald Mobley.

To explain the happening on why Graham Plow of Amarillo lost to the Frank Phillips Men's Club of Borger on a forfeit for the Top of Texas softball championship was due to the fact that one of Graham's hurlers was not on the team. List when they sent their club roster in. Tournament director Charles Wilkinson had warned that if that particular twirler would hurl for Graham that they would lose to PPMC on a forfeit. That was still only one loss for Graham in the double round robin elimination meet but Graham forfeited the other tilt scheduled for play and accepted the second place trophy. Roughly guessing—I would say there were around 700 people watching the softball meet action Sunday. This sport is getting to be about as popular as our national favorite pastime.

It had been announced recently that James H. Ayers is one of the American top junior riflemen as announced by the National Rifle Association. He was awarded the Distinguished Rifleman Medal, highest junior rifle shooting award in the nation. In order to qualify for this award, Jimmy had to shoot hundreds of targets over a period of several months and climb through 14 lower qualification National Rifle Association junior ratings. He attends Texas Technological College.

The International Junior Golf Tournament will be held at Fargo, North Dakota next month.

The Pampa Oilers are currently home for a five day stand, and tangle with the Ballinger Westerners in a twin-bill affair today. First game is to start at 6:30 p.m.

The Pampa semi-pro baseball team sponsored by the Elks downed the Am-Jets of Amarillo Air Force Base, Monday night at Oilier Park. This gives the Elks team a 2-1 lead on the Am-Jets in games played this summer.

Locals Lose To Colts, 1-0

SAN ANGELO — Stanley Patchell, a big, fireballing righthander, hurled a four hit shutout here last night and player-manager Art Bowland slammed a solo round tripper as the San Angelo Colts blanked the Pampa Oilers, 1-0, Tuesday night here to regain third place in the Southwestern League standings.

Patchell was in serious trouble only in the second inning when Lynn Tucker led off with a single and Bob Flores walked with two out.

Take nothing away from Chuck Bogan. The speedy Oiler lefty hurled a fine eight-hitter for the visiting Oilers and made only one mistake, the gopher pitch to Bowland. Bogan fanned six and walked only one and struck out five in a row in the fourth and fifth innings.

Bowland's clout over the right-field fence was the only extra base hit in the game.

The Pampa Oilers are currently home for a five-day stand and tangle with the Ballinger Westerners in a twin-bill today. First game will start at 6:30 p.m.

Braves Increase Lead Trip Giants; Bums Blast Redlegs

By FRED DOWN
 United Press Sports Writer

"There ain't no better way to win 'em than by one run."

That's Manager Fred Haney murdering the King's English but pointing out a key reason his Milwaukee Braves today increased their National League lead to a new high of 3 1/2 games. They're winning the close ones — as demonstrated by a 16-8 record in one-run decisions compared to the Cincinnati Redlegs' 17-14 mark and the Brooklyn Dodgers' 10-11 record in them.

The Braves showed that important championship quality again Tuesday night when they rallied for two runs in the ninth to beat the New York Giants, 4-3. The Braves have won 11 of 13 games in their latest drive and six of those triumphs were by one-run margins.

Hank Aaron tripled to lead off the ninth and scored the tying run as Bobby Thomson hit into a double play. Then shortstop Johnny Logan walloped his ninth home run of the season to give southpaw Warren Spahn the tally he needed for his fourth straight win and 10th of the year. Spahn yielded a two-run homer to Dusty Rhodes in the first inning but then held the Giants in check the remainder of the way.

Dodgers Blast Redlegs

The Dodgers opened a key home stand with a barrage of extra base blows that gave them a 10-5 decision over the second-place Redlegs. Sandy Amoros knocked in five runs with two triples and a double and Duke Snider hit his 22nd and 23rd homers as the Dodgers kayoed nemesis Johnny Klippstein. Sal Maglie yielded 13 hits but went the distance for his third triumph.

The Philadelphia Phillies routed Vinegar Bend Mizell in a six-run, sixth-inning rally to beat the St. Louis Cardinals, 7-3. Curt Simmons delivered a two-run double in the big rally and beat the Redbirds for the third time this season although touched for 12 hits. Catcher Andy Seminick also delivered a bases-filled single in the six-run uprising.

Roberto Clemente knocked in four runs with a homer, triple and sacrifice fly as the Pittsburgh Pirates whipped the Chicago Cubs, 6-2. Ronnie Kline picked up his ninth win although he needed help from Howie Pollet in the eighth while Bob Rush suffered his fourth loss against eight victories.

Billy Pierce became the major league first 15-game winner of the current season and matched his 1955 victory total when the Chicago White Sox pounded out an 11-5 verdict over the American League leading New York Yankees. Larry Doby led the White Sox' 14-hit assault with a single, double and homer that drove in four runs. Tom Sturdivant was the loser.

Indians Move Up

The Cleveland Indians crept to within 8 1/2 games of the Yankees when they walloped the Washington Senators, 11-0. Mike Garcia pitched a three-hitter for his third shutout of the year against the Senators. Rocky Colavito drove in three runs with a triple and two singles.

Mickey Vernon's two-run, ninth-inning homer enabled the Boston Red Sox to shade the Kansas City Athletics, 3-2, for their third straight win. Relief pitcher Ike Delock received credit for his seventh win while Wally Burnette suffered his first major league defeat after two triumphs.

Tripples by Willie Miranda and Dick Williams paced the Baltimore Orioles to an 11-5 victory after the Detroit Tigers won the opener of the twilight doubleheader, 9-7, with the aid of homers by Al Kaline, Frank House and Charley Maxwell. The Orioles' win snapped a five-game losing skid.

Watch Those Strokes

By DON FAIRFIELD
 Written for NEA Service

Notice how an experienced golfer wins by keeping the ball straight.

The average new player's principal fault is that he wants to hit the ball too hard. The desire to whack the daylight out of the ball causes many a player to under-club. He takes too short a club. Allow yourself enough club, for the idea is to swing, not to hit or beat at the ball. The average player should not try to be a Sam Snead.

He should always seek to play well within himself. Otherwise, in his effort to hit the ball too hard, he'll widen his stance and lock himself. That usually produces a fine slice, a 40 - yarder straight sidarm.

The preliminaries to a short go far toward determining its effectiveness. Get set correctly. This requires a good understanding of the proper grip, stance and balance, all mighty important ingredients. If a player does not work out some definite plan of action and know exactly what he will do, he becomes confused.

Take your time, but not so much

Don Fairfield as to hold up those behind you. Play with restraint and watch your score improve.

Burke Cops PGA Title

By LEO H. PETERSEN
 United Press Sports Editor

CANTON, Mass. (UP)— Jackie Burke credited his putter, chipping and ability to play in the afternoon "like a good race horse coming down the stretch" for his victory over battle-scarred Ted Kroll for the PGA golf championship.

In winning it Tuesday, the curly-haired, 32-year old Burke became the second man in history ever to win the Masters and PGA tournaments — two of the most prized titles in golf — in the same year. Only Sam Snead who was eliminated in the PGA quarter-finals by Kroll on Sunday ever did it before back in 1939.

Burke, one of the greatest putters in the game, had to come from behind to beat the 37-year old Kroll, just as he had to fight back to whip Ed Furgoi, the 1954 U.S. Open champion, in the semifinals on Monday. Against Furgoi he fought back from being five down to win out, 1 up in 37 holes.

Came From Behind

Against Kroll, he came from a three-down deficit because his putter faltered him for the first 19 holes, as he missed five putts from five feet or less — one of them from 18 inches.

But then he got his putter back on good behavior and fired five birdies at Kroll in six holes to take command.

"I was trying to get Ted 2-up," Jackie said. "For I figured if I could do that I could match him the rest of the way."

And Burke, a Marine sergeant in World War II, did just that. Once he gained his 2-up lead on the 27th hole, he matched Kroll, who was an Army sergeant in that war, stroke for stroke for seven holes before he closed him out 3 and 2 on the 37th green.

It was fitting that Burke's victory came on a par three hole for those short ones had been his dish throughout the five-day tournament.

Birdies On 4th

On one of them, the 190 - yard fourth, he carded five birdies and two pars in the seven rounds of match play, it took him to win his second major title of the year.

That string of birdies on the afternoon nine put Burke out in four under par 32 and when he closed it out he maintained that edge over regulation figures, being four under par for 34 holes.

Kroll didn't crack. Trying for his first major tournament triumph after 10 years on the pro trail, he just ran out of gas, the same as he did at Rochester, N.Y., last month in the U.S. Open. In that one, he had to finish in even par for the last three holes to beat out Cary Middlecoff, but he triple-bogged the 18th to blow his chance.

He didn't triple-bogie Tuesday but he just couldn't match those Burke birdies.

"I gave it all I had," said Kroll, who was wounded four times in the war, "it just wasn't good enough."

Burke, who said he was driving the best he ever has, still leaned to his putter as the club which did the trick. On his birdie string, he sank putts of 18, eight, seven, four and two feet.

"That putter told the story," said Jackie. "But my chipping saved me too. For I wasn't hitting my fairway irons too well but my chipping got me close enough to sink those putts."

Kroll was a picture player in the morning round as he hit 10 straight greens. He carded a three-under-par 65 which gave him a 2-up lead as Jackie had a 70.

But after Jackie dropped the 19th to go three down, his putter started working and that was it. At the end of the morning 18, Burke remarked that he always, "plays better in the afternoon."

"I feel like a good racehorse charging down that stretch to victory," he said. "I hope it works that way today."

It did.

Moore Favored Over Parker In Heavyweight Bout Match

TORONTO, Ont. (UP)— Ancient Archie Moore is favored at 14-5 to win the biggest gamble of his career tonight against tall James J. Parker in a bizarre 15-round heavyweight fight that promises a record Canadian gate of $150,000.

Moore, 38, the light heavyweight champion and number one contender for the vacant heavyweight crown, is guaranteed $45,000 for the fight at Maple Leaf Baseball Stadium; but a defeat or serious injury would knock him out of a sure shot at the heavy crown in September.

Parker, 28, is an unranked heavy contender; but the tall Toronto blaster is a dangerous puncher who has knocked out 23 of his 37 opponents. He claims the Canadian and British empire titles.

"I expect trouble with Parker tonight," mustached Moore said today. "And for that reason I'm going to hit him harder than I Fumbling fingers cost the Hobbs Sports another game of their Southwestern League lead to El Paso Tuesday night.

Six Hobbs errors contributed mightily to El Paso's 6 to 5 victory, the big one coming in the bottom of the ninth when catcher Ike Seone dropped a perfect throw to the plate that would have cut off the winning run.

The Sports now lead by seven.

Little LEAGUERS

By JIMMY BRESLIN
 NEA Staff Correspondent

When you put 18 kids of Little League age on a field, you get some strange versions of baseball, which is one reason why adults get a big kick out of watching a game. Much of the charm of Little League comes when things like this happen:

Duwayne Halvorson, 12, struck out 18 batters, the limit, as his National Guard Yankees won a game from the Legion 40 and 8 team at Brajner, Minn.

This sounds like a perfect game — or a shutout at least. Well, it was a trifle different. Halvorson's team won the game, all right. But by a 17-8 score. Seems Duwayne's teammates had trouble handling ground balls and they made nine errors. Couples with three hits and five walks, the Legion team scored plenty of runs between strikeouts.

Then you have the common occurrence of no umpire showing up. It happened in a game at Santa Cruz, Calif., so Fred Boehme, manager of the Optimist Indians, went through the spectator ranks trying to find a substitute.

He found most adults sitting quite comfortably on their hands and making out as if the request never was made. So Boehme went out and umpired the game himself. His team lost, of course.

In the same section, Gary Sletten, who plays with the Athletics of the Capitola, Calif., loop, can become one large package of trouble — despite his size — for any umpire not quite up to perfection on his rules.

Gary walks around with a rule book in his pocket since losing a minor argument with an umpire. He whips it out without hesitation, too.

SMALL TALK: Joe Pette has managed six straight championships in the Rockville Centre, N.Y., league, which is par for the course. . . But Pette, an old semi-pro and minor league, takes no chances on his own managerial skills. . . On each White Sox 15-4; Ford, Yanks 12-4; Burdette, Braves 12-4; Buhl, Braves 12-4.

are in the lineup to help keep pop's string alive.

Kids who were assigned to the Crackers of Atlanta's Glenwood Park L.L. at the start of the season took one look at their manager and then hustled back to the player-agent, asking for transfers.

It's the other way around now, as Mrs. Peggy Rogers, a pert blond, pulls the strings for the team she manages. . . Kids around the league now are scheming to get on the club next season.

Mrs. Rogers is a bookkeeper from seven in the morning until four in the afternoon. Through with work, she heads home — but not for cooking or cleaning chores. . . Instead, she dons blue jeans and heads for the ball field, where her Crackers — including son Butch, 11 — get into action.

Mrs. Rogers' team plays orthodox baseball, except for one twist. . . The home run hitter gets a kiss instead of a handshake from the manager.

Nate Wallace of the Cleveland Indians front office passes word along that the Tribe's "Little League Day" will be held at Municipal Stadium, Aug. 19. . . Little Leaguers from Ohio and Western Pennsylvania will be on hand for the event.

'Foundation Garment' Shortage In Hungary

By RUSSELL JONES
United Press Staff Correspondent
VIENNA (UP)—There are many shortages in Communist Hungary today, but the one a western visitor notices first is the absence of what advertising writers call "foundation garments."

Never have so many women bulged in so many places as those seen on the streets of the once-great capital city of Budapest, in pre-Communist days known as the "Paris" of Central Europe.

The chic and beautiful women celebrated by generations of poets and composers and writers are gone, innocent victims of the new order.

A walk down Vaci Utca, still described in guide books as the Fifth Avenue of Budapest, now is like a stroll through a potato patch in harvest time.

Cosmetics, Girdles Lacking
In their cheap and baggy clothes, the women look nothing more than so many sacks tied in the middle.

Residents explain the absence of smart and attractive women by pointing to the lack of cosmetics as well as girdles, the flight, deportation or arrest of most of the city's better families and the influx of some 500,000 peasants from the provinces.

Where Vaci Utca and the "Corso" along the Danube were once virtually private domains of Budapest society, they now swarm with working men and women dressed in rough working clothes.

Only in one or two of the city's few night clubs does one see the beauty that stirred the poets and musicians.

It comes as a shock to hear that most of the lovely girls in these spots are there on instructions from the secret police to watch the for-ity of the clientele.

It is another shock to find that good wine is almost unobtainable in a country famed for its vineyards. In one swank restaurant like Gundels or the Kis Royal, the waiter doesn't bother to produce the wine list—but suggests a "good riesling" of last year's vintage.

Even in the better hotels and eating spots, the great majority of the customers drink the local beer—probably the flattest this side of British bitter.

Of the "wine, women and song," which Hungarians claimed as their own, only music remains—and that too is in serious supply.

Government Budgeting About Like Weather Forecasting, But It's Not So Accurate

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—Back there in the Coolidge administration (1923-1928), the Treasury treated a dime almost like folding money to be salted away, if possible, against reduction of the public debt.

Mr. Coolidge was tight with a penny himself. He expected government spenders to be likewise. Old Andy Mellon was secretary of Treasury, a hard man perhaps, but quick with figures. The President and his secretary made quite a team. And, though their boom later burst in the face of President Hoover, neither Mr. Coolidge nor Mellon ever was charged with throwing the public's funds around or of supporting the government in luxury at the taxpayers' expense.

Mr. Coolidge and Mellon would never have believed a President ever would spin the pages of a government budget and, failing to reconcile some big figures, smile to the assembled reporters, and say: "Now, Fred, what's $40 million between friends?"

Fred was the late J. Fred Essary of the Baltimore Sun, a tight man himself, who had spotted what looked like a discrepancy in FDR's first budget. Essary was more the Coolidge type, and he came away from Mr. Roosevelt's first budget conference in the White House Lincoln room considerably shocked.

If this essay is leading anywhere, it is to the fact that government budgeting now and for many years past is about like weather forecasting, only not so accurate. It is true that no one actually is responsible for government spending, the President and Congress being jointly concerned and each in a position to pass the buck to the other.

But, how about that $4 billion miss in estimating what government would cost in the fiscal year just ended? That's the margin by which President Eisenhower underestimated government spending when he sent his 1956 fiscal year budget to Congress 18 months ago. Eighteen months is a long time. But $4 billion is a lot of money when viewed in light of the fact that it is spent and gone and had belonged to you and the rest of us.

And, how about government revenue in fiscal 1956? You could not crowd all the government consultants, economists, tax experts and such into the town's multitude of cocktail saloons.

With all of that brain power on the job, however, to guide him, Mr. Eisenhower guessed wrong on fiscal 1956 Treasury revenue by $3 billion. He was wrong on the right side, fortunately, but still wrong.

Fraile little Andy Mellon would have dissolved in shame for an error like that. Mr. Coolidge would have exploded with considerable deadly fall-out among his experts.

These mis-estimates, however, are not the most significant of the situations revealed by the 1956 fiscal year report. Painfully meaningful for the taxpayers is something else: In 10 years, 1946-56, the Treasury has collected approximately $59 billion, most of it from individual income tax payers, and still couldn't keep house on it.

Look at what only Plymouth offers you!

(no other low-price car has these value features)

LARGEST SIZE in the low-price 3. Plymouth is biggest, longest, roomiest of "all 3," with the smooth ride only a big car can give.

NEWEST STYLING in the low-price 3. All-new Aerodynamic Design, exclusively Plymouth's, brings you tomorrow's look today.

LARGEST TRUNK SPACE in the low-price 3. A full 33.8 cubic feet! Low-price car "A" has only 20 cubic feet; low-price car "B" has only 27 cubic feet.

SAFETY-RIM WHEELS, exclusive in the low-price 3. Protect you from accidents by helping to hold tire on rim in case of blowout.

PUSH-BUTTON DRIVING, exclusive in the low-price 3. This positive, mechanical control makes all other forms of driving old-fashioned. Optional on all models.

TWIN-CYLINDER FRONT BRAKES, exclusive in the low-price 3. TWO hydraulic brake cylinders in each front wheel give you safer, surer stops, reduce the chance of accidents.

The brilliant Plymouth Belvedere 2-door Hardtop, V-8 or 6.

ELECTRIC WINDSHIELD WIPERS, exclusive as standard equipment in the low-price 3. Plymouth's electric wipers also help keep you out of accidents, since they DON'T slow down when you step on the gas.

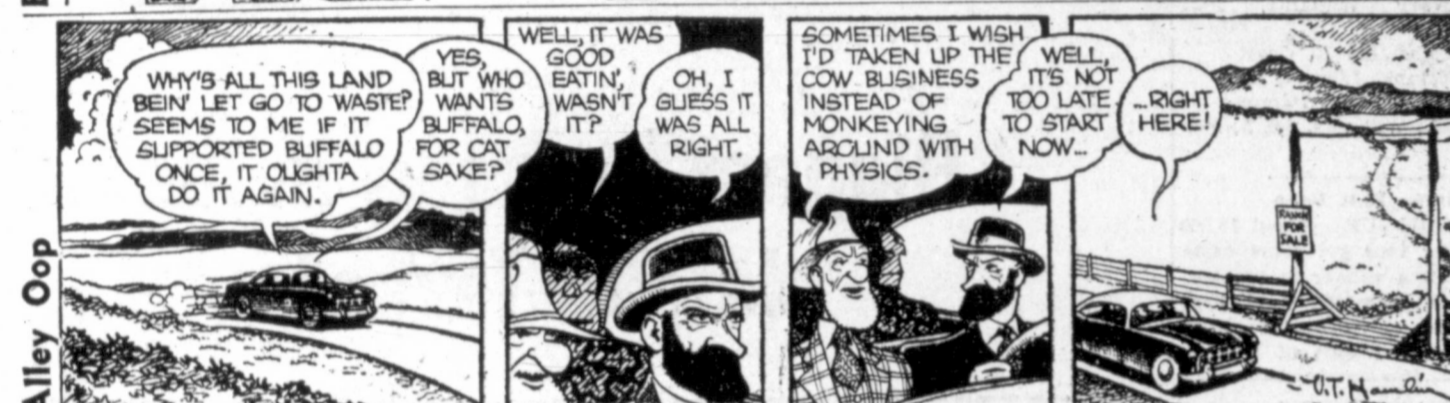

NEWEST V-8s in the low-price 3. New airplane-type Hy-Fire V-8s (up to 200 hp) from Plymouth's new $50,000,000 Qualimatic engine plant. And in Plymouth's new Fury—a blazing 240 hp!

TOP PERFORMANCE in the low-price 3. Plymouth holds official NASCAR speed record for cars in its class, acceleration record for all U. S. stock cars!

GREATEST VISIBILITY in the low-price 3. Note Plymouth's swept-back design. No corner blind spot (right of dotted line), as results from straight up-and-down posts on the other two low-price cars.

Now discover firsthand the rest of Plymouth's value...
