Dulles Arrives For London Conference

Adlai May Have Daniel's Support

By UNITED PRESS
A dual Stevenson's statement that the tidelands issue is "ended" as far as he is concerned may have won him the unconditional support of U. S. Sen. Price Daniel, the Texas Democratic gubernatorial nominee.
Daniel has steadfastly refused to give his wholehearted endorsement to Stevenson and Sen. Estes Kefauver, the national nominees for president and vice president. Daniel and Gov. Allan Shivers refused to support the Democrats in 1952 because Stevenson said he was opposed to state control of the tidelands.
But Stevenson said in Washington Monday he "believed Congress has acted on tidelands, and in addition to that, the Supreme Court has sustained the act's constitutionality."
Termed Dead Issue
Once these two things occur, Stevenson said, "I would have thought that it was an end to the matter." This was the second time that Stevenson has termed the tidelands a dead issue in his estimation.
From his home in Liberty, Daniel told United Press he was "very glad" to hear about the settlement. He said he had learned beforehand that Stevenson was sending him a statement about his position in regard to the tidelands and the use of force in carrying out the Supreme Court decision on school integration.

2nd Sleeping Sickness Case Is Reported

The second case of encephalitis, more commonly known as sleeping sickness, has been reported in Gray County.
The most recent case of sleeping sickness reported is that of Jerry Duenkel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Duenkel Jr., 321 N. Frost, who was taken to a local hospital Sunday with high fever and back aches.
At first it was thought the youth was suffering with bulbar poliomyelitis but the doctors could find no signs of paralysis and they finally determined that he had sleeping sickness.
Following the diagnosis the Duenkel youth was taken to North-West Texas Hospital in Amarillo for treatment. It is reported by hospital attendants in Amarillo that the youth "is a very sick little boy." He was "about the same" this morning, according to sources close to the family.
The first case of sleeping sickness was reported in Gray County approximately two weeks ago when Mrs. Ruth Mayberry of LeFlore had a mild case. It is reported that she has recovered from the sickness and has returned to her home.
After Mrs. Mayberry's illness, the city of LeFlore was sprayed by the Pampa spraying machine in an effort to kill the mosquitoes which carry the disease.
The type of sleeping sickness which has been reported in Gray County is a very serious one. It is carried by mosquitoes and has been reported throughout various parts of the country for several years.
When contacted this morning, Dr. Joe Gates, Gray County health officer, stated "Gray County does not have an epidemic and citizens should not become alarmed by the two cases that have been reported." He continued by stating that Pampa is constantly spraying in an effort to destroy mosquitoes.
Gates further stated, "As soon as we receive a killing frost the mosquitoes will be eliminated and the danger of persons contracting sleeping sickness will be over."
City officials recently requested that property owners cut all weeds and high grass on their property in an effort to destroy the breeding places of mosquitoes. They reported that the city is doing every thing it can to combat the mosquitoes but until all breeding places are destroyed the city will continue to be plagued with mosquitoes.

Association Of Canal Users Seen

By WILLIAM SEXTON
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON — UP — Secretary of State John Foster Dulles arrived here today and immediately plunged into discussions with the British and French foreign ministers on the growing animosity toward their plan for a Suez Canal users association.
French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau, who arrived six minutes after Dulles, told newsmen he believes Wednesday's conference of 10 nations "will lead to a creation of an association of canal users" despite the unexpected critical reaction from the Big Three's allies.
Pineau mentioned the possibility of taking the problem to the United Nations but said this would depend on Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser who already has rejected the plan and branded it an "association for war."
"Either he will receive the association of canal users or prevent their ships going through the canal," Pineau said. His statement bore out reports the West was anxious to challenge Nasser by sending a test ship to the canal for passage.
The plan calls for setting up an association with its own pilots which would collect fees for passage through the canal. Pineau said he thought "a certain number" of the European pilots who resigned would return to work for the canal users association.
Should Egypt refuse passage, the association would be expected to lay the case before the UN Security Council, charging Egypt with violating the 1885 treaty guaranteeing free passage to ships of all nations.
Dulles, Pineau and British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd planned a full day of conferences before presenting the plan to the 18-nation meeting. Already at least seven of the nations were expressing hostility or doubt at the users plan.
Italian Foreign Minister Gian-Luigi Martino, who flew to London with Pineau, was sharply attacked in the Italian press this morning for his lukewarm stand. But newspapers in other countries raised sharp questions about the benefit of such an association.
Immediate UN Action
Many of the countries at Wednesday's conference, including the Scandinavian nations, pressed to take the whole issue to the United Nations now. The Big Three hoped at its meetings today to remove the last doubts so they could present an acceptable plan.
Three other main items were on the conference agenda:
1. The United States announced intention to provide dollar funds to buy western hemisphere oil to supplant shrinking supplies (See DULLES, Page 3)

Cabot Management Conference Opens

The 26th Management Conference of Cabot's Southwestern Division opened at 9:30 a.m. today in the Cabot Auditorium in the Hughes Building.
The conference, which was expected to be attended by approximately 60 management representatives from throughout the Southwestern Division, is a two day affair, ending with forums on carbon black, oil, gas and gasoline tomorrow.
Conference objectives are to discuss and attempt to solve mutual management problems, to bring thinking together on policies, procedures, etc., and to facilitate communications up and down the supervisory line.
The meeting was called to order by John Brown and, after introductions, was dedicated to reports and discussions on the firm's various departments.
Russ Allen told, "What and How We Are Doing," and Gene Green reported on the oil, gas and gasoline picture. Bill Loving reported on Carbon black; Art Dobbin on research and development; R. A. Baker on Cabot Shops, including Franks; and Buck Burdette reported on the general company situation.
Following the reports, the group adjourned for lunch at the Pampa Hotel.
They returned to the auditorium after lunch for a talk on the Middle East problem by Dr. M. L. Wardell of Oklahoma University. An open forum was scheduled following the address and election of a chairman and setting of a date for the next meeting.
Tomorrow, the group will split up with carbon black men meeting with Bill Loving in the Cabot auditorium and oil, gas and gasoline men meeting with Gene Green in a Cabot room.
Dr. Wardell, this afternoon's speaker, is a professor of history at O.U. He has been a member of the Oklahoma school's faculty since 1925.
Dr. Wardell began his teaching career in 1912 and held posts at Geary, Goodwell, Guymon, Pawhuska and Tulsa, Okla., before going to the University.

The O.U. historian has written several books, including "Political History of the Cherokee Nation, 1838-1907," published by the University of Oklahoma Press in 1938, and "History of Oklahoma," written with Dr. E. E. Dale and published by Prentice-Hall in 1948.
Dr. Wardell won his bachelor of arts degree at O.U. in 1919 and his master of arts degree at Harvard University in 1922. He received the doctor of philosophy degree at the University of Chicago in 1928.

JOHN BROWN ... call to order

Commission Meeting Is Canceled

Business to be taken up by the City Commission this morning was postponed until next week as a quorum of the commissioners did not attend today's scheduled meeting.
City Manager Fred Brook reported that the only commissioner to attend the meeting this morning was W. D. Varmon. Mayor Lynn Boyd and Commissioner Frank Diaz were out of town and Commissioners W. B. Neel and Gene Fatheree were unable to attend due to business commitments.
In addition to the business which was postponed from today's scheduled meeting the commissioners will discuss the proposed city budget for next year at the meeting next Tuesday.
The meeting will be open to the public and any person interested in the budget of the city for the coming year is requested to attend, Brook reported.
Any necessary changes in the budget as proposed will be made by the commissioners prior to their approval of it.

Egypt Asks UN Debate

CAIRO (UP) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser may ask the UN Security Council for a full dress Suez debate if the London Suez conference endorses the Western "users association" plan, informed sources said today.
Nasser stopped short of asking for Security Council action Monday when he appealed to the council for "vigilance" and accused the West of threatening international peace and security by forming an association.
At the same time the Egyptian leader pushed ahead to draw stronger support from friendly countries to enable him to retain full control of the Suez Canal against Western measures.
Twenty-one nations have formally accepted the Egyptian counter-proposal for a "negotiating body" to work out future guarantees of canal traffic. The note to the United Nations suggested the body be composed of Egypt and about eight of the nations using the canal.
(Communist China, according to a Peiping radio broadcast, declared itself fully on Egypt's side in the dispute. It accused Britain and France of "military threat and provocation" and said they had the full backing of the United States).

Hospital Work 70 Per Cent Completed

Construction work on the 40-room addition to Highland General Hospital is approximately 70 per cent complete, according to Scott Tolbert, construction foreman for the Doyle Construction Company of Amarillo, general contractor.
Tolbert reported that final concrete work is in progress and should be completed in about two weeks. Concrete work still to be completed includes the final section to the stair well and the finish floors.
Installation of reinforcing for the walls of the rooms is in progress with more than half of the steel already in place on the second floor.
Plans call for the completion of the construction work about the first of the year, Tolbert reported.
Chet Lander, hospital administrator, stated that the new wing will be ready for use within one week after the completion of the construction.
He reported that all of the equipment and furniture is expected to arrive by the end of November and that as soon as they can start setting it up all available personnel will be used to do so as rapidly as possible.
In preparation for the increased personnel needed to operate the new wing Lander reported that the hospital is adding additional nurses and that the process of training this new help is now underway.
He also announced the promotion of Miss DeLois Silvey to the position of director of nurses. She was formerly the supervisor of the evening shift at the hospital.

City's Bonds Get High Rating

Word was received this morning by Fred Brook, city manager, from R. A. Underwood Company, of Dallas that the city's water and sewer revenue bonds have been given an A rating by the Moody Investment Service of New York City.
The Underwood firm, which is acting as fiscal agents for the city in the selling of the recent $3,147,000 bond issue which was approved by Pampa residents, made the announcement in a letter received by Brook late this morning.
The letter also reported that in the absence of any note of change it can be assumed that the general obligation tax bonds obviously have retained their A rating.
By obtaining the A rating the city can be assured a better market and should obtain a lower interest rate, Brook reported.
Bids for the purchase of the bonds are being received by the city and will be opened by the City Commission at 10 a.m. Tuesday, Oct. 2.

Whites Rebuff Integration In Rally Talk

By UNITED PRESS
Southern whites denounced racial mixing Monday night in rally speeches, in legislative debate, in a wrangle with a teacher and by a cross-burning.
Voices of the segregationists sounded from Sturgis, Ky., and Richmond, Va., to Alabama and Georgia during a lull at school integration hot spots.
A crowd of 2,000 persons rallying under the segregation banner Monday night near Sturgis heard a white Citizens Council leader urge more boycotting of the mining town's integrated high school.
The Virginia House of Delegates, locked in a controversy over the best means of preserving school segregation, rejected a move to deny localities any option to losing state support of integrated schools.
The Virginia delegates were expected to pass a bill backed by Gov. Thomas B. Stanley that would withhold funds from any school that becomes integrated, even if by court order.
Reject Amendment
The House voted 59 to 39 to reject an amendment would give committees the option of trying to preserve segregation of their schools by a pupil-assignment plan proposed as a means of sidestepping court orders.
Georgia school authorities faced a possible law suit over their right to cut off a teacher's salary because she refused to sign a statement repudiating her once-expressed willingness to teach Negroes.
At the site of another school integration fracas while-robed demonstrators burned a huge cross at the home of wealthy Mobile, Ala., white woman who is seeking to enter her Negro foster child in a white school.
Segregationists at Sturgis sought to renew boycotting of the high school, which had settled down almost to normal with eight Negro pupils enrolled, while nearby Clay became the center of friction.
The strife at Clay apparently ended Monday with a local school board ruling that four Negroes enrolled there must return to a Negro school at Providence, Ky.
Accuses Nixon And Hall
At the same time he accused Vice President Richard M. Nixon and GOP National Chairman Leonard W. Hall of taking "the same low road" they traveled in the 1954 congressional campaign in raising the Red-in-government issue. Both had pressed him for comment on Mr. Truman's Hiss remark.
"We ought to know whether President Eisenhower approves of this sort of campaigning," Stevenson said.
The White House had no comment.
But Senate Republican Leader

Adlai's Camp Hopes Hiss Case Is No Longer Issue

By TOM NELSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP) — Adlai Stevenson's camp hoped today he had removed the Alger Hiss case as an issue in the presidential campaign.
But Republicans made it plain he had not.
Stevenson publicly differed Monday with former President Truman's contention that Hiss was not a Communist spy. The Democratic presidential nominee told a news conference he "never doubted" the jury verdict that sent Hiss to prison for denying he aided a Communist spy ring.
He said he hoped that the Hiss issue would not be injected into the campaign.
"Anyone who attempts to create differences between the two parties on the fundamental issue of loyalty to the government does the American people a disservice," he said.
Sen. Styles Bridges (R-NH), in a statement released by the GOP National Committee, said that Democratic candidates "long have resented the fact that Republicans have been able to effectively clean up the mess in Washington."
Stevenson and his staff talked over the Hiss problem at length before his news conference. When the question came up at the conference he phrased his words deliberately.
He recalled that when his views on Hiss were asked in the 1952 campaign he said: "I have never doubted the verdict of the jury which convicted him."
"Nothing has happened since then to change my views," he said.

Ike Calls For 'Truth' In Campaign

By WARREN DUFFEE
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP) — President Eisenhower today urged Republican leaders to go to the people with the "truth" during the 1956 campaign and let the Democrats "do the yelling."
Mr. Eisenhower spoke at a breakfast at national airport at a kickoff for the campaign tour of Vice President Richard M. Nixon. About 250 Republican leaders were present for the ham-and-eggs breakfast which also marked the departure of five other Republican teams.
Mr. Eisenhower spoke after GOP national chairman Leonard W. Hall had introduced members of a Republican "truth squad," which will tour the country.
"I see no reason for going to the public with anything but the truth," Mr. Eisenhower said.
He said the GOP does not need to claim perfection for the administration.
"The record itself is sufficient if it is made sufficiently clear," he said. "The record is there and it is good."
Where there have been failures, Mr. Eisenhower said, they were "because of circumstances often beyond our control." For example, he said, while world peace may not yet be secure, thousands of American mothers are thankful that their sons are not fighting.

Favors Plain Talk

Speaking after Mr. Eisenhower, Nixon said GOP campaigners should "look at the record."

"We don't have to whitewash it with clever quips or fancy phrases," Nixon said. "Plain talk will do the job."

"The American people under the Eisenhower administration have had the best four years of their lives."

Nixon and his wife, Pat, were scheduled to leave immediately afterward aboard a chartered plane for a 16-day tour hitting 32 states. GOP National Chairman Leonard W. Hall called the 15,000-mile swing the "most extensive 'prop-stop' tour in American political history."

Senate GOP Leader William F. Knowland, House GOP Leader Joseph Martin Jr., Secretary of Interior Fred A. Seaton, Rep. Charles A. Halleck (Ind) and the GOP "truth squad" planned to follow Nixon's departure in rapid succession aboard other chartered planes.

Nixon, in a speech to be delivered at Indianapolis, hit hard the peace and prosperity theme in his 1956 campaign kickoff speech.

Officer Tells Of Petty Thefts

County Juvenile Officer H. A. Doggett announced today that many of the local school children have been getting into the habit of shoplifting during their lunch hour.

He said that the practice of picking up little items while the downtown stores are full of customers, has been getting too many of the children into trouble.

The practice is to pick up small items, and then sell them for from one-tenth to half the list price.

Doggett added that another bad practice by young people during their idle hours is to slap slow moving automobiles on the fender, while crossing streets, and actually getting into the way of other autos, challenging the drivers to do anything but stop.

These offenses have been leading many children into Doggett's offices and they were committed mainly during their lunch hour, he stated.

BILL BARRYMORE
... "hi fi" fixer

Wheeler Man Brings Music To Ships

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (FHTNC) — Navy Chief specialist Bill Barrymore, who recently completed a tour of active duty at the 11th Naval District Headquarters in San Diego, Calif., has developed a method of bringing "hi-fi" music to men on the little ships of the fleet.

Barrymore lives in Wheeler with his wife, the former Miss Blanche Fowler of Sweetwater, Okla., and their two children.

His new method of recording on tape has made it possible for small ships like destroyers to have top quality music. Small ships have a great deal of "rock and roll" on the high seas. This makes it practically impossible for them to use standard records due to the tendency of the needle to jump out of its track and scratch the record. Tape recordings are not affected by the ship's motion.

Barrymore has been a member of the Naval Reserve for 14 years.

through the Suez Canal.

2. British and French plans to set up an alternative round-the-Cape route by bypassing the Suez hotspot in an anti-Nasser boycott.

3. Egypt's latest note to the UN Security Council warning that the Suez crisis could blow up because of British and French "provocations."

The first meeting of the Big Three ministers lasted 45 minutes. They then met with Prime Minister Anthony Eden at 10 Downing St.

During the day the ministers also were to meet with Pakistan's new foreign minister, Ali Firouz Khan, who has been notably unenthusiastic about the canal plan.

President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt was watching the London conference with a wary eye. Informed sources in Cairo said he would demand a U.N. Security Council debate on Suez if the London meeting endorses the users association plan.

He already has asked the Security Council for "vigilance" in the case and denounced the users plan as a flagrant violation of the U.N. charter. Saturday he said Western operation of the plan would be an act of war.

Menon And Nasser Confer

Nasser conferred at length with Indian diplomat V. K. Krishna Menon and it was understood Krishna Menon would fly to London for Wednesday's conference although India was not invited officially to the meeting.

London diplomatic sources insisted the users association plan was flexible but said an alternate blueprint called for boycotting the canal in hope that loss of income and the cooling off effect of time would lead to Egyptian acceptance of international canal control.

Dulles denied leaving Washington Monday that the United States planned to finance such an economic boycott. But he did say the United States is prepared to give economic aid to Western Europe if interruption of canal traffic produces an oil shortage.

U.S. federal and state officials were holding a closed door meeting in Washington today on problems of boosting U.S. oil production substantially if the Suez Canal shuts down.

FIRST AID

Something new will be tried in this area in an effort to curb accidents, according to Carl Hills, first aid chairman of the local Red Cross chapter.

A progressive standard first aid course will be taught beginning Sept. 24 through Nov. 23 at the Junior High School from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Friday evenings.

Sheriff Rufe Jordan, Civil Defense head for Gray County, has stated that he hopes that at least one person in each block will enroll in first aid training so that they may be named first aid captain for their block.

In case of disaster, there would then be at least one person able to supervise rescue and render aid to his neighbors, Sheriff Jordan has urged Pampans to take the course for their own sake and for the help they might be able to give to others.

A nine-week standard first aid progressive course will be taught beginning Sept. 24 by authorized first aid instructors. Lesson one will be taught each night during the first week. Lesson two will be taught during the next week Monday through Friday and so on until the 18 hour course is completed. This method of training will give people in the community, who have conflicting engagements, an opportunity to complete the course without missing a lesson. In other words, only one lesson will be taught each night during any given week and if a person misses going on Monday night, he can then choose another night in the week to attend.

An accident happens about every three and a half seconds in the United States and a death from accident occurs every five minutes, according to figures released by the National Safety Council. Home accidental deaths last year numbered 27,000. Twice as many Americans have been killed by automobile accidents than by all the wars the United States has been engaged in since 1776.

Spearheading the first aid enrollment and the training are members of the first aid committee of the chapter: Carl Hills, chairman; Frank Stallings, C. Herbert Lowe, Elvis Duck, Jay Meador, Vernon Pirkle, J. D. McDonald, Eugene Dotagan, Gordon Taylor, A. L. Lewis of White Deer, Foy Barrett of Lefors, Bob Baldwin and R. G. Hutchinson from Skellytown, Mrs. Walter Norl, Marion Osborn and Tommie Jeter.

FIRST AID ENROLLMENT

I want to enroll in the nine-week progressive standard first aid course, starting Oct. 24 at 7 to 9:30 p.m. in the Junior High School-front entrance.

'Checkers' To Sit Out '56 Campaign

By PATRICIA WIGGINS

WASHINGTON (UP)—A dog named Checkers, prominent in the 1952 political campaign, is expected to sit out this year's campaign.

"There's nothing new in her life." She will be at home with the two Nixon youngsters when the vice president and Mrs. Nixon leave on their strenuous 32-state campaign trip Tuesday.

Meantime, both vice presidential candidates — Nixon and his Democratic counterpart, Sen. Estes Kefauver — are still keeping mum on the rumor that the Kefauver cocker fathered Checkers' second litter. The Kefauvers are near neighbors of the Nixons in the fashionable Spring Valley residential area here.

Checkers was catapulted into the news in 1952 by Nixon during his nationwide television defense of an $18,235 "expense fund" raised for him by California supporters.

Nixon defended the fund, gave a listing of his financial status and added, "We did get something — a gift" the day before he and Mrs. Nixon left on their 1952 campaign trip.

He explained that a Texan sent the dog to his daughters, Patricia and Julie.

"The kids love the dog," Nixon said, "and I just want to say this right now, that regardless of what they say about it, we're gonna keep it."

In fall maternity fashions, jackets cut like the top of a jumper are newsworthy. They're designed to be worn over blouses and with slim cut-out skirts.

The delicious flavor difference in Folger's is Mountain Grown Coffee!

You taste it in every steaming cup—the unusually rich, tangy flavor of nature's choicest coffee. For that's what Folger's is... a unique and individual blend of naturally more flavorful Mountain-Grown coffees!

Experts agree that these rare mountain coffees, grown in remote regions where there is an abundance of fertile volcanic soil, warm tropic rain, and year-round sunlight, have the most satisfying tang and flavor of any coffee known today.

And you will agree that the rewarding flavor and fragrance you discover in Folger's is the finest you have ever enjoyed. Distinctively rich. Unusually tangy. Unmistakably Folger's—the Mountain-Grown coffee!

So much richer in flavor that you are urged to use 1/4 less than with lesser flavored brands.

Folger's Coffee... It's Mountain-Grown!

Bullfighting In Spain Falls Into Disrepute

By PETER KNOX
United Press Staff Correspondent

MADRID (UP)—Bullfighting in this land of its birth has fallen into sad disrepute and the trouble seeds to be that modern Spanish bullfighters don't care for the occupational hazards.

Critics of the current stars of the national sport are saying as much in terms as blunt as the horns of the weakening bulls they claim are being foisted on the public.

These critics say the time has come for the real moment of truth—not the moment when the fatal sword ends the life of a brave bull but when the friends of the sport must speak out to save it.

Already, they say, the youth of Spain is more interested in football than bull fighting and it is the tourist trade that helps fill the plazas—not the aficionados who must be the backbone of the sport.

Bulls Have Rough Time

A section of the national press charges that matadors, who make as much as $2,500 for two hours work, are fighting underweight bulls, drugged bulls, sandbagged bulls and bulls with blunted and shortened horns.

They allege the stars are ducking the Madrid Plaza where standards are kept high and the bulls are always dangerous. Instead they go to the provinces and even there pretend illness if it appears they won't be facing an easy bull.

"The number of plazas where the rules (as to size and weight of the bull and condition of his horns) are observed could be counted on the fingers of one hand," the influential newspaper ARC says.

PAPER DOLL—The most beautiful "newsboy" in the world, Gloria Brocato, of Kalamazoo, Mich., sells her papers at the foot of the Eiffel Tower in Paris. Wearing jeans, a tight-fitting sweater and a small apron, Gloria earns extra money for her French vacation by selling the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune.

Once it was the ambition of every bullfighter to appear in Madrid, lamented the newspaper Hoja del Lunes.

"Today the reverse is the case. Bullfighters of standing flee from here like scared cats."

Other critics assert a powerful clique is turning the sport into a high-powered racket where quick fortunes are made with a minimum of risk.

The way to the top can still be studied with goring. The bullfighters' hospital in Madrid averages 10 to 15 cases a week, but deaths are rare for wonder drugs prevent complications.

Bigness And Freedom

America is a big country. The very size of our mountains, our plains, our rivers and our forests instilled in the early settlers a feeling of largeness.

This ability to look about oneself and catch a glimpse of far horizons enabled some of our early pioneers to think big. And with virtually no government of any consequence to stay their plans, individual Americans went about creating a new civilization, one based on freedom.

Freedom is a large idea. It is so large, in fact, that it knows few boundaries. The single admonition to the free is that they must act as individuals, be responsible for their choices and actions. Beyond this necessary corollary to liberty, there are no restraints or limitations, under freedom you can go as far as you care to go, providing only that you assume your own responsibility.

If you succeed in your plans, the rewards are yours. If you fail you must pay the price of failure. The lure of possible success is the fuel of ambition. Out of the minds of some of our earliest pioneers came the railroads, the steel-clad plow, the harvester and reaper, the cotton gin, the telephone, the electric light, mass communication and mass production. These ideas did not occur to individuals who were small in their outlook. These ideas came to men who thought big, and who, because they were not stopped, went forward to greatness and unparalleled success.

But with the passing of the years there has been a growing tendency for individual men to harness and curtail their vision. Instead of thinking big, they have thought small. Very few nowadays plan ways and means of producing new and better products for the insatiable demands of human beings. Most are content with little. The poverty of security ideas is widespread. Risk is frowned upon. It is better to be poor, paltry but safe, than to dare bigness, and perhaps lose all. So goes the political credo of our times.

However, bigness has not vanished from us entirely. There is another breed of big thinker in our midst. But the bigness of his dreams is dangerous. For today's big thinkers are in government. They plan mighty dams and bridges, super-highways and colossal school empires, but they plan them at your expense, without the benefit of freedom.

Government is now the almost exclusive container of big ideas. But despite the size inherent in government planning, in a true sense government planning is never large. In point of fact it is small, mean and cruel. Any appearance of size is overshadowed by the coercion present when "expense is no object."

Holding with legal sanction the weapon of taxation, the bureaucrats are not restrained by reality. They do not have to take personal responsibility for their own choices and actions. In the mechanism of government, the mechanism assumes the responsibility. How can such men be characterized as having a largeness and a bigness in their planning?

Let us suppose, for instance, that when Henry Ford planned conveyance within the price range of the average citizen that he had been, instead of a free enterpriser, a bureaucrat. His vehicle might have been good. But his method of bringing it to the people would have been coercive. Instead of putting it on the market for the acceptance or rejection of all, he would have requested a general tax large enough to cover the cost of manufacture and distribution of his automobile. These autos would then have been delivered "free" to everyone.

But there would have been no largeness, no growth, no freedom, had this occurred. And it is demonstrably true that such a tax burden, had it been levied at that time, would have bankrupted the economy.

There were many then, there are still many who could not and cannot afford a car. The government might have compelled them to take one. But it is certain that had such an eventuality occurred, cars would have declined in value, become less and less satisfactory with a shrinking of transportation possibilities.

Bigness in thinking, if it is truly big, must be free. If it is not free, the bigger it is the more dangerous it is. True bigness belongs to people, not to government.

THE NATION'S PRESS

ALICE-IN-TAXLAND
(Industrial News Review)
There is an Alice-in-Wonderland quality about our federal income tax laws, with their extremely high upper-bracket rates. U. S. News & World Report gives an example.
The magazine says: "A baseball player's angry gesture, during a ball game, may cost the Federal Government $4,200 in income taxes. It also may bring the athlete a personal profit of $4,200."
"Does that sound absurd? Well, here's the true story. The world's highest-salaried ballplayer ($100,000 a year) was fined $5,000 for the club for a display of temper toward the fans. This is considered a business expense, for the reason that the fine must be paid if the player is to keep on practicing his profession. Thus, his taxable income is reduced by the $5,000.
After deductions, the top tax rate on this player's income is 84 per cent. So the fine gives him a tax reduction of $4,200, leaving him only $800 out of pocket.
But that isn't all. Admirers of the player are reported to be making up a fund to pay the fine. U. S. News says: "If they give him $5,000, that amount is not taxable at all. In that case, the ballplayer would stand an $800 loss and a $5,000 gain, for a net profit of $4,200."
Very few of us have any personal experience with either $100,000 incomes or $5,000 fines. But this factual illustration indicates just how confused, inequitable, and generally unsound our tax laws are. Like Topsy, they just grew up and grew into a crazy-quilt. That's why sentiment for a complete overhaul has been snowballing.

GOOD SAMARITAN ECONOMICS
The Freeman
FROM THE STANDPOINT of economics and individuality, certain aspects of the story of "The Good Samaritan" merit further attention. It is to be noted that the Samaritan's sense of duty toward his fellow man had not been dulled by a government bureau; his individual love for humanity remained sharp. Nor do we find a Samaritan assuming the responsibility as his own privilege, and moreover, paying in advance for the man's immediate needs. Apparently, the Samaritan had not been milked dry by taxes for the care of the unfortunate, so that the joy of voluntary service remained in his possession.
We do not find the Samaritan scheming to establish a government bureau to take care of such cases. Nor did the Samaritan rob the man of his native ability to carry on for himself upon recovery. No attempt is made by the Samaritan to send the man to an organization of some kind for rehabilitation. He seems to know that with a minimum of help toward recovery, the man will be able to assert his individual resourcefulness even though he had been stripped and robbed of all that he possessed. Thus the man's ability is not stifled. He is free to make his own way. He is not softened nor is his determination siphoned away by parasitical ideas.
This is true economy — the economy of independence — commended, we are told, by the founder of Christianity.

Case Studies Of The Church And Politics
I want to quote and comment for several days from a much-needed and timely book. It is "Case Studies of the Church in Politics," or "The Powers That Be." It was written by Edmund A. Opitz. It was published by the Foundation for Social Research, 1521 Wilshire Blvd. Los Angeles 17, California.
This foundation is one of the tax-free foundations that is really rendering a much needed service. The booklet points out that "The Foundation in sponsoring studies about vital social problems, proceeds from the fundamental assumptions that the universe is created, infinite, and purposeful, and that man is a spiritual being."
I believe the price of the 90-page booklet is $1. Every person that is interested in good government and Christian religion would certainly get his money's worth by buying and reading this book. It has a foreword by Adm. Ben Moreell. In the foreword Moreell writes: "One wonders whether the dedication of the major energies of many churchmen and official church bodies to such secular activities leaves any reserve to be devoted to those spiritual functions which only the church can perform. In too many instances such actions have the effect of adding the weight of the churches to the effects of those who are trying to reform society largely by political means, thus conferring upon such measures a pseudo-moral sanction which is entirely unmerited and grossly deceiving. These sanctions are doubly deceptive, because they purport to express the thinking and views of millions of church people whereas they actually reflect their opinions of a mere handful in the ecclesiastical bureaucracies."
"In effect, the politically-motivated church is saying, 'We have time and energy not only to teach men all there is to know about God, but also to teach government how to govern.' I do not imply that the church should stand aloof from political or economic problems. But there is a vast difference between the church 'going into politics' and the church exerting its tremendous moral influence on men's thoughts and deeds and on their efforts to achieve morally sound solutions of the economic and social problems which beset mankind. If the church chooses to function as a political power bloc, it does so at the expense of its possible moral influence."
"It is deeply disturbing to many devoted laymen to see the church engage in activities which appear to support the thesis that in social relations man's law of force can be more effective than God's law of love; that there is nothing wrong with economics which politics cannot cure; and that when it appears expedient to do so, the force of coercion, which overrides man's will, can safely be substituted for the force of conversion, which gains the consent of his will."
"One often wonders whether the contemporary church has not endorsed the currently popular concept of the 'divine right of the will of the majority', even though the record shows that, in matters of morality and social relations, the majority is often at odds with the sensitive individual conscience."
"We are living in a troubled world. But our troubles have been brought down upon our heads by our own failures in the realm of morality and religion. Conscience tells men that they have committed these wrongs and they must make amends. They are yearning for the guidance and inspiration of a dynamic militant, creative church. They are surfeited with the hollow promise of materialism. They know that 'Man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things that hath'; that if they would preserve their precious heritage of faith and freedom, that they might hand it down to their children, they must be His righteous ones."
"We look to the church to nourish the roots of liberty by teaching us the great truth of religion. Therefore, the mission of the church as it is seen by many devoted laymen is to teach us 'how we can move God-ward', how we can learn more of God, of His will and His purpose. For we are convinced that with such knowledge all of our difficulties can be resolved. We want to find faith, which is the basis of all spiritual and material progress. For, without faith man yields to fear, the most destructive of human emotions, the inhibitor of worthy achievement."
"So we come to the crucial question: How is the church in America to meet this challenge?"
Opitz in gray the New Fair Deal, F. D. Roosevelt-Truman notes.
Gov. Averell Harriman insists that he's the Democratic Party's genuine New Dealer. Judging from his down with Big Business," "more abundant life" (meaning higher taxes) speeches, he is right.
However, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Sen. Herbert H. Lehman, assert that their man Adlai Stevenson is just as New Dealish as the governor.
"What makes this so amusing is the fact that President Eisenhower has grabbed practically all the feasible New Fair Deal reforms, improved on them, and made them work better than they did under Roosevelt and Truman.
It is this irony of history that the 1956 Democratic nominee for President will have to overcome, and we don't envy him the job. It took the Republicans 20 long years to elect a President with the "Me, too, but I can do it better" plea which the Democrats apparently must use now.

Makes Him Buck

...with JAMES C. WOBRETSCH
President, Spiritual Mobilization
Chief Justice John R. Dethmers of the Michigan Supreme Court reportedly declared not long ago that some recent decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court have departed so far from constitutional precepts that this country no longer "has a written constitution any more than England."
I am inclined to agree.
What we appear to have in this country today is a government of men rather than of law. If it is actually the case, then we are right back where we started from when the Revolutionary War began.
If it is not yet actually true, it is certainly near enough to it that all of us should be alerted to the danger confronting us. It was the Founding Fathers' aim to provide such ironclad safeguards against governments' overstepping its legitimate bounds that they would never be breached. But Benjamin Franklin knew that this might prove impossible to accomplish. He and his associates had done their best — but he warned that it was up to posterity to preserve what they had created, and so preserve their liberty.
That our government today practically recognizes no bounds is evident to probably most of us. Unless we quickly and effectively demand that it recognize its constitutional limitations, we shall sooner or later be as completely at the mercy of ambitious rulers as we were in the days of George III.

Fair Enough

By WESTBROOK PEGLER
How Brewster Developed Aversion To Publicity
LOS ANGELES — Frank W. Brewster is a hard-bitten, old-type union boss who long ago developed an understandable aversion to personal publicity which has usually been painful. He was born in Seattle, grew up in a modest but not bleak neighborhood and brags that he began as a horse-teamster. He also drove a jitney-bus, a make-do which took the place of street-cars in transit strikes in many cities about 1914.
He has not thought it necessary to explain the droll name of his principal racing stable. The name is Brewster's. He has now or has had in time past, partnerships in at least three other tables. He keeps four or five of his best steeds in California to carry his colors on the big tracks there. The rest race in the Pacific Northwest.
One of his numerous partners is George C. Newell, a Seattle insurance man who has written a good deal of the welfare and pension business of the Teamsters Union on the Pacific Coast where Brewster is regional czar with the title of President of the Western Conference. John J. Sweeney, secretary-treasurer of the conference, is another racing partner.
Brewster is an uninhibited drinker with a record of two marriages and two divorces. Betty, a daughter, works in the teamsters' health and welfare office in Seattle. For his second wife, whom he married in Las Vegas in 1948, he built a beautiful home in Magnolia Heights, a pretty suburb of Seattle.
He now lives in there but spends much of his time in Los Angeles where, by coincidence, the business of the union and the racing dates run concurrently.
Brewster joined the union in 1914, a few years before Beck went in as a laundry-wagon route man, they have been partners and rivals ever since, driving, tough, ambitious opportunists of the union rackets which opened rich opportunities about 1924 for men not handcuffed by fastidious ethics. Neither Beck nor Brewster sees any wrong in the enrichment of a union boss. Brewster opposed Beck in 1926 when Beck won out as "Internal organizer" but they have rocked along, mutually suspicious but mutually helpful because their interests generally are the same. Brewster recently threatened to pull the Western Conference out of the International of which Beck is now president with headquarters in Washington, D.C., because Beck's strap, James Hoffa threatened to lend $500,000 to Joe Ryan's old union of longshoremen which had been kicked out of the A.F. of L.
Beck apparently cannot control Hoffa but after some pressure, Hoffa was bluffed down and withheld the loan. Brewster now regards the West Coast as his own province, insisting that Beck ought to stay in Washington, D.C., and quit chucking his weight around his old home ground. Brewster's council holds jurisdiction over 11 Western states with enormous highway commerce hauled by truck. With the development of the great projected highway system he might become a mighty figure in national politics.
Brewster's taxes came into view in March, 1955, when the U.S.

court in Seattle ordered general teamsters' local 174 to open its books to the Internal Revenue. Brewster had been secretary treasurer of this one. Local 174 appealed and the Court of Appeals sent the case back to the District Court for further consideration. There the matter rests.
The government claimed to have found indications that Brewster repaired an expensive car and a horse-van at union expense and used $4,000 of union money to ward the price of a dwelling in Palm Springs. The government was investigating Brewster's tax returns from 1943 through 1953.
In September, 1953, a House Committee under Clare Hoffman of Michigan scrutinized health and welfare insurance written by George C. Newell, who has been Brewster's racing partner. The government estimated that Newell had made $330,000 a year on a fund of $6,325,000 covering Southern California Teamsters. Other tangled dealings were disclosed but usually nothing comes of such matters.
Brewster, at 59, is athletic, and pugacious. He works out in the Seattle Teamster's gym and sometimes rides saddle-horses on the Seattle track. Up to now his official hailiwick, but with the enlargement of his power and the rising public interest in the fabulous wealth of mighty union-bosses, he might become famous through the country.

"Woman — I wish you'd see my husband. He blows smoke through his nose and it frightens me."
Doctor — I see nothing wrong with that. I don't know that it's so terribly unusual for someone to blow smoke rings through his nose."
Woman — But my husband doesn't smoke!

Anglo-French Attitude Reflects Skepticism

WASHINGTON — The Anglo-French willingness to go to war with her Egypt and her Arabian allies over the Suez Canal and related issues reflects a growing European skepticism concerning the longrange wisdom and efficacy of American diplomacy. They have tried our brand for more than a generation, and they have found it wanting. Now they threaten to revert to the at-argu-arg tactics which built up their vanishing empires.
Although they criticize the Eisenhower - Dulles program in the Middle East for its on-again-off-again inconsistencies, especially the Aswan Dam incident, European diplomats and well-informed newspaper correspondents here regard Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt as largely responsible for many of the world's present and prospective difficulties. But they also include such distinguished Republicans as Harding, Coolidge and their Secretaries of State — Charles Evans Hughes and Frank B. Kellogg.
Besides feeling that our refusal to finance the high dam in the Nile contributed to the Suez crisis, as Colonel Gamal Abdel Nasser recently admitted, foreign statesmen point out that Eisenhower is pursuing the same general policies as Wilson, Roosevelt and Truman. He supports the United Nations, self-determination of peoples and an end to old-fashioned colonialism. They think that these ideals are based on American sentimentality rather than on international realities, as well as on our physical detachment from European politics and intrigues.
Wilson's dream was noble but visionary, according to the European thesis. When he persuaded the statesmen at Versailles to break up the Austro-Hungarian Empire, the Russian entity, the Balkan Alliance, to chip off the Shantung Peninsula from China, he created many small and improvident states. They were not self-contained or self-sufficient, economically or politically. They were artificial Graustarks.
As pre-1939 events and the 1940 blitzkrieg proved, a Europe composed of "bits and pieces" fell an easy prey to Hitler's diplomats and soldiers. He picked them up or conquered them one by one, from Norway to Czechoslovakia. The nations which Wilson had helped to create soon lost their "self-determination" status.

Another historic blunder, in the critics' opinion, was the series of disarmament conferences sponsored by Harding and Hughes, and persevered in by Coolidge and Kellogg. While the Western Powers acted in good faith, scrapping battleships and tearing up blue-prints, Japan and Italy, and subsequently Hitler and Stalin, rearmed secretly. They caught the Allies, including the United States, wholly unprepared at Dunkirk and Pearl Harbor.
F.D.R. carried the drama to its present tragic dilemma, as these overseas analysts ponder today's events. He also influenced England, France and Holland to liquidate their empires by granting independence to the component parts — India, Ceylon, Burma, Egypt, Lebanon, Jordan, Syria, Indonesia, Indo-China, Tunisia, Morocco. Truman continued the breakup of their once integrated international systems.
Most of these peoples were utterly unprepared, economically, socially, educationally, and politically, for self-government. They fell into the hands of corrupt factions or petty and weak dictators. Wretched living conditions and unfulfilled promises of freedom's blessings made them rich soil for Communist penetration and aggression, with the Middle East as a prize exhibit.
As Hitler conquered a disintegrated Europe, so Khrushchev now seeks to fill the international vacuum which F.D.R., although with the finest of intentions, helped to create. And Moscow appears to be succeeding even more effectively than did Der Fuehrer, at less cost in money and men.
Thus, in striving to extricate the world from the Middle East morass, Eisenhower also seeks to retrieve, if only partially, what Europeans regard as historic American blunders. Failure — and war — could signal the complete collapse of the world alliances which we have had to substitute and subsidize for Europe's shattered empires.

Flattery From Ava Gardner And Lt. Colonel R. Cook
MAINZ, Germany — Not since Ava Gardner named me as the man she'd most like to spend an hour with in the Grand Central waiting room during the afternoon rush, have I been so flattered as I was today.
The flatterers were Lt. Colonel Richard H. Cook and his men of the 330th Field Artillery Battalion, whose job over here is the care, feeding, and firing of the Corporal guided missile.
The Colonel and his men never once broke out laughing as they explained to me the workings of this super-complex weapon, although there were many times when the baffled look on my face, and the questions I asked, must have sorely tempted them. They played me as if I were a past president, at least of M. I. T., and the intricacies of the common umbrella.
But their patience was not entirely in vain. I did learn something, and the something was this: the dumb soldier is a thing of the past. He has no place in the United States Army in Europe. Many of the key jobs in the operation of the Corporal were held by bright-eyed youngsters who wore the inverted V of the PFC on their sleeves. Their heads are crammed with electronics like the Univac, and they went about their tasks with the confidence of Einsteins working an algebra problem.
The Corporal's handlers took me step by step through its workings, beginning with a simulated signal of aggression on the part of our enemies, and ending with the massive, barracuda-shaped missile, cradled in its launcher, and awaiting only a dainty push of a button to send it soaring toward the target.
For me to attempt to tell you of the workings of the Corporal, which is capable of soaring out 150 to 200 miles, with its atomic warhead spreading more destruction than Hiroshima suffered, would make us both laugh.
And the Corporal is no laughing matter.
The Corporal's sinister, sleek bulk is handled by a truck, called an erector, which is an amazing instrument in its own right. An erector weighs 30 tons, and can be handled by remote control. A crew member pushes buttons on a control box, and the erector gently lifts the Corporal in a horn grip and places it in its launcher. A few more button pushes and the erector truck, still under remote control, lurches away and disappears in its housing.

Final adjustments to the Corporal, when in its launcher, are made by a crew on still another fantastic piece of equipment known as a "cherry picker." From its steel scaffolding members of the crew can check the Corporal from the tip of its skyward-pointing nose to its fins.
Parked around the missile are the vehicles which service it — trucks with acid fuels, trucks with compressed air, and trucks jammed with electronic devices which compute speed, drift, direction, and everything else, that needs to be known to insure the missile's homing to its target.
The missile itself can be likened to a vicious giant who craves to destroy, and who is kept in check only by a cold, crafty, calculating electronic brain that won't allow it to go berserk until precisely the proper moment.
This man-made brain-is busy, all the time the Corporal is in flight, sending back messages to its masters on the ground. It tells them when it has reached the zenith of its upward flight and is beginning to glide toward the earth.
Then it allows itself to be guided — hence its name, Miles away, the men of the 330th train its fins so that it is down and ready to send it soaring toward the target.
For me to attempt to tell you of the workings of the Corporal, which is capable of soaring out 150 to 200 miles, with its atomic warhead spreading more destruction than Hiroshima suffered, would make us both laugh.
And the Corporal is no laughing matter.

For want of a movie to see or some other form of entertainment, this column went out to The Sportman's Center last night to watch the wrestling matches. It was a nice night, lots of people in the stands, everybody in a happy frame of mind and I was completely relaxed for the first night in many. Who ever thought that I'd wind up with basted ladies and chairs on the right and the left of me. That's the story, but let's go further.

Ricki Starr, filling in for the injured Dizzy Davis, met Tommy Phelps last night in the semi-final event. Starr, a real character, wears ballet slippers in the ring and before the match can begin, he has to do some ballet warm-up exercises. Referee Alex Perez had a difficult time getting Starr to listen to the preliminary instruction, much to the dismay of the 800 or so fans that were present. Finally when the match started, Starr, whenever he got in a jam, would turn his head and glance around the ring like a little girl who had her feelings hurt. Starr won the first fall with a cut-to-arm twist that gave Phelps considerable pain. Tommy, undaunted, came right back to win the second fall in 11 seconds as he applied a terrific back-breaker press to cause yelps of pain from Starr.

Things started to get rough in the final period of time as Starr threw Phelps out of the ring into

If Brooks Win Flag, Owe It All To 'Barber'

NEW YORK (UP)—To Sal (The Barber) Maglie it's a real case of better late than never. The gaunt, sleepy-eyed man from Niagara Falls has been one of the wonders of the baseball world this season. Considered "through" a year ago, at 39 he has come back to pace the pennant drive of the Brooklyn team which once dreaded his very appearance.

And, in doing so, this master craftsman has been the man who wins the big ones. Currently he has won six in a row, the last two over the teams who are battling Brooklyn for the flag. He went the route in flattening Milwaukee and then clinched his way to a triumph over Cincinnati.

Texans And Colts Tied At One Each In Playoffs

EL PASO (UP)—Mike Gazella pitched a three-hit, 6-0, victory Monday night to give El Paso an even split in its Southwestern League playoffs with the San Angelo Colts.

San Angelo won Sunday night's opening game of the best-of-seven series, 7-6.

The teams move on to San Angelo Tuesday night for three games. If necessary, will return to El Paso again.

El Paso tied the game in the second inning on leftfielder Bill Sinton's two-run homer.

The Texans added two more runs in that inning and single

Mat Matches All Good

Wrestling hit a high note for holering and excitement last night at The Sportman's Club before about 800 fans, as a semi-final match that ended in a near riot overshadowed a fine three-man tag match that was the final event of the evening.

In the opening match, Hans Schnable, the big burgermeister from Milwaukee, pinned Canada's Jim Sikany with a crotch hold and body slam after 7:53 had elapsed.

The second event of the evening turned into one of the wildest ever seen at Sportman's. Ricki Starr, the high-kicking ballet star, who also does a better-than-fair job of wrestling, opposed Tommy Phelps, a very popular matier around the Top of Texas area.

At Maryland, we have no starters and substitutes. We consider our first two clubs the first team and substitute with complete units every seven minutes.

"If any of our boys feel like relaxing, we had our greatest freshman team in 1955, and it looks like some of them are going to come along as sophomores, like Sandusky did, and push the seniors into splinters."

Lou Little To Retire This Year

NEW YORK (UP)—Lou Little, the gravel-voiced Columbia University football coach, announced today he will retire at the end of the 1956 season.

Little will retire at the end of his 27th straight season as Columbia coach because of a mandatory school policy which calls for retirement at the end of an academic year in which a member reaches his 65th birthday. Little will be 65 Dec. 6.

Mont: 'Recruited 'Em All Myself'

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
NEA Staff Correspondent
COLLEGE PARK, Md. —(NEA)—"Why," Tommy Mont re-phrased the question, "should I have any trouble handling Maryland?"

"After all, I personally recruited two-thirds of the boys, with line coach Bob Ward, and know them better than Jim Tatum ever did."

Mont, only 10 years removed from being a Terrapin quarterback, steps into the nation's toughest head coaching job. Where else can you inherit squads of 25 lettermen, whose lackies who weigh under 230 look as out of place as padded shoulders in the Ivy League?

"An assistant coach," continues Tatum's former aide - de - camp, "gets to practically live with the boys. I know as a head coach I've got to stay more aloof."

"It's like the Army. An officer can't afford to mingle with the men."

"If we've got any problems, they are senioritis and whether my quarterback (Frank Tamburello) can stay out of the Army."

Tamburello, a papa and a good student, was suddenly tapped for a service call. His status remains doubtful.

Maryland had its turn against Oklahoma in the 6-annual Orange Bowl attraction last January, and it's popularly supposed that the Terps will be forced to skip the next one.

"Who says so?" mildly inquires Mont. "There's no conference ruling, like the Big Seven has, saying we can't go two years in a row. Of course, if it's going to be against someone like a Nebraska with a 5-6 record, I don't know that I'd want to go. We want only the best, even if it has to be in some other bowl."

To play against the best, Mont can muster talent like Mike Sandusky, a typical Terp tackle at a robust 240 and solidly fitted into the pre-season All-American lineup.

"I feel," says Tommy, "my three top tackles—Sandusky, Al Wharton and Ed Heuring—are the strongest in the country."

Army, Pitt And Yale Are Good As Any, So Why Throw Out East 'As Factor?'

By EDDIE EREDELATZ
Head Coach, Navy
ANNAPOLIS —(NEA)— You hear lots of talk about the East being bypassed as a powerful factor in national football.

Don't you believe it. Any skeptics who doubt we've got the horses in this area are welcome to visit my projection room. I've got some Army-Navy pictures of 1955 which show a formidable West Point line operating on my Middles.

That Army line returns six of its seven starters. I understand that Red Blisk, who gambled by switching end Don Hollender to quarterback last year, is trying another big one — making Bob Kysaky over from a halfback to a quarterback.

Pittsburgh landed in the Sugar Bowl last January and has the makings of another powerhouse. Corney Salvaterra is an accomplished quarterback operating behind a stout line.

Navy lost quarterback George Welsh and end Ron Beagle, two great ones who don't come along very often, and we're placing a lot of emphasis on new boys.

Syracuse, with one of its better squads, takes on one of the toughest early season schedules in the nation. And counters with one of the toughest backfield stars in the country, 212-pound Jim Brown. Penn State is rated down from '55 on paper, because you don't lose boys like Lenny Moore without suffering a drop in class, yet the Nittany Lions won't be any push-over with a tested quarterback like Milt Plum.

In New England, they're steamed up about the merits of rival quarterbacks — Bill Smithers of Holy Cross and Billy Donlan of Boston College. The Crusaders muster a veteran team around Smithers. The Eagles have had to rebuild their line.

Colgate is a team to watch because Hal Lahar has shown an inclination for winning seasons. I've heard no one laughing off the potential of a Yale squad the writers have been picking to go all the way in the Ivy group. There's an end, Paul Lopata, and a guard, Mike Owsickick, who fit into any company. Backs Dennis McGill and Al Ward are thrill suppliers.

Finceton is Princeton, which means tough. Charley Caldwell's teams have a way of coming on. Linemen like Mike Bowman are the reason. Cornell has finally come up with a good line to put in front of fast backs like Ivy Robertson and Art Boland.

Everyone's dark horse seems to be Dartmouth, with a great pass grabber in Monte Pascoe, and only a shadow of a doubt at quarterback the two-year drouth and the time the Quakers meet Navy in mid-season they should have worked up to a pitch of confidence.

Harvard has so many talented backs, Lloyd Jordan is talented with ways to utilize concurrently the talents of Matt Boford, Jim Joslin and Walt Stahurs. He'd like that kind of depth in the line.

Furillo Bats Brook To 1 Game Lead: Braves Split

By JOHN GRIFFIN
United Press Sports Writer
"Thanks to a couple of gritty 'old pros' named Carl Furillo and Warren Spahn, the National League pennant race was narrowed down to a two-team dog-fight today to see who gets into the World Series against the New York Yankees — who may clinch the American League flag tonight.

The Cincinnati Reds now are virtually out of the NL battle as a result of their 5-4 loss to the Brooklyn Dodgers Monday night on Furillo's dramatic, 10th-inning home run.

That leaves it up to the Dodgers and the Milwaukee Braves, and the Dodgers now lead by one full game — two games in the all-important "lost" column. The Braves lost ground by dropping the opener of a two-night bill to the Giants, 7-2, before Spahn averted complete disaster by gaining a 4-1 victory.

Here's why the Redlegs' plight seems hopeless: They're now four games behind the Dodgers and three behind the Braves with only 11 to play. They have to hope for a complete collapse by not one, but both, rivals to get back into contention.

Kays Labbe in 9th
But the Redlegs went down with all guns blazing. Trailing 4-1, they kayped pitcher Clem Labbe with two out in the ninth on a two-run homer by Ed Jaffe and then Ray Jablonski tagged reliever Don Bessent for a solo homer to tie the score. And it seemed they would win the game and drive within two games of the top when their first two batters were safe

But Carl Erskine relieved Bessent and nailed three straight batters, winding up with Furillo, first man up in the Dodger 10th, tagged reliever Brooks Lawrence for his 20th homer to end the game. Earlier, he had doubled home two runs and teammate Duke Snider had hit his 39th homer to regain the undisputed league homer lead.

The Braves, who lost a half-game in the standings on the day game, felt victim to old teammate Johnny Antonelli in their opener.

Once upon a time, in 1948, the Braves handed Antonelli a $65,000 bonus to sign, but they traded him to the Giants in 1952. Lefty John stopped them Monday night with six hits, including homers by Bobby Thomson and Johnny Logan, to notch his 17th win.

John Belts Homer
It was the only game won by the Giants in 11 meetings with the Braves at the Polo Grounds this year, and Antonelli couldn't have done it at a meaner time. To rub it in, he hit a two-run homer.

That left it up to Spahn to hold the fort — a loss would have left the Braves three games behind Brooklyn in the lost column. The 35-year old lefty struggled through a nine-hit performance to gain his 18th win of this season and 201st of his career.

The Dodgers stay home tonight for the opener of a two-game series against St. Louis while the Braves go to Pittsburgh.

Swink: Wants To Play Against Top Big Ten Teams

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor
FORT WORTH, Tex. —(NEA)— A new tier seating 9,000 is being rushed to completion on the west and shady side of TCU Stadium, swelling the capacity to 46,000.

"The tier that Jim Swink built," remarked someone to L. R. Meyer. "Swink so," replied Dutch Meyer, who is now the athletic director after having coached Texas Christian for 19 years.

"Swink is the greatest running back I've ever seen, better on the ground than even Doak Walker," added Meyer, who has been associated with the Horned Frogs' athletic program since 1918.

Texas Christian was leading Baylor by no more than 14-6 early last November when the Froggies had the ball on their own one-yard line with third down and 28 to go. Abe Martin sent in Ray Taylor to punt.

Furillo: From Bum To Hero In Day

BROOKLYN (UP)—A bum one day, a hero the next, but for today anyway Carl Furillo was top man in Brooklyn's pennant rush.

"How are you gonna figure this game of baseball?" grinned the jubilant Furillo moments after his 10th inning homer gave the Dodgers a 5-4 victory over the Redlegs Monday night and lengthened their National League lead to a full game over the Milwaukee Braves.

"I couldn't even get the ball out of the infield in our first game with Cincinnati and tonight 100% at me," he said.

Loretta Young's Mother Is An Interior Decorator

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UP)—The usual movie star's mother is content to retire and bask in her child's glory, but one parent of movie-dom is a local celebrity in her own right.

In the realm of interior decorators, Mrs. Gladys Belzer is as much a success as daughter Loretta Young is in show business. In Hollywood, land of facts and trademarks, it is considered chic to be able to say you take Miltons, buy your clothes from Don Loper or have "my home done by Mrs. Belzer."

In fact, some mansions are advertised in the motion picture trade papers as simply "for sale—home decorated by Mrs. Belzer"—no first name even necessary.

The Los Angeles area is decorator-crazy, with more decorators per capita than in any other city, apparently because show folk and other owners of new wealth need guidance. You can't even get into most of the numerous furnishing stores unless a decorator is with you. In that realm of antiques and lamp shades, Mrs. Belzer reigns supreme.

She has decorated homes and apartments for such personalities as Ray Milland, Bob Hope, Frank Sinatra, Audrey Hepburn, Leslie Caron and Joan Caulfield. She has owned as much as 12 rentable homes, one apartment building and several apartments.

"So many women my age say, oh, I'd give anything to work as you do," smiled Mrs. Belzer, who strongly resembles daughter Loretta.

"But I didn't have anything to do—I made this job for myself. You have to make your own way—nobody will come to you and offer you something."

"I've been a decorator since 1922. My daughters think I work too much but once you're in the habit of working, you get to running down the hill and you can't stop. I love my work."

Mrs. Belzer began decorating as a hobby when her daughters entered motion pictures. After they married, she took it up as a full-time job. The homes of daughters Loretta (Mrs. Tom Lewis), Sally Blaine (Mrs. Norman Foster), Pollyanna (Mrs. Carter Herman) and Georgianna (Mrs. Ricardo Montalban) were decorated by mama and are show places in the movie colony.

Made Official
"The Star Spangled Banner" officially was made the national anthem of the United States by Congress in 1931, although already adopted as such by the Army and Navy.

A Cool Deal

POMONA, Calif. (UP)—Antique dealer Streeter Blair believes, in proper aging. After winning first prize at the Los Angeles County Fair with his loaf of whole wheat bread, Blair admitted to the red-faced judges he had baked the loaf sometime ago and kept it in the deep freeze for the contest.

Neurotic Clocks

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (UP)—Police frankly admit they are baffled by the case of the neurotic clock. Every time a self-adjusting accuracy mechanism springs into action on the electric clock in headquarters, the clock runs as briskly as ever—backward.

IVY LEAGUE TOUCH—Nature has gone out of its way to beautify an otherwise unattractive utility pole in Homewood, Pa. The pole, above, is completely encased in English ivy. Residents do not know whether somebody planted the vine or not, but wholeheartedly agree it's a big improvement over the drab brown wood.

Jacoby

On Bridge

BY OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service.
How many defensive tricks should you expect from a partner who has opened with a shutout bid of three in a suit? None at all, assuming that your partner uses modern bidding methods.
The opening bid of three in a suit shows a long but far from solid suit in an otherwise worthless hand. East's hand, shown today, is stronger than average for an opening bid of three. He contributed nothing to the defense, but he had promised nothing. (A merable, particularly when the stronger hand is needed when vul opponents are nonvulnerable.)
West opened the ace of spades and shifted to the queen of hearts

at the second trick. South took the king of hearts, ruffed a spade in dummy, got back to his hand with the ace of hearts, and began on the clubs.
The proper management of the clubs was simple, since East's announced length in spades warned declarer to expect shortness in the other suits. South began with the king of clubs and followed with the ten to dummy's queen. East's spade discard made the situation clear. South got back to his hand with the king of diamonds to lead another club through West's jack.
West ruffed the fifth club, but by that time South had already discarded his two losing diamonds. West could get only one spade and two trump tricks.
