World War II Rift Revealed In Book

LONDON (UP)—The U. S. landing in southern France during World War II touched off a deep but short-lived difference of opinion between Prime Minister Winston Churchill and U. S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt, it was revealed for the first time today. Churchill confided in 1944 that he was left "ill-treated and furious" at Mr. Roosevelt's insistence that a new front be opened in southern France at the expense of Allied strength in Italy.

Inquest Probes Into Death Of District Judge

ST. LOUIS (UP)—An inquest opened today into the death of U. S. District Judge Ruben M. Hulien who presided at the recent trial of two Truman administration officials.

Earthquake Hits Greece

ATHENS, Greece (UP)—A sharp earthquake spread death and destruction across two Greek islands in the Aegean Sea today. It touched off tidal waves and stirred a long-dormant volcano into fiery eruption.

How Time Does Fly!

MIAMI, Fla. —UP— Schoolteacher William F. Cooke had a ready excuse for keeping for 10 days an expensive sports car an automobile salesman let him take around the block for a trial drive.

Showdown Awaited In Strike Deadlock

PITTSBURGH (UP)—Negotiations for 650,000 striking United Steelworkers and the closed-down basic steel industry appeared adamant in their bargaining positions today, apparently waiting for the walkout's pent-up economic pressures to force a more favorable showdown.

Hulien, 62, was mortally wounded while in the back yard of his home here Saturday. He died several hours later on a hospital operating table.

There into activity, intensifying the plight of the stricken survivors. The quake sent a tidal wave rolling to within a few miles of Piraeus, Athens' port city. The volcano on Thera blackened the sky and hampered helicopter pilots seeking a close view of the destruction. Communications were cut by the shock.

But the federal government was expected momentarily to make the next move to break the costly contract deadlock which for nine days has cut off 87 per cent of the country's steel production and threatens to disrupt the nation's entire economy.

A coroner's jury was asked to decide whether the gunshot wound, inflicted by a .32 caliber revolver in the right temple, was an accident or intentional. A .32 caliber revolver was found near the body.

The pilots reported hardly a house on the island escaped damage. Three villages were virtually wiped out, they reported. The shock jolted the island at 3:15 a. m. (9:15 p. m. Sunday est) Lesser tremors followed.

Capitol Hill Roundup

WASHINGTON (UP)—Congress today entered what may be the final two weeks of its current session. But it still faced action on a number of controversial bills. Scheduled for debate in the House was the compromise bill to authorize $4,014,000,000 in foreign aid spending. The related bill to put up $3.4 billion for the program — a measure certain to provoke a sharp floor fight — also was called up for action.

Police in suburban Clayton said there was no evidence of foul play. Hulien presided at the trial of Matthew J. Connelly, appointments secretary to former President Truman and T. Lamar Cadie, former chief of the Justice Department's tax division. Both men were convicted of conspiring to defraud the government in a tax case.

Casualties on Kalymnos were not reported immediately. Greek officials termed the earthquake a major catastrophe. It was the strongest to hit Greece since 1953 when more than 400 persons died on the Ionian islands.

Other legislative news: Schools: Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn) and Herbert Lehman (D-N.Y.) called on the Senate to revive the $1.6 billion school construction bill defeated in the House. Lehman said he and other members of the Senate Labor Committee are "studying the situation" and will try to bring up a school bill if they see any chance of Senate approval.

Some small steel-dependent manufacturers, unable to build up a large pre-strike inventory, were beginning to feel a shortage. Black and grey market operators peddled steel at up to 14 cents a pound, double its legitimate warehouse price.

Jane Talk

ROMANCE, WARMTH, HUMOR AND ELEGANCE — these are the pathways to fashion in new drapery fabrics. In prints, the romance of history continues to unfold on cloth. From Etruscan cave drawings, from great classical periods of Europe, from the bazaars and marketplaces of India, from Spain, Japan and a multitude of other sources comes constant refreshment from perusal of the past. Softened sophistication, via warmth and humor, govern contemporary and geometric designs, say the fashion analysts of Retailing Daily. Scaling is either small and symmetrical or sweepingly theatrical. Sheers and casements set a new high in delicacy and elegance.

DRAPERY prints can be entertaining as well as decorative. Motifs and ornaments are steeped in tradition; subject matter springs from every age and every land. No matter how sophisticated the design technique, most prints have a fabulous story to tell. The patterns of the past are constantly repeating themselves and their history is worth the telling. Smooth upholstery fabrics are back in fashion, but they're back with something extra that wasn't there before. Trim, tight Scandinavian sparseness is still the foundation of this fabric fashion, but its newness depends upon the blend of the plain with the fancier elements of design supplied by Far Eastern and other traditional influences. In other words, pure functionalism has given away to functionalism plus warmth or whimsy or vibrant color or elegant sophistication.

For all practical purposes, nubby and shaggy textures take a back seat to the crisp efficiency of the linen-like or worsted surface that doesn't snag easily, and complements, rather than dominates the furniture it covers. Clarity through cloth; warmth and personality through color and pattern — these are the ingredients for upholstery fabrics that are neither stark nor fussy.

Geometrics can be glamorous. For those who like their upholstery pattern served in neat packages of squares, rectangles or circles but want to avoid the accompanying antiseptic look, color can make the difference. Color, rich and vibrant or soft and muted, is just what the doctor ordered for taking the sharp edge off these orderly, symmetrical arrangements. With just the right strokes of color — a glint of gold in the warp, a mixture of multi-colored filling yarns, a dash of bright pigment on a print — a simple checkerboard can become as lavish as brocade silk, as decorative as a baroque tapestry.

Conversely, simple precise motifs and patterns call attention to their eye appeal of cloth and color. The soft or rugged surface of a cloth, the intricacies of a weave, the brilliant blend of a range of related colors, all are more likely to be seen and appreciated with a precise and unobtrusive design. Informality with graceful manners is the keynote of new fine china patterns that move easily from formal to informal settings, from city to suburban ways. Outstanding abstracts and nubby-pamby florals take a back seat to fragile, delicately executed motifs which show fluidity of line and originality in coloration and choice of subject matter, note Retailing Daily's fashion editors.

A more palatable palette for this season joins the ranks of currently fashionable colors in its enthusiastic endorsement of blues and turquoise. Bright, sunny yellows rate next best on the color wheel, followed by the pleasant neutrality of shades like sandalwood, beige, gray and brown. Stenware designs underscore the trend to informal elegance with bright touches of gold; slightly higher, slender stems; and fuller, rounder bowls.

PLEASANT textures garnish many of the new earthenware designs, note the fashion editors of Retailing Daily. Making the strongest impression are intaglio decorations, hand-incised underglaze patterns in stoneware, and lacy Florentine designs carved into stone china bodies. There are regional specialties, a Provincial roster and an Early American multicolor print in rich earth tones that complement the polished woods and brass of country rooms. And there are Far East oriented patterns — Ming trees, a fan, bamboo leaves and chopsticks — that lend an epicurean touch to modern dining.

What builds up interest in these sheers are the fresh designs. A fishnet weave, for example, may be speckled with gold, non-furnishing yarn. Butterflies flutter in profusion across the openwork background or an other design. Roses, daisies worked in stripes or showers of tiny stars add their charm of other styles.

Still another item boasts an army of little teddy bears en route to a picnic, scattered over a sheer airy background. More sophisticated are bird and cage designs, checkerboard patterns and

Why is it that so many housewives have the ostrich-like attitude that if they aren't expecting to see anyone special, nobody is going to see them?

Here's the comment one husband made about a woman in his neighborhood: "I've never seen her when she wasn't in some sort of a floppy looking housecoat or blue jeans."

That's because the only time the neighbors see that housewife is when she isn't expecting to be seen.

They see her when she is out in the yard hanging out clothes, when she is sitting in the yard watching her two-year-old play, when she goes out to get the mail, when she makes a hurried trip to the neighborhood shopping center, wearing blue jeans and with her hair done up in pin curls.

Yet when she goes to a party this same housewife is a really good-looking woman.

New, Light Summer Curtain Fabrics Filter Sun Rays, Let Breezes Enter

By KAY SHERWOOD
NEA Staff Writer

Light and lacy, new curtains seem made to order as summer companions for windows which overlook the sunlit scene. Delicate pastel weaves, many glistening with metallic yarns, filter and diffuse the shafts of sunlight but offer no resistance to soft breezes.

An extensive selection of textured weaves, stripes, geometrics and finely drawn patterns will capture the shopper's eye. Almost every type of window has been considered, from the modern living room picture window to the child's bedroom window. Curtains include panels, pinch-pleated, tiered and cafe styles.

Some time ago I received an unsolicited package in the mail and when I opened it there was a slip in it saying that if I decided to keep the contents I was to send them $3.95.

I didn't want the stuff but on the other hand I didn't want to bother wrapping it up and paying for stamps to mail it back so I just kept it around the house.

Then one day I got a bill from the company which I ignored and a little later I received a letter threatening to sue me for payment.

So far I have simply refused to send the money but I hate to get involved in a suit. What is your opinion concerning this situation?

Dear Mrs. G.
Since the company sent the package to you on its own initiative and you never asked for it in any way, then, I don't believe that it can force you to pay for the contents.

If you ordered the article in any way, then you should be held responsible for payment but since you did nothing, then, I am sure, you need do nothing now.

The company took the chance that it would be paid for the articles it mailed out. I suspect that it asks a big enough price to make up for the people who fail to pay. And, of course, there are always some who pay when threatened rather than get involved in a disagreement. I am sure that the company cannot legally force you to pay anything.

Dear Katherine

Old Table Provides New Sewing Area

Do you sew less than you would like because of an inadequate table on which to work your portable sewing machine?

Start doing away with such frustration by searching a thrift shop or an attic for a sturdy, large table to be converted into a functional sewing table. Then tell your husband your plans, perhaps offering to help him with the work.

For a snag-proof surface that is easily kept clean, top the table with a sheet of Marlite, a plastic finished hardboard used for wall and ceiling paneling. This paneling, available at lumber yards, comes predecorated in plain colors wood grains and marble patterns.

Applying a panel to a table with adhesive is far easier than getting a hard, smooth surface by refinishing, and the results are superior. The skirt of the table may be covered the same way.

Legs of the table may be painted to match or harmonize with the Marlite top and sides. If the legs are outmoded, they can be replaced with ready-made modern ones.

The usefulness and convenience of your sewing table will be multiplied if you have it mounted on casters. Then you can easily move it wherever you need or want it. You can save many steps while making slip covers or drapes, for example, with the machine near where the pieces are to be fitted.

Tucson Banks Grow Familiar And Folksy

TUCSON, Ariz. — Tucson is a prosperous community of 200,000 souls, more or less, many of whom are hopelessly in debt for homes which simply were not in the cards for them, and for all sorts of "household appliances" of this electrical era. The poorer the borrower the more he pays for the brief use of a little money. A business man or an educated employee, whether white-collar or horny-handed, borrows from a bank. Banks have grown familiar, friendly and folksy. Vice-presidents get around and meet the public in competition for business which will reap them the legitimate, genteel six per cent, plus split-per cent "accommodation," or "service" charges. But the laborer does not frequent the County Club, Kiwanis Rotary or he hangs around with the innumerable blandishments of merchants who advertise, typically, "One stop personal loans, furniture, salary, auto, signature."

FOR REFLECTION

...with JAMES C. MORRISTON President, National Rehabilitation WHAT IS FREEDOM REALLY LIKE As the Fourth of July approaches, you hear a lot about freedom. Let's try to take a close enough look at freedom to see what it's really like. Have you ever thought that being free means you have the right and the power to move toward a chosen destination? A railroad train is free as long as it has the power of locomotion, is on the track, and has the green signal. Maybe you know folks who think that, to be free, a train must jump the track and pay no attention to the signals. But is a train free under such circumstances? To take another instance, is a dog free in a busy street with cars coming at him from all directions? The idea that freedom means lack of all restraint — even lack of a standard by which to measure freedom — seems wrong. True, liberty does not guarantee against mishap in an uncertain world. But wouldn't you say that liberty is a safeguard to life — rather than a prelude to death and destruction? We speak of "freedom under law." An excellent term, for can there be freedom except "under law?" But isn't the law under which freedom thrives largely negative — detaching us from action which endange ourselves or others — leaving us free to traverse at will all other areas of activity. These limits on actions are based on what we call the law of God. God's law allows us to do anything at all that is right, but nothing that is wrong. But didn't God, creating man in His own image, give him free will? Then doesn't man have the ability to do right or wrong? The ability, yes, but is he free — under God's laws — to do wrong? Webster defines wrong as "action or conduct which inflicts harm." You may have observed that you have to pay the piper whenever you do something wrong — whenever you hurt yourself or others, however good your motive. Now, is any act which exacts a penalty a free act? Most of the grants are for study, but one wonders who will read the studies after they are made and printed. The law should be changed that establishes favoritism: The curse of any government is favoritism. The purpose of any good government is to have all people equal before the law as they are, before God.

Ike sent his mission, Milton S., on a good — will mission some time ago, but, although the name may be the same, there is no substitute for the President of the United States. Ike cannot and will not, of course, lecture them on their waywardness, politically. He begins to realize that we must learn to live with dictators, in Europe and on the Western Hemisphere. But he will voice once again his favorite politico-economic theme — a "partnership" in which both private and public resources of the United States, in a conservative and businesslike way, will be at the service of our sister states for the common welfare. Finally, Ike wants to establish personal relationships with the ruling statesmen of the 20 Republics, and to honor millions of Latin-Americans, in view of their deep but disturbing admiration for military heroes. In manner and appearance, he may convince them that a conqueror need not become a "man on horseback," which would be a timely lesson.

THE NATION'S PRESS

Several presidents, notably in Peru and Bolivia, were recently elected by seemingly democratic processes. But it is still a question whether they will institute a policy of fair play, or the popular voice thwarted by a summer or autumn uprising. Yet there are reasons for optimism. There appear to be no Communist movement or inspiration behind these disturbances. They seem to be of native derivation. There they are not provoked by ambitious politicians in league with the more prosperous proprietors of land and industry, they result from social turmoil and economic difficulties. During World War II, Allied demands for oil, nitrates, copper, food and fibers enriched these countries. Some, especially Venezuela, suffer from inflation hangovers. In most, however, smaller markets and lower prices abroad for their products have led to strikes and discontent as ingredients of revolutionary movements.
