Candidate J. J. Holmes Is For Integration In Schools

J. J. Holmes, one of the six gubernatorial candidates, has come out for integration of Negroes and whites in Texas' public schools. The Austin businessman, one of 14 candidates for state and national office who spoke at a political rally on the Corpus Christi beachfront Tuesday night, said: "I resent any laws on our books preventing any man from exercising a free choice in the pursuit of his welfare. As governor of the state of Texas I propose to help make it possible for all of our citizens to enjoy the basic freedoms as citizens of our state. What is it that the Negro really wants. He wants to be considered a full-fledged citizen with all the appropriate rights and obligations. He knows better than you and I that segregation is not practiced for him, but against him. Calls Schools Unequal "He knows by now that his schools have not been equal to our other schools. "But aside from that physical fact, he now realizes that segregation, no matter how splendid the facilities provided for him, means that he is being considered a second class citizen, separate and apart from the rest of the population. "Three gubernatorial candidates besides Holmes — Reuben Senterfitt, J. Everett Haley and Ralph Yarborough — gave talks before a crowd estimated at from 1,500 to 2,000. In addition, the open air audience heard speeches from candidates for other state offices plus talks from Congressmen John J. Bell of Cuero and John Young of Corpus Christi, who are standing for reelection. The only gubernatorial candidates who were not there were Sen. Price Daniel and former Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel. Daniel campaigned in Houston and San Antonio Tuesday and O'Daniel made a speech in Garland Tuesday night. Anti-TE Plan Proposed Daniel proposed a "coordinated state plan" to stamp out tuberculosis in Texas. He said that as governor he would "support and encourage every workable plan to stamp out the disease." The junior senator gained the endorsement Tuesday of former Gov. Miriam "Ma" Ferguson in his campaign. She said she had known Daniel for many years and called him one of Texas' "most able, and most dedicated, public officials." Yarborough, the first gubernatorial candidate to speak at Corpus Christi, drew the most enthusiastic response from the crowd.

He said there has been a "strong crystallization of sentiment" for him recently and he predicted he may win the race without a runoff. Change in Three Weeks He said this crystallization had built up in the last three weeks. He charged that none of the other five candidates for governor have helped him in a fight against "corrupt government." Senterfitt said he would not make promises that couldn't be fulfilled. The former House speaker from San Saba said it was unnecessary to brag about his honesty, that his record was proof of his honesty. Senterfitt said his name has never been scratched and no vote has ever been cast against him in the ballot box where he was reared. Haley again attacked the U.S. Supreme Court school segregation decision. He said that as governor he would stand up for states' rights in every way. It was Holmes, who spoke near midnight when much of the crowd had drifted away, who dropped the political bombshell. He is the first gubernatorial candidate openly to favor school integration. He has also endorsed legalized pari-mutuel betting on horse races in Texas.

Polio Outbreak In Chicago Is Mounting

CHICAGO (UP)—Medical authorities today battled the city's mounting polio outbreak with an additional 14,126 hypodermic syringes and needles. The extra equipment was rushed to the Chicago Board of Health by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and the Illinois Department of Health to bolster a dwindling supply at free inoculation centers. Dr. Herman N. Budness, president of the Board of Health, reported 25 new polio cases in a 24-hour period to raise the year's total to 194. Four persons have died from the disease this year compared with two deaths last year when 25 cases occurred during the same period. Budness said more than 2,800 expectant mothers and children ranging in age up to 18 years old have streamed into the inoculation centers since they were opened. They received free Salk polio vaccine because they were unable to appear at doctors. Most of the new cases continued to appear in the city's West Side where the early polio upsurge has been concentrated. The Chicago area has been hit with the highest polio rate in the nation according to Dr. Brian T. Shorney, regional medical director for the Polio Foundation. The foundation reported Eleanor E. McGuire, director of nursing services, was on her way from New York to discuss the possible need of more nurses to care for paralyzed polio victims. The foundation provides free care for polio patients in need of it. Budness said nurses also were urgently needed to help administer inoculations. "We've simply got to have more nurses to aid in the free vaccination program," he said.

Gray County To Start Bridge Work

Construction work on county bridges, which were washed out by early summer floods, will begin in about 60 to 90 days, county officials announced today. The Commissioners Court of Gray County, at their meeting Tuesday, authorized Wayland Merriam to begin work immediately on the drawing of the plans for the bridges. The commissioners set the date of sale of the $650,000 in bonds for August 27. The bonds will be sold at a public sale and sealed bids will be opened by the commissioners on that date. Plans call for construction work to begin first on the bridges over which school buses will travel and after their completion, the work on the other bridges will begin.

Lawyer In Defense Bid

By H. D. QUIGG

PARRIS ISLAND, S. C. (UP)—A court martial was held today that Marine Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon led his recruit platoon into a tidal stream where six were drowned "not for sadistic pleasure but for the dedicated purpose of making marines." When McKeon saw panic sweep over the outfit when one man slipped in the water, he risked his own life repeatedly in an effort to save every one, McKeon's attorney said. "The first man in was the last man out," the lawyer said. The issue of how stiff Leather-neck training should be thus made the chief defense for the 31-year-old drill instructor who was on trial for manslaughter and cruelty in one of the most celebrated military trials in recent history. As this third day of the court martial got under way, ex-Marines were rallying to McKeon's support in leading his platoon into a tidal creek in the dark of night. In his opening statement, defense lawyer Emile Zola Berman of New York described the "march or death" platoon as "laggard" and said their drill instructor was only trying to whip them into shape. Sars at Table McKeon stared at the top of the counsel table during the 45 minutes of Berman's statement. The sergeant has pleaded innocent to the charges of manslaughter and cruelty but has remained "mute" on additional charges that he was drinking vodka on duty the day of the tragedy on April 8. McKeon is on trial before a court martial composed of seven officers who have fought in the ranks of U.S. Marines on wartime battlefields. He is charged with manslaughter, cruelty, disobeying regulations and bringing discredit to the armed services by drinking, on the day of the march, in the presence of a recruit. Following opening statements, the prosecution planned to begin presenting its case against the 31-year old drill instructor. Among those expected to be called today was Sgt. Richard J. King, of Eugene, Ore., who was drinking vodka with McKeon in the enlisted men's barracks last April 8. King was convicted by summary court martial of disobeying a base regulation. He was reduced in rank one stripe, to corporal, and docked $45 in pay for one month, but the fine later was remitted. Swapped With Calls But the main defense effort today took place outside the courtroom, by long distance telephone. The switchboard of this Marine recruit training depot was flooded Tuesday night and early today by calls from former Marines rallying to the side of the defense. Western Union lines also were jammed. Berman had been granted permission to get the names and addresses of more than 1,000 men who have been discharged from this base since last Jan. 1.

Airlines Are Cracking Down On Drinking

NEW YORK (UP)—America's airlines are cracking down hard on passenger drinking during flights and the practice is being sharply curtailed. Now it's two drinks before dinner and that's all, with no drink to contain more than 1.6 ounces of alcoholic beverage. The crackdown on passenger liquor consumption is a voluntary measure on the part of the airlines to settle the drinking issue. A bill to prohibit drinking in flight is being studied in Congress and the airlines' new policy is an effort to police themselves before policing is done for them. The new policy, set forth by the Air Transport Association, embraces six major points. They are: 1. Liquor is defined as any form of distilled spirits not including wine or beer. 2. No airline will promote the availability of liquor on its flights. 3. No drink will contain more than 1.6 ounces of alcoholic beverage. 4. No more than two drinks will be served to a passenger. 5. Each airline involved will refuse to sell drinks to passengers believed to be intoxicated. 6. Airlines will continue the policy of not encouraging consumption of alcoholic beverages.

ORLANDO, Fla. (UP)—Mike Sibole, at 4 the victim of eye cancer, entered a world of lifelong darkness today with the memories of a world of beauty in his heart. The slip of a boy with the courage of a man was swathed in a hospital jacket and wheeled into the operating room of Pleasant Holiday Home hospital at 9 a.m. ed. There a doctor took out Mike's only eye to save the boy's life from spreading cancer of the retina. It was believed that Mike had been told the bad news shortly before he was brought to the hospital. Mike's last look at the world outside was indelibly imprinted in his thoughts forever — a bright morning sun and multi-colored flowers. For four days prior to the inevitable operation, the boy's parents had rushed him to every place of beauty they could find and his last full day in the world of sight was spent among the pounding waves of a nearby shore. Mystery Surrounds Arsenic, Rose Case

WASHINGTON (UP)—Something very much resembling the mystery of the month seemed to be developing today in the story of blonde ambassador Clare Boothe Luce and the arsenic Borgia roses in her boudoir. Mrs. Luce, U.S. ambassador to Italy, is suffering from arsenic poisoning. And the question arises: How did she get it? According to Time magazine, of which Mrs. Luce's husband is editor-in-chief, the ambassador has been getting slow doses of arsenic — containing paint dust and particles from the bedroom ceiling of her 17th century villa near Rome. The "fallout" came from the Borgia white roses which adorn the ceiling of the room. It not only drifted into the air but got into Mrs. Luce's food and morning coffee, the magazine reported. This, said Time, explains the recurring illness which Mrs. Luce has been suffering. Time credited agents of the Central Intelligence Agency with discovering the source of the poisonous particles. Questions Arise But questions have been raised about the accuracy of CIA's detective work, although no one was suggesting a definite poison attempt or foreign intrigue. Joseph F. Battley, president of the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association, said he would "question that someone could formulate, deliberately or accidentally, a paint with an arsenic compound of sufficient strength... to cause illness of the type which Mrs. Luce suffered." "Paint forms a tough, hard film that has no pigment fallout," he said. "A good example is the murals, hundreds of years old, on ceilings all over Italy. Today's modern paints are specially formulated to withstand numerous scrubbing and washing." Battley has been used extensively in Italy for agricultural sprays. It is conceivable it could be used against house insects or rodents, but it is inconceivable that it was used intentionally in a paint film. In Italy, Ansa, the semi-official Italian news agency, quoted Rome scientists as saying the use of arsenic compounds in paints was

Congressmen Don't Like Nasser's Status With Reds

WASHINGTON — UP — Officials said today the United States will be very cautious about meeting Egypt's new bid for Western aid in building the $1.3 billion Aswan Dam on the Nile River. Authorities said there are several tough problems still standing in the path of proposed plans to assist Egypt. The most serious is heavy congressional opposition to aiding any nation which is flirting with the Soviet Union. Newsmen said they would question Secretary of State John Foster Dulles about present U.S. views toward the project at his news conference today. Soviet Offer Considered The United States and Britain offered last December to supply funds to get work started on the dam project, but Egypt later let it be known that she was considering a Soviet offer to help build the dam. Tuesday, however, Egyptian Ambassador Ahmed Hussein said on return here from Cairo that his government had decided to accept help from the West. He said he has been instructed to reach a firm agreement with the West "as soon as possible." State Department Press Officer Lincoln White refused to say afterward whether the United States is still willing to help Egypt with the project. But it is known that the United States has cooled considerably on the assistance plan recently. The Senate Appropriations Committee wrote a provision into its recent report on the foreign aid bill which would require the State Department to get special committee approval before granting Egyptian funds for the dam. Dulles wrote the committee (See EGYPT, Page 3)

Capitol Hill Roundup

WASHINGTON — UP — Congressional leaders predicted today the federal school construction bill will stay dead this year despite President Eisenhower's attempts to breathe life into it. The House killed the $1.6 billion school aid bill by a 224-194 vote early this month. The President made a second appeal for the bill's revival Tuesday as Congress rushed toward adjournment. Chairman Graham A. Barden (D-N.C.) of the House Education Committee commented: "Science has developed some wonderful machines called pulmonators, but as far as I know it has not come up with anything powerful enough to bring that bill back to life." Top House leaders privately agreed. Other congressional news: Helms Canyon — The Senate planned to begin formal debate on the Helms Canyon dam bill. Opponents confidently said they have the votes to defeat the $305 million Snake River project. Sponsors predicted a close vote. Airmen — The Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services committees sought the full story on reports that Russia is holding American airmen behind bars. The committees planned to question Undersecretary of State Robert Murphy in secret. Social Security — The Senate passed a Democratic bill liberalizing social security benefits for about four million women, disabled workers and needy persons. The bill strongly opposed in part by the administration — went to a House-Senate conference committee. Democratic sources anticipated no difficulties in working out a compromise. Veto — Democratic senators looked for a way to attack new congressional strings to the $2.1 billion military construction bill. The House passed a stringless version of the bill after the President vetoed the original one. It gave Congress a veto over missile and military housing programs. Civil Rights — The House called a one-day recess in its fight over the administration's civil rights bill. It scheduled resumption of the fight Thursday. Backers forecast passage by the weekend despite tough Southern opposition. Manpower — Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont) warned a big military manpower cut would reduce American ability to fight small wars and undermine NATO. Mansfield, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is one of the first Democrats to attack proposed plans to cut manpower in the next few years.

Accidental Shot Injures Pampian

J. D. Mize, 532 S. Reid, received injuries to the right foot late Tuesday afternoon when a .22 caliber rifle accidentally discharged. In addition to the wound in the foot, the attending physician stated that several bones were broken by the rifle slug. It was reported that the injury was not considered serious. Exact location of where the accident occurred was not determined late this morning. If it comes from a Hardware Store, we have it. Lewis Wade. (Adv.)

Possibility Of Break In Russia, German Relations

Foreign News Commentary By CHARLES M. MCCANN United Press Staff Correspondent

Diplomatic relations between Soviet Russia and West Germany are in a very bad way. There is even speculation in some European diplomatic quarters over the possibility of a break in the Iron Curtain.

That seems most unlikely. But it would not be surprising if the Kremlin declares open warfare soon on tough old West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer. The recall last week-end of Valerian A. Zorin, the Soviet ambassador to West Germany, was a clear indication of the enmity Adenauer has roused in Russia in the last few months.

The recall also was a tactic Adenauer has used in sending Zorin to Bonn in the first place. Adenauer went to Moscow last September to establish diplomatic relations between his government and Russia.

There was considerable anxiety at that time that West Germany's ties with the Western Allies might be weakened seriously as the result.

It soon developed, however, that Adenauer consented to the establishment of relations only as a means of pursuing his No. 1 goal—the unification of Germany.

Russia got off on the wrong foot by sending Zorin to West Germany as its first ambassador.

Kremlin Hatchet Man His nomination was accepted only with reluctance and open resentment.

West Germans recalled at once that Zorin, with his toothy smile, is a Kremlin hatchet man. It was Zorin who was sent to Czechoslovakia to prepare the way for the coup which put that country behind the Iron Curtain in 1948.

Zorin arrived in Bonn last December 20. He had hardly unpacked his bags when he embarked on a campaign to build himself up with West Germans and undermine Adenauer's regime.

He started to visit West German officials, by-passing the West German Foreign Office, and to attend all sorts of public gatherings from concerts to beer evenings. He entertained lavishly.

All he succeeded in doing was to antagonize Adenauer. He was given a freeze-out treatment.

Hence it was not a startling development when Zorin visited Adenauer Saturday and told him he was going back to Moscow to take up another post. Zorin did not say who would be his successor—if the Kremlin intends to name any successor at this time.

Adenauer has referred to world Communism in recent weeks as the No. 1 enemy of Germany. His foreign minister, Heinrich Brenning, reminded Russia in a speech on July 1 that West Germany wants back the territory east of the Oder-Neisse Rivers line which Poland now occupies. Adenauer and Brenning have said firmly that they will not negotiate with the East German Communist regime on unification.

An East German delegation arrived in Moscow Monday to conduct "important negotiations." This may be the Kremlin's first move in an anti-Adenauer campaign.

John C. Metcalfe was having supper in a crowded restaurant in Nuremberg, Germany, not long ago. There were empty seats at Johnny's table and three American soldiers asked if they might sit down, only the GI's put it this way: "Okeh we sit mit you." Mus-tached Metcalfe said, "Sure, glad to have you." One of the soldiers said, "You speak pretty good English." "Well," replied Metcalfe, "I hope so. I live in Silver Spring, Md., and lecture all over the United States." The talker picked up the check and spent a wonderful evening with new-found friends.

Washington drivers have been warned they had better not leave their keys in their vehicles or walk away with the doors unlocked. Auto thefts were up 26 per cent last fiscal year.

There seems to be a shortage of paper on Capitol Hill sometimes. A House judiciary sub-committee's anti-trust hearing was brought to a fast halt the other day. A gal who had been hitting at her stenographic machine for three hours stopped and said: "I'm sorry Mr. Chairman, but I'm out of paper." Chairman Emanuel Celler, the New York Democrat, pulled up a little shocked and then said maybe it was time for a recess. Rep. Hugh Scott, Republican of Pennsylvania, couldn't hold his tongue. Said he: "I never knew anybody in Washington ever to run out of paper."

On the political scene it is interesting to note that down in Texas, running for state treasurer are Warren G. Harding and Jesse James. Mr. James is the incumbent.

Drop In US Oil Output Reported

TULSA (UP)—U. S. crude oil and lease condensate output averaged 7,065,600 barrels daily during the week ended July 14, the oil and gas Journal reported today.

This was a drop of 5,300 barrels daily from the previous week. The year's total production stands at 1,405,086,270 barrels, compared to 1,319,004,760 barrels for the same period last year.

California was down 4,000 barrels daily for the week; Illinois down, 1900; Kansas down 3,200; Oklahoma down 2,350; Oklahoma down 100; Louisiana down 350.

Arkansas was up 150; Colorado up 2,400; Montana up 70; Nebraska up 2,200; New Mexico up 600; and Texas was unchanged.

Washington insiders say that Adenauer may have to apply his new conscription law sooner than he expected. It is due for final passage this week. Things looked rosy until recently—the Defense Ministry had 160,000 volunteer applications on file. Now, it develops, many men had applied more than once. Many more have been rejected on physical or other grounds. The Defense Ministry has started a quiet recruiting campaign among university students.

That will make him a veteran. The post-war average for French premiers is about seven months.

Some experts are saying that Western air force officials who visited the recent Russian air show were much more impressed than they have admitted publicly. Type for type, one expert said, Russian planes "now stand in the same general class as those in service in the United States and British air forces." That implies that the Russians aren't merely creeping up qualitatively on the West—they already have crept up.

Don't be surprised if a ruckus breaks out over the Atomic Energy Commission's policy of secrecy. The AEC let a handful of newsmen witness this season's first two nuclear weapons tests in the Pacific. Murray, lone Democratic member of the commission, shares this view. So far Japan has announced a total of eight test explosions.

Ike Fast Learning Political Tricks

By LYLE C. WILSON United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower might have learned his lessons from the Old Master himself, the way he deals 'em out of DFR's political deck.

FDR's like in the White House may never be seen again. Mr. Eisenhower learns fast, however, as witness his pick of two caustic critics of administration foreign policy to represent the United States in the U.N. General Assembly.

Sen. William F. Knowland (R-Calif) calls Eisenhower policies in the Far East too soft on Red China. He's more often off than on the foreign policy reservation. Knowland doesn't like the President's air inspection plan for disarmament much more than do the Russians.

Neither Will Back Down Mr. Eisenhower chose Knowland, however, and Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn) as U.S. representatives. Humphrey has the persistence of a mosquito and when stung of an over-size wasp when he goes after the administration, which is mighty near all the time and on all subjects. They were two of five representatives named by the President.

As U.S. representatives neither senator will need reverse his individual position. It is inevitable, however, that both will be drawn closely to administration foreign policy because each will have become instrumental in it to some degree. Such strategy is right out of FDR's political handbook, as was a third nomination of Paul G. Hoffman to be a U.S. representative.

Challenge McCarthy Mr. Eisenhower, like Mr. Roosevelt, oils the waters where he can but does not always run from a fight. Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.) has promised to oppose Hoffman's confirmation by the Senate. The administration chose to challenge McCarthy. That should make considerable political hay with the big-spenders foreign policy element among the voters and the anti-McCarthy folk. That strategy probably will pay off, too.

The choices of Knowland-Humphrey were in the pattern of Mr. Eisenhower's alert draft of Sen. Walter F. George for the administration team last May. The Senate dean was forced to announce his retirement under threat of a bad licking in Georgia's senatorial primary. Young former Gov. Herman Talmadge had decided to make the Senate race.

George will be Mr. Eisenhower's eyes and ears in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and a powerful defender of administration foreign policy against all attacks, including Democratic. That was smart politics.

But it's expensive. And the government is bitter over West Germany's refusal to pay more than half the cost of maintaining the troops.

French political experts believe Premier Guy Mollet will be able to continue his tight-rope act as head of a minority coalition government at least until mid-October. Mollet is expected to get his emergency tax bill through Parliament next week, then adjourn the session. When Parliament meets again in October, Mollet will have been in office nearly nine months. That will make him a veteran. The post-war average for French premiers is about seven months.

Some experts are saying that Western air force officials who visited the recent Russian air show were much more impressed than they have admitted publicly. Type for type, one expert said, Russian planes "now stand in the same general class as those in service in the United States and British air forces." That implies that the Russians aren't merely creeping up qualitatively on the West—they already have crept up.

Don't be surprised if a ruckus breaks out over the Atomic Energy Commission's policy of secrecy. The AEC let a handful of newsmen witness this season's first two nuclear weapons tests in the Pacific. Then it clammed up, leaving it to the Japanese to announce all subsequent shots. This gravels a number of congressmen. They say it's silly. Thomas E. Murray, lone Democratic member of the commission, shares this view. So far Japan has announced a total of eight test explosions.

Plan which could conceivably trigger a southern Democratic walkout from the national party has been revealed by a letter from South Carolina's governor, George Bell Timmerman Jr., to southern members of Congress. Proposal originated in the South Carolina Democratic Convention. Solons cast a wary eye on the plan, which calls for a caucus of southern national convention delegates to agree on a program of united action on issues, such as racial segregation.

European diplomatic sources say that a long-range package deal is in the works to admit Communist China to the United Nations. The West's price would be the coincident admission of West Germany. Red China's admission would be a bitter pill for the United States to swallow. But strange things happen in diplomacy. Further, the admission of West Germany would be a bitter pill for the Kremlin. It would mean practically scuttling the East German Communist regime. Red Chinese pressure would force Russia to go along. Whatever happens, it won't be until after the American election in November.

"The LIVER Keep It Healthy"

The liver is the largest gland in the body. It weighs around three pounds. It holds one-fourth of the blood of the body. Its size and its capacity for blood are requisites to the enormous work of the liver.

The circulation of a generous supply of blood through the liver must be kept normal to maintain healthy action in this organ and enable it to perform manifold duties. Physiologic experimentation has demonstrated that this circulation is governed by action of the nerve fibers that extend Miller D.C. between the brain on one and the liver on the other end. It has been further demonstrated that nerve fibers control the ability of the liver to convert sugar into starches and perform its other duties. A healthy liver, therefore depends upon normal action of these nerves. Normal nerve action may be maintained or restored as illustrated so well in the following case history.

age had been suffering from painful attacks which was diagnosed as liver-and-gall-bladder trouble. She also had constant pain in her right side, nervousness, indigestion, kidney trouble and sinus trouble. She came to the Miller Chiropractic Clinic for a spinal analysis and spinal X-Rays which located some trouble in her central nervous system causing her symptoms.

We began making the necessary corrections and within a short time the symptoms began to disappear. We know we were on the right track and in due time all symptoms disappeared. The cause had been located and corrected. Nature did the rest, No. 178.

US Senate As World's Most Exclusive Club Is Hokum

By LYLE C. WILSON United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON (UP)—That old one about the U.S. Senate being the world's most exclusive club is mostly hokum, there being usually in the Senate one or more individuals who couldn't buy their way into the Loyal Order of Muskkrats. The Senate does have its traditions, however. One of them is the unwritten "personally obnoxious" rule. Obnoxious is a rough word meaning, variously, evil, offensive, objectionable, odious, hateful. When a senator says an individual nominated for high office by the President is personally obnoxious to him, that senator has said a mouthful. So, six senators jointly sent a letter to their 90 colleagues saying that the nomination of Solicitor General Simon E. Sobeloff to be a federal judge on the fourth circuit "is obnoxious to our states and to us." The senators, all Democrats, were Scott and Ervin, N.C., Wofford and Johnston, S.C., Byrd and Robertson, Va. The Fourth Circuit comprises those three states with Maryland and West Virginia. The six senators declared Sobeloff to be aggressively prejudiced against the Southern point of view on race relations, especially segregation in the public schools. They said he would not be fair to the white citizens under his jurisdiction in their three states. But in the Sobeloff case the "personally obnoxious" rule did not apply and the Senate confirmed his nomination. In the unwritten fine print of that rule it says that the objecting senator and the nominee to whom he applies the deadly objection must hail from the same state. That is to protect a senator against a President who might deliberately name a powerful political or personal enemy to office in a Senator's backyard. Strong Maryland Support Sobeloff had three of five states against him. But he's a Maryland man, and the Maryland senators were for him strong. He stood well enough in West Virginia, too. If either Maryland senator could have been induced to declare Sobeloff personally obnoxious to him, the nomination—doubtless—would have been withdrawn. Even though the six objectors did not prevail, they have given Sobeloff a bad start in his career on the bench. His judgments will be under unusual scrutiny among the people with whom he must live and work much of the time. He is likely to encounter a suspicious, even hostile reception, in the Southern tier of the Fourth Circuit. The last time a "personally obnoxious" nominee was defeated for confirmation was Aug. 2, 1955. Sen. W. Kerr Scott (D-NC) made the objection against Margaret E. Smith, named to be postmaster at Montreat, N.C. She lost on a voice vote. Other "Obnoxious" Nominees Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D-Ill.) filed the unwritten rule to prevent confirmation of President Truman's nomination of Joseph J. Drucker and Cornelius J. Harrington to be U.S. district judges for northern Illinois. They were rejected Oct. 9, 1951. Sen. Harry F. Byrd and the late Sen. Carter Glass, both Virginia Democrats, said President Roosevelt's 1939 nomination of Floyd H. Roberts to the federal bench was "personally and offensively obnoxious." FDR was powerful but his man lost. There are exceptions, however. Sen. W. Lee (Pappy) O'Daniel (D-Texas) declared a judicial nominee obnoxious in 1947, but could not stop him. Veteran Sen. Tom Connally (D-Texas) supported the nomination and it went through. The late Sen. Theodore (The Man) Bilbo (D-Miss) tried to block another such nomination with the unwritten rule. But the late Sen. Pat Harrison (D-Miss) voted the other way and the nominee was confirmed. It depends mostly on who is obnoxious to whom.

Kefauver Accepts Invitation To Tour Oklahoma Next Month

By CARTER BRADLEY United Press Staff Correspondent OKLAHOMA CITY (UP)—A move to link the presidential drives of Gov. Averell Harriman and Sen. Estes Kefauver took shape tentatively today, politicians said when Kefauver accepted an invitation to visit Oklahoma, where delegates are committed to Harriman. Gov. Raymond Gary, who has pledged Oklahoma's 28 votes to Harriman in the first ballot of the national convention next month at Chicago, will be among those greeting Kefauver. State Democratic Chairman Loyd Benefield, speaking in that role rather than in his capacity as national director of the Harriman for president organization, said he is delighted the Tennessee senator is coming to Oklahoma. Benefield was in Oklahoma City today during a 24-hour leave from Harriman campaign headquarters at Chicago. "Won't Permit Direct Quote" Important members of the Oklahoma democratic delegation, while refusing to permit direct quotation, said the Kefauver visit to this state is the first step in an attempt to combine the strength of the Harriman and Kefauver forces at the convention. Kefauver was invited to attend the International Round-Up Cavalcade at Pawhuska, Okla., by Mrs. Mabelle Kennedy, Pawhuska banker and national vice-chairman of the Kefauver for president committee. Mrs. Kennedy said all Oklahoma Democratic delegates will be invited to meet Kefauver in Pawhuska on July 29. Gary Took Lead Oklahoma democrats were led into the Harriman camp by Gary several months ago, and Gary approved Benefield's appointment to the high office in the New York-er's campaign organization. Benefield, after three weeks work in and out of the Chicago headquarters, predicted Harriman would have a minimum of 250 votes on the first ballot in the convention. "We have a great organization going across the country," Benefield said. "I really think the timing is good and Harriman will be nominated. Harriman has tremendous strength in places where polls and newspapers haven't given him any." Benefield refused comment on the Kefauver visit, but said "it would appear to have some sort of significance."

Jaycees See Slides Of Convention

The Junior Chamber of Commerce members saw colored slides of the 1956 National Jaycee Convention held in Kansas City, Kan., at the regular luncheon meeting held Tuesday. President Ray Duncan, who attended the convention, showed and explained the slides. Two new members were taken into the club. They were James Goodwin, with Meads' Bakery, and Neil Williams, an attorney for Hughes Companies. Visitors were Raymond Barrett, a farmer west of Pampa; John Spearman, a farmer and rancher east of town; Lynn Hughes; and players in the local Junior Chamber of Commerce Golf Tournament. The boys left with George Whitten, a member of the Jaycees, for Brownwood to attend the state Junior Golf Tournament also sponsored by the Jaycees. They are sponsored by the local club. Winners there will go to the national tournament. The group discussed selling programs at the Top o' Texas Rodeo and the round-robin softball tournament to be held in Pampa, July 20-22. Horton Russell announced that the club and their wives were invited to a get-together at his home at 2132 N. Russell for charcoal-broiled hamburgers Aug. 3.

Store Hours To Remain Unchanged

The merchants' activities Committee of the Chamber of Commerce announced today that the returns of questionnaires recently sent to businessmen in regard to changing of store hours were about evenly divided, according to Hugh Peoples, chairman. The questionnaire asked the merchants if they preferred to have local store hours from 9:30 a.m. till 5:30 p.m. instead of the present hours of 9 a.m. till 5 p.m. As a result of the closeness of the returns, the committee decided not to make a recommendation to the Chamber of Commerce on the changing of the store hours and reported that it would be up to the individual merchants as to the hours of operation of his business.

Pampa Pair Rescued From Lake

A couple from Pampa was among several who were rescued from Conchas Lake, near Tucumcari, N.M., Monday afternoon as winds whipped up waves nearly 12 feet. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Braly, of Pampa, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goshen and Mr. and Mrs. Chilton Hill of San Francisco, Calif., were in a houseboat that was being towed across the lake when the high winds came up. The six people became stranded as the boat ran out of gas and winds began picking up on the lake. They were rescued as the storm picked up volume by Frank Smith, Roe Swain, and Tom McDonald, who took their boat out, rescued those aboard and towed the house-boat back to shore.

EGYPT

(Continued from Page One) Tuesday, however, that while the administration did not expect to use any foreign aid funds for the dam without consulting the committee, it did not feel bound by the language in the committee's report. The language indicated the committee would have a virtual veto over any funds for the Aswan project. Not Considered Binding But Dulles said that because the committee restriction was not written into the appropriations bill itself, the administration did not consider it necessarily binding. Some high American officials are now wondering whether it might be wise not to help Egypt build the dam and let the Egyptians accept the Russian offer. They reason that such a great export of Soviet wealth outside the Communist orbit might have serious effects on poor peoples behind the Iron Curtain.

Union Robs Worker

Let's suppose that you worked for a pretty good firm. Let's suppose, also that your wages were about the highest in the industry and that you were getting along pretty well.

One day your boss comes up to you and says: "Jones, I'm going to do something for you."

"Yes?" you say, wondering what it's all about.

"I'm going to set up a program which will give you an automatic increase in your pay."

"Well, that's something," you say, wondering if there's a catch to it.

"Here's what I'm going to do," continues the old man. "On July 1 of every year, I'm going to boost your wages about 7.3 cents per hour. And I'm going to do this for five years beginning with this next July 1."

But you know how the cost of living has been rising during the years, so you say: "Well, that's very nice, sir, but I'm just wondering if that raise, generous though it seems, will take care of the increase in the cost of living."

"I've thought of that, too," says the boss. "And here's what I'm going to do. If the cost of living rises, I'll increase the amount of your income in addition. In other words, that 7.3 cents per hour will be a real increase, regardless of what the cost of living does."

You cudgel your brains for some comeback, but the boss goes on.

"That isn't all Jones. In the event things get tough and I have to lay you off, I'm going to set up a supplemental unemployment program which will help to look after you for 52 weeks, that's a full year. Then, I'm going to give you a cash premium if I have you work on Sunday. I'm going to take out an insurance policy on your life and increase your sickness and accident insurance. Further, I'm going to begin to put a little more aside for you for a pension for when you finally retire, and I'm increasing the amount of time you can have each year for a holiday and I'm going to pay you more when you're on the holiday than I have in the past."

We asked a wage earner what he would do if his boss came to him with a proposition substantially along this line. His answer was: "I'd kiss him."

We don't suppose that any employer would be particularly eager for this type of response, but presumably he could expect the gratitude of any employe to whom he made such an offer.

Well, the ten largest steel companies in the United States just made that offer to their employes. Did the men cheer? Did they congratulate each other? Did they throw their hats in the air and vow that they worked for the best bunch of employers on the globe? They did not. You see, free speech is denied them. They haven't a chance of letting their boss know how they felt. This is because they have sold their freedom to a racketeering group of gangsters called the "United Steelworkers of America." And the labor bosses of this extortionist outfit spurned the offer and told the management to look out for a strike.

So the employes said nothing. Theirs not to make reply, theirs not to reason why. Theirs not to pay their dues, go out on strike if called, go without any pay if necessary, for months at a time if need be, just so the labor bosses can throw their weight around and further dislocate the American economy. But above all, theirs to shut up and obey the dictator.

We wonder when a movement will get started inside the union to take these labor bosses out beyond the three mile limit and let them walk back.

THE NATION'S PRESS

CREeping CATASTROPHE (The Daily Oklahoman)

In the United Nations the disarmament question has resumed its same aimless drift in the same wide circle.

Russia has reiterated its opposition to the western blueprint for disarmament by stages under President Eisenhower's "open skies" proposal for mutual inspections.

But while the argument droned on an atomic scientist of high repute warns that time may be running out for the human race with or without war. Dr. Ralph Lapp says that the continued testing of ever more powerful hydrogen bombs is contaminating the atmosphere at a rate that will imperil human survival within a relatively short time.

In this respect he differs sharply with the rather complacent view of the National Academy of Sciences and the official position of the Atomic Energy Commission.

The conceded danger occurs in radioactive strontium which has an extremely long life and is produced by the splitting of uranium atoms. It is chemically similar to calcium and is attracted to the skeletons of human beings and to the bones of livestock that may be consumed as human food. It tends to produce cancer and other ailments.

It's this "internal ingestion" of radioactive materials from food, air and water that Dr. Lapp feels is insufficiently emphasized in most appraisals of the threat. He says that by 1962 there will be enough radioactive strontium committed to the atmosphere to produce a 100 percent maximum permissible amount in every person on the planet. Unless there is some agreement to control test explosions before then he fears that the die will be cast "irrevocably."

But the question that follows is how the world's atomic powers are going to come to any understanding regarding the testing of bombs when they can't even begin to agree on the larger issue of disarmament. For of course the bomb tests are a part of the larger issue and it's hard to see how any progress can be made in one direction without some agreement on disarmament in general.

But that brings up still another question relating to the real worth that could be attached to any disarmament agreement with the Russians. The disillusioning experience with mutual inspections in Korea illustrates the truth of the adage that anybody who saps with the devil will need a long spoon.

Even though American planes had complete access to the skies over Russia there would be no certainty that atomic weapons weren't being assembled in underground plants or in surface installations having the outward appearance of soap factories.

Man's Emerging Mind

In the last issue I was commenting on "Man's Emerging Mind" by N. J. Berrill. In that article Berrill explained how difficult it was to do as Voltaire advised when he said, "If you would discourse with me, define your terms."

Berrill admitted that it was rather difficult to satisfactorily define man. Then under the chapter "Walkers," when he explains how man eventually began to walk on two feet, he makes this observation: "...The exercise of human wit in unimpassioned debate is as distinctively human as any quality man possesses."

The man who will do things or advocate things and will not attempt to rationally harmonize them with other courses of action he gives lip service to believing in, is not doing much, it seems to me, to developing human qualities.

It seems rational to believe one of the causes of our trouble is that we are disregarding this human quality of debating things through.

After reading this, I was crossing the street and saw a local politician walking along and I thought to myself how politicians like he always refuse to answer questions and defend their position. Most of the politicians are men who are not trying to develop their own personalities and minds but are primarily interested in appearing to be something they are not.

Undoubtedly one of the causes of our plight is that now office seekers will not debate issues as did Lincoln and Douglas.

In explaining how man's mind evolved in primitive time when men lived in caves, Berrill observed:

"The caves held human communities larger than single families. Small societies bound together by shelter and by the glowing warmth of fire bounded by darkness, with powers of speech in spite of rather narrow jaws and heavy eyelids, had time and reason for contemplation. Human thought runs on practical economic lines only as long as it has to. When the pressure of urgency is absent, as it must be when night or storm closes in upon you; when the radiance of firelight throws flickering lights and shadows on the walls and on the faces of old and young, the mind relaxes and speaks to mind. Here in the caves the bonds between man and man, as well as man and woman and parent and child, were strengthened and human intercourse as far as speech permitted dwelt more and more on the deep concern of every grown individual with the circumstances of life and above all with the ravages and impact of death."

Culture - Developing Animals
Under the chapter "Points of View" the author writes:

"Culture, it is said, is a state of mind produced by the things you have forgotten. If so, then what you have forgotten or seem to have forgotten is as important in making you what you are as that which you remember. Taken together it is what binds a people into a cohesive whole and molds the lives and personalities of its component individuals. It is a human creation and is equally creative of much that is human, and one of the best definitions of man I have seen is that he is a culture-making animal. For he is an animal and encompasses everything that an animal is, and he also creates cultures, which no other animal does, and within his culture his soul develops. But not all cultures are the same.

"Religion, art, the ethical codes by which a people live, the ways of doing things, all contribute to a particular culture and are expressions of it; as represent ways of thinking and the kinds of things that are thought about."

FOR REFLECTION

with JAMES C. MOBERTHIN, President, Subitinal Mobilization Dr. Herbert Welch, 93 recently celebrated his sixty-sixth wedding anniversary at his home in New York City. A bishop emeritus of the Methodist Church, having lived on four continents, he is still very active and busy. He preached an ordination sermon in Connecticut on the day of his wedding anniversary.

"I have confidence," he is reported as saying, "that Communism is not a permanent thing. It can't last because it is wrong. I believe in the moral government of the world and of the universe." Dr. Welch has lived a long time and has developed a perspective that enables him to take a longer view of things than some of us do.

And I think he is 100 per cent right in his statement quoted above. Only that which is perfect is eternal. Wrong is like an eyeless potato. When planted and given enough time, it either putrefies or petrifies. True, wrong will be with us "until the end of age"—but it carries within itself the seeds of its own destruction.

On the other hand, that which is right—completely so—is indestructible. That is why, in the end, "right is might" and "truth crushed to earth will rise again." What is wrong can't last forever—but what is right will. This is the conviction that enables us to view without too much alarm the abortive triumphs of evil while we continue to contend for "the right as God gives us to see the right."

Commonwealth Nations Feel U.S. Too Blustery

WASHINGTON, July — Sharp criticism of American foreign policy was expressed at the recent London Conference of member nations of the so-called British Commonwealth. According to diplomatic reports, almost every statesman present voiced grievances against our attitude on worldwide controversies. Strangely, they regard us as too blustery and bellicose, especially Secretary Dulles and Congress.

No decisions of major import are ever reached at these periodical meetings, which are conducted in utter secrecy. Thus, they provide a unique opportunity for a frank and sometimes bitter discussion of the state of the universe, which they found to be extremely sad and disturbed.

In view of the general dissent from Washington's overseas program, it is a miracle that relations between the United States and the Commonwealth remain as stable and harmonious as they are. It is due only to the fact that any open collision or crack-up would be fatal to the democracies. But the pronounced disagreement and restlessness are cause for concern.

Every member, including treaty allies and such neutrals as India and Ceylon, criticized us for our continued suspicion of Russian and Chinese Communists. Prime Minister Nehru insisted that both regimes will co-operate peacefully with the West, if given a chance. All expressed a desire to open new avenues of trade and communications with the Reds. Nehru scoffed at the idea that the Kremlin wants or contemplates war.

In fact, reports of a softening of our attitude toward Mao Tse-tung were circulated through the Conference halls. They purported to say that Ike was veering toward a "less rigid" attitude toward Peiping. These rumors are understood to have persuaded Ike to send his recent letter to Chiang Kai-shek, assuring him of our continued support.

Our NATO policy was another subject of acrimonious debate. Nehru, of course, opposes it completely as dividing the world into "two hostile" forces. He referred cuttingly to the action of Congress in reducing foreign economic aid appropriations while boosting the military budget.

The British would like to withdraw 20,000 troops from Europe, and reduce their enlistment period to 18 months, thereby relieving the drain on the Exchequer. They contend that increasing reliance on tactical atomic weapons permits such a shift. But Washington cautions against weakening the European defense force.

The British chided us for not giving them greater support in the Cyprus controversy. In view of our generous aid to Turkey, which is represented at Washington by Thomas S. Dewey, they thought that Dulles could have — and should have — persuaded Ankara to accept the now abortive compromise for eventual self-determination, with provisions protecting the Turkish minority on the Mediterranean Island.

Eden defended his harsh behavior toward the Greek Cypriotes. Without Middle East oil, he warned in grave tones, Britain would be done for economically and militarily. And the West would stand

I try to think, but I don't pretend to be the greatest thinker in the world. I'm frequently mystified. The United States spent billions of dollars arming Marshal Tito and now he has gone over to the Communists. Tito never was trustworthy and it may be that the weapons we gave him may someday be used against us. On the other hand, by enabling him to successfully defy Stalin, we may have bought safety and peace for a generation in Europe and America.

I am similarly troubled by a new turn of events. Our government has told small nations, that it has been subsidizing — that is good sense for them to be "neutral." This has caused consternation among many liberty loving Asiatics (such as the Philippines) because it is obvious that a small people will eventually be enslaved if they are neutral in a struggle between a power that believes in brute force and a power that believes in liberty but won't protect them. Maybe there is some good reason that I don't know about behind this decision. If there is, I don't wonder that those who make it are subject to great physical strain.

Hold Your Decisions Until Mac Comes Back

By HENRY McLEMORE

DELPHI, GREECE — Don't any of you make a single important decision until I get back.

Here I am, on the porch of Room 3, Delphi Hotel, only an olive grove away from the Temple of Apollo. If my guidebook isn't up to mischief, it was in this temple, seated on a golden tripod and chewing laurel leaves, that the Pythian oracle swayed the world from 700 B. C. to 400 A. D.

Tomorrow morning, bright and early, I am going to seat myself amidst the ruins of the Temple, and ask the oracle questions about everything under the sun. I already have my seat picked out. It is the same seat used by such earlier seekers of information as Croesus, Sulla, Nero, Oedipus, Socrates, and Pericles.

The oracle hasn't spoken a word for centuries, but she was a woman, and being a woman she must be good and ready to say a few words by now.

To be honest with you, I took the four-hour bus ride from Athens to Delphi largely because I thought I'd be bored. But I thought I had better risk it than go home and admit that I had been so close and not seen Delphi.

I couldn't have been more mistaken. Even if it hadn't been the spiritual center of antiquity Delphi would be worth a visit just for its setting alone. Half the trip from Athens is spent in climbing, climbing, with the road growing more tortuous with each kilometer. That the ancient pilgrims made it by foot and chariot is a tribute to their muscles as well as to their zeal.

Delphi is a place of wild beauty. Crags soar toward the sky, their tips covered with swirling mist. Eagles soar from peak to peak, massive boulders stand piled like playthings of the gods, and icy streams rush through dark, forbidding ravines.

Forbidding even in summer, it is easy to picture Delphi's awesomeness in winter, with lightning flashing and thunder crackling like the voice of Zeus, himself.

But Delphi is not all stern, unyielding. Surrounded on three sides by scarred mountains, it opens on the remaining side to a gentle and lovely a panorama as one will find anywhere in the world. Stretched out to the west is the plain of Amphissa. The plain shimmering silver-green with olive trees which lead to the Corinthian Gulf. A man would have to be as unresponsive as a stone not to react to Delphi. To stand alongside the majestic columns, to drink from the spring where pilgrims purified themselves so many centuries ago, to see the carvings on the walls listing the names of the winners of the Pythian games, the names of freed slaves, and the accounts of military victories, is to roll back the years and rejoice the people who laid the groundwork for our civilization. To a scholar, Delphi must be almost overwhelming, for even to the likes of me there is something spine-tingling about it.

Mary and I have been rereading things we labored through in high school and college, and what a new enjoyment being here brings to them. Now I know how a messenger sent to Delphi by a king must have felt on his journey, and can relive his reactions on arrival. I am walking the same rocky paths, looking at the same mountains, drinking the water from the same spring — the days of B. C. become yesterdays.

THE AMERICAN WAY

Beware the Blackjack

The Doctor Says

By EDGAR F. JORDAN, M. D.

Man's inhumanity to man has been shown in various ways throughout the ages. When one thinks of the cruelties which have existed, one should bear in mind also, however, the helpful kindness which has so often gone hand in hand with cruelty.

The publication a couple of years ago of the report by five American physicians of their experience while prisoners of war of the Communists in North Korea and the book published last year on the notorious Andersonville prison of the Civil War serve as useful reminders that prisoners of war may be no better off today than 90 years ago.

ASIDE FROM calculated cruelty the outstanding feature of both prison camps (as well, no doubt, as many others) was an inadequate diet.

The food was frequently contaminated with disease germs, was often deficient in enough calories to maintain weight and reasonable health, and in particular was insufficient in certain vitamins.

Another common vitamin deficiency which afflicted many prisoners in camps was pellagra. This results from an insufficient quantity of one of the elements of the vitamin B complex. The consequences of this are also unpleasant, and are described in the book mentioned: "The sufferers became pathetic idiots, with no desire or wish to do or be anything. If they walked around at all, they had to be watched closely to prevent their straying over the dead line and giving . . . the guards the coveted opportunity of killing them."

OTHER DEFICIENCIES of diet may result in the disease known as beriberi or in kwashiorkor, latter being the result of insufficient protein. Some knowledge of basic dietary facts as well as the desire to improve the lot of those who are captured in battle should be helpful to victor and vanquished alike. It is not necessarily costly to prevent most of these deficiency disorders. A small yeast cake and some dandelion seed would often be enough to keep people alive who would otherwise die. A single yeast cake can be cultured into a never ending supply of those parts of the vitamin B complex which will prevent beriberi and pellagra. The leaves of the dandelion made into tea can supply vitamin C in sufficient quantities to prevent scurvy.

"AMERICAN YOUNGSTERS TODAY are weaker and flabbier than those in many other countries, and they are growing softer every year." This indictment of our youth is made by John B. Kelly in the July Reader's Digest. Mr. Kelly, who was wartime Director of Physical Fitness under the civil defense program, fears that "if parents and teachers fail to wake up to the alarming trend, we shall become a nation of weaklings."

The DIGEST article, condensed from The American Magazine, reports the results of studies on more than 7,000 children, 4 to 16 years old, in America, Italy, Austria and Switzerland. Taking the six basic Kraus-Weber "strength and flexibility" tests, 57.9 percent of American youngsters failed in one or more, as compared with only 8.7 percent of European children. Experts say that any 6-to-16-year-old in good condition should be able to pass these tests, which are illustrated in the article.

GRACE FRIEND

Dear Grace Friend
In my previous letters you always give me such wonderful replies. And the only thing that interests me in the paper is your column. I really miss that.

I have five girls between seven and 14 and I am always afraid somebody might do harm to them. Eye nights I can hardly sleep well through the night. In my opinion I think the law gets weaker every day and does not do fair justice.

Near our house there lives a young boy who is a narcotics addict. He even beats his mother. The last time he was arrested and then turned loose in three weeks. So I even fear him. I feel like we are not safe anymore.

So many women and children have been raped and murdered on account of criminals being released after they have been defended by unscrupulous attorneys.

Keep on with your wonderful column. Your Daily Reader

Everyone brought to trial has the right to be defended by an attorney and if necessary the court will appoint someone to defend him. Thus lawyers often defend law breakers whether they like it or not and of course they do the best they can for these people once they are their clients. This is a protection for the innocent as well as the guilty.

You do well to fear the boy who is a narcotics addict and you should instill a healthy fear in your daughters so that they will avoid such boys and men, keeping as far away from them as possible. You would be wise to see that there always is an adult in your home to supervise your children when you must be away.

Narcotics laws are being stiffened and I hope that soon it will be impossible for a young boy to acquire drugs. Protect your own children from them by teaching them of the evil which results in their use.

ENGAGED

Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Bouquet of Panhandle announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Joyce, to George Derrall Held, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Held, also of Panhandle. The wedding vows will be repeated at 8 p.m. Aug. 3 in the home of the bride's parents in Panhandle.

RUTH MILLET

If you have become so completely absorbed in your children that they are about all you and your husband have in common these days what is going to happen to your marriage when the children grow up and leave home?

You should be facing the day right now. In a recent talk about the "second half" of a woman's life a University of Michigan psychologist made a statement that should cause a lot of younger women to stop and think.

She said: "Even the women who are not widowed by the average age of 51 have a problem in keeping a close bond with their husbands after the last child leaves the home. In this 'empty nest' stage the couple find they have lost their closest common interest—the centering of their daily lives in their children."

Why should a woman wait until the nest is empty to face the problem of what her marriage is going to be like once the children are grown and gone from home? Wouldn't she be smarter to face that situation long before she ever reaches it? Shouldn't she do all in her power to see that she and her husband aren't two lonely strangers when they become "retired parents"?

Then she would see the danger of making the children her whole life in time to avoid it. She would realize that even while she is being a good mother, she must not forget the importance of being an understanding, companionable wife.

Also, she would see the necessity for keeping up an active social life that includes her husband instead of living vicariously through her children's parties, dates, defeats and triumphs.

A couple need more — lots more — in common than their children. And this applies even when the children are at the most demanding ages.

Through the years they must have shared other interests, built up a circle of friends, made plans for the later years, and realized fully that their life together would not always be centered around the children.

Summer's open sandals are aids to pretty feet in more than one way. In addition to the flattery they offer, their openness helps to clear up winter's corns and bunions.

Royal Service Program Given For Baptist Women's Missionary Union

A Royal Service Program entitled, "Publish Glad Tidings," was presented at the meeting of the First Baptist Church Women's Missionary Union executive board July 12 with Mrs. O. D. Burba in charge. The program followed the business meeting.

The theme of the program was the 50th anniversary of the Royal Service Magazine. Mrs. O. D. Burba gave the introduction; Mrs. H. M. Stokes, the opening prayer; and Mrs. Owen Johnson, the devotional, "Workers Together With God" taken from a 1908 Royal Service Magazine. Mrs. Johnson also gave the special prayer.

Others serving on the program were Mrs. Glenn Day, talking on the "First WMU Magazine"; Mrs. Douglas Flynn, "Our Mission Field Grows"; Mrs. Roberta Woods, "Self Support and a Monthly"; Mrs. John Pharr, "Growth For His Service"; Mrs. Lee Moore, "Royal Service And Young People"; Mrs. R. L. Edmondson, "Publications In Other Lands"; and Mrs. W. S. Marsh, "Beginnings In Other Lands."

In addition to the program, a report on the Association's President Mrs. H. M. Stokes. During the business meeting which was presided over by Mrs. R. L. Edmondson, a special report was given on the Barrett Chapel taken from a 1908 Royal Service Magazine. Mrs. Johnson also gave the special prayer.

The minutes were read by Mrs. E. C. Powell, and business for the coming month was planned. The business meeting closed with a prayer by Mrs. Bob Strobel.

The circle having the most members in attendance was the Edith Dial Circle. Approximately 30 women attended. Mrs. R. W. Tucker closed the meeting with a prayer.

MATURE PARENT

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE
Nine-year-old Steve attends a school whose students elect class officers every term. As policy, they're all encouraged to seek nomination.

Recently, Steve's teacher asked her class, "Which boys and girls want to become candidates for class president?" Hands were raised. So were those of hopeful treasurers and secretaries. But Steve announced no political interest. "Why, Steven," his teacher asked in surprise, "don't you want to try out for class office?"

"As who'd vote for him?" someone inquired loudly. And was instantly schooled by cries of "He'd be no good! Why ask him?"

In dismay, Steve's teacher promptly telephoned his mother to report this cruel experience. But though two weeks have passed, the boy himself has never mentioned it. His mother writes, "The teacher says I must make him talk to me about it. How can I do this?"

By recovering from your own fear of his social failure. A child who keeps such a hurt secret from his parent does so to protect himself. Wakened by fear of his own worthlessness, he's in no condition to deal with the parent's, too.

He avoids agitated concern over him for the same reason you by pass a rickety chair when you stub your toe — avoidance of more pain. Rather than trust his weakness to someone who believes it fatal he prefers to lick the wound himself in solitude.

If Steve's mother has no encouragement that can take the sting out of this experience, she'd better get some quick. For though she can offer Steve pasteurized milk, conditioned air, antiseptic toys and comic books, she cannot guarantee him completely sterile contacts with human nature.

Though psychiatrists are working on it, it still shares some instincts with the wolf and shark. Like these animal mobsters, the nice children in Steve's class sensed weakness in him and rushed to tear him down. That this shocked him is natural.

Manners Make Friends

If you are taking a telephone message for someone else don't trust your memory. Write it down. Then you'll be sure to relay the message. And just as important, you'll be sure to get the facts straight.

Being given a wrong number to call is less than helpful. But that it should have so shocked his teacher and mother, I don't understand unless they are as young as he in experience. And unaccustomed to judging between good and evil, have simply failed to register the times mob feeling has struck out at them.

Instead of contempt, they seem to feel such respect for the evil in this experience of Steve's, I can only ask, "Where have you been all your lives that you are so scared of rejection?"

Four Teams Entered

Pony Sub-District Meet Is To Start Here Tomorrow

The Pony League sub-district baseball tournament will get underway Thursday at Oiler Park with the three day affair to continue through Saturday. Clovis and Pampa will field single entries while Berger plans to enter two teams. The Clovis team has fielded strong contenders every year copping the sub-district title in 1954, while competing in a different zone. This is the first year that Clovis is entered in the district seven tourney.

Bill Ridgeway and Gerald Mobley will be field managers, while Cliff Dunham and C. C. Campbell will serve as business managers for the three day meet. Bob Banks is to serve as umpire chief. The Opt-Mrs. will be in charge of the ticket sales. Joe Tooley, is the publicity director for the Pony tournament.

Two games will be played each night with the first tilt slated to start at 6. All games will be seven inning affairs. Admission prices are 25 cents and 50 cents. Monahans will be the site for the Pony League district tourney

Aug. 3. The district meet was held in Abilene last year. Out Of Lineup

CHICAGO (UP)—Third baseman Randy Jackson is not expected to return to the Brooklyn Dodgers' lineup for at least a week. Stitches were removed Monday from his injured left thumb, which was cut in a shower accident a week ago, but physicians said the digit still was "stiff and very sore."

$25 Poorer — MILWAUKEE (UP)—Milwaukee second baseman Danny O'Connell was $25 poorer today because he failed to run out an infield grounder against the Pittsburgh Pirates Monday night. Manager Fred Haney fined O'Connell because the infielder stopped after running about 65 feet to first base on what seemed to be a routine out. As it turned out, first baseman Dale Long juggled the ball and pitcher Ronnie Kline had to make the putout.

BRIGHTEST ATHLETE — MILWAUKEE, Wis. (NEA)—Tackle Dick Materle compiled the highest point average of any Marquette athlete — 3.3 out of a possible 4.0 in electrical engineering.

Bums Having Hectic Road Trip Games

CINCINNATI (UP) — Duke Snider's fistie exchange with a Cincinnati fan in which two false teeth were broken and both parties wound up in police court, was the latest episode involving the Brooklyn Dodgers today in their most hectic road trip in years. Snider became involved with the fan, Ralph Baumei, a 33-year-old electrician from Mason, Ohio, as the teams were leaving the field Tuesday night after Cincinnati beat Brooklyn 4 to 3. The fan approached and allegedly asked the Dodger center fielder — "What's the matter, Duke — haven't you any guts?" "Yes, I'll show you who has guts," Snider allegedly replied. Baumei charged Snider also called him a name, whereupon he was reported to have swung and grazed Duke's nose. Snider, in turn, delivered a punch and Baumei suffered two broken teeth in his dental plate.

Coach Becker, Dodger pitching coach, who was nearby, stepped in and separated the pair before any more punches could be thrown. Both Becker and outfielder Carl Furillo were close enough to hear all of the conversation and said the fan accosted Snider without provocation. Snider pressed assault and battery charges and was released on $500 bail and was to have a hearing in court today. He filed counter charges against Snider and said he would "sue for plenty."

Lawrence Wins 13 Straight For Redlegs; Bounces Bums

By FRED DOWN
United Press Sports Writer
Brooks Lawrence's 13 consecutive victories gave him the longest winning streak in the majors since 1949 today and an outside chance to equal or surpass Rube Marquard's 41-year old all-time major league record.

The 305-pound Cincinnati Redleg right-hander ran his perfect season mark to 13-0 Tuesday night when he scored a 4-3 decision over the Brooklyn Dodgers. Lawrence touched off the winning rally himself when he opened the ninth inning with a double, pinch-runner Jim Dyck eventually scoring the decisive run when Ted Kluszewski singled with the bases filled.

The 13 straight triumphs give Lawrence the longest winning streak by a pitcher since Ellis Kinder reeled off that number for the Boston Red Sox in 1949. Lawrence is within three victories of the club record set by Ewell Blackwell in 1947 and within six of the big league mark of 19 straight wins established by Marquard in 1912.

Furillo Red Hot
Lawrence yielded a two-run homer to Carl Furillo in the first inning and another run in the seventh when the red-hot Furillo doubled home Duke Snider but the Redlegs led the score at 3-3 in the eighth when rookie Frank Robinson hit his 20th homer of the season. Robinson, incidentally, needs 18 more homers to tie the big league mark for a rookie set by Wally Berger in 1930.

The victory, Cincinnati's ninth in 12 games with the world champions this season, moved the Redlegs to within one game of the first-place Milwaukee Braves, who bowed to the New York Giants, 8-6. The Braves had won seven straight games and the Giants had lost seven in a row.

Willie Mays doubled home Jackie Brandt to break a 6-6 tie in the 11th inning and Hank Thompson singled for an insurance tally. Johnny Antonelli picked up his ninth victory in relief while Gene Conley suffered the loss. Brandt, Bill White and Dusty Rhodes homered for the Giants and Hank Aaron hit one for the Braves.

Bob Friend won his first game since June 16 and 12th of the year when he pitched the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-2 decision over the St. Louis Cardinals. Dick Groat doubled home two runs in the 10th to snap the Pirates' six-game losing skid and hand the Cardinals their third straight defeat.

Don Hoak's third double of the game followed by Gene Baker's single enabled the Chicago Cubs to gain a 16-inning, 3-2 win over the Philadelphia Phillies. Turk Lown held the Phillies to five hits in the last seven innings to win his fifth game while Jack Meyer suffered his fifth loss.

Yanks Shut Out Tigers
Johnny Kucks became the first pitcher to win 14 games when he hurled a six-hitter as the New York Yankees beat the Detroit Tigers, 4-0, and ran their winning streak to 11 games. Kucks allowed only one batter to reach third base and coasted after the Yankees touched up Billy Hoelt for three runs in the first inning. The win stretched the Yankees' lead to 19 1/2 games over the idle Cleveland Indians.

Ted Williams hit the 400th homer of his career — joining Babe Ruth, Jimmy Foxx, Mel Ott and Lou Gehrig in that lofty category to help the Boston Red Sox whip the Kansas City Athletics, 10-0 and 1-0. Williams' homer broke up a pitching duel between Bob Porterfield and Tom Gorman after Tom Brewer coasted to his 12th win behind a 16-hit Boston attack that included homers by Don Buddin and Billy Klau. The Red Sox have won 10 of 12 games in their biggest surge of the campaign.

Watch Those Strokes

By BOB TOSKI
Written for NEA Service
A man will put on his golf shoes, go straight to the first tee and start playing. Then he'll come back and moan about his scoring, or rather lack of it. He wouldn't complain so much, perhaps, if he would spend a little time preparing himself. Most golfers do not spend 10 minutes on the putting green before a round. Practice would sharpen them considerably. Many resist proper instruction as if it were extra income taxes. There are something like five million golfers today. I'll bet that no more than 20 per cent of them take instruction properly. Oh, they'll go to a pro. Sure they will. But they won't listen. They still want to play it their way. And that leads to bad scores.

Hobbs Takes 'Chick' Evans Has His 66th Birthday

By UNITED PRESS
 The front-running Hobbs Sports turboha coer emv tsm estl seem to have more trouble with Midland's John Stadnick than ny other pitcher in the Southwestern League.

Stadnick tamed the Sports for the second straight time Tuesday night as he hurled a four-hitter, fanned six and walked none for a 5 to 2 verdict, his 10th victory of the season.

It was a pitcher's night all around the league, in fact. Jonas Gaines stopped El Paso with a five-hitter and one unearned run as Carlsbad beat the Texans 2 to 1; Bill Bagwell won his 18th of the season with a five-hitter as San Angelo stopped Plainview 5 to 1, and Ed McKay hurled a four-hitter as Ballinger beat Roswell 4 to 1. Pampa and Clovis had another doubleheader washed out by rain.

Stadnick's rival, Oscar Chinique, had a no-hitter working for four innings before Dick Hogan's leadoff homer, his 19th, in the fifth touched off a four-run rally. Deposed manager Tom Jordan of Clovis turned up as Carlsbad's catcher Tuesday night.

The teams close out the current stand tonight with Pampa at Clovis, El Paso at Carlsbad, Plainview at San Angelo, Roswell at Ballinger and Hobbs at Midland.

'Chick' Evans Has His 66th Birthday

TODAY'S PORTRAIT
 By IRA LURVEY
 United Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO — UP — Charles "Chick" Evans, the golfer who played when amateurs had the big followings and pros were only a necessary evil, celebrated his 66th birthday today, nursing an injured arm and longing to get on the links.

"I'm miserable about this arm," Chick says. "Every day I can't get out on the course is a day of torture."

The arm was hurt in an auto accident four months ago. It's healing rapidly but not fast enough for Chick.

"I'm still hoping to get in at least one tournament this year," he says.

There's a record to uphold. For 50 years Evans has never missed a year without entering a major tournament. There's also something deeper.

"I just love the game. It's been my whole life. That's what I can't understand about these recent amateur scandals. If a man loves a sport, how can he demand money to participate in it?"

Golf has been good to Chick. He's won 52 amateur titles during 33 years and his 72-hole winning score of 286 in the 1916 National Open stood as a record for two decades. But Chick has been equally good to golf.

"Some guy offered me $1,500 to use his golf ball," Chick relates, "and other offers were coming in thick and fast, I felt I shouldn't pass them up and yet I didn't want to turn pro. Finally I decided to take the money but give it to someone else."

But to whom?

"I looked over towards the caddy yard and I knew right away."

Since then some 800 caddies have gone to college on Evans scholarships, and the Evans Foundation has handled around $3 million.

In 1925 Evans had a nervous breakdown when he became bankrupt after losing more than $250,000 in the stock market. His golf was never again the same.

"Every time I look my eyes off the ball I stared straight at someone I owed money to," he told a friend years later. "I couldn't sleep, much less play golf."

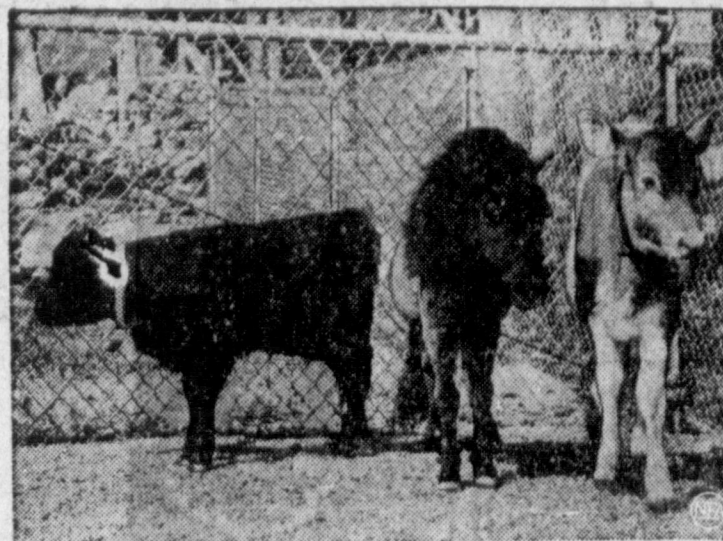

But the Evans scholars continued getting their money.

"I'm not sorry about anything," Chick says. "Golf has given me a tremendously full life. It's a shame so many of today's pros treat it as a chore. Perhaps as they grow older they'll see the light."
