White House Spurns Stassen's Dump-Nixon Drive

In Congress

Adjournment Threatened

By WARREN DUFFEE
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP) — Civil rights and atomic energy legislation threatened today to sidetrack Congress' drive for adjournment before the end of this week.
Congressional leaders still were shooting for adjournment before Saturday night, however.
Both houses met early today — the Senate to resume action on its $4 billion foreign aid appropriation bill and the House to consider a controversial Senate-approved bill to put $400 million into government construction of atomic power reactors.
The Senate faced a determined but probably doomed attempt by a few northern Democrats to force a showdown on the administration civil rights bill which passed the House Monday.
The bill was sent to the Senate Judiciary Committee, which was not likely to take any action on it. But supporters were determined to make a few maneuvering efforts to get the bill out of committee and on the floor for debate.
If the issue did reach the floor, all hopes for adjournment this week would be blasted. Southern senators would be sure to filibuster.
The fate of the atomic power reactor bill — which the administration opposes — was in doubt. House Republicans were lined up behind a pair of amendments which some Democrats said would "gut" the bill. But even without the amendments, the bill faced strong opposition.

In addition to the foreign aid and atomic reactor bills, Congress must complete action on housing, social security and military construction legislation before quitting for the year.
A compromise social security bill has been worked out in conference committee and quick approval by both houses is expected.
The Senate has completed action on housing legislation, but the House has yet to act. The reverse is true on the military construction program.
Both House and Senate, meeting into the night, acted on a mass of minor legislation Monday. The more important of the bills:
Atomic Ship: Both houses approved a compromise bill authorizing construction of the first atomic-powered merchant ship. The bill was a substitute for President Eisenhower's original proposal to equip an existing hull with an atomic reactor and use it as a floating showcase for the Atoms for Peace program.
Kidnap: The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill authorizing the FBI to enter kidnaping cases after 24 hours instead of seven days as previously provided, even where there is no indication of an interstate violation.

Handshaking Is Order Of The Day

By UNITED PRESS
The six gubernatorial candidates concentrated mostly on handshaking today in a closing bid for votes at Saturday's Democratic primary.
Sen. Price Daniel and former Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel were in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and Ralph Yarborough was in Houston.
J. Evette Haley toured several towns in North and East Texas and Reuben Senterfit campaigned in central Texas. J. J. Holmes was also expected in the Dallas area.
Much of the fanfare, such as Daniel's statewide television appearance with movie star Fess

Parker in Fort Worth Monday night, was over.
In his television appearance, Daniel made his appeal to all voters by presenting a cross-section of support, plus Parker, movie land's "Davy Crockett."
Parker, the master of ceremonies, cited Daniel's fight to keep Texas' tidelands and his narcotics bill which recently passed Congress.
Then a farmer, two educators, a war veterans' official and a newspaperman spoke on behalf of the candidate.
Daniel, who spoke last, charged that Walter Reuther, head of the CIO-UAW, had a candidate in the governor's race and was out to capture Texas' government.
Senterfit accused Daniel of resorting to "political chicanery" by using Parker.

Dallas Firm Bid Taken On Elevator

The bid of Hunter-Hayes Elevator Company of Dallas for the elevator in the new addition to Highland General Hospital, in the amount of $12,490, was accepted by the Gray County Commissioners Court Monday.
The bid was the lowest received by the court.
The specifications for the elevator call for it to be of the rotary lift type with provisions made for lengthening of the tracks if an additional floor is added to the new hospital addition.
The court authorized County Judge Bruce Parker to advertise for bids on furniture for the 40 private rooms in the new hospital addition. The bids are to be opened at a meeting of the Commissioners Court on August 27 and will be for beds, overbed tables, bedside tables, chairs, and other items needed to furnish the addition.
Judge Parker was also authorized by the commissioners to sign a contract for the employment of Wayland Merriman and Bowden for the engineering work on the bridges and roads recently authorized by the recent county bond vote.

Work is in progress at the present time to complete arrangements for the sale of the $650,000 bond issue to pay for the five new bridges and paving of three sections of county road.
The commissioners were informed that county officials are working on county budget for the coming year.

Recruit Testifies In Trial

By H. D. QUIGG
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARRIS ISLAND, S. C. (UP) — Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon "slapped at me once or twice" and raised a bottle of vodka to his lips just before taking a recruit platoon on a march of death into a tidal creek, a former member of that outfit testified today.
The witness, testifying at McKeon's general court martial, was Marine Pvt. David H. McPherson, 20, of Chatham, N. J. He said McKeon, junior drill instructor of the Marine recruit platoon, was irate because the outfit lacked spirit in training.
McKeon, 31, of Worcester, Mass., is charged with manslaughter, oppression of troops, and drinking against regulations. Six recruits drowned about 8:45 p.m. last April 8 when McKeon led the platoon into Parris Island's Ribbon Creek to "teach them discipline."
Holding a microphone close to his mouth, McPherson spoke in a level voice and appeared composed at all times.
McKeon, sitting at a corner of his defense counsel table, pressed his hands tensely against his thighs during the testimony. He did not look at the witness, and his face showed no emotion.
When the prosecution finished with him and the defense took over on cross examination, McPherson followed the lead of other recent government witnesses — extolling the qualities of his drill instructor.
He said McKeon is an "excellent drill instructor — a man of great patience."
The chief prosecutor intends to parade these former members of platoon 71 before the court regarding less of how disconcerting it is for the prosecution to hear them sing the praises of McKeon.

New Water Rates Drawn Up By City

Ordinance On Underpass Read
New water rates for the city of Pampa, to be effective with the October billing, were approved by the City Commission this morning. The new rates call for one standard rate for both residences and businesses. The law rate has been discontinued.
The one rate as adopted by the commissioners sets a minimum charge of $2.60 for the first four thousand gallons used each month. The charge for the next 16 thousand gallons is 50-cents for each thousand gallons, the next 80 thousand gallons will be charged for at the rate of 27-cents per thousand, and all water used over 100 thousand gallons will be charged for at the rate of 25-cents per thousand.
Persons living outside the city limits who use city water will pay 50 per cent above the rates approved.

New Offer Is Rumored In Strike

By ROBERT G. SHORTAL
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (UP) — The initiative of the steel industry's Big Three in calling a meeting touched off speculation today of a new offer to be made to the striking Steelworkers.
Four-man teams from each side were scheduled to meet this afternoon in the first bargaining session in New York since the start of the strike on July 1.
Industry negotiators took the initiative in calling for the meeting on the 24th day of the strike which has already cost U.S. economy about $1 billion in lost production and wages.
Previous offers and on joint talks had been held in Pittsburgh with the Federal Mediation Service playing an active role in the negotiations.
Federal mediators are not expected to take part in today's session because the participants set it up themselves.
The talks were held against the backdrop of a smouldering dispute about the tie-up between wages, prices and inflation.
The United Steelworkers of America has charged that "exorbitant" steel price increases — not union wage demands — have been the greatest inflationary factor in the economy. The industry contends the opposite is true.
The USW told its members it has noted a "disturbing irresponsibility" in the industry's pricing policies. It said for each 1% increase in wages since 1945, the industry has jacked up prices $3.19.
The industry accused the union of "misrepresenting and distorting" the facts and said wages have gone up much faster than prices since 1940, with the result the industry's profit margin has shrunk.

Northern Demos In Senate Press For 'Rights' Passage

By JOHN A. GOLDSMITH
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP) — A handful of northern Democrats pressed today for Senate action on the House-passed civil rights bill despite "veiled" threats that their names would be on a list of "un-American" names.
Three Democratic senators — campaign might endanger other Herbert H. Lehman (N.Y.) and Paul H. Douglas (Ill.) — planned to move that the Senate discharge the civil rights bill from the Senate Judiciary committee headed by staunch segregationist Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss.).
The House passed the bill Monday 279 to 126 after southern Democrats blocked a final vote for a week.
Douglas was reported warned by influential southern Democrats that a bid to force action on the civil rights bill would jeopardize other important bills in the waning days of the Congress. One source said Douglas was told that Congress would not pass the still pending social security bill if a Senate fight develops on civil rights.
"I have received no real threats," Douglas said when asked about the reports. "I have been given some veiled hints... some veiled threats, but I won't be influenced by any hints that sound like blackmail."
Some champions of civil rights legislation said little can be gained by forcing the civil rights issue in what is billed as the final week of the Senate session.
Quick Senate action, which caught some of the civil rights groups by surprise, sent the measure to the Judiciary committee. It deprived the bill's Senate supporters of a chance to force the issue at once.
A few moments after the House passed the bill, it was formally delivered to the Senate. Sen. Lester Hill (D-Ala.), who was presiding, decreed that unless senators objected it would be sent to the committee. No one objected although earlier there was talk of asking for a suspension of the rules which would have permitted immediate debate.

Senate Probes Investments

WASHINGTON (UP) — Senate investigators today opened an investigation into the danger of foreign interests — some possibly Communist — holding control of vital American defense industries.
Called before the Senate Internal Security subcommittee was a group of defense department witnesses headed by Jerome D. Denton, director of the office of personnel security policy of the Defense Department.
Fenton faced questioning about Defense Department industrial security procedures and policies, particularly in American defense plants under the "hidden control" of foreign interests.
The testimony was part of the subcommittee's investigation into the extent of foreign control of American industry and whether existing laws should be changed to better identify foreign investors in U.S. companies.
Subcommittee counsel Robert Morris said the subcommittee was not ready to make any specific charges that foreign communists are quietly trying to get financial control of some American corporations. At this point, he said, the investigation is still limited to the "general practice" of foreign investments in American firms.

Police Seek Killer With 'Hairy Arms'

CHICAGO (UP) — Police hunted today for a "big, hairy-armed" man who stalked and murdered a religious spinster on Chicago's lakefront before the gaze of a helpless witness watching with binoculars.
Margaret Gallagher, 50, was savagely beaten to death Sunday when she sat reading religious literature near Lake Michigan. A hospital superintendent watched the murder through binoculars from his apartment a half-mile away.
Dr. Arthur Kirk Besley, 55, said he was scanning the boats on the lake when he noticed a man crouched behind some shrubbery near where Miss Gallagher was seated. The man appeared to be stalking the woman, for he followed her every time she changed the location of her chair.
The puzzling scene suddenly switched to one of horror when Besley saw the man leap from the bushes, wrap a shirt around the woman's head and drag her off into the shrubbery, leaving her on the beach with what appeared to be a bullet.
Besley immediately drove to the beach in his car, picking up a policeman on the way. They arrived too late, however, finding Miss Gallagher's mangled body. Her clothing had been ripped off, and police said her attacker apparently tried to molest her sexually.
A passing motorist, Halton Grant, 19, Chicago, said he saw the man stalking Miss Gallagher, and described him as "a big, hairy-armed man with a flat head and a foolish look on his face."
Both Besley and Grant said the attacker was bare-chested.

Hagerty Says V-P To Be Renominated

By RAYMOND LAHR
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON — UP — The White House renewed its support of Vice President Richard M. Nixon for renomination today in the face of a dump-Nixon campaign launched by presidential assistant Harold E. Stassen.
White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty told newsmen late this morning that he is standing firm on his previous prediction that Nixon will be renominated as Mr. Eisenhower's running mate when the GOP convention meets in San Francisco August 20.
President Eisenhower himself, on his return from Panama early this morning, went out of his way to give a warm, cordial greeting to Nixon. For Stassen, who was also in the welcoming crowd at the airport, the President had only a brief, perfunctory handshake and "hello."
Stassen threw a bombshell into the GOP political campaign late Monday by announcing he will fight to get the vice presidential nomination for Gov. Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts instead of Nixon.
The announcement touched off a whirlwind of opposition from top Republican leaders. Newsmen besieged Hagerty for official White House reaction.
No Change
Hagerty was reminded that he said recently at Gettysburg, Pa., that he has no doubt Nixon will be renominated.
Asked if he was standing firm on that prediction, Hagerty replied: "I haven't taken it back."
Hagerty refused to say anything further on the political squabble rocking the President's official family. He simply referred newsmen to a statement he made in Panama City Monday.
Hagerty said then that the President had told Stassen he could make "any statement" he wished as an individual but that he could not endorse Herter "as a member of the President's official family."
This spurred speculation that Stassen would be fired as Mr. Eisenhower's cabinet-level disarmament adviser. But Stassen himself told newsmen today that he expects to continue in his administration post.

Almost to a man, the high officials of the Republican party roundly denounced Stassen's move. Twenty GOP members of the House (See WHITE HOUSE, Page 2)

Candidate For Court Justice Visits Pampa

Judge Alton B. Chapman of Floyd County visited in Pampa today on behalf of his candidacy for Associate Justice, Court of Civil Appeals, 7th Supreme-Judicial District.
Judge Chapman, who has had 19 years experience as a district judge, told The News, "I am running on the theory that higher courts have weaknesses from the Supreme Court on down that need strengthening and one way to strengthen them is to elect men with previous judicial experience."
Chapman served as district judge in the 110th District Court, where his record on appeals is better than 98 per cent perfect, he said.
While serving as district judge in a four-county district, Chapman had county in 14 other counties for other judges, including one court in Lubbock which he served for six months while attending his own court, keeping the dockets up to date in both courts.
Several members of Chapman's family live or have lived in Pampa, he said.
W. C. "Chappie" Chapman is parts manager at Reeves Oldsmobile, he said, and Hansford Ousley, a nephew, is manager of the meat department at Ideal No. 3, the new store. Ousley's mother, Mrs. E. H. Ousley, lives at 229 N. Sumner. Chapman's mother lived in Pampa for five years previous to her death here in 1955.

Health Service Says Vaccine Is Available

By MICHAEL J. O'Neil
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 WASHINGTON (UP)—The Public Health Service announced today that 17 states have turned back nearly 2.5 million Salk polio shots because of lagging demand.

It was the biggest rejection of vaccine allotments in the history of the nationwide inoculation program. It signaled a serious slump in injections in a large part of the country.

Officials said they are doing everything they can to stimulate greater use of the vaccine where demand is lagging. They consider this particularly important with the nation heading toward the peak of the 1956 polio season.

The health service is shipping the vaccine turned back by the 17 states to other areas where the life-saving shots are in greater demand.

The states which turned back the nearly 2.5 million shots are: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, Ohio, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and West Virginia. They can apply for the vaccine later if they need it.

The health service announced the release today of 3,137,922 more shots, mostly made by Eli Lilly of Indianapolis. This boosted this year's output so far to more than 52 million shots—far more than the 30 million released in the whole of 1955.

With production booming, officials conceded that demand is spotty. In the New York, New Jersey, and New England areas, they said, it is far greater than supply. In most other areas, it is only slightly greater than supply.

There are about 45 million persons in the current priority groups—pregnant women and children up to 20 years old. There has been talk of opening the priorities up to adults in some areas.

To The People Of The 18th District
 THE PUBLIC DEBT CONTINUES TO SOAR

On June 22, 1956, the Executive Office of the President, Bureau of the Budget, in answer to a question propounded by a Member of the Congress concerning the public debt situation, gave out some very interesting information. The information being that at the end of fiscal year 1952 the national debt was 250 billion dollars. That interest on such debt was 5.9 billion dollars. This means that the American taxpayers at that time were paying, in interest alone, the staggering sum of approximately 16 million dollars every day.

This, however, is not the whole story. Because during the fiscal years since 1952 the debt has continued to move upward. At one time it moved upward to the highest point it has ever reached in the history of this nation. So high, in fact, that the Congress had to pass legislation to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to put this country into debt over and above the legal debt ceiling.

I cast my vote against granting the Secretary of the Treasury such authority. Incidentally, he still has that authority and will, no doubt, use it as soon as tax collections begin to fall off. Because of the peak tax collection period in the spring and early summer, the national debt on June 30th was down some from the record high. The Bureau of the Budget said that it was 274 billion dollars. That is an increase in the 4 years from 1952 to 1956 of 15 billions of dollars. This increase of 15 billions of dollars means an additional increase in the interest that has to be paid on the public debt. This increase in interest is 500 million dollars per year, or the additional sum each day of 1 million, 300 thousand dollars. This means that the taxpayers of this country are now paying over 17 million dollars every day that passes for interest alone on the public debt.

The Secretary of the Treasury has been doing a lot of trumpet blowing lately about balancing the budget, and you will, no doubt, hear a lot more about this in the future. Frankly, the whole fiscal picture is somewhat confusing. Yours truly was never considered an outstanding genius in the field of mathematics. However, I have employed simple arithmetic in an effort to gain enlightenment, but no matter how I figured it, borrowing more money in order to balance your budget is a very difficult way to get out of debt. Perhaps this is a new method of financing that will work fine until pay day. The Secretary of the Treasury has been advertised as a very brilliant financier. I am wondering if he has discovered some new scheme of financing that permits the borrowing of money without worrying about having to pay it back. If so, he really is a genius.

CONGRESS WASTES A WEEK
 During these last days of this season, both of the major parties have permitted a complete week to be wasted for the sake of politics. I have reference to the time that has been consumed in the debate on H. R. 627, the mis-named Civil Rights Bill. The leadership in both parties are grasping and clamoring for the credit of having passed this bill through the House. The bill was written by the Attorney General (lawyer?) Brownell, and has been repeatedly referred to in the debate as the Eisenhower Civil Rights Bill. Everyone who has read the bill recognizes it for what it really is—a loosely drawn, political Mother Hubbard intended to cover everything and touch nothing. From a Constitutional standpoint it is about as legal as murder with malice aforethought. The bill itself, coupled with the political gymnastics surrounding its presentation to the House of Representatives, is a reflection on the intelligence of every fair, honest thinking American in this country. Everyone knows that the Bill doesn't have the brightest chance of becoming law. Yet, it is brought before the House of Representatives in its closing days and employed to consume time that should be spent in handling necessary legislation.

As I have always said, our democratic form of government is unquestionably the best government conceived by the mind of man; otherwise, how would it ever stand up against such tomfoolery.

H. Gilchrist Rites Set

A former Pampa, Henry Gilchrist, 48, credit manager for Nunn Electric Company, Amarillo, was pronounced dead yesterday at 1 p.m. upon arrival at St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo, after suffering a heart attack in his office. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Gilchrist of Pampa.

Funeral services were to be held at 2 p.m. today in the Polk Street Methodist Church in Amarillo. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery, here.

Mr. Gilchrist had lived in Amarillo since 1952, moving there from Abilene. The family home is at 1501 Bonham, Amarillo. He formerly operated a letter service there.

He was a member of the Polk Street Methodist Church and the Knights of Pythias. He was born April 28, 1908, in Texola, Okla.

Mr. Gilchrist is survived by his wife, Mrs. Pauline Gilchrist of Amarillo; two sons, Bill of Midland, and Johnny of Amarillo; four uncles, Paul Crossman Sr., Spence Crossman, Oil Crossman, and George Crossman, all of Pampa; two aunts, Mrs. Horace Sanders of Pampa, and Mrs. Hazel Biggs of Amarillo; a grandmother, Mrs. Alice Crossman of Pampa; and several cousins and other relatives.

Bobby Carlton Wilhelm, 421 Crest, driving a '32 Chevrolet, was in collision with Charles Ralph Lockhart, 403 N. Sumner, driving a '33 Plymouth.

Damages to the Chevrolet were estimated at $40 and the Ford encountered damages estimated at $120.

Take Four Events

GAEVLÉ, Sweden (UP)—Touring U.S. athletes won four events in an international track meet Monday night, Desmond Koch taking the shot put with 15.92 meters (51 feet, 2 1/2 inches), Bob Whilden the 200-meter dash in 21.5 seconds, Bernel Allard the 100-meter high hurdles in 14.5 seconds, and Mike Larrabee of Southern California the 400 meters in 47.8 seconds.

Urges Time Off

As the two men parted, Mr. Eisenhower said, "Thank you very much for coming out." Nixon replied, "We'll be seeing you. Take a little time off."

Mr. Eisenhower then entered a government limousine and was driven directly to the White House.

Stassen—first member of the Eisenhower team to oppose publicly the renomination of Nixon—created a political sensation. At Pampa City Monday, While House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said after conferring with the President and without further explanation that Stassen could not endorse Herter "as a member of the President's official family."

He would not say whether this meant Stassen was on his way out of the administration.

The President also faced on his return a battle to get approval of more of his legislative program before Congress adjourns—probably by the end of the week.

The President's Legislation
 The President particularly has sought action on pending foreign aid, postal rate and civil rights legislation. The House passed the civil rights bill Monday but it is expected to die in a Senate committee. The postal bill also is believed to be dying. Foreign aid was headed toward passage, but with a lower appropriation than the President sought.

Mr. Eisenhower ended the Good Neighbor Conference Monday with a series of talks with 11 other American chiefs of state. The meetings capped talks with all 18 presidents of other American republics during the conference.

All 18 presidents expressed approval of Mr. Eisenhower's proposal to them of establishment of a new 21-nation Inter-American Committee. The committee would plan how the hemisphere's republics can promote living standards and speed the "beneficial use" of atomic energy for all.

WHITE HOUSE

 The House demanded his resignation.

Nixon told newsmen he remains "ready and willing" to run for vice president but that he is also ready to "abide by the decision" of the GOP national convention which will meet in San Francisco beginning Aug. 20.

On the question of Herter, Nixon said the governor is "a personal friend of mine of 10 years standing" and "one of the ablest public officials I'm privileged to know." If the convention nominates Herter, Nixon said, "I would give him my full support."

Herter said in Boston that his position is that "the decisive factor to be considered in the nomination of a vice president is the wish of the President."

Hall Backs Nixon
 The high command of the Republican party—led by National Chairman Leonard W. Hall—insisted that it still will be an Eisenhower-Nixon ticket in the fall campaign. They deplored the dump-Nixon movement.

Most Republicans said Nixon is Mr. Eisenhower's personal choice and that Stassen spoke out of turn. But James Reston, Washington bureau chief of the New York Times, cited a different view in a dispatch published today.

United Press correspondents around the world look ahead at the news that will make the headlines.

Pipeline
Here's the real reason behind the shift of British ambassadors in Washington, Prime Minister Anthony Eden seeks even closer relations with the next president—whichever he may be. Eden now bases his entire foreign policy on intimate Anglo-American cooperation. His pipeline to the White House is the British ambassador. So into the post goes one of his oldest, closest collaborators in Sir Harold Caccia.

Did You Get Yours?
The Internal Revenue Service will announce soon that income tax refunds reached a record $2.8 billion during the fiscal year that ended June 30. That's an average of about $90 for each of the 3.2 million taxpayers who cashed in.

Breakers Ahead
Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce faces rough sailing when she returns to her post in Rome after her present Mediterranean cruise. The bizarre "arsenic dust" affair has tended to undermine her position with the Italian newspapers and the public. Italian newsmen, especially, just don't buy the story that she was poisoned by arsenic-laced paint flakes that fell from her bedroom ceiling, and the papers are making it plain. She'll be besieged by skeptical reporters when she arrives.

Dam Jam
Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser is in one grand mess now that the United States and Britain have withdrawn their offers to finance the Aswan High Dam. His own admirers admit it. Nasser has made the dam the keystone of his domestic policy. Figures that by increasing farm output, it will really put Egypt on the map. If Nasser turns entirely to Russia for help, he may tie Egypt's economy to Moscow's for years. And Russia says now that it may not be willing to go along on the necessary scale. A billion-plus dollars is a lot of money, even in rubles.

IN THE COOL OF THE MUD—At the Cleveland, Ohio, zoo, efforts to coax three baby elephants into the pachyderm pool failed. As Frieda, an old-timer nearing 70, splashed happily in the water, the youngsters decided that mud baths were more fun, as seen above. Flopping in the mud created by Frieda's splashing, they sucked the mud up in their trunks and sprayed themselves, and rolled in it, wrestling, pushing, and shoving each other.

Jane Talk

By JANE KADINGO
Pampa News Women's Editor

JANE DIDN'T LEAVE A COLUMN for you today, and since she asked me to fill in for her, I will try to do so, although I've never written a column before. The truth is I've never been a society editor before either, so I guess it really doesn't matter.

JUST THOUGHT I'd write a few lines to let you know who has been your editor for the past week and who will be for the next two until Jane gets back from her long awaited vacation. I was glad to see Jane get a vacation and a little rest. She certainly works hard to keep you up on all the news around town, and believe me it is work.

For a little bit about myself, I'm Gwen Thurmond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Thurmond, 2001 N. Russell. My family and I lived in Letors until my graduation from high school, there in 1935. Since then I have been attending Oklahoma A&M College in Stillwater, Okla., and taking journalism, of course. I'm a native Texan, in fact, I was born in Gray County, so I'm extremely proud to be a Texan. I have a pretty hard time holding my own sometimes over there in Oklahoma, but I (with the help of other Texans) usually come out on top.

If you've noticed, you might have seen my wedding announcement in the paper recently. I will be married Aug. 25 in my home town in the Letors Methodist Church, Rev. Adcock, pastor of the First Methodist here in Pampa, will perform the ceremony.

Speaking of weddings, so many radiant young girls soon to be brides have visited The News. Miss Ramona Meadows is so excited. I met Ramona several years ago and she has always been bubbling over with energy. She surely is now that her wedding to David Hutchens is so near.

Miss Carolyn Carver is such a lovely girl. I attended her shower last Thursday night, and it was perfect. Dr. Carver was so proud, as he has a right to be.

Miss Velma Ann O'Laughlin of Miami is planning her wedding also. Ann just returned from Hawaii where I heard she had a wonderful time.

Other coeds and young ladies I've seen around town are Miss Betty Osborne, in a most unusual and pretty pink hat, made on sort of an oriental style, I believe. Miss Jerry Sloan, always smiling, who is incidentally generously working with the Intermediate Department of the First Methodist Church. Jo Tooley, in a beautiful, oriental style, dress, which I understand the former Betty Mae Osborne made for her.

Marva Su Stone, who is home from Colorado University, understand she's planning on going to Oklahoma University this next year.

Ge, this could go on and on, but I had better close here. Thank you for your co-operation and help this past week. I appreciate it very much, and I will try to do my best for you until Jane returns Aug. 6.

BABY

By BETSY WADE
NEA Staff Writer

Doctors, like most professionals in an ever-advancing field, occasionally disagree. This can be terrifying for a Baby's parents, particularly if the disagreement pertains to an operation. Best course: get a third opinion from a different source.

Liquid vitamins that come with a dropper aren't too hard to get into Baby, either with a spoon or drop by drop. Putting vitamins in the formula bottle is generally discouraged by doctors, since Baby may choose not to finish that particular bottle.

Sharp kitchen knives and scissors might as well be hung high on the wall before the Baby arrives, since it will have to be done eventually. This way, enough time is allowed to get used to the new location before things get hectic.

COOK'S NOOK

American Cheese Swoons Over Norway's Sardines

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food and Markets Editor

Something different for summer meals? Well, we sat down with Clement Grangier and asked his advice. He's executive chef of New York's deluxe Ambassador Hotel. "Nevertheless, when he cooks for himself he prefers a simple snack."

Here are two of his "summer snacks family style".

Broiled Norway Sardine Surprise (Serves 4)

Two English muffins, split, 2 (3 1/2-ounce) cans Norway sardines, 2 tomatoes, cut in half, 4 slices of American cheese, salt, pepper to taste.

On each half of muffin broil the tomato halves. Garnish broiled tomato with 6 to 8 whole Norway sardines. Top sardines with slice of American cheese. Place in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 15 minutes. Serve piping hot. Decorate with sliced green olives.

Sardine Pizza, Home Style

Four cups prepared biscuit mix, tablespoons butter or margarine,

1 1/3 cup water, 1 (3 1/2-ounce) can Norway sardines, 3 cups flour, 1 package (6 ounce) mozzarella cheese, sliced, 1 (6 1/2-ounce) can tomato sauce, 1/4 teaspoon oregano, 4 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese.

In a bowl blend together the prepared biscuit mix with the butter or margarine until the consistency of corn meal. Add the water. Mix. On a lightly floured board roll out dough into a circle (12 inches). Place on round pan (12 inches). Stretch to fit pan. Place the sliced mozzarella cheese over the dough. Spread tomato sauce mixed with oregano, over dough, leaving 1/2 inch of the dough uncovered around the edge. Arrange Norway sardines in circular pattern. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Bake in quick oven (400 degrees F.) until brown and bubbly (about 15 minutes). Serve right from the oven. Cut into wedges.

If patches of dirt on floors are hard to remove with a dry mop, rub them with fine steel wool moistened with turpentine.

Small tears in net curtains can be mended by applying a thin coat of colorless nail polish to the tear and pressing the frayed edges together with the fingers until the polish dries.

'Rock-N-Roll' Is Fun, Says Hollywood's Ginger Rogers

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Rock 'n' roll is being roasted by many grownups, but one dancing expert, Ginger Rogers, stuck up for the teen-aged fad today.

Ginger, one of the movies' most famous dancers, has done rock 'n' roll dancing herself for a movie. Her verdict: The music has a good beat, and the dancing isn't much different from the jitter-bugging that those complaining adults did as teen-agers themselves.

"I don't see anything degenerate or suggestive about it," said Ginger. "It's really like jitterbug, only with a change of rhythm and much more fun."

Ginger has danced everything from the walls to the "yams" in movie musicals since the 30's. But she got her first taste of rock 'n' roll when the script called for her to teach it to her movie "daughter" in a 20th Century-Fox drama, "Teenage Rebel" (a box office time given to the stage play, "Roomful of Roses.")

At Ginger's suggestion, the studio imported some young rock 'n' roll dancers to show her how it was done.

When I arrived on the set, Ginger was stretched out from the exhaustion of it all. She didn't look a day older than when she danced "the 9's Apple" in "Vivaque Lady."

"Those kids lanced until they were wringing wet," she said. "In their bright blazers they look like something out of the '20's. I love to watch them dance."

Rock 'n' roll has been banned in many U. S. towns because authorities thought it was "suggestive." Many dancers the youngsters throw pop bottles.

SMALL-FRY MERCHANDISING—No wasting of summer vacation time playing cowboys and Indians for nine-year-old Johnny Lemes, of Pittsburg, Kans. The enterprising youngster collected a number of vehicles and, as seen above, fixed himself up a used car lot, complete with tax service. Cheryl Chapman, eight, who lives next door, is interested in making a deal, but doesn't seem to have a trade-in.

T. C. U. Names Field Director

PORT WORTH (UP)—J. Allen Watson of Kansas City has been appointed field director for development at Texas Christian University and will have a hand in proposed expansion plans totaling many millions of dollars.

He will serve under Dr. O. James Sowell, director of Development. He will assume his post in August, coming from Cumerford, Inc., a nationally known fund-raising firm in Kansas City, Mo. He has held pastorates in Christian churches at Newcastle, Ind., and Jefferson, City, Mo.

Jacoby On Bridge

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service
Today's hand helped decide a recent team match. The losing team reacted five hearts and went down; the winners stopped at four hearts.

South had a finesse for his contract of five hearts, but the finesse lost. He had to give up a diamond and two clubs no matter how he squirmed. Down one.

At the other table the South player felt the same slam ambition when his partner raised to three hearts. He made a mild slam try by bidding three spades, intending to push forward if his partner gave him any encouragement. This was the safe way to try for a slam.

North could not afford to encourage slam ambitions. The North hand counted up to a high number of points, but it was poor for slam purposes since it contained only one ace, no king, and no singleton. Queens and doubletons are all right for games, but they are poor material for slams. Hence North bid three no-trump in response to three spades.

This bid threw cold water on the slam. South bid four hearts, and North passed. There was no problem, of course, in fulfilling the game contract.

The hand points to an important principle in slam bidding. Avoid using a Blackwood bid of four no-trump when you have a worthless doubleton in an unbid suit. With such hands, make your try for slam without going past the game. Otherwise you'll often find yourself going down one trick at five of a major suit.

HILLSDALE, Mich. (UP)—Mrs. Dale Estel lost her automobile for a few hours, but wound up with a free grease job and oil change.

Police found her car in a nearby garage. An attendant said he had mistaken Mrs. Estel's car for one he was supposed to pick up for servicing.

MERMAID—Pretty Pacific mermaid is Shirley Willy, Miss California. She flew to Long Beach to greet contestants in the Miss Universe contest, but found herself unable to walk from the plane because of her tail fins—or at least so says the press agent.

Bingo Bonds

From the frosty halls of the Kremlin to the foggy banks of the Thames the foreign bureaucrats have adopted gambling as an official device for raking in the loot.

The schemes vary with the country. But as of this moment, Great Britain, Russia, France, Belgium, Italy, Finland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Greece, not to mention Western Germany, have all embarked on a program of salting bond sales with a saline solution from the gods of chance.

With variations, this is the way the scheme works. All bonds carry a serial number. Purchasers of bonds secure, in addition to tax exempt interest, a possibility of winning a sizable chunk of cash when the government officials dip into the goldfish bowl.

For instance, in Norway, the government sells bonds of about $7.00 each. Purchasers have a chance to win one of 45 top prizes, each worth $14,000.

In Italy, $8.00 bonds sell at 97 cents each, pay tax free interest of 5 per cent annually for nine years, and there are prizes for the lucky ones ranging from $1,600 to $16,000 for each series of 200,000 bonds.

Sweden puts out a $10 bond and offers prizes up to $50,000.

In Russia, the managed masses are encouraged to put their kopeks into government. $20 bonds pay 2 per cent annually and winners of the lucky payoff get a paltry $1,250.

And Greece has the most lucrative of all. In 1954 the Greeks put out a bond issue which not only paid interest, but won prizes and was exempt from inheritance taxes; revenue received was exempt from profits tax; and loans could be made against such bonds up to 50 per cent of their face value.

The idea isn't new. British Historian G. M. Trevelyn has pointed out that this same bingo bond concept was in general vogue during the reign of good Queen Anne.

Universal success is not a necessary feature of this gimmick. While a number of bond issues have been completely subscribed in this manner, others go begging. But the idea is bound to have interesting connotations in relatively moral America.

Here, in the U.S.A., we have many complicated and overlapping laws forbidding gambling. In some places, notably Florida and California, horse racing is heavily licensed but possible. In other spots dog racing gets the green light, but horse racing does not. And California, which permits horses, frowns on dogs and is rough on pin-ball artists, poker players and roulette. And only recently the federal government got into the gambling act, at least in prohibito, by compelling all gamblers to purchase a gambling license, even when such gambling, according to other laws, was illegal.

But there will be any number of persons who will hail the European and Asiatic governmental gambling bond issues as a step in the right direction.

There is just one little factor which such persons are prone to overlook. Government is not supposed to occupy a position of productivity. Therefore, whether the government pays off in interest, or in prizes, that interest and those prizes must be collected from the taxpayers one way or another.

Money turned over to the American government, whatever the inducement, is simply poured down one or more of the thousands of economic rat-holes infesting the sacred portals on the Potomac. The only way that money can ever be repaid is through the sale of additional bonds, an increase in taxation, or both.

Our own government, as a repository of force which is used repeatedly in an aggressive manner is perhaps a fitting exponent of public gambling with its own source of money and debt, despite laws which are prohibitive.

There is one fact that must be kept in mind, however. And there is no gamble on it whatsoever. Whenever you lend money to our government, to get it back is going to cost you and the rest of us plenty.

THE NATION'S PRESS

EDUCATION AND POLITICS

(The Wall Street Journal)

We see by the papers that the labor unions are girding early for the fall political campaign. That would hardly be news except that a couple of new things are being added.

One, of course, is that this time the A.F.L. and the C.I.O. are not operating independently. With their administrative merger they are also merging their political action groups. They have formed a combined Committee on Political Education, familiarly referred to as COPE, to tell their union members, wives and cousins how to vote. And with the combined resources of the two great labor organizations they figure to have a pretty good size educational fund.

Meanwhile, the labor leaders are trying to put the brakes on the political contributions of non-union people. Just the other day Walter Reuther, president of the auto union and vice-president of the whole combine, told Congress that no person ought to be allowed to contribute more than $20 to a Presidential political campaign, nor more than $15 for just an ordinary Congressman.

This prohibition would apply with firm impartiality to union and non-union members alike. Of course—the nice-thing-about-it—from the union viewpoint is that the union does not have to rely for funds entirely on voluntary political contributions. In addition to the dollar-a-head COPE is trying to raise, the A.F.L.-C.I.O. can tap the regular dues-paid union treasuries for funds to keep its members politically informed.

The union does not have to limit itself to direct campaign contributions. It can also spend money for pamphlets and other publicity showing that Candidate So-and-so is not a friend of labor and ought to be defeated while Candidate Such-and-such is the man for the job. Naturally this would not be "politicizing"—it would be "education"—and hence not subject to the campaign limitations.

The union leaders are quite pleased with themselves: "we'll be much more effective this year," says one. Well, if they succeed in working it both ways like this, they surely could be.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOLMES

See All, Hear All And Tell All
I have been commenting and quoting for several days from "Man's Emerging Mind" by N. J. Berrill.

He has some interesting comments on the motives that cause men to try to discover the laws of nature. In other words, why men go into research. He observes:

"If I was a young man I am sure I would in any case communicate my discovery to my colleagues as soon as possible and would receive acclaim, for it is an observed form of human behavior that researchers in general must communicate or burst, once they have made any kind of exciting discovery. The two satisfactions of indulging in idle curiosity and sharing the results go hand in hand and you cannot suppress the one without dampening the other, for the hardest thing any child can do is to keep a secret and a care-free scientist is at heart more childlike than most of his more acquisitive or less fortunate compatriots."

"This comparison is not meant invidiously but it is a fact that must be accepted. A state that wants a plentiful supply of secretive scientists is like a man who wants oranges to taste like lemons, he can have one or the other but not both in the same kind. You can keep secrets of little real importance but you can't make great discoveries or reach profound understandings under conditions of secrecy for the natural state of man is to see all, hear all and tell all. If I know for myself that my urge to study the ways of simple organisms would die at once if I was convinced I could never speak or write about them to any one else—the sharing is all-important, at least in prospect."

"There is another side to all of this. If I made a discovery such as the means of human sex control now I would suppress it. I would not trust any group of human beings, whether an elect committee or the medical fraternity or the state of humanity at large to make wise use of it, even if I had faith that there would be no deliberate exploitation to serve particular ends. The basic issue however is not whether mankind would or would not be competent to make good use of knowledge placed at its disposal but whether the collective state—whether limited or all-inclusive—has a natural right to all that its constituents can contribute, or even whether aggregated but unorganized humanity has such a right. Or whether the individual has the inherent right to withhold his experience from the common pool, as distinct from avoiding exploitation for his own benefit at the expense of others. I believe he has. Unless a man has sold or given his mind and soul to a corporation, a state or a cause, he remains primarily an individual responsible for every act and in some degree for its consequences. As such he becomes his own judge and jury, and there are few more severe. Moreover while the individual may not be able to choose the best course to take, society knows there is not much choice and the most potent knowledge is broadcast long before its use for evil can be foreseen."

"Yet the spirit of science is akin to worship, for it is the effort of the mind to reach and enter into the wonder of the universe from the atom to the star and from life to thought. This is the heart of it. Some awareness of beauty, an implicit love of universal nature and joy in understanding are demanded for full satisfaction. The individual profits most if this because of its sense of self-fulfillment. And generally speaking the greatest insights come when they are sought for no ulterior motives and when self is completely submerged in what is contemplated. Without these attitudes the methods and techniques of science may still be used, particularly for reaching results of practical importance, but there are not the keys to the kingdom."

Pleasure of Accomplishment
You will note that he believed he would have great pleasure in any new scientific discovery he might make. I believe it was Andrew Mellon who contended that one of the greatest pleasures of man was the pleasure of accomplishment. And a useful thing is hardly accomplishment unless it is shared so that it benefits mankind.

I had this philosophy of life confirmed the other evening in my home. A two-year-old boy was trying to step down one step from one room to another. The first time he fell. Then he got up and did it again and again and each time he got down without falling he smiled. He showed his pleasure of accomplishment by his expression.

I believe the philosophy goes through life from childhood through the end of life—the pleasure of accomplishment. I think it is the philosophy Jesus had when he said it is more blessed to give than to receive.

If we could get more people to realize that any man who contributes anything to society more than he consumes is a benefactor to himself and to the world, we wouldn't have all the government interference that comes from believing that profit in a free-enterprise society in producing wealth is secured by impoverishing someone else. Instead of profit producing wealth, impoverishing others enriches everyone else.

Yes, the pleasure of accomplishment is one of the primary forces that develops spiritual, intellectual and material well-being.

Moscow Wants To Undermine Adenauer
WASHINGTON—While the Western Allies are occupied with problems involving their diplomatic and political footing in the Middle East and North Africa, Moscow has kept up its campaign to achieve its most important and immediate objective in the cold war. It has set out to undermine Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and to attach a united Germany to its free-wheeling war chariot.

Moscow has made several oblique and seemingly unrelated moves to this end within the last few weeks. All are designed to convince a majority of Germans, East and West, that they can become a single, strong nation again only by allying with the Russians. Only by overthrowing Adenauer in next year's election, the Kremlin makes clear, can the Germans attain this goal. Moscow also has tried to demonstrate that life under the Soviet system would not be so hard as generally credited.

As an example of the gains which the Germans might derive from cooperation, the Bulgarian-Krusheev regime withdrew Red troops from Austria more than a year ago, and set that country free. Now, there are signs that the Soviet will restore a semblance of freedom to Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, and return to Finland lands taken after the 1939-1940 war. And greater civil, economic and political liberties have been promised to the satellites, largely because of the unrest that culminated in the Poznan outbreak.

Secretary Dulles and Vice President Nixon warn that accepting aid or pledges from the Kremlin is akin to inviting a hangman's rope. Dulles denounces neutralism as "obsolete and immoral." But the fact is that the Germans are not willing to live forever in a state of suspended, political animation. They crave security, and they may replace Adenauer with a pro-Russia Chancellor next year in order to achieve it.

It is true that a Universal Military Service Act passed the Bundestag by a 270-180 vote, with 20 abstentions, and that the Upper House is expected to approve it soon. But every indication is that conscription is not popular with the people or with influential industrial interests.

There is already an acute labor shortage, which would be aggravated by formation of a 500,000-man defense force. Enlistments are appallingly low. Wages and profits are high in the country's resurgent economy, and they would suffer from rearmament expenditures. As here, the German mood is one of peace, prosperity, moderation, and, in a sense, "a plague on both your houses" attitude.

Erich Ollenhauer's Social Democrats have made gains in recent elections, and their 1954-57 platform agrees with Russia's aims. It demands a complete reversal of the Adenauer program, including withdrawal from NATO and cancellation of conscription, if it should become effective. It urges improved and normal relations with Russia, Red China and the satellites.

FOR REFLECTION
...with JAMES C. HOOVERSEN
President, Spiritual Mobilization
"Man is as ready as he is brave," says Gerald Heard. This statement, I think, bears a lot of thought.

When Moses, before his death, turned the leadership of the children of Israel over to Joshua preparatory to their entrance into the Promised Land, he exhorted them, "Be strong and of a good courage, fear not... for the Lord thy God, he it is that doth go with thee; he will not fail thee nor forsake thee."

Forty years earlier the Israelites could have possessed the land if they had had the courage to do so. But they were not ready because they were not brave—and a whole generation perished while wandering in the wilderness. "Fear not" echoes like a chorus all through the Bible from Genesis to Revelation.

Fear paralyzes. Courage energizes. Fear begets slavery. Courage invokes freedom. Man is as ready—for whatever God has in store for him—as he is brave. Let us reflect deeply upon that.

Hankering

Mac Is Using Up His Adjectives
By HENRY MCLEMORE
RHODES—You know, this hankering might very well be the reason adjectives were invented. They are the parts of speech which come to mind the moment you lay eyes on it. We haven't been here a full day yet, but already I have used two-thirds of my supply of adjectives, including enchanting, entrancing, lovely, serene, historic, imposing, peaceful, delightful, and—very important—reasonable.

Our cruise ship, the Semiramis, came here after a day's stop in Crete and I am going tonight to have it sail away, because from what I have seen of it Rhodes was designed for the likes of me. There is enough history in this, the largest of the Dodecanese islands, to interest the most industrious Rhodes scholar, and there are more than enough natural attractions to keep him from working himself to death.

In the morning a man could busy himself with the history of Rhodes, of which there is an abundant supply. After reading up on the Peloponnesian war, he could move on to the Phoenicians, the arrival of the Greeks, the Roman conquest of the place, the Byzantine period, the coming of the Knight of St. John and, coming a bit closer to modern times, the Turkish conquest, the Italian and German occupations, and, finally, Rhodes' return to Greece in 1947.

In the afternoon—or even earlier if his head began to ache from so much knowledge—a man could knock off and spread himself on one of the finest beaches in the world, or take a sail on what must be the bluest of all waters. This, in an undressed form, is what Mary and I have done since we docked. We walked the ramparts, visited the Palace of the Lord High Magistrate, climbed the acropolis, examined the spot where the Colossus of Rhodes was said to have stood, toured the Byzantine churches, walked the pleasant, shady streets, and shopped for pottery.

Then we put antiquity aside, and had lunch on the cool, windswept verandah of the Grand Hotel Des Roses, overlooking the beach. The beach was crowded, Rhodes being a favorite resort of Athenians, particularly honeymooners, but we rented a small sailboat, complete with skipper, and spent the afternoon skimming about, and swimming over the sides. The boat and skipper cost all of ninety-five cents. I climaxed the afternoon by getting a haircut, and this is the only adventure in Rhodes that I warn against. I got a haircut that I can only be described as the modern Colossus of Rhodes. It cost only the U. S. equivalent of eight cents, but for eight cents the barber cut off ten dollars worth of hair. I haven't enough left to stuff a thimble, and what little is left stands in isolated tufts. All I need to do an Indian war dance is a little paint and a hatchet.

And I'm still crying from the pain of it. The barber, who I am sure is an amateur archeologist in his spare time, used clippers on me that, even to my unknowing eyes, were definitely of the Trojan War type. They grabbed at my hair like a horse grazing, and the "ouches" I yelled in English only increased the barber's zeal.

But aside from haircuts, Rhodes is about as perfect a spot as you'll ever find.

BIRTHDAYS OF THE PRESIDENTS

By Robert C. Priebe
President, Encyclopaedia Britannica

If one resident in a family is a cause of great pride, what about two? If those two, father and son, happen to be equally brilliant, equally honest, equally fearless, what then? John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States, was the son of John Adams, the second president of America. He was every reason to be proud of those two men and the staunch old family from which they came.

John Quincy Adams was born at Braintree, Massachusetts, on July 11, 1767. No boy ever had better training for a statesman's life than he. When only 11, he went to Europe with his father, and a year's study in Paris. Two years later he attended the University of Leyden. At 14, he was with the American envoy to Russia, as his personal secretary. He graduated from Harvard at the age of 20, and three years later became a lawyer. He became well known through some clever writing on public questions, and in May 1794, Washington made him minister to the Netherlands.

In 1803, he was elected to the Senate and, in 1809, President Madison named Adams minister to Russia. In the election of 1824, Adams, Henry Clay and Andrew Jackson all wanted to be elected president in the election none of them men had a majority so the House of Representatives had to decide who was to be president. Clay disliked Jackson and did all he could to help Adams who was elected president. Until he was equal to the task of the presidency.

John Quincy Adams died literally in the service of his country. He suffered a stroke of apoplexy on the floor of the House of Representatives, February 21, 1848, and two days later he died. His final words were, "This is the last of earth. I am content."

It is sometimes puzzling to know whether certain questions submitted to this column are medical or cosmetic.

Q—Please tell me what causes dark circles under the eyes? I have been told that it is lack of sleep. Is this true?—E. E.
A—A few years ago this same question was answered by three consultants in the Journal of the American Medical Association. One of them said that persistent dark circles under the eyes is probably the result of discoloration of the eyelids as the result of thin skin, absence of fatty substances large veins.

The second said that it was the result principally of underlying veins showing through a thin skin and that this becomes more conspicuous with fatigue, probably as the result of paleness of the face.

To sum up, this condition is not really a sign of any physical abnormality and there appears to be little, if anything, which can be done for it other than the avoidance of fatigue and possibly the use of cosmetic preparations.

Q—Is it true, as I have heard, that more babies are born in the night hours than during the daytime?—J. R.
A—A recent report on this subject which was based on rather complicated statistical methods concluded that nearly 8 per cent more births occurred between two and ten in the morning than between two and ten in the evening.

In this same brief report another worker was quoted who had found that 62 per cent of the labors began between 9 p. m. and 8 a. m. I am rather unsure of this matter; I should also like to know if it is true, as I suspected when I was in medical school, that a thunderstorm has a tendency to start labor.

Q—When a boy of 16 has the mumps and they go down does he become sterile? When my husband came home last weekend he said his boss told him that no man who had had the mumps go down could possibly father a child. We have been married and have nine boys—Mrs. G.
A—I can think of no better proof than this letter that what the boss says is wrong. It is possible that if mumps involves the testicles on both sides sterility could occur but this seems to be most unusual.

Q—I am a civil service employe and my work requires me to travel in military aircraft, none of which have pressurized compartments. When I travel in this fashion it appears to aggravate attacks of stomach ulcers. What should I do?—R. H.
A—I suppose that if the planes travel high enough they could have an effect on the symptoms of a peptic ulcer. It is also possible that the emotional element is more important than anything else. This is a problem which the flight surgeon might study.

Q—Is strychnine ever prescribed by the modern physician?—A. H.
A—It is sometimes included in tonics and has some other recognized uses. I think strychnine is not prescribed as often today as it was years ago.

Lawrence Takes 14th Win As Redlegs Topple Pittsburgh

By CARL LUNDQUIST United Press Sports Writer Brooks Lawrence, the Cincinnati pitcher whose last name sounds like it should come first, was in a good spot to win 25 games today because his manager, Birdie Tebbetts, believes "last innings should come first."

Brooklyn Dodgers, 6-1, on six-hit pitching by Hank Aguirre. Dusty Rhodes hit two homers and delivered four hits in an 11-10 New York Giant victory over Detroit in the annual Hall of Fame game at Cooperstown, N.Y.

Lawrence, whose percentage record is the best in baseball, is in a spot to set a new major league mark in that department.

Monday night, Lawrence pitched two innings, giving up one hit and no runs, and was credited with his 14th victory against one defeat when Cincinnati topped Pittsburgh 4-3.

Again Shows Luck Again the big Negro right hander demonstrated that he is Cincinnati's lucky hurler.

Monday night with the "He's our lucky guy." Tebbetts said. "The 3-2 in favor of Pittsburgh, Lawrence came in and pitched two scoreless innings in relief of Art Fowler. His "luck" came through again when he went out for a pinch-hitter in the eighth and in the same inning the Redlegs scored the winning run to move within 2 1/2 games of first place Milwaukee.

Bob Thurman, subbing for right fielder Wally Post, hit a homer to tie the score in the sixth then singled to touch off the winning Redleg rally in the eighth. A sacrifice by Ray Jablonksi and a force out by Smokey Burgess, who was batting for Lawrence, put Thurman on third from which point he scored on Johnny Temple's third hit, a single.

Chicago Bomber Is Forced To Discontinue Mat Career

CHICAGO (UP)—Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber who earned so much money with his fists he owes the government more than $1 million in taxes, knew today his heart which carried him to history's longest world heavyweight title reign could stand no more.

Louis, who turned to wrestling after falling in an attempt to regain the heavyweight boxing crown, was told that an electrocardiogram showed a heart condition which will not permit him to wrestle for at least six months.

The 42-year old athlete became a grappler in an attempt to earn enough money to pay the assessment levied upon him by the federal government for alleged tax discrepancies in the war and post-war years. But now, even that avenue was closed to him.

Dr. Irving Slott, physician for the Illinois Athletic Commission, found that Louis' heart would not permit him to continue his whistle-stop campaign for comparative pennies to try and cut his personal deficit.

Slott said the former champ showed an "abnormal electrocardiogram" when he examined Louis who had applied for permission to wrestle at Round Lake, Ill.

Slott explained that the examination showed Louis had a cardiac contusion, or an injury to one of the layers of the heart.

Oilers Take Opener; Bounce San Angelo

Burke, Kroll Meet In PGA Finals Today

By LEO H. PETERSEN United Press Sports Editor CANTON, Mass. (UP)—Curly-haired Jackie Burke and dead-panned Ted Kroll—two of the greatest putters in the game—met today for the PGA golf championship at Blue Hills Country Club.

Burke, winner of the Masters last year, was a slight favorite over Kroll, a 10-year veteran of the tournament trail who never has won a major title.

Burke figured he was "just plain lucky" to be in the finals for he came back from being 5 down after 14 holes to win out over Ed Furgol, the 1954 Open sour, 1 up in an extra hole after they were all even at the end of the regulation 36-hole semi-final.

"If I'd been putting I'd have beaten him about 9 and 8," said Furgol. "But I just couldn't drop that next on that 35th hole."

"That's right," Burke agreed. "When I finally beat him, it was on the greens. This was one day when I just had to feel that sometimes it's better to be lucky than good."

Jackie, 33-year old native Texan playing out of Kiamesha Lake, N.Y., figured he was lucky in more ways than Furgol's poor putting. On one hole he hit the trees and his ball bounced back onto the fairway.

"I thought that might cool Ed off," he explained, "so I decided I'd settle to stay alive."

But when he put his second shot on, 12 feet from the pin, on the extra hole, and Furgol was 30 feet away, he changed his mind.

"When Ed missed, I decided to go for it," Jackie said. "So I was lucky, the ball dropped in and here I am in the finals."

Bill Passed

WASHINGTON (UP)—A bill authorizing a congressional appropriation of $5 million to promote the 1959 Pan-American Games in Cleveland, has been passed by Congress and sent to the White House.

SAN ANGELO — Pampa nipped San Angelo, 5-4, in a tight pitchers' duel here, Monday night to take over third place in the Southwestern League standings.

The Oilers fine right hander Hoyt Benedict settled down after a shaky start and went all the way for his ninth win. He got plenty of batting help as the Oilers dandy shortstop Joe Kretschmar singled three times and the sturdy receiver Jim Martin slammed a solo homer in the second to ignite a three run rally.

Moe Santomaro hit his 28th homer of the season to give loser Marshall Epperson an early advantage.

The Oilers scored a pair of runs in the opening frame, with two out, when Morgan reached first on an error by the Oilers player-manager Alan Cross in right field.

Santomaro then blasted out his homer over the left field fence before Benedict fanned Jeff Williams to retire the side.

The Oilers took a 3-2 lead in the second. Len Tucker led off with a double but was caught trying to steal third. Johnny Bruza fanned and Martin started the fireworks with his clout.

The Oilers scored for the last time in the fourth as Herman Charles walked and went to third when Benedict threw wild at first on an attempted pickoff.

Epperson came through again with another line drive a one-baser, this time between first and second. San Angelo threatened in the fifth, sixth and seventh but Benedict measured up to the task and got the last seven batters out in order.

Pampa drew even in the fifth with an unearned run. The Oilers second baseman Frank Kempa walked after Benedict flied out to center and stole second. Kempa took third when Colt catcher Art Bowland threw the ball into center.

Oilers In Third Spot Now; Hobbs Eight Games Ahead

Good pitching—often a rarity in the lousy Southwestern League, was the order of the night throughout most of the circuit Monday as the Oilers wrestled with the place away from San Angelo.

The Oilers beat San Angelo 5 to 4 to slip in ahead of the losers behind Hobbs and El Paso in the standings and hit the highest spot yet in a slow but steady climb from the loop cellar.

Hoyt Benedict hurled eight-hit ball for the victory, but his job was overshadowed elsewhere around the league.

Hobbs moved eight games in front of the pack as Jim Grimm stifled El Paso on three hits for a 1 to 0 victory; Carlsbad's Al Diaz gave up but six hits as Carlsbad trimmed Roswell 2 to 0 in a 90-minute speed performance, and Jack Carley gave up but three hits as Plainview nosed out Ballinger 2 to 1. In the only game played close to league normal, cellar-bound Clovis beat Midland 8 to 7 with 27 hits being collected by both teams.

The same schedule prevails again tonight with Roswell at Carlsbad, Pampa at San Angelo, Plainview at Ballinger, Hobbs at El Paso and Clovis at Midland.

Expected Here MELBOURNE, Australia (UP)—J. Lyman Bingham, executive director of the United States Olympic Committee, is expected here on a trip to inspect arrangements on Aug. 7. The Australian Olympic Committee has announced. A delegation from Red China is expected at the same time.

Alaskans Ponder 'What-Is-It?'

YAKUTAT, Alaska (UP)—Alaskans wondered today what kind of animal a huge, hairy-coated monster which has been washed up on the wind-swept shore of the Gulf of Alaska could be. The monstrous carcass was discovered on the beach 60 miles southeast of here two months ago by Earl Flemming, a veteran Alaskan guide. Conservative estimates place the size of the monster as more than 100 feet in length and 15 feet wide at its broadest visible point.

It has been suggested that the animal could be a prehistoric monster which had been encased in a nearby glacier for centuries. Witnesses said the monster's skull measures 5 1/4 feet wide. Its eye sockets are between seven and nine inches in diameter and are about 3 1/2 feet apart. Reddish-brown hair about two inches in length covers its thick hide.

Quiet Stock Market This Past Week

By ELMER C. WALZER
United Press Financial Editor
NEW YORK (UP)—American Telephone, the highest priced active stock, and Benguet Consolidated Mining, the lowest priced active stock, featured an irregularly higher, quiet stock market this past week.

Benguet churned up a tremendous activity in the Wednesday session. That day it had sales of 190,100 shares. For the whole week the issue had a turn over of 278,100 shares and helped keep the sales total respectable for the market as a whole.

The activity in Benguet which is a Philippine gold miner was said to reflect talk of nickel production in the islands which might involve Benguet.

American Telephone's claim to fame was based on much sounder terms. It fell sharply when the company unexpectedly announced a stock offering to raise $375 million for further construction as part of its $2 billion expansion in 1956. It rallied again but the force of its dip was enough to check the steady rise to new bull-market highs for the market as a whole.

Drop on Wednesday
The rise hesitated when the averages dipped on Wednesday but there was no rush to sell. Volume fell off as traders bided their time.

Sales for the week averaged 2,262,236 shares daily against a daily average of 2,271,840 shares daily a week earlier. Without the Benguet total, the daily average would have been 2,206,616 shares.

The industrial average rose 3.47 points to close the week at 514.57. Rails, still haunted by the steel strike, closed at 167.96 off 0.06. Utilities gained 0.45 to close at 69.83. Earlier in the week the utility average hit a new high since March 26, 1951.

The Standard & Poor's industrial and composite indexes hit record highs but the Dow-Jones industrial average failed to scale its former top set on April 6.

Quick Whirl in Oil
Oil shares were given a whirl, but enthusiasm for the group waned later on a warning that gasoline was being over-produced. Selected chemicals were boosted in several sessions. Isolated issues in several other groups made a good showing.

Aluminum and copper shares were given buying attention in several sessions. Highway equipments enjoyed a good market early in the week and then succumbed to profit-taking. Some buying came into insurance issues, paper stocks, and special stocks. A few specials suffered wide losses in profit-taking late in the week.

Among the wider gains were Atlas Powder, Georgia Pacific Corp., Hunt Foods, National Lead, and Stauffer Chemical, all up 6 points or more.

Maine Girl Has Lead In 'Roadeo'

By BARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—It may be bad manners to jinx a nice little girl. But the fact remains that 17-year-old Pat Leder of Portland, Me., has a head start among the kids competing here Aug. 6 to 9 in the fifth annual teenage "Roadeo."

First off, her pappy, William Ledger, has been a driving instructor in Maine high schools for the past decade. Secondly, Pat's brother Bill came out on top in the national finals last year. And thirdly, Pat was runner up to her brother in the Maine finals, losing by only one point.

The young lady from the wonderland of resorts and fine fishing—and apparently fine drivers—is one of two girls competing in the annual event. It's the first time more than one girl has reached the finals.

The second girl is Lue Knudson, of Mesa, Ariz., who has one thing up on Pat. She is exactly 11 days older.

The Roadeo is sponsored jointly by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, the American Trucking Association, the Chrysler Corp., and the Liberty Mutual Insurance Co.

Since the thing started more than a million kids have taken part in city, state and national roadeos.

"Being a sire of one, I would like to come to the defense of young girl drivers. If they have a fault, it is that they are overly cautious. When they take the time most often they don't get into any serious trouble."

Roadeo week here is a pretty grueling one. The kids go through some tough tests under the critical eyes of leading traffic safety authorities.

They must drive through downtown traffic—and if you've ever wheeled through it, you know it can be rough. They also face a psycho-physical test to reveal their reaction time in simulated traffic conditions.
