Demented Man Holds Hostages During Terror Ride

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. -UP-A demented man, who wanted police to kill him because he didn't have the nerve to commit suicide," held a priest and two policemen as hostages during a five hour ride of terror before he was overpowered Tuesday. No one was injured, however, during the ride or in a brief scuffle in which the demented man was captured on the lawn of his home in a housing project.

Joseph Madera, father of two children, telephoned the Philadelphia Daily News Monday night that he had a fight with his wife over his unemployment and that he wanted to die. He told reporter George Thompson that he didn't "have the guts" to kill himself but that he had "figured a way out."

'Cops Will Shoot Me' "I have three guns," he said. "I'm going to Reyburn Plaza and start shooting. If I hit a couple of people, the cops will shoot me.

"Come on down to the plaza and you can have the whole story." Thompson started questioning Madera on the telephone in the hope of quieting him. Madera said he had "trouble getting work" during the past two years and recently was fired from his job in a restaurant; Thompson notified police but Madera called back again and told him to "come on down to the plaza and bring along Dr. Pogal of the Philadelphia General hospital. He knows about me." "Oh, Buddy," Madera added, "bring along a priest, too."

The Rev. John J. Lynch of St. John's Church, detective Ed Witherspoon and patrolman John Brady were sent to the plaza, just across the street from city hall. As the priest and the two policemen approached, with Thompson and several reporters behind them, Madera suddenly pulled out two revolvers and fired two shots. over their heads. in-law. Patrol cars throughout the area were alerted to trail the fugitive car. Left Priest Behind

Madera ushered the three hostages in front of him to the door but returned to the car when he received no answer to the door Madera forced the two policemen back into the car and drove off, leaving Father Lynch on the sidewalk. The priest got into one of the squad cars following the fleeing auto.

Father Lynch kept talking to Madera over the police radio system as the wild ride proceeded north from the city to Langhorne in Bucks county and then east across the Burlington-Bristol bridge into New Jersey.

Thompson went to the police dispatcher's office in city hall and Madera's wife Helen, entered a patrol car outside her home to ioin Father Lynch in his pleas to the demented man.

Madera finally listened to the tearful entreaties of his wife to "please come on home, Joe, please come home." Madera finally agreed to go inside his home to "talk it over."

As Madera walked toward the door. Witherspoon lunged at him and Brady joined in the scuffle on the lawn. About 40 patrolmen and detectives hiding in the area converged and overpowered Madera.

Situation In Cyprus Is Threatening

By CHARLES M. MCCANN United Press Foreign Analyst The situation in Cyprus threatens to get even more dangerous

British Colonial Secretary Alan Lennox-Boyd went there to negotiate with Orthodox Archbishop Makarios, leader of the nationalists who want the eastern Mediterranean island handed over to Lennox-Boyd's mission, to which great importance had been attached, ended in failure.

He has returned to London. The British government plans to make a formal statement on the breakdown this week.

That will mean a real crackdown, long threatened, by the British forces under Field Marshal Bir John Harding, governor and commander in chief. He has been holding back for several weeks. During that time, hope has first waxed, then waned that a settlement might be reached. Under it, the 500,000 people of Cyprus would be given home rule. Britain would keep control of internal security But bearded Archibishop Makarios seems to be increasing his demands progressively,

Makarios wants a full amnesty for all political prisoners. Britain is willing to grant a limited one but refuses to free those convicted Makarios, who claims he speaks Greek racial stock, wants them to have a voice in the future government and legislature corresponding to their numbers.

Adenauer Forces Stronger

STUTTGART, Germany -UP -Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's Christian Democrats emerged stronger than ever Monday from elections in the large state of Baden-Wuerttemberg.

But the party's control of both the state government and the upper house (Bundesrat) of the federal government was threatened by the possibility of an opposition coa-

The Christian Democrats won 56 or the 120 seats in the state parliament in Sunday's election, six more than before. The Free Demovrats took 21 and the Socialist 36, a loss of two for each.

The voters gave the Communists a resounding defeat, taking away all four seats they held in the last parliament

The Free Democrats and the Refugee party teamed with the Christian Democrats in the last coalition government led by Christian Democrat Dr. Gebhard Mueller.

Mueller said he would try to form a new such coalition but there were reports the Free Democrats and the Socialists would form an opposition coalition together with the seven Refugee party seats to pit 64 seats against the Christian Democrats' 56.

Virginia's unassuming but incisive Senator Harry Byrd and New Hampshire's determined Senator Styles Bridges, the two leading Senatorial fiscal experts, have served notice on the Congress that 25 years of operating in the red, through depression, war, inflation, and peace, is too much.

Byrd, the mild mannered Democrat from Virginia, in announcing that he and Republican Bridges are proposing a constitutional amendment which would require every administration, by law, to submit a balanced budget every year, sums up the problem as the two see it,

"The Federal Government has operated in the rec for a quarter of a century. If the budget is balanced this year, it will be by inadvertence; federal officials underestimated revenue from last year's business boom. Expenditures are increasing.

The terrible federal debt is at or near its alltime peak, and the President has said he will ask for an extension of the $281 billion ceiling for next year.

'The Administration has brought in a budget requesting appropriation $9 billion higher than the total enacted for fiscal 1955. Unexpected balances remaining to be spent out of old appropriations, as of next July 1, are estimated at $74.6 billion. These balances, together with $66.3 billion new appropriations requested by the President, would make a total of approximately $141 billion available for expenditure by federal agencies as of the beginning of the coming fiscal year.

Once appropriations are made, for all practical purposes, the rate of expenditure from these balances cannot be controlled by Congress under present proce-

"With such a fiscal situation in view, Senator Styles Bridges, ranking minority member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and I are introducing a resolution for a constitutional amendment which would require Congress to stay in session each year until it has produced a balanced budget by reduction in expenditures, increased revenue, or both.

The amendment, of course, would make exceptions of national emergency situations, such as war.

The Senators' proposal, desirable as it sounds, isn't exactly bringing forth too many cheers from others in government. Observers report, however, that public reaction to the balanced budget amendment is generally

To become law, the suggested constitutional amendment, after being passed by Congress, would have to be ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths (36) of the States within seven years from the date of its submission

The big hurdle to adoption of the Byrd-Bridges proposal, most analysts agree, will be in getting it approved by Congress.

COURSE IN ECONOMICS (Editor, The Wall Street Journal)

At the present time I am about two-thirds of the way through my junior year at Iowa State College, following the program leading to a B. S. degree in Electrical Engineering. As a result of some of the courses I have taken so far. I've reached the conclusion that most businessmen are not aware of what is being taught in some of these courses. In particular, I am referring to the so-called "liberal arts" subjects such as Government and economics. In order to be more specific. I will confine my remarks to the particular course in economics which all engineering students at Iowa State are required to take, although the subject matter in other courses follows the same general trend. It can't be said that the student isn't warned about what the course will be like because the authors of the economic textbook used here clearly state in the foreword that they have placed least emphasis on private claims and most on the means for "serving social progress." Reading on, it soon be comes clear that the authors feel social progress can best be served by "conscious social organization," "reforming" the market and industries to make them serve the needs of the "largest number of people," by increased government responsibility, and by greater restraint on the actions of "irresponsible" private businessmen.

Starting with some of the earlier economic theories, the textbook informs the student that Adam Smith developed the formula that "put a halo of morality around naked selfishness and greed," making this rule of business "palatable and respectable;" whereas, on the other hand, the "logic of Marx's position was irrefutable.' Soon after we come to the part concerned with the 1929 depression. We learn that the New Deal had "heart as well as head," that it "championed the rights and welfare of the common man," it was a notable advance over the policies of President Hoover, and recognized that government intervention in the economy was imperative in the emergency and would be required in "numerous areas" in the future. According to the book, the best way to preserve the system of private capitalism is through steeply progressive income taxes along with the high inheritance and gift taxes, Even so, developments in Britain since the war strongly suggest that social planning will supercede the "hit-or-miss" economy which has survived in this country. The experiment in Britain ms to show that public enter-

Reader's Suggestion On Labor Problems

I am indebted to a reader for his ideas in explaining proper labor relations.

He writes me that I do not make it clear enough that I mean profit by free will of the buyer; that much of my stuff is weak in that respect. Then the reader writes:

"When any man, or collection of men, who have some service to sell and tell me that they will beat me up if I buy that service from anyone else, then I say their profit is too high, no matter how little it may be.

"In fact, wealth gained that way is not a profit - it is a conquest. A conquest by power of slaughter. "I have yet to see any headlines in the Union Labor papers, or other papers, about the General Motors stockholders beating up, or threatening to beat up, any customers of Chrysler or Ford who

I have not read all the papers. "Seems to me that the only point of difference in this Union Labor discussion is whether it is best for all concerned to get wealth by conquest, or get wealth by the

would not buy General Motors automobiles. There could have been, free exchange of services. "If Union Labor believes there are conditions when it is necessary to gain wealth by conquest, OK, then let that be the question for debate.

"I am not entirely against conquest. I am a beneficiary of the conquest of this continent from the Indians. (And a multitude of other conquests.)

"I conquest a dollar a month from my next door neighbor to pay for hauling my garbage away. He buries his garbage, uses it for fertilizer. That means not a damn thing to me. "But I don't pray to any 'One True God' to help me. I expect the 'Law of Compensation' to catch up with me, and it has in many, many ways." I am certainly glad to get the reader's method of presenting the picture of what collective bargaining and labor unions really are. We cannot have too much light shown on this subject, The Crux Of Labor Unions

What most people fail to see, and for this reason many people accept labor unions as being of benefit, is that their aim is to take away from some individuals their God-given right to use their mental faculties: their right to decide for themselves the best way in the long run to market what they produce.

It is of the utmost importance that all mankind develop his faculties as to judging relative values. If an individual is prevented from exercising these faculties by the threats of a boycott and of sabotage, he is being deprived of the ownership of his faculties. And the ownership of his faculties is an inalienable right that belongs to every human being. It is to the interest of society that every man increase his capacity in producing wealth and gaining understanding of goodwill and justice. To the degree that we do that will our standard of living and our happiness constantly increase. And since the happiness of mankind is based on individual happiness, the total happiness and the total well-being can only be increased by respecting the happiness and well-being of each individual. All history is evidence that man prospers to the degree that he satisfies his wants and profits himself by exchanging goods and services on a voluntary basis rather than on a basis of conquest, as is the aim of all labor unions.

Union labor leaders will admit that they are unable, even temporarily, to benefit their own members if they do not have a right to prevent liberty loving individuals from selling their services on a free market basis.

All Benefits I have never been able to think I any case where mankind, as a whole, was benefited that did not result from some individual selling his services for less or giving more for a given amount of reward. Nor have I ever been able to find any person who would way of materially benefiting mankind. Since all labor unions aim to prevent this method of improving mankind, the results can only be harmful rather than beneficial, as is so generally believed.

Any questions on the subject?
