Hopes For A Successful Suez Conference Dim

British, French Joint Force Is Reported

By WILLIAM SEXTON
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON (UP)—Britain and France were reported today to have agreed to form a joint Mediterranean striking force spear-headed by a massive British air-lift if action becomes necessary in the Suez Canal crisis.

Cairo reports said Egypt had called back its officers from Communist training centers to man Soviet-made submarines and other naval units.

Conference Aug. 16
The military preparations overshadowed the diplomatic preparations for a 24-nation conference here Aug. 16 to try to work out a scheme for international control by Egypt.

Indonesian, often linked with the "neutralist" bloc, announced at the Hague it was calling a preliminary conference to discuss the Suez crisis. It invited Egypt and the Colombo powers — Ceylon, India, Pakistan, Burma and Indonesia.

An Indonesian spokesman said his government hoped to hear an explanation of Egypt's stand before deciding upon the Western bid to invite the United Nations to mediate.

Speculation on Chief
French newspapers speculated the Anglo-French allied commander would be Adm. Earl Mountbatten, 56-year-old cousin of Queen Elizabeth and Britain's first sea lord. Informers said the British are sending the fighting forces of the two nations would be merged, with the staff drawn from officers of both nations.

A series of important international developments heightened fears the Aug. 16 London conference might fail to find a solution to the Suez crisis. Delays by Egypt, the Soviet Union and India in answering the invitation were important factors in this. There also was growing belief those three nations might demand that action be taken on the U.S.-owned Panama Canal.

Here were the major developments:
London — Official British sources rejected suggestions arising in Egypt that the explosive Suez dispute be referred to the United Nations. The chief argument was Egypt's defiance of the security council order to let Israel-bound ships transit the canal.

Adlai May Have Eliminated Estes

By RAYMOND LAHR

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION HEADQUARTERS, Chicago (UP)—Adlai E. Stevenson has laid down qualifications which apparently would disqualify Sen. Estes Kefauver for second place on the Democratic ticket, Stevenson campaign advisers said today.

They said that Stevenson, of course, would like to be nominated for the presidency with a running mate who would strengthen the national ticket — as Kefauver might do with some segments of voters.

But Stevenson is said to believe it is of great importance that a vice presidential nominee be an effective agent for a White House legislative program. As a lone wolf member of the Senate, Kefauver would have limited influence in that direction.

Adlai Way Ahead
Stevenson heads into the Democratic National Convention, which opens here next Monday, far in front in his race for the presidential nomination. His campaign organization jacked its estimate of his first ballot vote today to 630, only 87½ short of the majority he needs to win the nomination for a repeat campaign against President Eisenhower.

At this reading, it appears that only an unexpected trap in drafting the civil rights plank of the Democratic platform could upset Stevenson.

Gov. Averell Harriman, who is expected to fight for a tougher plank than Stevenson's support, is the 1952 nominee's only major challenger now.

The 108-member platform committee, tentatively scheduled to report to the convention Aug. 15, started a week of public hearings Monday. Former Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard recommended a farm plank to provide farm prices at 100 percent of parity through price support loans at 90 percent and other measures.

Witnesses at today's session were prepared to suggest ways of attaching the Eisenhower administration's foreign policy.

Crowd Enjoys First Night's Activities

The final performance of the Kid Pony Show and Miniature Rodeo is scheduled for 8 p. m. today at the Rodeo Grounds in Recreation Park.

Group 3, ages 11 through 13, and Group 4, ages 14 through 16, will compete in a total of 11 events. Group 3 has a choice of five events and Group 4 has a choice of six events.

The crowd at the first performance of the Kid Pony Show Monday night highly enjoyed the efforts of the youngsters to win the various events.

One of the highlights of the show was the Boys and Girls' Bull Fight for Group 1, ages 5 through 7. The kids had a job in trying to run down the calves — each of which had ribbons tied to each leg which were worth a silver dollar. Each of the contestants was successful in obtaining one of the ribbons after they had run both the calves and themselves down.

An unscheduled highlight of Monday night's performance was the wild ride of one of the girls carrying a flag in the Grand Entry. As she entered the arena the horse she was riding put on a show of its own and she had a time getting the "critter" under control.

When one of the officials of the show tried to remove her from the horse she refused and continued in the Grand Entry procession.

Winners in the Girls' Barrel Race for Group 1 were: Mary Ann Stockstill of Pampa, 1st place; Andrea Beth Garner of Reydon, Okla., 2nd place; Frances Marie Long of Wheeler, 3rd place; and Juanita Kay Miller of Groom, 4th place.

In the Group 1 Boys' Barrel Race the winners were: Jim Reeves of Pampa, 1st place; Matt Mills of Shamrock, 2nd place; Leonard Taylor of Pampa, 3rd place; and Tommy Bowers of Pampa, 4th place.

In Brinks Trial Jurors To Be Chosen

By JAMES S. GEGGIS
United Press Staff Correspondent
BOSTON (UP)—Men and women shuffled nervously outside a courtroom today waiting for possible selection as jurors who will decide the fate of eight men charged with looting the impregnable Brink's money fortress of $1,219,000.

About 100 of 2,000 prospective jurors were scheduled to be called today as the Brink's trial entered the second day. Slashing the number of indictments from 169 to 13 charging armed robbery and conspiracy was expected to speed up seating of a jury.

The middle-aged defendants accused of the spectacular Jan. 17, 1950 holdup elected to stay in a detention room during opening court arguments.

Commissioners OK Ordinance On Underpass

The City Commission this morning approved on third reading the Ordinance which authorizes the city to enter into a contract with the state of Texas and the Panhandle Santa Fe Railroad for the purpose of constructing the Hobart Street Underpass.

With the approval of the ordinance the final preparations for the beginning of the work on the underpass can be completed.

The commission also passed on third reading Ordinance 455, which dealt with the zoning of the East Fraser addition. Part of the addition is zoned as semi-commercial, and the remainder is zoned as residential.

The commissioners approved the payment of the city bills for the month of July in the amount of $16,104.07.

In other action the commissioners approved four water and sewer contracts with the Huges Development Company for water and sewer lines in the North Crest addition.

They also approved the tax contract with the Pampa Independent School District for the coming year.

Britain Will Airlift Troops To Mid-East

By WILLIAM SEXTON
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON (UP) — Hopes for a successful Suez conference dimmed today, and Britain began preparing "the biggest airlift since the Berlin blockade" to fly shock troops to desert outposts in the Middle East.

Britain also dispatched a third aircraft carrier laden with troops and equipment and sent four large tank landing craft to the Mediterranean in event amphibious operations should become necessary against the Suez Canal zone.

There are growing indications Egypt and Russia — if they should accept an invitation to the London conference — would demand that the American — Panama Canal and other international waterways be discussed at the meeting.

Sentence Is Suspended On Murder Try

Four cases were tried in the 51st District Court in Pampa Monday.

Mrs. Marvin Christine Reeves who had been charged with assault with intent to murder received a two-year probation sentence.

Mrs. Reeves was charged after she shot her husband in the hand as a result of reported family problems. She had no previous convictions and it was her decision of the court to give her the probation sentence as a result.

O. D. Kephlinger, who had been charged with forgery and the passing of checks, was given a five year probation sentence. He had pleaded guilty to the charges filed against him and had no record of previous convictions.

A charge of passing a forged instrument, recalled in a three year sentence in the state penitentiary for Thomas E. Cox, Cox, who had previously been convicted for forgery three times, pleaded guilty to the charge.

William Jackson Densmore, who was charged with indecent exposure before a minor, was sentenced to three years in the state penitentiary. He had pleaded guilty to the charge and waived a jury.

The scissors Johnson is holding is actually about 10 feet long, while the "twine" he's holding is actually a rope.

Red Cross Board Sees Swim Films

Movies of the recent water safety program sponsored here by the Red Cross were shown in the regular monthly Red Cross board meeting in Johnson's Cafe this morning.

The films, which are available for loan to interested groups, portray the program in its entirety, according to Mrs. Libby Shotwell, executive secretary of the Pampa chapter, A.R.C.

The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. J. M. Turner, who also reported that the United Fund budget committee had recommended the allocation of $11,000 for the Red Cross budget for the coming year.

The board approved a plan to serve coffee and doughnuts to inductees leaving each month, with the refreshments to be served in the Red Cross office.

The board also went on record as favoring continuing the production program for the coming year through service groups headed by Mrs. H. O. Darby. John Bradley, water safety chairman, discussed water safety with the group and the board also discussed having the water safety committee work with officials at Lake McClellan for a sabbatical summer next year at the lake. Mrs. Shotwell said.

Frank Stallings gave a report on the Dumas disaster.

There were 14 board members present and eight guests. The guests, water safety instructors and aides, were Mrs. George Hofseas, Mrs. Sam George, Mrs. Jimmy Bald, Mrs. John Hatcher, Martha Skelly, Kay Sprinkle, Sid Morris and Ruth Huff.

The next meeting will be held September 4.

Fire Damage To Two Cars Told

The automobiles of two Pampanans received similar damage from fire within one hour of each other yesterday, the Pampa fire department reported today. The causes for both are unknown.

The first call was at 8:35 p.m. to the 1200 block of North Hobart where a '55 Plymouth, belonging to A. Kirshman, was burning. The front seat was damaged and the interior smoked. The second call was at 9:30 p.m. to 834 E. Frederick, where a '49 Ford belonging to O. Jones was on fire. The damage to the car was reported as a burned front seat and a smoked interior.

U. S. Steel Announces Price Hike

PITTSBURGH (UP)—United States Steel Corporation today imposed price increases averaging $8.50 a ton to partially cover rising costs and a new three-year agreement with the United Steelworkers. Similar price increases are expected from other producers as the nation's steel mills swing into production following the five-week strike of 650,000 millworkers.

The U.S. Steel board hiked the average price of steel to about $138.50 a ton.

The increase adds about $18 to the cost of making a 1937 automobile, about $1 to the cost of a refrigerator and about four to five cents to the steel in a $25 toaster.

U.S. Steel, which accounts for about one third of the nation's steel production, said the increase "reflects the persistently rising costs with which the company is confronted—including the initial higher employment costs resulting from the new labor agreement" with the U.S.W.

(Continued from Page One) lock, which would destroy Stevenson's candidacy, by pulling out of the presidential nomination race in favor of Stevenson a week ago. The fact that his campaign headquarters continues to function here has led many Democrats to believe that he is seeking second place on the ticket, although both he and Stevenson have denied that there was any deal.

F. Joseph Donohue, who managed the Kefauver campaign before the withdrawal, sounded the drum Monday for a Stevenson-Kefauver ticket. He told a news conference that the Tennessee Democratic slate beat President Eisenhower.

However, Stevenson's reported qualifications for a running mate have generated a belief among Democrats that Sens. John F. Kennedy (Mass.) and Hubert H. Humphrey (Minn.) are the chief contenders. Either would find it easier than Kefauver to work in harness with the Democratic congressional leadership.

"Assumption Would Be 'Naive'" He said that it was "naive" on the part of the prosecution to assume that people would not be affected by what they read in the newspapers.

Smith charged the Boston press and the New York Times with printing what he termed injudicious and highly prejudicial stories making a fair trial for the defendants impossible.

Taxpayer Might Be Paying Bill After Texas Water Fight

(EDITOR'S NOTE: United Press Houston Bureau Manager John Colton has been looking into the Brazos River Authority's water conservation plans and the opposition to them. The following dispatch is the first of a five-part series.)

By JOHN COLTON
United Press Staff Correspondent
HOUSTON—UP—A hot battle is shaping up in Texas between water conservationists and private power interests and the taxpayer could wind up paying the bill.

Irrigationists, particularly rice farmers in the lower reaches of the Brazos River, are in it, too. Principally, they're afraid the price of water is going up. But the big battle is between the Brazos River Authority, a state agency charged with conserving a part of Texas' dwindling water, and the Texas Electric Service Co.

The immediate issue: The BRA proposed to build five dams on the Brazos between Possum Kingdom Reservoir above Mineral Wells and the federally-operated Whitney Dam near Waco. The cost: $181 million.

U. S. Would Buy Bonds
Financing of the plan, which includes also propositions for salt control, raising of Possum Kingdom's level 15 feet, and securing control of Whitney, would be by revenue bonds. Uncle Sam would buy $50 million of the bonds. The rest would be sold to the general public.

Sale of hydroelectric power would retire the bonds. The BRA holds the program won't cost the taxpayer a penny. Backed by a raft of engineering reports that cost more than $1 million, the BRA believes the project feasible and one answer to Texas' industrial and agricultural growth.

But irrigationists supplying municipal water and water to 600 rice farmers in Fort Bend, Brazoria, Harris and Galveston counties call the multi-dam project a "grandiose scheme."

If the dams are built, the irrigationists claim, water will be held back for power and "there won't be enough water in the lower Brazos to water a mule."

Big Price Jump
And a jump in price from a current $1 an acre-foot of water to an estimated $9 an acre-foot will automatically "put rice farming out of business," the irrigationists claim.

Power, in the voice of J. B. Thomas, Fort Worth, president of TESCO, goes much further. Thomas calls the plan "uneconomical," "untenable," "ill-conceived" and "unjustifiable."

Thomas said the annual costs of the power would be twice its value and he adds that the power companies feel that they can't sign a 50-year contract to buy the power to finance the dams.

"Who knows what 50 years will bring in atomic energy, power from the sun, and water runoff?" Thomas asks.

The BRA figures that in 50 years, the multi-dam project, supporting itself by income from power and water sales, will have completely paid for itself.

"The final gain," said Herbert S. Hulburg, Plainview publisher and president of the BRA, "is water — plenty of it for everyone."

Next: The six-dam project. . . .

Jeanne Crain, Divorce Over, Will 'Build A New Life'

By ALINE MOSBY
HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Jeanne Crain, her divorce troubles over, summed up her feelings about the ordeal today: "My soul has been seared. But now I must build a new life and forge ahead."

The beautiful red-haired star spoke for the first time out of court on the sensational break-up of her marriage to Paul Brinkman. Hollywood had billed the union as a happy one, but all the time they were smiling in those fan magazine layouts she was unhappy and troubled, she revealed.

"When I worked at MGM last winter on 'The Fastest Gun Alive' I was in such a state of conflict personally I could scarcely work," said Jeanne.

"Glenn Ford must have wondered why I was reading books on psychology and philosophy on the set. I was trying to hold myself together. I must be the kind of person who doesn't look the way she feels."

The poised yet still girlish actress sighed and added, "I've had so many problems for so long. I got to the point I couldn't sleep or eat. I've been involved with my unhappiness for seven years."

"Sometimes I still get that confused and lost feeling. But you must face what has happened — resolve things and go on from there. Paul must do that, too."

Now the one-time "little girl" star is on her own for the first time in her life — feeling as if

"I've been cut loose from my moorings and floating alone on an open sea."

"I started work when I was 16. Then I fell in love with Paul and was married. Since then I've either been working or having babies. I grew up rather late."

"Now I want to develop and reach out. There are so many interests and adventures I've never known. I want to see the world, and travel, and try to express myself in an individual way for the first time. My spirit is one of adventure."

Her first post-divorce job is to star in a drama at Universal-International studio, "The Tattered Dress." Then she plans to go to Europe early next year to travel and work in a film there.

She refuses to reflect upon whether she'll marry again, but she doesn't feel "cynical or bitter" toward the opposite sex.

"I want to get involved in good, hard work," she said eagerly. "I want to be at a studio and not think of myself. I am going to try self-discipline. In time I hope to learn about myself and my emotions. But I couldn't possibly find myself now. I can't be objective about all this."

In recent months Jeanne lost so much weight over her marital troubles her friends were worried about her. A suntan during a stay at Laguna beach makes her healthy-looking now, but she admits "during my last week at Laguna I was just miserable."

"HOW'S SHE DOING, DOC?"—Worried boxer, "Bizzy," watches with concern as Dr. Robert P. Knowles, veterinarian, demonstrates a new-type resuscitator on her feline pal at Asbury Park, N.J. Weighing only 17 ounces, the apparatus can substitute for much heavier conventional units. Device received its initial showing before some 250 veterinarians attending a symposium on small animal surgery.

Perryton Completes Contest Plans

PERRYTON — (Special) — Plans for the annual "Wheatheart of the Nation" contest and the "Miss Perryton" contest have been completed in Perryton this week with new entries in both contests.

Miss Jonaquin Cecil of Wellington is the first out-of-town entry in the Wheatheart contest. She was chosen "Miss Wellington" this spring in the annual contest of that city and she was crowned "Miss West Texas" in the contest sponsored by the Amarillo YMCA on June 30. She is a senior in Wellington high school, and is sponsored by the Wellington Chamber of Commerce.

Four new entries were received this week in the "Miss Perryton" contest bringing to ten the total number of entries in the contest. Earlier entries were Misses Gaynelle Leatherman, Linda Spence, Ruth Ann Smith, Nancy Jane Wright, Shirley Simpson and Sarah Cockrell. This week's entries are Misses Carla Sue Blackmore who will represent the Business and Professional Women's Club; Ann Portwood, representing Soothers; Jan Hess representing the Jaycees; and Betty Mahan who will represent Thurman's.

The "Miss Perryton" contest will be held August 20, with the Wheatheart contest to be held later in the week. Both "Miss Perryton" and the runner-up will compete in the Wheatheart contest.

First prize in the Wheatheart contest will be an all expense paid trip to the Fountainebleau Hotel in Miami Beach, Fla. While there she will be entertained by the Miami Beach Chamber of Commerce, and the activities will include television appearances, night club tours, deep sea fishing trips and other attractions of Miami Beach.

Bob Irby has been named as master of ceremonies for the Miss Perryton contest, and the entertainment will be provided by an entertainment committee composed of Rose Powell, Joe Erickson, Bob Irby, and Cloys Webb.

Jane Talk

By JANE KADINGO
Pampa News Women's Editor

WELL, IT'S OVER! After three weeks of having a lot of fun, doing practically no work — I helped with the dishes and did a little ironing here and there — I'm back again at my desk. That's one nice thing about a vacation. You come back feeling rested and ready to go to work again — after the first two or three days, that is.

WE PUT 4300 miles on our car and have many good times to remember. I told you mostly about our trip before we left, so I'll make my post mortem short.

Warnings from our friends that we'd probably roast in the East in July, would probably have been true other years, but not this year. There were no more than five days during our entire vacation that were sunny, and these were not always warm. We managed to get in a swimming about three times, in between the showers and too-cold weather. But it didn't dampen our spirits in the least. There, the farmers are complaining about too much rain.

In Pennsylvania, we went swimming in a park near my husband's hometown, Shamokin. The park has a marvelous amusement area with all sorts of rides for kiddies and adults, places to dance, a platform for band concerts, a model home and an enormous swimming pool with a fountain in the center. The bathroom was the cleanest I've ever been in, with the women's side boasting 1,000 lockers.

Enroute to West Point, New York, we passed through the

Feature Corduroy

By GAILE DUGAS
NEA Women's Editor
NEW YORK — (NEA) — Corduroy looks, at first glance, like anything but corduroy this fall. The same velvety feel is there but the fabric itself may be printed or plain or plaid or stripe. It's colors are vivid and unusually beautiful.

For pre-teens, with their special figure problems, designers have done wonderful things with corduroy. They've used it for ensembles and slim jumper dresses, for clothes with lines that pare down the figure and minimize a pre-teen's groan in anxiety to add a couple of years and stretch out lengthwise a bit.

Two designs in corduroy for pre-teens are: Reversible coat with plain printed corduroy on one side, solid color on the other. It's worn with matching skirt and (new for pre-teens) a cordinated blouse in gold wool jersey. This ensemble is by Johnston of Dallas.

Jumper dress with back-buttoned jacket is in a solid color with cordinated stripe. This is by Semi-Teen.

COOK'S NOOK

Get In Summer Swim—
Serve Tuna In Salads

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food and Markets Editor
In Palm Springs, California, the temperature averages about 91 degrees in mid-summer. But John Leonhardt, chef of the Tennis Club there, knows how to turn his guests' thoughts from the heat.

He gave us his refreshing recipe for Tennis Club Tuna Mousse. We've adapted it to family size for your own hot weather meals.

Tuna Mousse (6-8 servings)
One tablespoon unflavored gelatin, 1/4 cup cold water, 1/2 cup boiling water, 2 1/2 ounce cans chunk-style tuna, drained; 1 cup diced celery, 1/4 cup finely chopped green pepper, 1/4 cup finely chopped onion, 1 3-ounce package cream cheese, crumbled; 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon paprika.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Add boiling water and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Combine remaining ingredients and mix well. Add gelatin mixture and mix well. Turn into 8-inch ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold and garnish with crisp salad greens, if desired.

Stroudsburg area in Pennsylvania which suffered so much damage and loss of life from floods set off last year by hurricanes. The only signs of the disaster we saw were the bridges, very few of which have yet been replaced, and one house beside one of the bridges.

At West Point, we missed seeing a parade due to rain, but on one sunny day wandered down to the famous Trophy Point where we saw all sorts and sizes of cannons used during various wars, plus monuments to the heroes of many wars. We inspected the old cadet chapel which contains plaques in honor of war heroes, one of which merely has a date on it — no name. Can you guess which one-time hero is originally honored? Benedict Arnold! After his treason, his name was carefully removed.

We also saw the house used in the movie, "The Long Grey Line," and it looked just like it did in the movie.

The scenery was lovely! As you no doubt know, West Point over looks the Hudson River, which is beautiful. Excursion boats run up and down the river, which thrills my two-year-old nephew no end. He never fails to let you know when one is going by by screaming, "Boat! Boat!"

Our trip through New York and across Canada was uneventful, except we did see one Texas car in Canada.

During our stay at my home in Menominee, Mich., Ed Nash former Pampa News reporter, visited us for a week end. He's a reporter for the Waukegan, Ill., newspaper now. He had just finished judging a beauty contest along with four or five other bachelors, an experience he seemed to enjoy.

I think people in the East are becoming hardened to Texas travelers as we didn't get as many stares as in previous years. Our Top o' Texas Rodeo sticker caused some comment however.

While we went through customs, coming from Canada back into the United States, the customs official wanted to know what Pampa was like. We suggest the Chamber of Commerce send some literature to the customs officials at Port Huron. The idea!—Not knowing what Pampa was like!

Well, that's all you'll be hearing about our trip this year — except I did bring back some good recipes which I will pass on to you from time to time.

Everyone To Wear Leather In Autumn

All the fashion forecasts agree that America will probably be wearing more leather per man and woman this fall than in the days of Daniel Boone and Davy Crockett.

The fresh new styles in which leather will appear were revealed at the annual fall fashion preview held recently in the New York headquarters of Leather Industries of America.

Costumes ranged from middie and tapered pants for lounging to long elegant formal coats for evening wear. In between these two extremes were a host of suits and coats for casual every-day wear. Most were all-leather, but others featured combinations of leather with knits, worsteds, silk peisleys and — for cold weather — wool shearing and even furs. Fur was also used as trim on many of the more formal coats and suits.

Leather jackets were shown in Norfolk, boxy, mandarin, cocoon and Eisenhower styles many of them with zip-out interchangeable linings: one of fur and another of plaid or striped jersey or alpaca. Car coats reached to the waist or hips or appeared in traditional three-quarter or seven-eighths lengths. In the shorter versions, the boy coat seems most popular, it's double-breasted with self buttons, patch pockets and turned-back cuff, real or simulated by stitching. Long coats were straight-fronted with fullness falling from the shoulders.

Suits combined leather with tweed, cashmere or knit. They were in all colors from pastel to vivid hues with the fabric-trimmed and lined leather jacket matching or contrasting with the leather-trimmed fabric skirt.

"Cowgirl" outfits that would hardly be at home on the plains, included jeweled leather shirts and frontier pants of glimmering gold and silver kidskin.

RUTH MILLET

It's a wise woman who has a few secrets from her husband. For instance, it's much better for a wife to quietly and unobtrusively keep her weight under control than to make her diet one of her main topics of conversation. A man appreciates having a slim, trim wife. But no man cares about learning what an ordeal it is for her to stay that way.

It's also a mistake for a woman to run to her husband when she had a misunderstanding with her best friend. The friends are almost sure to make up and let bygones be bygones. But the husband may not forget the things his wife said in anger about the friends and may forever wonder how she could be through with her forever one week and back to bosom friendship the next.

A woman's beauty secrets ought to be secrets even — or maybe especially — from her husband. He is interested in the finished product, not the less-than-romantic routines that serve to accomplish the miracle.

If a woman ever had any doubts about her husband's love that, too, is best kept quiet. Whether she is sure of her husband's devotion or not, she ought to hold her head high and act as though she is. An uncertain, do-you-really-love-me attitude is most unbecoming.

Another time a woman ought to keep a secret is when her husband makes what she considers an unwise decision and, sure enough, it turns out that she was right. "I was afraid you were making a mistake" are hardly words that Rearing a child seems like a road that's all uphill. But at each difficult crest is a reward that makes parents realize Baby is worth the trouble: he learns to smile, he recognizes you, he learns to say ma-ma, he learns to kiss goodnight.

Newsletter From Congressman Rogers

To People of The 18th District: SUEZ CANAL

The controversy concerning the expropriation of the Suez Canal by Egypt is the number one international problem at the moment. I hope there will be some order out of the present confusion by the time this letter reaches you, but I am afraid that the problem is too serious under present circumstances to be settled quickly.

The news commentators and columnists have had a field day on this particular subject. Each of them seem to have different advice to Secretary of State Dulles as to how the problem should be solved. Frankly, I sympathize with Mr. Dulles on this particular issue. It is a tough one. In fact, it is the toughest one that Mr. Dulles has come up against since serving as Secretary of State. Much of the information that he has on the subject is classified and, therefore, withheld from the public on the theory that its release would prove more detrimental than beneficial to the best interests of this country. Mr. Dulles is burdened with having to make decisions on this subject matter that may well bring much criticism on him. Let us all hope that he makes the right decisions.

Some officials, writers and other analysts of foreign affairs here have taken the position that the Suez Canal issue is not primarily the responsibility of this country. Literally speaking, this might be true, because we do not own the Suez Canal Company or stock in it. But let us not be naive to the extent that we tell ourselves that the United States does not have a stake in this situation. In fact, a great deal is at stake, materially and otherwise. Many people think that the Canal would never have been seized if this country and England had provided the loan for the present Ruler of Egypt—Nasser—to construct the Aswan Dam on the Nile River. It presently appears that the Aswan Dam matter was a political chess game between this country and Britain on the one side, and Russia on the other. The U. S. British Team concluded that Russia did not intend to furnish the money for this project. They then served notice on Nasser that the money would not be available from the United States and Britain. It was generally thought that Nasser had strengthened his position of leadership with his people by selling them on the probability of the dam being built. Hence, when construction funds were denied him, his entire Administration was at stake. Some of the analysts feel that Russia did not take the position of absolute refusal of funds to Nasser, but suggested that it would be much better for the Nasser government and the people of Egypt if the Aswan Dam was financed at home. Suggesting further that the Suez Canal was located wholly within the territorial boundaries of Egypt and could well provide sufficient revenue to finance the Dam. That the end result would be ownership by Egypt of both the Canal and the Dam. Whether or not this took place is conjectural, but it is a certainty that Nasser seized the Canal and then told his people that Egypt would build the Aswan Dam and finance it by revenues from the Suez Canal.

Expropriation of property is a practice that is looked upon in the country as a crime. If our government needs private property, it proceeds to acquire the same by the exercise of the right of eminent domain. This proceeding, of course, requires the government to pay the fair value of the property taken. Such is not the case when property is expropriated. Most of you will recall the expropriation by the Mexican Government of all of its oil field just a few years ago. Whether it is legally right or wrong seems to depend upon where you happen to be at the time.

Egypt will, no doubt, use the expropriation of Arab lands in settling up the State of Israel, and the subsequent support of such action by the Western World as a precedent for her action in seizing the Canal. Also, the several actions subsequent to World War II when a certain country was permitted to expropriate and deport, not only property, but persons. Certainly two wrongs or two mistakes do not make a right, but this will not deter the peoples in these Near East countries from basing their present conduct on some of the past actions of other powers.

The entire Near East is now, and has been for a number of years, in a political revolution that must be dealt with in the most delicate manner. Especially now.

WASHINGTON SIMMERS DOWN

The adjournment of Congress has caused a calm to settle over the nation's capital that could well be called the "calm after the storm". Most of the Members are hurrying to get their office work caught up and in shape so that they can return home. I will soon be able to see the color of my desk top. It sure was piled high. As soon as this is completed and some pending committee hearings are concluded, I expect to attend the Democratic Convention in Chicago and thence home to the Panhandle.

A "Duke Box"

LONDON (UP)—The latest rage in Britain is the "Duke Box," a juke box with royal trimmings operated by a duke.

The first duke box is at Woburn Abbey, where the Duke of Bedford has opened a milk bar to help pay estate inheritance taxes. The chrome and glass duke box alone netted him $11.20 the first week.

Jacoby On Bridge

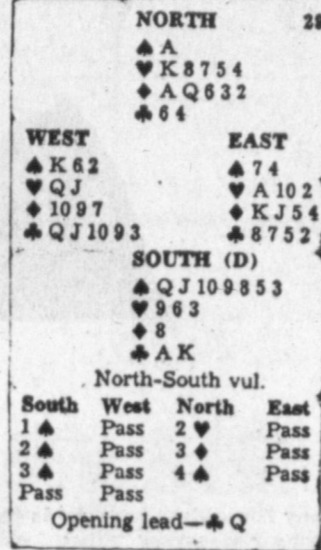

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

You've surely often deceived opponents by plays or discards from your own hand. Have you ever deceived them by the cards you've played from the dummy? It seems impossible to get a deceptive effect by the plays made from an exposed hand, but it can be done, as we'll see in today's hand.

West opened the queen of clubs, and South won with the king. Declarer led a spade to the ace, returned to the ace of clubs, and led the queen of spades.

West took the king of spades, and declarer began his campaign by discarding a small heart from the dummy. South was far more interested in Dummy's hearts than in dummy's diamonds, but he wanted to create the opposite impression.

West returned a club, and South ruffed. Declarer next led the jack of spades and discarded a second heart from dummy. East discarded his last club on the third round of spades.

South could afford to lead still another trump and to discard still another heart from the dummy. This trick gave East something to think about. He still had his original three hearts and four diamonds, while dummy had saved only two hearts but four diamonds.

Perhaps East should have sniffed the air for the aroma of red herring, but it didn't occur to him that anything was going on. East discarded the deuce of hearts, and the party was over. South led a heart and gave up two heart tricks, after which his nine of hearts was good as his vital tenth trick.

A Great Untold Story Is U. S. Welcome To Refugees

By JACK V. FOX
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK—UP—One of the great untold stories of the post-war decade is how the United States opened its arms to half a million refugees from the ashes of Europe.

It is the story of the great melting pot boiling again, of how those displaced persons found a home in a strange new land.

They settled in every state of the union. They went into almost every trade and profession. One became a millionaire within five years. Others remained impoverished. Some raised children as American as doughnuts and cider. Others clung to their own ethnic groups here and have not yet learned English.

Some went to farms, far more to cities. They found adjusting to American customs more difficult than learning the language or making a living.

Many meekly reported to police. That is what they would have done at home. Most at first avoided joining any organizations, political or otherwise. They had found that dangerous.

They were tremendously successful, for they had learned survival in the wake of Nazi and Communist armies.

The first boatload of 80 sailed past the Statue of Liberty into New York harbor on May, 20, 1946, aboard the S. S. Marine Flasher.

They were the vanguard of some 42,000 who came into the United States under President Truman's executive order of December, 1945, and the 508,180 more who entered under the Displaced Persons Act of 1948. The vast majority came from Europe, only 2,863 from Asia.

Big Polish Delegation

Immigration Department figures show the greatest number came from Poland—139,436. Others came from Germany, 68,420; Italy, 49,859; Yugoslavia, 41,700; Soviet Union, 38,241; Latvia, 36,489. Only 1,125 came from France, eight from Finland, seven from Norway. Many, regardless of the nation they left, were of German origin.

Of the total, 154,463 stayed in New York State. But they scattered across the nation—53,690 to Illinois, 34,743 to Pennsylvania, 25,004 to Michigan, 23,432 to California, 24,075 to Ohio, Nevada got only 214, Wyoming 422, Utah 428.

The United Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society made a survey of 102 on that first boat. It showed that 98 have become citizens, three Failed Again!

MILAN, Italy (UP)—An excited woman hurriedly bought a gun, ran home and pointed it at her estranged husband and pulled the trigger three times.

Nothing happened.

The quick-witted gunsmith, noting Itala Matteo's excited state as she purchased the weapon, deftly removed the firing pin from the pistol before he gave it to her.

He spoke no English and owned only the clothes he wore. Jolson settled in New York's Bronx with his wife, Anna, and began selling needles and thread door to door. He volunteered to oil and adjust sewing machines and studied their intricacies. Money was so short he and his wife lived for days on a diet of oranges and cornflakes.

Then he wrote the Necchi Sewing Machine Co. in Italy, and with $2,000 borrowed from the Hebrew society, set up an agency here. Within five years he was selling 5,000 models per month and had become a millionaire.

Super - No-Roach Rids Home Of Resistant Roaches, Ants

Many housewives have made the shocking discovery that old-fashioned roach powders and sprays no longer kill roaches the way they used to.

The reason is that some roaches have developed resistance to these poisons such as flies became immune to DDT a few years ago.

But now science has produced an entirely new roach-control product that kills resistant roaches — called Super No-Roach.

No-Roach is a white viscous substance which you apply with a brush. Within minutes it dries to form a colorless, odorless contact insecticide, that stays effective for months.

Cockroaches

Apply No-Roach to cupboard, walls, baseboards, near sink and cabinets, on pipes, and wherever you see cockroaches.

Ants

Brush No-Roach around table legs and counter tops, across window sills and door sills, and across ant trails. Ants will not cross the coating. Pour a few drops into ant hills.

No-Roach is also effective against resistant roaches, bedbugs, silverfish, waterbugs, spiders, and other crawling insects.

Common Sense Way

Remember, when you use Johnston's Super No-Roach, you don't have to move dishes, pots and pans, or breathe harmful vapors, as you must with contaminating sprays. Apply No-Roach just where you want it, the invisible coating stays effective for months.

Guard against crawling insects this common sense No-Roach way, 8 oz. 89 cents; pt. 1.89; qt. 2.98.

Backstairs Scenes At White House

By MERRIMAN SMITH
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP) — Backstairs at the White House — the Democratic being watched by the Eisenhower staff, much more, for the moment, than Stevenson or Harriman, is the former occupant of the White House, ex-President Harry S. Truman.

Some of the people around Mr. Eisenhower figure that Mr. Truman may pack a terrific punch at the Democratic nominating convention.

It was reported, but it escaped nationwide emphasis, Mr. Eisenhower was asked at his last news conference:

"Mr. Stassen was compelled to speak as an individual. Other members of the cabinet or of cabinet bank came out for Mr. Nixon. Was that because you regard Mr. Nixon as a member of the team?"

The President's answer: "Well, at that time, you remember, I mentioned Mr. Nixon myself because he was then occupying the position, and thought it was only proper and appropriate that in front of such a body as this (his news conference) that I should express my complete satisfaction with him, as I would about Mr. (Treasury Secretary) Humphrey or Mr. (Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare) Folsom or anybody else in my official family."

It would seem normally that Mr. Eisenhower threw in the names of Humphrey and Folsom merely as examples of high-type members of his administration.

Key members of the White House staff remember, however, that when the President visited Humphrey's estate in Georgia last February, a noticeable number of

Adlai Leads In Delegate Total

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION
HEADQUARTERS, Chicago (UP)—The Democratic national convention, less than a week away, sizes up today like this:
Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois has the most delegates, almost enough for a first ballot nomination.
Gov. Averell Harriman, of New York, has the hottest issues, perhaps hot enough to stop Stevenson.
Former President Harry S. Truman will become the individual with the most influence here if the Stevenson bandwagon fails to roll as expected.

Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler opened convention headquarters today, scarcely concealing his enthusiasm for:
1. Stevenson's nomination for president.
2. Adoption of a moderate harmony platform which will satisfy right and left wing Democrats on the issue of race relations.

A Truman Disciple
That's Harriman's issue. He's the 100 per cent New Deal-Fair Deal candidate in this Democratic national convention, more a disciple of Mr. Truman than of FDR. Stevenson stands for moderation. Sen Estes Kefauver, of Tennessee, stands aside.
Kefauver packs a double-barreled rifle at this party hassle. He stepped out of the presidential contest with a sturdy endorsement of Stevenson. But the senator has his eyes on the vice presidential spot. That is barrel No. 1.
Barrel No. 2 is loaded for Harry S. Truman of Independence Mo. The man who down-rated Kefauver as a presidential aspirant and the man whom the senator licked badly back there in 1952 in the New Hampshire's kick-off presidential primary. They've been a feudin' ever since.

May Have Upset Strategy
Kefauver's withdrawal last week and the shunt of his delegates toward Stevenson may have confounded the strategy Mr. Truman apparently is considering. That is to bring about a convention deadlock to stop Stevenson and, thereafter win the favored son and uncommitted delegations to the nomination of Harriman for president of the United States.
The key word from Kefauver headquarters after the senator quit was this:
"Truman will have a . . . of a time being a king-maker now."

Kefauver's handlers figured Kefauver's withdrawal had bagged the nomination for Stevenson and, maybe, that a grateful presidential nominee might give their man a nod for second place. That sounds fairly reasonable. It would be sour milk for Mr. Truman's breakfast cereal because, if he doesn't like Kefauver, he doesn't like Stevenson much, either. As a presidential candidate, that is, Mr. Truman said as much in his memoirs recently published.
They wouldn't be fishing or poker buddies, either, Stevenson and Mr. Truman, because after Stevenson was nominated four years ago he seemed to consider Mr. Truman a campaign liability, which, maybe, he was.

U. S. Bullfighters Are Defamed

MADRID, Spain, Aug. 4—UP—The current issue of the widely-read bullfight magazine, El Ruedo, says that North Americans—even cowboys from the west—could never learn the true art of bullfighting.
The magazine said they can learn the "business" of bullfighting, the practice, the customs, "but they are totally incapable of producing art in the bullring."
By way of consolation, the magazine added there are many regions of Spain which cannot produce good bullfighters either.

Lesser Of Two Evils

Politically many people are independent, with a mild leaning toward the GOP. And, for many, this leaning grew up during the days of F. D. Roosevelt, while socialism was being injected into our arms that subsidies to others might be administered under an anesthetic.

In short, these persons fled to the Republican ranks having discovered that the Democrats favored bigger and more bountiful government, despite their historic policy against such practices.

Roosevelt was in power so long that most of them began thinking of themselves as "dyed in the wool" Republicans. And out of this thinking emerged the cocoon of party solidarity. Whatever happens they are supposed to vote Republican. And not just for the top officials, either. They are supposed to vote straight party right down the line.

To any number of factotums from the pachyderm encampment we have said that there were grave misgivings about the present head of the Republican Party. But the reply, delivered virtually with the rhythm and chant of the Strophe in the Greek tragedy, was simply this: "But he is the lesser of two evils."

From the standpoint of logic this is a pretty poor answer. If the best the Republicans can offer is the "lesser of two evils" then we cannot see any reason to vote at all. Why should anyone vote for any kind of evil, comforting himself with the thought that at least he has selected the less obnoxious of a pair of villains? Why have a villain at all?

What is Mr. Eisenhower's record on foreign policy? It is a sorry continuation of the Truman aims and objectives.

What is Mr. Eisenhower's record on taxation? It out-herods Herod. Truman was a piker at spending national loot compared to Ike.

What is Mr. Eisenhower's record respecting labor extortion? It's about the same as Truman's.

What is Mr. Eisenhower's record insofar as forceful intervention in private lives is concerned. Ike has been a Cato here. He has plunged the dagger of dissension into the heart of the Southland. FEPC, which was Truman's aegis, is as nothing compared to the forced integration promulgated by the GOP head.

What about federal intrusion in our government schools? Truman tried and got a little way. Ike tried to do even more and succeeded. He has clearly shown that if he is reelected he will pursue this some socialist program.

But why enumerate further? The Eisenhower program is nothing but an enlarged carbon copy of his last two predecessors.

The GOP said that Truman was a villain. But it says that Eisenhower is the lesser of two evils. This is surely damning with faint praise. This is supposed to be a free land, inhabited by men of vision, faith and daring. We certainly hesitate to embrace the donkey. But how can we, in conscience, embrace the elephant when they both come from the same stables?

Recently Dean Clarence Manion, one of the heads of "For America," has suggested ways and means of creating a deadlock at the polls so that the election could be decided in the House of Representatives. Dean Manion, too, has reluctance to vote for the "lesser of two evils," and hopes the House will settle the matter.

We wish we could enthuse over his idea. Unfortunately, we see no solution there, either. Surely the actions of our representatives in following these some socialist schemes which lead to government dominance of our every phase of life, cause us to have grounds for speculation as to their inherent wisdom. Why depend upon their judgment here?

Let's face it. Politically speaking the American people are up a blind alley. A vote for Tweedle-dum is a vote for Tweedle-dee. And we are confident that after November a great many more patriots will see this as a fact of their contemporary existence.

Unquestionably the evils that we face today are bred of politics. But isn't it a little incongruous to expect a cure from the source of our contagion? How can government cure the evils which government has thrust upon us? By selecting the lesser of two evils? If we are to be hanged, the choice in the size of the rope becomes a matter of only academic interest.

The Doctor Says

By EDGAR P. JORDAN, M. D.

A troublesome disorder of childhood known as celiac disease has been the subject of several inquiries addressed to this column. I was always under the impression that this disease was rather rare, but not long ago a report from two pediatricians stated that they had observed 213 cases of the disease in a three-year period.

Celiac disease is an intestinal ailment. It generally occurs in a child between the ages of 6 months and 3 years but occasionally in older or younger children. Its principal characteristic is the long continued, but irregular, appearance of a characteristic type of diarrhea. There is, however, probably no single laboratory test to determine the diagnosis.

The cause of celiac disease is not entirely clear. Youngsters who have it are irritable and the symptoms are made worse by emotional upsets such as disturbances of the daily routine by travel, moving to another environment, and the like.

THIS FACTOR OF STRESS is so important that there is a question as to whether it may not be the cause rather than the result of the disease.

There appears to be a tendency in some — but possibly not all — sufferers — to overcome the condition as the child grows older. Even if this could be counted on, which is doubtful, it still is advisable to relieve the youngster not to mention the parents. Certainly, one factor is to keep the emotional stresses and strains for the youngster as low as possible. In addition, certain drugs have their place in treatment.

Probably the most important line of treatment is dietary. The two pediatricians, whose reports I mentioned earlier, hold strongly to the view that the child with celiac disease should eat only starches, such as bread, cake, toast, breakfast cereals, or cookies. They also prohibit potatoes, sugar as sweetening, or in candy, pastries, or the like. They feel also that dietary supplements containing certain vitamins are valuable in treatment.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

Business Largely Selling

The more one thinks about the job of running a business, the more one draws the conclusion that the principal job of managing a business is selling — both selling material products and selling or convincing or persuading the associates in a business certain ideas.

To be real successful one first must sell oneself. That is, he is trying to sell a product that will benefit or be profitable to the buyer. And it is pretty hard to convince oneself of the quality of a product unless it really has the merit that will profit the buyers. One cannot continue to sell anything unless both parties in a transaction have a profit.

This part of selling is pretty generally understood.

Selling Associates

The part that is not so well understood is that it is the job of the management to sell his associates ideas. And the most important idea he has to sell to his associates is to persuade them that they must have confidence in themselves and not lean or be dependent on outside persons or organizations. If an organization can get all the members in the organization to realize the importance of each individual in the organization is doing and get that person to realize that it is profitable to him and to his interests to develop his own faculties and become so valuable that if his present employer does not recognize his value, some other employer will, then that organization is in a position to grow and increase its services.

Most of the trouble in organizations is that too many individuals in it lose confidence in themselves. And when they lose confidence in themselves and want to lean on the government or the church or the labor unions or the employer to do things for him that he himself alone can do, then there is not much chance of that individual developing the organization as a whole being able to render a service to its customers that will cause business to increase.

Management must sell to its associates the idea that their best security is developing their own talents so that they can better serve others.

Respecting Rights of Others

Most business managers do not first inform themselves on the importance of respecting the natural rights of every one of his associates and then getting each one of his associates to respect the natural rights of every one of his other associates and customers and devote his energies to developing his skill and his spiritual and mental faculties.

This part of persuading (selling) is a main thing that causes private competitive enterprise to be able to increase profits for the organization and profits for their customers.

The business of businessmen is to give ideas so that their associates will be self-reliant and not lean and be dependent on the others. Elia Wheeler Wilcox expressed this idea when she said: "I gave a beggar, from my little store of wealth, some gold. He spent the shining one and came again, still cold and hungry as before. I gave a thought and found that thought of mine, he thought himself — a man supreme, fed, clothed and crowned with blessings manifold. And now he begs no more."

Selling Success

The main job of the management is to sell the idea to each of his associates that each and every one of them can be a success if we have the right idea of what success really is.

And success in life certainly does not mean producing a certain amount of wealth or gaining a given amount of understanding but in the degree that the person wills to use his faculties to gain understanding of God's or nature's eternal laws. In short, to the degree he uses the talents God or nature gave him is he a success. Thus a one-talent man can be just as successful and entitled to just as much respect as the ten-talent man can. With this idea of success, all men can be successful.

This idea of success means that time is a factor in man's emerging. That he is a part of eternity. That his personality, his soul is immortal. His influence lives on.

The management that manages best is the one who best develops his own life. The best way to sell is by example. He should try to persuade his associates to see that the by-product of this kind of success is happiness and peace of mind and greater health. That happiness is an indicator of integrity, probity, rectitude, uprightness. He should try to get his associates to see that these qualities are necessary in order for a person to have real friends. These qualities might be described as the Kingdom of God within you or in your reach.

The selling job of businessmen is the same as the lawyer, the preacher, the teacher, the editor, the doctor and the humblest worker. They all are salesmen. Life is selling.

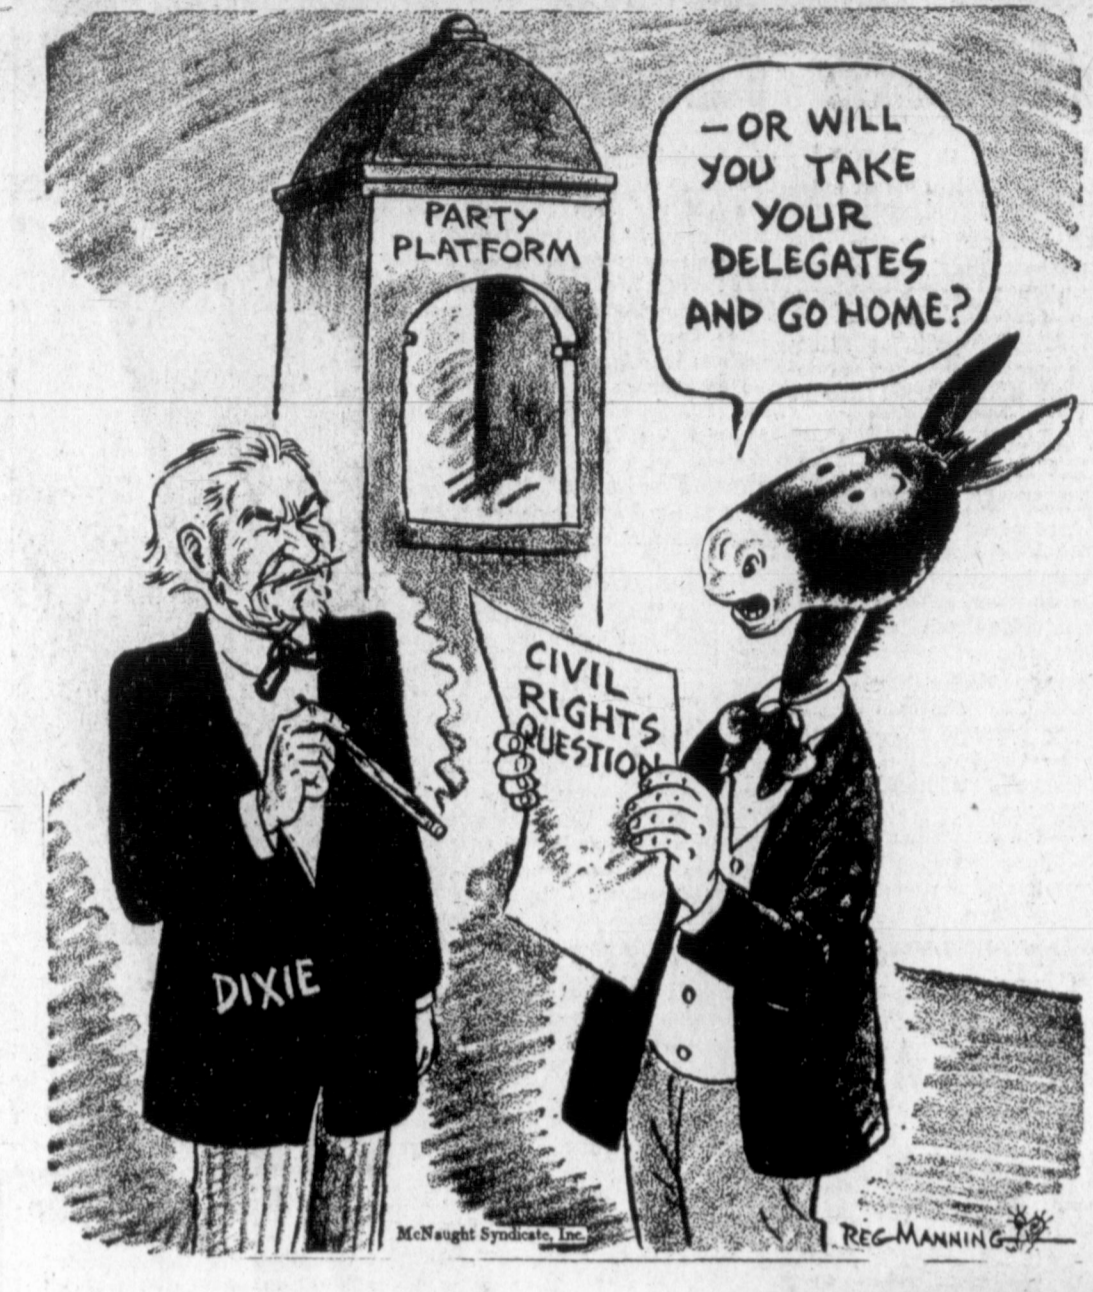

We need more good salesmen.

BID FOR A SMILE

Otto Kahn, the financier, art patron, and philanthropist once said at a dinner in New York: "Communism, fascism, and kindred movements are bound to fail. Why? Because they're based on hate, not love. 'As I understand it,' a man said to a Communist, 'the fundamental idea of communism is to make your neighbor divide up with you.'"

Always laugh heartily at your boss. You'll live longer and be giving your a loyalist test.

Oppressed Persons Are Defiant To The West

WASHINGTON — The immediate fate of the Suez Canal under Egyptian nationalization and operating control does not worry Western diplomats so much as the wild wave of pride and arrogance which Gamal Abdel Nasser's defiance has stirred among billions of so-called backward and oppressed peoples everywhere.

It may mark the end or slowdown of an era of world co-operation and mutual progress. Billions of public and private investments in raw materials essential to the West's economy and security, in war or peace, have been placed in jeopardy.

The American Congress, as well as Wall Street, will be even more reluctant to finance overseas projects necessary to nations like Egypt. Nasser has added to the unpopularity which the Point Four Program and foreign aid generally suffer from in Capitol Hill, 10 Downing Street and the Quai d'Orsay.

Nasser's seizure of this vital waterway, which was the West's winning lifeline in World Wars I and II, has been hailed by the Arab, African, Russian, Chinese Communist, Spanish and South American blocs. He did what they have long wanted to do.

If the "Napoleon of the Nile" can get away with his challenge to Britain, France and the United States, he will put strange and disturbing thoughts in the heads of all these "little peoples." It could mean the end of co-operative and benevolent "imperialism," as embodied in such humanitarian ventures as UNRRA, the Marshall Plan, Point Four and billions in private investments overseas. Nevertheless, these bread-and-butter considerations appear to be outweighed by the fierce and understandable resurgence of nationalistic sentiment which the handsome and daring Nasser has aroused.

South American nations, for instance, have never forgiven the United States for Theodore Roosevelt's role in the revolution in Panama, then a "part of Colombia," which enabled us to build the Panama Canal.

Nasser may recall that Secretary John Foster Dulles' New York law firm, Sullivan & Cromwell, an annex of the State Department in those days, worked out the strategy for the Panama revolt, prompt recognition of the new country and the construction of the Canal. If not, Khrushchev and Bulganin, who are chortling over Nasser's Suez coup, may bring the Egyptian dictator up-to-date on this provocative deal.

The Arab nations, now in league nominally, may seize Anglo-American oil fields and pipelines, which supply Western Europe with this kind of industrial energy. African countries, which are now demanding freedom from European powers — Britain, France, Holland, Belgium and Portugal — may hasten the movement by taking over key sources of food and minerals.

This country's role in the Suez and resulting crises of the kind envisaged at State is both unhappy and unfortunate. It was our refusal to finance the Aswan Dam, which Nasser has glorified into a symbol of Egyptian pride and purpose, that pressured him into the Suez seizure.

He needed a heroic and Napoleonic gesture to distract his poverty-stricken people from internal, economic miseries. Thus, we are linked with the "imperialists," very-stricken people from intent and we cannot serve as a mediator.

Moreover, if Nasser complies with the West's suggestion that the Suez questions be submitted to the United Nations, the so-called democracies might be outvoted for the first time on a problem of grave international importance.

Should the controversy not be settled satisfactorily through current negotiations before the U.N.'s fall meeting, and should the nationalistic blocs listed above vote their present convictions, they would enjoy a majority in the General Assembly.

They would be biting off their economic faces, of course, for the supply of outside funds to develop and operate nationalized canals, mines, industries and plantations, both public and private, would dry up. But it seems that they prefer to follow Nasser, and kind of revolution against the West, the days of Disraeli and Theodore Roosevelt, who won both the Suez and Panama Canals for the West, are gone.

Saying, 'Rich As Sultan' Comes Home To Mac

By HENRY McLEMORE

ISTANBUL — The expression "as rich as a Sultan" is one that I have heard all my life, but it didn't take on its real meaning until today when I paid a visit to Tokapi Saray.

Broken down into English, Tokapi Saray means Seraglio Palace, and it was within its wall that the Sultans lived for centuries in a magnificence that makes most of the other palaces I have seen seem like run-down dog houses.

Now a museum, one wing of the palace is known as the Treasury and it is aptly named. Here, in room after room, is a collection of jewels said to be the largest and most valuable in the world, and not even Miss Peggy Hopkins Joyce would deny that statement.

There are thousands of stones of every size and description. Some are just piled up like rocks, others are mounted in jewelry, some adorn fans, swords, whips, clocks and desks, and still others glisten on brocade and embroideries.

My favorite jewel of them all is one that is suspended from the canopy of the throne of Ahmed —. The throne is only ordinary as Sultan's thrones go, being in the form of an armchair decorated with tortoise shell and inlaid ivory. It looks like a camp stool alongside the Throne of Shah Ismail, which was made in Persia in the 16th century. This job is circular solid gold, decorated with rubies, emeralds and pearls, and carries a value of fifty million gold dollars.

But to get back to the throne of Ahmed, I hanging down from the canopy, just so it would swing above Ahmed's head, is an emerald about the size of a baseball — bigger if anything, and of breath-taking color. When the sun strikes it, it gives the effect of a traffic light.

One thing that struck me most about the Sultans' jewels is that these fellows didn't confine the use of their precious stones purely to articles of State. They employed diamonds, rubies, emeralds, pearls and sapphires in the making of everyday things. There's a baby's crib — Suleiman the Magnificent, I believe — that is made of solid gold and studded with precious stones as if a spray gun had been used.

Their pocket combs are alive with jewels, as are all their cups, saucers, and dishes. When they wanted to fancy up an old bedroom slipper they poked a ruby in the toe and brightened its heel with matched pearls.

The armor in which they fought shines like Cartier's window, and their gaming boards are studded with stones. Their swords are so encrusted with precious stones, that it almost would have been worth getting stabbed on the chance that a diamond and ruby might stick to your gizzard.

On the walls, vying with the jewelry for attention, are fabulous rugs, many of them of silk embroidery. These were used to protect the delicate feet of the dancing girls.

The Sultans must have been pretty big eaters, too, because the Palace has the kitchen to end all kitchens. It has an area bigger than a football field, and 1100 cooks and helpers worked in the place. That's a lot of cooks, even for a man with three or four hundred wives.

I would have liked to have been a Palace dishwasher, as the Sultans ate mostly off Ming china, of which there are some 7,000 pieces on the walls. And most of them are studded with precious stones, too.

I'm afraid our little dream kitchen at home will never look the same again.

THE NATION'S PRESS

When our reporters burrowed into the economic attitudes of different age groups, we were hardly surprised to find among the younger generation a mood of unalloyed optimism.

For a decade now the fresh college graduate or the returning GI has been greeted with the fatted calf. Business has been booming, jobs plentiful, pay steadily rising, credit easy to come by.

What has been a little bit surprising is that among the older generations too, including some of those bloodied in '29, there is a widespread confidence that all our economic troubles are in the past. There are still plenty of gun-shy oldsters, to be sure, but they are quite often dismissed, even by their contemporaries, as congenial pessimists.

This cheerful faith in an untroubled future is due in part, we suppose, to the simple fact of ten years of boom; nothing dismisses caution like success. In greater part, perhaps, it is due to the plain facts any man can see — that this is a rich and growing country which a generation from now ought to be richer yet.

But this optimism is something more than just a faith in the future. It is an attitude that embraces not merely confidence in progress but progress in one unbroken stream.

Never again a busted bubble; never, indeed, even a bumpy road. And the explanation for that attitude was neatly summed up by one of the confident youngsters. There'll never be another recession, said he, "because no Government can afford to let it happen."

There is certainly plenty of authority for the thought. Politicians have been pounding it into our heads that any economic pauses are just due to the intransigence of Governments; put the right Administration in and it will keep things booming.

The politicians have been supported by learned gentlemen who explain that it's only a matter of technique. Tuggle the Government's budget, manipulate the credit supply, massage the gross national product, and all will be well. Wages, business profits, the stock market — everything will be kept upward and upward.

Well, it would be hard to prove this isn't so. You can certainly be sure that at the first sign of any leveling off the experts in the Government will be busy with their juggling and manipulating. And it may be, after all, that they have found at last the elusive secret of perpetual economic motion.

But if so, then they have also revealed all past experience and abolished the foolishness of people. The old-timers might remember, even if the youngsters can't, that our past economic troubles were brewed by people who overextended themselves in the confident belief that it couldn't happen.

Bounced Twice By El Paso, 5-0, 6-2

EL PASO — The El Paso Oilers swept a double-header from the Pampa Oilers here Monday night, shutting out the Oilers, 5-0, in the opener, and taking the night-cap, 6-2. Both tilts were seven innings.

Mike Gazella wielded the white-wash to the Oilers in the first game, giving up only six hits while Refus McNeal making his first start after a collar-bone injury, scattered four hits to hang up his ninth win of the season in the second tilt.

El Paso pushed across single tallies in the first and second innings in the initial game, then broke loose for three additional runs in the third frame to give Gazella his 14th win of the season. Erwin Ford, Texas center-fielder, was the big man for the locals in the opening contest, getting two safeties which included a double and a triple and also drove in two runs.

Pampa picked up two bingles in the first inning of the initial frame as Felix Guzman leading off singled and went to third on single by Jim Robinette. However, Texan hurler Gazella fanned two Oilers to stop the visitors rally.

In the seventh frame, Joe Kretschmar walked to open the inning for the Oilers, but Ernie Bartolomei fanned for right-hander Bob Shipman, Guzman singled and Kretschmar held at second. Player-manager A. B. Cross popped to third and Robinette grounded out.

Pampa's errors paved the way for the Texans to win the second game. Leading 2-1, going into the fifth frame, the Oilers suddenly blew up, allowing the Texans to score four runs. Two errors one on a sure-fire double play, plus two Texan hits featured the uprising.

Game was delayed for 10 minutes in the fifth inning of the first game by a dust storm and remainder of the initial tilt and the nightcap affair was played with a strong breeze from center-field blowing towards home plate.

The double win gave the Texans a 2-1 lead in the four game series which will be concluded tonight with a single game starting at 8 p.m.

Southpaw Flinger Has Fine Control

TODAY'S SPORTFRAIT
By DAWSON OFFENHEIMER
United Press Sports Writer
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UP) — Juan (Tarin) Pizarro, 19-year-old left-handed fireball pitcher from Puerto Rico, is "one of these boys that comes along once in a life time."

That is the comment of his manager-teacher Ben Geraghty, whose Jacksonville Braves are taking giant steps toward the Class "A" South Atlantic League pennant, largely because of Pizarro's pitching.

"I'd say there are faster pitchers, even in this league," Geraghty said of the lad who left his $35 per week factory job in San Juan when Milwaukee paid a reported $25,000 to Santurce's baseball club in Puerto Rico for his contract.

"But his ball really moves. Too many good hitters in this league are swinging and missing. His ball is alive and that is what's going to make him a great big leaguer."

It's a long haul from here to Milwaukee's stadium and a chance in the big leagues, but Geraghty is confident that Pizarro will make it.

So far, young Pizarro has won 18 and lost five, although his only previous experience was a two-month hitch in Puerto Rican winter league baseball last year after he was elevated from batboy to starting pitcher.

He apparently is on his way to a new league strikout record. Pizarro has struck out 267, only 69 shy of the mark. And only four times in his 26 starts has Geraghty had to call on a relief pitcher. Of the 21 complete games he has pitched, in an early season 15-inning affair, Pizarro has gone the route 15 times in his last 16 starts, chalking up an earned run average of less than 1.90.

Pizarro, whose halting English requires the services of an interpreter for an interview, is a shy, good-looking youngster who had to have his contract approved by "my mama." He sends most of his salary home to help his mother. He has bought a new home since Puerto Rican scout Luis Olmo spotted him for the Braves.

Under the watchful eyes of Geraghty, the talented southpaw has picked up poise and confidence since the season opened.

Late in July, Pizarro, whose nickname "Tarin" is a hangover from his childhood when the neighborhood kids likened him to "Terry of Terry and the Pirates," beamed the leadoff batter in a game against Charlotte.

The youngster failed to the plate to aid his fallen rival, who was removed unconscious to a hospital. Then he proceeded to pitch 7-13 innings of hitless ball and ended the night with a three-hitter.

Geraghty called it "the greatest display of guts I've ever seen." Pizarro said: "My conscience was clear. I didn't mean to hit him. It was an accident. And I knew-I steel had a job to do and I tried to do it the best way I knew how."

Umpiring Is Not Given Much Credit

TODAY'S SPORT PARADE
(Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.)
By WARREN GILES
President, National League
(Written For The United Press)
CINCINNATI, Ohio (UP) — One of the most important facets of our game, and seemingly least appreciated, is the umpiring.

Players are the heroes of the diamond, and rightfully so. They are the attraction, central figures in the game, having the affection of their fans who come to the parks to watch them hit, run, throw, field and slide. In my book umpires are heroes too, but not in the same sense as the players, because the fans do not come to watch them perform and they do not have the affection of the fans.

Funk and Wagnall's Dictionary defines a hero as, "a man distinguished for valor, fortitude and bold courage." Umpires qualify as heroes under that definition.

Feeling Affected Judgment
In his healthy, natural partisan feeling the fan views an umpire's decision as to be not always as it is. The news cameraman's picture and television camera have added to the umpire's hazards. Pictures do not tell the correct story on decisions because much depends upon the angle at which the picture was taken and whether it was flashed a fraction of a second after a tag was made or a fraction of a second before.

A majority of fan letters reaching our office which are critical of the umpires' decisions are from those watching the game on television. The fan at the park gets real enjoyment by blowing off steam at the time of the play; those watching on TV are limited to getting it off their chest by writing the league president. One cannot get the real enjoyment of a ball game on TV and I am sure cannot umpire in his living room.

Biggest Umpire Criticism
The biggest criticism of umpires coming to my attention, is not their calling of plays but the claim they are too hasty in ejecting players from the game. Umpires in some instances are too hasty in ejecting players, but most times they are 100 per cent justified and if all the facts were known there would be less criticism.

Umpires are human, sometimes sensitive men, and being human, make mistakes, but they are courageous and impartial, trained for their job and 99 per cent of the time are in a much better position and a better (impartial) frame of mind to render an accurate decision than anyone on the field, or in the stands, or looking at a picture.

Without the great example of probity and impartiality they have set throughout the years, baseball could not possibly enjoy the high degree of public confidence it now enjoys. Without the umpire, and what he stands for, baseball could not be the great game it is.

Rookie Takes Win As Yanks Bump Red Hot Red Sox, 4-3

By MILTON RICHMAN
United Press Sports Writer
Casey Stengel, a wily old cogder who generally frowns on gambling, came up with a long shot—exactly as his Yankee players predicted he would — to halt both a six-game losing streak and talk that the Bronx Bombers might be starting to buckle.

"Leave it to old Case," said the Yankees, even while they were in the throes of their longest losing streak of the season. "He'll think of something and when he does, we'll be okay again."

Stengel did think of something, rookie pitcher Ralph Terry fresh up from Denver of the American Association, and when all the dust cleared, the youngsters picked up his first major league victory with a 4-3 decision over the red-hot Red Sox Monday night and the Yankees increased their lead to eight games in the American League race.

True, Terry needed help from relievers Tom Morgan and Tommy Byrne, but the important thing from the Yankees' viewpoint was that they were back on the right track again and old Case had called the turn on his long shot gamble.

Terry, a 20-year old right-hander brought up from the minors only last Friday, blanked Boston for the first four innings as the Yanks got to Tom Brewer for three runs in the fourth. Jerry Coleman's two-run single highlighted the frame.

The Red Sox got to Terry for a run in the fifth inning and after Jim Piersall hit a two-run homer in the sixth, Morgan relieved Terry. Byrne entered in the seventh and pitched hitless ball thereafter to nail down the victory.

In the only other American League game scheduled, right-hander Paul Foytack pitched a five-hitter in leading the Detroit Tigers to a 9-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Herb Score, Cleveland's starter, gave up single runs in the first and second innings and the Tigers made it a rout with seven runs in the eighth. Ray Boone's triple with the bases full of reliever Bob Feller was the key blow of the frame.

Cubs Edge Braves
The Chicago Cubs pushed across a run in the 11th inning on Pete Whisenant's sacrifice fly to defeat Milwaukee, 5-4, and cut the Braves' National League lead to 1 1/2 games over the idle second-place Dodgers.

Dee Fondy opened the 11th with a walk off reliever Dave Jolly, advanced to third on Walt Morry's double and came home on Whisenant's blow. Jim Davis, Chicago's third pitcher, was credited with the victory. Monte Irvin hit his 12th homer for the Cubs and Ernie Banks his 25th. Hank Aaron of the Braves extended his hitting streak to 23 consecutive games with a single in the first inning.

In the only other National League game, Alex Grammas singled home Gus Bell in the 10th inning to give the Cincinnati Reds a 7-6 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. Bell opened the 10th with his fourth straight hit, a double, and crossed after two were out on Grammas' single.

Belle also hit his 20th homer. Reliever Hersh Freeman gained his 10th victory while Larry Jackson was the loser.

North Running Power Will Meet South Aerial Attack

By ED FITE
United Press Sports Writer
LUBBOCK, Tex. (UP) — Great North running power versus the tricky pass-run option of the South shaped up today as the story of the all-star football game which will close the 24th annual Texas High School Coaches Association coaching clinic Friday.

The rival coaches—Abe Martin of Texas Christian for the North and Paul (Bear) Bryant of Texas A&M for the South—got their first glimpses at their material Monday, but their immediate reaction lent credence to the idea of run vs. pass for the game itself.

Martin lost no time working on defense against passing and at the same time polished up his own attack with San Angelo's Marvin Lassater at halfback and Midland's Ed McDaniel at fullback in the key roles.

The TCU mentor was especially high on Lassater's running prowess and almost put him in the same class with his own all-American Jim Swink.

Sledge Wins Praise
At the same time Martin praised the smooth ball handling of New London's Jackie Sledge and the passing ability of Don Meredith of Mount Vernon, indicating he may decide to use a little aerial assault of his own against a light, but speedier South line.

Bryant concentrated on instilling the intricate split-T option plays to the inside with both Tyler's Charles Milstead and Corpus Christi's Larry Duetit alternating at the "man-under" spot. Milstead looked sharp on all the option plays, while Duetit pleased taskmaster Bryant with his handling of the pitchouts to fleet Gordon Leboeuf of Fort Neches and the other South backs.

In the basketball camp, South coach Ken Loeffler of Texas A&M was rather pessimistic about his team's chances to break the domination of the North in the Thursday night cage classic.

No Hope On Rebounds
"We've got all the little men," Loeffler said, "and can't hope to match Doc Hayes' boys on rebounds or in the post. I only hope we'll be able to put up a good enough game that they won't hold up my check."

Hayes, whose Southern Methodist team won the Southwest Conference title last spring, scoffed at Loeffler's dour outlook and said he was worried about the South's speed and shifting attack that might leave his lottier, but slower, North players gasping.

Hayes admitted that on paper his tall charges, sparked by 6 foot 10 inch Pat Noakes of Fort Worth and A. C. Black, the Dallas youngster who is but an inch shorter, should be favorites.

"But, height is no good without hustle," Hayes warned and said that his squad would have to be at its peak, mentally and physically if it was to prolong the North's winning edge.

Big Turn-Out

MELBOURNE, Australia (UP) — At least 10,000 overseas spectators are expected to attend this year's Olympic Games. Lt. Gen. William Bridgeford, chief of the Games committee, predicted today.

Elks Tournament To Be Three Day Affair

The Top of Texas sport fans will have lots of good baseball in store for them when the first annual Elks semi-pro tournament gets underway Thursday. The meet will run through Saturday. The first game Thursday will start at 7 p.m. Teams entered are Perryton, Am-Jets of Amarillo Air Force Base, Rath Blackhawks of Amarillo, and host Pampa.

This is the first meet of this nature to be held in Pampa. The Elks Lodge 1573, hope they will provide the fans with good entertainment for this three day affair.

A doubleheader is scheduled for each night's action with a possible third game on Saturday night. All will be a double elimination tournament.

Games to be played Thursday and Friday will start at 7 p.m. Saturday's tilts begin at 6:30 p.m. All games will be seven innings.

If one team has a nine run lead at the end of five innings the game will be called, or if a club is leading by seven runs at the end of six frames the tilt will then be halted.

Admission will be 25 cents and 50 cents. Homer Hollars and Neve Secrest are managers of the Pampa semi-pro outfit.

Brundage Wonders What's Up

CHICAGO, Aug. 4 — UP—Army Brundage, president of the International Olympic committee, said Saturday he cannot understand the "furore" about the new anti-protest pledge for Olympic contestants which "merely asks those who are not eligible to be honest and say so."

Brundage issued a statement defending the controversial pledge which demands that an athlete swear he not only is an amateur but intends to remain one.

At the same time, however, Brundage said his committee is considering a protest by the United States Olympic committee, asking a change in the pledge.

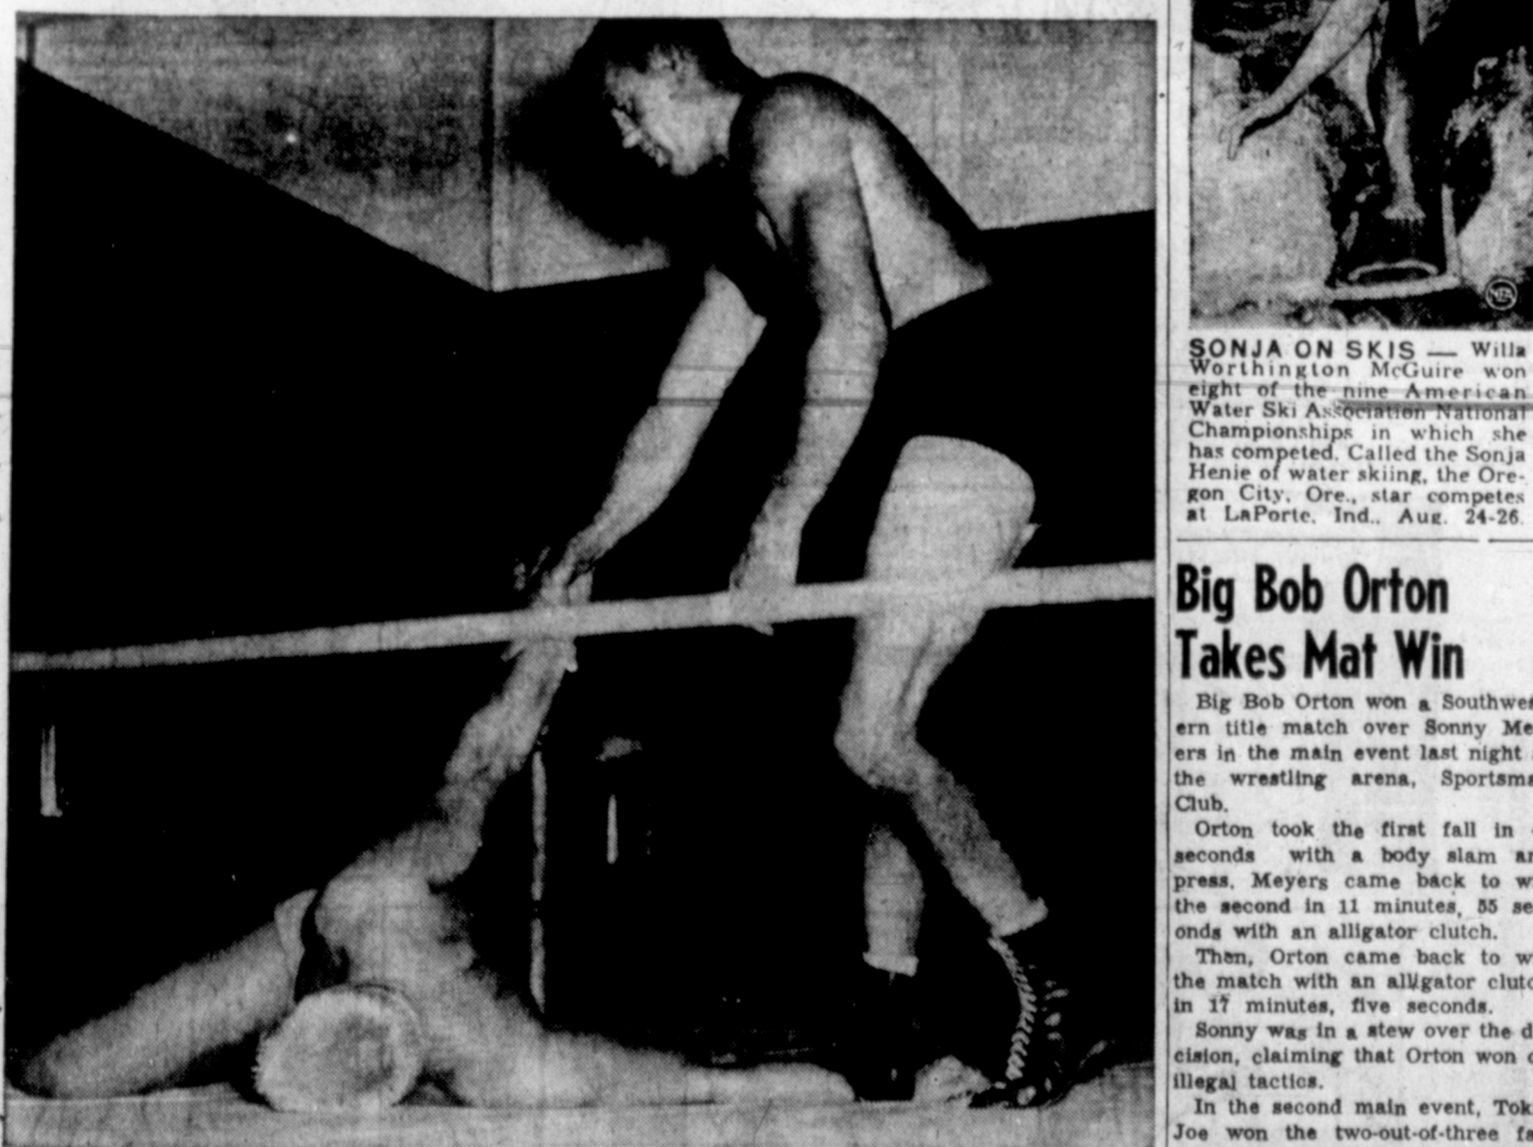

"Despite the furor about the new pledge, it involves no change in Olympic rules whatsoever. Those who intend to capitalize on their athletic fame never have been eligible for Olympic competition," Brundage said.

"That the new pledge should come as a bombshell merely indicates how far we have deviated from true amateur principles."

The pledge is aimed only at screening out athletes "who do not belong in the games," Brundage said. "We are merely asking them to be honest and say so."

The IOC president said serious criticism has been leveled at the Olympic games because of charges that non-amateurs have competed.

"Perhaps the rules have not been thoroughly understood," Brundage said. "At least they have not always been followed."

Big Bob Orton Takes Mat Win

Big Bob Orton won a Southwest title match over Sonny Myers in the main event last night at the wrestling arena, Sportsman Club.

Orton took the first fall in 45 seconds with a body slam and press. Myers came back to win the second in 11 minutes, 35 seconds with an alligator clutch.

Then, Orton came back to win the match with an alligator clutch in 17 minutes, five seconds.

Sonny was in a stew over the decision, claiming that Orton won on illegal tactics.

In the second main event, Tokio Joe won the two-out-of-three fall event with two body presses after Joe won the first with the same tactics.

Ricki Starr won the opener over Andre Drapp with a body press.

Washington Beauty Entry To Be Clothed In Slip Covers

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
The girls who compete in the Miss America thing must have a gown to wear down the ramp each night. They must have a different rig for the night they compete in talent and yet a beauty when they roll down the boardwalk in the annual parade.

The utility garment starts out with uncounted yards of tulle, with a satin bodice — or topside. After that on come the slip covers for the other ensembles. The basic garment remains on most of the time, hoops drawn out. The gown hooked on for the parade can be any color, blending with hair and figure. The one I saw was called aqua ocean spray — whatever that is.

Then comes the other slip cover — a silk organdie business on the bottom and white satin on top with phony rose petals all around. (Real flowers are against the rules.) The three-in-one gown is going to cost the tab grabber $350.

"If she really wants to," Mrs. Betts said, "a girl could build this one garment up to 13."

It would be handy, she said, for a bride who wanted to travel light, and always be properly dressed on her honeymoon.

Judith Dunkle, the Miss Washington of last year, said she wished she had known about putting everything in one or two suitcases.

"Golly me," she said, "it was a wonder they would let me on the plane. I even had a footlocker. Maybe I was born too early."

Maybe Judy was — she's all of 20 now.

TICKLISH TASK—Busy on a research job that literally could blow up in his face is Dr. Max T. Rogers, of the Michigan State University chemistry department. He's working with halogen fluoride, which some day may be used as a rocket fuel. So sensitive is this chemical that it will burn or explode on contact with water, glass or even rock. Dr. Rogers protects himself with a mask and special clothing. Complicated equipment, made of solid nickel, was especially constructed for the project.

New Hollywood Star Gets A Kick Out Of Popularity

By ALIVE MOSSBY
HOLLYWOOD — UP — At last! The tall, gangly actor has brought smiles to Hollywoodites. He's never since he left his successful New York TV and stage career to co-star with Gary Cooper in "The Friendly Persuasion," one of the year's top pictures.

The joke around the Chateau Marmont, an apartment hotel where actors usually live when they come out from New York for press and run from their fans, is that Perkins won't join the gang at beach parties unless Cooper type who is expected to be a top star by next year, is a refreshing change.

He answers his own fan mail, loves being photographed by the press, doggedly goes to all premieres and happily awaits the day when his face will be known so well he won't have any privacy.

"I think it's terrible when actors don't enjoy all this," Perkins said. "Why not be enthusiastic? Being a star can be as much fun as you want. This work can kill you if you don't enjoy it."

Perkins actually was reading his fan letters and preparing to answer them (most actors don't) when I found him in his dressing room at Paramount.

"Look at all these nice letters," enthused Perkins as he sifted through his mail. "Once after a TV show I got 650 letters in one day. It takes me a long time to answer them but I think I should.

CLOSE!—The newscamera catches a moment of high drama in the bullring at Tijuana, Mexico. A vicious lunge by the bull just missed Pat McCormick, 26-year-old lady bullfighter from Texas, the bull's horn hooking into her jacket. Pat was knocked down, but arose uninjured, killed the bull and then assisted another girl matador, Betty Ford, in her fight.

LONDON— Lt. Col. Lindsay Fawkes, commander of the British aircraft carrier, Theseus, which sailed for the Mediterranean with almost 2,000 battle-hardened paratroopers aboard:

"I cannot say where we are going, but wherever it is, it is going to be warmer than it is here."

CHICAGO— Paul Butler, Democratic national chairman who has repeatedly expressed doubt that President Eisenhower will run again, on whether he is finally reconciled to the President's seeking re-election:

"There is a possibility the President's health and disinclination to put himself on the block for the people around him may result in his not going on through after the nomination."

PORT ROYAL, S.C.— S-Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon who was sentenced to nine months at hard labor and a bad conduct discharge from the Marine Corps for leading six recruits to their deaths in a night swamp march:

"In nine months, I'll be free physically. But mentally I'll never forget those six kids — or their parents either."

RIDGECREST, N.C.— Vice President Richard M. Nixon to a religious conference on the role of religion in setting a moderate approach to race relations:

"I wonder if, in this case, the forces of religion could serve as a conciliator."

LONDON— The cook for Marilyn Monroe and new husband Arthur Miller on the couple's honeymoon bliss in England where the blonde actress is making a film:

Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Davidson, 918 E. Denver, are the parents of a boy born at 2:50 p.m. Monday, weighing 6 lb.

The girl will, of course, carry such essentials as street clothes, shoes, P. J.'s, plus some red for the lips and pins for the hair; a toothbrush, and maybe a set of phony eye lashes, but these things don't add up to much weight.

Miss Washington's three-ply garment is on the rack right now. It contains 160 yards of fluffy tulle, which weighs next to nothing.

All of this was the brainchild of a local designing team known as Jo Ro Betts and Dunham. Mrs. Betts and (Mr.) Dunham parlayed a couple of needles and baskets of material into good business. The embassy ladies are among their patrons.

Anyhow, getting back to the "slip covers" or "convertibles."
