"Your Republic will be pillaged and ravaged in the Twentieth Century just as the Roman Empire was in the Fifth Century with the difference that in the devastation of the Roman Empire the Huns and Vandals came from abroad while your barbarians will be people of your own country."

NO RACE—Giving a speedboat race effect, these cars cautiously feel their way along a highway near Lake Okechobee, Fla., after storm-born flood waters poured over central Florida. The Red Cross has set up emergency disaster headquarters and relief crews are working around the clock to divert greatest torrents of water since the 1948 hurricane.

Antibiotic Is Effective On Cancer In Mice

By MICHAEL J. O'NEILL
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—Scientists today reported the discovery of a new antibiotic which has proved effective against cancer in mice.
They warned there is no evidence yet that it will be any help in human tumors. But they said it is a hopeful new indication that the wonder drugs may some day provide man with an effective weapon against cancer.
The new antibiotic, alazoptein, was unveiled at the fourth annual symposium on antibiotics here. Several hundred experts from the United States and nine other nations are taking part in the three-day conference.

Isolated From Obscure Strain
Researchers for Lederle Laboratories, a division of the American Cyanamid Co., said alazoptein was isolated from an obscure strain of the same soil bacteria which produced established drugs like streptomycin.
Dr. James H. Williams, assistant to the director of Lederle, said the drug was found active against experimental cancer in mice. Some transplanted tumors stopped growing. Others withered away and some even disappeared.
Several other antibiotics previously have been reported to be active against mice tumors — actinomycin C, puromycin, azaserine, and something with the nickname Don.

Some Doubt 'Drugs' Help
But the jump from mice to men is a big one. The effectiveness of these drugs on human cancers has been less than conclusive. Some investigators have reported some favorable activity but others have doubted the drugs' help.
Nevertheless, Dr. Nestor Bohonos of Lederle said among all the drugs being tested a higher percentage of antibiotics are showing anti-cancer activity than are non-antibiotic compounds.
The significance of alazoptein, he said, is not that it may be effective in human patients but that it provides further evidence that antibiotics probably are a promising trail to follow in the search for the answer to cancer.

Vandals Do $2500 Damage To Farm

Vandals did approximately $2,500 worth of damage to property and machinery on the Philpott brothers farm, located about nine miles northeast of Pampa, some time Tuesday night, Sheriff Rufe Jordan reported today.
The vandalism was discovered when one of the brothers went to the field late yesterday afternoon and was reported to Jordan immediately.
The sheriff reported that the vandals had knocked over several fence posts with a motor vehicle before entering the field. While driving through the field, apparently heading for the place where considerable machinery was parked, the vandals drove their vehicle over a section harrow and the spikes caused all of the tires to blow out.
Jordan reported that evidence indicated that they then drove the vehicle on to the spot where the machinery was located. They proceeded to take tires and wheels off the machinery and place them on the vehicle. After taking the necessary tires for their use, they then pulled the valve stems of approximately 15 other tires on the remainder of the machinery.
Jordan stated that several times in recent months gasoline and oil had been taken from machinery on the farm but that this was the first report of vandalism.
He concluded by stating that he was checking clues today and that he expected to locate the vandals in the near future.

Nobel Prize Split By Three

By FREDERICK LAUDON
United Press Staff Correspondent
STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UP)—A German doctor who discovered a new method of diagnosing heart and pulmonary ailments and two American physicians who brought the method to a high state of perfection were jointly awarded the 1956 Nobel Prize for medicine today.
Prof. Dickinson W. Richards, 60-year-old professor of medicine at Columbia University, French-born Dr. Andre Courmand, 61, his associate for 25 years at Columbia, and Germany's 52-year-old Dr. Werner Forssman, shared the $38,633 prize.
Their method involves catheterization of the heart — the slipping into the heart of a tube which permits study of the internal conditions and enhances the value of diagnosis. The medical profession has called it a milestone of medical progress.
He Experimented on Self Forssman evolved the method as a young doctor in Berlin in 1929. His colleagues at Eberswaide surgical clinic failed to support him in his research and he experimented on himself.

He slipped an oiled tube into his arm, pushed it through a vein up through the arm and into his heart. And with the tube still there he walked up two flights of stairs to the X-ray department of the clinic to prove his point.
Still his colleagues offered nothing but criticism and the discouraged Forssman turned his attention to urology.
His discovery caused a stir in the United States and Courmand and Richards continued his work. Dr. Robert Loeb, executive officer of the Department of Medicine at Columbia, said their contributions were of "outstanding importance."
The catheterization method has extended "immeasurably" the knowledge of the behavior of the heart and circulation in health and disease, Loeb said. It has made possible the selection of patients with heart disease who may be expected to be improved by surgery.

Republicans, Demos In Personal Attacks

He'll Boost For Ike Shivers Puts New Smoke In Texas Political Fires

By UNITED PRESS
Texas Gov. Allan Shivers, back from an Alaskan bear-hunting trip, added new fire to the political fires today by announcing he would make an all-out effort to get President Eisenhower re-elected and that he wouldn't call a special general election for Nov. 6.
The governor's statement left up in the air just when Texas would get a new senator to replace Price Daniel, Democratic nominee for governor.
Shivers, who broke with the Democrats to back Eisenhower in 1952 and led Texas into the Republican column, said he would make a series of speeches over Texas and also in other states "and do everything else" to contribute to the re-election of the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket.

other to Price Daniel and Texas" on the tidelands question. He said in "Minnesota, just last March, Stevenson called the return of the tidelands to Texas "the big giveaway of natural resources." Gull also said Stevenson is "on a road of folly and inconsistency" in other vital issues, including the hydrogen bomb and right-to-work laws.
"Sen. John J. Sparkman of Alabama, one of a fleet of senators invited to appear in Texas on behalf of the Democratic ticket, appeared at the University of Texas to answer an address made last week by Sen. John Bricker of Ohio. He was challenged by Weldon Hart, co-director of the Democrats for Eisenhower in Texas, to explain why he voted against the tidelands bill.

3. Rep. Homer Thornberry (D-Tex.), in a radio talk from Austin, said Texans have found themselves "ignored, neglected, humiliated at every turn" in four years of Republican administration. He put much of the blame on Jack Porter of Houston, Republican national committeeman, whom Thornberry said "has proved himself to be highly inept as the Texas spokesman" in Washington.

Campaigners Also Hammer Away At Regional Issues

By United
Touring Republicans and Democrat standard bearers stepped up personal attacks and hammered away at regional issues today in major campaign swings through New England, the Midwest and the Far West.
President Eisenhower charged Adlai Stevenson with "half truth," and "hit and run" statements in a speech in Seattle Wednesday night. He also lashed back again at the Democratic presidential nominee's proposal to end H-bomb tests.
Stevenson, using some of the sharpest language of his campaign denounced Vice President Richard M. Nixon as a shifty exponent of expediency and man of many faces in Flint, Mich.
Adlai Called Gloom Peddler
Nixon termed Stevenson a peddler of "gloom and doom" who is "selling our economy short" in a speech prepared for delivery today in Providence, R. I.
Sen. Estes Kefauver, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, accused Mr. Eisenhower of forcing down farm prices and jacking up interest rates to benefit big business in a speech prepared for delivery today in Joplin, Mo.
The President, touring the Pacific Coast, pledged in a speech prepared for delivery in Tacoma, Wash., today to press for congressional approval early next year of his $4 billion school construction program.
He Wants Speedup
He said he would ask that the school construction program be carried out in four years, instead of five as originally planned. The program was blocked in Congress this year after a segregation rider was attached to the bill.
The President also attacked Stevenson on his proposal to stop all hydrogen bomb tests in a speech to a crowd of about 13,000 in Seattle.
Mr. Eisenhower said peaceful uses of the atom are the main objective of his administration.
We'll Stay Strong
"We simply refuse to do it all alone," he said. "Until others do it with us, we are going to stay strong."
The President also earlier directed that top administration aides prepare a detailed reply to what the White House called "rather extraordinarily incorrect statements" of Stevenson to halt the nuclear tests.
Stevenson moved today into Ohio and attacked the GOP farm policies, General Motors in particular and big business generally. He compared what he called the plight of the farmer with the protection which he said was afforded to General Motors by the administration.
Farmer Treated Shabbily
"The administration has treated the farmer like a poor and troublesome relation," he said in a speech prepared for delivery in Akron.
Stevenson re-applied the label of "Cadillac cabinet" on the men around the President and said Nixon must be getting sensitive because he had instructed his staff to use no more Cadillacs in parades.
"These Republicans think of everything," he said.

NAACP Puts Top Witness On Stand

By O. B. LLOYD JR.
TYLER (UP)—The NAACP was expected to put its top witness on the stand today as it fought to stay in business in Texas. The witness is Roy Wilkins, secretary of the Negro organization and its top spokesman.
Wilkins is on hand in Tyler and a source close to NAACP attorneys said the New York resident "is here and ready" to take the stand during the fourth calendar week of the hearing before Seventh District Judge Otis Dungan. There was still no indication when the hearing will end, although the source said there would be only a few witnesses to follow Wilkins. But he indicated the hearing probably would continue into next week.
State Attorney General John Ben Shepperd is trying to prove the Texas chapters are part of and subservient to national headquarters in New York. As such, he said, they violated the state's corporate laws and he has asked a temporary injunction to prevent the NAACP from doing business in the state.
Mrs. C. V. Adair, executive secretary of the Houston NAACP branch, and Willie Melton, president of the Fort Bend-Wharton county chapter, both testified Wednesday they had refused to abide by directives of the New York headquarters and kept their offices.
Melton said the national office of the NAACP had revoked the charter of the Fort Bend-Wharton county chapter, but that the group still was in business and still had its charter.
Melton, a conservatively dressed, broad-shouldered Negro who talked in a deep rumbling voice, said he pigeon-holed a request that he circulate petitions urging the local school board to desegregate the Fort Bend-Wharton county schools.
After disobeying the national headquarters, he said, he was seated as a voting delegate to the national convention last June.

England Moves To Shuffle War Ministry

LONDON (UP)—Britain's inability to strike at once when the Suez crisis first broke will lead to a drastic shakeup in the Defense Ministry, political observers said today.
Diplomatic circles said Britain fully intended to use force during the opening days of the Suez crisis last summer but found it had no troops ready to do the job.
Although officials deny this, increasing and apparently authoritative reports of an impending reshuffle in the Defense Ministry lend credence to the reports. Wednesday in a speech by the new chief of the British navy, who said emphasis on atomic warfare had left Britain weak in conventional weapons.
The London Daily Mail added today that Monckton will step down on the ground of illness and take over as paymaster general, a vacant advisory post without portfolio in the cabinet.
Diplomatic quarters sincerely believe that Prime Minister Anthony Eden's cabinet was on the brink of ordering armed intervention within hours after Egypt nationalized the Suez Canal. According to this theory, the idea was abandoned because of an insufficient number of troops, ships and planes within striking distance.

Pampa Gets Trace Of Rain

A stranger to Pampa and the surrounding area made his appearance this morning about 10 o'clock.
The stranger was none other than much welcomed rain which continued to fall throughout the morning. No amount was available as the rain was still falling late this morning.
It was an interesting sight to see the Junior High School students sticking their hands and arms out of the windows in an attempt to catch a little rain.
However, all hands disappeared almost immediately, which indicated that order was still the plan of the day throughout the school.

Woman Jailed For Not Putting Child In Public School

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UP)—A few hours in a jail cell Wednesday convinced Mrs. Mary Schoenheit she should send her daughter to public schools, which she claimed turned out "trained seals" instead of brilliant children.
Mrs. Schoenheit, a 42-year-old former teacher who moved halfway across the continent in an attempt to tutor her own child rather than have her in the public schools, either had to capitulate or spend 10 days in jail.
Monteau County Magistrate W. G. Heibredner sentenced Mrs. Schoenheit to that term in jail, plus a $5 fine, but said he would suspend the sentence "if she brings her daughter to school on Monday morning and keeps her there."
For a time, Mrs. Schoenheit continued her defiance. She went to jail and her 7-year-old daughter Mary, was taken away by welfare officers.

Texas Will Be Asked To Revamp Scandal-Hit Vet's Land Board

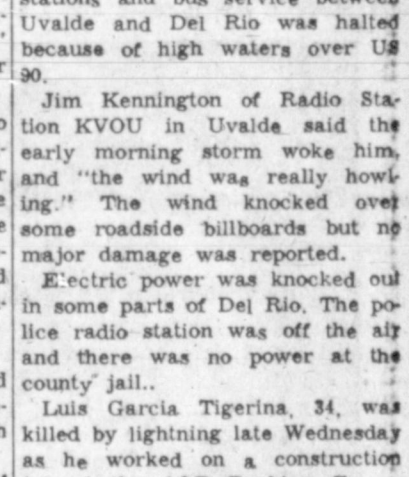

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is fourth of six dispatches on the nine proposed amendments to the state constitution, upon which Texans will vote in November.

AUSTIN (UP)—Texans will be asked at the Nov. 6 general election to revamp the scandal-worm Veterans Land Board and double the program to $200 million.
The proposal, probably the most controversial of nine constitutional amendments to be voted upon next month, was submitted to the people by a Legislature which conducted a months-long inquiry into the program.
Those investigations, touched off in November, 1954, led to court action and the conviction of Land

Santa Claus Day Parade Set Back

Hugh Peoples, chairman of the Merchants Activities Committee, announced this morning that the date of the Santa Day Parade has been changed from Dec. 7 to Dec. 8, which will be on a Thursday.
The change in dates was necessitated because of a conflict with a Band Clinic being held at West Texas State College in Canyon on Dec. 7 which would prevent Pampa's being able to have the local bands in the parade.
Arrangements have been completed for the change in date and the appearance of the helicopter which will bring Santa Claus.
Complete details of the Christmas activities will be announced within the next few days, Peoples said.
If it comes from a Hardware Store, we have it. Lewis Hyde. (Adv.)

SPAGHETTI DINNER LOW IN CALORIES, HIGH IN APPEAL

Probably one of the hardest things about dieting is watching other people eat favorite foods, foods that you would like to eat. Many calorie counters mistakenly forsake foods they like because they believe they are fattening. By wisely budgeting calories it's quite possible to enjoy an appetizing Italian dinner as shown in the menu below.

Developed by the home economists of the National Macaroni Institute, this low calorie dinner will enable the busy American homemaker to serve a good solid meal to her family and at the same time offer a low calorie dinner to the conscientious weight-watcher. Just watch the smiles when you put this 550-calorie dinner before your dieters! Why not try it during National Macaroni Week, October 18-27?

- Spaghetti-Shrimp Italiano
 - Zucchini (1/2 c. sauté)
 - Mixed Green Salad
 - (7 small leaves escarole, 8 small leaves chicory)
 - 4 small leaves romaine, 1/2 lb. French dressing)
 - Camembert Cheese (1 oz.) and Saltines (3)
 - Black Coffee or Tea
- Total calories: 550

Spaghetti-Shrimp Italiano (Makes 4 servings)

- 1 1/2 teaspoons salad oil
- 1 medium-sized onion, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, chopped
- 1 1/2-pound can tomatoes
- 1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1/2 teaspoon oregano
- 2 4 1/2-ounce cans shrimp, drained (about 24 shrimp)
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 3 quarts boiling water
- 8 ounces spaghetti

Heat oil; add onion and garlic. Cook 5 minutes. Add tomatoes, tomato sauce, salt and pepper and oregano. Cook over low heat, stirring occasionally, 30 minutes. Add shrimp and mix well. Heat to serving temperature.

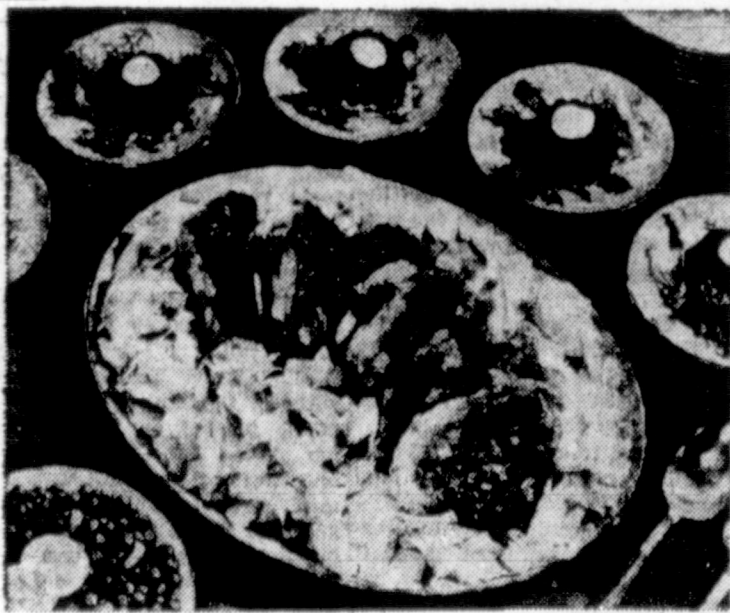

Meanwhile, add 1 tablespoon salt to rapidly boiling water. Gradually add spaghetti so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander. Serve shrimp sauce over spaghetti.

Accent Flank Steak With Tasty Stuffing

For a pleasant way to extend the number of servings for a flank steak, use a sausage stuffing. For 1 large flank steak, use 1/2 pound pork sausage meat, 1 cup dry bread crumbs, salt, pepper, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1 tablespoon minced parsley. Mix thoroughly and spread stuffing on flank steak and roll lengthwise. Skewer or sew to hold in place. Brown on all sides in 2 tablespoons lard. Add 1/2 cup water, cover and cook in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) for 1 1/2 hours.

EGG NOODLES IDEAL FOR DELICIOUS HURRY-UP MEALS

High on the list of "meals in minutes" are those made with macaroni products. Real timesavers, macaroni, spaghetti and egg noodles require no washing, paring, or time-wasting effort. Just open a package and you're all set.

Particularly appropriate for autumn meals is this Noodle Harvest Dinner which combines pork, apples and noodles. You'll be right in step with National Macaroni Week, October 18-27, too, when you serve this satisfying combination.

Noodle Harvest Dinner (Makes 6 servings)

- 4 pork chops, about 1-inch thick
- 1/2 teaspoon monosodium glutamate
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 3 quarts boiling water
- 8 ounces medium egg noodles (about 4 cups)
- 2 medium-sized apples, cored and sliced
- 1 10 1/2-ounce can condensed consommé

Saute pork chops until browned on both sides. Add monosodium glutamate, 1/2 teaspoon salt, pepper and 1/2 cup water. Cover and cook over low heat 1 hour, or until chops are tender.

Meanwhile, add 1 tablespoon salt to 3 quarts rapidly boiling water. Gradually add noodles so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander.

Add apple slices to pork chops. Cover and cook 15 minutes. Combine noodles and consommé. Heat to serving temperature. Serve pork chop mixture with noodle mixture.

Chiffon Spice Cake Is "New And Nice"

Chiffon cake with spice — new and nice! Cinnamon, nutmeg and a pinch of clove blended into a chiffon cake add a spicy flavor to your fall baking. And a moist light chiffon cake started from scratch is a dessert to salute any occasion.

Have you wondered how to cut cakes baked in those new square tube pans? Cut all the way across the center of the cake three times. Then, turning cake at right angles to you, slice six or eight pieces across width of cake.

Serve the cake with fresh fruit and coffee.

SPICE CHIFFON

- 1 1/2 cups sugar
 - 1 1/4 cups sifted Softasilk
 - 3 tsp. baking powder
 - 1 tsp. salt
 - 1/2 tsp. each: nutmeg, allspice, cloves
 - 1 tsp. cinnamon
 - 1/2 cup cooking oil
 - 5 unbeaten egg yolks
 - 3/4 cup cold water
 - 1 cup egg whites (7 to 8)
 - 1/2 tsp. cream of tartar
- Sift dry ingredients into bowl. Make a well and add oil, egg yolks, water, spices. Beat with spoon until smooth or with electric mixer medium speed one min. Measure egg whites and cream of tartar into large mixing bowl. Beat until whites form very stiff peaks. DO NOT UNDERBEAT. Pour egg yolk mixture gradually over beaten whites — folding just until blended. DO NOT STIR. Pour into ungreased pan.

Bake 85 in. at 325 degrees, then 10-15 min. at 350 degrees. Invert pan over neck of funnel or bottle. When cold loosen sides with spatula and remove cake. Frost with yellow butter icing.

Apple Brown Betty Inspired By Season

Those rows of baskets of fall apples, big juicy ones now at the fruit stands, inspire us to make a spicy Apple Brown Betty.

To 1 1/2 quarts of soft, enriched bread cubes, add 1 quart sliced, pared cooking apples. Place in a greased casserole and cover with a mixture of 1/4 cup melted butter or margarine, 1/4 cup brown sugar, 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon and 3 tablespoons lemon juice. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 45 minutes. Sprinkle with 1/4 cup of brown sugar before serving.

Pie Wheel—A Whaler's Art

This elaborate pie wheel is an example of the unique form of art known as scrimshaw. During the 1860's sailors away from homes for long periods passed idle hours by carving small art objects from the teeth or jaw bones of the sperm whales. Most of these art pieces took the form of exquisitely carved pie wheels reports Crisco Kitchens researchers, and sweethearts and wives expected them when their seafarers returned home.

Nowadays, men may not carve beautiful pie wheels, but home made pie is still a preferred dessert. Pie wheels can be purchased at any houseware counter and modern vegetable shortenings make it easy for cooks of all ages and experience to make light, flaky crusts. Because early recipes gave few specific amounts or directions only experts could turn out an excellent pie. With present recipes, says Crisco Kitchens, pie crust failure is a thing of the past.

Shown here is a cherry pie with crimped latticed top. Follow the recipe for pastry on the Crisco can — handle the dough as much as you like and you'll be an expert too. Here's the recipe for the cherry filling.

- 3-1/2 cups drained canned cherries
 - 1 cup sugar
 - 2 tablespoons flour
 - 1/4 teaspoon salt
 - 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 - 1 cup cherry juice
- Combine cherries with sugar, flour, cornstarch, cherry juice, salt and lemon juice. Place in pastry lined pie plate. Cut 3/4 inch pastry strips and weave across filling about 1/2 inch apart. Trim even with lower edge of pastry which has been cut to 1/2 inch beyond the edge of plate. Fold bottom edge over strips and flute with fingers or a fork. Bake at 425° F. for 10 minutes and at 350° F. for 25 to 30 minutes.

Wheaties Bars Are A Lunch Box Treat

Crunchy goodies fresh from the kitchen are a treat anytime, but especially when the kiddies find them in the lunch box. So good for them and so good to eat!

- 4 cups Wheaties
 - 1 cup salted peanuts
 - 1 cup coconut, if desired
 - 1 cup sugar
 - 1/2 cup light corn syrup
 - 1 cup rich milk or cream
- Mix Wheaties, peanuts, coconut in large greased bowl. Mix sugar, corn syrup, milk in saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring occasionally to soft ball stage (236 degrees). Mixture forms a soft ball when small amount is dropped into cold water. Take from heat. Pour syrup mixture over Wheaties mixture. Mix well. Pat out mixture evenly in buttered 8 or 9" square pan. Cool. Cut into 32 bars.

A Recording Makes Full Time TV Entertainment

By ALINE MOSBY
HOLLYWOOD (UP)—For the first time on television, one recording album has graduated into an entire television 90-minute spectacular—because for 11 years you fans have never forgotten it.

Back in 1945 composer Gordon Jenkins gazed out of his penthouse window in New York and was inspired to write a series of songs about his love for the city, loosely tied together with a narration by actor Elliott Lewis.

At first the album, named "Manhattan Towers," sold slowly. Then it snowballed into lasting success.

Recently Lewis, now an executive in the spectacular department at NBC, ran into Jenkins and suggested they do "Manhattan Towers" as a TV color musical.

Jenkins added a dozen new songs to the old music. A plot was fashioned about boy comes to New York, boy gets girl, boy loses girl.

The result—starring Pete Marshall, Helen O'Connell, Hans Conreid, Ethel Waters, Caesar Romero and Phil Harris—will be NBC's bid for the Saturday night audience Oct. 27 (9 p.m. EDT).

"People didn't forget 'Manhattan Towers' because they identify themselves with it," explained Jenkins.

"And I don't mean just people who know New York. Even people who never have seen the city liked the album."

BOAC Accepts Douglas Plane

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UP)—The first of 10 Douglas DC-7Cs ordered by British Overseas Airways Corp., was accepted formally Monday by Lord Rennell.

GOOD, HOLESOME FUN—Modernized by the hole in the right-foot shoe print, the old stencil-and-paint-brush gag is used successfully each campaign year to lure prospective voters to a political headquarters. In this case, it's the Kansas City, Mo., Democratic Headquarters and the worker wielding the brush is Mrs. Myrith Warren, president of the Jackson County, Mo., Young Democrats organization.

Ike's A Family Man On Weekends

By LYLE C. WILSON
WASHINGTON (UP)—Old timers will recall that the late Boileau Penrose of Pennsylvania was both a bachelor and boss of the Republican Party a generation ago.

When some of Penrose' associates suggested that the standing of the party boss with the public would be improved if he took a wife, Penrose is said to have replied:

"That's all right with me, boys. You pick her and I'll marry her."

Penrose, however, died a bachelor. The incident wouldn't be worth recalling but for the hopeful belief of some usually sound Republican politicians that Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Mrs. Richard M. Nixon are very important persons in the 1956 campaign.

The Democratic ticket is campaigning tag, you might say. Mrs. Estes Kefauver is busy at home with the children while the senator travels. Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson and Mrs. Stevenson were divorced some years ago.

Rebuked Questioner

Vice President Nixon recently rebuked a questioner who sought an estimate of the political significance of Stevenson's marital status. Such had no place in the campaign, Nixon replied. There are, however, several ways to skin a candidate as well as to skin a cat.

The governor's singular domestic situation is being pointed up with considerable emphasis by the device of contrast. This may be by accident or design. Either way it could have some effect in an election in which more women than men are likely to vote.

Consider the "citizens press conference" of last Saturday night when President Eisenhower was questioned by a mixed group of 100 supporters from all parts of the country. Dr. J. C. Austin, pastor of Chicago's Pilgrim Baptist Church, arose to identify himself as a 20-year Democrat until he switched to Mr. Eisenhower. His question:

Cites Family Life

"There are many fine points of your life and your administration which I admire, but one stands out above everything else with me... the beauty of your home, with your wife by your side, helping you go forward, the union of your home, your children, your grandchildren..."

Mr. Eisenhower thanked Pastor Austin and agreed that the home is the basis of our civilization. The program was announced as unre-hearsed. Rehearsed or not, the pastor's remarks were in a field in which no official party spokesman would dare explore. Had Dr. Austin referred to Stevenson in any way, he would have fouled out, and the President's rebuke would have been as quick as Nixon's.

That was on Saturday, and Sunday was Mr. Eisenhower's birthday. What television and newspaper fans saw over the weekend and into Monday were some really socko pictures: The Eisenhower family, gramps with the diapered youngest grandchild on his lap. And a picture of "the Eisenhower women," wife, daughter-in-law and three little girls.

Good Campaign Material

All of that is solid campaign stuff, whether by luck or chance, and it must be counted luck, at least, that an important birthday could fall just so in a presidential campaign.

Jane Talk

By JANE KADINGO

Pampa News Women's Editor

SO MANY OF YOU HAVE TOLD ME how much you enjoyed reading about my vacation trip this summer, which was the first time I realized people like to read about other people's vacations. I enjoy it myself, but I wasn't sure that others would like to hear about it.

SINCE THEN, a friend of mine, Mrs. Jessye Stroup, has gone and returned from an interesting vacation in the East. I have enjoyed hearing her tell about it, and, with a natural love for history, was especially intrigued by her account of visiting the Merchants Hope Church in Prince George County, about 50 miles southeast of Richmond, Va., near Hopewell.

The church is the oldest Protestant Church still standing in America. It stands on a side road, sheltered by tall pines. It is a gem of the earliest Colonial American architecture," according to a pamphlet Jessye brought back with her. The pamphlet states: "It set a pattern, for following its completion in 1657 a number of other churches in Virginia were closely copied after Merchants Hope."

It is considered miraculous that the church is still standing after 300 years. The pamphlet says "it stands today as a symbol of the spiritual character of our ancestors, who carved the Virginia Colony out of the wilderness and as a witness to the great heritage of our American way of life."

A church architect, Harden DeV. Pratt, says the outside of the church is very much as it must have been originally. The interior furnishings were destroyed during the Civil War, when Union soldiers used it as a picket station. The floors, pews and chancel were put in about 1870, and it is believed the wood ceiling, wood wainscoting and small dressing room at the rear were added at that time.

The original flagstones in the aisles are almost intact, and a Richmond contractor stated they came from quarries in Portland, England. He also believes the stairway to the balcony and hand-rail across the front of the balcony are probably original.

Plans are now underway to restore the church, taking out the 1870 additions. It is believed the church was started in 1655, and completed in 1657, a date carved into one of the original rafters, which are all still in place.

In a book, "Colonial Churches of Tidewater, Virginia," the late George Carrington Mason, official historiographer of the Diocese of Southern Virginia of the Episcopal Church, states "The old church suffered the usual period of abandonment during the decline of religion in Virginia following the Revolutionary War and the equally inevitable desecration during the Civil War, which left it completely stripped of its colonial interior woodwork."

He states that due to the post-war poverty its repair in 1870 was done simply, with a minimum of expense. He also says it was recently repaired and redecorated and is in use by an Episcopal congregation.

He also points out: "The church has no chimney as no provision was made for heating it. So no services are held during the winter."

Jessye and I can't figure how the Colonial church-goers stood it, unless they didn't have church in the winter either. We decided, however, that in those days you were not supposed to be comfortable in church, lest your mind wander from the service.

The pamphlet summarizes an address by the church rector, stating "... it is remarkable that just fifty years following the first permanent settlement at Jamestown in 1607, the settlers could build such a beautiful and sturdy church that it has stood for 300 years as a witness to the fact that America was founded on God, and a symbol of the religious strength of the pioneers who settled the Virginia Colony."

"Such famous Virginians as Richard Bland, the 'intellectual father of the American Revolution,' and Edmund Ruffin, the 'father of Agricultural Chemistry,' lived nearby and were communicants at Merchants Hope Church."

Jessye also tells about visiting another church about 20 miles from Merchants Hope, which is believed to have been built about 1659. It is the church in which Pocahontas was married. Jessye says it is just beautiful.

The graveyard by this church intrigued Jessye. She says some of the headstones date back to 1660 and are so old they're covered with mildew. And the inscriptions are an education in itself, she said.

Restoration plans are also underway for this church. I thought it was all very intriguing and interesting to try to visualize the early colonists worshipping in buildings still standing today. It is also fun to wonder what buildings of ours will be standing 300 years from now as a symbol of our generation.

Twentieth Century Allegro Club Is Given Program On Thomas Jefferson's Life

Twentieth Century Allegro Club met Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Charles Hickman Jr., with Mrs. David Price as co-hostess.

Mrs. William J. Craig presented the program, the first of the Jeffersonian Heritage series, entitled "The Living Declaration."

PURPOSE

"The programs will dramatize ideas which are authentic in historical spirit," she told the women. "They are the enduring possession of all Americans and all free peoples. These ideas have been centered in a particular historic personage for purposes of effective presentation, and Thomas Jefferson was chosen for the central role because he can be more easily associated with them than any other single man."

She went on to explain the study does not consider Jefferson's particular policies as a statesman, except as they illustrate the ideas being studied. She pointed out that Jefferson "remains the best historic symbol of freedom and individualism, which are so imperiled in our age."

JEFFERSON'S LIFE
She continued by giving a sketch of his life, stating he was born April 13, 1743, in Albemarle County, Virginia, the son of a noted surveyor, substantial planter and man of local prominence, and connected with "one of the most influential families in the province" through his mother, Jane Randolph.

"By right of birth, he had an assured, economic and social position, and he received as good an education as his times and his locality afforded," Mrs. Craig explained.

She pointed out he was privately tutored until he entered William and Mary College at the age of 17. His most notable teacher, she stated, was Rev. James Maury, "a learned Anglican clergyman," who "grounded" him in the classics.

"Actually, he made himself the heir of all learning at a time when it was not yet highly specialized and compartmentalized," she explained. "Among historic American public men, only Ben Franklin can be fitly compared to him in diversity of intellectual interests, though many of the public men of the time were learned."

Mrs. Craig related that Jefferson studied law under George Wythe, "most noted law teacher of his generation in Virginia," for five years. He entered law practice when he was 24 years old, continuing until the Revolution closed the courts. She stated he was chiefly supported by his farms, generally true with Virginia lawyers of this period.

"He never resumed practice, but his legal learning always stood him in good stead," she told the women. "Public service was expected of a young man in Jefferson's position and offices came without any special effort on his part. At the age of 28, he began to represent his county in the Virginia House of Burgesses, and he continued to serve there until the Revolution. From the very beginning, he was good at drafting papers, but he had no oratorical gifts and preferred to keep out of legislative debates. Jefferson won his reputation by his pen — not his voice."

Mrs. Craig explained Jefferson began to build his famous mansion, Monticello, about the time he went to the House of Burgesses. He was his own architect and builder, she stated, and often drew house plans for friends and neighbors.

FAMILY MAN
When nearly 30 years old, Jefferson married Mrs. Martha Wayles Skelton, with whom he had a happy marriage until she died 10 years later after having six children, only two of whom survived infancy, Mrs. Craig related. "A rather shy man by nature, Jefferson was unusually affectionate in the family," she explained. "At the same time, this intensely serious man was rather exacting of his daughters, whose education he guided with careful hands. Had not the circumstances of his times been so perilous, Jefferson might have passed his days as a country gentleman, engaged in learned pursuits in the quietude his beloved Monticello."

"Thomas Jefferson may be less loved by the American people than Abraham Lincoln and less revered than George Washington, but of there is something in him that interests almost everybody," Mrs.

Craig concluded. "And he remains until this day the most conspicuous American symbol of freedom and enlightenment."

Mrs. Craig's talk was followed by a record, illustrating some of Jefferson's ideas. Mrs. Craig also told of visiting Williamsburg, Va., and described points of interest there.

Mrs. James Evans led the business session. Attending were Mrs. Clifford Braly, William Craig, George Cree Jr., Bill B. Davis, Ray Duncan, James Evans, Ben Fallon, Joe Franklin, John Frisby, H. C. Gray Jr., Robert Karr, Jack Miller, George Rasco, J. E. Thompson, Bill Waters and Floyd Watson.

RIDING OUT THE STORM—Battling to stay aboard their amphibious, snorkel-equipped cargo truck, British engineers clad in rubber suits and face masks ride out a storm which rivals in intensity nature's worst efforts. Dutch Royal Lives Get Public Airing

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent

The private lives of two of Europe's few remaining royal families are being given an embarrassing public airing.

Queen Juliana of the Netherlands is being subjected to criticism because of her close friendship for a woman faith healer.

It is being asserted that the faith healer has become a sinister spending too much money on influence in Netherlands affairs.

King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece are being accused of themselves and of permitting influence peddling by members of their royal household.

The situation in The Netherlands has become so serious that it is quite possible Juliana may decide to abdicate in favor of 18-year-old Crown Princess Beatrix.

Paul Pacifying Critics

It looks as if Paul is on the way to pacifying his critics. But conditions in Greece are such that, in the long run, the possibility of a radical change in the situation there can not be ruled out.

Juliana's troubles stem from the fact that her fourth and youngest daughter, nine-year-old Princess Marijke, was born with defective eye sight — the result of an attack of measles which the Queen suffered during her pregnancy. Physicians were unable to restore the child's sight to normal.

Prince Bernhard, the Queen's husband, heard of a faith healer who was credited with some remarkable cures. Square-shouldered, masculine-looking Greet Hofmans was taken into the royal household in 1950. She had no better success with her healing-by-faith methods than the physicians.

Bernhard did not like the way things were going. He thought Miss Hofmans was too prominent in palace affairs. But Juliana refused his demand that she be sent away.

Rumors Start Circulating

Rumors started to circulate that either Miss Hofmans was influencing the Queen's judgment in national affairs or that the influence was being exerted by intriguing persons who used Miss Hofmans as a tool to get their views before the Queen. A coolness arose between Juliana and Bernhard.

The situation was brought into the open last June by a German weekly magazine. It was ignored by the government and the royal family were compelled to recognize it.

Miss Hofmans was sent away from the royal household. But it is asserted that her influence remains.

In Greece, beset by increasingly troublous economic conditions, opinion position politicians started accusing the royal couple of extravagance.

Influence Peddling Charges

It was asserted that Paul and Frederika were lavishing money on luxurious yacht cruises and Frederika was accused of using secret funds to buy costly Parisian clothes. There were charges also of influence peddling.

A blow-up came when parliament increased the King's annual allowance to $383,000 tax clear.

Paul decided to roll with the punches. He announced Thursday that he would close his main palace in the interest of economy

Flooded Great Area

Before its levees were built, the Mississippi River routinely flooded land from Rock Island, Ill., to its mouth — a distance of 1,500 miles, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Discovered Islands

John Davis discovered the Falkland Islands in 1592. They are in the South Atlantic, about 250 miles east of the South American mainland.

and would reduce the number of his court officials. Four of the officials were ousted on the charge that they used their jobs to advance their business connections.

James Cagney To Play Lon Chaney In Movie

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Hollywood Writer

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — James Cagney, a man with a famous face, will virtually shed his own for his next movie when he portrays the late Lon Chaney — but Chaney's own weird make-ups, Cagney admits, were much tougher.

In "The Man with 1,000 Faces"

Cagney will put on special disguises to recreate the roles that made Chaney immortal and brought shivers to countless moviegoers—"The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "The Phantom of the Opera," "The Miracle Man," "The Unholy Three" and "Laugh Clown Laugh."

Jimmy's "faces" will be put on in one piece, rubber-like masks, courtesy the modern wizards of Universal-International Studio's make-up department. But Chaney, who died in 1930, suffered true agony in wearing his hideous visages for horror pictures.

"This was a dedicated man," said Cagney, gesturing with his hands just like the night-club imitators of Jimmy Cagney.

"It took him a good two hours to put on a face. I'm using prefabs. His make-up was a secret. He never let anybody see him put it on.

"But it was known that for the 'Phantom' he bent a hair-pin, stuck it into his nostrils and then attached a wire from the hairpin to the back of his head. It hurt, but it lifted his nose." Cagney read the story of Chaney's life and saw the late star's old pictures before attempting this difficult assignment.

"For the 'Hunchback' I think he made his left eye look torn by gluing a piece of balsa wood underneath the eye," Cagney went on. "I will use a false plastic eye."

"His back was twisted by a special harness to make him look crippled. His doctor advised him not to wear it more than 20 minutes at a time. But Chaney would keep it on as long as an hour despite the pain."

Cagney's appearance as a hunchback will be furnished via more modern and more comfortable appliances. As the everyday Chaney, Jimmy also will wear make-up-plastic pieces to make his face appear longer and to lengthen his nose.

Shaefter said the bones and other relics appear to have come from the same prehistoric culture as those found near Spiro, Okla., about a quarter century ago. By measuring radioactivity of carbon particles, archeologists can determine their age.

"Our preliminary study would indicate this is the first culture of this nature found so far west," Shaefter said. "We believe it may extend the Spiro mound focus 150 miles west."

Jewelry Found
Deputy Sheriff Jim Farris announced an armed guard would patrol the area after Shaefter speculated on the importance of the find.

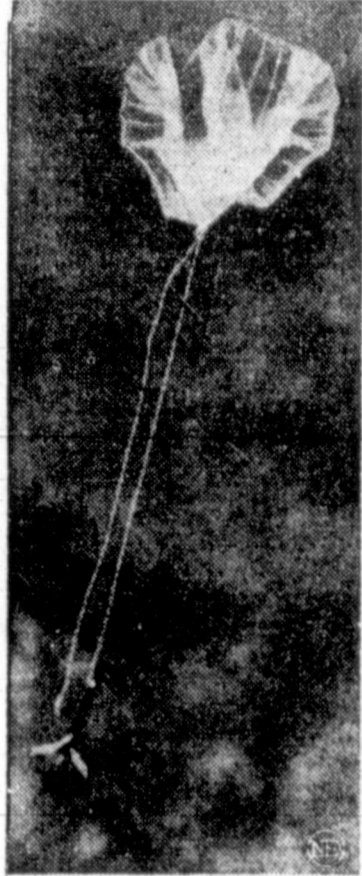

Jewelry unearthened so far consisted mainly of ear spoons about the size of ordinary adhesive tape spoons, decorated with copper inlays.

Odd War
The Upper Peninsula was granted to Michigan by federal government in 1837, after Michigan and Ohio took up arms against each other in the Toledo War, only war in history between two individual states.

Scientists Seek To Find Age Of Bones

OKLAHOMA CITY (UP)—A team of Oklahoma University scientists will run carbon tests to determine the age of Indian bones and relics found here, believed to have been buried 300 years before Columbus discovered America. Guards were placed around the ancient burial ground in a cornfield northeast of here Tuesday after Dr. James Shaefter of the University said the burial ground may date back to 1200 A.D. Pipeline diggers unearthed the first bones last Saturday and ROCKOON—New tool for upper atmosphere research is the "rockoon"—rocket-carrying plastic balloon—shown after launching from the landing ship U.S.S. Colonial off San Diego, Calif. It's being used by the Office of Naval Research to test instrument-carrying rockets as high as possible before they're triggered by remote control for a three-minute run. Tracked from the mother ship, the rocket radiates back readings during flight.

Posts Open In Dept. Of Health

AUSTIN, Texas—Applications are being received by the Merit System Council for the Texas State Department of Health for competitive examinations for the classifications of Food and Drug Inspector, Junior Sanitarian, Junior Engineer, and Health Information Specialist. All classifications require a college degree except Food and Drug Inspector and Health Information Specialist, which allow a substitution of up to two years of experience in food and drug regulatory work, and education or related fields, respectively. The Junior Engineer requires a degree in engineering.

These classifications require a written examination. Salary range for Food and Drug Inspector, Junior Sanitarian, and Health Information Specialist is $300 to $360, and for Junior Engineer $360 to $435.

Application blanks and information are available from the Merit System Council, 814 Littlefield Building, Austin, Texas.

IT'LL BE "FOR KEEPS"—When Ingrid Bergman's daughter marries, it will be for keeps, she says. "When I'm married I'll be to someone I'll know I'll love," declares Jennie Lindstrom, 17, pictured in her gym suit at Colorado University in Denver, where she's a freshman. Publicity-day Jennie changed her name from "Pia" after her parents' divorce in 1951 and her mother's marriage to Italian movie director Roberto Rossellini.

FAREWELL VIA MERCY MISSION—Flown by the Ohio Air National Guard from Lorain, Ohio, to the bedside of a father they haven't seen in seven years, Frank Boyett's children are reunited with him in the closing hours of his life at Ft. Roots Veterans Hospital in Little Rock, Ark. Told he was in the final stage of cancer, Boyett, 37, said he could die happy if he could see his children just once more. The youngsters, who live with their mother in Lorain, are, from left: Frank Jr., 10; Jimmy, 14; Mary Jane, 12. The trip was arranged through the hospital's social service department and the Red Cross.

Army Stocking Up On Rolling Pins

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—The Army is stocking up on rolling pins. And, if Granny, Mom and Aunt Tebiatha knew what our uncle was up to they would form a union, hire a lawyer and take the issue to court.

Just what the charge would be is only a guess. It might well be defamation of the kitchen. But any way, according to the Pentagon, at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., the rolling pin, so dear to a woman's heart for rolling out cookie dough and batting wayward husbands over the skull, has gone far afield. The brass of the Army has put soldier technicians to work with this handy little piece of kitchen-ware to prepare dirt for tests made on soil that is used in airfield and road construction.

Glory be!

Roll out the Dirt

The boys of the 18th Engineer Brigade Soils Laboratory take rolling pins in hand and run them over the dirt hard enough to break it up into small loose particles. Then it can be tested easily for "compactibility." After that, experts said, it is easy to learn how much the soil compresses under pressure.

Modern aircraft weigh a heap and one little dip in the runways could cause a wing-over with possible loss of life.

It's a deadly serious business so far as the services are concerned. "Proper soil is just as important in road and airfield construction as correct concrete or asphalt," a high man in the Army said. "Soil—the part underneath, actually carries a good part of the load of traffic."

An asphalt or concrete top, the expert added, "only distributes the load and takes the wear."

At Fort Leonard Wood, out there in Missouri, the importance of soil testing was brought into sharp relief when Army engineers were rigging up a 12,000 foot airstrip.

Two Possibilities

There were two possibilities for the site. The technicians dug down and gathered various types of soil at both places. The soil went to the lab, and the best of class was picked for the construction.

Then the exact location of the airfield was decided upon. The technical men dug trenches and test holes in high ground where dirt could be cut away to fill lower areas.

Next came testing to see how the soil would work as a "fill in" and the amount of compression it would take to provide a real solid fill.

The soil likewise was tested to see how much weight it could support without groaning or giving up entirely, and for the effect of drainage and frost action.

TOLL-CALL MILLINERY—Greenback-decked hat worn by Mrs. Katy Locheim as she greeted Adlai Stevenson at Kansas City, Mo., may have inspired the Democratic presidential hopeful to throw his "party-line" party. A few days later, he made two party-line telephone calls, contacting Democratic campaign officials of all 48 states in a fund-raising plea from his Libertyville, Ill., home.

 Most experts would pass the North hand rather than raise to two spades. North was afraid that the hand "belonged" to the enemy, and he hoped that his raise to two spades would talk them out of it.
 South won the first trick with the ace of diamonds and returned his ace of hearts and had to find the correct defense immediately.
 East was tempted to return a club, but he properly hit upon a trump return instead. South won with the ten of spades and returned another heart to East's ace. East led his remaining trump to dummy's nine, whereupon declarer led a low club from the dummy and finessed the ten from his own hand.
 Unfortunately for South, West was able to win the trick and return the only mission trump. This removed the last trump from dummy and South had to lose another club trick and thus go down one trick.

South would make his contract if East returned a club after winning the first heart. South would play a low club, and West would return a trump, and declarer would give up a second heart trick. Declarer would win the next trump return, discard a club from dummy as the queen of hearts, cash the ace of clubs, and ruff a club in dummy. This would establish South's last club, after which South would have no trouble in making the rest of the tricks.

NOT TOO OPTIMISTIC—This 10-mill stamp, issued by Egypt to commemorate nationalization of the Suez Canal, is for use as postage for one year only. The Latest Dope In The Capital

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON (UP) — What's new in Washington: Leonard Hall, chairman of the GOP national committee, was invited to make his guess on the electoral vote in the forthcoming election. He wrote his vote and entered it in the National Press Club Pool. He licked the envelope, sealing it for future delivery. Then he walked away, forgetting to get up the two buck entry fee.

On the way back to Washington from Philadelphia, Vice President Richard M. Nixon and the scribes organized an "honorary crew." Nixon, of course, was the chief.

He went into the coop where the crew holds forth, and came back with the pilot's hat and jacket on, marched up and down the aisle, trading handshakes with all of the passengers, bidding them adieu. Time flew, and it wasn't too many hours later that all hands were aboard again, taking off in another direction.

Sen. Estes Kefauver, the Democratic hopeful who would like to sit in Nixon's armchair, formed a habit of picking up little trinkets for Nancy, his lovely wife, and kids on each trip. Nancy, who watched the family budget, has put a stop to that. "It's a waste of money," she told the head of the house. "We already have everything the airport lobbies have to sell."

Gold Bricks
 Mines at Yellowknife, in Canada's District of Mackenzie, produce gold molded there into 60-pound bricks. A ton of ore yields three-quarters of an ounce of the metal. Each brick, about the size of a building brick, is valued at $25,000.

His Harem
 The Sultan of Djokjakarta, Javanese city of 295,000 people, keeps some 300 dancers and female relatives in quarters to which he alone has access.

Reporters traveling with President Eisenhower say that, for the first time in history in any campaign, planes landing at Pittsburgh were "escorted" by mounted police. They guarded the leader's aircraft and the two press planes, but everybody on the press planes was so busy covering the head man nobody ever got around to giving credit to the sleek horses and the spruced-up cops.

"Pilgrimage Tax"
 Saudi Arabia's chief source of revenue, prior to the development of its oil industry after World War II, was the tax on pilgrims traveling to the holy cities of Mecca and Medina.

IT'S THE LAW* IN TEXAS*

THINK BEFORE SIGNING
Whenever you are asked to sign something, your signature should be a warning signal that in some way you may become legally obligated by what you sign.

Usually you are asked to sign something as a result of a business transaction, such as a contract, a receipt, an order, a release, an option, a mortgage or a deed. For your own protection, you should clearly understand what you sign, why you are signing it, and what the consequences may be. It is rarely possible for a person who has signed a document to avoid its legal effects.

You can decrease your legal risks by always taking these precautions before you sign anything:

Know what you are signing and what the document contains. Understand clearly what it means. Don't be confused by its title—a "statement" may be a release of all your claims, or a "contract" may be a negotiable promissory note. "Co-signing" a note may result in your having to pay it.

Read EVERYTHING in any document. Clauses in fine print may be important. Remember, too, that oral promises not included in writing may be unenforceable.

Take nothing for granted. Check and verify the document. Be sure the dates, prices, names and conditions filled in are correct. You are bound by what it says, not by what you thought it said.

Ask questions. Inquire about conditions and items of importance to you. Don't sign unless you understand what it means. Language clearly stating what you want can be inserted. If substantial sums are involved, consult with your attorney.

Retain a copy. Be sure the proper persons sign. Request and retain a copy. Record it, if necessary, with the proper public official.

Like your fingerprint, your signature is unique. No one else has one exactly like it. Only you can sign it, and affixing it may set into motion events of great legal consequence. Treat it with the importance it deserves, and do not bestow it carelessly. If in doubt, seek information and advice.

(This column, based on Texas law and prepared by the State Bar of Texas, is written to inform—not to advise. No person should ever apply or interpret any law without the aid of an attorney who knows the facts because the facts may change the application of the law.)

American Politics Moving To Left

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—This presidential campaign is demonstrating positively that the likeliest movement in American politics is to the left—and to the right.

FDR started the leftward activity with his 1932-36 New Deal, some of which President Eisenhower suspects as "creeping Socialism."

Mr. Eisenhower, however, is moving the Republican Party's center of gravity leftward. He's on the New Deal trail. All Republicans do not applaud movement in that direction, nor did all Democrats approve of FDR's strategic march to the left. However that may be, the Democratic Party as led by Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman became the majority party in the United States. It can and repeatedly has outvoted the Republican Party in national elections.

Right Wing Stir
There is life stirring, however, in the conservative right wing of American politics. J. Strom Thurmond led a successful right wing, states' rights raid into Southern Democratic territory in the 1948 presidential campaign. Thurmond won four Southern states and 39 electoral votes in his effort to prevent either major party candidate from obtaining an electoral college majority. The election of a president would have been the responsibility of the U.S. House of Representatives if no candidate had won a majority of the electoral vote. Resistance to the leftward trend of major party politics continues to create splinter party protest movements. The conservatives are looking for more conservative leadership.

Former Commissioner of Internal Revenue T. Coleman Andrews this week accepted the presidential nomination of a constitutionalist or states' rights party tendered in his native city, Richmond, Va. The vice presidential nominee is former Rep. Thomas H. Werdell (R-Calif.). They are a conservative team.

States In 13 States
Andrews' backers expect to have states of conservative electors on the ballot in 13 states. Another conservative presidential ticket will be represented on the Indiana ballot next month.

Candidate Andrews caught some sudden attention last winter after leaving the Internal Revenue Service. He denounced the income tax system as unfair and confiscatory, unjustly burdensome on the middle-income brackets. He would abolish the income tax.

"America today," said Andrews, "is in the death grip of taxation." These so-called third party movements are sufficient evidence that something is stirring among conservative voters. There is likely to be more, rather than less, of it. Such is the way major parties are born by an anxious dissatisfaction among a substantial element of the population.

Pay For Study

Sweden, a nation which has pioneered in socialism in recent years, is the birthplace of an idea that ought to go over pretty well with the pampered scholars in our government supported universities.

The Social Democratic Youth organization, an outfit of political chicanery which functions in the higher echelons of scholastic enterprise, has come up with a dilly. It is this: Students ought to be paid by the government for the time they spend in study hall.

Here's the way the Democratic Youth figure it. There aren't enough government scholarships to go around. Those who aspire to a college education are thus faced with the necessity of getting an advance from their parents, or borrowing from someone besides their parents.

In this connection it has been the policy of the Swedish politicians to lend money from the state without interest to promising students. But there aren't enough of these loans available, either, and besides, a trace of capitalism survives since the loans have to be paid back.

Very few Swedish students figure on earning their own way through school. This is a popular pastime in this country but not in Sweden, where socialism is more deeply entrenched than here.

So, according to the youth organization, potential scholars are hard put to know where to turn.

But the reasoning goes like this. When the student graduates he will be an asset to his country. Therefore, it behooves his country to put up the necessary money to turn him into that asset. Consequently, he should be paid while he studies. And the group also wants it understood that students who get married while attending school should be paid at a little higher rate than single persons. After all, married persons, the argument goes, are an even greater asset than single persons, since the possibility of children exists. And of course, children are an asset to the state.

The youth group does make one concession. It doesn't favor paying students for study on the same basis that workers in various enterprises are paid. No, indeed. The student is more of an amateur, a novice, an apprentice as it were, and shouldn't get more than an apprentice's pay.

Well, if you believe in socialism, why not? If the government owns you; if the government employs you; if the government educates you; then surely, from the standpoint of logic, it would be entirely proper for the government to pay all your bills from the cradle to the grave. You'll have to give the Democratic Youth organization a nod of approval for being logical.

In this country we still resist the idea that the government owns us. Some of us still cling to the notion that we control our government. We don't believe that the government should be our employer. But, from the standpoint of logic we fall down, because so many seem to feel that the government should educate everyone. This is the Achilles heel in our armor of freedom. It is the opening wedge for all manner of socialistic ideas.

We don't know where the Swedes will go to get the money to pay students in their study periods, unless we supply it from our capitalistic society. It is certain that Sweden can scarcely bear any more taxes than it now has.

But in this country we ought to be up in arms against such ideas. Our country is so great that it is helping to underwrite the failures of socialism all over the world. But our greatness resides in our independence, our freedom, our ability to make our own way, even to securing our own education without government help.

It is too bad that more Americans do not apply logic to the field of education. If we truly believe in freedom, and if we wish to be logical, we will see to it that as individuals we will secure our own training and education and call for an end of the political control of our schools and colleges.

The Doctor Says

By EDGAR F. JORDAN, M. D.

The human mind works in strange ways. I was reminded of this recently by an article on anxiety written by a distinguished psychiatrist.

Among other things, he pointed out the conflict within all of us between the desire to keep things as they are and the wish to return "to the good old days." Piled on top, at the same time, is the wish to do something different or to have something new happen to us.

Whatever our desires, it is certain there will be change in our lives.

The anticipation of change always creates anxiety. This may be the anxiety of fear or the anticipation of pleasure.

ANXIETY, my friend pointed out, will always be part of life. It makes the individual alert whenever threatened. It acts as a stimulant to both body and mind, thus enabling us to cope with danger more readily.

From early childhood each one of us is familiar with the sensations of anxiety. One of these sensations is sometimes described as "a hollow feeling in the pit of the stomach."

There are body changes which accompany anxiety, including speeding up in the heart, tensing of muscles, shallow breathing and an increase in perspiration. The sudden coldness and clamminess of the palms of the hands in the face of fear or anxiety is surely a symptom which few of us have escaped.

THERE ARE other physical changes which can occur in anxious anticipation of the future. Anxiety may, for example, produce an increase in body temperature which is easy to misinterpret as a sign of infection.

I remember well a personal experience of this sort. I had been in the hospital for scarlet fever and was ready to go home. The excited anticipation led to a slight fever — and one was not supposed to leave the hospital after scarlet fever unless fever-free. After debate, the physicians decided to let me go — a clear case of understanding the effect of excitement on the body temperature.

WHY IS ANXIETY so important? It comes to all of us at various times and in varying degrees. It not only affects our mental outlook, but our physiological functioning. If frequently repeated or long continued, particularly in a person whose nervous system does not seem built to withstand the effects too well, it can result in bodily changes requiring medical treatment.

Although anxiety doubtless does have some favorable value under certain circumstances, I for one should be glad to do without unnecessary anxiety.

Perhaps, however, the driving influence of anxiety is necessary in order to accomplish much of anything.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES
Religious Roots Of Liberty

Here is part of the last chapter of Edmund A. Opitz' book, "Case Studies of the Church in Politics." It is under the heading of "The Religious Case for Liberty." He writes:

"The religious case for individual liberty rests upon the conviction that each person has a tap root to the Eternal, that his principle of existence is to be found not in himself but in God. The will and conscience of the individual are peculiarly his own, but they lie along a spiritual frontier where a man comes into communion with his God. The fruit of this communion is an elevation of character and a quickened conscience, issuing in transformed action. Thus, whoever interposes by violence or threat, between another man's conscience and his conduct reduces that man to his mere appendage to an alien will. This is a violation of the natural order of things, because man is a creature of God, not of any other man or combination of men. Anyone, or any group, or any government, which supercedes a man's will by force, plays the part of God and reduces men to puppets. This is a moral evil, whether the force be exercised by one person over another, or by government in the name of a majority.

"There is a social role which legal force, or government, can play in the community. It can protect the peaceful business of society by using force — if that becomes necessary — on peace-breakers.

"Individuals devise means to protect and defend themselves against violence, or threat from others. For this they have every right in ethics. If they have a right to be alive at all, they have an equivalent right to defend their lives. Under the advantages of specialization and the division of labor, the right of each individual to defend his life, his liberty, and his rightful material possessions on which life and liberty depend, is turned over to a single man or group invested with delegated authority. In some such fashion the idea of government came into being, as distinct from that arbitrary force exercised by a tyrant, with which men everywhere have had experience. This is the uniquely American idea of government — an agency among men to secure to every individual his God-given rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

"In this conception, government is a legal repository of force, the social apparatus of compulsion, and its moral ground for being is the observed fact that peaceful citizens need defense against predation from within and from outside their societies. This is the use of legal force against aggressors and criminals for the protection of peaceful citizens — a principle utterly at variance with the collectivist idea of the use of legal force against peaceful citizens either 'for their own good' or for the supposed welfare of others.

"The collectivist principle depends on the use of legal force and penalties to make individuals conform to the master plan imposed on them. This principle lies at the heart of communism, socialism, the welfare state, and all other varieties of the planned economy.

In each of these systems, government is called on to force men to act in ways contrary to the way they would otherwise act if force and penalties were not used against them. The socialist, the collectivist, the social planner of whatever variety, is a man who endorses some degree of legal coercion to make peaceful citizens do what he wants them to do and yet feels incompetent to persuade them to do.

"Every variety of tyranny rests upon the belief that some persons have a right — or even a duty — to impose their wills upon other people. Tyranny may be fastened upon others by the mere whim of one man, as in a dictatorship. Or tyranny may be imposed upon a minority 'for their own good' by a democratically-elected majority. But in any case, tyranny is always a denial — or a misunderstanding — of the mandates of an authority or law higher than man himself.

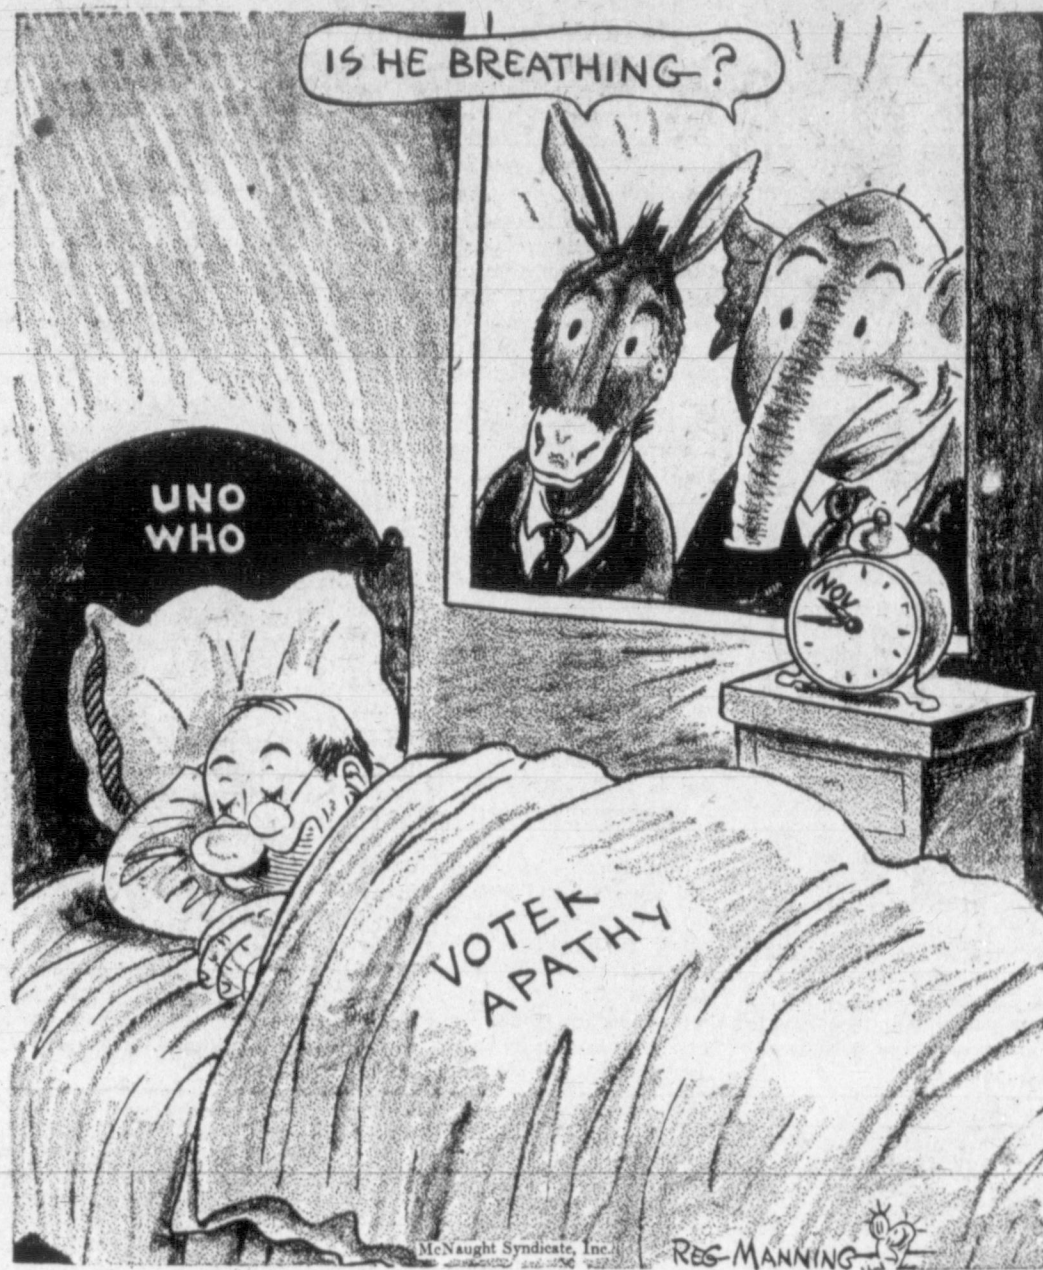

"Liberty rests upon the belief that all proper authority for man's relationships with his fellowmen comes from a source higher than man — from the Creator. Liberty decrees that all men — subject and ruler alike — are bound by this higher authority which is above and beyond man-made law; that each person has a relation to his Maker with which no other person, not even the ruler, has any right to interfere. In order to make these conceptions effective for liberty, they must be deeply ingrained in the fundamental values of a people. That is to say, they must be part of the popular religion. There was one people of antiquity for whom this was true, the people who gave us our Old Testament. It was among the ancient Israelites that the conviction took hold and emerged into practice that there was a God of righteousness whose judgments applied even to rulers."

Sleeping Beauty

Fair Enough

'Chicken' Likes To Hear Of 'The Good Old Days'

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

In 1879 a pol-boy in a Bodega called Stone's in Pantan Street, Leicester Square, won eighty pounds on a ten-shilling ticket in the winter book on the Epsum Derby. He bought his mother a seal-skin coat and bought himself a ticket to New York aboard a four-master with steam engines called the Assyrian Monarch.

He walked ashore at Jersey City two weeks later and crossed to Manhattan on a ferry to interview the captain of a ship which had passed the Monarch with her colors upside down denoting distress and tied up just about where the New York Journal - American is now.

The captain said he had had to bury eight people at sea who had died of Yellow Fever on the way up from Rio. The kid sold the story to the New York World for $20 and bought a ticket to Chicago on the Erie for $18.

From there he pushed on to Le Mars, Ia., which had a colony of about 300 young Englishmen "studying" farming. They included several second sons, who were over set under primogeniture, and were shipped out for riddance. Their farming consisted pretty much of bounding over the prairie on work - horses and yelling "tantivy" and "yoicks" at a little sack of anise seed, which affects beagles about the same as catnip acts on a cat.

The boss was Capt. Ronald Moreton, British naval chaplain. He called the pol-boy "Chicken" and paid him $20 a year at the end of harvest time for two years running.

Chicken then went to Sioux City and got a job on a newspaper called The Times, which blew up after about one year. His father was a pedagogue and the boy liked to work with words.

Chicken handled a Major League story in the case of a brewer who was tried for killing a clergyman on the street because the churches were campaigning for Prohibition. The brewer was acquitted. It was a big story which attracted great figures of Journalism from Chicago and Omaha.

When the paper died, Chicken went to St. Paul and caught on at the Globe and, in the next few years, worked on the Dispatch and Pioneer Press and the Minneapolis Tribune and Times.

He was the best newspaper man in those diggings and his work on a mob of St. Paul thieves and hoodlums called the Rice Street Gang caressed his cheek with a cobblestone and left a scar which Chicken still wears almost three quarters of a century after two of the bunch were hanged for murder.

These were the only hangings of his time in the Twin Cities which Chicken did not cover. Altogether, he saw more than 50 men hanged there and in Chicago, where he hit West Madison Street in 1904, broke and worried about a hang for his wife and three kids up in Excelsior, Minn., waiting for him to land a job and send for them.

He handed the job the first day by bringing in a photograph of a young woman entangled in a slight scandal after the whole town had fallen. He just went up to the door, rang the bell, tipped his hat and asked for the picture and the girl's mother gave it to him.

This was called picture - chasing in those days and was no less important than the quick ascertainment and publication of facts. For that matter, facts were not too important but pictures were most important. Chicken soon was acknowledged among the stars in the wild competitive days of Chicago. He had a wonderful flow of language and his speed was fabulous with little lakes of copy, either handwritten in pencil in a courtroom or clouted out on his double-deck Smith Premier Invisible on which he still writes literary letters to remaining members of the family and survivors of the good old days in New York and Chicago.

Jim Bishop, who wrote "The Day Lincoln Was Shot," sat on the rewrite battery at the New York Mirror when Chicken was more than 75 and Jim recently said the old man used to drive him nuts the way he would whip out those little takes and yell "Boy!" to skip them over to the desk. They rarely had to correct as much as a mistyped letter of Chicken's copy.

There is a new professor of Journalism at the University of Arizona, who recently said in a Howard Phillips Lovecraft, who died in Rhode Island in 1937, is believed by many to have attained a place equal to that of Edgar Allan Poe in the creation of weird literature. Since the renewed interest in spiritualism, I have received many letters from readers asking if he has made any effort to communicate with the living since his death. I knew of nine until I read a letter written to the editor of Fate Magazine (and published in the October issue) by Muriel E. Eddy of Providence. Lovecraft often read his manuscripts aloud to members of the Eddy household and, on one occasion, said that if his brain continued "to work" after he expired, he would send a message in material form.

Seven months after his death, Mrs. Eddy says she dreamed of finding something on his grave in Swan Point Cemetery. Upon going there and searching in the long grass, she says she found a small translucent and perfectly polished heart-shaped white stone. She could find no other stone in the cemetery that even faintly resembled the material the heart was made of and she can't help wondering if it doesn't prove that the dead writer kept his promise.

kick-off interview in a local sheet that there never were any good old rough - and - tumble days in the newspaper business. But that just classifies him.

Chicken's 91th birthday is close upon him now and he is well and brightly except that his eyes have been dimming. He likes to get mail from old - timers at his home in retirement, at Rancho Toluca La Vista. The address is Arthur James Pegler, Rt. 1, Box 832, Tucson.

KIRO Controversy Has Become Political Issue

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — Another reason for Federal - Communications Commission's 18-month delay in granting a television license to Radio Station KIRO in Seattle consists of charges that Saul Haas, KIRO president and principal stockholder, pursued pro-Bolshevik policy as manager editor of the Seattle Union Record in the 1920's, when Washington refused to recognize the Moscow regime.

The KIRO controversy has become a political issue in Senator Warren G. Magnuson's re-election battle against Governor Arthur B. Langlie, an Eisenhower champion. Magnuson owns 3.24 per cent of KIRO's stock. A "conflict of interest" question has been raised because, as chairman of the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, he has jurisdiction over radio-television legislation and appointments to the FCC.

Examiner Thomas H. Donahue recommended in April, 1955, approval of KIRO's application for a television license, despite uncontradicted evidence that Haas, while U.S. Collector of Customs, pressured Charles Thomson, then KIRO owner, into selling Haas and "friends at Washington" he said he "had to take care of." KIRO stock for only $1 a share, although par value was $10. Haas eventually bought out KIRO.

Although conceding that Haas' action was "ethically and morally indefensible," Donahue favored his application. During this hearing, Donahue denied rival applicants the right to try to prove that, when Haas was editor of the Union Record, the newspaper pursued a pro-Moscow and anti-American policy.

Although the newspaper's files substantiated the charge that it had followed the "Moscow line," Donahue again recommended grant of the franchise to KIRO last July. However, the FCC has taken the matter out of his hands, and ordered a rehearing before the full commission.

The Union Record was originally owned by the Seattle Council of the American Federation of Labor, but Haas acquired it with a partner for about $700 in 1925. He admitted that the AFL "dominated" the newspaper because it was generally in default on its payments. It went into receivership and folded in 1928.

Many of the 40 editorials submitted in evidence could have appeared in Pravda or Izvestia, the Kremlin's house organs. One attributed the early German-Russian alliance to the "greed of imperialist Britain and France." It described the pact as the "longest step toward peace since Armistice Day."

Another predicted that the Communists would win in China, "despite efforts by foreign imperialists to attack the movement." Numerous editorials condemned the Coolidge-Kellogg policy toward Mexico and Nicaragua as "veiled imperialism." It said that "There is no Bolshevism so rank as that of the Secretary of State (Kellogg), for it is the Bolshevism of imperialism."

The following statement is typical: "Every murderous and destructive policy which fear-maddened capitalist governments could invent have been used against Russia."

It was also brought out that a certain Costigan broadcast news and comment over KIRO from 1935 to 1940, and that in 1948 he admitted that he was a Communist. Examiner Donahue felt there was no proof that Haas knew of Costigan's political beliefs.

KIRO's lawyer is Paul A. Porter.

Chunks Of Dark Bread, Cheese, And Bratwurst

By HENRY McLEMORE

GARMISCH, GERMANY — Time must tiptoe when passing Bavaria. It must not want to disturb the people.

The days, months, years, and centuries just get lost in the mountain peaks, or blanketed by the snow.

Either that, or the Bavarians just don't recognize the old man with the scythe, and let him go his way as they go theirs.

Never have I seen such complete indifference to the changes time has wrought in other parts of the civilized world.

The Bavarians like what they were born to, and what their forebears were born to, and only a handful of them have bothered to break step with the middle ages to get in time with the Twentieth Century.

Get out of the cities, and into the countryside, and you find everything as unchanged as the Alps must be unchanged.

When the Bavarians build a new house — and this is seldom, as the men before them apparently built for doomsday, or hereabouts — they stick to the ancient pattern wooden beam by wooden beam, plaster by plaster, balcony by balcony, and overhanging eave by overhanging eave — yes, and flowerbox by flowerbox.

If Herr Muller's cows care to walk the streets, window - shopping for whatever cows window-shop for, they are free to do so, good-naturedly sharing the sidewalks with the citizens.

(And Bavarian cows do like to window-shop. In Bad Tölz I admired a display of cuckoo-clocks while flanked by two fine, fat bossies, one of whom sported a bright, blue ribbon on what I guess is called a cowlick.)

The forests, they tell me, are the same, almost to the exact number, that the villagers used for fuel, food and pleasure centuries ago. A tree is planted for every one cut, and the forest master continues to know each and deer almost by sight and name.

It's a mighty small Bavarian town that doesn't have its own brewery, brewing the same stout stuff in the same buildings, and with the same equipment, that poured down the throats of the good burghers in the 16th and 17th centuries.

When the Bavarians gather at night in the beer halls and they are great nightly gatherings, more than likely they sit around the same massive tables that held the chunks of dark bread, big pals of butter, cheese and bratwurst of stout men of good cheer years and years ago. There, before them, carved deep in the wood, are the initials of their forefathers. And on the walls, their ancestors' pictures look down, appearing, it seems, a bit thirsty for a deep and satisfying guzzle from a pewter-capped stein.

A visitor from the long ago could return to any Bavarian town and not know that he had been away, if he were to use the dress, the habits, the speech, and the behavior of the people as a guide. The men wear lederhosen by summer, gray-green woolen suits by winter. And on their heads, or on a peg, are their green velvet hats, decorated with a jaunty brush.

The women work and play in dirndls of bright colors, and they braid their hair the same as always. If the visitor's eyes roamed over the fields he would see the same oxen working the fields, and along the narrow, winding, tree-bordered dirt roads, he would see the horse - drawn carts plodding their way.

And if he listened, he would hear the same hearty laughter, coming from faces cheery with happiness over their lot.

It's a true travelogue land — and it's real.

SIDELINED—His injured left hind leg held off the ground, Swaps is led from a horse ambulance at Garden State Park, Camden, N. J., by Trainer Meshach Tenney. The world record-holder suffered a ruptured blood vessel during a workout, will be out of action for four months. He has raced with a pad on his right forefoot since he was a two-year-old.

Swaps Still In Bad Shape; Yanks Divvy Derby Winner Can Make If Series Loot

CAMDEN, N.J. (UP)—The life of Swaps, a million dollar horse, hung today on two metal rods, a sling and some plaster and plastic.

The items make up a specially designed cast around Swaps' broken left hind leg and a rig to keep it two inches off the floor of his Garden State Park stall.

The cast, devised by Dr. Jacques Jenney of the University of Pennsylvania veterinary hospital, has immobilized Swaps' maimed leg from the hock down to promote healing and prevent recurrence of last Sunday's bad bump which aggravated a still tender bone break below the knee.

On it, depend life and recovery for the chestnut geld, world record-breaker four times and fourth highest money winner in American racing history with earnings of $848,000.

Swaps, 1955 Kentucky Derby winner, was reported resting comfortably by his trainer, Meshach Tenney. But Tenney admitted that additional injuries or further aggravation of his present plight, could put the thoroughbred on the critical list.

All-Around Athlete Is Missouri's Ace Passer

By LYLE SCHWILLING
United Press Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY (UP)—Jimmy Hunter of Missouri, a kid who began learning football from his dad about the time he learned to walk, celebrates his 21st birthday Saturday as Missouri opens its drive in the Orange Bowl race.

"While he has played great ball for us in the past, I really think Jimmy will come into his own in the important conference race," Coach Don Faurot said.

The six-foot, 193-pound senior quarterback was born at Newport, Ark., on Oct. 20, 1935 and it wasn't long before his father, T. M. Hunter, was showing him the tricks of football.

He played high school ball under his father's coaching at Webb City, Mo., earned 13 letters as an all-around athlete and won All-State honors as a fullback.

Injuries Sideline Him
He played halfback and then quarterback at Missouri, but saw little action last season due to injuries. Apparently over his injury jinx now, Hunter is the biggest single reason why Missouri is favored to finish second in the conference behind Oklahoma and play in the Orange Bowl.

NEW YORK (UP)—After all these years, Enos Slaughter finally knows what they mean when they say it's great to be a Yankee.

Slaughter, with the club only since Aug. 25, was voted three-quarters of a World Series share, $6,536.10, and the traditionally generous Yankees also handed out 32 other full shares of $1,714.76 apiece in the official distribution today.

The less open handed Dodgers voted only 28 full shares, each one being worth $6,934.34, an all-time high for a defeated World Series team.

Of the 32 full shares voted by the Yankees, 24 went to players who were with the club all season four full shares went to Stengel and his three coaches, one to trainer Gus Mauch, and a full share apiece to Irv Noren and Phil Rizzuto.

those was infielder Don Zimmer, forced out for the season during July when he was hit by a pitch. Manager Walt Alston, his three coaches and the trainer also were voted full shares.

World Series hero of 1955, Johnny Podres, now in the Navy, was given $500.

For second place money, the Cleveland Indians received full shares worth $1,649.05 and the Milwaukee Braves $1,598.32. A full third place share was worth $1,112.75 to the Chicago White Sox and $1,185.25 per man to the Cincinnati Redlegs. The fourth place Boston Red Sox each got a full share worth $505.71 and the out with the fourth place St. Louis Cardinals amounted to $502.03 apiece.

"He is the man who makes us lick, both running and passing, and is great on defense," Faurot added. "As Hunter goes, so will go Missouri's football fortunes."

He Leads Passers
While Hunter is better as a runner than as a passer, he still leads the Big Seven Conference in the aerial department, completing 15 of 29 for 183 yards. And Faurot says that he is "great enough on defense alone to make the grade in the pro ranks."

LOS ANGELES (UP)—The man on whose shoulders rest America's track and field hopes in the coming Olympic games was completely optimistic today.

Coach Jim Kelly says morale is good and "everyone will equal or better his performance in the Olympic trials."

will do a good job at Melbourne," he said. He set at rest any fears his team will be out of shape for the competition starting in November.

"Right now my biggest problem is getting the boys to stop their workouts so they won't overtrain," he told United Press.

Doak Walker Announces Youth Contest

Doak Walker, former Southern Methodist University All-American and one of the star players with the professional football Detroit Lions, today announced a national essay contest open to the young people of America between the ages of 14 and 19. With a $1000 college scholarship as the grand prize, a total of 104 separate awards will be given to the boys and girls writing the best essay on the subject: "How America Can Best Fight Communism."

Walker made this announcement as a member of the Advisory Board of Facts Forum, Inc., the nonprofit educational organization sponsoring this contest. With headquarters in Dallas, Facts Forum's activities are designed to show how each citizen can have an active part in shaping America's future and include weekly radio and television programs now carried on more than 1000 stations. October issue of Facts Forum News, their official publication, carries complete contest rules and an entry form.

According to Walker, the many articles in Facts Forum News on the Communist conspiracy reveal that the "new look" of Soviet policy makes the threat even more deadly and calls for ever-increasing vigilance. "The coming generation must be prepared to recognize and cope with equally disarming methods which will be advanced by the Communists as they continue their struggle for world domination. Only by encouraging our leaders of tomorrow to prepare for their task today can Communism be defeated," said Walker.

Gifts to Society
Among Arabian gifts to European medieval society were the art of fortification, knightly tournaments, the troubadour, and chivalry itself.

Ease Bladder Irritations

Get Wonderful Soothing Relief
From That Restless Uncomfortable Feeling
Such a common thing as unwise eating or drinking may be a source of mild, but annoying bladder irritations—making you feel restless, tense, and uncomfortable. And if restless nights, with nagging backache, headache or muscular aches and pains due to over-exertion, strain or emotional upset, are adding to your misery—don't wait—
try Doan's Pills.

Doan's Pills have three outstanding advantages—act in three ways for your speedy return to comfort. 1—They have an easing soothing effect on bladder irritations. 2—A fast pain-relieving action on nagging backache, headache, muscular aches and pains.
3—A wonderfully mild diuretic action thru the kidneys, tending to increase the output of the 15 miles of kidney tubes, get the same happy relief millions have enjoyed for over 60 years. Ask for new, large, economy size and save money. Get Doan's Pills today!

THIS WOKE HIM UP—Sir Laurence Olivier as "The Sleeping Prince" receives his first screen kiss from Marilyn Monroe on the movie set in London, England. Reports from the studio state that perfectionist Olivier had this sequence shot over and over, all day long, to get the kiss on film perfectly.
Anyhow, that's the official version of the day-long smooch.
The sound man lowered the boom on this picture of the kiss and his microphone obscures a portion of Olivier's face.
