City Names Friday Inez Carter Day

Mayor R.D. Wilkerson has signed a proclamation naming Friday as Inez Carter Day in observance of the many contributions made by her to the community and to individuals.

The Pampa Optimist Boys Club is sponsoring a reception for Mrs. Carter from 7-8:30 p.m. Friday, her 86th birthday, in the Optimist Building.

Hostesses for the reception will be the Pampa Altrusa Club, the Business and Professional Women's Club and the Opti-Mrs. Club.

All Pampa residents are invited to attend the reception. Optimist Pres. R.W. McPhillips said to give a "thank you."

The mayor's proclamation reads: "Whereas, Inez Carter has through the years taken an active interest in projects to aid and assist others; and

"Whereas, those who have benefited from her generosity would be legion, just a few of such benefactors being the Pampa Optimist Boys' Club, Pampa Youth and Community Center, Altrusa Club, and Boys' Ranch Foundation of Amarillo; and

"Whereas, Inez Carter has always quietly worked for the good of her community, never asking fame or recognition for her charitable works; and

"Whereas, her neighbors and good friends wish to say Thank You to a grand and noble lady; Now, therefore, I, R.D. Wilkerson, Mayor of the City of Pampa, do hereby proclaim Friday, Aug. 24, 1973, Inez Carter Day in Pampa, and urge all citizens to do honor to Inez Carter on her 86th birthday."

Fiery Object A Satellite?

The object seen Tuesday night in the sky east of Pampa was apparently one of the several thousand space satellites orbiting about the earth.

It is believed that it completely burned up upon entering the earth's atmosphere and did not hit the ground.

Walt Sutherland, news director of KGRO radio in Pampa, did some checking on the object yesterday to determine just what it was.

After getting in touch with the Federal Aviation Agency, Sutherland was referred to NORAD. According to that agency, the fireball was space object number 6723 (their designation). It first appeared in the vicinity of Great Bend, Nebr. at 10:58:30 Tuesday night.

Sutherland was told by the FAA that people as far south as Amarillo had reported seeing the object.

UNDER PEACE PROGRAM U.S. May Cut Wheat Exports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With commercial wheat exports booming and prices riding at record levels, the United States may cut wheat shipments under the Food for Peace program to the lowest level since the program began in 1955, officials indicated today.

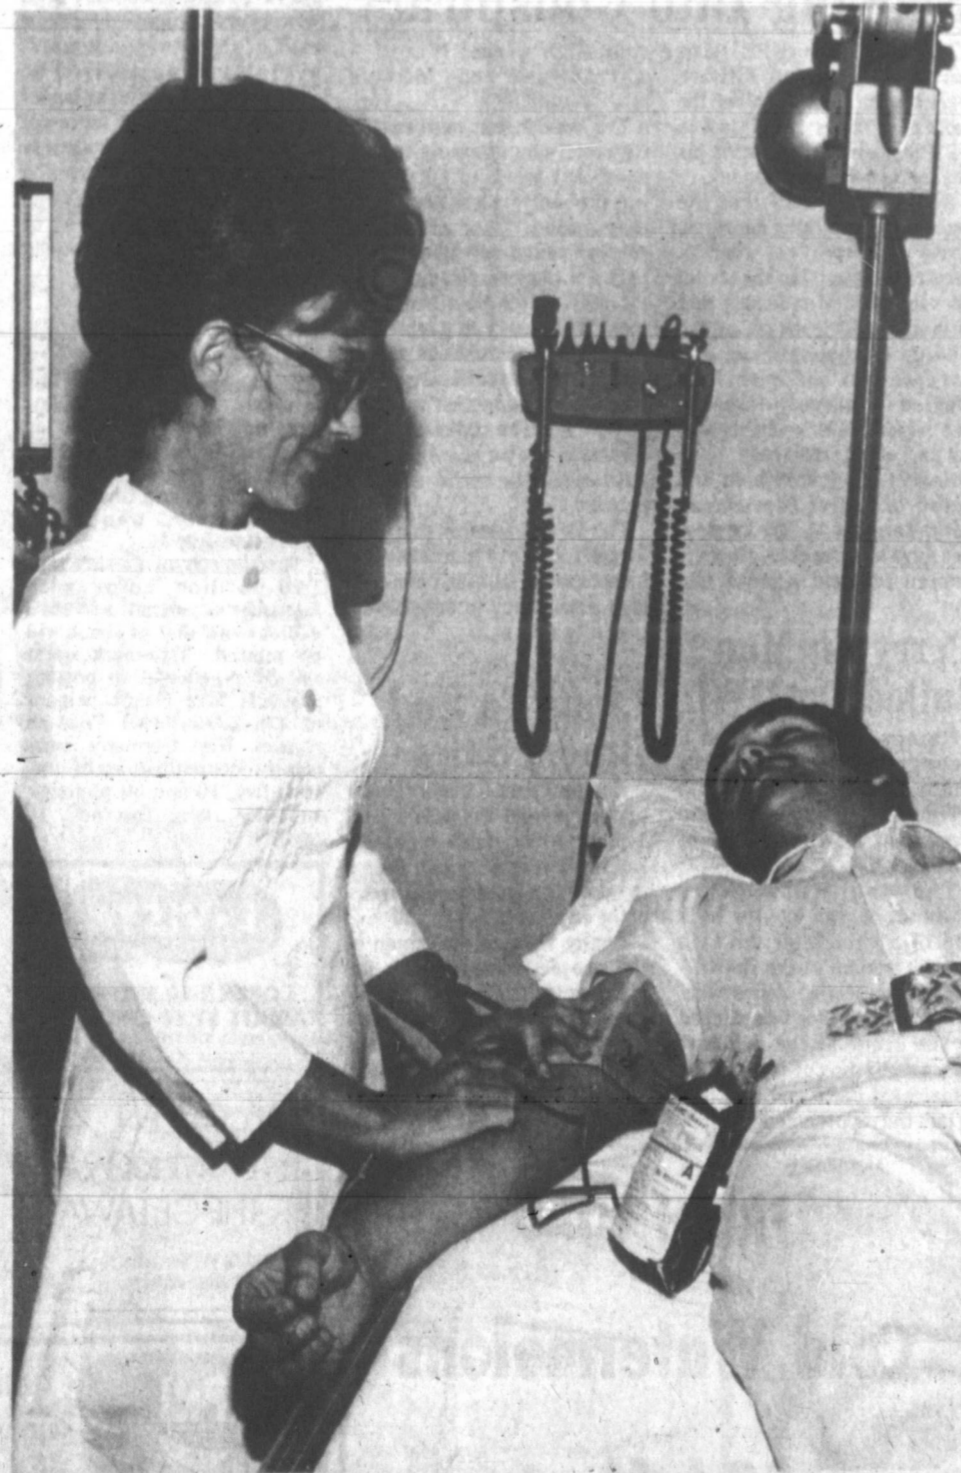

Exports under the long-term credit phase of the program, which reached a peak of about 500 million bushels annually during the 1960's, had fallen to 194.5 million bushels in the 1970-71 marketing season, 174.1 million in 1971-72, and then dropped sharply to an estimated 95 million bushels in the 1972-73 season which ended June 30.

Officials said today they are still reviewing the supply situation to determine how much can be shipped under the program in the current 1973-74 marketing year. While no decisions have been made yet, one expert said there are "very preliminary indications" that shipments in the new season could be down to about one-third of the 1972-73 level.

A cut of that size could bring exports under "Title I" of the Food for Peace program, which covers sales for long-term credit, down to the neighborhood of 32 million bushels. This would be the lowest figure since the 1954-55 marketing season when the program was launched about halfway through the season.

In 1954-55, Title I wheat exports—at that time shipped in return for foreign currencies—were reported at 23.8 million bushels for the half year in which the program operated. In 1955-56, shipments rose to 34.3 million bushels.

Nixon Conceals Anger At News Conference

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — President Nixon told an emotionally charged news conference Wednesday he is not going to resign and said "I would have blown my stack" if he had been told the illegal and

"very, very embarrassing" facts in the Watergate case by former Attorney General John Mitchell.

He also predicted that two former top aides, H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, will be exonerated "when they have an opportunity to have their case heard in court," an indication he expects them to be indicted.

The President displayed pent-up anger during his 50-minute televised press conference on the lawn of the Western White House, but was in command when faced with a volley of questions which amounted to a cross examination of his personal role in the scandal.

He began the session by announcing the resignation of Secretary of State William P. Rogers and the appointment of foreign policy adviser Henry A. Kissinger as his successor, effective Sept. 3.

Anger Barely Concealed
The President's voice trembled when he lashed out with barely concealed anger at his critics in the press and Congress and "those who would use the Watergate affair to destroy me."

He said he would "impute no improper motives" to "some political figures, some members of the press, and some members of the television" industry who would exploit the issue.

But he added, "I think they would prefer that I fail."

"On the other hand," he declared forcefully, "I am not going to fail. I am here to do a job and I am going to do the best I can...."

At the same time, when asked how much "personal blame" he accepted for the abuses, he replied: "I accept it all."

"When you say, do I consider resigning, the answer is no, I shall not resign," he said.

At the no-holds-barred session, Nixon also said specifically:

—He did not recall former acting FBI Director Patrick Gray warning him in a July 6, 1972 telephone call that some of Nixon's closest White House aides were trying to "mortally wound" him by not cooperating in the Watergate investigation.

Confidence is Strengthened
—His confidence in Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's

integrity was not only unchanged but "strengthened" despite Agnew's investigation for possible criminal violations. Nixon vigorously denounced "outrageous" news leaks about the inquiry into possible kickbacks and promised to fire whoever was responsible.

—He told former White House Counsel John Dean last March 21, and Dean agreed, that it would be wrong to raise as much as $1 million for the Watergate conspirators or to grant executive clemency.

Throughout the period following the June 17, 1972, break-in at the Democratic Party headquarters he would have expected Mitchell to tell him "if he was involved or if anyone else was involved. He did not tell me."

Nixon did not explain why he never asked Mitchell, who had testified that if the President had asked him he would have told him "chapter and verse."

Rogers Resigns Secretary Role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers, the last survivor of the original Nixon Cabinet, has resigned and will be replaced by presidential national security adviser Henry A. Kissinger.

President Nixon at his news conference Wednesday in San Clemente, Calif., announced that Kissinger would become secretary of state Sept. 3 while retaining his present job as a presidential assistant.

The 50-year-old naturalized native of Germany will thus have broader scope in foreign affairs than any of his 55 predecessors.

An interesting legal question arises from the fact that Kissinger, as a presidential assistant, can invoke "executive privilege" to avoid testifying before Congress on foreign policy. On the other hand, as secretary of state he does not have this immunity and is supposed to present the administration's views to Congress in public and private.

A Reluctant Diplomat
Rogers, the reluctant diplomat who never really wanted to be secretary of state, told newsmen that "I feel like the last of the whooping cranes. I'm the only one who stayed four and a half years."

George P. Shultz, labor secretary in the first Nixon Cabinet, is now secretary of the Treasury but served in between Cabinet positions as director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Rogers claimed that he told Nixon at the beginning he would only stay four years and tried to get out last January. He asserted, however, that unfinished business in Indochina, the Middle East, Latin America and Europe persuaded him to stay on for seven more months.

Behind the gentle humor of Rogers' remarks, newsmen who have known him for many years thought they detected considerable disillusionment with the actions of the current administration, probably ascribed to the Watergate affair.

Despite the cordiality of the letters exchanged by Rogers and Nixon, it was clear that their friendship of a quarter of a century had cooled somewhat in recent months.

Rogers Denies Suggestions
Rogers denied suggestions that he was quitting because of the Watergate scandal, which has besmirched the Nixon administration, although the secretary is one of the few who has not been touched by it.

He said: "I would have left whether there had been a Watergate or no Watergate. That doesn't mean I don't have feelings about Watergate."

Manager Files 2 Budgets

Two budgets, one for $2.5 million in city operating funds for fiscal 1973-74 and another in the amount of $250,000 in federal-revenue sharing money for capital outlay, were filed in the city secretary's office today by City Manager Mack Wofford.

The combined budgets will total approximately $2.8 million to be spent by the city in the upcoming fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

Both budgets are proposals and have not yet been finalized. They are now open for public inspection at the city secretary's office by any interested persons.

A public hearing on the budget is scheduled at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 11, at a regular meeting of the Pampa City Commission in City Hall.

The proposed operating budget is approximately $330,000 above the budget prepared in 1972 for the current fiscal year which will end Sept. 30.

City Manager Wofford pointed out again today that $210,000 of the increased budget is accounted for in proposed wage boosts for city employees.

Balance of the increase is attributed by Wofford to inflation and new items of expense facing the city now that were not faced last year.

Blood Supply Donation Set

Due to a critical shortage of available blood supply in the immediate Panhandle area, a blood drive will be conducted in the basement of the First United Methodist Church from 4-6 p.m. Friday.

Anyone interested in donating a pint of blood in order to replenish the emergency supply is urged to participate in the drive, a Highland General Hospital spokesman said.

The Blood Plan Insurance Program will be offered at the same time for those wishing to join.

Details will be provided by a representative of the Coffee Memorial Blood Bank of Amarillo, major blood supplier for the Panhandle area.

Marshall Formby and his wife, of Plainview, prior to Formby's addressing the noon luncheon of the club Wednesday at Coronado Inn. Rep. Price Says Courts Should Handle Watergate

U.S. Rep. Bob Price of Pampa, speaking at a "Town Hall" meeting yesterday in Canyon, joined with President Nixon in insisting the Watergate affair should be handled by the courts.

Price blasted the Senate Watergate hearings as being based primarily on what he called "insinuation and innuendo."

The Pampa congressman has been making a series of appearances in the Panhandle during the past few days.

He also spoke yesterday in Borger and Panhandle and concluded his public meetings in the district until Aug. 31, when he is tentatively scheduled to visit Spearman, Perryton, Canadian and Miami.

Town Hall meetings also are tentatively scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 1, in Groover, Dalhart, Stratford and Dumas.

Price's office in Pampa stated today the congressman so far has no public appearances scheduled in his hometown on the month-end trip.

In his Canyon speech yesterday, Price said coverage of the Watergate affair by the "liberal press in the East" has done more to destroy faith of the people in America than any event since the nation was founded.

Price said the Revenue Sharing program is one way government has brought control back to the people.

"The money comes back to the people you yourselves elect," he said, adding that 40 per cent of the money that goes to Washington is used up in administration.

Indifference, confusion and waste were cited by Price as characteristics of bureaucratic Washington.

"Inflation is our most pressing domestic problem," he said, and cited the $450 billion national debt, growth and waste in the federal bureaucracy and the demands of organized labor and failure of industry to help fight inflation as major causes.

Intentionally-raised interest rates are one device the administration has taken to curb inflation, he said.

"A lot of people are critical of high interest rates, but its intended purpose over the long run is to benefit all of us," he said.

Price said the Russian wheat deal has ushered in a new era in America by generating a shortage here and abroad, creating a "tremendous demand" for our products.

"I feel we're entering a new era of trying to meet domestic needs and foreign markets," he said.

"It will be a new era for people in agriculture and for all the cities in our district."

Subcommittee To Review Salaries Of Legislators

AUSTIN (UPI)—A House ethics subcommittee plans to ask for public response to a plan that would allow a State Ethics Commission to set legislators' salaries.

The Constitutional Revision Commission has adopted a recommendation to set up such a commission and Rep. Larry Bales, D-Austin, said Wednesday he wants the subcommittee study so he can make recommendations at the constitutional convention next year.

Under the current state constitution, voters set salaries of legislators, and several proposals for higher pay have been rejected.

A constitutional amendment to increase the pay from $4,800 a year to $15,000 a year will go before the voters in November.

The subcommittee study was suggested by Speaker Price Daniel Jr. in a letter to State Affairs Committee Chairman Rep. David Finney, D-Fort Worth. Finney asked Bales and his subcommittee to "gather all available information and material about commissions in other states, and report its recommendations as far in advance of the convention as possible."

Bales said Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby, both of whom opposed the ethics commission idea, would be invited to appear before the subcommittee, which Bales said he hopes would convene in September.

"We're going to give them the opportunity to come before the committee and make known the reasons for their opposition," Bales said.

Basted Armadillo Is Good?

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Basted armadillo stuffed with ripe vegetables and smothered in melted butter is probably no immediate threat to the Thanksgiving Turkey.

But at the home of Bob Carlisle, it's found on the dinner table at least three to four times a year.

They laughed at Bob Carlisle when he started talking about different recipes for the tasty little tank. But with the current beef shortage, the laughter is now a mild chuckle.

"My gosh, it's one of the easiest animals in the world to catch," Carlisle said. "We've caught them bare-handed before. Once a friend and I were camped out along the Guadalupe River and we heard something rustling in the bushes. It was an armadillo. I got my friends to shine a flashlight in its eyes and I snuck up from behind and grabbed it. We barbecued it on the spot. It sure was good."

The tough-shelled armadillo, abundant in most of Texas east of the Pecos River, eats vegetation and insects but is considered a nuisance by farmers because of its indiscriminate selection of places to burrow. When confronted with danger and no escape, the armadillo will roll into a ball and depend upon its hide for protection.

"I'm getting kind of choosy about my armadillos," Carlisle said. "The smaller ones are more tender and some of the old armadillos can sure get tough."

"It's very good, clean meat if properly prepared. First you might want to skin him out of the shell, cut it up like chicken or rabbit and fry it. Sometimes I'll skin it out of the shell and smoke it — very slowly — and paint it with barbecue sauce. But my favorite is to bake them in the shell — it's a lot of trouble but it sure is good."

Carlisle cleans the animal, places it in a big pan and stuffs it with carrots, apple slices, potatoes and cabbage. He seasons with salt, pepper, garlic and other ingredients and thoroughly drenches it in butter.

"Baste it at 350 degrees for four hours, adding butter every 30 minutes," Carlisle said. "You can then serve it right in the shell, but some people don't like that. If not, chill it and the meat will peel right out of the shell. You can serve it chilled or warm it up again."

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department has no season or daily bag limit on the armadillo — it is by no means an endangered species. But armadillo hunters must purchase the standard state hunting license if they plan to go after the armored creature outside their own county.

"I've taught my boys (aged 16, 14 and 10) how to shoot armadillos," Carlisle said. "You've got to get it right in the ear or the eye and not spoil that good meat."

President Nixon Offers Agnew Qualified Support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon offered guarded support of his vice president Wednesday, praising Spiro T. Agnew's "integrity" but stopping short of declaring absolute belief in his innocence of complicity in Maryland corruption.

A spokesman for Agnew said the vice president welcomed Nixon's support—and found it unsurprising. The spokesman, Agnew's press secretary Marsh Thompson, also dismissed a story in the Chicago Sun-Times which said "vicious, Kremlin-like infighting" has broken out between Agnew on the one hand and Nixon and Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson on the other.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department has no season or daily bag limit on the armadillo — it is by no means an endangered species. But armadillo hunters must purchase the standard state hunting license if they plan to go after the armored creature outside their own county.

Highway Patrol Gives Report On Accidents

The Texas Highway Patrol investigated accidents on rural highways in Gray County during the month of July, according to Sergeant J.L. Dalrymple, Highway Patrol supervisor of this area.

These crashes resulted in no persons killed and 21 persons injured.

The rural traffic accident summary for this county during the first six months of 1973 shows a total of 130 accidents resulting in 12 persons killed and 68 persons injured.

The rural traffic accident summary for the 60 counties of the Lubbock Department of Public Safety Region for July, 1973 shows a total of 658 accidents resulting in 21 persons killed and 366 persons injured as compared to July, 1972 with 713 accidents resulting in 34 persons killed and 388 persons injured.

This was 55 less accidents, 13 less fatalities, and 22 less injured in 1973 at the same period of time. The 21 traffic deaths for the month of July, 1973 occurred in the following counties: Lubbock, Sherman, Wilbarger, three each; Palo Pinto, Parker, two each; Hockley, Jack, Lamb, Parker, Wise, Hutchinson, Potter, and Oldham, one each.

Fighters Continue Battle With Fires

By United Press International
Fire fighters in Idaho and Montana played hop-scotch today with nearly 100 small timber and brush fires touched off by lightning. In California, the spread of two big forest blazes was stopped.

U.S. Forest Rangers at Boise, Idaho, reported that there were only seven major fires still out of control in the West and they had consumed nearly 70,000 acres of timber and brush land. They said 43 fires, covering 130,000 acres, were now under control.

The fires have been plaguing the West the past week. Dry weather, wind and lightning contributed to the problems for an army of firemen and fleet of air tankers.

Fred McBride of the intelligence section of the Boise Interagency Fire Center said officials hoped that all the big fires would be under control by the weekend.

As for the lightning-caused blazes, he said, "We're hoping we can stay on top of these."

In California, one fire in the Sierra near Lake Tahoe charred 10,000 acres but the flames were not spreading. And in the northern part of the state flames in a 19,500-acre brush

Chile's Legislature Criticizes Allende

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — The Chamber of Deputies accused President Salvador Allende of violating the constitution Wednesday night and called on the armed forces to make sure his Marxist government obeys the law.

The 81-47 vote, coming near the end of a 48-hour strike by hundreds of thousands of Chileans protesting Allende's labor policies, condemned the government for "constant trampling of the guarantees and fundamental rights established in the constitution."

The rightist National party and the centrist Christian Democrats pushed the resolution through the lower house after legislators shelved an even tougher motion declaring the Allende government "illegal and illegitimate."

Busts of riot police were stationed outside Congress during the chamber session to prevent a recurrence of Tuesday's violent clashes between bands of militant leftist and rightists. At least 10 persons were wounded by gunfire in the fighting.

The resolution criticizing Allende called on the armed forces "to immediately end all

Secret Service And FBI Looking Into Conspiracy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Secret Service and FBI are working hard to discover the roots of a "very real" plot to kill President Nixon during his visit to New Orleans Monday.

Sources told UPI that the agencies are working intensively on what they consider "a very real thing," but the Secret Service said Wednesday that former New Orleans policeman Edwin Michael Gaudet Jr., arrested in northern New Mexico for allegedly threatening Nixon's life, probably was not part of the conspiracy.

Gaudet, 30, surrendered to a posse of Secret Servicemen near Taos, N.M., Wednesday, two days after he eluded heavily armed federal agents who Missing from the Lefors branch plant were a calculator, an adding machine and a typewriter.

Mexico Dam Burst Kills 300 Persons

IRAPUATO, Mexico (UPI) — President Luis Echeverria Wednesday toured flood-ravaged Irapuato where thousands of homes were wiped out and an estimated 300 persons died when a dam burst, sending a seven-foot-high wall of water crashing into the city.

A cameraman who flew over the scene Tuesday said it looked "really bad—like Managua after the Dec. 23, 1972, earthquake. At least 40,000 houses were destroyed."

Larger buildings remained standing but most of the town's adobe houses were washed away.

Army teams dug through the mud and debris searching for victims. The army said 124 persons were confirmed dead but some sources said the death toll may rise to 300.

The disaster struck this central Mexico city of 180,000 persons Monday, the same day Hurricane Brenda slammed into Mexico's eastern coast and killed at least five persons.

Dear Abby

Couple's dinnertime visits your own fault

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A nervy couple we know drops by unexpectedly several times a week—and always at dinnertime, so we have to invite them to stay for dinner. They are breaking us in the food department. They finish off everything so we never have any leftovers. Also, they drink coffee [which isn't cheap] by the gallon. When one pot is empty the wife gets up and makes another pot, just like she's in her own home.

They invited us to dinner at their place twice, and both times they served rice while they bragged that they had a whole cow in their freezer!

Don't suggest that we tell them we ate already when they come over. We tried that once and they said: "So did we," came in and sat until midnight and everybody's stomach was growling so loud we could hardly hear ourselves talk.

So how do we tell this couple not to come for dinner without hurting their feelings? STUCK

DEAR STUCK: What feelings? If you permit unwelcome guests to impose on you, look for sympathy under "S" in the dictionary.

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorced woman of 43 who has been dating a 50-year-old bachelor for two years. I'd like to know if I'm wasting my time. I cook him a full hot meal at least four nights a week, and how that man loves to eat! He is so sweet and affectionate to my two daughters, who are 10 and 12, but he never kisses me unless I practically force myself on him. The first time he kissed me I was boarding a bus to go visit my mother and I said: "Aren't you going to kiss me goodbye?" So he kissed me.

Do you think there is something wrong with a man his age who can hardly keep his hands off 10 and 12-year-old girls but never makes a move toward a mature woman?

Also, he never says a word about our future. Should I bring it up? I would like to know where I stand.

TIRED OF WAITING

DEAR TIRED: Don't waste any more time on him. But to be sure you aren't passing up a likely prospect, ask him how he feels about marriage. I'll bet he disappears in a hurry, which will be a break for you.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's mother keeps telling me that a man's wife is nothing—his mother is the most important person in his life because a man can have 10 wives, but he can have only one mother.

I have the impression that she would like nothing more than to break up my marriage so she could have her son back home. She is twice-divorced.

My husband is a kind and gentle man, but he refuses to enter into any kind of controversy where his mother is concerned.

She thinks that because she attends church regularly and knows the Bible backwards and forwards she is a "good" woman.

Since my husband refuses to take my part against her, how can I defend myself? HURT

DEAR HURT: Tell her to refer to her Bible: "Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife." [Genesis 2, 24]

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HELP ME IN ALBANY, N. Y.": I doubt if any ethical doctor would be willing to remove all your female organs because you find "all that female business a nuisance." And at age 29, you may have regrets later for having done so.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

A safety play is a play designed to guard against some form of misfortune. Some safety plays aren't guaranteed to work. Others risk an important overtrick, but all are designed to increase declarer's chance of bringing home the bacon.

South ruffs the second spade and sees that he is going to make his five-diamond contract provided he doesn't lose more than one trump trick. He also sees that he has no way to avoid the loss of at least one.

He leads a diamond toward dummy. West plays the 10 and dummy's king wins.

He leads back the deuce of diamonds. If East plays the queen or jack South will win with his ace; lead the nine and be sure of his contract. But East doesn't play the jack. He simply drops the seven-spot on the table.

This is the best that East can do and it will work if South goes up with his ace, but South has no reason to do this. The play of the nine-spot guarantees the contract at no risk whatsoever and as such is a perfect safety play.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, AUGUST 24

Your birthday today: Your optimism runs as a bright streak thru the mixed "luck" of this coming exciting but unsettled year. Many things you would never have expected to meet do have to be met, and in most instances, you must go it alone. Prayer and meditation, taken up as daily habits, give you the help you need. Today's natives tend to have critical, orderly minds, strong convictions, and some skepticism.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: While no problem is quite ended today, marked progress is probable. Be quick to realize that even those who normally oppose you tend to be helpful. Circumstances improve as the day wears on.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Pushing yourself and others into hasty action isn't the thing to do. Continue with what has been planned; get it done thoroughly, at a reasonable pace. Take time out for your own needs.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Remember that today's influences are on a strictly local level, so that much of what your mate or partner puts you thru makes little sense beyond the day or far away from the place. Bear with it all.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Loosen up—introduce friends, acquaintances, new contacts; then stand back and enjoy their encounters. It's a day for unconventional, extraordinary deeds. Spring an idea you've worked out well.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Up early and on the go! Long-standing hindrances and unfinished matters can be pushed aside by diligent effort, common sense. Salesmanship is something else; even great salesmen meet high resistance.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: You have a clear field on which to do almost anything reasonable and appropriate to your situation and means. The one element of concern is your awareness of what you are and really want to do.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: As you close out your work week, be aware of the fact that when you come back, you'll not settle in exactly where and how you leave off now. Plan for an intense weekend ahead, serious activity, movement.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Your personality glows, brightens the day. Career matters take an upward turn, move on to better prospects. Prefer what's at hand and build on it rather than continue chasing distant rainbows.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Very attractive proposals are quite probable, but may be nothing like what you'd choose if you knew all the details. If possible, postpone making final decisions or signing any legal documents.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Play it safe, wind up your work week neatly. Definite changes are certain to come, particularly in the home but don't force issues now, or precipitate more than needed. Get extra rest.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Life in general seems easier to contend with today, at your own pace, that is. If you communicate with people who are far away, do it in the morning—you may not find them available later.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Be early and attentive, as mild as your mood allows, for a conservative day. There's apt to be no really clear path open and you must feel your way thru a variety of complex dealings.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Keep Medical Data In File Card Box

By Polly Cramer

Dear Polly — I wonder how many mothers can, on a moment's notice, provide medical records for their children. I have eight children and have kept a complete medical record on each one by putting the information on file cards kept in a recipe file box. Each child has his own file — when they had shots and which ones, different childhood diseases, surgery, dental work and also lists of appointments, eye examinations and so on. I have found this invaluable. It is so easy to forget even when a family is smaller than mine. — DONNA

DEAR GIRLS — How I wish I had done just that. Even though my children are grown, they frequently need such information. — POLLY

Polly's Problem
DEAR POLLY — I recently fell heir to a large old-fashioned trunk and an average size footlocker. I would like some suggestions on how they can be refinished or re-decorated because both have a sentimental value for me. — MRS. W. J. T.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with gentlemen who cannot take "No" for an answer when they offer to buy additional drinks for someone in a restaurant or lounge. Some of us do not like more than one or two drinks and do not appreciate it when someone tries to force more on us by ordering rounds for the entire table and letting them stack up around our plates. I feel such a person merely wants to show off the fact that he has a lot of money to spend. — CHRISTINE

DEAR POLLY — I am answering Helen who wants to know how to clean the bronze flatware her husband sent her from Thailand. My husband shipped a beautiful set to me while he was in Vietnam and I, too, was at a loss how I should clean it until he came home. Being a Marine, his "brass" had to be polished for nightly inspection and this gave us the idea of trying brass polish. We did and the flatware came out just gorgeous. Just follow the directions on the can and I am sure you will have the same success. Good luck! — MARGARET

DEAR GIRLS — I have a serving knife that must be the same kind and type (a Buddha on the handle) and find brass or copper cleaner really does the job, but it does spot easily. Be sure and wash after polishing. Jean C. who wrote that she uses a copper cleaner on her set, says it helps to keep this flatware wrapped in cloth between use (flannel would be good) as exposure to the air hastens the discoloration. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I mix a small amount of instant coffee with water to make a paste to cover marred spots and scratches on furniture. When dry, the marks are scarcely noticeable. To hold pleats in place, anchor the tops of the pleats on the back of the garment with no-iron mending tape. This is not visible from the top when used on most materials. — ESTHER

Weekly Market Report

COLLEGE STATION — Stretch, extend and substitute are key words consumers should apply to meat items this week.

This advice comes from Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"Shortages in meat cases — plus higher prices — dictate restraint in meat buying.

"As a result, consumers rely on making the most efficient use of meat purchases — satisfying a family's meat hunger isn't easy these days.

The specialist recommended stretching available ground beef with bread, oatmeal, tapioca, ground carrots, mashed potatoes or cooked rice when preparing meatloaf.

"Or, for a delicious, unusual meatloaf, line the bottom of the pan with meat mixture, top with a layer of stuffing and another layer of meat."

Another technique for efficient use involves combining a small quantity of cooked meat with gravy or white sauce. Extend with vegetables — such as peas and carrots — and serve over toast, hot biscuits, rice, noodles or mashed potatoes.

"A smaller portion of meat served with pasta, bread, cheese, milk, eggs, yogurt, cottage cheese or cooked legumes provides enough nutrients to meet daily requirements of family members," Mrs. Clyatt emphasized.

This is also a good time to use other protein foods — such as peanuts, peanut butter, dry beans and peas, rice and macaroni products — as main dish items, the specialist contended.

"Call on fresh, frozen or canned fish as an economical stand-in for traditional meat," she added.

"Pork remains in short supply — with what's available priced relatively high. In general, pork shoulder steaks, Boston butt roasts, 1/2-loin cut into chops, liver and canned hams offer the best values."

Despite rising prices, eggs "hold their own" with most other protein foods, Mrs. Clyatt said. "Although in moderate supply, current price levels have tempered demand somewhat."

Turning to fresh fruits, she noted that moderate prices accompany heavy nectarine supplies.

"Peach supplies are good, retailing the same to lower. Watermelons remain reasonably priced and in good supply — with sizes somewhat larger. Plentiful Pecos cantaloupes offer excellent flavor — so don't miss this taste treat.

"Seedless grapes, plums, prunes, bananas, honeydews, pineapples and pears also are worthy of consideration."

Vegetable prices, however, vary from store to store, the specialist warned.

"Generally, items in best supply at the most reasonable prices include cabbage, carrots, okra, dry yellow onions, squash, cucumbers, corn, cushaws, and rutabagas."

Extension Cord Standards

COLLEGE STATION — Electric extension cords must conform to set safety standards.

"The Food and Drug Administration and the National Electrical Manufacturers Association recently agreed on voluntary safety standards concerning extension cords," Mrs. Doris Myers, home management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, noted.

"Under new standards, extension cords can have no more than three outlets.

"Also, protective devices must cover outlets when not in use."

According to the specialist, the cord itself or its package will bear the warnings: "Caution. Avoid hazards. Keep children away. Fully insert plugs. Cover unused outlets. Unplug when not in use."

All cords manufactured after January 1, 1973, must meet these standards, Mrs. Myers added.

STITCHIN' TIME

Dress up your kids

By Joanne Schreiber

Do you keep your sewing machine humming along on clothes for the kids? If so, you're really racking up savings — there is real economy in making as many of their clothes as you can.

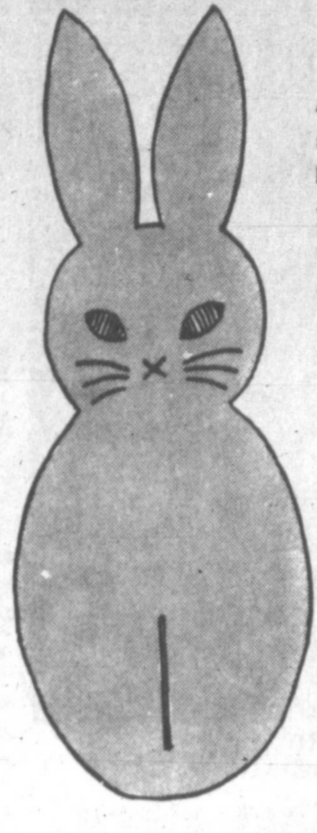

The new issue of Basic Fashion, available exclusively to readers of this newspaper, is chock full of new fashion ideas for the whole family. One of the best articles is called "Thank Heaven For Little Girls," and it outlines all sorts of tricks to help in kid-stitching.

For instance, do you shop the remnant counters for your daughter's dresses? A yard of material is plenty for a skirt; 1 1/2 yards will make a dress. You should buy patterns by chest measurement, not age. And while you should make clothes that fit this season, there are tricks to make the garment grow along with the child.

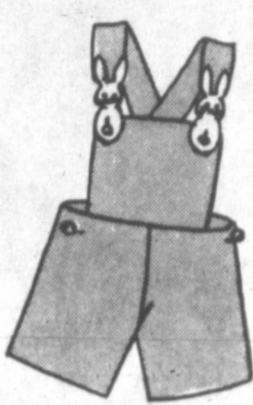

There are special pattern-alteration techniques to fit a chubby child, and give her the same pretty clothes as her slimmer sisters. These are described in Basic Fashion, and will certainly make it easier to sew for chubbies.

Of course, there are patterns for lots and lots of pretty back-to-school outfits, and several new mother-daughter combinations.

Where there are little girls, there are dolls. And dolls need clothes, too. There are patterns for the popular teen-age doll clothes, and for the traditional baby-doll clothes. Furthermore, there are directions for sewing for antique dolls — specifically, an 1890 china-head doll, a 1918 boy doll, a 1914 girl doll, and a 1920 doll.

Add extra length to overall straps to anticipate growth. Or here is a clever way to lengthen your tot's overall. Make a cut-out bunny following pattern. Attach his ears to strap. Make a buttonhole as indicated to fasten to the overall bib.

Plenty of tips for sewing doll clothes, too.

Of course, there are also patterns for all those fashion-right Young Originals, designed by the cute young student designers from Stevens College in Columbia, Mo., and from the University of California in Los Angeles. There are slimming shirtheists in larger sizes, pantsuits a-plenty, and even a page for the megflops.

The specially edited sewing supplement is full of sewing help. There's a list of 42 sewing aids which should be in every woman's sewing room; there's an article on sewing with that marvelous new Ultrasuede (and at $17 a yard, you don't want to make any mistakes!); there's a feature on setting in all kinds of sleeves, and a magic new way to insert a jacket lining.

If you like to sew, you'll have to order your Fall-Winter edition of Basic Fashion, and choose your sewing projects from the many Photo-Guide patterns. Just send $1.

along with your name, address, and zip code, to: Stitch-in Time, in care of this newspaper, Box 503, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Ask for the new edition of Basic Fashion. You'll be glad you did!

Dear Joanne: I've been reading about the new Ultrasuede. Is there any trick to sewing with it? R. S.

Dear R. S.: You're certainly with it! Ultrasuede is the newest breakthrough of the fabric industry, with this exciting new synthetic material that looks just like finest suede — only it comes in all kinds of beautiful colors, and it's completely washable! All you have to remember is to pick a simple pattern with not too many pattern pieces. Cut it with the "with nap" layout. And use the new fusing webs for the hems and facings. You'll have a garment to be proud of! Best, Joanne.

Jaundice in newborn
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Research physicians at the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory and the University of California here say an improved method of diagnosing the cause of severe jaundice in newborn babies may be routinely available within one or two years.

The method tests for carbon monoxide levels in the blood, which enables the physician to observe the progress of the blood diseases hour by hour. Until now, diagnostic techniques available have been essentially one-shot affairs that were so time-consuming as to make it impossible to record rapid changes in the baby's condition, the doctors said.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Doug McClure will star in "The Alaska Story" which will be filmed NOT on location in Alaska but in Yugoslavia and the Austrian Alps.

Area Pioneer Supervises Family-Style Meals Served In Clarendon Dining Room

In September, '73, Mrs. Ruby Mae Bromley, who owns and operates Mrs. Bromley's Dining Room in Clarendon, Tex., will observe her 17th year serving local and area residents of the panhandle and many tourists from coast to coast.

Family style meals, supervised by her, are served each day from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m., Monday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, and until 3 p.m. on Sunday, with a capacity seating from 70 to 80 guests. Tuesdays and Wednesdays have been set aside for special parties and club meetings.

Mrs. Bromley can't remember when she didn't cook!

She was an only daughter, with three brothers and her Papa as admirers of her cooking. She and Mama cooked everything these men liked on a wood-burning stove, and were always trying new ideas and recipes. No complaints, because they always liked it.

Later, Mrs. Bromley married a man who liked to eat. Being a rancher and outdoor man, his appetite was keen, and she just couldn't go wrong. Everything she prepared for a meal, that was the best one yet, until one day:

During a big snowstorm, her husband left early in the day with a mule-drawn wagon loaded with hay and cake. Being her first winter in the country, along, without a telephone, and the snow too deep to go any place, she began to think of a good meal for her husband's return. Plenty of time to think, then her decision, why not?

Why not have ice cream for supper? Everyone, knows the time it takes and the ordeal of chipping the ice on a real cold day. The meal prepared, she couldn't wait for the wagon to come in sight, so she could have the meal hot and ready for the hungry cowboy husband she adored.

With the surprise being saved until he had finished the main course, she exclaimed, "Honey, I made you ice cream for supper."

No answer. Then it came, the only time she was ever criticized for any part of a meal. "I can't eat it. I'm half-frozen now from the hours spent in the d— cold and snow."

Man of few words. Thereafter she made ice cream in the summer months only.

There were the depression days that had to be filled with the vegetable canning from their own garden. It was the same food day-in, day-out, but she 'got busy' and found different ways to prepare them, such as Corn Pudding, and fried chicken is the best in the west, everyone says.

These recipes, along with many of her favorites are compiled in "Mrs. Bromley's Cook Book," and are foods served in her dining room. The book can be purchased in a local gift shop.

Mrs. Bromley stated, "With things as good as they are these days for each of us, I trust my experiences will be some help and pleasure to you."

1 1/2 sticks oleo

Combine eggs, celery, seasonings, mayonnaise and parsley. Mix well. Spoon an equal amount into 4 (8-ounce) individual casseroles or ramekins. Bake in 375-degree oven 15 minutes. such a food plentiful land? Because families are drinking less milk, eating fewer fresh fruits and vegetables and consuming increasing volumes of snacks. These latter often lack the essential nutrients.

Also a problem for anyone buying packaged or canned foods has been trying to find out what nutrients are in a can of chicken a la king or a frozen cheese souffle.

After 10 years of backing-and-filling the Federal Food and Drug Administration early in 1973 announced new voluntary compliance rules that would put invaluable nutritional information on all processed food labels within two years. This also would allow mention of stated amounts of cholesterol-connected polyunsaturated fatty acids, saturated fatty acids and other fatty acids.

As an aid in helping the food consumer understand what certain vitamins, minerals and trace elements do to contribute to his better health, vitamin supplier Hoffman-La Roche, Inc., worked up a pamphlet explaining the roles of such nutrients.

It is one thing to read on a food label that one is getting a certain percentage of the Recommended Daily Allowance. But it is even more helpful to know what the vitamin or mineral normally does for the human body — just why it is needed.

Sadat Pushing Closer Cooperation

By MAURICE GUINDI
CAIRO (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat has made considerable headway in his drive for closer cooperation with other Arab countries, even at the risk of opposition from Libya, Egypt's neighbor to the west and its partner in a projected union.

Diplomatic sources said Sadat currently has "excellent" relations with Saudi Arabia, which have resulted in substantially stepped-up Saudi aid to Cairo.

Sadat also is well on his way to normalizing the relations with Jordan, which were severed in April, 1972, when King Hussein announced his proposal for a federal kingdom comprising two autonomous parts on the western and eastern banks of the Jordan river.

Libya, which is pressing for union with Egypt, has consistently attacked both Saudi Arabia and Jordan as "reactionary monarchies." Col. Moammar Khadafi, the Libyan strongman, stopped an annual $25 million subsidy to Jordan when Hussein cracked down on the Palestinian guerrillas.

Sadat takes a different line, which he spelled out clearly in a speech July 23.

"We welcome all cooperation and coordination between Arabs irrespective of geographical location and diverse social systems," he said then. "When the Arab destiny is at stake we must rise above all conflicts and differences and remember only the one danger that threatens us all without discrimination (Israel)."

Sadat said he had been doing this all along and his efforts in bilateral contacts with other Arab countries "have achieved a great deal."

The sources said that in the past year Saudi Arabia has given Egypt more than $100 million in extra aid, both in cash and to finance arms purchases outside the Soviet Union.

They said this was over and above the annual $100 million subsidy Saudi Arabia has been paying Egypt under the aid program set up at the Arab summit conference in Khartoum three months after the June, 1967, Middle East war.

Until he died in September, 1970, President Gamal Abdel Nasser had never been on good terms with Saudi Arabia's King Faisal, mainly because of the Yemeni civil war, which pitted Egyptian-supported republican forces against Saudi-backed royalists.

When Sadat took over after Nasser's death he began cultivating the Saudis.

Sadat has since exchanged visits with King Faisal and has been in constant touch with him by letter and by emissary, consulting him frequently on Middle East developments.

Until last year the Soviet military presence in Egypt was the one thing that most displeased the staunchly anti-Communist Saudis.

The sources said the Saudis had indicated to Sadat that, if he got rid of the Soviets, he could do business with the United States and get them to help settle the conflict with Israel.

Sadat did expel Soviet military personnel in July, 1972, but the move did not pay off the way the Saudis had predicted it would. Cairo's relations with Washington worsened instead of improving.

Laboring under a "sense of guilt" for their incorrect prediction, the Saudis have been trying to make it up to Sadat by extending additional aid and dropping hints about the use of oil as an instrument of pressure in the Middle East conflict, the sources said.

They said remarks by top Saudi officials in recent months about the possibility of Saudi Arabia not increasing its oil production in future, or deciding to curb the flow of oil to those who support Israel, should be seen in this context.

Richard Harris

Northern Ireland gets his Irish up

COCOYOC, MEXICO (UPI) — Irish actor Richard Harris is giving the British — from Queen Elizabeth down — advance warning not to consider him for any possible film awards.

His anger over what he calls "England's inhumane treatment of the (Northern) Irish" is such that he took time out from filming on location here to announce advance rejection of any British Academy award, or other honor that may be proffered in the future.

"Even if Queen Elizabeth herself were to offer me a knighthood or something of the sort, I would tell her to shove it," the outspoken actor said.

Cocoyoc is a small town 20 miles from Cuernavaca, which is about 50 miles from Mexico City.

It is the locale for Cinemobile's shooting of "The Deadly Trackers" which stars Harris, and which Fouad Said is producing for Warner Brothers.

Harris made it clear he has no immediate reason to expect any British honors, "But I wouldn't want them to waste their time."

Ironically, he was wearing a blue-and-white sweatshirt emblazoned with the British Union Jack and the word "England," as he rested off-camera.

"This is to make sure I never forget and become complacent (about the Irish situation) when I look in the mirror," he explained.

Harris' ire on the question of Northern Ireland is directed mainly against the British government. "The British government does not really represent the people, who are really friendly," he said.

He saw a parallel in his description of the Irish question and his role in "The Deadly Trackers."

The film concerns a man who has spent his life upholding the law but who, because of a personal tragedy, "finds he must go outside the law to bring some order," he said by way of summary.

"To be a Catholic in Northern Ireland is to be a second-class citizen who can and is arrested, beaten or tortured in internment camps that are unbelievable for the brutality," he said.

Harris said he is preparing a quasi-documentary film which bears the tentative title of "Green/Orange/Red Rose" — The color green symbolizing Ireland; Orange, the Orangemen; and the red rose, England.

His plan is to star in the film and as well as produce it.

He said it would be based on "documented doctors' reports, sworn statements by internees, and bodies of victims I myself have seen."

"I've got all the material," he added, "to tell the truth about how the Irish are brutally treated by the British government and troops in Ireland."

While bitterly criticizing the British, Harris did not spare the leaders of (Southern) Ireland.

"They've forgotten that their ancestors fought for freedom in 1921 and now they're complacent with their lot and their middle-class success," he said.

Business Today

By DAVID NAGY
BONN (UPI) — Volkswagen, German Steel and Schmechenbecker, the cuckoo-clock maker, all feel the heat and say it hurts.

Six months of dollar devaluation have begun to skim profits off West Germany's export industry. Companies, mighty and modest, are swallowing profit losses to hold overseas markets. In consequence, the Germans are turning to foreign investments that may produce jobs for American auto workers, Singapore camera craftsmen and Brazilian electrical workers.

"We never have passed on the cost of declining dollar values to our foreign customers," says Volkswagen's Ekkart Wesner, "so our profits decline continuously."

"We see no losses in terms of quantities of exported steel, but we are making less profit on that steel," says a spokesman for Thyssen, West Germany's biggest steelmaker.

They Fought Like Hell
West Germany is Europe's export king, devoting more than 30 per cent of its industrial output to markets from Sydney to Cincinnati. Some studies say that figure will hit 50 per cent by 1985.

In the past six months, the German mark has risen as much as 25 per cent in exchange value because of dollar devaluation. That should mean a comparable boost in German export prices and smaller markets, but does it?

"No, not yet," says an American economist whose business is studying German trade. "The Germans fought like hell to keep their markets. That's how they got them."

"Germany's strong export performance (an $8.5 billion trade surplus in 1972) continues, and the whole thing rides on its willingness to protect markets against short term fluctuations through profit-cutting, cost-cutting or any way it can."

Volkswagen tries to hold the price of a "Beetle" in New York at around $8,300, although $8,000 now is worth 25 per cent fewer marks than in February.

German Output Highest
Giants like Thyssen, Bayer Chemical and Daimler-Benz can take similar beatings for a time to keep their products competitive abroad. But some companies cannot suffer such losses indefinitely. The share prices of Telefunken, the nation's Number 2 producer of electrical wares, have been dropping on the stock market and business writers have linked that to export problems.

Most economists checked by UPI say any picture of companies facing bankruptcy as a direct result of dollar devaluation is an exaggeration.

"The currency crisis does give a lot of company managers a handy alibi," says Dr. Helmut Giesecke, chief foreign trade analyst of the Association of German Chambers of Commerce. "But the effects could be brutal."

Even before the currency crisis, German production costs stood among the highest in the world. Hourly wage levels rose about 10.3 per cent last year. Inflation runs about 8 per cent. Corporate taxes and capital interest are rising. There is a labor shortage.

"There now is a strong inclination building up among our export industries to set up their new production capacities abroad instead of at home, expanding there instead of here," Giesecke said.

A proud holdout to the trend is Schmechenbecker, the cuckoo-clock maker. It says it will stay right in the Black Forest and help exports by making cheaper carvings.

Television notes

NEW YORK (UPI) — On Sept. 8, via NBC, actor Bert Parks will be making his 19th successive appearance as master of ceremonies for Atlantic City's Miss America Pageant.

Roberto Clemente, Puerto Rican star of the Pittsburgh Pirates who died in an airplane accident last Jan. 1, is the subject of a 90-minute special to be aired by NBC during the 1973-74 season. Singer-actor Harry Belafonte is expected to play the baseball idol.

Aug. 2 at 9 p.m. is the time for the CBS rebroadcast of the video version of Arthur Miller's prize play, "Death of a Salesman," which was originally presented by the network on May 8, 1966. Lee J. Cobb and Mildred Dunnoek are the stars.

Two stars who will show up as guest players in the ABC "Marcus Welby, M.D." series during the new season are Tige Andrews and Kim Hunter. It will be the program's fifth season.

No one knows what the content of the new "NBC Follies" variety series will be in the way of principals and material, but it is certain to have a chorus line of 12 dancing girls. That may not be progress, but it could be most interesting.

Another nighttime series spins off an animated version for children that will be on NBC Saturday mornings beginning in the fall. The parent is NBC's "Emergency!" and the offspring will be "Emergency + 4," a half-hour version of adventures of paramedics. Randolph Mantooth and Kevin Tighe, who star in the one-hour Saturday night skein, will do voice-overs for their animated counterparts in the new program.

ABC will telecast on Dec. 17 the annual post-season college game from Memphis, Tenn. It also has set this game for 1974 and has an option on it for the following three years. On Dec. 29, ABC will telecast the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl game from Houston Texas. The 1974 and 1975 versions of this contest also go to ABC.

Chicago wonderboy high in the Rockies

By Dick Kleiner

NEDERLAND, Colo. — (NEA) — Caribou Ranch is high up in the Rockies — 8,600 feet high — but it's not only the altitude which makes you gasp. Nor is it just the beauty of the place, the mountains and lakes and meadows covered with wild flowers.

It's the idea that all this is owned by a 28-year-old Chicago-born wonderboy named James William Guercio. He bought the 3,000-acre spread two years ago and has turned the barn into what he proudly believes is the best recording studio in the U.S.

Others agree with him. He has recorded such current greats as Chicago, The Nitty-Gritty Dirt Band and more. They come up here, relax in the magnificent guest cottages and record in luxury — the studio has carpets, couches, curtains.

It also has oxygen on hand for singers and horn-blowers who need a whiff because of the altitude.

It wasn't only to show off the studio that Guercio invited me up. He's gone into the movie business and he wanted to screen his first production, "Electra Glide in Blue," a fascinating film which stars Robert Blake as a motorcycle cop with a conscience.

The recording studio doubles as a screening room. The curtain rolls back and there is a screen. You sit on the carpeted floor and watch. Outside, you may hear a coyote. It beats Hollywood screening rooms.

"Electra Glide in Blue" was the surprise smash at the recent Cannes-Film Festival. The story of its making would make a movie.

Guercio had found the property and was all set to produce, with Rupert Hitzig directing. Ten days before the start date, Guercio says, Hitzig split — some disagreement over the script. Even though Guercio had never even shot a home movie, he took over and directed it himself. He got the top assistant director (Tom Shaw) and a crack cinematographer

HOME and office for James William Guercio is a 3,000-acre spread in Colorado.

(Conrad Hall) and went to work.

"By the end of the picture," the slim, fair Guercio says, "Shaw and Hall told me they had created a monster — me. I made mistakes, but I learned."

The ranch is a family enterprise. Guercio's parents see to the day-to-day operation. His wife, Lucy, a top New York model, decorated and did it spectacularly. His five young-er brothers and sisters are around — Jeff is a sound engineer, Mark rides motorcycles, Gary, 11, scoots around on a minibike or rides a horse.

Guercio says he'd been looking for a ranch for a long time. He almost bought one in Oregon but the folks there didn't want any longhairs hanging around and made it so tough he didn't buy. Colorado has been more hospitable.

Youths Learn 'Do Not Pet Rhinoceros'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Maybe it was the prospect of a rhinoceros in a federal courtroom.

But two suburban Washington youths, Michael DiGiuseppe and Timothy Carey, both 20, are out of legal danger on charges of "petting an animal, crossing a safety barrier."

The two youths did not dispute the government allegations.

On Aug. 13 they went to the National Zoo, leaned over a small barrier and petted a black African rhinoceros. They said the rhino had "a nice smile" after he was petted.

The charges against them were dropped Tuesday. In return, their attorney, Michael Perl, said the youths promised to donate $25 apiece to the zoo and not to illegally pet the rhinoceros or other animals again.

"There is no question that they had no intention of harming the animal," Perl said. There was no question of evil intent. It is understandable that they have to protect the animals.

"While my clients technically violated the law, their actions were not in violation of the spirit of the law. It was all a very friendly thing. The park police were friendly and the U.S. attorney was friendly."

"We suggested the rhinoceros be brought into court so that the jury could see it wasn't hurt," Perl said. "All they did was pet the rhinoceros on the snout and the horn."

"The rhinoceros has been in the zoo since 1955 and after that long he ought to be pretty friendly," he said.

The case was decided in U.S. District Court since the National Zoo is covered by federal law.

And Perl said his clients now are aware of the gravity of their situation. It was the first time either youth has been arrested.

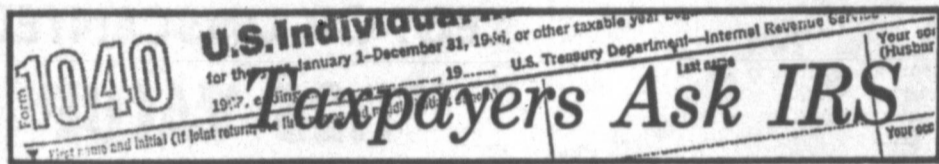

"They were given a warning that it can be dangerous because a rhinoceros is a dangerous animal," he said. "They won't do it again."

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. What's the difference between a regular IRS audit and your "unallowable items" program?

A. Under the IRS "Unallowable Items Audit Program," certain errors on Federal income tax returns are identified and corrected during return processing at IRS Service Centers. The items corrected are the ones that are clearly not deductible and are unallowable by statute, such as dividend exclusions in excess of the amount allowed by law or failure to reduce medical expenses by one and three percent of adjusted gross income. A regular audit involves an examination of the taxpayer's books or records, while the correction of an unallowable item is simply a step in the processing of returns.

Q. My son is a full-time student and is earning a lot of money from his summer job. If he earns more money than I spend for his support, will I lose his dependency exemption?

A. The "support" test of the dependency rules is not keyed to how much your dependent earns or how much income he has, but to how much he spends on support items. For example, if your son spends his earnings instead of spending them on support items, they would not count towards his support. Likewise, if your son spent his earnings on a non support item, such as a car, that amount would not count towards his support.

These considerations and others are explained in IRS Publication 501, "Your Exemptions for Dependents." Your son can plan his finances so that you will not lose his dependency exemption. The booklet is available by mail from your Internal Revenue district office at no charge.

Q. I subscribe to a daily financial newspaper to keep an eye on my investments in the stock market. Is the cost of the subscription deductible?

A. Yes, such fees are deductible as income-producing expenses on your return if you itemize.

WORRY CLINIC

Mort's case shows why we must explain what we are doing if we wish to get the proper results! His physician correctly treated Mort's medical problem. But didn't take time to correct his mistaken mental outlook!

CASE X-594: Mort D., aged 68, was a farmer who lived near our summer home down in Indiana.

"Dr. Crane," his worried daughter phoned me, "could you please come over to see my dad?"

"For he has had dropsy till his legs are almost as large as telephone poles."

"So we called the new young doctor in our town, who came out and gave my dad some pills."

"But next day my dad got out his shotgun and threatened to shoot this doctor if he ever set foot on our farm again."

"That has embarrassed me terribly, for the doctor belongs to the same church I do, and is a very fine man."

"So could you try to pacify my dad, for he has known you many years and will believe what you tell him."

LAYMEN'S MISTAKES

Mort confirmed exactly what his daughter had told me over the phone.

"Dr. Crane," Mort protested, "that young doctor would have killed me!"

"For he gave me some pills that made me empty my bladder every hour. I was awake all night long!"

"So I figured I'd die from lack of sleep if I took any more of those darned pills."

"By the way, why couldn't I take my razor and make a lot of slits in the skin between my ankles and knees?"

"Wouldn't that let the water out, just like the sap that runs from my maple trees when I tap them in the Spring?"

And Mort really meant what he said about slitting his legs! "Mort," I replied, "where do you think all that liquid came from that you voided every hour during the night?"

"It was being drawn from your water-logged legs, and if you'd kept on with the doctor's pills, you'd have been able to walk within a week."

"For it isn't your legs that is your main problem but your heart."

"Your heart isn't keeping up the proper circulation, so the doctor gave you digitalis to produce a better circulation and thus absorb all that water that had been pulled out of those blood vessels in your legs."

For Mort had what we call a decompensated heart, with many weak beats that overworked the heart but didn't produce a normal circulation.

Digitalis cuts out many weak beats, leaving about 80 per minute that are strong contractions.

Then I made a drawing to show Mort exactly how and where the pills were helping him.

"Why didn't that young fellow explain all this to me?" Mort demanded.

"Oh, he was rushed and thus felt he couldn't take the time," I replied.

And that is one reason why many thoughtless Americans criticize physicians and even demand the idiotic Socialized-Medicine Bill that Teddy Kennedy is advocating, at a cost of $77 BILLIONS in extra taxes each year!

"You must tell 'em if you wish to sell 'em," was an adage I always stressed before my students at Northwestern University in my classes on "Sales Psychology."

But Mort's mistaken notions are matched by a lot of Women's Libbers who confuse "halfway" erotic thrills with a complete climax, as shown in tomorrow's case.

Penny-pinching, politics peril U.S. medical research

By Dick Kleiner

LOS ANGELES — (NEA) — Political and economic events in the last seven or eight years have had such an adverse effect on biomedical research in the United States that this country is gradually losing its preeminent position in the field.

The trend is not irreversible, but so far there seem to be no signs that it is being reversed. At the moment, according to Dr. Rachmiel Levine, executive medical director of the research-oriented City of Hope Hospital, the balance of power in the field of biomedical research is swinging away from the United States and moving to other countries — Great Britain, West Germany, Sweden, Belgium.

Levine attributes this change to several factors. When the government began looking for ways to economize, the scientific community was an easy target. It had no lobby to fight for money and, thus, outlays for research were curtailed.

Then, too, what government grants were available were prey to political machinations. Many of them were given to the same institutions, in the same geographical areas. Congressmen from areas which had received little or no money asked for their share. Research suffered.

Another factor was that the science budget, administered by the National Science Foundation, was a catchall for all kinds of research work — including such items as the Navy's program of Antarctic exploration.

Finally, there was pressure from both the Johnson and Nixon administrations on the scientific community to do "more practical, less theoretical" research. Scientists were ordered to "solve the problems of heart, cancer and stroke."

"The result," says Levine, "was that it all became a big boondoggle and it finally collapsed."

Levine and most scientists believe much more theoretical research is needed before practical solutions to "heart, cancer and stroke" can be found.

"People say basic research is no longer needed," he says,

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

"and we should apply what we already know. Horseshit — or words to that effect. We know nothing yet. It's a waste of money to look for ways to conquer cancer before you know what it's all about."

All this discourages potential young research scientists. Universities across the country are noting that graduate students are shunning research fields in favor of areas of practice — such as medicine — which offer better chances for economic survival.

Currently, medical expenditures in the United States are at an all-time high. We are, as a nation, spending $80 million annually on doctors and medicines.

"We researchers," Levine says, "want a fair share of that money. Research doesn't involve horrendous sums. The research community only needs between $300 and $400 million a year. It would be a good investment."

If they don't get it, biomedical research in the United States could be a glory of the past.

Africa film industry faced with problem

By JANE BERGEROL

London Financial Times — UPI Africa's infant motion picture industry is charting a troubled course, including an almost complete screen blackout of African productions in Africa itself and the rest of the world.

The reluctance of Western nations to show African films is understandable. The U.S. market, for example, is a difficult enough one for any foreign director to crack. And most of the first generation of African film directors come from French-speaking Africa, so many French language films.

If it is naturally more difficult for these predominantly French language films to get a showing on American or British screens, despite growing interest in Africa, what distresses African film-makers is the blackout they get at home.

A glance at the films showing on any one day in Abidjan, the bustling modern capital of Ivory Coast, fails to turn up one African film. The city's 23 cinemas are filled with "spaghetti" westerns, Indian romances, Japanese adventures and a handful of the latest French box office successes. And Abidjan is no exception.

"These things are of no value to the people. They don't even understand the humor," says Lionel N'Gakane, one of the few African directors to have won a solid reputation. "African television is the same. It is the dumping ground for all the old American serials."

To fight back and limit the power of the two or three international distributors who, they claim, have a stranglehold on the African market, the Federation of African Film Makers is appealing to African governments to give them a share in cinema programs, even if they do not all go as far as Upper Volta, which nationalized the country's cinemas.

But some action at government level is essential, they feel, to impose regular showing of African films.

One problem they face is the reluctance of some governments to show films that are often critical of present-day Africa. Med Hondo, whose "Soleil O" is an irreverent and uncompromising exposure of racism and posturing by white and black alike, knows this well. For three years the film lay unused in his Paris flat.

"No one in France would touch it. Distributors would come out of a showing shaking with fury. I said 'you flatter me,'" he says. Now it has been playing to full houses in Paris and has collected wide acclaim. But its attack on the French in Africa today, and on some of N'Gakane's "black Frenchmen" have made several African countries reluctant to give it a screening and one government has banned it as "inflammatory."

Papal Nuncio Umberto Mozzoni was then reinstated as dean. However, Monsignor Mozzoni found the honor a mixed blessing. His principal duty as dean, at a time when relations between the Vatican and Brazil's military rulers were strained by the active opposition of some Brazilian churchmen to the government, was to transmit complaints from diplomats unhappy with facilities in Brazil's new frontier capital.

Mozzoni was recently appointed a cardinal and his successor, Don Carmine Rocco, will be the first Papal Nuncio to Brazil to begin his service in Brasilia.

Protocol problem

BRASILIA (UPI) — For many years, the Papal Nuncio to the government of Brazil has been the dean of the diplomatic corps in the capital — regardless of his length of service.

As dean, he has been first in line and first in seating at formal diplomatic dinners, and the representative of his colleagues in collective dealings with the government.

This tradition was broken in recent years when the ambassador of Nicaragua, Sanson Baladares, claimed the rights of seniority. But in 1969, after 20 years in Brazil, Baladares was transferred to Madrid, forestalling the necessity of his moving from Rio de Janeiro to this new capital.

Check insurance before car travel

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — As any one of the 118 million licensed drivers in the United States who ever bucked holiday, weekend or daily rush traffic knows, the family automobile is still the most popular means of transportation for Americans.

A recent survey, in fact, reported that 87 per cent of all intercity travel is done by car. So it should come as no surprise that an estimated 40 million autos are expected to carry 114 million Americans on vacation, holiday and outdoor recreation trips this year — barring fuel shortages.

But what is surprising is that the Department of Transportation reported recently that only 22 per cent of the car-owning families carried enough liability insurance to cover them anywhere in the United States while another 27 per cent had enough to cover them both in the United States and Canada.

That leaves a startling 51 per cent who could find themselves in trouble in case of an accident while driving outside their home state.

Here is the reason, according to the Consumers Insurance Information Bureau (CIIB), the public information arm of the National Association of Insurance Agents:

Each state and the District of Columbia sets its own minimum requirements for financial responsibility in case of an auto accident. This is called liability insurance covering personal injury and property damage.

There were 10 different minimums as of July 1, ranging from a low of 5/10/1 (insurance agent lingo) in Louisiana to a high of 25/25/5 in Florida and 20/40/10 in Maine and Michigan. Most states — 28 — require 10/20/5. Translated, the 10/20/5 means the car owner is covered for up to $10,000 for injury to an individual, $20,000 for all persons injured, and $5,000 for property damage resulting from an accident.

Problems
Come from a state with lower liability minimums, get into an accident in a state with higher requirements and there could be problems, such as posting a bond or even having the driver license lifted.

The CIIB said such headaches can be avoided by informing your agent in advance what states you plan to visit and have him check the requirements. For a few dollars more, it said car owners can obtain the necessary coverage for anywhere in the United States or Canada.

Canada has three provinces requiring $50,000 "inclusive" coverage while the others require $35,000. That means car owners must have $50,000 or $35,000 of liability insurance available to settle either bodily injury or property damage claims, or both, up to those amounts.

The CIIB cautions that some Canadian provinces require a card showing proof of liability insurance. Ask your agent before starting out.

Mexico presents a different problem for the American motorist. Your U.S. policy will not cover you — except in the border areas. Mexican law requires that automobile liability insurance policies be written by Mexican companies.

If your agent can't make the necessary arrangements, the policies can be purchased at U.S. border cities.

Don't take chances — Mexican authorities can be tough. Without adequate insurance, even a minor accident can result in impounding of the car and possibly jailing of the driver whether he is responsible or not.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the course of a recent vacation trip, I paid a visit to my old home town to see my 89-year-old father, who likes to boast that he is "the world's most humble Texan." I found him sorely agitated.

Inquiry revealed the source of his concern was the younger generation, which he affirmed was going to the bow-wow.

"How so?" said I. "In what way have the youth of this great state failed to measure up to their glorious heritage?"

My father replied that about half of the young Texans of today — the figure he gave was 48.6 per cent — are almost totally devoid of braggadocio.

"Bragging is fast becoming a lost art in Texas," he said sadly. A Dying Tradition

"The ancient tradition of Texas Hyperbole, which has been handed down from father to son, is dying out. Nowadays when an old master braggart hangs up his superlatives and goes into retirement, there's nobody to carry on. These modern kids have no feel for jingoism."

"You may find this hard to believe but out on the range the other day I heard no less than six discouraging words, all from the mouths of teenagers."

Being a natural-born Texan myself, and one who came to manhood during the golden age of vainglory, I did find that hard to believe.

But during a subsequent conversation with one of my teen-age nephews, I realized my father was telling it like it is.

While regaling this lad with some of my boyhood adventures, I chanced to mention that my old home town had more windmills than its city limits than any other town of its size west of Fort Worth.

Two Kinds of Bigness
"I don't see where that's anything to brag about," the boy remarked.

Those were his exact words and they precipitated a family crisis. Finally his mother asked me to have a talk with the boy and see if I could straighten him out.

"Seymour," I said, "there are two kinds of bigness. Some is obvious, some obscure. If you are only going to brag about the obvious bigness, you might as well live in New Hampshire or some place like that."

"The mark of a true braggart is his ability to boast about something that the average blowhard overlooks. Our family has had a braggart for six generations. I hope you won't let us down."

A couple of days after I left Texas I noticed in the paper that the discovery of two additional bodies near Houston had broken the mass murder record previously held by California.

For Seymour, that may be the acid test.

Sweet bank rates may cover hidden sting

By Carlton Smith

Latest development in the explosion of interest rates on savings is a flexible-rate savings certificate, offered by a Philadelphia bank, whose rate of interest is geared to the cost of living. It will pay up to 10 per cent on savings deposits if the Consumer Price Index rises by stipulated amounts.

Ten per cent on savings! Incredible, only a few months ago. It's as much or more than a Wall Street investor has conservatively expected to realize in stocks. (A much-quoted University of Chicago study puts the average long-term gain in stock prices at 9.3 per cent a year.)

Amid a bewildering array of lures by the savings institutions, promised "effective yields" of 8 per cent and more are common. But any guide to the new higher range of interest rates should include a cautionary note.

There's a trap in all this that can snag the unwary. It's a catch in the time deposit regulations.

Federal agencies — if this is your first day in class — tell savings institutions how much interest they can pay on various types of accounts. The basic rate is for a "pass-book account" — the ordinary kind, from which you can withdraw money at any time.

Higher rates are allowed on time deposits, or savings certificates, where there's a commitment to keep the money on deposit, without withdrawals, for periods up to seven years.

In July, Washington announced new interest ceilings. On passbook accounts, the maximum rate was raised from 4 and one-half to 5 per cent for commercial banks, and from 5 to five-and-one-quarter per cent for savings banks and S&Ls.

Note: Your bank or S&L doesn't HAVE to pay a higher rate now. It merely may. And most thrift institutions that are offering higher rates are not automatically applying it to existing accounts. You'll have to inquire about the policy, wherever your savings are, and probably you'll have to take your passbook in and specifically request to be put on the higher rate.

On time deposits, the new regulations allow increases of from one-quarter to three-quarters of a per cent, the top specified rate being six and three-quarter per cent on de-

Australia, Japan Pursue More Independent Policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Australia and Japan, two of America's staunchest allies in Asia, both have advised President Nixon that they want to remain close friends but that the United States no longer is the dominant superpower in their national lives.

In separate meetings, Australian Prime Minister Gough Whitlam and Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka made it clear to Nixon their governments are pursuing a more independent foreign policy than Canberra or Tokyo have done in the past.

"What we wish to do, what we are doing, is to see that the official United States view is not the only view ever considered by an Australian government," Whitlam said after conferring in Washington with Nixon.

If Tanaka said it a bit softer, his message was just as clear.

Blunt Declaration
After citing major political, financial and trade problems confronting the world, Tanaka said, "In enterprises of this scope, not even the United States, with all its might, can unilaterally solve the problems, nor should we expect it to do so."

American officials directly involved with Japanese affairs interpreted that as a blunt declaration that the United States should no longer expect automatic Japanese support for any future made-in-Washington solutions to international problems.

Both Whitlam and Tanaka went out of their way to emphasize they still value highly their relations with the United States. But Whitlam pointedly noted that if U.S. officials did not like the changes occurring in Asia, they had no one to blame but themselves.

"The initiative for these changes came not, of course, from Australia but from the United States," Whitlam said.

"These initiatives — President Nixon's initiatives — have created a new reality for our region. Part of Australia's task has been to ratify the new reality."

Decisions in Tandem
The United States publicly supports decisions of Australia and Japan to establish diplomatic relations with Peking.

The U.S. position is that those decisions were in tandem with Washington policy since Washington and Peking recently established liaison offices in each others capital. But American officials feel that Whitlam and Tanaka granted diplomatic recognition to Peking much quicker than necessary.

"We do not wish to grandstand or thumb our noses at the United States," Whitlam told a National Press Club audience. "When our interests do not coincide and when we disagree with the United States we shall, as a good friend should, say so firmly and frankly, usually — and preferably — in private."

Whitlam stressed that while Australia is interested in improving relations with China, it does not wish to do so at the expense of U.S. friendship.

"In our efforts to redress the imbalance of a generation of unthinking hostility towards China, we do not propose to introduce a new imbalance by discarding or downgrading old relationships," he said.

Tanaka said Japan was grateful for the U.S. assistance that made his country an economic power, but observed even "so intimate a relationship requires meticulous attention."

"Fortunately, Japan and the United States share the fundamental view that peace and prosperity for mankind will best be served by the expansion of free and open world economy," Tanaka said.

"I firmly believe that our two countries, by deepening our mutual understanding and cooperation, can and must contribute substantially to the reconstruction of the world economy and the building of an enduring peace."

Scientists have found that everyone dreams four to six times a night. Each dream lasts between 15 and 20 minutes.

American Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, hero of Bataan in the Pacific Theater of World War II, was born Aug. 23, 1883.

On this day in history:

In 1924, Mrs. Miriam "Ma" Ferguson won the Democratic nomination for governor of Texas. In November she became the first woman to be elected governor of a state.

In 1926, hundreds of thousands of women mourned the death of movie idol Rudolph Valentino.

In 1968, a United Nations' resolution condemned the Soviet bloc invasion of Czechoslovakia, but Russia vetoed it in the Security Council.

In 1971, the Western powers and Russia reached agreement on the future of West Berlin. Russia pledged "unhindered" passage of traffic between West Berlin and West Germany across East Germany territory.

Social Security Q And A

(Have you a question about social security? Address it to Howard L. Weatherly, Branch Manager, Social Security Administration, 1541 N. Hobart, Pampa, Texas 79065. You will receive an answer in this column or by mail.)

By HOWARD L. WEATHERLY
Q. Has there been any recent change in the Social Security Law regarding blind workers?

A. Yes, legislation just enacted makes it easier for a blind person to qualify for social security benefits.

Q. My vision is deteriorating and I will never be able to work again. What must I do to get social security benefits?

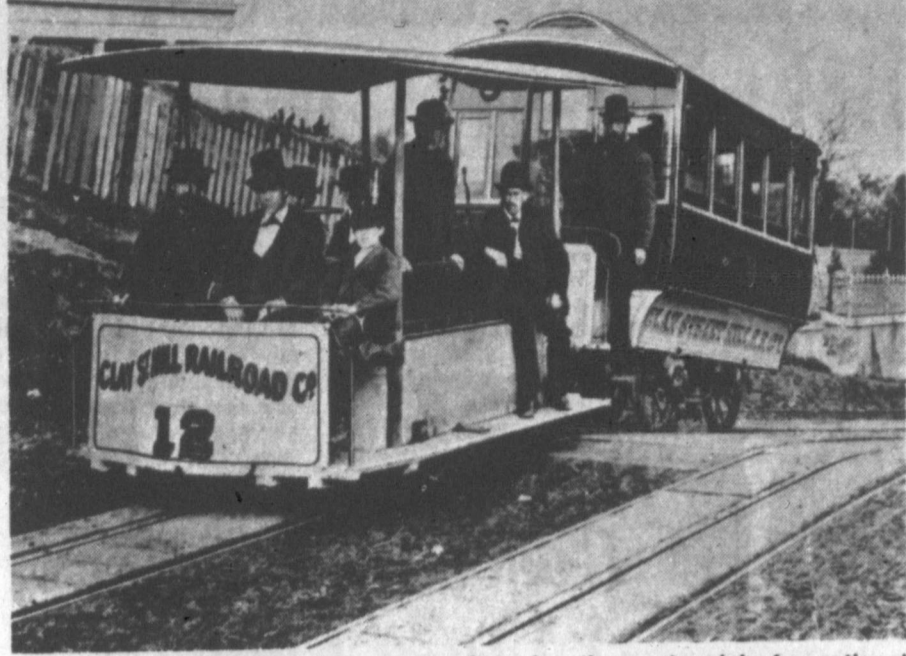

A. First, you must formally file a claim for disability benefits to see if you have the required amount of quarters of coverage.

Q. How long must a blind person have worked under social security to qualify for benefits?

A. The new provision eliminates the requirement that a blind person must have recent covered work. This means that a blind person may be only fully insured now and get benefits. The number of quarters of coverage you need depends on your age when you became disabled.

Q. I am blind now, but have not worked in employment covered by social security for several years. Can I now qualify for disability benefits?

A. Yes, you may qualify if you are fully insured. File an application to see if you meet the necessary work requirement.

Hallidie piloted the first cars, above, down Clay Street on the foggy morning of Aug. 2, 1873, to inaugurate the service still keeping San Franciscans on the move, below. The U.S. Interior Department designated the cable cars a national historic landmark in 1964.

Cubans Turn On U.S. Basketballers

MOSCOW (UPI) — Bloodied and bruised, the United States basketball team is in the semifinals at the seventh World University Games today after a chair-slinging, glass-throwing brawl with Cuba that rocked the host Russians' elaborate security precautions.

The wild melee which left U.S. trainer Duane Wolztein of Sheboygan, Wis., unconscious and two other players bloodied by broken glass, shunted U.S. swimmer Allen Poucher's second gold medal of the games to the background.

Also lost in the furor were the five more gold medals won by the Russians that increased their commanding lead over the United States, 53-8.

The U.S. cagers were only 90 seconds short of the end in their 99-75 win over Cuba when Mitch Kupchack of Brentwood, N.Y., was kicked to the floor by a Cuban player and came up swinging.

That sent both benches to emptying and before long, the Cubans were slinging wooden folding chairs and glass was flying. Wolztein, who was knocked unconscious by a chair in the back of the head, was livid after the game.

"These bastards hit me three times," the trainer said. "I'd put my arm up and he hit me in the back." One U.S. player, Wally Walker of Millersville, Pa., and Luis Calderon of Cuba suffered slice wounds on the hand.

"We're certainly going to lodge a protest," said U.S. Coach Ed Badger, whose fight-weary troops take on unbeaten Brazil today. North Carolina State's David Thompson, who led all scorers with 34 points, seemed dazed after the fight, walking around the court mumbling. "I can't believe this, man. I just can't believe this."

No doubt, the U.S. swimmers couldn't believe what was happening to them either when, under sunny but chilly conditions, the Russian's Lubov Rusanova upset world record holder Cathy Carr in the 200-meter breaststroke in the opening event at the open-air Luzhnik swim complex. The Russian girl's winning time of 1:15.5 was nowhere close to Miss Carr's world mark of 1:13.5.

The Soviets followed that up with a one-two sweep by Nikolai Pankin (2:23.8) and Igor Tchordakov in the men's 200-meter breaststroke.

But then came Poucher, an 18-year-old from Jacksonville, Fla., to save the day with his second gold medal in 24 hours—a hard-fought 2:05 victory over West Germany's Floket Meeuw.

"It's a wonderful feeling," said Poucher when reminded he was the only American to win two individual gold medals at the Games thus far. "I don't think it'll last, though. There are too many other good swimmers here and soon they're going to be winning other goals."

Romanian Netter—A Crazy Player

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ilie Nastase, the high-strung Romanian, uses one of the oldest devices in sports.

He plays the villain during working hours, but is the perfect gentleman otherwise.

Occasionally he fools tennis fans and even some officials. Seldom any of his fellow players though.

"They say he's crazy, but I like him," volunteered Jimmy Connors, the U.S. professional singles' champ who has partnered with Nastase in doubles competition.

"Why do they say he's crazy?" someone wanted to know.

Connors laughed.

"If he's playing you, he'll come up and hit you on the back of the head sometimes," said Connors, still smiling. "Nobody really gets mad at him. They'll say 'Nastase, get outta here!' I don't know if he does something like that to upset his opponent or not. It's him. He likes to enjoy himself. He's a kid at times and a business man other times. A lotta people think they can put things over on him. They can't. He's not dumb."

He isn't Crazy Either

Ilie Nastase isn't crazy either. He appreciates all the usual things like money, prestige and girls, whom he doesn't talk about so much anymore since marrying dazzling Dominique Garzias of Brussels. Belgian girls have tempers, too.

Along with all this appreciation, Nastase or "Nasty" as he is called, is probably the most talented player in tennis today.

He has the quickest hands of anyone, probably the quickest legs also, and he isn't at all slow upstairs either.

This being the case, it has occurred to him that it doesn't hurt to have people talking about him all the time. They don't necessarily have to be talking about his ability either. They can be talking about his behavior or misbehavior on the court.

Nastase, 27, once ran off the court in the middle of a match with Clark Graebner.

Graebner leaped over the net, grabbed Nastase and said, "You do that again to me and I'll crease your head with this racket."

His Purses Heel Up

A couple of weeks ago during a match in Cincinnati he got into such a hassle with a referee that his $9,000 purse was held up after he won the match and he still faces a possible fine by the USLTA.

Nastase was talking about the episode Wednesday after being presented the Dewar's Merit Award for the excitement he has generated in tennis.

"This time I am right," he said, referring to the incident in question. "It was 100 degree humidity in Cincinnati, so hot you couldn't see the ball. I know the man (official) couldn't see the ball, but he made the call anyway. I called him over and I said to him, 'Dummy, you go up and watch on television.'"

Nastase has won both the French and Italian championships this year. He also was the winner of the 1972 U.S. Open championship at Forest Hills and begins defense of that title next week. He and Stan Smith are co-seeded No. 1 in this one.

Some old guard Romanians have expressed their displeasure at Nastase's court conduct, claiming it gives them all a poor image, but lie counters. "I'm prouder of being Romanian than they are."

Has His Defenders

Nastase has his defenders among the Romanians.

"They have given him the nickname 'Nasty,' but he is anything but that," said Vladimir Cohn, one of his friends present at Wednesday's luncheon. "He has helped many people without ever talking about it. I am one of those people."

Nastase says he's burdened unfairly by his reputation on the court.

"Now even if I don't do anything, it is the same as before," he says. "My reputation remains. I don't know how to get out of it."

Corneliu Bagdon, the Romanian ambassador to the United States, presented Nastase with his award, and before doing so, he talked about how the controversial Ilie is regarded back home.

"In Bucharest, he's a hero, but sometimes a victim of his own heroism," said the ambassador. "People in Bucharest sometimes expect too much of him. After all, he's a man, not a god. If he doesn't perform like a god and beat everyone, sometimes they get mad at him. You know how it is."

Sure. The same way it used to be in Brooklyn.

Immigrant fish

NEW YORK (UPI) — The only alien or immigrant trout in America today is the brown trout, which was first introduced in this country from Europe in 1883 according to the Garcia Sportsmen's Information Bureau.

The steelhead, a native species, is actually a rainbow trout that migrates down a coastal river to the ocean, spends a few years there, and then returns upstream to spawn, says Garcia, which markets recreational sports equipment.

PAMPA QUARTERBACK — Rick Leverich, the Harvesters' starting signal-caller, works on passing fundamentals this week in Pampa's first week of pre-season football workouts. Pampa's season opener is at 8 p.m. Sept. 7 against Hereford in Pampa.

Red Sox Hang On To Down Rangers

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — Boston manager Eddie Kasko saw it, but he could not quite believe it.

And he said as much:

"When was the last time I saw a game like that? Tonight. And I hope I never see another one."

The Boston Red Sox jumped out to a 9-0 lead over Texas Wednesday night but had to hang on for all they were worth in the bottom of the eighth to stop an eight-run Texas rally and finally preserve a 9-8 victory.

It was the sixth straight win for Boston, the longest winning streak of the year, but despite the surge the Red Sox have not reclaimed any ground on the division-leading Baltimore Orioles, who have a four-game buige on Boston.

Boston opened up a 9-0 lead through the first five innings, shelling 18-year-old left-hander David Clyde for six runs. And it seemed like things were all downhill for the Red Sox.

But rookie Dick Pole, who wound up winning his third game in four major league starts, weakened in the eighth and before he was relieved the Rangers had scored twice.

Minnesota moved out to a 3-0 lead in the first before Robinson's hit keyed a rally that tied the game and Baltimore scored the winning run in the fifth inning when Al Bumbry singled, went to third on a Rich Coggins' single and scored when Tommy Davis bounced into a double play.

Baltimore now leads Boston by 4 games and Detroit by 4 1/2. In other American League

Joe Paterno looked gift horse in mouth — he's glad he did

By Ira Berkow

NEW YORK (NEA) — This is the year that Joe Paterno could have laid the golden football. He didn't. He gave up a $1 million offer to coach the New England Patriots in order to keep his nest in Mt. Nittany, where he is now preparing for the 1973 college season.

JOE PATERNO

Some considered him a wild-eyed, four-eyed Italian for declining such a deal, a deal that could have kept him in yachts and cashew nuts the rest of his life.

Immediately, all he got out of staying on as football coach at Penn State was a good night's sleep — one not filled with the agony of prodigious decision — and, soon, a flattering if quizzical offer to give the commencement speech at the University's graduation exercises.

"I thought it was crazy," said Paterno by telephone recently. "So did the president of the University, Dr. John Oswald. At least, he told me he thought so at first."

The recommendation for Paterno to be the speaker — a football coach; at such an august event — was made by senior students, those on the graduation committee, some of whom may have been in that basketball crowd on a night soon after Paterno's remarkable "if impecunious" decision.

During a Penn State home game, Paterno, high in the stands, got up to go to the men's room. Some students seated across the arena noticed him and began to applaud. Others looked to see what it was all about, saw Paterno wending his way down the aisles, and the ripple grew. There was a standing ovation by the time Paterno disappeared through the exit. Paterno wasn't sure whether to feel embarrassed or thrilled.

Paterno finally accepted the invitation to make the graduation address because, he said in ferred the top spot to Texas, which was undefeated. But so was Penn State. The Nittany Lion rooters were furious. And in his commencement speech, Paterno made wry reference to it. "I'd like to know, how could the President know so little about Watergate in 1973, and so much about college football in 1969." It brought a laugh from the crowd.

As teacher, Paterno believes he is as challenged and inspired and instructed by the students as he hopes he challenges and inspires and instructs them.

"They are always testing you to measure up, not to be hypocritical," says Paterno. "They are very anti-elite. When I was going to college (some 25 years ago) the students were impressed if your dad was a millionaire. Now I think they'd hold it against you."

I often talk about doing the best job you can without care for material gain. And a lot of money is not one of my goals. So I wouldn't turn around — leave a place where I am happy, where I enjoy living, where I am challenged in my work, where I am doing okay financially (salary is about $30,000 a year) — and leave it for pure money. That would have been hypocritical, to others as well as myself. I did not forsake aspirations to stay here. I'm still doing the best job I know how, and I'm still committed to excellence."

Near the end of his commencement talk, Paterno touched on, of all non-football esoterica, love.

"We hope you have loved each other because a little bit of you is inside one another. I cannot adequately describe to you the love that permeates a good football team — a love of one another. Perhaps as one of my players said — 'we grow together in love — hating the coach.'"

Hawaii Fights Way Into World Series Finals Action Today

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Hawaii fought its way back into the finals of the Colt Baseball World Series Wednesday night with a 7-6 victory over Puerto Rico.

The loss eliminated the Caribbean champion from the double elimination tourney.

Hawaii now meets Pasadena, Tex., tonight for the championship, but a loss for Texas would mean another game Friday.

Puerto Rico bowed out of the tournament with a 2-2 record. Hawaii now is 3-1 and faces Texas with three straight wins.

The life expectancy rate in Chile is 62 years.

Orioles Widen Margin Over AL Eastern Teams

By United Press International

As the Baltimore Orioles, riding the crest of a 10-game winning streak, widen the gap between themselves and the rest of the American League East and appear headed for a playoff berth, it doesn't seem too far fetched to consider them as being part of a dynasty.

Three years straight, 1969-71, Baltimore played in the World Series. If they win the AL pennant this year, it will be their fourth in the last five years and fifth in the last eight.

But the Orioles today are aware that they have a stiff reputation to live up to in previous Oriole teams which featured the outstanding play of Frank Robinson.

"Those were powerful clubs, 1969-71, when we had Robinson and Boog Powell literally running clubs out of the park with their home run bats," said Paul Blair, after a 4-3 victory over Minnesota Wednesday night.

Brooks Robinson, for years the golden glove at third base, made another contribution with his bat in the victory over the Twins. Robinson, who rapped his 2,500th career hit earlier this week, hit a bases-loaded single in the first inning to help Mike Cuellar even his record at 12-12.

games. Cleveland nipped Chicago, 1-0, in 12 innings. Boston edged Texas, 9-8. Kansas City beat New York, 8-7, in 10 innings. Oakland tripped Detroit, 7-3, and California nipped Milwaukee, 5-4, in 10 innings.

Thurman To Lead Buck Attack In District 1-A

By PAUL SIMS Sports Editor

WHITE DEER — White Deer's got another Thurman, and in Buck second-year coach Larry Anthony's estimation, "He's as good or better than his brothers."

His name's Donny and the 6-2, 235-pound offensive and defensive lineman will be among five offensive and seven defensive starters returning for 1-A White Deer in a district which according to Anthony is "going to be like last year's district — tougher than heck."

"I think Sanford-Fritch is probably the best team, but it's going to be like last year, nobody will get through district games undefeated."

Last year, the Bucks, led by Thurman, running back Kim Slagle (graduated) and guard Morlan Shuman (graduated), finished tied for third with Sisseton in the district race and ended up with a 5-5 season record.

"We had a good football team. If we'd been anywhere else in the state, we might have won district and possibly bi-district," said Anthony, who replaced J.T. Hill as Buck mentor in the spring of 1972.

Canadian and Sanford-Fritch were 1-A co-champs last year, and Canadian represented the district in the post-season play offs by virtue of a 14-6 regular season win over the Eagles.

Offensively, the Bucks will go into a Multiple set, running an I, A Pro set, a split backfield and a Winged-T.

Thurman, better defensively says Anthony, will start at right tackle. Comparing the probable all-starter to his brothers, Anthony said, "Donny's not as quick as Kenny but he's a stronger, and not as tall as Ricky, but he's more mobile."

The other tackle spot will be filled by either junior Terry O'Neil (6-0, 170) or junior Tommy Chaney (5-10, 160). Anthony expects right guard will be either John Keeton, a 6-2, 175-pound junior, or junior Butch Hensley, 5-11, 195. Gordon Satterwhite, a 5-11, 155-pound senior will play left guard.

Jim McCann, a 5-11, 175-pounder, will start at center. Sophomore Mark Line (5-10, 160) is at tight end and either Dean Wheeler (5-10, 145) or Sandy Hodge (6-1, 165) will play split end. Both receivers are also sophomores.

Buddy Cummins (6-3, 170), a senior, will quarterback the Buck offense.

"Cummins has average speed, good hands, and is a power runner. He needs to get more consistent with his passing. He's tall and that's going to help him," said Anthony.

Texas Title At Stake

By United Press International

It's billed as the Battle of Texas but it's more a battle for self-confidence as far as the Houston Oilers are concerned.

The Oilers play host to the Dallas Cowboys tonight for the "Governor's Cup" trophy in National Football League pre-season action but more importantly, Oiler Coach Bill Peterson is looking to finally establish a winning attitude.

Winning is something unfamiliar to the Oilers.

Houston won only once last season and has lost all three pre-season games this year.

Peterson and new General Manager Sid Gillman cleaned house after last season and it's been difficult getting all the new people to work together.

Anthony expects right guard will be either John Keeton, a 6-2, 175-pound junior, or junior Butch Hensley, 5-11, 195. Gordon Satterwhite, a 5-11, 155-pound senior will play left guard.

Jim McCann, a 5-11, 175-pounder, will start at center. Sophomore Mark Line (5-10, 160) is at tight end and either Dean Wheeler (5-10, 145) or Sandy Hodge (6-1, 165) will play split end. Both receivers are also sophomores.

Buddy Cummins (6-3, 170), a senior, will quarterback the Buck offense.

"Cummins has average speed, good hands, and is a power runner. He needs to get more consistent with his passing. He's tall and that's going to help him," said Anthony.

"We'll be a better passing team than last year, but that's not saying a lot because we've hardly ever thrown the ball. Last year we were a real strong running club and couldn't throw the ball a lick."

"We'll try to balance it up this year — our running and passing games."

Heading Anthony's running game will be junior fullback Billy Lynch, who is 5-9 and 170 pounds — "with the makings of another Slagle," according to the head coach.

Wingback will be senior Randy Walker (5-9, 150), who played defensive end last season, not the backfield position. Rounding out the offense is junior Denny Moss (5-8, 145), a B-team last season but the varsity starting halfback this year.

White Deer will line up in a 5-2 defense.

Defensive linemen will most likely be Thurman, noseguard; senior Scott Lowrance (5-10, 190), left tackle; O'Neil or Chaney, right tackle; senior Randy Walker (5-9, 150), one defensive end, and Satterwhite, the other end.

Linebackers will be Keeton and McCann. Lynch and Cummins will play the cornerback positions, and Moss and junior Dan Cathey (5-8, 145) will play at the safety slots.

Other Bucks are junior Richard Ruth, junior Neal Crawford, senior John St. Clair, junior Greg Houghton and sophomore Ed Milton.

200 Quarterhorses In Ruidoso Downs For All American

RUIDOSO, N.M. (UPI) — More than 200 quarterhorses, each hoping for a share of horse racing's richest purse, go to the post at Ruidoso Downs Friday in the trials for the $1 million All American Futurity.

A total of 210 2-year-olds are entered in 21 trials with the fastest 10 qualifiers making up the field for the 440-yard classic on Labor Day.

The purse and popularity of the All American has grown to such proportions that three consolation races are run on the days preceding the All American for the next 30 fastest horses in the trials.

The All American, started 15 years ago at this small south-central New Mexico track, has traditionally been run over 400 yards. This year, the distance has been lengthened to 440 yards.

Heading the field of entries in the trials is Pass Over, a filly which has earned almost $230,000 this season with eight victories in 12 starts. Pass Over, owned by Jack Delmar of Rosenberg, Tex., captured the Kansas Futurity earlier this summer at Ruidoso Downs but was denied a chance to become the first horse to win the world's three richest races when she failed to qualify for the Rainbow Futurity earlier this month.

The Kansas, Rainbow and All American futurities comprise the three richest horse races in the world.

Pass Over, which looked like the quarterhorse industry's answer to Secretariat, showed she could be beaten when she ran second to West Coast invader Coca's Kid two weeks ago.

Coca's Kid, with earnings of $3,000, was nosed out in the Golden State Futurity at Los Alamitos Park last month but has been tough to beat in most of her outings this season.

Coca's Kid, Gotta Go Too and a Florida horse, Our Anniversary, are entered in the 19th trial and are considered strong contenders for the elite 10-horse field.

Coca's Kid and Our Anniversary were late entries into the trials with their owners putting up a $15,000 supplemental fee. The owners of 10 other horses in the trials also paid the hefty fee to give their horses a shot at the million-dollar purse.

Two other big money winners this season, Azure Teen and Time to Think Rich, will hook up in the 14th trial.

Astros Lose 9 To Buc's Moose

HOUSTON (UPI)—Bob Moose of the Pittsburgh Pirates has 10 decisions against the Houston Astros and nine of those are wins.

Texas Longhorns Picked In Poll

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI)—The University of Texas, as would be expected was the overwhelming choice to capture the Southwest Conference football title in the annual poll conducted by the TCU Sports News Service.

Of the 113 persons who took part in the poll 95 picked the Longhorns. Texas came up with 877 points in the balloting.

Next in order came Texas Tech (649), SMU (621), Arkansas (490), Baylor (474), Texas A&M (411), TCU (284), and Rice (234).

Texas Tech received seven first-place votes while SMU had two and Arkansas, Baylor and Texas A&M one each.

Only one person picked Texas as low as third place.

Carlen Lacking Experienced Offensive, Defensive Lines

By JIM CARLEN
Head Coach
Texas Tech University
Written for UPI

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI)—Every successful football coach, someone once said, needs three good lines—one for offense, another for defense and a third for post-game interviews.

I, for one, would be perfectly willing to settle for the first two at Texas Tech this fall. I suspect they would have a lot to do with the third, since it is a lot easier to come up with a humorous quip when your team has come out on the long end of the scoreboard.

However, the fact remains that most of the personnel losses from our 8-4 Sun Bowl team of a year ago were concentrated in those aforementioned offensive and defensive lines.

Defensively, for example, we lost four of our front five through graduation. Included was noseguard Donald Rives. In addition Quintin Robinson, one of our two starting linebackers, also is gone.

Experience Lacking
Only end Aubrey McCain returns from our 1972 defensive line. And although we feel we have some fine young defensive linemen at Texas Tech, notably end Tommy Cones, noseguard David Knaus and tackles Ray Hennig and Ecomet Burley, they lack the aggregate 11 years of starting experience our graduated seniors had.

Elsewhere on defense the picture is brighter. Dean's list student Tom Ryan will be back at the starting linebacker post he held down last year and veteran George Herro will step in for the graduated Robinson at the other spot.

There is similar good news for Texas Tech fans in the defensive backfield, which returns intact. Starting cornerbacks Kenneth Wallace and Randy Olson, strong safety Danny Willis and Greg Waters, a big-play artist at free safety, will all be back on hand this fall. Their biggest worry may be holding off some talented young players.

On the other side of the line of scrimmage there is also considerable talent and experience in the backfield. But again it is the forward wall that gives us concern.

Strong Side Good
The strong side of our offensive line is in good shape with guard Dennis Allen and tackle Tom Furgerson returning for their second year of starting duty.

Sophomore Jim Frasure and letterman Larry Burnett will battle to see who will replace Russell Ingram at center. Quick guard Floyd Keeney and quick tackle Freddie Chandler are both junior squadmen who lack experience. How quick this trio comes through will doubtless have much to do with our success this fall.

Our backfield is in good shape although we will miss Doug McCutchen, who graduated as Tech's second leading career ground gainer.

George Smith, who rushed for 740 yards and a 6.9 average per carry last year, will be at tailback. George was named the Sun Bowl's most valuable player after rolling up 172 yards and three touchdowns.

Up for Grabs
John Garner and James Mosley will duel for the starting fullback spot with Hoskins also available for duty as a swing man.

The man who made Texas Tech go last year was quarterback Joe Barnes and you can't imagine how much it pleases us to have him back. Joe needs only 798 yards total offense to crack the Tech career record held by Tom Wilson, our quarterback and receiver coach. Tom, I'm sure, will be happy to see him get that record.

All nine players who caught passes for Tech last year are back once again. Heading the list is Andre Tillman, our all-American candidate at tight end. If there is a better one in the country I don't know about him.

Okay on Kickoff Returns
Deep threat Calvin Jones, 6-4, 215, will be our split end and he will be backed by Jeff Jobe. Three year veteran Ronnie Samford will be our flanker. Backing Samford will be Lawrence Williams, who led the nation in kickoff returns last year.

Don Grimes, who kicked true on 12 of 18 field goal attempts last year and who has never missed an extra point at Tech, will be our kicking specialist. There are no problems there but our punting game was only average last year and a freshman could end up as our regular punter if he can beat out John Garner who punted for us last year.

Still, if we could come up with these two lines, I wouldn't have to worry about the third at those post-game interviews.

PREDICTION
Broncos aren't far away from being a representative team. But give 'em another year of development — fourth in division.

PROSPECTUS — Since in all their history they've never won, why not be patient another year? Coach John Ralston is a positive leader — without enough followers. At least, the Broncos showed last year they can put points on the board. If they can manage to get some more defensive help, they might even hoist themselves to .500.

PASSING — Old Charley Johnson was revived and, for a change, injury free. The sharp Dr. Johnson won't kill you with his arm, but he's accurate. Steve Ramsey is regarded as a prospect. Fair.

RECEIVING — It's looking pretty good now that Rod Sherman and Haven Moses have shown they can carry wide receiver load, with help from Jerry Simmons. Moses is only one with speed, however. At tight end, Riley Odoms has chance to be one of the great ones but right now he still alternates with big Billy Masters. Good.

RUNNING — As long as there's Floyd Little, with insuperable heart and leadership, there's a ground threat. Found out Joe Dawkins could play in same backfield, after Bobby Anderson got hurt. And the future is wrapped around the hot talents of Otis Armstrong. Very good.

LINE — It's a problem. The centers are old; the guards are restless; the tackles are only so-so. Best that can be said for them is that they've been playing together long enough to acquire some cohesiveness. Paul Howard is rookie with most chance to help. Poor.

DEFENSE
LINE — Couple of blue chippers in Paul Smith, an underrated tackle, and Lyle Alzado, a corner at end. Have moved Pete Duranko, coming off bad knee, inside to tackle spot and paved way for Barney Chavous, a raw rookie, to grab down an end spot. Behind them there are only a bunch of mediocre vets. Fair.

LINEBACKING — Class-wise, the weakest area on team. Unless Tom Graham develops into spectacular middle man. And Don Parish, who's had bad knee among other problems, can handle outside spot. Rookie Tom Jackson is a threat to supplant Chip Myrtle as regular. Poor.

SECONDARY — The talent would be good enough if the rest of the defense measured up. Bill Thompson has most native ability, is slated to be strong safety. Charley Green is his safety mate. The corners so far are slotted for Leroy Mitchell, Randy Montgomery. Fair.

KICKING — Jim Turner has thrived in Rocky Mountain air; no reason he shouldn't continue accurate field goal booting. Bill Van Heusen could use a length injection in punting. Only real return threat is Montgomery on the kickoff unit. Good.

HIGH SCHOOL RIVALS but now teammates are (from left) West Texas State sophomores Tibby Rogers of Pampa, Garvin McCarrell of Pampa and Steve Gobin of Perryton. Gobin played against Rogers and McCarrell in high school. Rogers and Gobin will possibly see playing time for the Buffs this season, while McCarrell must wait another year because of transfer ineligibility, coming to West Texas from the University of Texas at Arlington. The Buffs open against Drake at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 8 in Frank Kimbrough Memorial Stadium.

Four Teams Advance To Quarterfinals Today

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (UPI)—Tainan City, Taiwan and Tampa, Fla., and Birmingham, Mich., and Tucson, Ariz., four teams which won easily in their first-round games, play today in the semifinal of the Little League Baseball World Series.

Wednesday's winners, Birmingham and Tucson, will meet in today's second game.

Tainan City, which destroyed Bitburg (Germany) Air Force Base, 18-0, Tuesday, will meet Tampa in the first game. Tampa overpowered Wyalley (British Columbia) 11-2 in its first-round contest.

Birmingham used fine pitching by Billy Gee and an 11-hit attack to swamp Monterrey, Mexico, 8-1. Gee lost a shutout in the sixth inning when Willy Valdez singled to drive in Fernando Pena.

Scott Currie led Birmingham's attack with three hits, including two triples.

Graham Doesn't Want To Repeat As Champ

CARY, N.C. (UPI)—With Jack Nicklaus, Tom Weiskopf and six other big name golfers waiting in the wings, the overshadowed $100,000 L&M Open gets under way today with a field eager to leave the tournament.

Defending L&M champion Lou Graham says he doesn't even want to repeat as winner of the $20,000 purse.

Instead, Graham and the other 146 golfers in the L&M want a shot at head-to-head competition with Nicklaus, Weiskopf, and the others who prequalified for the U.S. Professional Match Play championship, which starts Saturday.

If Nicklaus, who won last year, should win it again, the $40,000 prize would put his career winnings within striking distance of an unprecedented $2 million, at $1,989,129.

Nicklaus says he doesn't see match play as such as being any more a challenge to him and his prestige, than medal play. "Any time I play it's a direct challenge. I don't ever like to lose."

SWC Roundup

By United Press International
With one of the youngest and least experienced teams in the Southwest Conference, the Texas A&M Aggies open fall football practice and Coach Emory Bellard said he expects more than 100 candidates to turn out.

Bellard has only 17 returning lettermen back and this includes only one senior and six juniors.

But the 10 sophomore lettermen include some of the most talented in the conference this year—like tight end Richard Osborne and linebacker Ed Simonini.

Bellard will have the Aggies working in shorts for two drills per day today, Friday and Saturday. The second drills each day will be held from 7 to 9 in the evenings.

Bellard figures one of the more interesting battles will be that for starting quarterback. The leading candidates are

Only two other schools have begun fall practice. Rice has been working out for most of the week in shorts but Coach Al Conover will have the Owls in pads for the first time today.

Frank Broyles said the Arkansas Razorbacks looked a little tired following Wednesday's second day of practice.

"We spent most of the day working on our pass offense and defense," the Arkansas coach said. "Since we have to work in shorts anyway, you can work with your passing game a little better than you can your running game."

Broyles said he was not worried too much about Wednesday's symptoms of fatigue.

"With the practice schedule they get a pretty good rest and we haven't been staying on the field long," he said.

At the end of the L&M's second round, the top eight golfers in the tourney leave the field for match play. The ninth man takes the lead going into the third round of the L&M, played simultaneously over the 6,786-yard, par 71 course.

"The L&M is sort of a reward in reverse," says Graham, who won it last year in a four-way playoff. "I've won it and I've loved it, but now I'm ready to move on—to the match play."

Besides Nicklaus and Weiskopf, the British Open champ, the exempt players for match play are U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller, Masters champion Tommy Aaron and Lee Trevino, George Archer, Grier Jones and Jerry Heard, Nos. 2-5 respectively on the PGA's Tournament Players Division exemption list.

Brash young tour sophomore Lanny Wadkins, $40,000 richer after winning the USI Classic last week, is in the L&M field.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Our Capsule Policy

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces can he develop to his utmost capability.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

Maybe Something Good Will Come Of Watergate

Agents of political government who have created or contributed to the unsavory practices which are coming to light in the Watergate affair are now coming up with suggestions for corrections in the system. It is painfully amusing to watch politicians scurry about to find "solutions" to problems they have created. But it is more painful to realize that the "solution" they will present will no doubt create a greater problem.

From our perspective, being disassociated with any political party or candidate, we can examine these "solutions" without emotion and without the taint of special interest.

So let us reason about the question of campaign contributions and the expenditure of funds to help propel a candidate to high political office.

A new law has already entered the picture. This would set a limit on campaign funds which could be used by candidates for office. Another suggestion, this by Sen. Alan Cranston, would place the financial burden of political campaigns for Senate and President directly upon the taxpayer — never mind the fact that most American taxpayers do not participate in the process.

The ugliness of political campaign practice brought to light in the Watergate aftermath certainly sets the stage for some kind of political action. The image of "restriction" which these two suggestions seem to convey well may find popular acceptance because they carry with them the suggestion that no longer could there be huge sums of money to be used to influence the voter.

This is the atmosphere in which politicians prosper. It is mere illusion which fails to carry even the doubtful respectability of the fact truth. To be sure, there could be a law on the books which officially restricts expenditures who is to control the armies for campaigns along with contributions to candidates. But who is to control the armies of "volunteers" who simply wish to see "the best man elected." Will it become a crime to encourage your neighbor to vote for "Mr. Right?" Will it become a crime to write letters to your business associates, customers, and friends extolling the virtues of Candidate "A"? Why not, does such activity not represent an expenditure of funds for a political candidate?

Thus if such a law is to be effective it must restrict the activity of the tax payer in the election of politicians. In the final analysis, therefore, the free and open election process no longer would exist.

Let us examine the Cranston proposal. Elections and campaigns funded by tax money would differ from the above only in that it would add a new burden to the people trying desperately to survive the government-imposed distribution of their funds.

In both "remedial" suggestions, the incumbent in political office would become most likely a permanent fixture. It should be obvious that a campaign against an established officer holder is the more difficult and costly, so how does one manage when the allotted expenditures are identical?

Does this mean the problem is beyond solving?

We suggest that first the task is to define the problem. The root here is not that evil deeds are done by candidates and their agents in quest of high office. The root is that high office carries with it too much power. It is a temptation which by its very nature invites evil deeds.

We fear we are beyond hope for any immediate solution to the basic problem. We doubt that the great mass of American taxpayers is ready to demand a reduction in power held by politicians. But the situation today may encourage some examination by the more thoughtful among us.

The most discouraging aspect is that so many seem to shrug off Watergate as merely the natural conduct of politics and politicians; "everybody does it, so why pick on Nixon?" seems to be the attitude.

We quite agree. We doubt that any holder of political office has attained his election without resorting to some sort of "dirty trick" or having had some such activity conducted in his behalf by zealous agents.

Should such people then be entrusted with so much power? Should such people be exalted? If this is the avenue of thinking unleashed by Watergate then it might well be worthwhile in the long run.

"Not so with my servant Moses; he is entrusted with all my house. With him I speak mouth to mouth, clearly, and not in dark speech; and he beholds the form of the Lord. Why then were you not afraid to speak against my servant Moses?" — Numbers 12:7,8.

Crossroads Report

Dear Editor: I see where the Ervin Inquisitors and other get-Nixon people think it would expedite their crucifixion plans to get the tapes of the President's huddles with his "aides". Which is par for the avid witch-hunters, who probably don't make tapes of their own strategy-hatching sessions. And it shows how desperate they are for supporting dirt, that they would even hope Mr. Nixon was ever stupid enough to tape any talks that could embarrass him if they got into enemy hands.

I see where the U.S. Congress's tricky scheme to get pay raises for its members without them having to go on record as voting for same is triggering again.

This time their raise is only about 25 percent but their pay scale is getting so high it looks like we might save money by letting these jobs to the lowest bidders.

This would save considerable money, with no risk of getting poorer performance, which is already such that the only way it can get is better.

I see where another Senate Investigation is starting. This one is similar to the Ervin-chaired Watergate hunt for something to vaguely justify the verdict it has already found.

Chairman Jackson has already publicly condemned the people his committee is investigating, who he says made a profit out of the Russian wheat deal.

Judges and Senate investigators could save the country a lot of time and money if they would just announce their verdicts instead of messing around with witnesses and due process.

I see where there is still talk of amnesty for deserters and draft dodgers flushed out of the country by the Vietnam War.

And amnesty seems reasonable. These born chickens really should be thanked for running away before they got any buddies killed by turning tail during a battle.

Men born with physical defects like a clubfoot or a short leg are excused from military service, and so should a man born with some other physical defect such as a wet noodle spine.

My petulant postal patron neighbor says he notes that in some ways the post office folks handle the mail just as fast as they ever did.

Like bills, which the postaleers obviously rush through the works and get to him as speedily as ever, in spite of rain, snow, heat, etc.

But checks seem to take a little longer. Like a week or two. And enduring the dillyment and dallyment with his parcel post in recent years has been sort of like waiting for Congress to act, or Spring to come.

Considerable government personnel and money is used for checking up on whether business people are making false claims in their pitches for their products. But there is no comparably dedicated and financed bureau to report on false advertising of their services by politicians.

We have a pretty good system by which car manufacturers, for example, can be made to recall and fix a faulty product, but faulty congressmen can do a lot of damage before they can be recalled.

Demand is rising, productivity lags

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Dr. Paul W. McCracken, former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers for President Nixon, has put the inflation problem succinctly: Demand is rising by 12 percent a year while the capacity to produce is rising only a third as fast.

That obviously leaves three courses open. Cut demand. Find ways to increase production. Or both.

The economic record of the past several decades tells us that we have been notoriously unsuccessful at curbing demand nationally, however desirable that may be at times. And when officials have succeeded, they've often done it so clumsily that we've ended up with a recession.

A simple cutback in government spending, for example, seems almost impossible to achieve politically, however much praised by one president or another.

We do have the capability to increase production at a faster pace. We have the know-how in $100 billion in stored "available" research in recent years. This is not the total research and development figure; it is rather the amount of useful research accomplished and stored which men knowledgeable in the field believe could be put to use in industry, on the farms and otherwise in our daily lives — research which has been virtually ignored in major sectors of industry, or not fully utilized.

This research in question is the product of untold millions of man hours in the nation's universities, in the space program, in defense and in other government and private laboratories throughout the land.

H. L. Hunt Writes

CRIME INCREASE The annual crime report of the Federal Bureau of Investigation showed that offenses were down by two percent last year, but this, comparison with the statistics of the preceding 12 months period should be taken with a grain of salt. Observers of the crime picture have pointed out that not all offenses are reported to police. They also note that the FBI said that crimes against persons were up two percent. If the figures present an accurate account, they mean that crimes against property were reduced some.

FBI statisticians serve as a reservoir for crime figures supplied by local law enforcement agencies. They are not necessarily vouched for by the FBI. They do, however, give the public an indication of how serious the crime picture is, and it is to be hoped that citizens will join in the fight on crime. Attacks on persons on the streets, in their homes and in their places of work have grown at an alarming rate over the past decade. It is to combat this that police departments are putting more officers on patrol duty. It is generally recognized that more police officers are needed for this work and that's where citizens can get into the picture. They can urge their cities to expand their departments and give the officers more equipment.

Law-Aid is a program to assist police departments. It is an unofficial program, but it works. Join the fight against crime by supporting your police and sheriff's department. Commend them for their good work and urge your fellow citizens to do the same. Crime is one of this nation's major problems. If we lose it, we have lost a war. The criminal is a dangerous enemy.

Your Health

Drug Overdose And Memory

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Two and a half years ago I took an overdose of barbiturates. I was in the hospital two weeks, but only remember three days of it. Since then my memory is terrible. I can't remember even simple things for very long. Before that my memory was perfect.

Now I want to sign up for night school to get my diploma, but I want to know, will it pay to spend the money since I might not be able to remember things until I took the test. Is my problem caused from the pills. I took, and, if so, is there anything I can do to improve my memory?

I was not on dope. I got the pills from a doctor who was treating me for nerves. I have not seen a doctor since I left the hospital. Would it help if I did?

Dear Reader — With overdoses of sleeping pills, and similar problems, it's not always possible to determine what degree of complete recovery will occur until after the acute crisis is over. If the person has a shock-like reaction, or anything else happens that decreases the blood supply of oxygen to the brain for a prolonged period of time, there is a possibility of brain damage. This can affect a person's memory and the personality afterwards.

Fortunately, there is continued recovery of even the memory and personality factors for some time after the initial crisis. Even so, if the crisis is too bad, and the brain doesn't get enough oxygen for too long a period of time, or is exposed to toxins in any way for a long period of time, brain damage can result.

This point is not always understood by people, and they think only of the difference between life or death, which occurs in such situations. The truth is, there are other complications that can occur, even if the person survives.

Let me use a good simple example. If a person tried to commit suicide by carbon monoxide poisoning, such as running the car in a closed garage or similar techniques, the carbon monoxide poisoning will decrease the oxygen available to the brain. The carbon monoxide combines with the hemoglobin in the red blood cells and makes it impossible for them to carry oxygen. If the person is rescued before they have completed the act, and the brain didn't get oxygen for a long period of time, there may be permanent brain damage.

The only way to determine the degree and importance of brain damage is by psychological testing. Incidentally, it may be possible to improve your memory skills by certain types of memory exercises.

You are entirely right that it's a good idea to find out what your capabilities are, and what problems you might encounter before starting to resume your schooling. You should see your doctor and perhaps he can arrange for you to have psychological testing to determine if you really have a memory problem, or something else can be done to help you improve your memory response and, hence, learning ability.

Where They Stand

By Editors of The Washington Monthly Skimpier TV Campaign Budgets in '74

With the midterm congressional campaigns little more than a year away, Republican professionals are bracing for the possible impact of Watergate. One of the few GOP insiders willing to talk on the record about this problem is Jim Allison, who was deputy chairman of the Republican National Committee from 1969 to 1971. Currently he is a partner in a campaign consultant and public relations firm along with Harry Treleven, who ran Richard Nixon's television campaign in 1968.

A: Perhaps the most important thing to watch is the voter turnout. If it's low it may signal that the main consequence of Watergate is voter apathy. If anything will hurt the Republicans in those two races, it is much more likely to be the economy than Watergate. In Virginia, for example, Henry Howell is trying to run a populist campaign against the Republicans and, because of the economy, I suspect he may have a strong impact.

Q: Do you think campaign techniques will change in 1974 because of Watergate?

A: Yes, definitely. In the last few months I have heard a number of people in this business talking about placing a greater emphasis on organizational efforts — such as ringing doorbells — and decreasing reliance on television advertising. Especially because of the cynicism about politics deriving from Watergate, the public is apt to be extremely skeptical of campaigns that revolve around television or other types of media manipulation. Instead the emphasis is likely to be on people-to-people contact and on the nuts and bolts of political organization.

Q: What impact do you see Watergate having on the 1974 congressional elections?

A: I am inclined to think it will affect both parties in general more than Republicans in particular. I can see the public looking on virtually all politicians with suspicion and contempt. If that's the case, the mood in 1974 could easily become "throw the rascals out."

Q: Then you could see a number of incumbents of both parties being defeated for reelection next year?

A: Yes. There is likely to be some kind of anti-incumbent feeling. Watergate may also turn off large segments of the public to politics. Voter turnouts will decline even further, and candidates will discover that attracting volunteers and raising money will become increasingly difficult.

Q: How would you advise a Republican congressional candidate to handle Watergate?

A: I'd advise him to take the defensive. For example, I'd have him make his personal finances public and call for full disclosure by all public officials. I'd also have him stress that the Republican party itself was not involved in Watergate. It is no secret by now that the Republican party was entirely closed out of the President's reelection efforts.

Q: What about someone like House minority leader Gerry Ford who has been outspoken in his support of the President throughout the whole Watergate affair? Don't you think administration loyalists such as Ford ran the risk of being labeled "party hacks"?

A: It all depends on how the President comes out of the Watergate affair. It certainly could hurt people like Ford. But even if Nixon himself is permanently hurt, the electorate has a tendency to judge a man on his own record, not his degree of support for the President. Remember, Nixon had no positive coalitions in 1968 and 1972, and this may mean he won't have any negative coalitions either.

Q: Two states, Virginia and New Jersey, have gubernatorial races this year. Do you see any trend developing there which may foreshadow the 1974 races nationally?

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — "The tug of war, in which stocks have lost their footing against a muscular team of Treasury bills, U.S. government notes, certificates of deposit and other low-risk investments with luscious yields may soon find the balance of power shifting in favor of equities," says The Spear Market Report. Slender straws in the wind suggest a less stern monetary policy is waiting in the wings, the U.S. balance of payments is running in the black, and in the last week long-term investors returned to the bond markets, it says. "This scenario calls for a substantial upturn in the bond market and a concomitant rekindling of interest in lower-tier growth stocks," the letter adds.

Data for the month of June suggests "the long-awaited inventory push is now under way," according to First National City Bank's Economic Week. The June statistics show a $2.6 billion increase in inventories and an upward-revised May rise of $2.1 billion, the letter says. "Economists have been expecting the inventory surge to signal the closing phase of the current expansion," it continues. The overall gain of 1.3 per cent for June indicates inventories are not keeping pace with sales, the letter adds.

Merkin & Co. says "While one of two more minor upswings may occur in the market during the next few weeks, the list is vulnerable to a fairly large intermediate decline which could be the ultimate drop leading to the next major buying opportunity." Although the list now is oversold, providing a quick profit situation for "nimble traders," the firm advises more prudent investors "to remain on the sidelines pending technical developments."

After last week's brief rally ground to a halt with the news Vice President Spiro Agnew faced indictment, "the national mood on top of the Watergate scandal was typified by a sagging Dow Jones Industrial Average," says the Dines Letter. No evidence has appeared to indicate an end is in sight to the long-term bear market, also beset by the gold crisis and the degenerating performance of leading blue chips, it says. "It seems as if somebody up there is trying to assassinate this stock market," the letter adds.

Canada is the largest market for United States fruits and vegetables and takes over half of our export total.

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

With summer heat scorching Texas, there is the possibility you could become a victim of sunstroke or heat exhaustion during the blast-furnace weather ahead, advises the Texas State Department of Health.

The combined effects of the sun, exercise, heat and excessive perspiration with water and salt loss can produce serious symptoms and may even be fatal.

Exposure to excessive heat may result in heat exhaustion, heat stroke, and heat cramps, with heat exhaustion being most common. In exhaustion cases, the person's temperature is approximately normal; in stroke, it is high.

Most likely to be affected are the aged; the obese; the very young; alcohol addicts; and those suffering from any disease that impairs the strength of the entire body, say state health officials.

Sunstroke is caused by over exposure to the hot sun while heat exhaustion is due to prolonged exposure to high temperatures indoors or outdoors. In sunstroke the body overheats. Usually the victim has a severe headache and everything looks red to him. Often the victim becomes unconscious.

Heat exhaustion is caused by prolonged heat and high humidity, but it is very different from sunstroke. The victim is usually conscious but weak and dizzy. His temperature falls instead of rises, and he feels cold and clammy.

In either case, call a doctor at once. The victim should be moved into the shade or a cool place and any tight clothing loosened.

Simple, common-sense precautions will nearly always prevent these conditions.

Between Raquel and Helen

Lois Nettleton's awkward time

By Ralph Novak

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Lois Nettleton's lengthy publicity biography does not reveal her age but an outline of her career in a theatrical who's who says she made her Broadway debut in 1949.

So she is long past the blooming starlet stage and finds herself in what can be an awkward time for an actress, typed somewhere between Raquel Welch and Helen Hayes.

"Well, I'm not exactly sure what the word means but I guess you could say I'm a star," she says with a gently exuberant smile. "When I do something, I'm in a starring role, anyway."

"Of course then the next thing is being a superstar and I'm not a superstar. "But why not? I wouldn't mind being able to work where I want, when I want and with the people I want to work with, so I won't scoff at the idea."

Whatever her status in the murky heights of the entertainment world's star hierarchy, Miss Nettleton is just finishing a successful run that establishes her lofty status in the less flamboyant actress hierarchy. She has been playing Blanche DuBois, in Tennessee Williams' "A Streetcar Named Desire," in a highly-praised production at the Vivian Beaumont Theater in Lincoln Center here.

Miss Nettleton has appeared in many films and on most of television's dramatic programs this side of the Watergate hearings as well as in stage productions of Shaw, Shakespeare, Giraudoux and other Williams plays. But she can be persuaded to stop saying she enjoys everything she does long enough to admit that, on the whole, she prefers the kind of acting that portraying Blanche involves.

Hoarse liniment?

LONDON (UPI) — The medical weekly, Medical News, gave these humorous definitions for medical and psychological conditions:

- Hiccups — Bucking bronchi.
- Hermaphrodite — A bisexual built for two.
- Patent medicine — Medicine that's not what it's quacked up to be.
- Head cold — Rheum at the top.
- Lesbian — A manish depressive with delusions of gender.
- Laryngitis — Conversation peace.
- Artificial insemination — Inoculate conception.
- Expectant mother — Momsoon.
- Manic-depressive — One whose life is easy glum, easy glow.
- Gargle — Hoarse liniment.
- Psychiatric exam — A checkup from the neck up.
- Diet — Penalty for exceeding the feed limit.

LOIS NETTLETON wants to feel like one of the girls.

She began serious acting in Chicago, in high school and as a student at the Goodman Theatre. Then she made one of those fabled migrations to New York, armed, her biography says, "with nothing but 118 pounds of strong determination, unusual and compelling blue-green eyes, an enormous talent and about $120."

Now, 25 or so years later, she still has more or less the same 118 pounds, the same determination, the same blue-green eyes, the same significant talent and, presumably, a lot more than $120. She also still has a pretty good idea about what she wants to do.

One of the cheapest and most effective methods of protecting your home from moisture, rot and drafts is calking it.

Calking compound is inexpensive and you need no particular skill to apply it. The problems that would result without calking would be far more expensive and difficult to cure.

You can calk any time you like so long as the temperature is above 40 degrees. The ideal time is before painting. In fact, calking is a must before you paint. All new construction should be calked.

But there are in-between

times for calking and you should do it whenever you feel it is needed. Calking compound is a substance not unlike putty. It is more pliable than putty but ever and it is used to seal cracks and joints. While calking lasts a long time, it should be checked now and then and replaced in spots where it has dried out or shrunk and a gap is once more open.

Apply calking around window and door frames, between window sill and siding, between siding and vertical corner boards, between the siding and the top of the foundation, between steps and porch, doorsill and doorstep, between chimney and roof.

Fill every joint you can find anywhere in your house that might be exposed to the weather.

Calking compound is available in inexpensive cartridges which slip into a calking gun for easy application. The cartridge has a plastic nozzle. The tip of this is cut and a steady pull on the trigger of the calking gun forces out a thin stream of calking.

Keep a steady pressure on the trigger to insure an unbroken stream. Keep the gun moving so that the bead of calking doesn't tend to pile doing something you have always wanted to do."

She began serious acting in Chicago, in high school and as a student at the Goodman Theatre. Then she made one of those fabled migrations to New York, armed, her biography says, "with nothing but 118 pounds of strong determination, unusual and compelling blue-green eyes, an enormous talent and about $120."

Now, 25 or so years later, she still has more or less the same 118 pounds, the same determination, the same blue-green eyes, the same significant talent and, presumably, a lot more than $120. She also still has a pretty good idea about what she wants to do.

Her movie career thus far has been largely in B-plus sorts of films ("Dirty Dingus Magee," "Come Fly with Me," "Mail Order Bride," most recently "The Honkers"). And her television appearances have been mostly as one of those ubiquitous "guest stars," though she did have her own short-lived series, "Accidental Family," and has played Lady Macbeth and done a reading of John Donne poetry for the educational network.

But she does not dream in visions of Oscars and Emmys.

"I think that more people have heard of Lois Nettleton every day and I like that," she says. "I would like people to remember me and maybe in the future they will read about me and it will say that I was a good actress."

"Then when I get to heaven and run into Sarah Bernhardt, Eleonora Duse and Sarah Siddons, I can go up to them and say hello and feel like one of the girls."

Texan Proud To Make 'Best Knives In World'

By ROBERT D. Inderman RICHARDSON, Tex. (UPI) — Tiny flecks of glowing metal spiraled past G. W. Stone's short brawny arms and died in the deepening grey-blue grit of the workshop floor.

"I make the best knives in the world," he said, and a grin permeated his usual dour face and he pressed the scarred 6-inch steel blade back against the spinning grinder. More sparks flew.

"I'm not against being rich," Stone said against the whine of the grinder. "Never have been. "I guess if I mass produced my knives and marketed them through some nationally known sporting goods stores or something, I might make a whole lot of money and have a big plush shop and a brass door knocker." Stone smiled again.

Maybe Not Wealthy "But if a man does something, then he should be the best in the world in what he can do," he said. "If he is, he'll be famous—but, unfortunately, not necessarily wealthy."

"But it means more to me to have people pick up a Stone knife, smile and know that they own the best darn knife they'll ever hold in their hands. And with the product I produce here with my own hands, in my own shop—and only a few at a time—they can do just that."

The short, stocky East Texan, who keeps his graying hair in a close cropped flat-top, annually produces only about 1,300 knives in the dusty two-room shop of Stone Knives. He's aided only by his self-trained craftsmen — Chris Black, Charlie Wilson and 73-year-old Dave Whitaker—who machine, polish, fit and sharpen each knife under his watchful eye.

Only 25 Per Week

"We can produce about 25 a week with all of us working hard," he said.

The knives come in eight basic styles—from the four-inch "mini-skinner" to the foot-long bowies. Each are embossed with his trademark—STONE—cut deep into the heel of each blade.

"I get special orders from time to time but I try to discourage that," Stone said. "I feel that if an individual can't find a knife from among the styles we have to offer, then his idea must be pretty far out and it just wouldn't be worth my time trying to make one to his specifications.

"I create knives, not gimmicks." The 56-year-old Stone began his knife career during World War II while serving as a metallurgist and an engineer at an aircraft plant. Most were given away to friends in the military heading overseas.

Many in Vietnam "I didn't want any of them going over without a good knife," he said.

"I sold hundreds to servicemen going to Vietnam. Fathers would come into my shop and say, 'I just wanted my son to go over there equipped with the best.' They'd then buy one of my magnums or bowie fighting knives."

Stone left the foundry after World War II and for a short time served as a manufacturer's representative for sporting goods.

"But I got tired of traveling and bought out a sporting goods store in Richardson," he said. "In the back of my mind I knew what I always wanted to do. And the name was always going to be Stone Knives."

Claims Secret Process East Texas folklore says Jim Bowie made his legendary bowie knife from an iron meteor and a secret process to harden the steel. Stone uses a commercially bought steel, but like his forerunner, claims a secret process.

"I started making knives with carbon tool steel for the blades but it wasn't what I wanted and it tarnished," he said. "Ordinary stainless steel was too brittle—or at least it was until I accidentally stumbled on the process that brought just the right balance between hardness and flexibility."

Stone said the baking—which is done at a Dallas laboratory to Stone's specifications — employs a vacuum oven like any other process, but is slightly altered during the second drawing of the steel.

Just Not Talking "And," Stone said, "I'm not going to say any more."

Stone Knives are light and balanced and he never tires displaying their durability. His magnum 6-incher will visibly scar steel support posts in his shop and still remain sharp while slashing chips from one of the world's hardest woods—ebony.

"I don't suggest you treat your knives — either mine or someone else's like that — but see, there isn't a mark on this knife. Anybody else's will nick everytime."

His Marline Fisherman knife can be put into a vise and bent more than 45 degrees. The handle will whip back and forth but the blade remains undamaged.

One Powerful Knife "My knives can be broken but you can't do it through just normal use," he said. "You have to be dead set on breaking it."

Impressive as his knives may be, even more impressive are the prices.

Homes

Planned community for young marrieds

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Studio, larger apartment, small house, larger house. The average married couple can trace their family and economic growth by the number of moves they make.

It can be unnerving — and expensive. Most young couples are faced with an economic and a lifestyle decision when hunting for a home — what they can afford versus where and how they'd like to live — says Boyce P. Price, executive vice president of the American Wood Council. All too often, they must sacrifice one for the other.

"This need not be the case with the new housing alternatives," Price says, and statistics bear him out. Figures compiled by the Federal Housing Administration show planned unit developments (PUD) continue to soar in popularity with the number of multi-family, mixed housing communities more than quadrupling in the last five years. Young marrieds comprise more than 60 per cent of the mix in some PUDs, with many couples having lived in two or more of the types of apartments or homes available.

These planned communities, Price said, offer a wide variety of housing alternatives. Townhouse, garden and high-rise apartments, and patio homes are combined in an esthetically pleasing suburban area.

With this mix, he noted, a couple can select the type of housing they need and can afford now. Later, as family, space or lifestyle needs increase, they can move but stay in the same community cluster. The problems and costs of the move are reduced and there is no disruption of social or community ties.

Checklist Price suggests that home hunters make a checklist and, if a planned unit community is one of the alternatives to be considered, include these items on it:

—Dual needs. Make a two-column list, one each for short- and long-term needs. Analyze communities according to their ability to serve both.

—Location. Suburban PUDs can add to commuting costs. However, job opportunities are increasing in peripheral areas, particularly for women, providing opportunities for extra income. Proximity to public transportation, shopping and schools also can reduce living expenses.

—Over-all costs. Budgeting is a must, but look at over-all expenses. Could a PUD's swimming pool or tennis courts provide recreation otherwise unavailable or too expensive?

—Individuality. Effective site planning, open spaces, careful design to integrate houses with their surroundings create a warm, "neighborhood" feeling. Rate PUDs on the sense of place and individuality.

—Availability. Check with the rental agent to see if community residents have first refusal when other units are vacated.

—Total Planning. If housing designs are tailored to cluster planning, quite often greater privacy can result from courts, patios, wood decks and balconies than can be achieved by separating homes with larger lots.

There are many things to consider when selecting a first home, Price said. Economics, esthetics, space, life-styles, educational systems, convenience are just a few.

"Take a good look at your present and future housing needs," he suggests. "Perhaps married life won't have to be such a 'moving' experience."
