We believe that one truth is always consistent with another truth. We endeavor to be consistent with truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Kule, the Ten Commandments and the Declaration of Independence.

Should we at any time, be inconsistent with these truths, we would appreciate anyone pointing out to us how we are inconsistent with these moral guides.

Help The Hungarians

In yesterday's editorial titled, "The Martyrs of Budapest," we commented on the terrible tragedy which has beset Hungary as she has been completely crushed under the heel of the Soviet.

Today, we make a direct appeal to the citizens of Pampa to open their pockets, along with their hearts, in support of the local Red Cross appeal to assist the benighted refugees who have fled Hungary rather than live under the bloody oppression of Russia. Pampa's share of the nation-wide Red Cross appeal has been set at $782 and in light of the fact that Pampa recently raised over $800,000 to finance a community hotel, this amount seems nominal enough when it is appreciated that the Hungarian tragedy makes our local project appear of no consequence by comparison. At this writing, the Pampa drive for funds has reached approximately the $236 mark but it is still in need of your support.

Here, indeed, is where an act of charity can make the meaning of the approaching Christmas season shine with a little greater luster."-

Federal Building

One of the greatest free enterprise endeavors in America is that related to the building industries. This is a veritable giant of freedom.

Past history has shown that there are few if any projects, regardless of size or engineering difficulty, which free enterprise cannot or will not dare.

True, there are some wild-eyed dreamers who envision all manner of fancy construction which no one in his right mind would ever pay for. Things like the proposed irrigation project for Colorado, making use of Pacific ocean water converted into steam and piped over the Rockies. Or the suggested highway to circle the globe via Alaska to Siberia and across the North Atlantic by way of Iceland, Greenland and Nova Scotia.

These things are in the fastastic stage and utterly unfeasible now from any economic standpoint.

But this is the point of friction. When government moves into the building field in any capacity, the natural and normal checks and balances which nature imposes by compelling financial justification, vanish. If the taxpayers are harnessed to the treadmill, it is not necessary for the bureaucrats to justify the nature or the feasibility of their project. All the government has to know is that it has an apparently inexhaustible well from which to siphon up the money for any grandiose building project, and the event is law.

The truth is that free enterprise is entirely cap able of building anything within the bounds of engineering knowledge up to the point that it can be paid for. The government sets aside the second truth and can proceed to erect anything at all that will hold together. Whether anyone wants it, needs it, or can pay for it, is hardly within the scope of its ambition.

Thus we find the second illustration of our series on the federal government's intrusion into the free enterprise field. For our federal polyarchy has entered the building field with a vengeance. More than two and a half billions of dollars of taxpavers' money have been poured out through federal sluices in the most gigantic construction projects ever dreamed of by any royal despot since the construction of the pyramid of Gizah, and the great Chinese wall.

By the close of the 1956 fiscal year, this original outlay of $2.5 billion remains on the books of the federal government as an asset worth only $485 million. Something close to $634.5 million has been recovered from the management of these various building projects,

The 1956 budget puts it this way: "Losses of $75.3 million and $78.9 million are shown respectively in fiscal 1955 and 1956. Losses from sale of property are roughly $28 million and $38 million in the two years, and temporary housing with a book value of $73 million and $58 million is to be demolished.

Obviously this is a losing proposition. Yet these funds were originally provided by the taxpayers, and the buildings built and used did not have to provide taxes. But perhaps one of the most astonishing phases of this federal boondoggle in the construction business relates to the efforts of the do-gooders in the government to improve the housing conditions of the Eskimo. $1 million in federal funds has been set aside to "improve Eskimo dwellings in remote areas." This project has been integrated with the Alaska housing program which is under the jurisdiction of the Community Facilities Administration, in turn a subsidiary to the Housing and Home Finance Agency, identified as "independent" and apparently responsible to no one. True, in view of the size of the other losses, another million more or less seems trivial. But reports coming from Alaska indicate that our brothers, the whale-eating Eskimo, are a little at a loss concerning how they are to improve their dwellings with this million dollars. A shipment of hardwood for floors in igloos was reportedly chopped up and burned for firewood, since as firewood it made sense. As flooring it did not. One "progressive" family of Eskimo who attempted to install a hardwood floor in their transient and easily constructed snow house, all came down with colds. They finally used the floor as a combustible.

So it would seem that there is no reason why the federal government should attempt to improve the customs or the standard of living of our northern neighbors, even with so paltry an expenditure as a million dollars. And this, in turn, serves to justify the query we have as to the advisability of the government's entrance into the building industries at all.

If it is worth building and can be paid for, free enterprise can do it. If it isn't or can't be, then why should the government do it?

By R. C. HOILES Embarrassing Questions

Proof Of Confusion Most people do not like an inquiry into human relation problems because it is inclined to lead to questions that would be embarassing. The fact that any question about what a man is advocating or opposing embarrasses that person is evidence, if not proof, that that person is confused and in error about what he is advocating. That is true because there is harmony, sequence, order in moral law. There is no contradiction in moral law. All political and economic questions are simply moral questions! Questions of right and wrong; of justice and injustice. Questions as to whether they are in harmony with eternal prin-

The man who is anchored to moral law never needs to be embarrassed by any question of human relation. A newspaper editor who is afraid of questions for fear they'll embarrass him is really of not much value to his readers. When anyone is afraid of questions, he is undoubtedly taking a position that is untenable. When an editor hides behind the editorial chair or a preacher hides behind the pulpit, he is doing himself a lot of harm and certainly not doing those he comes in contact with any service. He is doing himself a lot of harm because he is committing intellectual suicide. He is dead as far as learning is concerned.

Exceptions Test The Rule Those people who are afraid of questions undoubtedly believe the trite statement that has been repeated thousands of times, that it takes exception to prove the rule. Nothing could be more fallacious. The minute there is an exception, there is no rule.

This distorted statement undoubtedly came from the truism that it takes exception to test the rule. The minute an exception is found then there is no rule, no principle, no axiom.

If it took the exception to prove the rule, then we could have no rules, no principles, no axioms, because there would always be exceptions. Then you would have no moral principle from which to reason. Then you would be as helpless in knowing what was just and right as you would be in communicating the idea of distance to another party if there were no agreed unit of measure. There must be principles.

munists and the collectivists contend. Men's conception of right justice never change.

If an individual wants to be of service to his fellowman, the best thing he can do is to read the little confidence, if any, in those people who refuse to answer questions or answer them in such a way as to have a double mean-

Most of our trouble undoubtedconfidence in people who are so confused that questions on moral subjects embarrass them.

... with JAMES C. INGEBRETSEN President, Spiritual Mobilization

I nominate as the prize under statement of the year the reported assertion of a Soviet Communist Party publication that the Hungarian crisis and the 1953 revolt in East Germany simply prove that the "construction of the people's democracies is not yet com-

The publication might well have added that these events also prove that that "construction" never will be completed. For it is still true that "a house divided against it-

But, as sure as faith is stronger than force, as sure as light dispells darkness, and as sure as good is more enduring than evil, tyranny, in whatever guise it may try to impose itself upon the world, is on the way out. best to devote this newsletter to that subject. Many of these letters are from people who are most desirous of adopting children. Other Members of Congress are receiving similar requests. True to American tradition everyone is this country seems to be most anxious to take part in helping these people in their dire misfortune.

As soon as these refugees began to move out of Hungary, the State Department instituted a program in coordination with voluntary welfare agencies, and prepared a release concerning that program. Originally there were 9 voluntary welfare agencies listed, but subsequently 2 more were added as having information concerning Hungarian children.

I list these agencies as follows: 1. American-Hungarian Federation, 527 Mills Building, 17th and Pennsylvania Avenue NW, Washington, D. C., Telephone: National

2. Baptist World Alliance, Relief Committee, 1628 16th Street NW, Washington, D.C., Telephone:

3. Catholic Relief Services, National Catholic Welfare Confertional Catholic Welfare Conference, 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16. New York, Telephone: York 16, New York, Telephone: ORegon 9-3373.

4. Church World Service, 215 Fourth Avenue, New York 3, New York, Telephone: SPring 7-6300. 5. Hungarian League of America, Inc., 30 East 30th Street, New York 16, New York, Telephone: MUrray Hill 4-3623.

6. International Rescue Committee, Inc., 65 West 45th Street New York 36, New York, Telephone: MUrray Hill 2-4672. 7. Lutheran Refugee Service, 235 :

Fourth Avenue, New York 3, New York, Telephone: GRamercy 8. Tolstoy Foundation, Inc., 300

West 48th Street, New York 19. New York Telephone: CIrcle 7-2922. 9. United HIAS Service, 425 Lafayette Street New York 3, New York, telephone: Oregon 4-6800, 10. Catholic Committee for Refugees, 265 West Fourteenth Street,

New York 11, New York. 11. American Branch of the International Social Service, Inc. 345 East Forty-sixth Street New York 17, New York.

According to information last 3 agencies named above, to wit, Numbers 9, 10 and 11 are the ones with which you should .communicate should you be interested in Hungarian children.

The State Department has pointed out that the situation coned out that the situation cerning children has not yet been bown how clarified. It is not known how many orphans may be involved, and whether or not these children will be subject to adoption. Neither is it known as to whether or not unaccompanied Hungarian children may be brought to this country; and, if so, whether or not they will be subject to adoption or merely here for temporary refuge. The Deprtment indicates that every effort will be made to reunite these children with their relatives. The costs of their trip to this country and return will be borne by the U.S. Government. If you are interested in aiding the adult refugees, you should furnish all or any of the above agencies with the following information

1. Your name and address: 2. Housing available for refugee; (give detailed description):

3. Employment available for refugee, if any; (give detailed de-4. Other particulars; (how many refugees you can help, and any other information you might think helpful in your offer of assistance). If you are interested in the children, you should furnish the following information to one or all of the last 3 agencies above named: 1. Your name and address: 2. Family status including children, ages and sex

3. Age and sex of children desired by you: 4. Brief detailed description of your home and facilities to assure the children of care and school. The respond to the call for help for these unfortunate Hungarian people has been tremendous. It is my hope that more effort will be made in this country to apprise the people generally of the sad plight in which many of our own American citizens are existing. I feel that if the sad plight of many
