WARBLING WALTON—The proud fisherman displaying this giant catch at Miami Beach is none other than singer Vic Damone. Between appearances at a local nightclub, Damone tried his hand with rod and reel and landed a 45-pound sailfish, which measured six feet and two inches from nose to tail. That's enough good luck for anyone to sing about.

DRESSED FOR COMFORT—A nice spring day on the campus of California's Stanford University seems to bring out the gypsy in the souls of the school's band. The assortment of costumes was worn while the bandsmen were exhorting the school's track team in a meet with the University of Southern California. The clothes didn't inspire the athletes, for USC won.

A NEW IDEA—Taking a flyer at his own particular technique for handling a kite, Clarke V. McDonald is using a rod and reel to handle the airborne toy in Yakima, Wash. McDonald claims the fishing rod method makes it easier to bring the kite back down by reeling in. At least it helps him limber up for the fishing season.

ESCAPE!—As Giant third sacker Daryl Spencer, right, scrambles to pick up the ball, Phillies' Chico Fernandez (45) hustles back toward third during the Giants-Phillies game in New York. Fernandez was caught in a rundown between third and home when batter Rip Repulski bounced to Spencer and the latter threw to the plate. The Phillies won, 6-5.

UP TO PAR — Little sports should find this two-piece ensemble of Bermuda shorts and button-down shirt right up to par for playtime. The shorts are made of sheen sateen, and the cotton mesh shirt has an embroidered motif for an extra touch of color in a good looking artist.

WATER SPRITE—Winsome Marcia Valibus, this year's "Miss Miami Beach," would make a mighty attractive advertisement for any resort city. She's a bathing beauty who likes the water and isn't at all afraid to get a bit wet.

LITTLE LEATHER PUSHERS — Unleashing a flurry of punches, five-year-old Edward Richards, left, moves in for the kill after flooring his opponent, Gary Hardin, also five. This took place during the 39th annual Navy Junior Boxing Finals

EXERCISE AND FUN—Country kids have trees to climb, but these youngsters in New York get their kicks out of a steel maze during their lunch hour. The school is not far from the Empire State Building which can be seen in the background.

THE PRINCELY WAY—Getting ready to exhibit his talents in wrestling, Swedish Crown Prince Carl Gustaf, right, is looking for an opening against his opponent in Stockholm. The prince was representing his school in the wrestling match and quickly dumped his opponent.

GETTING WITH IT—Air lungs and other diving equipment in law enforcement work are being used by the Florida Highway Patrol and the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish commission. Two instructors in Silver Springs are showing officers how to adjust mouthpieces.

TRICKY TRICK—Young Linda Lewis is using a cockeyed driver to hit a golf ball from her father's mouth in Atlanta, Ga. This little lady appears regularly in U. S. tournaments.

Return To Gold

Declaration of Independence.

It is not often that we can heartily commend action taken by our various representatives at the nation's capitol. However, word has now been received that Senator George W. Malone, a Republican from Nevada, has introduced two bills which, if passed, would return this country to a gold standard and would place gold on an open market basis in this country, like any other com-

We are delighted to learn of this event and eagerly hope that Mr. Malone will receive considerable support in his efforts. The measure (S.1897) is called the "Gold Redemption Act of 1957." One provision of the measure says that "standard of gold coin, gold certificates, silver dollars, silver certificates and United States notes, shall be full legal tender."

Something like this is sorely needed. Ever since 1933 this nation has functioned on the basis of paper money. which is susceptible to all manner of government meddling and manipulating. A basic part of our inflation is definitely traceable to the fact that there is no redeemable currency in existence. Most of the currency presently in use carries this phrase: "This note is legal tender for all debts, public and private, and is redeemable in lawful money at the United States Treasury or at any Federal Reserve bank

The implication is clear. While the currency is thus declared to be "legal tender" it is also clean that it is not "lawful money" since it can supposedly be redeemed in "lawful money." However, when one individual sent a ten dollar bill into the treasury requesting that the bill be redeemed in "lawful money," he received by return mail a pair of five dollar bills, each of which bore precisely the same notation. In other words, the paper money is redeemable with more paper money. But none of it bears the legend that it is "lawful money."

Since a treasury note is in fact additional promise to pay, it is no wonder that we have had an inflation and are still in the midst of an unprecedented rise in the cost of living. Since each promise to pay is simply backed up by an additional promise to pay, it is clear that we have been existing on promises rather than upon money. By tying each note to something of tangible and lasting value such as silver or gold, the promise to pay could be fulfilled. Thus the money would find a base at last, and a part of the impetus toward a runaway inflation could be halted.

This, however, is only a part of the picture. Senator Malone has introduced another measure (S.1775) which frees gold from its federal restrictions and returns it to the open market where it belongs. This bill says that its function in part is "to authorize private transactions ininvolving the sale, acquisition or holding of gold within the United States."

Here Senator Malone hits right to the core of the matter. Since 1934 it has been illegal in this country for private individuals to trade in gold or even to possess gold. And this has placed Americans at a distinct disadvantage with all other persons in the world, since no such prohibition hampers them. This has helped to bring about a condition in which gold has fled from this country to other countries including Russia and various communist satellites. If a man is breaking a law simply by saving a $20 gold piece it is inevitable that there will be a dearth of such saving.

Says Malone: "Gold is a commodity, the owners of it should have the right to possess and sell it as do owners of other industry or economic group that produces commodities. But this is certainly not the case. Gold is the only commodity the marketing of which has been completely taken over by the government as a monopoly.

The gold producers in the United States can only sell their gold to the government or to parties licensed by the government. They must sell their product at a fixed price established by the government. This price is $35 per fine ounce, and it has remained unchanged since 1934." The senator might have added that on the world market, gold is selling now and has frequently sold at a much higher price.

We are distinctly encouraged by Senator Malone's sound sense in introducing both of these measures. What they could accomplish in the way of helping the entire economy of the United States in general and the economy of Colorado, one of the great gold producing areas, particularly, cannot even be estimated at the moment.

By all means support should be given to Senator Malone in both of these measures.

Board Education Member

Admits Government Schools

We believe that one truth is always consistent with another truth. As readers of this column know, We endeavor to be consistent with truths expressed in such great for many years I have been trying moral guides as the Golden Kule, the Ten Commandments and the to get a superintendent of schools, a Protestant preacher holding a pulpit or a member of the board of education in any of the 11 counties in which Freedom Newspapers publish a paper to answer a few questions as he would before a court to determine whether government schools were in agreement or disagreement with the Golden Rule and the Coveting Commandment.

I had been offering $500 to anyone who would get any of the above parties for $500 to consent to investigate the questions as to whether tax-supported schools were in agreement with the Golden Rule and the Decalogue, A. J. Miller, who was recently elected to the Board of Education of Santa Ana accepted this invita-

The purpose, of course, of the offer to secure the discussion was to get more people to think rationally as to how their children were being educated; to spotlight the necessity of their children being educated to believe in eternal moral laws that do not change with time and place.

Board Member Miller is very much interested in education. That's the reason he sought a place on the Board of Education. In talking with one of the reporters, Frank Martinez, I told him of my offer. He approached Mr. Miller and Miller could not see why any man who had nothing to hide would refuse to discuss what he was doing. So recently this interview took place. I want to quote questions and answers from this interview.

No. 1: "Would it be a violation of the Golden Rule and the Coveting Commandment for "A" to set up a school and corece "B" to help pay for it or leave the ter-

Miller's answer: "Yes, it would. Then again, I have to say, are we going to let this thing go on? Are we going to let this group take over? I'll go along with it. I think you're right."

I'll answer these questions Miller asked me later on.

Then I asked Miller this ques-

"If it is a violation of the Golden Rule and the Coveting Commandment for "A" to force "B" to pay for schools that he does not want to use or leave the territory, is it not also a violation of the Golden Rule and the Coveting Commandment, no matter how many "A's" join together to force "B" to pay for schools he does not want to use or leave the territory?"

Miller's answer: "That goes back to your same original thought. Shall we just forget about it altogether?"

Then I repeated this question and said, "Now, we've got to answer this question."

Then Miller answered, "Yes, it is a violation of the Golden Rule and the Coveting Commandment.' Then I asked Mr. Miller:

"Is it reasonable to believe that schools that violate the Golden Rule and the Coveting Commandment can successfully teach pupils to believe in these great moral guides?"

Miller's answer was "No." Then I asked:

"Would it not embarrass the teachers to be obliged to teach the importance of living by the Golden Rule and the Coveting Commandment when they, themselves, were violating these moral laws in their school work?"

Miller's answer: "I don't think It would embarrass them. I don't believe that. I believe that there are still teachers that would be just tickled to death to teach it.

If they could." Then I asked Miller:

"They're hardly permitted by the Supreme Court, are they?" Miller answered: "I don't know that. I can't answer that. I just don't know. I know that in that particular case here, the Board of Directors probably could change it if they all agreed, but one man can't do it alone.

Then I remarked that I thought the Supreme Court would rule if anybody took a stand against it, the schools would dare not teach the Coveting Commandment and the Golden Rule; that the Court has ruled that religion and government are entirely separate.

Then Mr. Miller remarked: "Well, Mr. Hoiles, I'll tell you frankly, I believe strongly in what you're saying, and I'll agree with you 100 per cent, but then on the other hand, we're still in a position - what are we gong to do? I'm going to ask you a question. What are we going to do?"

My answer was: "persuade people not to have faith in Government schools." I will go into this further later on.

The Doctor Says

By Edwin J. Jordan, M. D.

Mrs. M. says she is troubled with astigmatism and wants to know where she should go to get this corrected.

I find this inquiry slightly puzzling because I do not know how Mrs. M. could know that she had astigmatism unless she had already been to an expert who had examined her eyes.

There is no medicine or operation which will "cure" astigmatism. Its treatment involves the use of eyeglasses which correct the curves in the eye responsible for the condition.

There are many kinds of astigmatism but in all of them the difficulty is that the rays of light which enter the eye do not come to a clear focus in the back of the evehall. Someone who has astigmatic eyes, therefore, sees objects as though blurred or fuzzy.

IT IS NOT UNUSUAL for astigmatism to run in families. Consequently astigmatism, or the tendency to it, may be present at birth. Rarely injuries, operations or inflammation can produce this difficulty. In the vast majority, however, an obvious cause is lack-

The eyeball is shaped like a sphere. The rays of light come through the circular part of the eye called the pupil. If the eyeball becomes twisted in any plane the rays of light will also become twisted and will not come to a focus.

THE ASTIGMATISM is not always in the same plane, and it is usually different in the two eyes. For this reason, when glasses are necessary for astigmatism, the lenses necessary to correct the defect for the right and left eye usually will not be alike.

To correct astigmatism, each eve must be examined to determine just what change there has been in the curvature and which planes need correction. Then the Iens for the glasses is prescribed and ground in such a way that it will counteract the error and bring the parallel rays of light to a single focal point in the back of the eye. Thus the image of what is seen again becomes clear and EXPERT TRAINING is necessary to find out what is the matter and to prescribe exactly the type of glasses needed to correct the errors. Special instruments are required and in most cases physicians place a drop of atropine or something like it in the eyes, which causes the pupil to become dilated and makes the examination of the eye more simple and more accurate.

Of course, the eyes should be tested at the same time for such diseases as glaucoma or cataract. Also astigmatism may be associated with near or farsightedness which, if present, should be corrected in the same glasses.

Millicent — What about the dia-mond necklace you promised me? Conrad — Excuse me, darling, but when I'm with you I forget everything.

The fantastic story of Orville Hodge, the embezzling auditor of Illinois, had a small beginning—a telephone tip from a reader to The Chicago Daily News.

Now it has blown into a million-dollar fraud, the biggest state government—scandal of its day. New trails still unfold.

Between the tip and the full burst of scandal lay a hard road.
Resistance at every turn. Concealed records. Public employes instructed to say nothing.

Painstaking searches into developing leads. The examination of thousands of checks.

The end result is a belated victory for good government.

And a demonstration, once again, that there is no better watchdeg of the public interest than a dedicated newspaper.
