COURT TESTIMONY DISCLOSES

Nixon's Recorded Tapes Contain Blank Stretches

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Testimony before Judge John J. Sirica disclosed today that President Nixon's personally recorded recollections of two key Watergate conversations contain blank stretches.

J. Fred Buzhardt, White House counsel, acknowledged gaps in the tapes of the President's dictated accounts but suggested they were the result of normal dictation practices.

He denied the blank stretches were caused by deliberate erasure. The tapes, subpoenaed by Watergate investigators, were Nixon's accounts of a telephone conversation with former Attorney General John N. Mitchell June 20, 1972, three days after the Watergate break-in, and of a discussion he had with John W. Dean, then White House counsel, on March 21, 1973.

Sirica unsealed a 30-page transcript of Buzhardt's first disclosure of an 18-minute gap in a June 20 Watergate tape of a conversation between Nixon and H. R. Haldeman. The transcript was taken of a conference in Sirica's chambers on Nov. 21.

The transcript showed that Buzhardt said of the gap during the conference: "It looks quite serious. It doesn't appear ... it couldn't have been accidental." Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski said today it would be difficult to conclude that the erasure was accidental.

Sirica ordered the conference transcript unsealed over the objections of James T. St. Clair, recently hired to be new head of the White House Watergate legal team.

The existence of the blank spots in Nixon's dictated recollections were brought out by assistant Watergate special prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste in questioning of Buzhardt.

Ben-Veniste disclosed — and Buzhardt confirmed — that Nixon's account of his talk with Dean ended in mid-sentence and was followed by 57 seconds of silence.

The President's dictated account of the Mitchell conversation on June 20, 1972, contained a 38-second blank period before picking up the President's voice in mid-sentence, Ben-Veniste said.

Sirica's court was jammed with a standing room only crowd for the hearing.

Asked by Ben-Veniste why blank spots appeared in the tapes, Buzhardt replied that "frequently, dictation may not be in the form of complete sentences."

The court hearing resulted from a report by some technical experts earlier this week that a tape of a Nixon conversation three days after the Watergate break-in had a gap that was caused by a series of manual manipulations of a tape recorder.

The Watergate special prosecutor, Leon Jaworski, said today it "would be very difficult" to conclude that the erasure was caused accidentally, and that this was the reason he asked for FBI for an exhaustive investigation of who might have been responsible.

Jaworski said that the technicians' report "conceivably" would suggest criminal destruction of evidence at the White House.

Acting at the request of Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, the FBI began what a spokesman Thursday called an inquiry into "the whole matter of the tapes."

"If an (FBI) approach is made to the White House," deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said of the FBI investigation, "we would cooperate fully."

The White House was not as forthcoming in other areas.

Motion to Dismiss
Nixon's attorneys Thursday asked a federal court to dismiss a Senate Watergate committee request for five presidential Watergate-related tapes.

The attorneys filed a brief before Sirica saying that the courts have no jurisdiction in what they said was essentially a political controversy between Congress and the White House.

Bucket Brigade Set Tomorrow

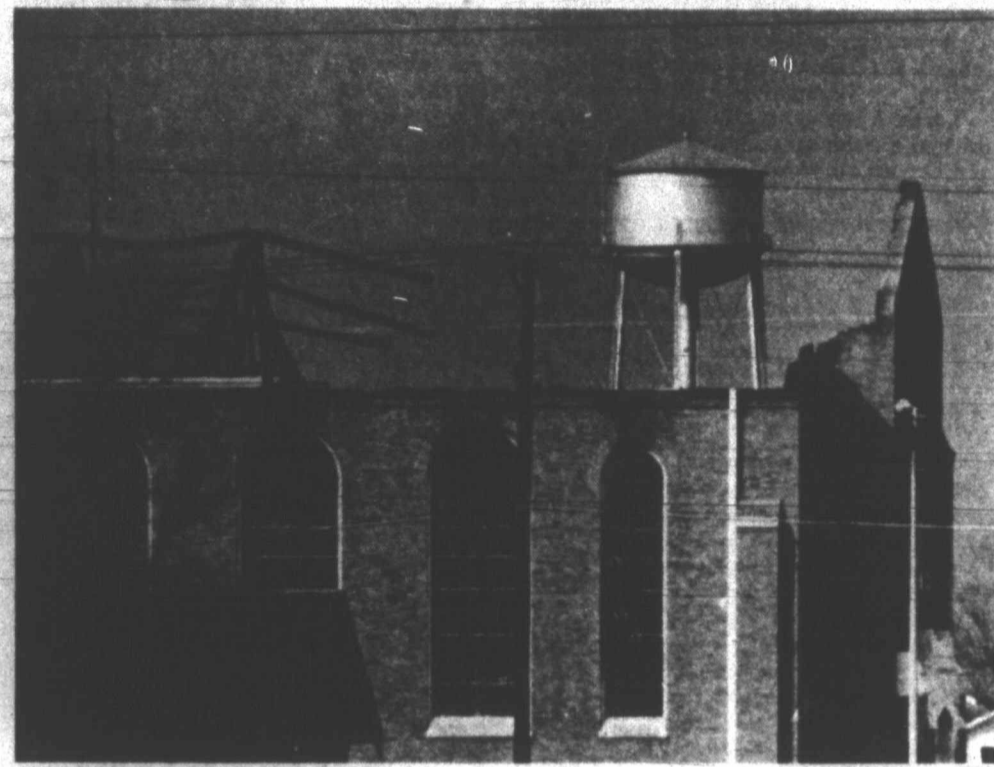

Volunteers from various civic and service clubs in the city will be soliciting funds for the National Foundation, March of Dimes, with a "bucket brigade" Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Males and females will work at eight intersections throughout the city to raise funds for the battle against birth defects and related diseases, according to Philip Kimbley, city drive chairman.

Letors will also conduct its brigade tomorrow, with McLean planning its efforts for Saturday, Jan. 26.

Pampa intersections to be manned tomorrow are: Cuyler and Foster, Top O' Texas Kiwanis Club, Cuyler and Kingsmill, Optimists, Cuyler and Francis, Knights of Pythias, Francis and Somerville, Key Club, Hobart and Kentucky, Downtown Kiwanis Club, Ballard and Browning, Tru-teens, Foster and Kingsmill, Rainbow Girls, Gibson's - Levins Shopping Center area, Jaycees, The Mothers March for McLean will be conducted by the VFW Women's Auxiliary.

FOR STATE UNIVERSITIES

Critic Wants To Divide Permanent School Fund

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Rep. Joe Pentony, D-Houston, is planning an attack on one of the state's most sacred cows. The delegate to the constitutional convention wants to divide the $620 million Permanent University Fund which built the two largest school systems in Texas.

Pentony, a Houston psychologist who last year sponsored an unsuccessful bill to add a student to the University of Texas Board of Regents, will ask the convention to divide the constitutionally-protected fund among all the institutions of higher education in the state.

The convention's Education Committee has scheduled hearings on the permanent fund Jan. 28-30.

Pentony's battle will be uphill all the way. The permanent fund—a $620 million state investment in oil-rich West Texas land—has produced enough revenue since it was established in the 1876 constitution to build the universities of Texas and Texas A&M. The regents of those two schools, some of the most influential spokesmen in state politics, will not let go of the fund without a fearsome struggle.

Pentony claims, while those two schools are thriving off the permanent fund, "The rest of the state is getting the short end of the stick."

"The fund is causing an increase in the property taxes of every citizen in Texas," Pentony said. He based that contention on a provision in the proposed state constitution which creates a "higher education tax fund" to pacify schools not included in the permanent fund.

The tax fund will be paid for by an assessment of "not less than 10 cents per $100 valuation," the constitution says.

"The permanent fund is wasteful," he said. Because the two schools receive an annual yield of $30 million in lease interests and mineral royalties from the fund, they feel obliged to spend the money on new construction.

"Any time you have a mandate to spend funds, they will be spent," Pentony said.

The House delegate said if the fund is divided the most direct beneficiaries will be the universities of Houston and Texas Tech, the largest schools not covered by the Permanent Fund. Other state colleges will profit as well, he said.

"The fund yields $30 million a year now. That's based on the old value of oil at $2.40 a barrel. Oil's now selling at $8 per barrel in this country and the Arabs are selling it for $18-20 a barrel. It's got to go up," Pentony said.

Pentony said the prospects of raising a majority on the convention's Education Committee to back his proposal to divide the fund are dim.

Reds Endanger Troop Pullback

LONDON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has dashed hopes for early agreement on East-West troop cuts, endangering plans for a pullback of some U.S. forces from Europe this year, it was disclosed today.

Allied defense sources said the Soviets, in a statement circulated by the official Novosti Press Agency in Moscow, insured long and frustrating negotiations by linking the troop cuts with corresponding reductions in armaments, including nuclear weapons and warplanes.

The sources said the Soviet Union might be hoping the United States, under pressure from Congress and disgruntled with its allies, will withdraw some of its forces from the continent unilaterally.

Oleg Khlestov, chief Soviet negotiator at the troop cut conference in Vienna, defined the latest Russian position on force reductions in the Novosti dispatch. The new round of troop cut talks opened Thursday.

The United States had asked for a quick start to force reductions, with the first superpower cuts in land forces coming this year.

Under the U.S. plan, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and Soviet-led Warsaw Pact would then negotiate larger reductions until each side's troop level drops to 700,000 men.

Israel and Egypt signed an historic agreement today to disengage their armies on the Suez Canal. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat then announced they would fly separately to Damascus to seek a similar agreement between Israel and Syria.

At almost the same moment the agreement was signed at Kilometer 101 on the Cairo-Suez road, Kissinger landed at the Egyptian resort city of Aswan on the Nile River and conferred with Sadat for 90 minutes on the tense Israeli-Syrian situation on the Golan Heights.

Before the meeting Kissinger told newsmen, "I plan to visit Syria, probably Sunday." Immediately after their talks Sadat told a joint news conference in the garden of his villa he planned to go to Syria "imminently" for talks with President Hafez Assad.

Sadat made it clear that political negotiations in Geneva will not resume until the Syrian-Israeli disengagement issue has been settled. He said, "The Syrian front and the Egyptian front are one front, and I am committed before Syria just as much as I am committed before Egypt."

Sadat said he telephoned the Syrian President by telephone early today. A newsmen asked him whether Syria was favorably disposed towards a disengagement agreement with Israel and Sadat replied, "If this were not so, why should I go (to Damascus)?"

"In the first instance, we must approach the essential thing, namely, Syrian-Israeli disengagement, before anything else," he said. "The basic next step is not Geneva now, but disengagement."

Asked what he expected to follow disengagement, Sadat replied: "The whole question of the Middle East crisis has now moved forward and it cannot brook any stagnation."

Kissinger stayed only for seven minutes and then left for the airport and a 20-minute flight to Luxor where he was to spend the night before flying to Jordan Saturday for talks with King Hussein. He goes to Syria on Sunday. Sadat will go at an undisclosed time.

Kissinger said on arrival in Aswan.

"Our view is that disengagement talks with Syria should start and the United States will work on them with the same dedication and the same good will as it did on disengagement between Egypt and Israel, and President Sadat has strongly urged us to make this effort."

Newsmen asked Kissinger if he expected to shuttle between Damascus and Israel the way he has shuttled between Aswan and Israel for the past week.

"We will make the same effort for Syrian-Israeli talks as we made for the Egyptian-Israeli talks," Kissinger replied.

Sadat paid warm tribute to President Nixon as he and Kissinger chatted with some 50 newsmen in the garden of the government rest house before going inside at 1:00 p.m. (6 a.m. CDT) for their talks and a working lunch.

The Suez agreement was signed at 12:25 p.m. (5:25 a.m. CDT) by Lt. Gen. David Elazar, chief of staff of the Israeli army, and by Lt. Gen. Mohammed Gmasy, chief of the staff of the Egyptian army. It was witnessed by Lt. Gen. Ensis Sillasvuo, commander of the U.N. Emergency Force.

"The future will tell if this is an historical agreement," Elazar told newsmen after signing the accord. "If both sides will honor the agreement in spirit and to the letter than I believe it will represent a change in this area."

Elazar said five consecutive days of talks would begin Sunday at Kilometer 101 to work out details of implementing the agreement and that actual separation of forces would begin four days after that, Jan.

28. He said the forces of both sides would be withdrawn "within 40 days after that."

The agreement will lead to resumption of the Geneva peace conference to seek a political settlement that President Nixon expressed hope would lead to a permanent peace in the Middle East. Syria boycotted the start of the Geneva conference but might attend if the troop withdrawal problem is solved.

"This is a great day and a day we all hope will be the beginning of peace in the Middle East," Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir said in Jerusalem. On the front lines where one Israeli and one Egyptian soldier were killed in fighting Thursday Israeli soldiers fired rifles, fireworks and flares and shouted with joy at the thought of returning home.

Kissinger's Air Force Boeing 707, which has been shuttling between Aswan and Tel Aviv all week, flew in to Aswan for the fourth time at 12:30 p.m. (5:30 a.m. CDT) to begin the last phase of what for him has been a personal diplomatic triumph.

Official Egyptian sources said Sadat telephoned Syrian President Hafez Assad Thursday night to explain the agreement with Israel and that Assad authorized Sadat to open talks with Kissinger on a Syrian-Israeli disengagement on the Golan Heights front.

The sudden Syria interest in disengagement talks appeared to stem from fears that Israel could concentrate its might against Syria once it was free on the Suez Canal front. On Wednesday, when the Egyptian-Israeli agreement appeared near, Syrian Vice Premier and Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam warned in a Beirut newspaper interview against a separate Egyptian-Israeli agreement.

"A any disengagement of forces must take place simultaneously on both the Egyptian and Syrian fronts," Khaddam said. "This is because the separation of forces on one front means this front will be out of the confrontation and the enemy will be able to concentrate his forces on the other front."

"We will make the same effort for Syrian-Israeli talks as we made for the Egyptian-Israeli talks," Kissinger replied.

Maintenance crews from the Texas Highway Department have placed the new signs up during the past two weeks in preparation for the changeover and news media have been advising motorists of the change.

So there's little excuse for motorists to begin pleading ignorance if stopped by some law enforcement personnel for exceeding the new limit.

About 400 signs have been posted in the 17 northern Panhandle counties, including those in Gray County. With materials and labor, the cost for the district is an estimated $15,000. Many of the old signs have been stored in case the limits return to the previous speeds at some time — many hope soon.

Better Slow Down Come Sunday Morn

Area residents planning to travel this weekend can still make a rush for it on Saturday at the normal speed of 70 miles an hour.

But one minute after midnight Saturday, units of the Texas Highway Patrol and other law enforcement agencies are permitted to begin issuing speeding tickets for those who fail to adhere to the new speed limits of 55 mph on the highways throughout the state.

The new limit was authorized Jan. 8 by the Texas Highway Commission after special legislation passed at the urging of Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who in turn was acting at the urging of President Nixon.

Nixon Preparing Speech Saturday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said today he would "lay out our program" for dealing with energy shortages in a radio speech to the nation Saturday.

Nixon announced his plans as he called in the two top Republican leaders in Congress, Sen. Hugh Scott, Pa., and Rep. John J. Rhodes, Ariz., for separate sessions on legislative strategy after Congress begins its 1974 session Monday. The President's State of the Union speech to Congress is set for Jan. 29.

The President told Scott at the start of their meeting that he would go on the air sometime between 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. CDT Saturday. He said he had worked on the speech "until late last night" and that the speech will "lay out what our program is" on energy.

While newsmen were in his office briefly for the start of the meeting with Scott, Nixon also disclosed he plans to invite congressional leaders Monday morning to the White House to hear Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger report on his Middle East peace mission.

The President and Scott said they thought the Monday meeting also would take in discussions of energy, particularly the outlook for new legislation.

Scott told Nixon that both Rhodes and himself felt it would be helpful for the President to meet with both Republican and Democratic congressional leaders for a discussion of the energy situation and the prospects for action on emergency energy legislation that became stalled before a congressional recess began Dec. 21.

Nixon observed that the House and Senate had passed widely differing versions of an energy bill and said that he felt the two chambers were "awfully far apart."

He said he hoped they could agree on a bare bones bill and indicated that he might provide congressional leaders with a "priority list" of items he wanted in the legislation.

AFTER WARM SPELL

Cool Weather Returns Again

The temperature in Pampa was at 39 degrees shortly before noon today despite early forecasts of a high near 60 for the day. Brisk winds at 15-25 mph from the north-northwest and general cloud cover contributed to keeping the temperature lower than in the past several days.

Mostly cloudy skies and cool weather are expected to continue in the area at least through Saturday and there is a 20 percent chance of light rain today and tonight.

After several days of unseasonably warm weather (in which records were set in various places in the state) the Panhandle and the rest of Texas are preparing to face more winter-like temperatures for the weekend.

Winds are expected to diminish somewhat tonight with the thermometer dropping to the upper 20's.

Yesterday's high was 68 degrees and the low last night was 34.

In UPI reports:

Thunderstorms broke out in the Big Spring area of West Texas today as cooler weather pushed across the state from the northwest and reduced temperatures about 10 degrees.

At last report, the cooler weather extended from the Wichita Falls area to near Midland. The cool spell should be all the way to the coast by night. The thunderstorms near Big Spring moved east-northeast and were part of a line of scattered rain that extended toward Amarillo and Dalhart in the Panhandle.

Nearly all of Texas had a chance of scattered showers or thundershowers. The wind was gusty along the coast, with peaks of 35-miles-an-hour expected late in the day from Port O'Connor to Brownsville.

Overnight temperatures were more suitable for a March or early April weather pattern. The lowest it got at Dallas-Fort Worth was 64 degrees. Brownsville and Houston had 67.

The highest in the state overnight was Victoria's 68. The lowest was Marfa's 3 degrees. Most daytime temperatures were in the 70s and 80s Thurs-

Henley To Take Stand For Trial

HOUSTON (UPI) — Elmer Wayne Henley, accused of taking part in the worst mass murder in the United States this century, will be called as a witness during pretrial hearing next week but will not be asked any questions about the crimes he allegedly committed.

Henley's defense attorney Will Gray said Wednesday Henley will only be asked questions concerning his treatment by police after he was arrested.

Henley, 17, has been indicted on six counts of murder, but is on trial only for the killing of Charles Cobble. Police said Cobble is one of 27 teen-aged boys who were tortured and killed by Henley and his compatriots between 1970 and 1973.

The defense has filed a motion seeking to suppress Henley's oral and written confessions on the grounds Henley's constitutional rights were violated.

Gray called David Owen Brooks, 18, accused in four of the deaths, to the stand Thursday. But he refused to answer questions.

The lanky, long-haired Brooks sauntered into the courtroom wearing grimy jail dungarees without even glancing at his one-time confederate.

To each question except

"What is your name?" Brooks glanced at his attorney, Ted Musick, smiled and stumbled through the answer: "I refuse to answer on the grounds it might tend to incriminate me."

Finally Gray gave up and Brooks was excused and returned to the county jail.

Henley's attorneys hoped for confirmation from Brooks that police violated the defendant's rights during Aug. 8, 9 and 10, just after Henley called police and said he had killed Dean Corli, 33, the alleged mastermind of the sex and torture ring.

Pasadena, Tex., police detective Sgt. David Mullican testified on that point for 3 1/2 days. He kept the courtroom hushed throughout with the first details of the torture and deaths of the 27 young men, and with accounts of Henley's confessions.

"What did he (Henley) tell you about Charles Cobble and Marty Jones (another victim)?" Gray asked Mullican.

"That they were among the six he killed at the house (Corli's house)," Mullican said. "That he shot Charles Cobble in the right temple and he had attempted to choke Marty Jones, but it was not as easy as television showed it and he had to get Dean Corli to help him."

Shell Launches Ads Against Oil Criticism

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Shell Oil Co. launched an advertising campaign in today's editions of 233 U.S. newspapers aimed at combatting public criticism of the oil industry.

"News today unfortunately means somebody taking a shot at us," Shell president Harry Bridges said Thursday. "Our consideration was if the alternative was to lie down and die then we better make a fight of it."

The full-page advertisement aims directly at charges oil companies have raked in excessive profits because of the energy shortage.

Using 1968 as an example, Bridges said Shell's profits for the first nine months of 1973 were higher but the return on capital investment was less.

"How in all conscience this profit performance can be described as 'reaping windfall profits from the energy crisis' escapes my comprehension," Bridges said.

"I am willing for criminals to have the benefit of the doubt, a trial before their peers. But when they are found guilty, they should have public hangings."

"I think they ought to have public hangings in every area of Dallas, some in one part of town one week, some in another part of town another week, so criminals could see what we are doing. We need a mobil scaffold."

Hughes, 55, writes a column that appears in two suburban newspapers. He entered a special election to fill a vacant Texas House of Representatives seat and finished second in a five candidate field. In next week's runoff, Hughes will face John W. Bryant, 28.

Heath Makes Bid To End Problems

LONDON (UPI) — Government officials said today Prime Minister Edward Heath has decided to make one final bid to end Britain's crippling economic crisis before dissolving Parliament and calling for new elections.

If he fails, the officials said, Heath will ask for a general election—possibly Feb. 14—in an attempt to win a new mandate for his government.

The officials said Heath's first move will be to try to end the two-month-old slowdown by 200,000 coal miners, which has cut coal output by one-third and steel output by one-fourth.

The slowdown, together with the Arab oil boycott and a refusal to work overtime by 29,000 railroad engineers, has forced the government to impose a three-day work week, laying off about 1 million workers.

The officials said Heath was seeking a new meeting with heads of the 10 million-member Trades Union Congress (TUC) early next week in an attempt to work out a compromise with the miners.

Talks with the TUC broke down Monday when the government failed to obtain firm guarantees that other unions will not seek higher wages, if the miners are granted pay increases in excess of Heath's anti-inflationary salary guidelines.

Government officials said Heath also may summon

Mrs. Frances Walls, chairman of the Friends children's committee, said that Miss Erdman will tell the young people why she enjoys writing books for them and how much they have influenced her life.

Writer-in-Residence and associate professor of English at WTSU since 1945, Miss Erdman began writing as a hobby while teaching in junior high school in Amarillo around 1942.

Her first short stories and articles were published by magazines such as "American Girl," and in 1944 and 1945 she successfully published her first juvenile books, "Separate Star" and "Fair is the Morning."

During her early years at West Texas, Miss Erdman published her first adult book, "The Years of the Locust," which won her the Dodd, Mead-Redbook Novel Award.

Another adult novel, "The Edge of Time," was laid in the Texas Panhandle in the 1880's. From extra research done for this novel, Miss Erdman fashioned an award-winning book for young readers, "The Wind Blows Free," which was a Parents Book Club choice and is now in Apollo paperbacks.

Some of Miss Erdman's many juvenile and adult books have been reprinted in foreign countries, have been translated into foreign languages and are available in Braille and on Talking Books.

Her latest work for young people is "A Bluebird Will Do," published in 1973.

Nation's Economy Heads Into 'Possible Recession'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government figures show the economy stumbling toward possible recession with economic growth at a three-year low and inflation soaring at the highest rate since the Korean War.

That gloomy picture, which experts say will get worse when the full effects of the energy shortage hit home, occurred in the final three months of 1973.

According to the Commerce Department's preliminary Gross National Product (GNP) report for the fourth quarter released Thursday, economic growth slowed to just 1.3 per cent in October-December, compared to the hyperactive 8 per cent pace at the start of the year and the 4 per cent annual rate the administration considers ideal for long-term, non-inflationary growth.

Sidney L. Jones, assistant commerce secretary for economic affairs, said the economy has probably slowed even more since then. The growth rate in the current January-March quarter will be "flat at best and very possibly negative," Jones told reporters.

Two consecutive quarters of negative growth would meet the generally accepted definition of a recession.

The last recession in the United States was in 1970 when the economy stagnated in the wake of the auto workers strike against General Motors Corp.

There was equally depressing news on the price side. Inflation, which was rampant all year long, hit a new high of 7.9 per cent in October-December, the fastest three-month rise since the first quarter of 1961.

"Inflation is not a promising sector," Jones noted, echoing other administration economists who have warned consumers to brace for big price jumps in the next several months.

There were other sobering economic developments Thursday.

The Census Bureau announced that housing starts continued to slide in December, dampening an otherwise strong construction performance by the homebuilding industry in 1973 that saw new home and apartment units top 2 million for the third straight year.

The high cost of imported oil, in the opinion of Commerce Undersecretary John K. Tabor, will put the U.S. trade balance back in the red in 1974 unless American industry does "an unprecedented job of exporting."

Although year-end figures are still out, the U.S. trade account was expected to show a thin surplus in 1973 after two straight deficit years.

BUT STILL WORKING

Hiccups Gyro Faltering Again

HOUSTON (UPI) — Ground controllers have exhausted their "bag of tricks" for preventing a spacecab control gyroscope from faltering. But they are confident the pesky mechanism will last the final three weeks of the Skylab 3 mission.

The gyro, which began "hiccuping" seven weeks ago, faltered again Thursday but did not prevent controllers from scheduling a photo survey of the Earth today.

Gerald P. Carr, Edward G. Gibson and William R. Pogue had today off to relax from a hard schedule in the heated station. They were given permission to sleep late, take their weekly showers and rest although they were asked to watch over the semi-active sun and conduct the picture sweep.

The crewmen were given approval Thursday for another week in orbit and their physician, Dr. W. Royce Hawkins, said they had no medical problems and were in good enough shape to go beyond the 84 days planned if they had enough food. There were no plans to extend the mission past three months.

The crewmen must receive weekly extensions because they have surpassed the previous endurance record of 50 days and doctors want to monitor their physical condition more closely.

"We find nothing that precludes us going ahead at this point," Hawkins said.

Flight director Milton Windler said the gyroscope faltered three times this week but "I'm not any more concerned about it than I was before." He said it should last until the Feb. 9 splashdown.

He said ground teams send radio commands to manage temperatures in the gyro bearings to prevent the "hiccups" but that apparently has not worked.

Rebels Shell Phnom Penh For 4th Day

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Rebel forces shelled Phnom Penh today for the fourth day in a row, with one of the big, Soviet-built rockets ripping through a French-run school.

UPI reporters at the scene said a pair of 122mm rockets roared into the capital shortly after daybreak, killing one person and wounding four others.

The shelling raised the death toll to 18 in the four-day-old insurgent rocket campaign against the capital. Nearly 60 persons have been wounded.

The reporters said one person was killed and two were wounded when a 122mm rocket crashed into the Lycee Descartes 45 minutes before classes were to begin.

School officials said Anne Marie Leguen, a Frenchwoman teaching at the school, was one of the wounded.

The reporters said the second rocket landed minutes later about 300 yards south of the main marketplace in the center of downtown Phnom Penh, wounding two shoppers.

In another attack, an 82mm mortar round exploded behind a government building near Phnom Penh's Pochentong Airport, but there were no injuries and little damage, UPI reporters said.

In Thursday's shelling, one rocket exploded near a Buddhist monastery along the Tonle Sap River and another hit an army military police training school by the river. There were no casualties and only minor damages in the attacks.

Military analysts said the apparent aim of the shelling campaign was to let the capital's 2 million residents know the city was ringed by guerrillas and weaken the citizens' support of the government of President Lon Nol.

Heavy fighting raged northwest of the capital, with government T28 fighter-bombers flying 61 sorties against insurgent positions in a bid to break the guerrilla drive to isolate Phnom Penh.

The raids were directed against suspected rebel concentrations around Chhok Var, six miles from Phnom Penh, and nearby Angia Peu.

Hill To Hear Arguments On Police Records Rule

AUSTIN (UPI) — Attorney General John Hill will listen to arguments that he change a legal ruling that makes police arrest records confidential.

He ruled Wednesday such records, formerly open to the news media to inform the public a crime has been committed, are not public information under the new Texas Open Records Act.

The lobby group Common Cause immediately criticized the ruling and asked the media to contact its lawyers in an effort to change Hill's mind.

The attorney general decided Thursday to meet Monday with legislators, lawyers and members of the media to discuss the ruling.

Mary Jane Bode, Hill's press secretary, said there was some feeling among those opposed to Hill's ruling that the Open Records Act, which went into effect last June 14, contained a provision which would allow the police to continue disclosing arrest records.

The law contains a clause which classifies as public any "information currently regarded by agency policy as open to the public." She said most law enforcement agencies regarded their offense reports as public when the law was passed.

Mrs. Bode said Hill has conducted hearings before with groups unhappy with his official decisions.

"We've had hearings where he came out with the same decision as before, but he always has an open mind," she said.

House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., who drafted the bill as part of his program for the 1973 Legislature, said he would attend the meeting and tell Hill his intent when he proposed the bill.

"It certainly was not our intention to close any records, but rather to open records to the public," Daniel said.

Dallasite Advises 'Public Hangings'

DALLAS (UPI) — In the last two months, 14 persons have been shot during robberies of small businesses, most of them convenience grocery store hold-ups. Twelve of those persons shot have died.

W.W. Hughes, a neighborhood newspaper columnist, service station owner and candidate for the state legislature, believes he's got the way to put a stop to the robberies, shootings and killings.

"You take an old wolf or coyote, they get too prominent in a neighborhood and you hang a few over the fence," Hughes said Thursday. "Then they get scarce again."

"I advocate public hangings for rapists, dope pushers and people who commit other brutal crimes all over the country."

"You can always find bleeding hearts who won't bleed when a young girl is raped and murdered. But when they bring the old boy to trial, the bleeding hearts will come out of the woodwork and start bleeding."

"We have had four killings in eight days in Dallas. When these cotton-picking punks kill a man or woman, they are getting rid of witnesses. They may get away from robbery but that is about all."

"I am willing for criminals to have the benefit of the doubt, a trial before their peers. But when they are found guilty, they should have public hangings."

"I think they ought to have public hangings in every area of Dallas, some in one part of town one week, some in another part of town another week, so criminals could see what we are doing. We need a mobil scaffold."

Hughes, 55, writes a column that appears in two suburban newspapers. He entered a special election to fill a vacant Texas House of Representatives seat and finished second in a five candidate field. In next week's runoff, Hughes will face John W. Bryant, 28.

The Woman's View

UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — Talk to teen-age girls and you'll find their top needs lie in their job futures.

Then they list sex education, recreation and drug information as the next priorities.

These were some of the findings from a detailed workshop and questionnaire study which the Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA) did among 1,112 girls age 15 to 19, of differing racial and ethnic backgrounds in four regions of the country.

The YWCA selected the four areas to get samplings from assorted environments.

They were El Paso, Tex., a border city with a variety of ethnic groups; Greenville, S.C., a southern industrial city; Philadelphia, a complex metropolitan area with a large black population; and South Bend, Ind., a northern city with a varied population.

The YWCA announced the results at a news conference attended by two teens from each city. They were Margaret Chisholm, 16, and Letty Paez, 20, of El Paso; Bonnie Jones, 16, and Karen Jones, 18, of Greenville; Terri Kida, 17, and Sheila Watkins, 16, of Philadelphia; and Sharon Graham, 20, and Linda Megan, 18, of South Bend.

Among the total of 1,112 girls participating, some 81 per cent listed help in finding jobs as the most needed service and in one community, the percentage was 90 per cent.

Career Guidance
Job training ranked in top place in all racial and ethnic groups in all workshop areas.

Fifty-eight per cent of all questionnaire respondents ranked career guidance in third place as one of their greatest needs.

The teen women said that preparation for jobs does not come early enough, clearly enough or fairly.

Some of the teen comments: "We need to know how to do something else beside cleaning house." "We need training for a wider variety of jobs." "Why aren't girls trained to do anything outside the house besides office work?" "Girls usually don't get any training except for secretarial or teaching jobs..."

Sixty per cent of the teens answering questionnaires listed sex education as a need regardless of age, 65 per cent among the blacks, 72 per cent among Mexican-Americans, and 55 per cent of all whites. It was listed as a need not met by 44 per cent of all respondents.

Sex Discrimination
Some individual comments: "Sex education is banned from the schools but this is where we need it because we can't hide our feelings and it isn't being taught in the homes." "What is being taught in school is just lightly studied. Everyone is too prudish and moralistic about it."

"They tell you some of the stuff, but girls are still getting pregnant. They just tell you not to."

"I heard or thought that V.D. was something involving the kidney or the liver. I believed that, really."

Fifty-six per cent of all questionnaire respondents cited recreation as a need and 42 per cent thought it a need not met. Both sex and race discrimination were considered to be problems.

Some 56 per cent of all questioned called for more information on and education concerning drugs. Most considered most parents to be uninformed in this area. There was a consensus that drugs are all around and the age level of users is dropping.

"You know what gets me... said one teen, summing it up. "All the little kids taking drugs and the older people sell it to them... it's terrible."

Finland Offers Tourist Interests

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor
AULANKO, Finland (UPI) — Helsinki may be the major attraction but American tourists will find much to see and do outside the lively capital in friendly Finland.

Take the Aulanko resort district, about 65 miles north of Helsinki, long popular with European visitors as well as vacationing Finns for its fine accommodations, scenic beauty and outstanding sports and other facilities.

We drove up in a little more than one hour over a first-class paved road, past flat farmlands and pastures, glass-smooth lakes and aromatic forests of soaring fir trees. Finland is still a land of water and woods—about 70 per cent is covered by forests while there are more than 60,000 lakes.

Incidentally, if you drive don't drink—not even one drop of the excellent Finnish vodka or beer. Finland is tough on drunken drivers and conviction could mean a jail sentence or other severe penalties, including work on road gangs, according to our guide.

Facilities Are Plentiful
Our party of American travel writers checked in at the superbly situated 149-room Aulanko Hotel, overlooking Lake Vanajavesi and bordered by the Aulanko State Park. The resort covers 148 acres and offers a 9-hole golf course, four tennis courts, horseback riding, fishing, swimming, water skiing and a slalom slope with ski lift. There also are hiking trails and marked cross-country ski runs in the park.

Also featured naturally, are saunas. They have been a way of life in Finland for centuries.

The lakeside sauna was closed—the water had not frozen yet—so we sweated it out in the public bath in the hotel. Men and women use separate heat rooms but—after donning bathing suits provided by attendants—the same ice-water cold pool. Massages—and a private sauna for mixed or family bathing—are available.

There's a quiet bar for pre-and-post dinner drinks. At night, there is dancing and entertainment during the season in the attractive dining room. Menus offer a choice of continental and Finnish dishes while the smorgasbord table groaned under an infinite variety of fish, seafood, meats, cheese and other delicacies.

Aulanko is only a few miles from Hameenlinna, founded in 1639 and Finland's oldest inland town, where world-famed composer Jean Sibelius was born and went to school. We visited his home which was recently restored and converted into a museum. The simple wooden one-story house is a treasure-trove of memorabilia—photographs, paintings, clippings, letters, medals, etc. There are an old piano, bass, violin and a bust of Sibelius in the guest room. The bed and other original furniture have been restored in the small room where he was born in 1865.

Travel Services Excellent
Also worth visiting is the nearby town of Iittala, home of the famous Iittala glassworks, whose designers include internationally known Tapio Wirkkala and Timo Sarpaneva. Visits can be arranged to the Iittala glass museum, a former barn with a wooden floor of 30,000 hand-lain pieces, where the history of Finnish glass making is presented in graphic and imaginative exhibitions.

There are excellent ship, rail and bus services between Helsinki and the Aulanko region. Finnish travel agencies also offer numerous escorted package tours to the southern lake region as well as to Lapland in the north. Finnair has a special Holiday Ticket for about $90 which entitles the tourist to 15 days of unlimited travel within the country. The Finnish Railway also has special low-cost fares for visitors.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The view that the fuel shortage ultimately will help restore the importance of inner cities is gaining ground with municipal planners.

Two leaders of the profession said recently that the fuel crisis, just a little over two months old, already is affecting plans for future shopping centers.

Norman M. Krantzdorf, president of Amterre Development, Inc., of Philadelphia, a large shopping center developer, told the National Retail Merchants Association convention in New York that developers now are planning "mini-malls" closer to city residential neighborhoods.

He also noted that there is new interest in designing multi-story shopping centers incorporated in large apartment house complexes, although none actually has been built. The idea, of course, is to provide shopping within walking, bus or taxi distance of the urban home.

Curiously, Amterre opened the first of these mini-malls, Cedonia Mall, in Baltimore, last August before the gasoline shortage became acute. But Krantzdorf said there has been interest recently in developing small malls for the shopper who doesn't feel she must use her own car.

Krantzdorf doesn't expect the multi-story shopping to develop rapidly, but he thinks they will be common long before the end of the century. The first of them may be "fashion towers" specializing in stores showing high style merchandise.

An even more positive view that the fuel shortage will eventually have an invigorating effect on inner city trade was expressed by Lou C. Ripa of Porter & Ripa Associates, Inc., of Morristown, N.J. Ripa is convinced the gasoline shortage is going to be with us for years. He says it will continue to make it difficult for workers to reach jobs in far out shopping centers, thus creating a labor problem for these stores.

"This underlines the urgent need to revitalize the inner city so people can live and work and shop in the same community," he said.

Not surprisingly, Ripa says the fuel shortage ought to accelerate development of the city of Newark's Gateway 2,000 plan in which Ripa has played a leading role. Newark is seeking to build a "floating city" in the air rights over a mile and a half long section of the city stretching from downtown to Newark International Airport.

Ripa said many cities are in excellent position now to revitalize their shopping areas because they have vacant areas in or near the center of the city where old buildings were bulldozed down in the wake of the rush of retail trade to the suburbs in the 1950s and early 1960s.

SSI Providing New Source Of Income To Many People

The year 1974 will be an important one in the lives of many Americans as the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program became operative Jan. 1. SSI is administered by the Social Security Administration, according to Howard L. Weatherly, Social Security branch manager in Pampa.

The aim of the new program is to provide a basic cash income to people in need who are 65 or older or who are blind or disabled. Assets of up to $1,500 for an individual or $2,250 for a couple excluding a home of reasonable value can be owned without making one ineligible.

The actual amount of the SSI payment will depend on how much income a person has.

The new Federal program is not the same as Social Security, even though SSI will be handled by Social Security Offices. The money to make SSI payments will come from general revenues and not from the Social Security trust funds from which monthly social security benefits are paid.

SSI replaces the present Federal State public assistance payments made to the aged, blind, and disabled. Under SSI, it's estimated there will be millions of additional people eligible.

Applications for SSI are being accepted in Social Security Offices across the country at present.

If a person wants additional information about SSI, they should contact the Social Security Office.

The Finance Department of the Association of American Railroads reports that the hourly wage for railroad employees rose from 67 cents in 1929 to $5.03 in 1972.

GOOD FOOD IS MY LINE
By Bob Zaph

Ice cream is one of the most popular foods of all. Every age and generation rate it high on the list of preferred foods.

Ice cream was at one time served for royalty and nobility. The story of its discovery is lost, but it is believed that Marco Polo brought it to his banquet. His slaves may have run down from the mountains with snow which the Emperor's kitchen staff then sweetened with fruits and juices.

Regardless of who invented it, ice cream at one time was very precious and expensive. Like all other expensive things of earlier times, it was reserved for the "upper class." Now, of course, ice cream is available to all and indeed has become a national treat in the United States. We consume more ice cream in this country than all the rest of the world put together.

How About Busing?

Now that the impact of the energy crisis which they created can no longer be ignored, the masterminds in Washington are sprouting energy conserving suggestions, backed up by veiled threats, like porcupine quills.

"Turn down the thermostat" and shiver a little for the cause.

"Drive slower" and take longer to get there.

"Take a shower instead of a bath."

"Form car pools, walk, ride a bike."

"Use 'public' (read taxpayer subsidized) transportation."

"Use the phone instead of making that trip."

These and many other "do as we say, not as we do" bureaucratic "solutions," oral and written, daily bombard our eyes and ears.

Yet, when it comes to an area where literally millions of gallons of gasoline could be saved every day — the forced busing of school children — the powers — that — be are curiously reluctant to act; consequently, the National Federation of Independent Business, Inc. points out in its latest bulletin, the governmental credibility gap gaps.

While, to our knowledge, no surveys have been made in Colorado or on a nationwide basis as to just how much gasoline could be saved by doing away with forced busing of children to strange neighborhoods, surveys made in other states provide accurate clues to the savings that could be effected.

According to the NFIB bulletin, in the State of North Carolina, for example, a spot check of four school districts alone, showed that the discontinuance of forced busing would result in a yearly savings of 1,118,000 gallons of gasoline. Using the four district spot checks as a guide, it was estimated that forced busing was burning up THIRTY MILLION gallons of gasoline a year in the state as a whole.

Multiply that by 50 states, and you have a yearly savings of 1,500,000,000 gallons of gasoline that could be effected if the coercive practice of forced busing were abandoned.

Citing a statement made by Senator Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma, the NFIB bulletin noted that cross-town busing of students in Oklahoma City is using up an extra 350,000 gallons of fuel a year in that one city alone.

"While no one can predict what price gasoline will finally reach" as a result of the government created shortage, the bulletin went on at greater length, "in the average school district where busing is in operation costs to call for new, higher taxes." And, "if prices continue to increase, and a drive by local governments to raise property taxes to make up the deficits caused by higher priced gasoline in school budgets ensues, it can be expected that public pressure on the Congress (to discontinue forced busing) will mount."

ALL THAT GLITTERS

Truth In Political Advertising

By VIC GOLD

WASHINGTON — What did you make of that petition six members of the U.S. Senate and House filed last week with the Federal Trade Commission? Personally, I was flabbergasted. After all, requiring that companies substantiate their advertising claims for products and services is one thing. But the petition asked in effect that the FTC run a bureau of censorship regulating the public policy ads of oil and utility companies, which is something else again.

In fact, my initial impression was that the petition was repressive, you know? An effort to curb freedom of expression. But then, when I checked over the names of the Senators and Congressmen who initiated it, I just knew I had to be wrong.

I ask you, would civil libertarians like Birch Bayh, Frank Moss, Tom McIntire, Ben Rosenthal, Andrew Young and Les Aspin do anything to cast a "chilling effect" on anyone's right to advertise a free opinion on a public issue? Of course not.

Well then, did the petitioners consider the general public so gullible as to require protection against such information as might be contained in advertisements by Mobil or Shell, even when the ads are clearly identified as having been paid for by Mobil and Shell? Somebody with little faith in the public's ability to weigh arguments pro and con — say, a totalitarian dictator — might believe that. But certainly not six liberal members of Congress who profess faith in public dialogue and the people's judgment.

That being the case, why the petition? Suddenly, it came to me. This petition wasn't filed to intimidate industry. It was only the first step toward something bigger and better in the way of complete disclosure of all the facts regarding our energy crisis.

Let me explain. According to petitioners Rosenthal and Aspin, major oil companies and utilities are currently "engaged in an unsubstantiated propaganda blitz" to convince people they're "innocent of responsibility" in creating the energy crunch. This campaign goes on, argue the petitioners, despite the fact that "the QUESTION: Truckers recently were threatening a nationwide strike unless their demands are met. Some of these same truckers a few years back were condemning youthful demonstrators who blocked streets and sidewalks in their protests against the Vietnam war and the military draft. Is there any difference between the Vietnam war protests and the truckers' blocking traffic to enforce their demands?

QUESTION BOX

ANSWER: We can see little difference between the two types of protest, when members of both groups are infringing the rights of others.

In the case of draft and war protesters, there were many instances where individuals blocked the use of streets and sidewalks and entrances to buildings. There also were violent actions to interfere with military recruiters and in some instances with industrial recruiters on grounds some industries were engaged in government contracts.

Those acts of violence and threats interfered with the equal rights of other individuals to use public streets, sidewalks and buildings in a peaceable manner. Truly peaceful people were "turned off" by such violence and threats.

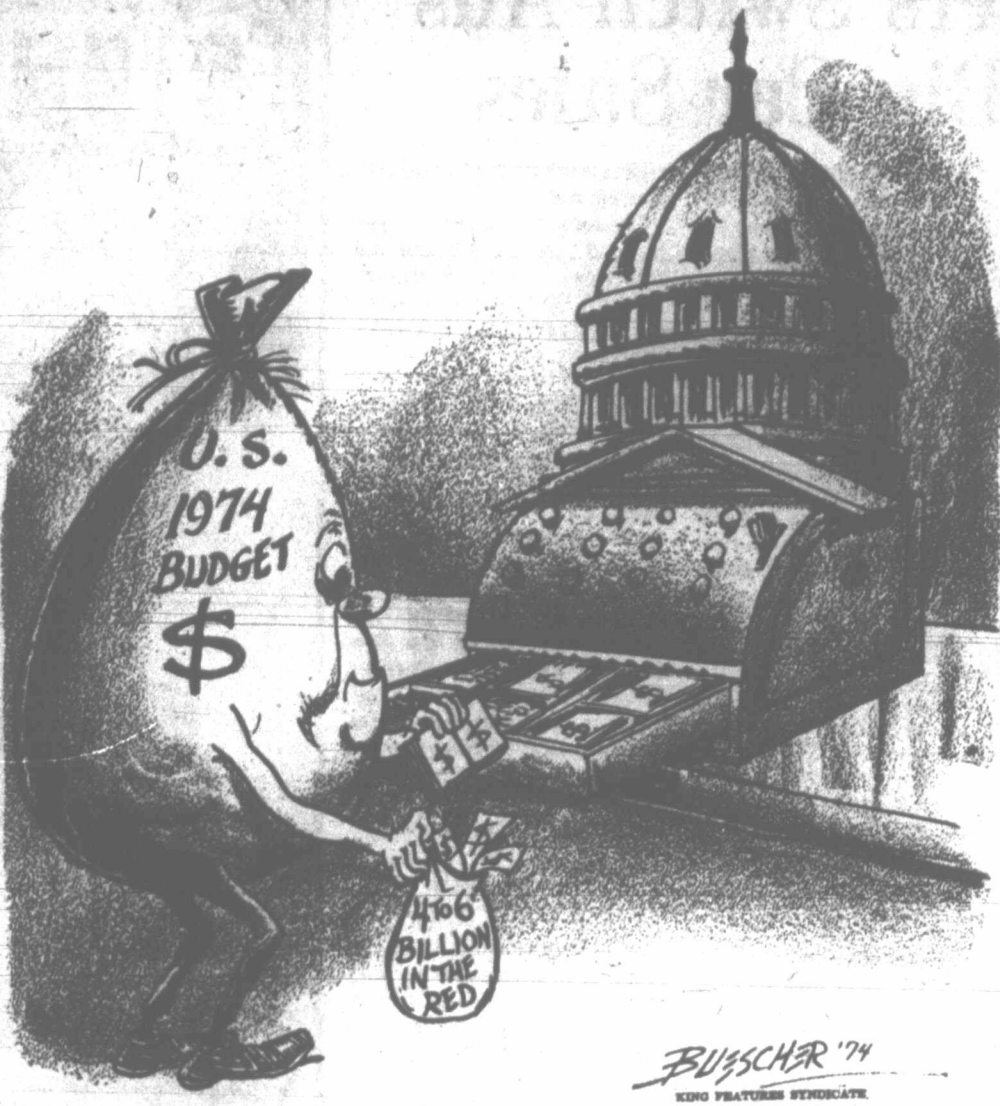

The same is true when truckers use their heavy vehicles to block streets and highways because they do not approve the actions of some government officials, in limiting speed and supplies of gasoline. They are interfering with peaceful individuals who have equal rights to use the public thoroughfares.

As with any other strikes, the truckers have a right to refuse to haul merchandise, but they have no right under any circumstance to keep others from hauling products or from using public streets and highways.

Any individual who condemns one act of violence or threats against others should condemn all other acts of violence and threats of violence against persons engaged in peaceful pursuits.

When Billy Graham performed services at the White House, guests were carefully selected to meet Nixon's idea of the "chosen people."

U.S. Arming Kuwait; Planning Big Rice Shipments To Saudis

By VICTOR RIESEL

NEW YORK — Documented intelligence reports disclose that Sheikh Saad al Abdullah is proud of his swiftly growing stocks of military equipment and bulging stores of life-sustaining agricultural products. He has reason to be — for he is both minister of defense and interior of his Emir's domain — oil-soaked Kuwait.

The arms and foodstuffs are pouring in from the United States. Despite Kuwait's oil embargo and diplomatic abrasiveness, the State Department has no plans to cut off these strategic American supplies. Authority for this is Secretary of State Kissinger himself.

At the same time there are secret negotiations between the U.S. and the kingdom of Saudi Arabia, for a huge rice deal in the image of America's wheat sales to the Soviets. The Saudis desperately need our rice which is grown in Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, California and Texas. Few realize that our government has powerful leverage through the control of millions of tons of rice — which is the world's "most important single foodstuff today" according to the Department of Agriculture.

We are, in effect, not only feeding many of the Arab lands with critical foodstuffs needed elsewhere across the globe, but with the vital equipment needed by the Arab oil operators.

In the United States, Saudi Arabia now is buying up huge quantities of oil-drilling equipment and spare parts for their oil-drilling. The King has authorized payment of premium prices for immediate delivery — and it's going over illegally by the ton.

So heavy is the flow of this scarce American machinery, the Saudis are building new warehouses to store the fabricated metal.

A report handed me by a specialist in this equipment field states: "By buying all they can, they've caused a shortage in essential equipment necessary for frilling exploration in the U.S. and thus are beginning effectively to curtail such operations in this country."

"The Arabs believe their purchase of this equipment from the U.S. will make us more dependent on them and delay our exploration programs, perhaps setting us back two years, certainly a year."

Further, if the Arabs are permitted to bleed us of such parts through hungry American oil tool brokers, they will not have to rely on us for some two years as they stock-pile the material. In addition, they're getting hundreds of barrels a day of automotive diesel and marine engine lubricating oil, grease, solvents and special waxes for their industry.

Actually it is believed they couldn't continue operating without American equipment for very long since their oil fields are based primarily on American machinery.

Some of these exports are considered by investigative Congressmen to be criminal violations of the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act of 1973. This law states basically that "crude oil, residual fuel oil and all refined petroleum products which are produced or refined within the U.S. shall be totally allocated for use by ultimate users within the U.S."

Certainly there is a supervisory customs force policing exports — the Office of Export Administration, Department of Commerce.

It has the amazing total of five commodity inspectors — two of whom are permanently stationed here at JFK airport. This leaves exactly three others for all U.S. airports, piers and borders. Count them — three.

These reports, and more, have been carefully analyzed by American maritime leaders. They don't need energy czar Bill Simon's deployment of CIA "spooks" across the world to tell them what is moving in and out of the embargo-happy Arab states.

The labor people simply check the regular publications of Lloyds of London — which lists the cargo and destination of every ship moving anywhere in the world. Doesn't even take much time — simply look under the heading of tankers.

If the listed destination is blank

— you know the cargo is boot leg oil.

Thus, in addition to information which wafts from the ships and the docks to the maritime labor leader Paul Hall, the longshoremen's chief Ted Gleason, the Marine Engineers' Jesse Calhoun and the maritime union's Shannon Wall, there is the information gathered at such sessions as are scheduled by the International Transport Workers Federation Jan. 16 in London's "Maritime House." Gleason will be there before he and a small U.S. labor delegation led by AFL-CIO Secretary-Treasurer Lane Kirkland fly to the Middle East to plan action against the oil boycotters.

The Pentagon, the State Department and Labor Secretary Pete Brennan have asked U.S. maritime leaders to delay their boycott of military and food supplies to Arab lands. American waterfront labor leaders have agreed to give Dr. Kissinger time — but not much of it.

As Always, U.S. Will Survive This Crisis, Too

By PAUL HARVEY

In the days when we all walked to school, snow made it more fun.

Nowadays, at the fall of the first snowflake, schools are closed because the buses can't run.

The U.S. will survive this crisis, too.

I am being petitioned — and I know that the Administration and the Congress are — by boat owners who are convinced the fuel shortage is a conspiracy aimed particularly at them. I hear also from aircraft manufacturers and owners who insist that they are being discriminated against. The fact is, the pinch is pinching everybody.

The truck driver who says he can't afford to truck, the farmer who says he can't afford to plow, the florist who says, "My hothouse harvest will freeze!"

In schools, cold classrooms, stalled buses, commuter students out of gas. For most of our 60 million students and 3 million teachers this is a winter of disruption, discomfort and discontent.

Of course, the problem is progressively more acute the farther north you are.

Many public and private schools in New England are extending winter vacations — in some cases to more than a month.

Class days are shortened, nighttime and weekend activities curtailed.

And, in many cases, the massive busing which the courts demand is downright impossible.

Yet, we will weather this weather.

A private school near Rochester, Mich., is keeping warm, lighting its lights and powering its elaborate tool shop with aerogenerators — windmills.

The University of North Dakota is stoking its furnaces with local brown coal.

Fraser Management, Burlington, Vt., says, "The real energy crisis is that Wall Street investors have lost the energy to think for themselves and thus fail to realize that the shock of any crisis spawns vast investment opportunities."

Americans forget that we owe the development of our gigantic oil industry of this century to a fuel crisis in the 1890s — when there was a sudden, critical scarcity of whales!

Nixon's claim of "confidential process" of the subpoenaed tapes has all the legality of a Jesse James shoot-up.

An average of 10 per cent less energy was used in December. Fortunately Congress adjourned for the rest of the month.

In a poll, Ford rated higher than Kennedy or Jackson. And that's without power steering.

Since "Operation Candor," Nixon's rating has increased. Now 70 per cent of the voters think he is involved in Watergate.

INSIDE WASHINGTON

82-Year-Old Sen. Aiken To Run For 7th Term

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — The eldest of the Senate elders is "going for broke" in this year's risky elections.

Sen. George Aiken, who will be 82 in August, has just about decided to seek another term.

The sturdy and rugged Vermont Republican has been in the Senate since 1941.

In excellent health and active, Aiken could change his mind — but the odds are against it. A close source quotes him as saying, "I feel just as good as ever, and see no reason why I shouldn't carry on."

Aiken is senior Republican on three major committees — Foreign Affairs, Atomic Energy and Agriculture.

Although little known nationally, Aiken exercises potent influence in inner Senate councils. No member of the chamber is more highly regarded for personal and political integrity and fairness.

While decisive and resolute, Aiken is never truculent or provocative. He holds firmly to what he thinks but isn't abrasive about it.

In deciding to run for another term, Aiken has the strong moral support of two other Senate elders — who see no reason why age should be held against a hale, vigorous and experienced legislator. They are:

(1) Sen. Milton Young, 77-year-old North Dakota Republican, who has been in the Senate since 1945, is senior GOP member on the powerful Appropriations Committee and is topped only by Aiken on the Agriculture Committee. Young, first elected to public office in 1924, has never been defeated for any office he sought. In 1968, when he last ran for reelection, he scored the highest percentage vote of any Republican Senator in the country.

(2) Sen. John McClellan, 78-year-old Arkansas Democrat who won a sixth term in 1972, soundly defeating a much younger opponent who made a campaign issue of McClellan's age. As chairman of the mighty Appropriations Committee, McClellan is in a key position to do a lot for his state — and he does, a fact the voters fully appreciate.

Sen. Aiken electioneers without raising a campaign fund, or going in for publicity and advertising hoopla.

Up In The Air

If you have been wondering what if anything has been done about that fanfare foreign trade bill passed by the House in the closing hours of the recent session — the answer is nothing.

Nominally, it was referred to the Senate Finance Committee, and apparently that's where it's going to be for a long time.

Its fate there is very clouded.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman, has evinced no interest in this administration-sponsored legislation, and neither have Republican members of the committee. Sen. Wallace Bennett, Utah, top GOP committeeman, is retiring this year, and the other senior GOP committeemen are from Western states where there is little backing for the measure.

Significantly revealing of the indifference towards this supposedly important legislation is that Sen. Long hasn't sponsored it.

That's in striking contrast to the favorable attitude of Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. He not only sponsored the White House measure but cleared the way for putting it through the House.

Whether Sen. Long's help can be won is conjectural. Unless it is, the bill is not likely to emerge from the Finance Committee.

But if and when it does, one thing is certain:

It will definitely include the two amendments forcefully advocated by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash. — barring most-favored-nation status and trade credits to any country restricting emigration.

While these limitations would apply to all nations, specific target is Russia because of its harsh treatment of Jewish and other ethnic nationalities.

Not only is a majority of the Finance Committee publicly on record in favor of these provisions, but 77 members of the Senate are co-sponsors of Jackson's crackdown proposals.

In view of the bleak Senate outlook, Secretary of State Kissinger will undoubtedly make a personal appeal for help to Long and other Senate Democratic leaders.

That's what Kissinger did in the House when the measure appeared stalled there. They went to bat for him, but what luck he would have in the Senate is unpredictable.

Also, this is an election year and the Senate Democrats are in no mood to do favors for the Nixon administration — particularly in the foreign field.

Other Fish

Sen. Long is hinting his chief interest is "tax reform."

On that he has a lot of support from Chairman Mills and other leaders of the Ways and Means Committee. Example:

Rep. Charles Vanik, D-Ohio, who sponsored the Jackson amendments to the foreign trade bill, says "sweeping tax overhaul is overdue; we've got to tackle that this year and there is no evading it."

Foremost among the revisions advocated by Vanik and others are:

— New tax incentives for investment and expansion in industries producing goods currently in short supply, possibly offset by an increase in the corporate-profit tax rate.

— Revision of the capital-gains tax to require the holding of assets longer to qualify for this advantageous treatment.

Now When You Take A Bible - It's Okay

Churches of the United States and Canada are joining hands with the World Home Bible League in an effort to place a copy of Reach Out, the New Testament portion of The Living Bible, in every motel room on this continent, according to the Rev. John DeVries, international director of WHBL.

The project is about two years old at this point and has been set up in 32 states and three provinces. Of the 1,200,000 motel rooms in the United States, 200,000 have had Reach Out placed in them.

Paradoxically, the aim of the project is to have transients take the New Testament with them, and to encourage Bible reading in this way. One month this summer 100,000 copies of the modern English New Testaments were taken by tourists. Printed on most hotel Bibles are the words "Please Leave In Hotel Room."

By the end of 1974, DeVries says the league plans to have contacted all the U.S. motels. An annual turnover of more than three million New Testaments is anticipated.

Inserts in each copy of Reach Out invite tourists to take the New Testament with them and to enroll in an interdenominational Bible correspondence course sent out from the local church which distributes the Bibles. Over 10,000 people enrolled in the Bible course in that month.

The World Home Bible League is an interdenominational Bible distribution agency with headquarters in South Holland, Ill. It was founded in 1928. Today its annual budget is more than three million dollars, and the league is working in 50 countries around the world.

The World Home Bible League, in cooperation with the New York Bible Society, is responsible for the publication of 95 per cent of the translations produced by Wycliffe translators.

During the next five years the World Home Bible League is undertaking a campaign to bring a gospel portion of every literate person in India. The organization is a service agency which works through existing churches and mission points.

Reach Out is a paraphrase of the original New Testament translated by Dr. Kenneth Taylor, who heads Tynedale House Publishers which produces this version and The Living Bible. Taylor spent 14 years in paraphrasing his Living Bible, which now has 12 million copies on the market.

The effectiveness of the Bible distribution ministry is seen in this true story: A rather discouraged and lonely young serviceman was spending his last night in the U.S. in a motel room in southern California. He noticed an unusual looking New Testament called Reach Out on the bedside table. Curious, he began to read. It was illustrated with modern pictures and, to his surprise, the text was in modern English, too, and he understood it.

Later, the church which had placed that Reach Out in the motel received this letter.

"Thank you for leaving the new Bible in the motel. It brought me closer to God at a time when I needed Him most. I have read the first 25 chapters of Matthew and can't seem to take my eyes off the Word.

"Please send my wife a copy of Reach Out. She divorced me for what I did to her before I left. She didn't think I would change. Bless you people for giving me a chance with God again. I hope my wife and daughter will benefit from Reach Out as much as I did."

Churches interested in this ministry receive an attractive manual and a cassette commentary on the manual, without charge, from the World Home Bible League. After listening to and reading the details, the church makes a decision to participate in the motel program. A charter is signed and the church applies for a territory and an initial order of materials is sent.

About a month later one of 15 full-time representatives throughout the United States and Canada contacts the church and offers additional help.

remove these shackles and set us free.

"Recovering of sight to the blind." We cannot see. The truth is there and it is hidden from us. Jesus came to open our eyes, that we might behold the most beautiful thing in the world. Jesus came to clarify our sight. A peasant with the love of God is more clear-eyed than the shrewdest statesman or cleverest man of affairs without it.

"To set at liberty them that are bruised." As walking on a rocky road bruises the feet, so the pilgrimage of life, even in the most fortunate circumstances, leaves us scarred. Every man and woman has soul bruises, is weatherworn. Jesus came to give us liberty, so that we shall stand up and walk as free men should walk.

"To preach the acceptable year of the Lord." To tell us that this should be the happiest moment in our lives. The Physician is Himself the remedy. Jesus never added a hair's weight to the burden of care or woe. He is the only conqueror who came, not to oppress but to relieve.

The Psalmist said, "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in Him and He shall bring it to pass. And He shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and (thy judgment as the noonday)." There is something about our Christian faith that enables us to transmute the most adverse experiences of life into a blessing. Jesus came to make the darkness light.

Let us keep on believing and keep on working. Faith and works are as inseparable as Siamese twins. Faith without works is dead and work without faith is futile. But faith and work teamed together can do miracles by God's blessing.

Let's keep on telling others why Jesus came. And keep singing the great old song - "Down at the Cross where my Saviour died, down where for cleansing from sin I cried. There to my heart was the Blood applied, Glory to His Name."

Remember, Jesus said in John 8:37 "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out."

Did You Know This About OUR RELIGIONS?

By Dr. Carlyle Adams

While western Christendom observed January 25 as the Feast of St. Paul, the Eastern Orthodox churches that day will celebrate the memory of St. Gregory Nazianzen - one of the greatest theologians of the early church. Although Gregory was ordained against his will in 361 A.D., he became a devoted priest and bishop, being consecrated to the latter office in 372. He became Patriarch of Constantinople in 381 but resigned soon afterward to return to his home town of Nazianus where he remained as bishop and a leading formulator of early Christian doctrine. His latter years were spent as a solitary monk and scholar.

Question: Is Claire Randall, the new General Secretary of the National Council of Churches, an ordained minister? What is her church affiliation?

Answer: No. Ms. Randall is not an ordained minister. She is an ordained ruling elder in the United Presbyterian Church and for nearly a quarter of a century she has held various executive posts in church-related organizations.

She succeeds Dr. R.H. Edwin Espey, who retired this month. While Dr. Espey was trained in theology and was qualified for ordination, he never was ordained to the Baptist ministry. The reason for this was that he was never called to be pastor of a church. He spent his career in ecumenical and administrative positions. Ms. Randall is the first woman to be General Secretary in the 23-year history of the National Council of Churches. She is a native of Texas.

Question: Why do some churches practice foot washing as a religious ceremony? If it is authentic, who do so few churches practice it?

Answer: According to the New Testament, Jesus Christ washed the feet of the disciples when they assembled to eat the Passover meal. In those days travel was by foot and men wore sandals. But the foot washing described in the New Testament was also symbolic in that it demonstrated the example of humility.

To this day it is customary for the Pope to wash the feet of a select number of men in St. Peter's Basilica at the celebration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper on the Thursday before Easter. In some smaller churches, such as the Church of the Brethren, it is a regular ceremonial practice.

Question: Is it true that women are not admitted to the daily "minyan" which constitutes the group required to offer morning and evening prayers in Conservative synagogues in the United States? In one of your early columns you stated that women were included in the minyan of the Reform congregations but I have heard that it has been extended to the Conservative branch of Judaism also.

Answer: While it is dependent upon the practice of the local congregation, it is true that the Union of American Hebrew Congregations (Reform) and the United Synagogue of America (Conservative) have approved the inclusion of women as members of the daily minyan. The practice has not extended to the Orthodox branch of Judaism.

Formerly it was required that at least 10 men or youths of the age of 13 or over were required for a quorum for the daily minyan. The number is still 10, but some congregations permit women to be included.

FRANK EVERETT

Frank Everett First Christian Asst. Minister

Frank Everett, sophomore at Phillips University and a religious education major, has been employed as a part-time youth minister by First Christian Church of Pampa, according to Dr. Ralph T. Palmer, minister.

Frank attended high school in Topeka, Kan. and after graduation he traveled with a singing ministry group and was a narrator and MC for them.

Currently, Frank drives to Pampa each weekend from Phillips University in Enid, Okla.

He is 19 years old and plans to go into the ministry when he graduates.

The Jr. High and High School Youths of First Christian Church will meet with the Borger Youth in Borger, Jan. 26, for an all-day planning session and get together, according to Frank.

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

Six stone waterpots were standing there; they were used for Jewish ceremonial purposes and held perhaps twenty to thirty gallons each. Then Jesus told the servants to fill them to the brim with water. When this was done he said, "Dip some out and take it to the master of ceremonies." When the master of ceremonies tasted the water that was now wine, not knowing where it had come from (though, of course, the servants did), he called the bridegroom over. "This is wonderful stuff!" he said.

John 2:6-10 Religious Heritage of America

Young men who are wise obey the law; a son who is a member of a lawless gang is a shame to his father. Income from exploiting the poor will end up in the hands of someone who pities them. God doesn't listen to the prayers of men who flout the law. A curse on those who lead astray the godly. But men who encourage the upright to do good shall be given a worthwhile reward. Rich men are conceited, but their real poverty is evident to the poor.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Itching Ears Drive Her Crazy

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: My ears itch so bad that it nearly drives me crazy. It seems to be just in the edge of the ear, but they get so sore they bleed.
I have had this three years and have been to three ear doctors. Have used all kinds of ointments, drops and medicine. Nothing seems to do any good. The last doctor said it was something I would have to live with.

I am a woman age 61 and other than this in good health.
—Mrs. A.D.
Itching ears are usually due either to a fungus or an allergic reaction. Medication should control a fungus, and I take it for granted that has been tried. So I would explore the possibility of allergy, with the offending agent yet to be detected.

There are more causes than you might think. Soap not thoroughly rinsed off can be a factor. Or earrings. Or nail polish, if you use it, and if you have a habit of fingering or touching your ears.
How do you wear your hair? If it covers your ears or touches them, is there anything you have been using on your hair in recent years that might cause this curious sensitivity?
There is also the possibility it is a form of neurodermatitis, sometimes seen in tense, nervous individuals, particularly women for one reason or other, who scratch or touch or irritate an area of sensitive skin.

Can you bring yourself to stop touching your ears at all for two or three weeks to see if it starts to help? That probably sounds easy to folks who haven't had a problem of this kind, but it takes some doing!
Steroid ointments plus mild sedation should help if this is a case of neurodermatitis, and I wonder if that combination has been tried.

Ear specialists see a good deal of this sort of thing — itching around the ears — and are pretty good at finding a remedy most of the time.

If three of them haven't succeeded in your case, then I'd suggest seeing a dermatologist, whose specialty is ailments of the skin rather than of ear structure. He may well detect something that isn't as common as the usual fungus or simple allergy.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother-in-law said you wrote about a remedy for loss of taste but I did not see it. I have had this trouble since having the flu last spring. What medicine did you prescribe?

—Mrs. S.H.

I mentioned zinc sulphate, for which success has been reported in some cases. Since it can irritate the stomach, it should be taken only under your physician's direction. Not all cases are due to zinc deficiency.

You may be interested in the following letter mailed the same day as yours, but from 1,000 miles away.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Regarding loss of taste, I read about it after having had that trouble two years. I took a clipping to my doctor, and he had me try taking zinc for 30 days. The last few days I noticed a distinct improvement.

The zinc is an irritant and must be taken with a meal, not before, or it will cause slight nausea and unpleasantness.

I made the mistake of tapering off on the zinc after several months and drifted back into the no taste, no smell problem. Had more trouble when resuming it, but read a further article on taking glutamic acid hydrochloride which permits the zinc to be absorbed.

Since taking that before a meal, and a new non-prescription which the doctor recommended, a multiple vitamin-mineral preparation containing a small amount of zinc, I have had great results.

—Mrs. G.K.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have heard people in Florida say they can't live up north any more because their blood is thinner now. Is this true?
—Mrs. Z.

No. After they get used to the year-round warm weather, it's uncomfortable to try to get used to northern winters again. But it's not the blood.

Much heart trouble is preventable. Write to Dr. Thosteson in care of Publishers Hall Syndicate, 401 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "How To Take Care of Your Heart," enclosing a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

An Old Familiar Broadway Story

By EARL WILSON
NEW YORK — It's an old familiar Broadway story — and I wish I had a better punch line.
Close to 20 years ago, in May 1954, an unknown kid named Shirley MacLaine was in the chorus of "The Pajama Game" and understudying brilliant and unforgettable Carol Haney. Subsequently to the theater, Shirley wrote a note to the stage manager, quitting the show. She was an old dame of around 20 and wasn't getting anywhere.
Before she could take the note from her purse, Shirley found herself center stage, replacing Carol Haney who'd cracked an ankle.

Bob Goldstein to the theater that night to discover Carol Haney for Hollywood. They discovered Shirley instead.

My June 28, 1954 column had this line: "Carol Haney's 'Pajama Game' understudy Shirley MacLaine of Arlington, Va., made a screen test for Hal Wallis that was sensational!"

Two decades later there's another "Pajama Game," a bright, exciting, funny show. The male romantic star Hal Linden is in Hollywood a week or so for a TV pilot. There's a little slip in the program that his part is played by Hay Stuart.

"Should we get our money back?" I heard a woman ask. "But midway people were asking, 'Isn't this guy great?'"

Tall, good-looking, mid-thirtyish, married, he was up for the role but was beaten out by Hal Linden.

"Which I didn't mind because Hal is so good," he says. After this subbing for Hal, he'll probably become stand-by.

The punchline-in-reverse is that Hal Wallis wasn't there to make him a star. Lucia Victor of David Merrick's casting department was there. Maybe she could tell Merrick. I was there. I have retarded several people's careers. Cab Calloway and Barbara McNair thought he was great in his third shot. "When I put my arm around him, it keeps going up and up," Barbara said.

What I should really do with this is mention it to an unknown kid named Shirley MacLaine of Arlington, Va.

If the study of the behavior of people intrigues you and you have a desire to find an occupation where you can be of service to your fellow man, you might want to investigate a career as a psychologist.

It is a field that, because of our growing concern for mental health, is growing rapidly and will continue to grow rapidly for the next decade.

Psychologists study the behavior of individuals or groups and attempt to help individuals achieve satisfactory personal adjustments when they have problems. They obtain information in several ways. They may interview individuals, develop and administer tests and rating scales, study personal histories and conduct controlled experiments.

They usually specialize in one of the many branches of the profession. Clinical psychologists are the largest group. Generally they work in mental hospitals or clinics and are concerned mostly with problems of mentally or emotionally disturbed people. A rapidly increasing field is with disturbed or mentally retarded children.

Generally, the master's degree with a major in psychology is the minimum educational requirement. The Ph. D. degree is needed for increasingly more positions and is important for advancement.

Psychologists having a doctorate qualify for the more responsible research, clinical and counseling positions, as well as for the higher level positions in colleges and universities and in federal and state programs.

Psychology is a field with an increasing percentage of women. In 1970 about one-quarter were women but the percentage is expected to increase rapidly over the next decade.

In 1970 starting salaries for psychologists having a master's degree averaged about $9,600 a year, according to the American Psychological Association. Beginning salaries for those having a doctorate averaged $10,900. The median annual salary for all psychologists was reported as $15,000 in 1970.

Should you want general information on career opportunities and where to pursue your studies it can be obtained from: American Psychological Association, 1200 17th Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20036.

Information on traineeships and fellowships may be obtained from colleges and universities having graduate psychology departments. (Distributed By Columbia Features, Inc.)

NOT BEHIND A DESK

Careers In Surveying Offer 'Outside' Work

If working behind a desk five days a week in a coat and tie atmosphere is not what you want for your future, perhaps you should consider surveying as a career choice.

Most of a surveyor's work is done outdoors. It is active and sometimes strenuous work requiring top physical conditioning and good vision.

A surveyor determines the precise measurements and location of elevations, points, lines and contours on or near the earth's surface. His measurements play an important part in the construction of highways, airfields, bridges, dams and other structures.

Preparation for work as a surveyor is usually through a combination of post-secondary school courses in surveying and extensive on-the-job training. A large portion of a surveyor's work involves technical instruments, formulas and applying principles of advanced mathematics. Candidates should have a sound foundation in geometry, trigonometry, calculus and mechanical drawing.

Land surveyors must be licensed. Requirements vary among states but in general include a combination of four to eight years experience in land surveying, and successful completion of an examination.

Employment in this field is expected to grow rapidly in the next few years. Many new positions will open with a dramatic demand anticipated in the petroleum industries.

The U.S. Department of Labor estimates about 50,000 surveyors were employed in 1970. About one-third of all surveyors work for Federal, State and local government agencies.

The Army Corps of Engineers is one of the largest federal agencies utilizing surveyors today. After an 11-week training program at Ft. Belvoir, Va., you'll be out there in the field getting valuable experience, traveling all over the country and doing things "nine to five's" only dream about.

Contact your local Army representative SFC Kenneth W. Baker about a career in surveying. Today's Army can make it worth your while.

3-AAAA WARFARE STARTS TODAY

PHS, 'Horns To Tangle

By PAUL SIMS
For Pampa's Harvesters, the nitty gritty of the 1973-74 season begins today as Pampa opens district action against the Amarillo Caprock Longhorns at 7:30 p.m. in Harvester Fieldhouse.

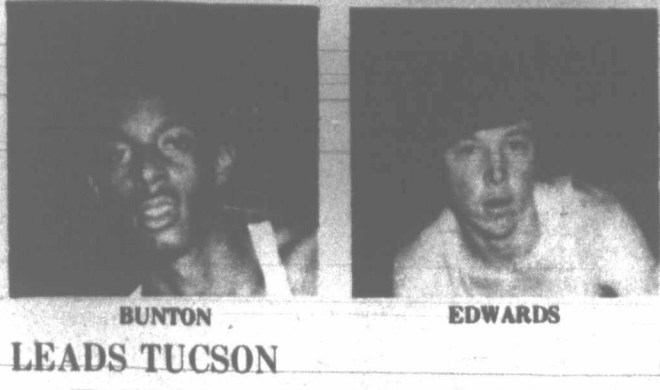

6-4, sustained a torn Achilles tendon a week ago but is expected to play against the Harvesters.

Bolk's big men, Rodney Skelton and Fil Velasquez, both 6-6, are healthy and will give Pampa posts Billy Wilton and Randy Warner, 6-3 and 6-6, a battle for rebounds. David Lester, 6-2, and David Ream, 5-8, will play forward and guard respectively and are possible starters (Bolk is undecided on his starting lineup but the six listed are his top players).

Pearce, 6-0 Ed Drew or 6-0 Richard Lane, 5-10 Tony Elafford and 5-8 Noel Hansen. The Shockers finished non-conference games with a 16-4 slate.

District Begins Tonight

All four district 3-AAAA basketball teams will kick off conference action tonight in the first round of a 10-week district schedule. Caprock and Pampa will meet in Harvester Fieldhouse in the battle of the two favorites, voted on prior to the non-conference season. Pampa is 16-5 for the season while the Longhorns are 10-8. Borger, 14-7, will travel to Amarillo High, 2-16. The Bulldogs started strong but have lost their last three games and the Sandies are playing about as expected, winning only two non-conference games. Tascosa and Palo Duro will play in the Amarillo Civic Center. The Rebels are 12-9 and Palo Duro, led by 6-7 Fred Mitchell, has acquired a fine 15-5 record.

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Johnny Miller is proving his golf prowess. The blond-haired California native goes into today's second round competition at the Dean Martin Tucson Open at 10-under-par 62, four strokes ahead of Allen Miller and Jerry Heard, in second place at 66. Five strokes off the pace, at

TO MAKE YOUR FISH CATCH TASTE BETTER:

KILL THE FISH AS SOON AS IT IS TAKEN FROM THE WATER (A SHARP BLOW ON TOP OF HEAD WITH HANDLE OF KNIFE OR OTHER BLUNT OBJECT)...
KEEP FISH OUT OF THE SUN, PREFERABLY IN A COOLER...
IF ICE IS NOT AVAILABLE, WRAP FISH IN OLD NEWSPAPERS OR GRASS...
CLEAN AS SOON AS POSSIBLE AND SCALE AND WRAP THE FISH BEFORE FREEZING

The contest is a fitting start for both teams since it pits Caprock, the pre-season 3-AAAA favorite, and the number one pick. Other district teams in order of predicted finish are Amarillo Palo Duro, Amarillo Tascosa, Borger and Amarillo High. If non-conference records are any indication of pre-district favorites, Pampa is first (16-5), followed by Palo Duro (15-5), Borger (14-7), Tascosa (12-9), Caprock (10-8) and Amarillo (2-16). The Harvesters closed out their non-district schedule with a 55-53 win over Lubbock Monterey Tuesday in Lubbock.

All-Stars Leave For Kansas City

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The National and American Conference All-Star teams wind up practice today and leave for Kansas City, the site of Sunday's National Football League Pro Bowl. Coaches Tom Landry of the AFC and John Madden of the AFC both appeared pleased with their clubs and ready to play although injuries caused some alterations in their plans. HARVESTER OF THE WEEK — Guard Ray Powell was named Harvester of the Week Thursday at the Pampa Noon Lions Club for his scoring in the last two basketball games. Pampa downed Canyon Friday, 73-69, and Powell canned 18 points, and the Harvesters nipped Lubbock Monterey, 55-53, Tuesday as Powell scored 12. (Staff Photos)

Bruins Sluggish Against Hawkeys But Get 88th

CHICAGO (UPI) — UCLA's No. 1-ranked basketball team, playing without All-America center Bill Walton, was unimpressive against Iowa, coach John Wooden conceded today, although the Bruins easily rang up their 88th straight victory. "Our shooting was atrocious," Wooden said. "And I felt our alertness left a lot to be desired. But maybe Iowa's quickness made us look that way." "We must shoot better and be sharper or we'll be in trouble," he said, referring to Saturday's nationally televised game at South Bend, Ind., against No. 2-ranked Notre Dame, the last team to beat UCLA on Jan. 23, 1971. Walton, who suffered a deep muscle bruise in his back Jan. 7 and has missed three UCLA games now, had trouble moving in practice Wednesday. Wooden disclosed, and was held out of the lineup for fear of aggravating the injury. "I'd like him to play Saturday, but if he doesn't, it's no great concern to me. I thought his chances of playing against Iowa were good, and I think the chances are good he'll play Saturday. I hope I'm right," he said.

Landry, who coached two NFL Pro Bowl games when the American Conference was not involved and then had a losing effort last year, felt he had a good week. "It's easier to work with outstanding people like this," he said. As for predictions, Landry felt either club could win on a given day. The AFC was hurt by the loss of five Miami Dolphins because of injuries but still appeared to offer a solid club. Quarterback Bob Griese admitted his arm was tired but felt he could do well handing off to the likes of O. J. Simpson and Marv Hubbard with Floyd Little and Franco Harris in reserve. Although teammate Paul Warfield was injured, Griese felt he and fellow quarterback Ken Stabler would have no handicap passing to Isaac Curtis, Fred Biletnikoff and Riley Odoms. The starting AFC defense shaped up as a coach's dream with Pittsburgh Steelers' Dwight White, L. C. Greenwood, Joe Greene, Andy Russell and Jack Ham aided by Mike Reid of Cincinnati, Willie Lanier of Kansas City, Willie Brown of Oakland, Clarence Scott of Cleveland and the Miami safety duo of Jake Scott and Dick Anderson. Passing normally wins All-Star games, and although NFC coach Tom Landry likes a running game, he will not be hesitant to throw with John Hadl and Roman Gabriel.

Gordie Scores Number 800

HOUSTON (UPI) — Gordie Howe scored the 800th goal of his 26-year career, and passed two assists to his son Mark, to pace the Houston Aeros to a 7-4 victory over the Vancouver Blazers Thursday night. "I never thought I'd make that 800," he said after the game. "That's one of the things, I gave up when I retired, but the opportunity to play in Houston gave me another chance at it." "The next thing I'd like to do, the next plateau is the Avco trophy (the WHA's equivalent to the NHL's Stanley Cup)."

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Reports of Pentagon spying on the White House caused a great deal of eyebrow-raising and taking here this week.

These expressions of astonishment or consternation came mostly from persons who don't understand the situation. So I shall endeavor to put the incident in proper perspective.

First of all, the Pentagon had good and valid reason for wanting to keep tabs on the activities of Henry Kissinger when our farflung secretary of state was serving as President Nixon's national security adviser.

At the time of the alleged spying (mid-1971), Kissinger was engaged in negotiations that could have resulted in outbreaks of peace in several places.

Information of Vital Interest
Obviously, information relating to the talks was of vital interest to the Pentagon.

Suppose, for example, that Kissinger put through an agreement to end the fighting in Cambodia. And suppose the Pentagon, unaware of the arrangement, continued the Cambodian bombing.

A faux pas of that sort would amount of an admission that U.S. military intelligence was deficient or defective.

Well, you may ask, why couldn't the Pentagon have gone through official channels to obtain the information that was leaked from the National Security Council?

According to C. Howard Tiddlehook, author of the book "I was a Spy for the American Battle Monuments Commission," most federal agencies maintain intelligent-gathering apparatuses in other agencies.

"Many federal agencies don't know what they are doing," Tiddlehook explains.

Quite a Process
So Agency A will spy on Agency B, hoping to learn what Agency B has learned from spying on Agency A. Through this process, Agency A keeps itself informed about its own operations.

G. Gordon Deadwright, author of "The Spy Who Came in from the Railroad Retirement Board," is even more to the point.

"Government agencies aren't necessarily hiding things from each other," he writes. "But when they communicate through channels, the information is transmitted by inter-office memos, which are tedious to read and must be initiated by at least six other bureaucrats, usually in triplicate."

"Furthermore, the memos frequently become buried in somebody's 'in' basket, causing inordinate time lags."

"It is much more expeditious to get data by spying."

In the circumstances, one can readily see why the Pentagon officials might have tried to sneak a peek at some of Kissinger's papers.

The wonder is they didn't send up a spy satellite to keep track of his whereabouts.

How About A Sculptured Home?

DILLON, Colo. (UPI) — Stuart Bruce Gordon sleeps in a big martini glass above a waterfall in a Hobbit house he shot out of a gun.

Friends and neighbors aren't exactly sure what it is that he and his wife, Ellie, really live in. They're hard put to call his sprayed foam dwelling near Lake Dillon, high in the Colorado Rockies, a "house," but they view it with a mixture of awe and fascination.

"That's what's most satisfying of all—the reaction of people who come to see this," said the 49-year-old painter, sculptor, construction engineer, school teacher and ex-fighter pilot. "Most are ecstatic. They light up. But there's no question. With just this spray gun I can sculpt a whole town—and that town will be exportable. It will conquer the world."

Gordon's enthusiasm is mild, voiced beside his creation which loops and whirls across the hillside like a gigantic sand castle. A man could mark its yard-thick walls with a fingernail, but a bulldozer would need the assistance of a dynamite charge to knock them down.

Foam is the Secret
Gordon calls his rolling pile of foam—drilled, cut, carved and sculpted to the whim of an artist seeking to dwell physically within his own creation—"Ensculpture VII."

The secret is polyurethane foam. The stuff, sprayed from a nozzle at the end of a two-inch hose, goes on like paint but immediately expands to 25 times its initial volume. It absorbs practically no moisture, burns only from 700 degrees up and can be carved like balsa wood. A final coat of cement stucco makes it flinty hard.

Best of all, from the construction standpoint, the foam bears weight out of all proportion to its own—a fact proven by Gordon who defied a lot of expert advice by making "Ensculpture VII" a two-story affair.

No straight line mars the tumbling curvature inside or out. The living room-kitchen combination downstairs thus becomes a paleolithic cave where Neanderthal paintings and has reliefs whisper amid indirect lighting and eight track stereo.

No stairs lead to the upper level. Instead, two long gradually sloping tunnels twist upward to open suddenly in a guest bedroom shaped like the inner shell of a chambered Nautilus. Another bedroom spills onto a gently curving roof through a glass arch that frames the distant Gore Range. Spectacular "Martini Room"

A bubble canopy covers the downstairs dining room and earth ultimately will cover one end of the structure to a depth of ten feet, blending it neatly into the hillside and pines.

important as function," he said. "We're done with inventing things. What we need now is to swing into the era of art, just as young people have swung to Eastern religions. They run through Raja Yoga to transcendental meditation, then to becoming godlike themselves. If you love God, why then you've got to start dressing in beautiful clothes, using beautiful words and living in beautiful surroundings."

"Building codes are illegal and unconstitutional," he said. "Look, if I can build something that is sound and safe—something esthetically beautiful that people can enjoy, why should I be blocked? I would encourage a legal fight over this. The publicity would do the trick. I think I'll win."

Swamps, Bogs Provide Water
AMHERST, Mass. (UPI) — Swamps, bogs and marshes in the Northeast are likely to become valuable sites for groundwater exploration, according to a team of scientists at the University of Massachusetts.

Their value to a community may run as high as $60,000 per acre. A report on preliminary results of a wetland study by the team estimates that about one-half of the wetlands in Massachusetts might produce up to one million gallons of water per day if they are protected from improper development.

The report, "A Guide to Important Characteristics and Values of Freshwater Wetlands in the Northeast," edited by Dr. Joseph S. Larson, is available from the university's water resources research center.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Mary was brutally raped in her own apartment by a masked intruder. Her pleading and tears were of no avail. So now she asks some very logical questions. For rape puzzles women because they don't understand male sexual psychology.

CASE 2-529: Mary X, aged 25, was a recent Chicago rape victim.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "what makes men sexually attack women?"

"For they run the risk of many years in prison, if they are caught."

"Yet they could easily have relations with thousands of girls who have few scruples nowadays about illicit relations. In fact, it would be much more sensible to find a prostitute, wouldn't it?"

"For why should a man risk a life in prison when he could get the same satisfaction for $5 from the women who solicit on our Chicago streets?"

MALE SEX OUTLOOK

But men don't get the same satisfaction from a prostitute! Why?

Because eroticism, to the male, has many facets, one of which is pursuit and conquest!

At our summer home on the farm, we have dogs, cats and a large pet white rabbit.

The dogs don't chase this white rabbit, for it doesn't run from them.

But if a wild rabbit happens to cross the lawn, they go in eager pursuit thereof.

The answer to Mary's logical question thus is explained by the greater zest that is added to erotic affairs involving "pursuit" and "conquest."

Rape of an unwilling and unsuspecting woman thus compares with the pursuit of the wild rabbit, though a tame rabbit was fraternizing with our farm dogs every day.

"Dr. Crane," many modern coeds have tearfully inquired, "I have been living with a college boy for the past year. And I had assumed we would be married when we graduated!"

"Instead, he has broken off our affair and become engaged to a girl back in his home town."

"Yet I am sure they have never had sex relations at all!"

"So why would he be so cruel and inconsiderate of me?"

Girls, when you allow yourselves to be "fast talked" into an illicit affair, you are tabbed an "easy mark" by the boy friend.

So the thrilling zest of pursuit and conquest is missing.

Besides, despite the supposed popularity of illicit affairs on college campuses and elsewhere, men subconsciously react to the etiquette derived from 10,000 years of civilization. Which means, men subconsciously realize that marriage and respectability will become vital to their future business or professional advancement.

Plus the social acceptance into their hometown or family circle that wedding rings insure.

They also dread trying to explain their out-of-wedlock children at the time the latter enter kindergarten or first grade.

Illicit sex attains a certain amount of thrill due to the novelty, but novelty no longer exists after a few indulgences!

Then the Roman "Lares and Penates" (Religious rules) begin to vaguely assert themselves and the former exotic college romance turns sour.

For "Mating" is very different from "Marriage," since the latter involves idealism, social acceptance, stability for the children, etc.

Many rapists, moreover, are married men who have become partially impotent with their wives, so the extra zest of pursuit, assault and conquest serves as an aphrodisiac to their waning libido.

So send for my booklet "How to Prevent Platonic Marriage," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

You stodgy wives often drive your scared husbands into pornography and even "Peeping Tom" behavior, as well as rape!

VA Shows Increase In State Costs

The Veterans Administration spent $778,247,894 in the state of Texas in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973, according to recently compiled VA figures. This is an increase of $68 million over fiscal year 1972 expenditures in Texas by the VA.

According to Jerry Brannan and Jack Coker, directors of the Waco VA Hospital and Regional Office, respectively, these expenditures included $401,236,559 in compensation and pension benefits to veterans, $164,715,856 in G.I. Bill educational benefits and $38,589,170 in insurance and indemnities.

The remainder was spent for construction costs and operating expenses for the two regional offices at Houston and Waco, the ten VA hospitals and centers at Houston, Dallas, Temple, Waco, Amarillo, Big Spring, Marlin, San Antonio, Kerrville and Bonham, and outpatient clinics at San Antonio, Lubbock, Corpus Christi and McAllen.

Harris and Dallas Counties received the largest amounts with Harris getting $144.8 million and Dallas $110.2 million.

Other counties receiving a large share of the VA benefits and operating money spent are Bexar, $63.2 million; Tarrant, $45.2 million; McLennan, $34.8 million; Travis, $24.3 million; Bell, $23.4 million; El Paso, $17.7 million; Jefferson, $14.5 million; Potter, $13.1 million; Nueces, $12.5 million; and Lubbock, $11.4 million.
