Americans Injured By Terrorist Bombs

By AL KAFF
United Press Staff Correspondent
SAIGON (UP)—Left-wing terrorists hurled three bombs at American vehicles and installations in central Saigon today, wounding 19 U. S. Army officers and enlisted men. The U. S. Information building was badly damaged.

The 13 Army men were wounded in the explosion of two plastic bombs outside U. S. military billets here where the American Army is helping the government of free Viet Nam build up its strength against the Communist north.

No one was reported injured in the blast which wrecked the library although the building contains apartments upstairs for U. S. embassy employees.

One bomb was hurled under an American military bus near the barracks. Another exploded in a flower pot outside an Army hotel. The bombs were reported to be the same type of plastic combs used by left-wing elements in outbreaks of terrorism three years ago.

Eight of the Americans were wounded so seriously they were being flown to Clark Field in Manila for hospital treatment. Five others were released after being treated at the U. S. Army dispensary.

The first bomb, apparently a time bomb, exploded at 7:25 a. m. outside Five Oceans hotel, a U. S. military billet. It injured American military men waiting for a bus.

Hurled at Bus
The second bomb was hurled at a bus outside the Hotel Metro pole at 7:40 a. m. The two hotels are about a mile apart.

The third bomb exploded inside the U. S. Information Service library at 1:05 p. m., knocking down bookshelves and blasting out windows. The library was closed at the time, a factor which averted casualties.

Some quarters believed the bombs may have been exploded by Communist elements to embarrass the Viet Nam government during the current ministerial meeting of the Colombo Plan conference.

More Moisture For Pampa As Other Sections Flood

A heavy overcast hanging over the "Top o' Texas" yesterday and last night resulted in a total of .20 of an inch of moisture in Pampa.

The moisture, recorded by The News' rain gauge, was received from a light drizzle which fell throughout most of yesterday and last night.

The moisture, added to the .30 of an inch received here over the week end, resulted in unpaved streets and roads becoming hazardous with some vehicles becoming stuck.

This morning the sun was attempting to break through the overcast with a result of warmer temperatures.

A driving rain flooded about 60 streets in San Antonio early today and two immigration officers were rescued.

Nearly 4 inches of rain drenched the city as a very cold air mass pointed toward Texas.

Radio patrolman T. A. Purnell Jr. helped rescue Edward Ahrends, district director of the Immigration Service, and H. B. Carter, his assistant.

Their car was stalled on Hilderbrand Ave., on the north side of San Antonio. The two men were on the hood of their car when Purnell attempted to pass a rope to them.

Pulled Under Water
Purnell was pulled under the water for a short distance but with the assistance of civil defense workers and firemen Purnell helped rescue Carter and Ahrends.

Police reported about 10 or 15 cars stalled in the city by high water.

In one instance, a man drove into the high water and his car disappeared from sight. He swam to land and disappeared before officers could question him.

There were several other instances where rescues were made by police and firemen.

New Cold Front
The cold front moving toward Texas apparently will be the most severe of the fall season, forecasters said.

The time of arrival in the Lone Star state will depend on later said, but best indications were forecasts, the weather bureau said, but best indications were the cold front will reach the north west sectors late Wednesday, or Wednesday night.

Rain fell steadily over an extensive section of West Texas, Central, East and South Texas.

Six-hour accumulations of more than an inch were measured since midnight at San Antonio, Shreveport and Little Rock. Heaviest was at San Antonio where 3.41 inches fell in 24 hours.

Warm moist air will continue to flow northward across Texas (See MOISTURE, Page 3)

Queen Embarks After US Visit

IKE'S GIFT—Detail, above, is from the portrait of Prince Charles painted by President Eisenhower as a gift for Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip. The Chief Executive presented the portrait to the royal couple during an exchange of gifts at the White House.

By GAY FAULEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (UP)—Queen Elizabeth II left for home early today and it was almost as if a fairy queen had come and gone.

She and her prince charming for 10 days took Americans' minds off Sputnik, the Mideast and domestic headaches.

Elizabeth was many things to those who welcomed her and her husband, Prince Philip, wherever they went — Ottawa, Jamestown, Williamsburg, Washington and New York.

To her own folks in Canada, where she paid her first call, she was a real personage, to be treated almost reverently.

In the United States, she became an earthy "Lizzie," "Liz" or "Hiyah, Queen." But she also represented the storybook queen of our childhood.

President Eisenhower saw the Queen as a "symbol" of the link between the two English speaking peoples whose interests are the same.

Mayor Robert Wagner, of New York, called her a "great queen, and a gracious lady."

A Celebrity To All
And wherever she visited, she was a celebrity the whole town turned out to see.

Monday was her greatest day as her first visit to New York, which she confessed she always had

Three Cases Heard In County Court

Two changes in pleas to previous charges and a plea of not guilty were heard in County Court this morning.

Russell Strangfeld, 821 S. Barnes, changed his plea of not guilty to one of guilty to a charge of assault and driving while intoxicated upon the changes in the plea.

Strangfeld was fined $25 and costs on the aggravated assault charge and $100 and costs, plus three days in jail on the DWI charge.

Strangfeld had been in the county jail since last Tuesday when two $1,000 bonds were cancelled by his bondsmen. The bonds were cancelled by the bondsmen when they learned that Strangfeld was arrested by local officers in the charge of disturbing the peace Monday night, shortly after being released on bond on the DWI charge.

Strangfeld was released from jail this morning and reported he was returning to Oklahoma.

The plea of not guilty was entered this morning by Nelson Lee Atchley, 210 1/2 N. Gillespie, to a charge of driving while intoxicated. His bond was set at $500 by the court.

Atchley was arrested at 3 p. m. yesterday by local officers in the 700 block of S. Barnes after being involved in an accident at the intersection of Wilks and Faulkner. Witnesses to the accident reported that his car hit mailboxes located at the intersection after nearly hitting two cars and almost turning over.

Three Pro-Segregation Rules Await Action On House Floor

By O. B. LLOYD Jr.
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN (UP)—Three pro-segregation rules awaited action on the House floor today after receiving approval of the House State Affairs Committee.

One, by Rep. Joe Pool of Dallas, calls upon Gov. Price Daniel to submit segregation bills to the present special session or call another special session to deal with such legislation.

Also passed out of the committee Monday were resolutions asking President Eisenhower to "desist and refrain" from sending federal troops to Texas to enforce integration and another by Pool asking Eisenhower to assure he will not allow Negro servicemen with white wives to enter Texas.

"Worthless Law"
In the Senate State Affairs Committee, a retired labor lobbyist said Daniel's lobbyist registration bill is the "most worthless law that could be brought before a lawmaking body in a civilized country."

Joe Steadham, retired Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen lobbyist, told the Senators he believes they are all honest. "I've got more confidence in you, I think than some of you have in yourselves."

Sen. Crawford Martin, sponsor of the bill, said "time is growing short" and said he would attempt to push his bill through the com-

Jury Reverses Verdict

Lewis Not Guilty Of Assault Charge
Duff L. Lewis was found not guilty by the jury in 31st District Court last night on a charge of assault with intent to murder. The charge involved the shooting of Edward Tiffin on the night of April 30, 1955.

The not guilty verdict was returned by the jury at 7:22 p. m. after the jury earlier found the defendant guilty and recommended a suspended sentence. Judge Lewis M. Goodrich ruled that Lewis was not eligible for a suspended sentence and sent the jury back for further deliberation on the verdict.

The first verdict of the 11 men and one woman on the jury came at 6:38 p. m. after receiving the charge from the court at 5:55 p. m.

Lewis defended himself in the trial and was assisted by his brother-in-law, M. Strong of Whitesboro.

During cross-examination Lewis admitted shooting Tiffin with a .45 caliber automatic but denied that he intended to kill him.

He said that Tiffin had attacked him with a hand-axe.

A witness for the prosecution, Mrs. Rose Rogers, 519 S. Somerville, where Tiffin was staying at the time of the shooting, told the court that Lewis came to her place asking for a room and when shown one he asked where Tiffin stayed. Upon being shown Tiffin's room, she said, Lewis pulled the automatic from his clothing and entered Tiffin's room.

She reported that the two men came out together and left her rooming house with Tiffin walking in front of Lewis.

In testimony, Tiffin said that he was sleeping when Lewis entered his room and that when the defendant turned on a light he awakened. Lewis held him at gunpoint, Tiffin said, and then marched him about eight blocks down Brown to the rear of Stapleton's Boot Shop.

When they arrived at the boot shop, Tiffin said that Lewis reached inside his pickup, which was parked near the firm, and pulled out a hatchet, tossed in on the ground, and told him to pick it up.

Tiffin said he walked slowly toward the hatchet, then ducked around the corner of the building to escape.

Tiffin said that he was hit in the shoulder and hip by bullets fired by Lewis.

Sheriff Rufe Jordan told the court that he recovered a total of seven cartridge cases at the scene of the shooting.

Testimony in the case started about 2:30 yesterday afternoon and was concluded at 4 p. m.

The promise was made in Damascus by Syrian Speaker of Parliament Akram Hourani as the General Assembly here prepared to open debate at 3 p. m. e. d. t. on charges by Syria and Russia that the United States is prodding Turkey into attacking Syria.

Syria has proposed that the United Nations send an investigating committee to Turkey to look into an alleged buildup of forces on the Syrian border. However, the suggestion had not been put into the form of a resolution in advance of today's session.

Wants Impartial Chairman
Hourani told United Press Staff Correspondent Peter Webb that U. N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld should head up any such investigating committee because he "is impartial."

He said that Turkey and Israel would let such a committee onto their soil. "Syria will give access to any place in Syria."

The immediacy of the Middle East crisis took the spotlight from the disarmament debate which resumed in the main political committee (at 10:30 a. m. e. d. t.) Jules Moch, France's disarmament expert, was the only speaker listed.

Syrian Foreign Minister Salah El Bitar, who has been in close consultation with other Arab leaders and members of the Soviet bloc, was expected to lead off the Middle East debate.

Some of the heat was removed in advance by a Saudi Arabian announcement that Syria and Turkey had agreed to let King Saud mediate their dispute. Turkey immediately confirmed this but the Syrian delegation here put out a vague statement saying reports that mediation is underway "is not in conformity with the facts."

Western diplomats said this appeared to be a way of dodging the issue publicly so as not to weaken in advance of the debate the Syrian charge that the alleged Turkish border buildup had created "an intolerably dangerous situation."

The United States has given full support to the debate in view of the fact that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles first suggested it last Sept. 19. He warned of the possibility of a Soviet-backed attack on Turkey by Syria.

Talks Set Up For Purpose Of Coping With Russian Advance

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower laid the groundwork today for high strategy talks with British Prime Minister Harold MacMillan, possibly to create a close scientific alliance coping with giant Russian advances in space missiles.

The President summoned Secretary of State Dulles at 10 a. m. e. d. t. to prepare for the three-day conference with MacMillan starting Wednesday. They also will discuss the sizzling Turkey-Syria dispute brought to a boil by Russian propaganda.

There also was a direct demand to the President from Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) to restore immediately $170,000,000 "meat axed" from military weapons research and development.

Mansfield, in a letter to Eisenhower, said it was imperative he revoke a "secret" order Aug. 17 effecting the cuts.

NO 27

Backgrounding the talks were new congressional demands for pooling and increasing the Free World's scientific brains and manpower to meet the missile-borne Soviet satellite.

Sputnik Called A Bauble
An off note came from Presidential Assistant Clarence B. Randall. He dismissed Russia's Sputnik as a "silly bauble." He said the United States could have been first in putting up a satellite if it had mixed its Sputnik program with military missiles.

While the Russian moon entered its 19th day of circling the earth, there were these other developments:

—Scientists at Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass., said the satellite and the rocket which put it into orbit would be more visible over the United States during the next three nights than ever before.

—Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) proposed an eight-point plan to boost the scientific manpower pool of North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations.

Proposes Civil Control
—Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) proposed a civilian organization of scientists to take over the U. S. missile program from the military. He said the government also should subsidize the scientific education of "uniquely adaptable" students.

There were reports in London that MacMillan would make a plea for the United States to share its atomic and missile secrets with Britain.

President Eisenhower called for close scientific teamwork between the two nations in a toast last week to visiting Queen Elizabeth II.

Another Democrat Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, called for a broad investigation of "the mishandling of our defenses" by the administration. He is a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Syria To Admit UN War Investigation

By BRUCE W. MUNN

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (UP)—A powerful Syrian leader pledged today that Syria would admit a United Nations War Investigation Commission to its territory if Turkey and Israel would do the same.

The promise was made in Damascus by Syrian Speaker of Parliament Akram Hourani as the General Assembly here prepared to open debate at 3 p. m. e. d. t. on charges by Syria and Russia that the United States is prodding Turkey into attacking Syria.

Ike To Speak At Dinner Today

NEW YORK (UP) — President Eisenhower flies to New York today to address a dinner meeting of the National Fund for Medical Education, which he helped form in 1949 when he was president of Columbia University.

The President and Mrs. Eisenhower were expected to leave Washington this afternoon. They planned to spend the night at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel and leave early Wednesday for Washington.

The dinner, to be held in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf, will be in honor of Alfred P. Sloan Jr., former chairman of the board of General Motors Corp. and president of the Alfred Sloan Foundation. Sloan will receive the Frank H. Lahey Memorial Award for service as a layman to the cause of medical education.

Whooping Crane Arrives in Texas

AUSTIN (UP) — The first whooping crane arrived on the Gulf Coast Monday, a yearly event becoming as closely eyed as the swallows' trek to Capistrano.

Howard Dodgen, executive secretary of the Game and Fish Commission, said a lone whooper blew in from Canada to the U.S. refuge at Austwell. Clause Lord, director of the refuge, reported the momentous arrival.

A total of 23 birds left the refuge last year. Whooping crane fanciers are waiting in suspense to see how many will return. Last year's first contingent included three of the rare birds.

However, a trio of whoopers has been spied in Nebraska wending its way south.

Virginia Seeks Means To Keep Racial Segregation

RICHMOND, Va. (UP) — Officials sought new means today to preserve the state's tradition of racial segregation in the schools.

The U.S. Supreme Court Monday toppled the state's pupil-placement law, designed as the keystone in Virginia's program of "massive resistance" to court-ordered integration.

Gov. Thomas B. Stanley said the state would "continue to use every legal and proper means" to block integration attempts. He said there were other weapons at hand. Stanley apparently referred to companion laws to the pupil-placement plan, which would automatically close integrated schools and withdraw state funds from schools that do integrate.

Cited Laws

However, both a federal district court and the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals cited those laws as the reason for striking down the pupil-placement act.

Attorney General Kenneth C. Patten refused comment on the high court's action until he conferred with Stanley and lawyers who handled the case, probably in the next few days.

Still unanswered was the question of what if any effect the court's action might have on the state's gubernatorial election Nov. 5, in which the dominant issue has been the best means of assuring continued school segregation.

J. Lindsay Almond, the Democratic candidate who is a former U.S. attorney general, said the Supreme Court's refusal to review a lower court ruling ordering integration in Newport News and Norfolk would not "change my position one iota."

Will Help Party

And Horace E. Henderson, Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor, said the High Court stand "will definitely give us (the Republicans) a tremendous spurt."

Republican gubernatorial candidate Ted Dalton said the Supreme Court had struck a "death blow" to the present segregation program and called for a special session of the General Assembly to enact new laws to cope with every attempt to integrate.

Negro attorneys hailed the court decision, but refused to say whether they would press the courts to set a deadline for integration to begin. Federal Judge Walter E. Hoffman had ordered Norfolk and Newport News to end segregation by last September, but said he would not order integration in the middle of a school term.

Explorer Finds Ancient Road

LIMA, Peru (UP) — An American explorer has reported the discovery of an ancient jungle road which may provide a "missing link" in the history of South America.

The archeological find also may shed light on the evolution of writing, according to George Michanowsky, president of the Amazonia Foundation.

For four months, Michanowsky and an Amazonia Foundation team explored an area northeast of La Paz, the Bolivian capital, by plane, mule and foot.

He said he traced a "lost road" from low tropical jungle to an altitude of about 7,000 feet and beyond into the high Andes. The road, partly cobbled or carved from stone, averages six feet in width. Stairsteps indicate the road builders did not intend the passage for wheels or beasts of burden.

"The road connects the Aymara culture, which had a word for writing but until now, is not thought to have had a written language, to a place where we found symbols carved on stone," said Michanowsky, who stopped here enroute to New York.

The ancient Aymaras boasted an advanced culture. One version of history says they were subjugated by the Inca empire in the 13th and 14th centuries. Spaniards arrived in the 16th century but found no writing in the area of the extended Inca empire.

HAUNTED—Jock Mahoney is being haunted by 78 episodes of the "Range Rider" series he made for television. Although it was made four years ago, it's still playing. Jock says, "I'd like to be recognized for the work I'm doing now." However, he adds, he's pretty flattered they're still showing.

DALLAS (UP)—Testimony is expected to open today in the long-awaited embezzlement trial of jovial BenJack Cage.

Selection of a jury is expected to be complete sometime this morning and then Cage will go on trial on charges of embezzling $100,000 from a subsidiary of his defunct ICT Insurance Co.

A total of 75 veniremen were called Monday. Eight women were excused to care for their small children and 15 were excused because they said they had an opinion on the smiling promoter's guilt or innocence.

District Attorney Henry Wade questioned jurors on punishment in an embezzlement case and told them he would seek the maximum—10 years.

The defense, led by Ivan Irwin, asked jurors if they "think it's a crime for a man to handle money for the benefit of his corporation?"

Among the 24 witnesses expected to be called by the state will be Wade himself, who is expected to relate what went on in closed-door sessions in Mexico City with Cage. Former Insurance Commissioner J. Byron Saunders will also appear for the prosecution.

The defense listed 11 witnesses, and Cage was not among them.

Cage strode into Criminal District Judge J. Frank Wilson's court wearing a dark suit and his usual grin. He shook hands as if at a convention and posed for photographers.

His attractive wife Dorcas accompanied him.

Cage also has been indicted on charges of embezzling $500,000 from ICT itself.

Snow Storm Swirls South To Montana

By UNITED PRESS

A snow storm whipped by northerly winds of up to 35 m.p.h. swirled across Montana, and weathermen warned the snow will spread as far south as Wyoming today.

The wintry invasion sent readings skidding into the low 20s in parts of Montana during the night, and a two-inch snowfall blanketed Cutbank, Mont.

Forecasters predicted continued snow and strong northerly winds today in Montana with heavy snow accumulations likely in the mountain sections.

Snow in Wyoming

Snow also was seen for Wyoming and portions of the Dakotas.

To the south, heavy rains soaked the Southern Plains and the lower Mississippi Valley during the night. San Antonio, Tex., was hit by a two-inch deluge in a six-hour period Monday night, and a number of points, including Lawton, Okla.; Waco, Tex., and Alexandria, La., reported more than one-half inch.

Lighter amounts of rain also fell elsewhere in the Mississippi Valley, the Central Plains and the upper Great Lakes.

Scattered showers occurred in Washington, Utah, northern Arizona and in most of the central and southern Rockies. Dry weather prevailed in most of the Ohio Valley and the Atlantic Coast states.

Occasional rain is expected to continue today in the Central Plains, most of the Mississippi Valley and the Great Lakes region and penetrate the lower Ohio Valley.

Colder weather is predicted for most of the northern portion of the country from the Pacific Northwest to the northern Great Lakes, while fair and warmer weather is expected in New England.

Rackets Committee Turns From Labor To Management

By HERBERT FOSTER

United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Senate Rackets Committee turned today from investigating labor to investigating management. Its first case threatened to produce more "lies" than any of its previous inquiries.

First up on the management-management phase is the case of labor relations consultant W. Shefferman, including his links with a firm in which Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams is a director.

Shefferman, who once paid outgoing Teamster Union president Dave Beck's bills with Teamster funds, is a 70-year-old Chicago labor expert with some 300 business clients. Labor leaders have charged him with union-busting.

Committee counsel Robert F. Kennedy told newsmen that in tracing Shefferman's activities by interviewing businessmen, his staff had been "lied to more than in any other case" it has handled all year. He also said one employee of Shefferman is in Canada and refuses to return to testify.

The committee, set up to investigate improper activities in both labor and management fields, has been criticized by union leaders for devoting its efforts thus far chiefly to unions. Its forthcoming hearings will involve unions to some extent, as its earlier inquiries brought in management's role in some "improper" activities.

The committee focused first on Morton Frozen Food Co.'s plant in Webster City, Iowa. Opening witnesses called were Keith Binna, former manager of the plant, and Eugene Peterson, Estherville, Iowa, regional organizer for the United Packinghouse Workers.

The Morton firm, then called Morton Packing Co., was sold Dec. 3, 1955, to Continental Baking Co., and is now the Morton Frozen Foods division of the big bakery firm.

Judge Ready To Keep Hoffa From Assuming Elected Post

By WILLIAM J. EATON

United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—A federal judge apparently is ready to keep Teamster President James R. Hoffa from taking office until a trial determines if he was elected properly.

Judge F. Dickinson Letts indicated Monday he would issue a new injunction of some kind to keep Hoffa from taking office. Union lawyers, anticipating further action by the judge, were preparing a quick appeal to a higher court.

The judge refused to cancel a temporary injunction barring Hoffa from office. The injunction expires Thursday.

Hears Protest Group

Instead, he proceeded with a hearing on a request by a group of rank-and-file teamsters from New York for a preliminary injunction placing the affairs of the giant union under court supervision.

Teamster attorney Martin F. O'Donoghue contended that Letts erred in issuing the original restraining order.

But the 82-year-old judge overruled all objections.

The case centers on a claim by the 13 rebel union members that the recent union convention was "rigged" to insure the election of Hoffa as president. In support of their argument, they produced records subpoenaed from the convention credentials committee by the Senate Rackets Committee.

Seeks Quick Trial

When the judge indicated he would continue to bar Hoffa from office O'Donoghue offered to guarantee that Hoffa and other newly-elected officers would not take over until Nov. 24 if the trial began right away. But the judge said "you don't go far enough."

Godfrey P. Schmidt, an attorney for the 13 teamsters, said he had evidence from Senate files and other sources that 606 convention delegates were improperly seated. He said the "fraud is so blatant" that one delegate was shown to be elected after the convention was over.

But O'Donoghue submitted an affidavit from Teamster Secretary-Treasurer John F. English which said that Hoffa would be elected by any convention under whatever supervision this court or any other governmental body might wish to impose.

Toll Of Flu Deaths Reaches 250 Mark

By UNITED PRESS

Deaths blamed on flu climbed toward the 250 mark today, boosted by an influenza epidemic at a California school for retarded children that killed nine persons.

The epidemic at the Porterville, Calif., State Hospital for the Mentally Retarded was the third fatal outbreak to hit such state institutions.

A United Press survey showed a total of 249 persons have died of flu or complications since last summer when the first cases of Asian flu were diagnosed in the nation and its territories.

The highest death toll was in New York with 55 victims. Pennsylvania was a close second with 50 deaths, 24 of them in the Lehigh Valley area. California's toll climbed to 29.

Lists Flu Fatal

Elsewhere, Michigan reported 26 flu-caused deaths, Louisiana 21, Illinois 13, Hawaii 9, Ohio, Utah and Wisconsin 7 each, Iowa and Kentucky 6 each, Colorado 5, New Jersey 3, and one each in Indiana, Oklahoma, Oregon, Washington and the District of Columbia.

The California State Hospital outbreak claimed five lives last week and four more over the week-end. The latest victims were two boys and a girl and a 47-year-old woman.

A flu epidemic at the Pennhurst School for the Mentally Retarded near Philadelphia, killed 11 patients, and another outbreak in a state school at Dixon, Ill., resulted in seven deaths.

An influenza epidemic in Milwaukee was reported on the wane and an outbreak in Madison, Wis., also was easing off.

Colleges and secondary schools around the country continued to be hard hit by the flu. Columbia College at Columbia, S.C., was the latest college to close its doors because of the flu.

Schools Forced To Close

A number of grade and high schools were forced to shut down this week in New York state, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa.

Transition From Nervous City To The Eternal City—Rome

By DOC QUIGG
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 ROMÉ (UP)—All roads lead here, including a new skyroad which a few of us intrepid adventurers pioneered with the aid and inspiration of the mayor of Rome, in person, plus the strength of 13,600 horses built into four airplane engines.

Opening non-stop service between New York and Rome, Pan American Airways hailed the mayor and assorted Roman big-wigs, along with the regular tourist trade, 4,600 miles in 13 hours, 7 minutes.

That's a huge hop—from Nervous City in Eternal City—a quick transition that leaves you blinking in wonder among the ruins of the vestal virgins and the catacombs. We managed to make the maiden voyage with only two speeches, both by the mayor of course, on departure and on arrival. Bands played. Ribbons were snipped. Wine flowed like the Tiber at floodstage.

You leave New York at eventide, and you can go to sleep after dinner and wake up over the Alps approaching Rome. Which is what I did, and immediately went ast to interview the mayor, Umberto Tupini.

Impressed by Speed
 He's a little man with a mighty Roman nose, jaunty bearing, friendly personality. He said he never had been in New York before and that his first impression was of fast movement, organization, and massiveness.

"The people in the street was not fooling around — everybody knew where he was going," he said. "In Rome there is not that rush, that not-wasting - time, that you see in New York. They are two different standards of life."

It is true that the pedestrian in Rome is a saunterer and the pedestrian in New York is a nervous-Nellie hurrier. But they have something in common: joywalking. They both seem to enjoy it immensely. New York has announced it will launch a pedestrian safety drive, to be climaxed with a law that may threaten prison for jaywalkers.

The trouble with that plan is that many New York pedestrians would rather go to prison than be deprived of the sheer joy of darting among speeding autos in the middle of the block.

Less Bounce To The Jounce
 The Rome jaywalkers do have a certain advantage over their brothers in New York. They do not bounce as far when struck. The Roman traffic is more hell-sketter than New York's, but the automobiles do not have nearly the tonnage of American cars and hence don't pack as much sock against pedestrians. They're tiny European models.

I told the Mayor that the last time I had interviewed a mayor was in Hiroshima, Japan, where the mayor has, on display in a case in his office, a baseball autographed by the great Bambino Ruth. Asked whether he had some such memento of his trip to America, Mayor Tupini, produced an old-time ship's clock given him by Pan American, possibly as a reminder of how things have changed from clipper ship to clipper plane days.

Mayor Tupini said every American he ever had spoken with had "a great love for Italy, and especially Rome." He was quite happy that American tourist traffic to Rome is increasing.

Mindful that the behavior of our tourists has been criticized, and that lately the U.S. government has been slipping try-to-be-nice advice into passports, I mean to find out what's what. Tomorrow I'm going to take a rubberneck bus and observe American tourism first hand.

GOP National Committee Commits Colossal Boo-Boo

By MERRIMAN SMITH
 United Press White House Writer
 The Republican National Committee committed a colossal boo-boo the other day in a publicity release pitched on President Eisenhower's 67th birthday.

The GOP word factory identified David Eisenhower, the President's grandson, as 12 years old. David is nine. Copies of the party statement were quickly corrected. One GOP worker breathed worriedly: "If this gets to John's wife, oh brother—"

During Queen Elizabeth's visit last week, the most opulently dressed ladies in Washington were female reporters and columnists from New York.

Some of the ink-stained wretches of the Washington Press corps observed: "You can't tell royalty from a New York reporter."

Mamie Eisenhower threw society writers into a dither by not wearing her announced costume in meeting the Queen at the north portico of the White House.

Pressed for an explanation of the switch, a White House aide said: "Mrs. Eisenhower, like every American woman, has the prerogative to dress as she pleases—and without notice."

White House servants seemed to be more entranced by Prince Philip than by the Queen. Philip occasionally stopped a maid or butler on their rounds of duties to ask where they were from and how long they had been on the presidential staff. The help loved it.

A presidential visit to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands next year is a possibility.

The President's favorite golf professional, Ed Dudley, recently has left the Augusta National Club for a new, more lucrative assignment at a new golf course in Puerto Rico.

But there is some concern at the White House that a trip to Puerto Rico might be misinterpreted. Some of the President's advisers—who haven't talked to him about it yet — feel such a visit might be construed as a golfing holiday rather than a serious inspection of territories.

HE'S MENTIONED — Editor and publisher Robert McKinney has been mentioned as a possible choice by President Eisenhower as U.S. representative to the International Atomic Energy Agency. McKinney, who heads the Santa Fe New Mexican, was 1955-56 chairman of a citizen's panel which reported to Congress on the impact of peaceful uses of atomic energy.

"I don't think it's fair for one girl to have all that shape!"

Many Hollywood Couples Have Adopted Children

By VERNON SCOTT
 United Press Hollywood Writer
 HOLLYWOOD (UP)—When Marie Wilson gave up the 3½-month-old baby she hoped to adopt this week, many movie stars re-experienced pangs of fright from their own adoption problems.

A high proportion of screen couples have adopted children. It's easy for them.

Their incomes are high. They're able to provide fine homes and educations for foster children. Among those who have taken foundlings into their families are Bob Hope, Joan Crawford, Roy Rogers and Dale Evans, Jack Benny, Dinah Shore, Fred MacMurray, Jane Russell, Helen Hayes and Marie MacDonald.

Some, like Hope, go through licensed agencies. They run the least risk of complications. The comedian and his wife adopted all four of their brood — Linda, 18; Tony, 17; Nora, 11; Kelly, 10 — from "The Cradle" in Illinois. Loretta Young, an adoptive parent, plays an active part in the administration of the Holy Family Adoption Agency. Jane Russell helped form the world-wide WAIF operation.

But most stars refuse to be quoted on their adoptions or even to discuss them off the record — not through fear of disturbing the children, but as a safeguard to protect themselves from "natural parents."

Protect Parents
 "The laws of California protect adoptive parents to a much greater degree when they adopt through an agency," said the director of one of the state's largest adoption organizations.

"Many movie stars avoid agencies because they dread the red tape involved. Some are too old to qualify. Some have unfortunate family backgrounds.

"Therefore, they take their chances on adopting through other means — friends, doctors or lawyers."

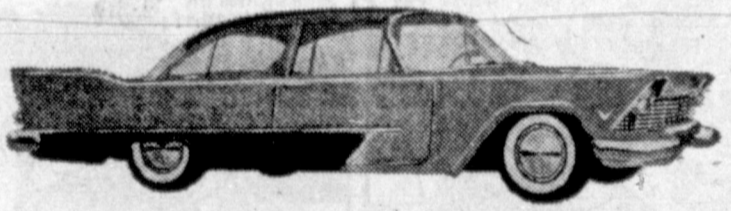

Blonde Marie and her TV-producer husband, Bob Fallon, would have had small chance of keeping Christine had they gone to court. "We believe that further airing of the accident would have made a legal football of the baby and caused more grief to everyone," Fallon said. Miss Wilson was so upset, she said, "I don't even want to think about adopting again. They ought to change the laws."

A Look Ahead At Top News Stories

By CHARLES M. MCCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent
around the world look ahead at the news that will make the headlines.

OPPS!
Hottest diplomatic gossip of the week is that Russia's charge of a United States-Turkish plot to attack Syria was based on a fake spy report. Here is the story as London hears it: American Special Envoy Loy W. Henderson conferred in Istanbul on Aug. 24 with Turkish Premier Adnan Menderes, King Faisal of Iraq and King Hussein of Jordan. A petty official who was Soviet intelligence agents a completely faked version of the meeting, including the alleged plot.

GOOD BET
It looks like an increasingly good bet that President Eisenhower will visit Europe next year. Speculation on such a trip is not based entirely on Queen Elizabeth's visit to the United States. The President has long hoped to tour Europe with Mrs. Eisenhower.

SECRET ENVOY?
Is Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, head of the American Red Cross, actually carrying out a secret mission for Eisenhower on his way to a Red Cross conference in New Delhi, India? Some well informed observers in Tokyo believe he is—that he is checking for Ike on the results, both as to military strength and morale, of recent budget cuts as they affect military installations in the Far East.

CRISIS
Don't expect the French political crisis to end even if a new government is formed this week. Many veteran observers say it's so serious that the Fourth Republic itself may be at stake. All political parties agree something radical must be done to bring political and economic stability. But they are hopelessly divided on the remedy.

AUTOMOTIVE NOTE
Automobile makers, apparently with an eye on rising gas prices and foreign car competition, will accent improved economy features in their 1958 models. Innovations like a new type carburetor and an automatic transmission, combined with overdrive, are said to increase gas mileage as much as 20 per cent.

SPORTS OUTLOOK
What may be the bitterest and roughest season in history opens for the National Professional Basketball Association this week, with the Boston Celtics favored to retain the championship. Every club in the league, led by the New York Knickerbockers, is reported "laying" for the Celtics.

"Some day I'll look back and laugh at all this!"

Take Cover Men; 'Feelies' Coming

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press Hollywood Writer
HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 22 (UP)—Take cover, men, the "feelies" are coming!
"Feelies" are a new kind of movie with an added dimension. You not only hear and see them, you also feel 'em.
This is accomplished by beaming messages to the subconscious mind via a process called Precon (for preconscious). First experiments with these subliminal suggestions were made in theaters where management flashed signs pushing popcorn — and popcorn sales zoomed.
The messages are invisible on the screen because they are beamed too fast for the conscious eye to see. But they register on the subconscious.
For example, should the characters in a picture experience severe cold, precon could flash on and off with "you're freezing to death," and audiences would literally be shivering in the aisles.
First movie to be made using the "feelie" technique is "ESP" (extra-sensory perception) which goes before the cameras this month at Westin-Rush productions.
C. W. Westin, president of the outfit, says the picture will be a scientifically controlled project, under the supervision of Dr. Robert E. Corrigan, inventor of Precon.
"It's a good thing, too. No telling what might happen if Precon got out of control.
Company spokesmen say any emotion can be evoked by the process—hate, envy, lust, fear, laughter and the entire enchilada.
Imagine what would happen if they flashed "Love Thy Neighbor." A customer might steal a kiss from the blonde sitting next to him. Or could start a first class riot.

Nobel Prize Winner Sees 'Precariously Balanced' Peace

By NORMAN M. MACLEOD, United Press Staff Correspondent OTTAWA (UP)—Nobel Peace Prize winner Lester B. Pearson believes world peace is "precariously" balanced, that Western prestige has suffered from Sputnik, and that Russia would like to split the Western Alliance by a separate diplomatic deal with the United States. But the former Canadian Minister of External Affairs, who is a candidate for the Liberal Party leadership in the next election, does not believe that the Turkish-Syria situation in the Near East need break out in a shooting war. He also is convinced that the present tense world situation makes it all the more necessary for the nations in the Western Alliance to draw together more closely than ever. Pearson expressed his views in an exclusive interview with United Press. It was the first such interview given by him since his acclaim a week ago as this year's winner of the Nobel Peace Prize. Pearson's answers to questions follow: Q.—Is the Turkish-Syrian situation more dangerous than was the British-French Suez crisis? A.—I don't think so. Q.—What is the effect of Sputnik on the validity of the principle of collective security upon which the United Nations is based? A.—I think that the Russians now would like to work out a deal of some kind, on a purely division of power basis with the United States. They have always been attracted by that kind of arrangement. The Old South Is Politically Isolated

By LYLE C. WILSON, United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON (UP)—The political editor of the Atlanta Constitution has been puafeeling in the old Confederacy and comes up with the expected findings: The race issue now rattling the foundations of the Democratic party has politically isolated the South. The editor, William M. Bates, finds further that there are three party talk and prospects in the southern air. President Eisenhower denied the solid South in 1952 and again in 1956 but Bates reports: "There seems to be little room for the Republican party now for states rights' minded southern Democrats. The Little Rock crisis on the other hand, cannot fail to

US And Britain To Up Allied Relations

By CHARLES M. MCCANN, United Press Staff Correspondent The United States and Great Britain evidently have decided to end at last a long and dangerous lapse in Allied relations. The decision has been forced upon them by Soviet Russia's successes in the fields of diplomacy and nuclear science. It is indicated that the conference between President Eisenhower and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, starting in Washington on Wednesday, will be only the first of a series of meetings of high Allied leaders in Washington and London. The threatening situation in the Middle East, where Russia has built up a big and patently false propaganda campaign against Turkey, naturally will be one topic for discussion. Success in Missiles But undoubtedly the big topic will be Russia's success in testing an intercontinental ballistic missile and launching the "Sputnik" earth satellite. Russia's success in this field has been made possible largely by its form of government. The big strength of a totalitarian regime is that it can concentrate the whole energy of a nation upon any project it likes instead of wasting it like the Democracies—for a crisis like Pearl Harbor to wake up the government and people. Russia for years has had its scientists working together as one team on the development of nuclear weapons and of space missiles like Sputnik. All this time, the United States and Britain have been working independently in this field. Britain has developed its own H-bomb and is hinting at the development soon of new and potent

Matter of FACT

The 12 gems in the breast-plate of the high priest Aaron, described in the biblical book of Exodus, are said to have been the origin of the idea of the birthstone. According to tradition, each month has its own precious or semiprecious stone or stones which bring good luck to a person born in that month. Another legend attributes the idea for birthstones to the 12 precious stones that formed the foundation of the Holy City, of which St. John speaks in the Book of Revelation.

Sputtering Sputnik

This business of Sputnik, the Russian satellite, has practically everyone talking. The only thing is that much of what is being said doesn't make too much sense.

When this year dawned there was a general feeling throughout the country that the Russians were a backward people; that their word could not be believed; and that, except for the ever present possibility of a war with them, we need not concern ourselves unduly.

Now comes the Red Moon, and suddenly the conversation veers, and it veers totally. The Russians are now no longer backward, but way out in front; everything they say is gospel; and we must concern ourselves with them on a 24-hour a day basis.

We think an adjustment in thinking may definitely be in order. But we marvel that instead of adjusting our views, the political leadership, especially, seems intent upon making the Sputnik incident a cause celebre for a major upheaval in our way of life.

But as far as we are concerned, we still don't care to accept a Russian statement as gospel without a very close look at it. Nor do we accede to the notion that this hurling beeper proves much in the way of scientific advancements.

Sure, the Russians beat us to the punch. That is to say, they put the sphere up there ahead of us. We are not the least bit reluctant in giving them credit for a first in this department. But the credit stops there.

And when we consider the plight of the Russian people, their mountain of controls and regimentations, without which this slave created missile would still be something on our own drafting boards, even that credit from our view is sadly tarnished.

Meanwhile, we have gotten off to a bad start in our own missile program. This is because in this nation we are supposed to be free men, whereas in Russia a police state is maintained, as we all know.

So, in this country, in order to be consistent with the concept of freedom, our missile program should have been sired and financed by private persons, rather than by the truculence and violence of our government's taxing agencies.

A country that is totally enslaved has a few advantages in such costly and uneconomical gadgets as an 18,000 m.p.h. sphere. But a country that is totally free has even more advantages. We should not attempt to compete with the Russians in their own area of inducing slavery.

The manner in which Russia is now dominating our thinking is rather well illustrated in a United Press story which appeared recently. This story had it that "Representative W. Sterling Cole said today he will put Russians and other Communists in some of the key posts of the new International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)."

But the New York Republican said he had not given any such pledges in advance to insure his election as head of the atom-for-peace organization.

It is apparent, by this item, that the business of going around with communists, kowtowing to communists and working with communists, is deemed politically expedient at the moment. We doubt very much if such a story in the past would have helped Mr. Cole's reputation with his own constituents.

Thus does the temper of a people change. As for scientific advancement, we aren't going to ward the Russians more than a barely passing grade. As for an item useful in political chicanery they go to the head of the class with their sputtering Sputnik.

By R. C. Hollis Quotations On Friendship

I am continuing to quote gems from an old book on friendship I have:

"Love is flower-like; Friendship is like a sheltering tree." — S. T. Coleridge.

"A good man is the best friend, and therefore soonest to be chosen, longer to be retained; and indeed never to be parted with, unless he cease to be that for which he was chosen." — Jeremy Taylor.

"Friendship imposes no yoke on its object, has not the feelings of a patron, expects no compliance with its opinions, no sacrifices of personal independence, but is jealous for the rights, dignity, and moral independence of its object, and takes pleasure in the free judgment and elevated spirit of a friend, only expecting these to be tempered with kindness." — William Ellery Channing.

"Communion with the good is friendship's root."

"That dieth not until our death; And on the bough hang ever golden fruit: —"

"And this is friendship, the world saith."

"Ourselves we doubt, our hearts we hardly know."

"We lean for guidance on a friend; Ay, on a righteous man we'd fain bestow"

"Our faith, and follow to the end." — Bhartrihari

"Love is a sudden blaze, which soon decays; Friendship is like the sun's eternal rays;

"Not daily benefits exhaust the flame; It still is giving, and still burns the same." — Gay

"Once in an age God sends to some of us a friend who loves in us, not a false imagining, and unreal character, but, looking through the rubbish of our imperfections, loves in us the divine ideal of our nature, — loves, not the man that we are, but the angel that we may be. Such friends seem inspired by the divine gift of prophecy, — like the mother of Saint Augustine, who, in the midst of the wayward, reckless youth of her son, beheld him in a vision standing clothed in white, a ministering priest at the right hand of God, as he has stood for long ages since." — H. B. Stowe.

"Think of those twenty years of Napoleon, from 1790 to 1810. How he beat and buffeted the world about like a tennis ball; how he hated without loving and destroyed without constructing; how he smote with breathless terror every nation of the earth, and yet could not fasten to him with hooks and enduring a single friend who would outlive calamity!" — Anon.

"I said friendship is the greatest bond in the world, and I had reason for it, for it is all the bands that this world hath; and there is no society and there is no relation that is worthy, but it is made so by the communications of true friendship, and by partaking some of its excellencies. For friendship is a transcendent, and signifies as much as unity can mean, and every consent, and every pleasure, and every benefit, and every society is the mother or the daughter of friendship." — Jeremy Taylor.

"It costs much to be capable of real friendship, but those who are would be ashamed to be otherwise; and would rather suffer than be incapable." — Fenelon

"They think will come to thee unsought, With nothing can his love be bought, His soul thine own will know at sight, With him thy heart can speak outright."

"Greet him nobly, love him well, Show him where your best thoughts dwell; Trust him greatly and for aye; A true friend comes but once your way." — Anon.

"Friendship is to be purchased only by friendship. A man may have authority over others, but he can never have their heart but by giving his own." — Thomas Wilson.

"In poverty and other misfortune of life, true friends are a sure refuge. The young they keep out of mischief; to the old they are a comfort and aid in their weakness; and those in the prime of life they incite to noble deeds." — Aristotle

"And the finest fellow of all would be the one who could be glad to have lived because the world was chiefly miserable, and his life had come to help some one who needed it." — George Elliot

Reds Attack Western Alliance Interdependence

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — In order to catch up with Russia on long-range missiles and encircling moons, the United States does not need a vast amount of new money or an increase in scientific personnel so much as a complete and radical reorganization of the technical, planning and production system for turning out those weapons.

The assembly line for manufacturing and testing these complicated scientific and spatial devices has become as obsolete as the horse and buggy in an automobile age. From the many remote plants which make the parts to the final assembly at Patrick Air Base and Cape Canaveral, Fla., the system is "clogged with bottlenecks," as Neil H. McElroy, the new Defense Secretary, has quickly discovered.

LACKS DIRECTION — There is nobody in authority or responsibility at the top to speed up work, eliminate duplication or to assign strict priorities. On the contrary, the three services fight each other for materials, for money, for facilities, for manpower, and, finally, for the right to have a first tryout of their product at Cape Canaveral. Even these facilities are so limited that tests are delayed for days and weeks after scheduling.

Besides the lack of an all-powerful co-ordinating individual or agency at Washington, there is an utter absence of authority and responsibility all along the production and assembly line. The old Army custom of "passing the buck" so as to escape criticism or reprimand prevails even in this time of crisis.

In order to understand this highly technical problem, it is necessary to realize that missile-making is comparable to the assembly line in an automobile plant, or in any vast industry such as steel.

EXISTING DIFFICULTIES — Ford and General Motors, for instance, must depend upon thousands of subcontractors, who supply thousands of key parts for their finished product. These parts must be shipped to an assembly center on a tight and accurate schedule.

If a shipment of carburetors or even less essential parts arriving at a scheduled time and place, there is no end product. Again, if there is no space, no facilities or man power at the testing ground — in this instance, the rich Air Base and Lake Canaveral — delays pile up. The car will not be ready for the customer on time.

All these difficulties now exist along our missile and moon-making assembly line. The failure has been human rather than scientific or mechanical.

BOTTLENECKS NEED TO BE UNBLOCKED — For all his industrial genius in private life, former Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson made no serious attempt to break these slowly accumulating bottlenecks. He was also handicapped by Presidential economy orders. He was forced to stop a speed-up on the assembly line which he had ordered as recently as July.

The economy measure did not so much by the Negroes in the country. These immense masses of votes in New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Illinois and other states can be easily aroused by their racial or religious or economic conditions. I think I know enough about these matters and about the behavior of our politi-than Wilson could afford to remedy his technological troubles, and to unclog the bottlenecks.

SOVIET SUCCESS MAY FORCE ACTION HERE — Sputnik, however, may force belated action. Secretary McElroy has said that his first job will be to attack and solve this problem, and to mesh the gears of his missile-making system.

Inadequacy, inefficiency and inadequacy, both at Washington and in the subcontracting plants, are the real reasons for our crushing defeat on the scientific and military fronts.

Unfortunately, they were combined with an amazing complacency concerning Russia's advances, and in view of Khrushchev's new confidence and aggressiveness, the result has been a dangerous threat of war.

It might be well for American citizens to pause in the midst of the grave disorders in the South growing out of the issue of school segregation, and have a look at the forces which began it and the forces which are affected by it.

I insist that the root of this dangerous problem originates from the nature of our political organization — in that element in our population known as practical politicians. Whenever some irrational disturbance appears in our economic or political life, I always look for the roots of the disturbance among the professional politicians. Politicians — as distinguished from statesmen — are interested in one thing and one thing only. That is votes. They are for or against a measure, as a rule, because it makes votes or repels votes.

At the present time there are a number of states in the North where there are very large numbers of what are known as minority groups. For instance Union Labor is one such group — very often affected as a unit by political issues. This is also true of foreign groups — great numbers of people who have come into our midst and are not yet wholly absorbed and who vote one way or another according to the influence of the ties that bind them to nations or groups in other parts of the world.

Now, I suggest to the citizen who is interested in his country that the unhappy disturbances in the South over the question of segregation have been stirred up not so much by the Negroes in the South as by the white politicians in the North. There are half a dozen American states in the North where there is a large Negro population. There are also large masses of various racial and religious groups — many of them rather recent newcomers to our country. These immense masses of votes in New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Illinois and other states can be easily aroused by their racial or religious or economic conditions. I think I know enough about these matters and about the behavior of our politi-

The Story Of Pancho Villa's Raid On Columbus, N. M.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

EL PASO, TEX. — At Deming, N. M., a small sign at the junction reads "Columbus." Columbus is 34 miles straight south and the Chihuahua border is only a split-in-the-wind below the railroad tracks. It is a tiny, neat-up town of about 200, in a region of good grass.

In March, 1916, Columbus and Chihuahua, which most of us pronounced chi-hoah-hoah rather than the softly rhythmic ciwah-wah, were as famous as Sarajevo had been in August, 1914 when a nonentity named Gavril Princip killed an Austrian archduke with the first shot of World War I.

On the night of March 9, after many alarms, Pancho Villa stole across the border and surprised a detachment of M. Troop, 13th U.S. Cavalry in a penny ante Pearl Harbor. He shot up the town, killed civilians wantonly, burned three principal buildings, and got away to lead General John Pershing a futile chase far down into his own desert country. This pursuit was a practice-swing for the main event in Europe. About 13 months after Pancho's raid, we were in it.

Pershing's column proved the terrible incompetence of American arms, but Villa gave us a pretext for the border duty which hardened our National Guardsmen and taught them the rudiments of camp hygiene and military etiquette if little else.

There had been rumors and indications that Villa was coming over on the night of the eighth. Only seven of the 35 Mexican children in the Columbus school turned up in the wire fence on the international line, which was not patrolled but merely "inspected."

In the afternoon of the 10th, in which the untried American regulars fought with the instant bravery of seasoned soldiers, one of the newspaper stores said Colonel Herbert J. Slocum of the 13th had been advised that Villa was 70 miles away. We never were told the whole straight truth and probably never will know. There were men of the 10th and 13th Cavalry, about 200 of them, around Columbus, but few could get into the act.

Villa appears to have had 800 men, 100 of whom were picked up dead next day, and burned for hygienic reasons. He left six wounded including a little boy, Jesus Pais, 12, the son of Captain Emilio Pais. Captain Pais left Jesus a little to the rear as he went forward with Pancho, but when the Mexicans began to pass him, falling back, the boy went forward against the tide to look for his dad. A rifle bullet knocked one of his legs to tatters and the American doctors took it off. His father had been killed near Villa's side.

After shooting up a frame dwelling in which a mother and three children lay on the bedroom floor covered by a mattress, scoring no hits, Villa closed with the 13th Cavalry detachment. Lieut. J. P. Castleman, commanding F Troop, was officer of the day. Private Fred Griffin, on guard in front of headquarters, fired and was dropped dead instantly. Castleman rasped out and killed a Villista with a pistol. The Villistas were shouting and hustling off paltry merchandise from the country stores of the settlement. At the Commercial Hotel, Walter R. Walker was torn from his wife and shot dead on the stairs. Dr. H. M. Hart and Charles De Witt Miller, an engineer, were hustled into the street, unarmed, and killed. W. T. Ritchie, who owned the place, was called out by name. His wife and children begged him not to go, but he said "I will be right back" and went down to the street. He was killed on the spot, unarmed.

Castleman and Lieut. John P. Lucas, commanding the machine guns, had between 30 and 40 men, including members of the band. Castleman deployed along the railroad and sent 2d Lieut. Horace Stringfellow to a knoll. Somehow, and the stores are confused today, the three officers managed to catch the enemy in a cross-fire, a break which accounted for the large coat to Villa's party. The machine guns jammed and Lieutenant Lucas later explained that the hulls always clogged the works. Sergeant Mark A. Dobbs was shot in the liver, but continued to fire and tinker with his machine gun for about 20 minutes. Then he rolled over dead. Sergeant John A. Nievegalt and Corporal Paul Simon, both bandmen, were killed and it is not clear whether they were shooting or throwing rocks when they went down. The band had no official weapons, but the survivors got pistols the next day, Corporal Harry A. Wiswell, a horse-shoer, and Privates Thomas Butler, F. A. Kindvall and Jesse Taylor were among the dead.

George A. Sees, of the Associated Press, had sneaked off from the Shelton Hotel Bar in El Paso, the headquarters of the reporters, on a tip that Columbus would be raided. He took with him a telegrapher named Van Camp who showed his big, exclusive file through to El Paso.

The other reporters had to scrounge rumors from as far away as San Antonio where General Fred Funston had his headquarters. After the battle, Mrs. G. E. Parks, the night telephone operator in Columbus, did her best to save the day for any journalists who could get through to her little board. She was cut by glass when her windows were shot out.

Sees disappeared from the border a short time later without collecting any recognition for his work. We had many footloose brethren in those days.

Juan Alarcon, the clown of the Villistas, rode into Columbus with his fiddle, but the early stuff related that Pancho threatened to blow his head off if he played "La Cucaracha," the cockroach song. But inevitably the story came into history that Juan sat his pony on a knoll situated against the glare of the grocery store, fiddling defiance to the gringos as Columbus burned.

LITTLE TO BRAG ABOUT Chicago Daily Tribune

In his annual report as secretary general, Dag Hammarskjold the other day reviewed the year's activities of the United Nations, which has now been around for 12 years. He had to confess some outright failures, such as the fact that the recommendations of U. N. were totally ignored in the soviet rape of Hungary, and that no progress had been made toward disarmament.

The secretary general did contend that U. N. had obtained compliance for the withdrawal of invading troops from Egyptian territory and that the emergency force representing the organization in the middle east had been useful, if only to the degree that it was tolerated by the contending parties.

The most interesting statement in the report was that in which the secretary general described the nature and admitted the limitations of U. N. Its charter, he conceded, "does not endow the United Nations with any of the attributes of a super-state or of a body active outside the framework of decisions of member governments."

Rather, said Mr. Hammarskjold, U. N. is an instrument for international negotiation. It offers a medium for concerting action in support of the goals of the charter, and the secretary general said that it had played this role "sometimes successfully, sometimes with disappointing setbacks."

Mr. Hammarskjold referred to complaints about the limitations on the organization's power, but he said that these were attributable to "the facts of international life in our age," which could not be bypassed and could not be surmounted by changes in the U. N. charter.

The impasse to which U. N. is reduced (albeit the secretary general did not use that term) results, he said, from the balance of forces at work in the world, which is to say that its uselessness arises because the Communists have set a goal of world domination, while the west is determined to resist its attainment.

Mr. Hammarskjold foresaw that these conflicts "may persist for long periods without an agreed solution" and therefore U. N. "can not be transformed into a world authority enforcing its law upon the nations."

The secretary general is to be credited with restraint in failing to subscribe to the exaggerated claims which are so frequently advanced by internationalists in justification of the organization, and his candid admission that U. N. is no superstate and has no warrant to seek to become one is welcome.

That leaves us to wonder what U. N. ever can hope to accomplish, and on this point Mr. Hammarskjold has nothing to offer but reassuring generalities. He could have put his whole thesis in a single sentence if he had cared to do so: U. N. will become effective when the communist challenge to civilization collapses, and when that happens, there will be no necessity for U. N.

Most Taxpayers Want Rocket Program Pushed

By TOM NELSON United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON (UP) — If the Defense Department's mail is any clue, American taxpayers want the nation's rocket programs pushed vigorously regardless of cost.

Two citizens, mindful of the defense money squeeze, even have gone so far as to send Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy small cash contributions to help finance missile and satellite work.

The Pentagon has received more than 125 letters, cards and telegrams from private citizens on the successful Russian satellite launching Oct. 4. With few exceptions they urged McElroy not to spare the horses in the missile field.

French Leaders Meet On Crisis

PARIS (UP) — Two of France's warring political leaders met today in search of a solution to the 22-day-old government crisis that has endangered the country's economic life.

Their parties are the biggest outside the Communist Party and Coty desperately hoped for a compromise that would put a strong government in power. But whether they could succeed was problematic; their political beliefs are entirely divergent.

Their meeting was arranged after former Premier Robert Schuman failed in an attempt to organize a middle-of-the-road government headed by his Catholic Popular Republican Party.

However, Schuman gave Coty a plan that he said might end the deepening financial crisis that has placed the nation on the verge of bankruptcy.

Both Mollet and Pflanz were studying this plan and Coty hoped they might come to agreement when they realized the nation's plight.

While the urgent political consultations went on the nation's biggest unions rushed plans for a nationwide general strike this Friday that may stop all transportation in the country.

The prices of hard currencies soared on the Paris money market Monday and the value of the franc fell steadily. A dollar bought 45 francs at the unofficial rate Monday and 446 last Friday. The official rate is 350.

Matter of FACT Rabbits, whose mother's milk contains about 10 per cent albumin, a simple protein substance, double their weight in six days after birth, while a human infant, feeding upon milk containing less than one per cent albumin, requires 180 days to double its weight. Officers Hunt For Men Carrying Bomb

DAINGERFIELD, Tex. (UP) — Texas Rangers and highway patrolmen hunted today for two men charged with possession of a bomb. One man already is in jail on similar charges.

Texas Ranger Sgt. Arthur Hill, heading a probe into acts of violence and terrorism against non-striking workers of Lone Star Steel Co., said Charles Brock of Cass county was being held in jail at Linden in lieu of $2,000 bond.

A search was underway for Bobby Johnson and Lindsay Rogers, both of Omaha, Tex., 18 miles north of the plant.

Brock left his job with Lone Star when a wildcat strike began Sept. 21. Hill said Brock, arrested Saturday night, has made a statement but officers would not divulge its contents.

"We can't say yet how much evidence we found but it was enough to convince us they were in the bomb-making business," Hill said. It was learned the bombs were made of dynamite and that detonating caps also were found.

Hill said there is nothing to directly link the trio with four bombings last week. In three of the cases bombs were tossed into front yards of workers.

In the fourth, a bomb was placed beneath the porch of a house while the non-striking worker and his family were away. It was the only one of the four inflicting extensive damage.

Six strikers have been placed under peace bonds when workers complained they were threatened. Grand juries in two counties are probing felony charges against three other men.

McMillan Backed By Churchill

LONDON (UP) — Sir Winston Churchill, past master of Anglo-American cooperation, was reported today to have given his personal support to Prime Minister Harold MacMillan's quest for broader exchange of scientific information with the United States.

Churchill, who was prime minister when Britain gave the United States secrets of radar and jet engine development, met with MacMillan Monday night at No. 10 Downing Street.

MacMillan flies to Washington tonight (about 7:30 p.m. e.d.t.) after greeting Queen Elizabeth on her arrival from her North American tour.

MacMillan is taking with him Sir Edwin Plowden, chairman of the British Atomic Energy Authority, and Sir Patrick Dean, a deputy undersecretary at the Foreign Office versed in atomic matters.

Britain long has pressed the United States to share atomic secrets to prevent duplication of effort by U.S. and British scientists. President Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles are believed favorable to such action.

MacMillan and Eisenhower also will discuss the whole range of world politics, much as they did last March when they met at Bermuda.

Demolition Teams Search Area Torn By Ammunition

FEDMONT, Ala. (UP) — Army demolition experts planned today to move into the area torn by 108 millimeter shells when a boxcar caught fire and ignited the ammunition.

No injuries were reported Monday although the shells sprayed jagged fragments over a wide area and one slammed into a hospital maternity ward. Army troops, local and state police and firemen evacuated nearly 300 persons from 50 homes in the area.

The explosions occurred about 3 a.m. The evacuees were prevented from moving back into their homes last night by soldiers and National Guardsmen who stood guard to prevent looting.

The demolition experts had planned originally to move through the shell-marked area late Monday but as they approached the area they noticed some shells still unexploded and decided to let the area cool down during the night.

The fire was started from a burning hotbox under one of four cars loaded with the shells. The Railroad quickly backed the car outside town and uncoupled it from the rest of the train.

Some quarters believed the bombs may have been exploded by Communist elements to embarrass the Viet Nam government during the current ministerial meeting of the Colombo Plan Conference.

Bomb Explodes Under Military Bus In Saigon

SAIGON (UP)—A bomb exploded beneath a U.S. military bus today, injuring at least four American military personnel.

Unconfirmed reports said four other Americans were injured when a second bomb was hurled at a group waiting for a bus in another part of Saigon.

U.S. authorities said the bomb, believed to be of the plastic kind used in a wave of terrorism three years ago, exploded under the bus near the American Army billets.

Some quarters believed the bombs may have been exploded by Communist elements to embarrass the Viet Nam government during the current ministerial meeting of the Colombo Plan Conference.
