CAROLERS VISIT THE NEWS

Fifth and sixth grade students at Baker Elementary School this morning sang Christmas carols in The Pampa News, much to the enjoyment of the employees. The Courthouse and other establishments also were visited by the Baker singers, under the direction of Mrs. Flaudie Gallman. The group sang all the traditional carols plus a later entry, "Rudolph The Red-Nosed Reindeer." The singing is a part of the annual Christmas activity sponsored by the school. Let's Hit UF Goal

Pampa's United Fund drive has hit a snag! Not a serious snag, to be sure, but one which can easily be overcome if the drive workers and those individuals who have not yet been contacted will take it upon themselves to fulfill their responsibilities by pulling their weight in the boat.

With the advent of social planners proclaiming the inability of individuals to fulfill the responsibilities of neighborliness, such drives as the United Fund give a lie to their importunings for more and bigger government to accomplish on a compulsory basis that which can and must be done voluntarily. And, in spite of our objection to what we consider a misleading procedure as to the individual's power to influence his contributions to specific organizations, the United Fund represents a splendid community effort to utilize human energy efficiently, both for those collecting funds and those contributing.

With just two weeks remaining in the year, it is imperative that those workers who still have business and individual cards to work give this cause a final push to the goal of $60,000.

If you are an individual who has not as yet been contacted by a worker or inadvertently overlooked, write out your check this evening and mail it to the United Fund headquarters in City Hall. It will make the drive's course a little easier and probably save your time.

Let's all turn to and get this project behind us.

Funds For Colleges

Dr. Frank H. Sparks, former president of Wabash College gave a speech recently before a small group of educators at the Broadmoor Hotel. Dr. Sparks raised the tattered but still proud banner of the private schools.

The burden of his talk was that private schools are in desperate need of finances. To offset this growing vacuum in private education he urged widespread corporate support of voluntary education. We would like to applaud his stand.

To combat Russian assertiveness in the science field he suggested a trio of alternates: "One, we can imitate the Russians. Two, we can learn Russian. Three, we can do it the American way." The latter, said Dr. Sparks, was the only logical and moral course for us

While the former college president was not willing to take a stand against the coercive power of taxation as a device for supporting schools, he nonetheless placed emphasis on the American, the voluntary way. He intimated that the total job of education simply could not be done by the government schools; that private and independent schools can and should carry a fair share of the educational burden. In this respect, he argued, "we are behind the 8-ball."

What Dr. Sparks was getting at was the formation of a federated fund to be gathered for the private colleges of the several states which have private colleges. He apparently felt that something like a united fund would best serve the similar interests of the private institutions of higher learning within a given area.

Within his own experience, he has attempted something along this line and found it relatively successful. "We started out in 1948 with two gifts for a total of $15,000 in the State of Indiana. We had 13 colleges then and we still do. However, last year, we had 403 corporate gifts totaling $769,000."

This federated fund movement has now been expanded from its Indiana base to 40 different states with business and industry contributing $6,500,000 to colleges through this particular channel. Dr. Sparks pointed with pride to the Associated Colleges of Colorado, which was organized last year. There are only four member schools: Colorado College, Regis, Colorado Women's College, and Loretto Heights College. These in combination last year collected $14,000. "This is the highest amount collected by any of the four states that started this system last

We have no specific objection to Dr. Sparks' approach, saving only to remind our readers that gifts to individual colleges and schools will always come closer to our hearts than gifts which are collected by some central collection agency and spread about among the members of the agency. And this would be true, even though we might be in full sympathy with every school or college in the association. Giving is such an important function that we do not believe it is altogether wise to have the business of giving highly organized. Few if any donors can familiarize themselves with the intimate workings of every institution seeking gifts or grants through some federal fund. Yet, such intimate understanding is as important as the gift itself. The would-be donor ought to be in a position to weigh the relative values and advantages of each school and contribute to the one or the several which appeal most to him, without feeling that his own interest is secondary and that all that is wanted is his

There is another point, too, which we feel could be stressed even more than Dr. Sparks emphasized it. That is, that with the increasing aggression employed by the government against the taxpayers for support of our government schools, it becomes more and more difficult for the private and independent schools to find financial backing. Since individuals and firms alike have already been plundered by the tax gatherers, there is mounting reluctance to give voluntarily. Yet, schools which do not employ tax funds in any way, are totally dependent upon the income they derive through tuitions and the gifts they obtain in the voluntary Ameri-

Education is such a vital and crucial factor in our lives, a fact that is more and more apparent, that as many firms and individuals as possible ought to give consideration to the serious business of voluntary support going to institutions which to their minds are worthy of

The Increased Military Budget In the last issue I was quoting from a bulletin issued by the American Institute for Economic Research on where the extra money would come from to increase the military budget. The question is whether it will come from addidepartments or by inflation. That is, by having the government issue bonds and have the commer-

It reports that for that year 19.5% of the gross national product was spent for food.

For clothing, accessories, etc. 6.5% of the gross national product was spent.

For housing and household operations, not including purchases of new houses, it amounted to 15.7% of the gross national product.

Medical care and death expenses, plus personal business expenses, amounted to 6.6% of the gross national product.

Transportation expenses, including those for the family automobile, equalled 7.3%. Expenditures for recreation amounted to 3.3%. Then the author says: "Perhaps Me larger portion of this than of any other item could be transferared to the military budget, but even you people in the top-10-per cent-of-incomes class probably feel that your present recreation expenditures (which include newspapers, magazines, and books as well as amusements) are hardly sufficient for needed relaxation.

"Private education and research plus personal-care expenditures equal 1.7 per cent of gross national product. However, the income-tax 'bite' already is forcing many families to forego higher education for their children at a time when the nation cannot afford to neglect its resources of human brainpower.

"Expenditures for tobacco products equal 1.4 per cent of gross national product..." These expenditures amount to about 62%. Add 34% taken by the federal government and we have 96% of the gross national income. The amount expended in maintaining existing plant equipment and providing for business growth amounts to 3.5%. Then the bulletin goes on to say that: "Probably the most serious adverse effects of existing taxes are seen in the retardation of the technological advance, the hamp-
