Nixon Asks Congress To Play Proper Role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon, pledging a new spirit of compromise, called on Congress today "to play its proper role in guiding the affairs of the nation" by taking swift, decisive action on his major legislative proposals before the end of the year.

Asserting that the next four months will be a "time of great testing" for Congress, Nixon submitted a 15,000-word second State of the Union message to urge enactment of about 50 administration proposals. Almost all of them already are before the Democratic-controlled Congress.

The presidential message was Nixon's third thrust in less than a week to nudge Congress on his programs. It followed a news conference statement Wednesday and a radio address Sunday in which he took his case to the people.

On inflation—which members of Congress said they had learned is the No. 1 issue in the minds of the public—the President said: "Americans want and deserve decisive action to fight rising prices. And they want every possible step taken now—not a year from now or in the next session of the Congress."

Nixon said that "in the spirit of responsible cooperation which must prevail between the executive and the Congress if we are to make genuine progress this fall, I am fully prepared to work closely with members of the Congress in hammering out modifications" in disputed legislation.

He stressed at the same time that he would continue to fight any moves by the Democratic-controlled Congress to increase federal spending, reduce the defense budget or limit the powers of the presidency.

"The problems of the nation are pressing, and our elected leaders must rise to the occasion," he said. "These next four months will be a time of great testing. If the Congress is to play its proper role in guiding the affairs of the nation, now is the time for it to take swift and decisive action."

In his expressed spirit of cooperation, Nixon met this morning over breakfast with House Speaker Carl Albert and House Democratic Leader Thomas P. O'Neill. He met Friday with Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield and Mansfield said today he felt Nixon was serious about cooperating.

Mansfield pledged that Congress would give expeditious consideration to Nixon's proposals and said he felt both sides would prefer negotiation to fighting. But Mansfield made clear that one focus of sharp conflict was defense spending: "Frankly, I think the administration is asking too much."

Expressing strong opposition to any tax increase, Nixon said, "We want to fight inflation and balance the budget by placing restraints on spending and not by adding to our current tax burdens."

He said he would not hesitate to veto legislation he felt would be "budget busting."

On taxes, the President urged reform of the tax structure to make it "fairer and simpler," and he renewed a pledge to seek a special property tax credit for older people in lower income brackets.

Promising to meet more frequently with members of Congress in the coming months, Nixon said he stands "ready to find workable compromises wherever possible on solutions to our national problems."

The President said he believed in a "strong Congress," but he added: "I will continue to oppose all efforts to strip the presidency of the powers it must have to be effective." This presumably referred to his disputes with Congress over executive privilege, war powers and the President's right to refuse to spend money which Congress has appropriated.

"There can be no monopoly of wisdom on either end of Pennsylvania avenue—and there should be no monopoly of power," Nixon said.

To fight inflation, the President renewed his request for flexible authority to establish controls on foods and other exports, and to sell $4 billion worth of goods from the strategic stockpile.

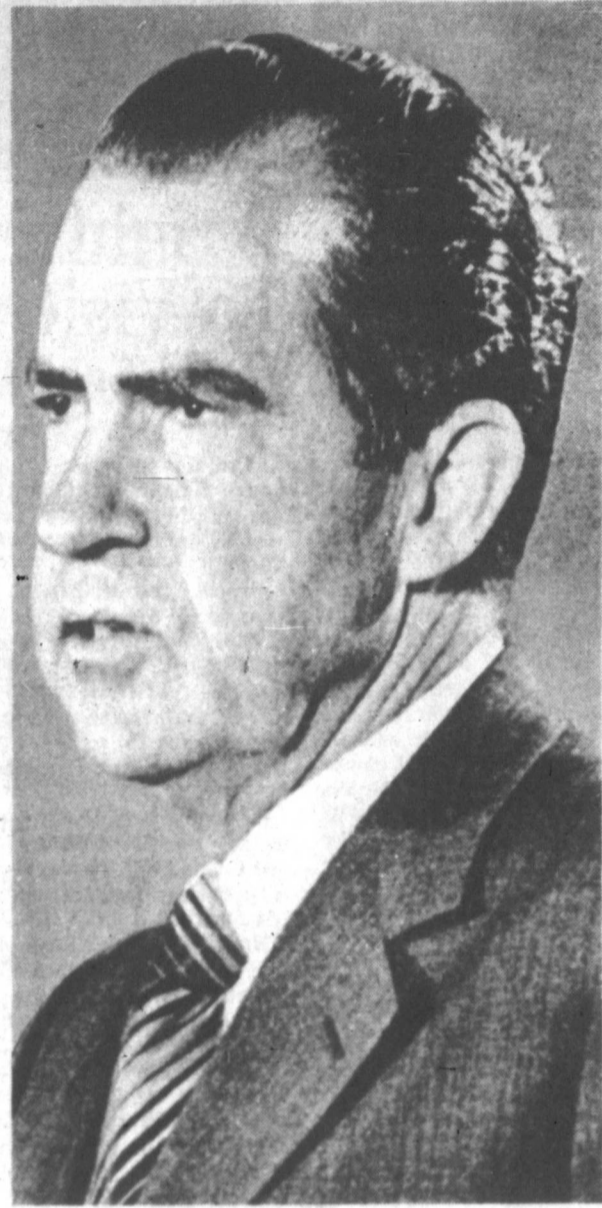

Warning of possible winter fuel shortages, he said it was "absolutely essential" for Congress to pass his seven energy proposals, particularly the Alaskan pipeline legislation and measures to build deep water ports, permit free market prices for natural gas and establish standards for strip mining.

Nixon listed as his first goal a balanced budget. He said Congress could drive his $26.7 billion budget over the $27.5 billion mark if it continued present spending trends.

As in his two other public statements on legislative priorities in the past five days, the President was adamant against any cuts in his defense budget which he said is already "at the razor's edge" of security.

Cuts in any defense programs, he said would undermine chances for mutual arms limitations and put the United States in a secondary position as the Soviet Union is increasing its military capability.

Beef Freeze Thaws

By United Press International
Beef prices began thawing today, but nobody was predicting exactly how much prices would rise.

The price will depend on how much more beef hits the market. Farmers had been holding back cattle during the early stages of Phase IV in hopes of getting a higher price when the freeze ends. A large supply hitting the market would hold the price down.

The Cost of Living Council announced Friday that the freeze would end today, two days before originally scheduled under Phase IV.

Charles Bradley, president of the Colorado Cattlemen's Association, said the freeze had done "irreparable" damage to the industry, but said consumers might see a reduction in price. "The damage inflicted to the beef industry is irreparable. If the cattle market drops any lower, many cattlemen may be forced to liquidate their businesses," he said in Glenwood Springs, Colo.

The chief executive officer of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Arch Booth, said the beef price freeze had not halted rising prices.

"Once again an unaimed flirtation with controls has proven that artificial restraints cannot solve economic problems and continue to fulfill that most uncontrollable of all economic forces: consumer demands. And homemakers know there was a failure to halt rising beef prices," Booth said.

"Our only complaint on lifting the freeze on beef prices is that it was not accomplished by an end to all wage and price controls. An unfettered marketplace, coupled with restraints where they belong—on rampant federal spending—are the long run answers to checking inflation and restoring orderly economic growth."

A check of Los Angeles area food stores opened on Sunday showed a small increase in the amount of meat sold. But there was no sign of hoarding by shoppers trying to beat price hikes.

Women United for Action, a consumers group in New York City, called for reinstatement of the freeze.

In a telegram to the Cost of Living Council, the group said "The consumers we represent consider your early lifting of the beef freeze as another piercing shot fired... in an onslaught against us."

The women's organization, calling council chairman John Dunlap "a faithful servant of the beef trust," estimated early removal of the ceiling would cost consumers over $4.25 million.

Cambodian Troops Battling In Streets

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodian air force pilots reduced the eastern end of the Kompong Cham University campus to rubble today in an effort to drive out Communist-led Khmer Rouge troops from the area into a nearby swamp, military sources said.

There was no official estimate of government progress in clearing the town of insurgents, but helicopters flying reinforcements into the besieged provincial capital returned with refugees today, indicating that battle casualties may have been reduced.

Kompong Cham, located on the Mekong River 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh, has been under siege for a month and since the weekend government troops and Communist forces have battled in the streets for control of the city, once Cambodia's third largest.

Government troops canceled requests for air strikes by the tiny Cambodian air force against rebel positions on the northern edges of the city, indicating the Communists either withdrew or were overrun by ground forces.

Insurgents overran most of the southern section of the city in heavy fighting last Thursday and Friday, seizing a residential area, university, hospital, market and textile factory.

Command spokesman Col. Am Rong said government troops have since recaptured the hospital and market, but the rebels still control the residential section, university and factory.

Refugees reaching Phnom Penh said the wide, tree-lined streets of the once-quiet farming center were littered with mangled bodies, mainly civilians caught in crossfire.

The refugees said many of the bodies have been lying in the sun for several days.

Nixon's Lawyers Give Tapes Brief

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon asked a U.S. appeals court today to overturn a lower court order that the President hand over to Judge John J. Sirica tapes of his secret Watergate-related conversations. White House lawyers called the ruling "utterly without precedent."

In a 95-page brief, Nixon's attorneys said Sirica was preempting the President's authority to decide whether the public interest would best be served by keeping presidential conversations confidential.

"As recently as a year ago such a ruling would have been unthinkable," the brief said.

"The universal view of the legal community... was that the courts lack the power to substitute their judgment for that of the President on an issue of this kind and that they lack power to compel a President to make production," the brief said.

The presidential lawyers said the clamor over the Watergate affair had created a climate in which long-established constitutional principles were in danger of being violated.

They urged the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to make its judgment "in calmness and not (be) moved by the passions of the moment" upholding the President's right to maintain the confidentiality of his office.

"It is no exaggeration to say that the revelations of Watergate have so sharpened the public appetite for more revelations that the claim of a presidential right and responsibility under the Constitution to maintain the confidentiality of presidential conversations must run the gamut of a broadly held sentiment that the claim is probably unjust and therefore presumably unsound," the brief said.

Watergate Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox was not satisfied with the ruling completely and has asked for trying to make sure the grand jury gets the tapes. Sirica had said that after listening to them, he might not turn them over to the grand jury if he felt they contained sensitive matter on other subjects that he felt the jurors should not hear.

The President's lawyers contended Nixon's cooperation with investigations into the Watergate scandal had been unprecedented.

AFTER SUMMIT MEET

Cuba Ends Diplomatic Relations With Israel

ALGIERS (UPI) — Cuba severed diplomatic relations with Israel Sunday, implementing a resolution by 76 non-aligned nations to boycott the country because of its occupation of Arab lands captured in the 1967 war.

Announcement of the split by Algerian President Houari Boumediene marked the end of the 12th annual nonaligned countries' summit conference, which also called for recognition of both the exile government of deposed Cambodian ruler Prince Norodom Sihanouk and that of the Viet Cong as the legitimate government of South Vietnam.

Cuba's break with Israel was the first by a Latin American country. A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Jerusalem today officially confirmed the action, saying the announcement was made by a Cuban deputy foreign minister to the head of the Israeli delegation in Havana.

In another major step, the nonaligned countries agreed to bind together in an informal trade bloc to double their imports from each other. The granting of favorite nation status to "rich" countries was banned.

Although the idea of a nonaligned credit bank was scrubbed, they agreed to form a voluntary "economic and social fund" to finance development projects. Other measures adopted by the conference called for:

- An end to U.S. "aggression in Cambodia and interference in its internal affairs."
- Independence and self-determination for all African territories under colonial rule and white minority domination.
- Withdrawal of all foreign troops from South Korea.

AGAINST GUY HARDIN

Grand Jury Finds No Evidence For Bribery

By CLAY LIVELY

The Gray County Grand Jury made a report to 31st District Judge Grainger W. McIlhenny Friday in which they unanimously gave District Attorney Guy Hardin a clean bill of health regarding allegations made earlier in the year about payoffs in connection with drug offenses in Gray County.

Hardin was unavailable for comment today. From Shamrock, Mrs. Hardin said he had been in Dallas over the weekend and had trouble making airline connections for his return flight today.

The report was made by Mrs. Georgia Mack, foreman of the grand jury, and was concurred in unanimously by the other members of the grand jury.

The report in total: "Judge, we, the members of the Grand Jury, find no evidence that Guy Hardin is guilty of taking a bribe or pay-off."

The grand jury investigation into the matter arose from a June 22, 1973 report on television station KVII in Amarillo by KVII newswoman Sandy Wright.

In the report Ms. Wright raised questions about the alleged dismissal of all charges against three people arrested in a drug raid June 8 in Pampa.

In a statement to the News June 23, Ms. Wright, "Some law officers (in Gray County) said that they suspect a pay-off," involving charges being allegedly dismissed following the drug raid.

KVII stated in the report that formal charges had been brought against the three people in question.

Hardin stated at the time that charges had not been formally made against the three.

KVII also reported that of 45 arrests made in recent months (before June), only five cases had come to trial. In the other 40 cases, charges had been dismissed by Hardin, according to KVII.

Many of those cases in question had, in fact, been presented to the grand jury and had been no-billed for various reasons. Some of the cases have come once again before the grand jury of late and indictments have been returned.

After the report made by KVII, Hardin himself called for the investigation out of which the Friday report resulted.

Nineteen indictments returned by the Gray County Grand Jury Friday included:

- Bob Chester Mims and James Dewitt Berry, acting together, burglary.
- Calvin Williams, unlawfully operating a motor vehicle.
- Howard I. Morphis, murder with malice aforethought.
- Dwayne Allen Sparks and Eddie Jim Kindie, acting together, unlawful possession of narcotics, marijuana.
- Sherman Roy Lenning, Jr., driving while intoxicated, subsequent offense.
- Suzanne Rule Appleton, forgery and passing.
- Paul Carpenter, theft.
- Sara Kate Sanford, assault with intent to murder.
- Glen Crado Howerton, DWI, subsequent offense.
- Bobby Jeff Robinson, removal of mortgaged property out of county.
- James Newman Brown, DWI, subsequent offense.
- Alfred Ray Ballard, DWI, subsequent offense.
- Phillip Lang, indecent exposure.
- Gary Lee Snider, burglary.
- Carl Ray Wells, forgery and passing.
- Terry L. Richardson, forgery and passing.
- Richard Lucas, theft.
- G. Nanik (also known as Namik Sganiani), theft.
- William Edgar Bruce, negligent homicide.

Miss America Supports Making Marijuana Legal

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Rebecca Ann King of Sterling, Colo., a blonde, blue-eyed farmer's daughter who won the Miss America 1974 contest this weekend, Sunday described herself as "very conservative" but said she believes marijuana should be legalized.

The 5-9 beauty said she herself has never smoked the illegal weed but its possession and use should be legalized "because you can't legislate for individuals." She did "a little envelope-stuffing" for President Nixon's re-election campaign this year, she said.

A 1972 graduate of the Colorado Women's College, she told a news conference she would have entered law school this year if she had not won the pageant Saturday night. She hopes to be a juvenile court judge.

Miss King, 23, whose parents live in Hancock, Iowa, said their farm there has "always been very much a part of my life," but "I didn't think it was a very profitable experience for a woman to get into."

"I know that being a lawyer is a profession that would fit my personality and my life style," she said. "The income that I might make, the people that I might meet, the challenge—the mental challenge—that would come with being a lawyer. I'm sort of a debater anyway."

Miss King will earn more than $100,000 for personal appearances during her one-year reign as Miss America.

Her measurements are 36-24-36. She wore a yellow swimsuit in the bathing suit competition and sang "If I Ruled the World" in the talent competition.

Astros Offer Magnet Demonstrations

HOUSTON (UPI) — Putting space research to work for students back home, the Skylab 2 astronauts today demonstrated how the earth's magnetic field is powerful enough to reach 270 miles up in orbit.

Mission scientist Owen K. Garriott, a college physics professor before he became an astronaut, narrated a television show demonstrating that a single small magnet left to float in weightlessness lines up on a north-south axis.

"When they just float out in midair, they take on a very definite orientation," he said. "As we travel around the earth, we can see this little magnet make a number of rotations. But when we put two little magnets together, we seem to lose that tendency to line up with the earth's magnetic field."

Talking slowly in layman's terms, Garriott suggested students might want to try explaining why the two magnets stuck together won't line up with the earth's magnetic field. He said another classroom question might be why the two magnets together spin rather than tumble end over end when disturbed by a third magnet.

Garriott and his crewmates, Alan L. Bean and Jack R. Lousma were still working on their 45th day in orbit, after foregoing a planned day off Sunday to snap pictures of the sun and natural resources on earth. All three helped out with the Skylab solar instruments when they spotted an eruptive prominence, or huge tongue of gaseous energy exploding off the sun.

"It was big. It's the most incredible thing I've seen up here as far as going on on the sun," Bean said.

The space researchers dismissed a suggestion by flight controllers that they might want to take it easy on their "day off" and take a look for the first time at the small library they have aboard.

"You don't train two and a half years to read a good book," Bean said.

Garriott snapped pictures like a tourist Sunday of an aurora, a shower of light across the sky caused by last week's violent activity on the sun.

"I think we got some excellent photographs," Garriott said. "It was the most extensive aurora that we've seen. It must have lasted a full 10 minutes of spacecraft travel, mostly greenish, but turning more reddish and brownish at higher altitudes."

Pictures of the earth's resources hopefully will help Mexican farmers, Canadian mapmakers and weather scientists.

The Mexican government will use the data taken over the western part of its nation to identify land that has been irrigated, and what other croplands should be irrigated to increase farm production.

Canada will study the space photos taken over the eastern stretches of the big country to help in updating maps. American weather scientists were collecting information on cloud formation to aid in storm prediction.

Scientists on the ground all expressed pleasure Sunday during a weekly conference with the storehouse of technical information the three space voyagers continue to send back to them on earth.

COURT UNDERTAKEN
AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The State Board of Education is sending questionnaires to all Texas school superintendents in an effort to get the first accurate count of non-English speaking students attending public schools in the state.

The court will determine how many students will be eligible for bilingual programs next year.

FOR SEIZING DIPLOMATS Kuwait Vows To Try Five Arab Terrorists

KUWAIT (UPI) - Kuwait officials vowed Sunday to put five captured Arab guerrillas on trial for seizing a group of Saudi Arabian diplomats in a bizarre attempt to free a jailed Palestinian leader. Acting Premier Sheikh Saad al-Abdallah said the gunmen, who surrendered Saturday when troops surrounded their jetliner at Kuwait Airport, would be tried on kidnapping and extortion charges. All major Palestinian commando groups disassociated themselves with the guerrillas during the 8 1/2-hour ordeal which began at the Saudi Arabian Embassy in Paris and ended on the tarmac of Kuwait's modern airport. Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the umbrella guerrilla group, said the guerrillas would be "dealt with severely." The five claimed to be members of a previously unknown guerrilla group called "Al Iqab" (The Punishment). The saga began in Paris early Wednesday when the guerrillas seized the Saudi Arabian Embassy and took 16 hostages. The drama ended when local troops ringed their Boeing 707 parked in a corner of Kuwait Airport and ignored the gunmen's 14th and final threat to kill their four remaining hostages. A wooden ladder was propped against the side of the jetliner and the guerrillas, carrying pistols and hand grenades, came down one by one, hands up in the air. Keasler suffered a dislocated hip and multiple lacerations when the vehicle he was driving struck the 18th car behind the engine of a southbound Rock Island train. Keasler remained inside the car during the accident.

Inspecting New York... (The third in a series of articles about New York real estate market trends and housing issues.)

Inspecting your house

Newest is not always best

(Third in a Series)
By Marty Raibovsky

NEW YORK — (NEA) — So, you want to buy a house? If you are among the millions of Americans who live on a family income of between $10,000 and $15,000 a year, you are going to need some guidance. But, alas, counseling services for prospective home-buyers are as rare as duckbill platypuses.

Here is a list of suggestions on how to avoid being a "victim" of the home-buying experience. The recommendations have been culled from real-estate agents, who presumably know all the angles of home-buying, and from seasoned home-owners, who have learned them — the hard way or otherwise.

MONEY — Don't even think about buying a house unless you have at least 10 per cent of the total cost of the house already in the bank. Most down payments require a minimum of 10 per cent in cash ($3,000 down on a $30,000 house) and many require as much as 25 to 30 per cent. Only military veterans get a roofing contractor is not by consulting your Yellow Pages. It is better to ask your future neighbors who have had roofing work done on their homes. Most communities still do not require roofing contractors to be licensed. Enter the fly-by-nighters.

2. The Chimney. While you're up there, check out your chimney. If the metal plate around the chimney is not sealed with caulking, you've got another job on your hands.

3. Gutters. Check particularly for paint condition and buckling. Rust and loosening are danger signs. New aluminum gutters are expensive.

4. Exterior painting. Examine the outside of the house closely to see if a new paint job is required. It can cost anywhere from $400 to $700 a house depending on the size.

Danger signs: fading, streaking, peeling and blistering. If the paint is curling off the sides, it means either that there is a moisture problem in the wall and that new vents may have to be installed, or simply that the exterior was be seeping into the cellar.

6. The Cellar. Look for signs of water or dampness in the corners and around the edges of the cellar floor. Even a recently-pumped cellar leaves damp corners. Be particularly suspicious of cellar walls that have recently been painted or paneled.

7. The Wiring. Best bet: hire a local electrician to check out the wiring for you. It will cost you anywhere from $50 to $75, but it may be the most important precaution that you take.

8. The Furnace. A tremendous problem. There is no way to tell if the furnace will come through for you in the dead of a February night. The best thing to do is switch on the motor, set the thermostat high, and feel the air coming out of the ducts to see if the thing works at all, especially if you're buying the house in the summer or fall. If you are buying a used house, it is a good idea to ask the seller to show you his receipts for fuel and repair bills.

9. Insulation. Most new homes today are being built where from $200 to $500. Check for rust or leaks on the bottom of the tank. Then pray.

11. Plumbing. Unless you hire a plumber to check out the pipes for you, it is very difficult to detect defective plumbing. The worst plumbing problems usually occur in older houses with iron or steel pipes, which corrode after years of use. Copper plumbing is the best. To check on the plumbing performance, turn on the water faucet. If the water trickles out, that's a danger sign. Next, drop a tissue into the toilet and flush it; if the tissue does not flush all the way, you may have problems.

There are many other areas in a home that demand inspection, but the aforementioned are among the most important. Real-estate agents will tell you that every house has its flaws; it is ultimately up to the buyer to decide whether these flaws are worth repairing, or whether they are too expensive, in which case it is best for the buyer to forget about the house.

"To a buyer," one agent break on down-payments — they can buy a home without one. Also, have at least another $2,000 in cash handy to cover closing costs and other expenses, including moving, that will inevitably arise. (Closing costs vary widely in different parts of the country. Be sure to consult lawyers in your area to get an estimate of what the closing should cost you.) So, for a $30,000 home, at least $5,000 in cash is a necessity — and sometimes even that isn't enough.

WHERE TO LOOK — Real estate agents will tell you that brand-new developments, with brand-new houses, are the biggest problem areas. Buying a $65,000 home with bugs still in it is courting frustration. Agents will tell you that the best buys today are used homes in established neighborhoods — the sewer pipes are already in, the schools have already been built, the landscaping is completed, the shopping centers are finished, and the prices are more reasonable. Agents say the best buys are seven-to-ten-year-old homes in settled neighborhoods — preferably, homes which have already had one or two occupants.

THE HOUSE ITSELF — The best way to find out what kind of house you are buying is to hire a professional home-inspection consultant or engineer (they usually charge between $75 and $100) to inspect the place for you. He will prepare a written report for you on the deficiencies of the house when he is through inspecting it. These inspectors usually sniff into corners no one else even notices. But if one is not available in your community (or if you can't afford one), the job will be left up to you. (The seller certainly isn't going to volunteer any information to you, no matter how nice a guy he seems to be.) So, if you are forced to inspect the house yourself, here is a checklist of common trouble spots:

1. The Roof. Roof problems are very common — and very costly. According to a survey recently completed by the Bureau of Building Marketing Research, 2.7 million homes will need new roofs during 1973 alone. The total average cost, according to the survey, will be $491. The professional job will cost $571. The do-it-yourself roofer will pay on the average of $334. According to the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers' Association, your new house may need a re-roofing if: (1) the wood shingles are curling at the corners, blackening or cracking; (2) the slate or tile shingles are missing or cracked, and (3) the asphalt shingles have lost their granules (a sign that the asphalt shingle has lost its protective oil and has dried out). The best way to find a not dry when it was last painted.

5. The Foundation. Walk around the house and check the foundation for cracks and settling. Doors that do not close properly and windows that are jammed are signs of settling; large cracks around the door frames indicate shifting of the walls or the floor. Cracks in the foundation also warn that water will probably with three inches of insulation in the walls and six inches in the attic. If the attic has insufficient insulation, it will be wise to bring it up to the recommended level to cut down heating costs. Proper insulation can cut heating fuel use up to 20 per cent.

10. Water Heaters. Home owners will tell you that water heaters are one of the first things to go. They cost any-said, "every house, eventually, is a compromise."

Senior citizens tell their biggest problems

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You asked senior citizens what their biggest problems were. Money? Health? Loneliness? Boredom? I can't speak for the men, but I can tell you that the biggest problems most women have are as follows: When husbands retire they follow the wife around all day remarking on how she does the housework, cooking, etc. and none of it is complimentary.

DEAR ABBY: Yes, I have a problem. How does a senior citizen find a place to live? Had my name in for one project for two years, and the building started to sink. Applied to get into another and was told they were filled, and had a waiting list of 500. Something should be done about housing for us. I'm not ready for a nursing home yet.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 75, and a widower. I made my first trip to a foreign country at age 70. At 71, I started making my own sourdough bread, and now I can't stand bakery bread. At 73, I started making my own jellies and jams. I enjoy life because I keep active.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a widow in my sixties, nice figure, and I'm told I'm attractive. My problem is finding a GOOD man. They either drink too much and want sex, or they're too old. One older man wanted to marry me. He said: "You buy the house, Honey, and I'll cut the grass." He could hardly walk two blocks, so I'm wondering how he could cut the grass.

DEAR ABBY: Well, you asked for it. My biggest problem is making ends meet. Medicare and Blue Cross will not pay even a part of my medical bills. All I have is my Social Security and it's not enough.

DEAR ABBY: I just had my 75th birthday, and my only complaint is all the talk I hear about "poor old Grandma!" I love to read, watch TV, listen to the radio, and crochet. I don't drive, but I often take the bus to have dinner out somewhere alone. I find most company (especially relatives) very tiring. I just love to be alone.

Children And Divorce

COLLEGE STATION — Children of divorced parents can learn about caring relationships and see meaning in their lives if parents are truthful, according to a family life education specialist. "Most psychiatrists agree that divorce itself doesn't necessarily cause psychiatric problems to develop in children," Dorothy Taylor with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, noted.

"In fact, the child living with unhappily married parents more often gets into emotional difficulty than the one whose mismatched parents have been healthy and strong enough to sever their troubled relationship," she explained. "Disturbances which children of divorced parents do suffer result from the fact that parents aren't appropriately truthful with their children about the divorce."

"Parents often make this mistake with the best intentions — even supported by professional authority," Miss Taylor countered. "Parents have a tendency to hide from their children things which they have a right to know — things that would be psychologically beneficial.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Early end play cinches bid

Bridge hand diagram showing North, West, East, and South hands with card suits and tricks taken.

West wins with the king and makes his best play — the queen of clubs. Jim: "South wins and leads a club right back. East wins the trick and is caught in an end play with eight cards still in his hand."

Oswald: "Just see how hopeless East's situation is. A diamond lead will allow South to ruff in one hand and discard a heart from the other. A heart lead will be allowed to ride to dummy's queen and a trump lead will cost the defense their sure trump trick."

Jim: "South has lost two diamonds and a club that he had to lose. The early end play holds his further losses to either one trump and one heart or two hearts."

Agnew Result Of New Politics

TOWSON, Md. (UPI) — The political scandal threatening Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and some Maryland Democrats involves a political system designed to bring "good government" to a rapidly growing suburban state.

It is a far cry from the popular image of cigar chomping politicians who pay off for votes with jobs and food baskets. Agnew is the product and perhaps the prototype of a politics that developed from the post-World War II suburban explosion.

But the politics of suburbia leave its politicians just as vulnerable to corruption as the old ward politics in the city.

Baltimore County, a horseshoe-shaped political entity that rings the city of Baltimore, grew in population from 270,000 in 1950 to 650,000 in 1970. Dairy farms and big estates have given way in the past decade to apartment developments, suburban housing tracts and massive shopping centers.

Such rapid growth made millions of land speculators and developers—and led use to become a vital political issue. Land once zoned for farming or even residential use could multiply in value several times if commercial or industrial zoning could be obtained.

A $414,000 investment in 1960, of which only $500 was cash, within a few years produced a return of about a million for a group of businessmen, including millionaire J. Walter Jones, a banker-developer and a close friend of Agnew, when a rural tract was rezoned for an industrial park by a three-member zoning appeals board of which Agnew was a member.

Zoning was controlled by the county government. Major public works projects were controlled by the state. In 1955 the state budget was $230 million. It has doubled about every five years and now is 10 times that amount.

In 1962, when Agnew ran for the highest position in county government, the county was controlled by an entrenched, boss-run Democratic party machine, generally believed to be corrupt and inefficient.

The old machines also were losing their grip as ethnic, religious and union ties weakened the flight to the suburbs. Even the concept of neighborhoods disappeared as old communities vanished and high rises, parking lots, hamburger stands and service stations. A superhighway ring around Baltimore created a mobile, rootless population.

Out of this atmosphere came a new breed of public official, a professional businessman-politician who usually was well-educated, articulate, well-dressed and career-oriented. Using television and radio to appeal to the electorate he could run independent of organization or ethnic support.

Agnew, with his tall good looks, impeccable dress and progressive image, could make an old party hack look like a vestige of the unimproved past. In 1962 he did exactly that, running for county executive against Mike Birmingham, a party boss inarticulate on television.

When Agnew was elected governor in 1966, he was the first of his breed of suburban politician to attain that office in Maryland. Since then Republicans Charles Mathias and J. Glenn Beall, making the same kind of broad-based middle class appeal, have been elected to the U.S. Senate, and the three major suburban counties have taken over effective control of the state legislature.

But running for office without organization support is expensive. Agnew set new levels of spending in his 1966 gubernatorial campaign. With little primary opposition, he was said to have spent as much on his campaign by the time of the primary as any candidate ever had in an entire campaign.

Agnew's gubernatorial campaign expenses in 1966 were paid by the state's wealthy, led by a group of close, well-to-do friends who have so assisted him ever since. Gifts came from the state's most powerful and influential families, many of whom controlled banks, development companies and other institutions that do business with the state or depend on favorable government decisions.

In his news conference denouncing allegations of wrongdoing as "damnable lies" Agnew said it was "naive" to believe that people who do business with the state would not contribute to campaigns. But he denied their contributions were, in any way, a form of payoff.

Drug abuse defined
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Medical Association defines drug abuse as "the use of any drug by an individual to the extent that it adversely affects or limits his ability to function as a responsible person."

In order of harmful impact — including physical damage and psychological and socioeconomic disruption — the CMA lists these "drugs of abuse": alcohol, barbiturates, amphetamines, heroin, cocaine, hallucinogens, marijuana and hashish, solvents and tobacco.

Oregon has a population density of 22.5 persons per square mile.

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — "It now looks as though the paper industry could turn out to be one of the more dynamic areas for equity investment over at least the next several years," says Harris, Upham & Co. The paper industry's earnings outlook has undergone a complete about face, the firm says, because the "supply-demand equation has changed from one of overcapacity to one of undercapacity" and the current paper shortage should last well into the late 1970s, it adds.

The recent improvement in the market is "due to a sold-out technical situation and at least a minor revulsion from things negative and extreme pessimism," says W. E. Hutton & Co. An encouraging indicator is the fanning out of investor interest beyond a few specific stocks, the firm said. "Although the vestal virgins have rallied, their performance on balance has been no better than the list as a whole," the firm said. Thus far the rally has been "healthy," says the letter, so it is much less likely to fade than it would be if the turnaround were more dramatic.

"Now is the time to shop the stock market since bearish arguments appear more strained and perhaps even contrived over time," according to The Contrary Investor Follow-Up, published by Fraser Management Associates of Burlington, Vt. It cautions investors to "make an equity decision at a good price" rather than looking for short term alternatives to stocks or waiting for interest rates to decline.

WORRY CLINIC

Mavis is romanticizing about her genetic parents. Yet her REAL parents are actually those who picked her because of love! For adoption is like marriage. Neither involves blood kinship but you feel closer knit than to actual blood kin!

CASE Y-513: Mavis J., aged 16, is quite upset emotionally. "Dr. Crane," she began, "I just learned a few months ago that I am adopted."

"It has shocked me so much that I have fallen down in my school work."

"And now I keep wondering who my REAL parents are; where they live and if I have any brothers or sisters."

"Dr. Crane, my foster parents weren't told who my REAL parents are so they don't even know."

"But couldn't I possibly find out who they are and go to visit them some day?"

YOUR REAL PARENTS

Your REAL parents are those who surrounded you with loving care, shelter, education and guidance.

All adopted youngsters should realize that their genetic parents are NOT their REAL parents!

And there is no magic in being blood offspring!

For the first blood kin on this earth were a pair of brothers whom the Bible calls Cain and Abel.

Yet Cain murdered his own blood brother!

And King David's blood son, named Absalom, sought to slay his father and usurp the throne.

Genetic parents thus have nothing to do with your personality development if they pass you along to another couple to be reared and supported by the latter.

Genetic parents can be compared with the relay runners in a mile relay team.

The first quarter miler is handed a baton to carry for his lap in the race.

Remember, however, that this runner neither created that baton, nor even polished it, shaped it or painted it!

And at the end of his lap, he hands it on to the next runner, who does likewise after he finishes his quarter mile.

The male sperm cell and female ovum (egg), out of which human babies develop, are thus not created by their genetic parents, for the latter merely inherit them from their parents, who also got them from their parents, clear back to the start of the human race, such as Adam and Eve.

And many of these genetic offspring are neither planned nor even wanted!

That's why the current debate is going on about legalized abortion, for millions of women try to destroy their unborn baby.

But foster parents actually WANT you and thus pick you because of their love and voluntary affection!

When such parents thus adopt an unwanted baby (or older child), it is like their own adoption of each other in their marriage ceremony.

For marriage is merely a case of legal adoption of two adults who love each other.

The husband and wife are not of blood kinship, yet they feel closer together thereafter than they do to their own flesh-and-blood brothers and sisters with whom they grew up as children.

Same goes for you adopted kiddies!

Your REAL parents are those who deliberately picked you because of love and desire to have you as a part of their family.

So send for my booklet "Facts About Pregnancy and Adopted Children," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Bldg., Mellet, Indiana 47655. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents in covering and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Dissidents Soviet Hope For Future

By DON OAKLEY
NEA Staff Writer

Russian physicist Andrei I. Sakharov has been called the "father of the Soviet hydrogen bomb." He is also one of the fathers of a political theory that had a brief heyday, the theory of "Convergence."

In a book published in the West in 1968 and circulated underground in the Soviet Union, Sakharov foresaw two possible developments: Either there would be increasing confrontation and the danger of thermonuclear war between the United States and Russia or the two world giants would evolve along converging paths, with the one becoming more socialistic and the other more democratic.

GLOBAL VIEW Terror specialist moves up in China

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Reports from China following the Tenth Communist party congress indicate a man by the name of Chao Yun has gained added strength.

This could spell bad news for underlying U.S. - China relations (however much they might improve superficially) and for that era of peace and accord President Nixon and Dr. Henry Kissinger have been searching.

Chao Yun's alias is Kang Sheng. He is China's Lavrenti Beria, the executed master of Russia terrorism.

Kang has been, and continues to be so far as is known, top man in the Chinese secret police. He is active in and probably head of China's foreign espionage, subversion and dirty tricks operations abroad.

So Far More Rhetoric Than Legislation in 93rd Congress
By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield is braying through his highly partisan hat when he says Congress has conscientiously attended to business and is keeping up with its legislative program.

That's plain political balderdash — as significantly evidenced by the bombastic Montana's careful omission of substantiating proof.

That silence was no accident. He couldn't back up his self-serving claim.

The facts are that, in the eight months the 93rd Congress has been in session, it has enacted no consequential legislation and is distinctly running behind schedule.

Question Box

QUESTION: Doctors and lawyers claim confidentiality for conferences with their clients; ministers and priests claim the same confidence for confessions made to them; newspaper people make the same claim. Now the President of the United States is defending his refusal to disclose the statements he has taped of conferences with his staff members, uses the same claim of confidentiality. Is there a difference between these claims?

ANSWER: If there is any difference, it is that the President is the only one who is part of government. And since government is supposed, in theory at least, to be the people, there remains a question of whether anything in government properly can be kept from the people.

Harm, Legal and Illegal

It is interesting to note that the American people get angry about illegal or possible illegal acts of people holding political office.

The thought of some high-placed official lining his own pockets through bribery or undue influence is more than the people can stand.

But we should like to point out that whatever money comes to politicians through criminal acts probably amounts to no more than petty theft if all of it were lumped together.

We are not so much concerned with what the politician can pocket on the side. It's the legal actions of politicians which concern us most. We are not saying that we condone graft in politics, but the degree of harm done to the tax payers is far greater through legal actions than by illegal actions.

Let us illustrate the point. Suppose you have $100 in your wallet as you walk through a darkened city. A gunman approaches you and demands your money or your life? You will probably give him the wallet and hope he is satisfied. You thus have lost $100, part of which you may recoup through insurance claims or income tax deduction. But no one else has been harmed in that particular act.

The gunman could have been merely an anonymous armed robber. But, for our illustration, let us imagine he was a policy-making politician. The street robbery affected one person temporarily.

Compare that relatively minor damage to the legal actions by the political government which not only damage that man with the $100, but all of the tax-paying public.

For example, President Nixon's wheat deal with the Soviet Union, it has been estimated, cost the American tax payers $1 billion to provide the subsidies. There were subsequent costs through inflated prices, food shortages, job losses and the like, but the single transaction loss to tax payers will suffice to illustrate our point.

Which is the greater harm, the $100 robbery on a street or the approximately $5 per capita loss through the wheat deal?

When the late R.C. Hoiles would say taxation is theft, he was often criticized as taking an extreme point of view. But was he, really?

When money is taken from one person by force, it is theft. When it is taken from all the people by force, it still is theft, and it should be obvious which harm is the greater.

So we would encourage our readers to examine in more detail the legal acts of political government with far more concern than what might be done of a criminal nature.

A little graft, we can survive. But the normal business as usual through legal channels will eventually do us in.

Not The Same Thing

President Nixon, in his refusal to release the tapes of presidential conversations bearing on the Watergate investigation, is in exactly the same position as the news media when it argues that it should not be forced to reveal its sources, according to a number of critics.

Were Richard Nixon a cub reporter who had written a story exposing some kind of criminal activity, it has been suggested, all the newspapers in the country would be solemnly championing his right to refuse to disclose his confidential sources to a public prosecutor on a "fishing expedition."

This is true. But if that reporter were himself suspected of involvement in some kind of criminal activity, whether before or after the fact, then any claim by him to journalistic immunity would be unsupportable and no editor would want him shielded.

This is one place where the attempted analogy fails. Another is that the purpose of protecting the confidentiality of news sources is to encourage the exposure of wrongdoing — not to cover it up; to dig up information the public would not otherwise know about, and in the end to assist the legal authorities in the performance of their duties — not to impede them.

The difference is vital.

A happy life must be to a great extent a quiet life, for it is only in an atmosphere of quiet that true joy can live. — Bertrand Russell, English philosopher.

Plunge boldly into the thing of life! Each lives it, not to many is it known; and seize it where you will, it is interesting. — Johann Goethe, German dramatist.

If half a century of living has taught me anything at all, it has taught me that "nothing can bring you peace, but yourself." — Dale Carnegie, American biographical writer.

H. L. Hunt Writes

CURRENT SOVIET MILITARY STRATEGY

To find out the Soviet Union's current plans and policies, it is best not to listen to the propaganda statements which they give out for consumption in the West. Rather we should turn to what the leaders of the Kremlin are actually doing and what they write in their own publications. Then a view of Soviet military policy emerges which is far different from that which the Kremlin leaders would like us to believe they are following.

An article which appeared this spring in the Soviet armed forces daily "Krasnaya Zvezda" emphasizes that "national liberation wars" are the best way to destroy the United States. This article also stresses that Soviet military might is to a large part dependent on the health of the Soviet economy. As informed citizens are only too well aware, our government is greatly strengthening the Soviet economy through sales of grain and other forms of economic aid.

During the past 18 months, the Kremlin has made several changes in its military high command. According to a study by the Hudson Institute, "recent changes in the Soviet command structures have brought into prominence officers who have expressed a preference for an offensive emphasis."

To go along with this offensive strategy, the Soviet Navy has been prepared to fight well away from the coastal waters of Russia to itself. The Kremlin's seven airborne divisions concentrate during maneuvers on seizing airfields and river crossings. Clearly the Kremlin leaders are not as interested in peace as their negotiators in Geneva would like us to believe.

VOICE OF BUSINESS Liberal Establishment Intimidating Networks

By ARCH BOOTH
WASHINGTON — Whenever Vice President Agnew expresses his personal opinion about the fairness and objectivity of the news media, there are loud howls of outrage and charges of attempted intimidation from what might loosely be termed the "liberal establishment."

It is interesting to note, therefore, that some of the noisiest members of that "liberal establishment" are currently doing their damndest to intimidate any network executives who believe their listeners are entitled to hear the National Chamber's point of view on economic issues.

Six congresspersons — including the flamboyant Bella Abzug — have written a joint letter to the three television network presidents demanding that they not use Chamber-produced public service announcements on the subject of environmental protection.

The announcement that raised their ire begins with a cartoon character named Leonard, who goes into business cleaning up litter and trash. That helps the environment. But he burns the litter, causing smoke pollution. People complain. So he builds a complicated contraption to eliminate the smoke, unintentionally creating a neighborhood eyesore.

The moral is clear enough: Be careful when trying to solve environmental problems not to create new ones in the process.

Then in the second part of the spot, yours truly comes on with the following message:

"Sometimes it does seem that you just can't win. This is all the more reason to approach pollution problems with care. Clean air, land and water are vital to all of us.

"But so are jobs, food, clothing and housing. We have to weigh the total impact on the economic and social costs in order to clean up.

"Persistence and wisdom will achieve more enduring progress in our struggle for a better world."

Now that you know what's in the announcement, you might be interested to hear how it is described by Representatives Rosenthal (D-N.Y.), Conyers (D-Mich.), Edwards (D-Calif.), Harrington (D-Mass.), Abzug (D-N.Y.) and Badillo (D-N.Y.):

"A slanted, business-oriented view of the trade-offs between environmental and economic needs..." they say.

"Its message is that environmental protection laws should not be enforced against business polluters when a loss of jobs could result..." they say.

Rep. Rosenthal even went so far as to insist "that free air time should not be made available to special interest business groups for the presentation of biased views on controversial issues of national importance." Which leaves me wondering what makes an issue "controversial," if not the existence of differing viewpoints.

The representative's letter also contained slighting references to the Chamber's "big business constituency" — an argument ad hominem.

For the record, we are a non-profit organization with a membership which includes businesses of all sizes, individuals, and other non-profit organizations. Over 85 per cent of our business members employ 25 or fewer people.

But our motives and our membership are really not the point. The question is, are people entitled to hear all points of view on a controversial issue, or only those points of view approved by some pressure group or government official?

Is this attempted intimidation having any effect?

Yes, I'm sad to report that it is. One network which ordered some special "prints" of the message — at some expense to us — has now returned them.

Another network has taken steps to prevent the local stations it owns from using the spots, in addition to keeping them off the network itself. The third network — as far as we know — never had any plans to use them.

Individual local stations, on the other hand, have proven far harder to intimidate. They often use our material, and I have no doubt, other material with which we disagree. Fine. That's the way it should be.

As for Rep. Rosenthal, et al, I recommend to them a line from Thomas Jefferson's First Inaugural Address: "Error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it."

Business Today

LONDON (UPI) — Trevor Chinn returned to Britain from an intensive course at the Harvard School of Business Administration to help expand a small family-founded company to an annual turnover of $330 million.

He does not plan to stop there. From his bright, modern offices in Burlington Gardens he can see, across the street, the entrance to one of the oldest and yet most sought-after apartment houses in London. And there is something symbolic in the view.

For Chinn is one of the younger British businessmen who are making an impact abroad by merging the more flexible procedures of the New World with traditional methods of the Old.

There is Quiet Confidence. Many of them have their eyes on the United States. While it may not be time to sound the alarm that the British are coming, there is quiet confidence among them that they can compete with Americans in certain circumstances on their own grounds.

But you have to know exactly what you are doing and how, Chinn said. "We believe we have found a niche in the top end of the hotel market."

Tall, bespectacled and notably good-humored he was pleased with a trip he had just made to the United States where his company, Lex Service Group, has acquired hotels in Baltimore, Chicago, Houston and New Orleans.

When Chinn first joined the family in the executive direction of the firm it was concentrating largely on the selling and servicing of automobiles and trucks. Impressed with some of the Harvard staff, he retained them as consultants to develop a corporate strategy for the future. Hotels are a major facet of that future.

Eventually, in 1971, he announced the purchase of the Carlton Tower from Sonesta International for approximately $11.5 million and the Friendship Hotel at Baltimore Airport for $2.8 million. A year later Lex acquired the lease of the Whitehall in Chicago.

Chinn said in his first year under Lex the profits of the Carlton Tower were up 21 percent while there was a "significant improvement" in occupancy and profit at the Friendship, completely financed in U.S. dollars, largely on a long-term basis.

Harvard must have made quite an impression. Chinn is arranging for some of its staff to come over and give the course he took to some of his executives.

The state with the heaviest population per square mile is New Jersey.

Local GOP Upset At Notoriety

By TOM GEDDIE
DALLAS (UPI) — Jim Jackson glanced around his cluttered office in the Dallas County Republican headquarters for an illustration of the local GOP plight.

The plight in these Watergate stained days is, to a degree, money. To a greater degree, it's notoriety.

He blames the Committee to Re-elect the President (CREP) for the fact local candidates received only one-fourth as much money in 1972 as they did in 1968.

But more important than the loss of money is the Watergate image of money-filled briefcases, shady deals, political espionage and sabotage.

"My increasing concern is that we've seen a trend where people talk about 'the Republicans, the Republicans, the Republicans. 'I'm a Republican, and I didn't know anything about all this crud.'"

Too many people, Jackson said, think CREP and the GOP are the same thing.

But he said the local headquarters for President Nixon's reelection had nothing to do with any other candidates.

Detachment Procedure. "They were trying to detach the Committee to Re-elect the President party," he said.

"This is a non-partisan effort our President is running. The Republican party has nothing to do with it," they said. And if that's the way they played it last year, I want it plain that's the way it is this year.

"It's the Committee to Re-elect the President's problems with Watergate, not the Republican party's."

Jackson remains pleased with the President's administration, especially with the nation's disengagement in Southeast Asia, the all-volunteer Army and the new foreign policy.

"Nixon's probably the only guy who could have done that," he said of the policy changes. "If a guy like McGovern did it, everybody would have labeled him a Communist. McGovern couldn't have gotten away with it, but Nixon could and he did."

"Twas Bold Step. "It was a bold step, and it was against the tide of some of the people who elected him the first time."

But Jackson is concerned about "what's going to happen next year to these guys who are good, honest, public servants, and are going to be running on a party ticket people are going to associate with Watergate, and Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office, and with the enemy's list, and spying."

"The popular thing seems to be that all politicians are crooks, everybody connected with politics is a crook, and that this is doubly so if you happen to be a Republican. This is just not so."

Situation Not Clear. Jackson is not sure what can be done for future Republican candidates.

"I think one thing we need to do is tell the people that there are a lot of good, hardworking, honest Republicans in this country, across this state and across this country who didn't have anything to do with the Committee to Re-elect the President, who were not involved in it, who did not know what was going on, and would not have been a party to anything that did go on. And that we don't want to be classed with the people who evidently did."

Jackson, an outgoing man who jokes that he ought to get off his soapbox, said people have been misled if they "are just now discovering that everybody in politics is not pure."

"What We've Had. "We've had vote fraud, bribery, nepotism and flat stealing of public property. And people have been convicted, convicted, convicted."

"All of a sudden this stuff comes out about political espionage and people are throwing their hands up in the air and hollering. 'Oh, the world's coming to an end.'"

In six months, though, most Americans will go back to "their same old apathetic. 'I don't care, don't bother me, I'm busy watching my television set ways,'" Jackson said.

"Six months from now, people are going to say, 'Aaah, so what?' That's the American dilemma."
