PRIZE BEARD GROWERS

Without A Rudder

The illusion persists, despite all the evidence to the contrary, that the federal government has a well integrated policy and knows what it is doing

Let us abandon the illusion and examine only the evidence.

Take the current situation in the Middle East as a prime example. Did the United States government have some clear indication in advance that trouble was brewing in Iraq and Lebanon? Well, it did and it didn't.

As an indication that it did, we have the testimony of a young man, a soldier, which appeared on the front page of one of our sister papers. This youthful defender of his country was shipped out on a transport bound for Lebanon, three weeks before the showdown came. When his dad went to see him off the young man was able to assure his father of his ultimate destination. Apparently, someone in the military had a pretty good idea that things were going to get sticky at the eastern end of the Mediterranean and was taking the necessary steps.

But what of Mr. Dulles? Did he know? If he did, he gave no indication. Up to a few days before the Iraqi coup, Mr. Dulles was treating with Mr. Nasser in a most optimistic manner. He had offered to bribe Mr. Nasser by upping American taxpayers' donations to the Egyptian dictator from $9 million to $22 million immediately, if only Mr. Nasser would stop saying such cruel things about us. Also, he was offering to relax trade restrictions. That is, if Mr. Nasser would promise not to try to overthrow the pro-western politicians of Lebanon, Iraq and Jordan.

Both Dag Hammarskjold of the U. N., and Assistant Secretary of State William Rountree, in charge of Middle East Affairs for our State Department, were almost jubilant about all the "progress" they had made with Nasser, Things looked very rosy, as they saw it.

Clearly there was no integration of policy in this connection. And while it would be easy to say that the military minds which foresaw the trouble and shipped men and equipment in advance of the deadline were correct, it might be prudent to ask if the news of that troop departure for Lebanon had been discovered by Nasser and employed by him as a cause celebre to bring on the Iraqi coup.

Undoubtedly we will never know the real facts. But the important thing to realize is that our policy makers in Washington are endeavoring to be all things to all people and to move in all possible directions at the same time so that come what may, we will always be right in one place, even though we are dreadfully wrong in every other place.

But a government which endeavors to follow all kinds of policies at once is one which has no policy for principles. It is this kind of government which Jefferson warned us was capricious. On it, no one can place reliance.

There are other evidences of this fact all too plainly visible. We are, for example, encouraging certain alien politicians to establish self-rule. At the same time we are discouraging others. We aided Nasser when he seized the Suez Canal, yet we oppose him when his minions grab off the tax-gathering reins in Iraq. We oppose a move in Lebanon for the establishment of a government hostile to us, yet we do nothing to oppose the re-establishment of a hostile regime in Hungary, despite heart-wrenching pleas for assistance.

What are people of other nations to think of us? How are we to maintain the idea that America is a land dedicated to freedom and to the concept of individual self-rule? We seek to bribe and placate our possible enemies. We are hostile and unfriendly to those who imagine that we might

So far as foreign affairs are concerned, this nation came to grief when it abandoned George Washington's sage advice to avoid entangling foreign alliances.

Since that time, we have plunged from one stupidity into the next. But to preserve our reputation, we end up by taking all possible steps in all possible directions at each and

A nation with no fixed policy which can be applied to all cases, is like a ship without a rudder. It will blow in any direction the winds of expediency may direct.

But who can know in advance where that will be?

Blood poisoning means an infection caused by germs which have invaded the blood stream. The proper medical term is septicemia. Sometimes it is also called septic poisoning. Many people have died from septicemia in the past who could now be saved with the help of the antibiotics or sulfa preparations.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

Examples Of Union Arrogance "Reader's Digest" In August, in its article on "The Right To Work: Our Hottest Labor Issue" gives some fine examples of the arrogance of labor officials when they have a closed shop. The purpose of the proposed Right to Work initiative in seven states in November is to protect the workers from the insolence of

Here are the examples given by the "Reader's Digest":

NLRB Delays "Nonunion workers, even when they can appeal to the NLRB, feel that it often moves too slowly to give them real help. Example: The Cisco Construction Co. was low bidder on an Army contract to build guided-missile installations in the state of Washington. Trouble developed because Cisco had never forced its employes to join a union. The carpenters' union put a picket line on the job site, which driver members of Teamster Local 174 were ordered not to cross.

"Few nonunion workers or small employers have the money to hire lawyers and then wait for the time (almost a year) it took the NLRB to rule that the union's real aim was 'to secure the unionization of Cisco's employes. Washington lacks a right-towork law, under which the guilty union officials would have been liable to fines or imprisonment.

"In Lebanon, Ore., in 1956, the small sub-contracting firm Morse Brothers was supplying concrete for a new high school. Because Morse employes paid no union dues, Teamster Local 324 picketed the school site. All other unions put down their tools. When the Teamsters then asked Morse for a compulsory membership contract. Morse said the firm was willing if the Teamsters could persuade a majority of the men 'to sign for the union.' The Teamster representative said that couldn't be done, but that he would talk to the men after Morse had signed the contract.

"So that the job could go on, Morse signed. But the Morse membership would cost them a $40 initiation fee, quarterly dues of $15 and December dues of $5, with $10.40 per month paid on their behalf by the employer into the Salem, Ore., Teamster's Security Fund, plus another ten cents per hour into the Teamsters' Pension Fund. Not surprisingly, the workers balked.

"When the Teamster representative arrived, they asked what benefits they would get under his pension plan. The representative didn't know, 'because it is still being worked out.' He went on to say that they had to join now anyway, because their boss had already signed the contract - 'or we can send men down to replace "It took the NLRB almost a year to rule that Teamster Local 324 'seems to have been interested in the acquisition of money for various funds, without regard to the rights or desires of employes.

Opinion - Here and Abroad "In legalized compulsory unionism, the United States stands in splendid isolation, with few affies outside the Iron Curtain. It is prohibited by the constitutions, laws or judicial decisions of Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Holland, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland and Western Germany, all of which have strong voluntary un-

"The Australian Labor Party, which once favored compulsory unionism, last year decided that 'it does not assist in building up a virile union organization, in which people become unionists because they believe in it.'

"The AFL-CIO contends that right-to-work laws are intended to 'bust unions.' Yet a "Fortune' survey made last year shows that in the states which have such laws union membership is as high It would seem, therefore, these laws, rather than driving give them some measure of con trol over their leadership

"An Opinion Research Corp. survey taken early in 1957, after the first disclosures by the Mc-Clellan Committee, give right to - work support a majority of 55 percent. A Gallup poll, taken in August, after further hearings, gave right - to - work a 63 percent majority. However, union members, faithful to their leaders' urging, were 61 percent against it.

'A political ferment over the right to work is brewing. In six of the states which now have right-to-work laws, the decision was reached by referendum of the voters. Initiative or referendum elections are in prospect this November in California, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Montana, Ohio and Washington. Have you thought through this vital issue for your-tococci. When these germs are found in the blood stream prompt action is needed.

Almost any germ can cause septicemia, or blood poisoning. but those mentioned are prob ably the most common. Several of the others also yield either to the sulfa drugs or to antibiotics.

Just because the chances of recovery are now so much better for a person struck down blood poisoning, there is no excuse for carelessness. Accidents which break the skin and put the blood stream in contact with germs should receive proper treatment. This may help to prevent the blood stream infection After any such injury the first sign of chill or fever should be signal for prompt action in finding the cause of the trouble and starting appropriate treat-

LOS ANGELES - I was standing at a bar down near the Navy yard, minding my own business and this bum came up to me and said "What do you do?"

I said. "I write editorials." He said, "I never read edito-I said, "I don't care."

He said, "Why do you write editorials? Tell me that."

I said, "Becuase I don't like the editorials in the Democrat-Independent-Republic, so I write my own. I can think as good as those He said, "You think you think better than I think. Why don't you mind your own business, always telling people what to think?"

He was a big ugly bum, but just the same I said, "I was minding my own business, I was having a few beers waiting for my girl, she sings on the radio and you bust up to me, you asted me what do I do so instead of telling you to mind your own business I told you what I do so then you start balling me out. Who do you think you are? I am not afraid of you.' The guy said: "What is your girl's name?" I said, "Sylvia. Slyvia. She sings dizzy little commercials for the mattress people: 'Dream dream slumber and dream on a wonderful seam-less mat-tress, no counting sheep like little bo-peep, what caress, so tell your dealer "I want a seam - less mattress." '

I said, "She is divorced, her husband is away, he got 20 years for a stickup, then they want him in Oregon and Kansas, so he is book ed solid the rest of his life. A girl can't hang around forever and she was elected Miss Hardware and Housefurnishings of 1957, so we started dating, but she has got two kids. I hate kids."

"I didn't ask you for your life story," the guy said, "for instance you might work in the Navy yard but I got troubles of my own, my wife divorced me too.

said: "She did? What for?" He said: "There you go again. Do I go poking my nose into your your business, what about a little privacy? She pestered me and pestered me, I was working in a parking lot, she figured a smart guy with a little nerve you could look a joint over, what time they close, where they stick the bag, the paper bag with the money, sometimes in a coffee can if it is a lunchroom, inside an old tire if it is a filling station, watch how often the cops drive by, she was the ambitious type, she wanted a chinchilla coat, so I belted her good and she got a lawyer, the lousy judge said I have to pay her $20 a week, the bum is out of his mind, where do I figure to get $20 week and her bozing it up. Anyway, what do you want to know for? I came in for a few beers and you stick me on the witness stand. I said. "Khrushchev is a dirty rat, we have to send Brazil eight billion bucks to build a new dam or they will go Communist, and Sherman Adams is not a crook, just a cheap, dumb chiseler, but we must not return to Mc-Carthyism, that way lies chaos."

He said: "What?" I said, "Chaos.

The guy said: "I never heard of chaos. I been in Petosky, though. Joe McCarthy was all right, so you didn't like his methods, well don't like your methods, but I don't write a lot of writeups with big headliners. Why don't you mind your own business?"

I said: "I was minding my own business, you ask the hartender, hey mister, wasn't I minding my own business? And this character asked me what do you do? So naturally I told you." The bartender said, "Break it break it up." So Slyvia, the little tramp, stood me up, so-I rode home on the bus and wrote an editorial how the labor bill is a wise compromise, after all life itself is composed of give and take, you can't have everything you want, there is two sides to every question. The next morning I got a note from Sylvia, she got married to a saxophone player, he will get a bellyful of those kids.

Mac, In Own Humble Way, Is Guinea Pig

Whatever guinea pigs get, I should get.

I mean in the way of medals, awards and other honors for their services to mankind. In my own humble way, I'm a guinea pig. In my neighborhood I'm always the first to test new products to see if their advertising claims are on the level. One day finds me puffing away at a new filter to determine wheth-

ed to enliven my bushed blood, inhaling drops which vowed to clear the tunnels in my head in jig time, and looking at parked cars to see if they really looked as if they were whizzing along while they were standing still. I have caught the sniffles from standing under a shower in a "wash and drip-dry" suit, given myself the itch by rubbing peach fuzz on my face and then shaving it off with an electric razor, and worn my fingers to the bone trying to learn how to play the guitar in one easy lesson. Why do I do these things? I'm not sure, but I like to think I do them for the same reason that Stanley chased Livingstone through Africa, man ate the first oyster and Ben Franklin flew his kite and key. The tests are a challenge. Who knows but that when you test a 'non - shrinkable, non - wrinkable" suit under a shower that the trouser legs and arms won't close around your neck and choke you to death?

My greatest sacrifice has been in diets. I have tried them all. including one that called for nothing but a popsicle and wild rice for lunch, and a pinch of rosemary on half a slice of pumpernickel for dinner.

At the moment I am doing guinea pig work on the latest diet -melons and berries. Any melon, any berry. Its advocates claim the combination will slim a fire hydrant, I don't know about that, but I do know that I wish I had had the good sense to try it on a fire

Robert Allen Reports:

Col. Arifls Man To Watch Among Iraq Rulers

WASHINGTON - Colonel Abdul Salam Mohammed Arif is the real man to watch among the revolutionary rulers of Iraq.

The virtually unknown Deputy Premier in the military junta is regarded by Intelligence and other informed authorities as the most powerful figure in the new Iraqi government.

Prime Minister Karim el-Kassem is rated as the "General Naguib" of the regime; actually little more than "front man" for Arif and his ardent pro - Nasser clique.

Intelligence experts foresee El-Kassem being ousted in one way or another as soon as Arif consolidates his position. That was the fate of General Naguib, who spearheaded the historic revolt against King Farouk in Egypt.

Arif now holds three strategic roles in the new Iraqi regime -Deputy Premier, Deputy Commander of the armed forces, and Acting Interior Minister.

In these key positions, Arif. controls the 60,000-man, well-equipped army, the police, the press, radio and other information media, and the civil government.

This little - known but potent leader is an extreme nationalist and an avowed idolator of Nasser. Premier El-Kassem is much the opposite. He is a moderate nationalist, and inclined toward neutra-

These are the highlights of a special report by Central Intelligence Agency.

CIA Director Allen Dulles personally discussed this analysis with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, where he has been under fire for being caught unawares by the Iraq coup. At the time of the July 14 revolt. Dulles related, Arif was in command of the 1st Battalion of the 19th Brigade, which was commanded by El-Kassem. The two men have been close friends for five years. During the last three they planned the secret revolt. Arif attended military college in Iraqi government. The CIA chief cited the fact that it was Arif who headed the Iraqi mission to Demascus to confer with Nasser following his hasty trip to Moscow. Dulles also credits Arif with formulating the defense agreement between Iraq and the United Arab Republic.

Under questioning, Dulles admitted his agents believed Jordan was the serious trouble spot in the Middle East. Also that he had warned his brother. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, that there was every likelihood of a revolt in Jordan on July 12 - two days before the surprise upheaval

HOW IT HAPPENED - Two trans - Atlantic phone discussions with President Eisenhower preceded Secretary Dulles' announcement in London of "full partnership" in the Baghdad Pact.

Dulles had to talk twice to the President to win him over on this commitment.

The President was reluctant to go that far; deemed it "risky" at this time. He pointed out the U.S. already is, in effect, an active participant in this Middle East alliance. The U.S. holds full membership in the Pact's three major committees - military, economie and political. But Dulles told the President that Turkey, Pakistan and Iran had bluntly served notice they would withdraw from the Baghdad alliance unless the U.S. publicly accepted a larger role. They strongly urged direct Pact mem-

As a compromise, Dulles proposed a declaration of "full partner-

The three Moslem allies accepted that, whereupon President Eisenhower approved it.

Three days before this significant London announcement, Assistant Secretary of State William Macomber, Jr., told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in response to a question, "The question of whether we will join the Baghdad Pact is still under study, and no decision will be made until later this year."
