Can Newspapers Using Union Label Be Fair?

In going through the campaign for right to work and noticing that those newspapers that carried the to the editor giving reasons for opposing right-to-work laws, one begins to wonder whether any newspaper that carries the union label can really be fair and presen, both sides to the jury of public opinion. And, of course, any presentation to a jury that does not permit both sides to be heard would hardly be regarded as fair. In the first place, a newspaper that has a union contract does not need to carry the union label. The union label is just a little emblem usually running with the editorial masthead and is about 14 inch high and 1/2 inch wide. So when they run the union label they are endorsing what the unions stand

The unions have been successful in getting legislation through Congress that makes it impossible for an individual to use his conscience in making a contract with an employer as to how best he can serve himself and mankind when the union is successful in forcing a union contract on the employer. It is, in short, depriving him of his inalienable rights of life, liberly and the pursuit of happiness.

It is really hard to see how any newspaper in America can endorse acts and practices that are the essence of state communism and state socialism. Under communism or a dictator the individual does not have the right of choice as to how he can use his creative energy, and that is what the unions have been successful in bringing about in the United States under a union contract.

It seems that either the publisher is so naive that he does not know what is taking place or he is a pure opportunist who cares nothing for the well-being of his fellowman and his nation. In either case, it is difficult to have much confidence in a newspaper that does not have an eternal principle governing right but uses the publisher's own changeable standard of right and is only thinking of its own transitory power. If the publisher is unable to see that taking away from individuals their right to use their conscience in making a contract to work will eventually destroy the American way of life and throw us into a dictatorship of the proletaire, he certainly cannot be trusted to present to the jury of his readers the information they need in order to make wise and just and fair de-

And why cannot newspapers carrying the union label open their paper can that sees the errors of collective bargaining that takes away from an individual his right to make an individual contract and all laws that give one man an advantage over another? The reason is, of course, that if a newspaper opened its columns to critics of labor monopoly, questions would be asked that would embarrass that newspaper and cause it to lose some subscribers who believed that one group should have the privilege of planning the lives of other people. And, of course, a newspaper that doesn't understand that there is a continuous sequence of results would be very much embarrassed if it threw its columns open for readers to ask questions as to how its ideologies could be put into practice without doing great injury to mankind. It would have great difficulty in explaining how any worker can be protected from competition without it being unfair and unjust to other workers and to society at

And since the newspaper is one of the primary means of the reader informing himself as to whether or not this act or that act is in agreement with the eternal moral principles, it is of the utmost importance that they read a newspaper that can be trusted. In fact, when any person subscribes to a newspaper that carries the union label, he is, in effect, helping undermine the principles of the Declaration of Independence upon which this government was formed

Jesus had something to say about these people who were afraid of the light. Remember, according to Goodspeed (John 3:19-21) he said:

"And the basis of the judgment is this, that the light has come into the world, and yet, because their actions were wicked, men have loved the darkness more than the light. For everyone who does wrong hates the light and will not come to it, for fear his actions will be exposed. But everyone who is living the truth will come to the light, to show that his actions have been · performed in dependince upon God.

The newspaper that advocates any form of special privilege hardly dares criticize other forms of special privilege because the reader is likely to point out that he wants special privilege for his line of reasoning but objects to it for other people. Therefore, for this reason, the newspaper that carries the union label can hardly take a stand against any unfair and unjust law or practice.

This trained Communist and ranking Soviet representative on the UN secretariat thus becomes Hammarskjold's right-hand man for political affairs of the UN. At the same time, Hammarskjold dismissed Povl Bang-Jensen from the UN staff because this able patriot refused to divulge the names of the Hungarian refugees who told the truth about what happened in their country. To have done so, would have made them available to Moscow and would certainly have insured the assassination of their families. Have you ever thought that your life might be more tranquil if you spent it with a WOODEN woman? Don't be too sure. In 1864, the Indian frigate, Velcoe, found a beautiful carved statue of a girl, clad in classic draperies, drifting in mid-Atlantic. Presuming that she was the figurehead of some wrecked ship, Captain Caimmi christened her "Atlanta" and brought her aboard. His sailors gazed on her with such fascination that work' grew slack and quarrels broke out among the lovelorn deck hands. To prevent further trouble. "Atlanta" was locked up in a cabin and turned over to an art gallery when the ship was transfered to the National Naval Museum, at La Spezia. In 1924, a museum guard drowned himself after telling friends "Atlanta" had bewitched him. On October 13, 1944, Erich Kurz, a German soldier, stole "Atlanta" and carried her off to a rented room where he shot himself. A suicide note declared his hopeless love for her, "Atlanta" is back in the museum now, but locked up in the basement - no longer on display.
