Nixon Wants To Revive Sagging Housing Industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said today he would try to pump $5.5 billion into the nation's sagging housing industry in the near future while Congress considers his proposed long-range solutions in housing.

In a message to Congress, the President said the government would move shortly to allow savings and loan institutions to provide an additional $2.5 billion in loan commitments. Savings and loan associations have virtually shut off mortgage lending since June.

Nixon said the Federal Home Loan Bank Board would provide "forward commitments" to thrift institutions that would guarantee money for them at some future date to cover loan commitments that could otherwise not be made.

A shortage of funds for thrift institutions could occur if savers continued to withdraw funds for investment in Treasury bills and other investments returning interest rates of 8.2 per cent and higher.

With Congress not expected to act before next year on new housing proposals, Nixon outlined steps the administration could take without congressional approval to ease the housing credit squeeze.

He said they were intended "first, to help alleviate the immediate housing credit problem; and second, to improve for the longer term the supply of housing credit and the ability of our people to use it."

The long-range Nixon housing plan included a proposal eventually to replace the current system of federal housing subsidies for the poor with cash payments.

The President said this would attack the basic problem in housing, adding that it would give the poor "freedom and responsibility to make their own choices about housing and would eventually get the federal government out of the housing business."

For the near future, in addition to $2.5 billion for savings and loan institutions, the President said the government would try to attract $3 billion in private funds into the mortgage market for new housing construction.

He said those funds would be attracted through a so-called "tandem plan" under which the government would provide money for FHA insured mortgages at interest rates below the market level.

In effect, this would be a federal subsidy to private investors. For example if an investor is buying FHA mortgages now at 9 1/2 per cent of face value, under the President's action, he would be allowed to buy FHA insured mortgages at 9 1/2 per cent of their face value.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board program of "forward commitments" would work like this:

If a thrift institution had $20,000 due and payable to its customers, under the current financial situation, the savings and loan institution cannot lend the money for mortgages for fear that savers would withdraw their funds on maturity.

Under the new FHLBB authority, the thrift institution could lend the money with the knowledge their savers would be protected by the federal government.

Nixon stressed in his message to the House and Senate that "credit is the lifeblood of housing."

"Without an adequate supply of credit repayable over an extended period of time at reasonable interest rates, very few families could afford to purchase their own homes," he said.

Among his long-range recommendations was a 3 1/2 per cent tax credit for lenders in the home mortgage market.

Another proposal would authorize the Federal Housing Administration to insure multifamily dwellings. The President recommended that both the FHA and VA be authorized to insure mortgages carrying current market rates of interest, thereby eliminating the need for charging a premium for receipt of such loans.

The tax credit program, Nixon said, would make the housing market more attractive to investors. It calls for a sliding scale with a maximum credit of 3 1/2 per cent of the interest earned by housing mortgages going to investors who have at least 70 per cent of their portfolio in the housing market.

The President said he was convinced that direct cash subsidies were the best methods for providing adequate housing to the poor. But he said several questions must be answered before an adequate program can be put forward—questions such as proportion of income poor families should be required to pay for housing and the relationship between welfare payments and housing.

"Under this approach, instead of providing a poor family with a place to live, the federal government would provide qualified recipients with an appropriate housing payment and then let them choose their own homes on the private market," he said.

"The payment would be carefully scaled to make up the difference between what a family could afford on its own for housing and the cost of safe and sanitary housing in that geographic area."

Without a base of power? It would be a foolish move from one who is determined to win.

A smiling Agnew sat at the head table with President Nixon and Pakistan Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto at a state dinner Tuesday night. But when reporters several times during the evening cornered Agnew to ask him about the resignation report, he repeatedly gave the same reply: "Gentlemen, you know it's not my practice to comment on stories from undisclosed sources."

White House Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren fended off a barrage of questions on the matter with repeated "no comments." A report began circulating that Rep. Barry M. Goldwater, R-Ariz., was the "senior Republican," but Goldwater denied it and said "I don't think he's going to quit."

Agnew was officially notified by U.S. Attorney George Beall that he was under investigation in connection with building contractor kickbacks in Maryland. On Aug. 8, Agnew denounced press accounts of his alleged involvement as "damned lies."

Over 100 representatives of Pampa businesses attending a noon luncheon yesterday were informed of a decision by two local banks to operate new computerized services.

Jack Imel, vice president of Citizens Bank and Trust, was at the luncheon to answer questions about his bank's use of computerization.

Floyd Watson, president of the First National Bank, told the audience the conversion from manual to automated operations has been necessitated by the ever increasing number of paper items which must be handled in banking.

The insurance board supplied figures which showed a $22 difference under a 15 per cent reduction and a $15 difference under a 10 per cent reduction between the Sept. 1 rates and the deviated rates approved Tuesday in the counties with the lowest premiums.

Drivers in other areas of the state who have policies with one of the 13 companies and who fall into the right driving categories can expect reductions similar to those in the lowest premium counties.

"The board encourages qualified companies to submit requests for deviations and I believe further reductions are imminent and we intend to act promptly to assure that these savings are passed on to Texas policyholders," Christie said.

Astros Act Like Children?

HOUSTON (UPI) — Acting a little like children in a room full of new toys, the Skylab 2 astronauts took time from their busy research schedule Tuesday to practice sailing paper airplanes through their roomy space house and perform acrobatics in weightlessness.

Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma cut the games out of their flight plan today to take more photos of Earth and the sun and to start the last series of biomedical tests on themselves.

Lousma and Garriott added another segment to a television show for high school students Tuesday, showing how normal activities on the ground, like paper airplane flying, respond to zero gravity.

A space agency engineer, Thomas Grubbs, a 1967 regional winner of "The Great Paper Airplane Flyoff," designed the plane with the help of his 10-year-old son, Tom Jr., for inclusion in the science demonstration.

"It wasn't intended to further knowledge of fixed wing flight," Grubbs said in an interview. "But it wasn't really as flippant as it sounds on the surface. It was part of a planned demonstration for high school students."

The astronauts also easily stood on top of each other's shoulders, their arms flapping at their sides, to show how easy acrobatics are when unhampered by gravity. Bean did a few armless pushups, with Garriott and Lousma lying on top of him, to emphasize the problem spacemen have in keeping their muscles in shape when they don't have to use.

It wasn't all play for the space pilots Tuesday. Lousma and Garriott snapped more pictures of natural resources during their 35th data-gathering sweep, this time from El Paso, Tex., to Canada.

Call Comes as Surprise
The committee's calling of Buchanan and Ragan came as a surprise. It had been expected the panel would call several lawyers as transitional witnesses in its investigation of the bugging of the Democratic national offices in the Watergate complex and of campaign "dirty tricks."

Democrats were privately pessimistic of their chance of getting the two-thirds majority needed to override the veto. Republicans were cautious in predicting victory for Nixon.

Nixon turned down the labor-backed measure to raise the $1.60 an hour minimum wage to $2.20 within a year on the ground that it would cause additional unemployment.

The vetoed measure would increase the minimum for most covered workers to $2.00 an hour immediately and to $2.20 on July 1, 1974. Others, to be brought under the law after 1966, would go to that level a year later. It would also bring under coverage for the first time 5.4 million local, state and federal government workers and 1 million household domestic workers such as maids and chauffeurs, with the exclusion of domestics who live in.

Nixon had proposed raising the minimum to $1.90 immediately and to $2.30 an hour in three years time. He had also strongly insisted on a "youth differential" that would have exempted youths under 18 from minimum wage coverage for the first six months of their employment.

Committee Gains Private Testimony From Colson

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Watergate committee wants to find out how much former White House Special Counsel Charles W. Colson can and will testify about the Watergate bugging and other 1972 campaign sabotage.

The committee was scheduled to interview Colson in private today in an effort to determine whether to summon the former White House political operative to testify when public hearings resume next Monday.

Colson agreed to appear today, but his law partner and attorney, David I. Shapiro, had "no comment" when asked whether he would testify during the hearings.

In other Watergate-related developments: —The committee voted to subpoena E. Howard Hunt Jr., former White House consultant and mastermind of the Watergate bugging team; Patrick J. Buchanan, President Nixon's speechwriter; John J. Caulfield, former New York policeman and White House aide; and John Ragan, New York private detective, to testify in the next round of hearings.

Committee Brief —The committee said in a brief in U.S. District Court in its suit to obtain Nixon's Watergate-related tapes that it is focusing "on the President's own possible criminality."

—Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox said in a brief filed in the same court that there was "no reasonable basis for inferring" that the tapes will show Nixon knew in advance about the Watergate bugging. The brief denied allegations by James W. McCord Jr., a convicted Watergate conspirator, that the tapes "probably" contain information to clear McCord.

—White House Counsel Leonard Garment, in papers filed in District Court, invoked executive privilege to prohibit release of tapes of a conversation Nixon had with dairy leaders in 1971 two days before the White House authorized a $500,000-$700,000 increase in milk price supports. The dairy industry gave the Nixon campaign $400,000.

Shapiro indicated to the committee last week that Colson was a "target witness" of a federal grand jury and that he did not wish to testify, Colson is under a continuing subpoena to testify.

It could not be determined whether such actions were a result of the effects of the freeze or just normal business activity.

No managers were willing yet to say whether or not they would participate in such closing actions if organized on a statewide basis.

Gas Stations Shut Down For Protest

By United Press International
Service stations around the country either closed or said they would close to protest the government's Phase IV freeze on gasoline prices. Hardest hit was Massachusetts where hundreds of stations shut down Tuesday.

An automobile club in Massachusetts said its survey showed about 50 per cent of the 4,000 stations in the state were closed. But it found no area where all the stations were closed.

Norfolk District Court Justice Vincent J. Brogna issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting owners from taking collective action to shut down their stations. State Attorney General Robert H. Quinn sought the injunction.

Chamber Group To Plan Fire Prevention Activity

The Fire Prevention and Safety Committee of the Chamber of Commerce with Paul Payne, chairman, will meet Thursday at 10:00 a.m. in the Chamber office to finalize plans and activities for the observance of Fire Prevention Week here Oct. 7-13.

Fire prevention is observed throughout the nation during this week as proclaimed by mayors, governors and the President of the United States.

Actually, fire prevention is a year-round effort, Payne said. However, it is necessary once a year to put special emphasis on the program in order to reduce fire losses to a minimum.

Payne in commenting on the campaign said, "A successful fire prevention observance reaches all people: adults, children, industrial workers, store and office employees, teachers, parents, housewives and every citizen.

"A successful campaign is everywhere: at home, in school, on the job and in the

Agnew's Aides Denying Rumors Of Resignation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A source close to Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said today the White House apparently was behind the report that Agnew had discussed resigning. He said the vice president will "fight" rather than step down.

The source, who declined to speak for attribution, said there were "indications that it's coming from people over at the White House." He referred to a Washington Post report Tuesday morning quoting an unnamed "senior Republican" as being "99 1/2 per cent certain" Agnew would resign.

"It just isn't true," the Agnew associate said. "He's talked to a number of senators and congressmen about what he ought to do, and the unanimous feeling is to fight, and that's what he intends to do. There's never been any question in my mind of his resolve to fight this thing."

Agnew's press secretary, J. Marsh Thomson, said Tuesday that the vice president may have discussed resigning with others while in "a dark mood," but does not intend to do so.

Whoever it is (the "senior Republican") was, it was probably somebody who in all sincerity overread a mood," Thomson said. "The vice president was throwing out a possibility... asking a friend 'What do you think?'"

To quit would "imply guilt," Thomson said. "He's not a quitter. What would he do

U.N. Admits Both German Countries

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Israel recalled the "grim memories" of the Nazi era, but in the end Ambassador Joseph Tekoah went along with the rest of the U.N. General Assembly and voted for the resolution.

The assembly admitted East and West Germany at the opening of its 28th annual session Tuesday as well as the newly independent Bahamas, raising to 135 the number of U.N. member nations.

West German Foreign Minister Walter Scheel and East German Foreign Minister Otto Winzer were scheduled to address the assembly today, along with a score of other speakers welcoming the new members.

Tuesday's admission came by acclamation after Israel and Guinea, the only voices of objection, expressed reservations.

Israel opposed the entrance of East Germany accusing the Communist nation of ignoring German "historical responsibility" for Nazi atrocities. Guinea expressed doubts about the admission of West Germany.

"The grim memories are indelible," Tekoah said. "It was only three decades ago that six million human beings were systematically annihilated merely because they were Jews... The Jewish people will not forget. The United Nations must not forget."

Teikoah, however, said he would vote for the resolution because both Germanies were included in the measure.

Jeanne Martin Cisse, Guinea's ambassador, said she would go along with West Germany's admission for the same reason despite several African objections.

Egyptian Ambassador Ahmed Essmat Abdel Meguid rose in the assembly to challenge Tekoah's comments. "It is strange that Israel, which has violated so many United Nations resolutions, should oppose the admission of any state," he said.

U.S. Ambassador John Scali, noting that although the United Nations had grown from 51 to 135 members since its founding in 1945, said "it was not until today that the organization could be said to even approach the goal of universality."

RACKETEER CLAIMS

FDR's Son Tried To Obtain Killing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A convicted securities racketeer says Elliott Roosevelt, son of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, was one of two men who offered him $100,000 in 1968 to kill the prime minister of the Bahamas.

Louis P. Mastriana, who is serving an eight-year prison term for trafficking in stolen securities, said the offer was made to him by Roosevelt and Mike McClaney, who he said was a close associate of underworld figure Meyer Lansky.

"They came to me and offered me $100,000 to whack (Lynden O.) Pindling," who was elected prime minister in 1968 and then re-elected to another term earlier this year. Mastriana told the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee Tuesday.

Subcommittee investigators said they attempted to question Roosevelt, 62, a former mayor of Miami Beach, Fla., but that he eluded them during a recent visit to the United States before returning to Portugal, where he is a citizen.

Mastriana, 51, who testified under immunity, said the "contract" was offered to him in 1968 after Pindling did not grant McClaney a gambling license he had expected.

"All I understand is they gave him (Pindling) a million dollars for a gambling license," Mastriana said. "They came to me and offered me $100,000 to kill him."

He said he turned down the offer after he had been given a $2,500 check and $7,500 in cash in advance payment "because I couldn't have gotten off the island."

Appearing before the subcommittee under heavy guard, Mastriana also said President Nixon's friend, C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo, unknowingly approved a $115,000 check which Mastriana had obtained by selling stolen securities. But he said Rebozo "had no personal knowledge" of fraud when he approved the check at the Key Biscayne (Fla.) Bank, which Rebozo heads.

Subcommittee Chairman Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said his investigators planned to go to Portugal to try again to interview Roosevelt.

UNDER COURT ORDER

Pre-Kindergarten Program Studied

DEL RIO, Tex. (UPI) — Joe P. Brown, one of many South Texas school officials stunned by a court order requiring the schooling of pre-kindergarten disadvantaged children, now believes the program may be the vanguard of a whole new idea in education.

The program was ordered in 1971 by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice in a desegregation suit that combined the San Felipe and Del Rio school districts. The program began this fall with 300 4-year-old children and will include 3-year-olds at a later date.

"We didn't know anything about it until it was ordered," said Brown, assistant to the superintendent for special programs who is coordinating the development of the program.

"We were ordered to go into the program for 3 and 4-year-old disadvantaged children, eventually to be expanded to all children of that age group in the district."

Brown said there were preliminary problems — funding, developing a curriculum, finding qualified teachers — but he now believes the pilot program may lead to statewide certification of pre-kindergarten teachers.

The biggest problem in establishing the program was figuring out what to teach the kids.

The idea is to present them with a full curriculum — not rows of desks and everybody does what the teacher says type thing — but to provide them with a wealth of experience," Brown said.

"You know a 4-year-old kid has got the one thing that is the biggest ally a school has — curiosity. They're actually curious about everything. And we want to take that curiosity and take them on field trips. If we talk about turtles, we show the turtles."

"They raise hamsters. They raise their own beans. We have art activities for them. They're very active, although most of it to the untrained observer looks like they're playing. Every activity in there has a specific educational purpose behind it. And it is designed to develop a specific skill they will need to be successful in our traditional schools."

The children go to school five hours a day, four days a week.

The program is geared toward the disadvantaged Mexican-American child who, according to a study by the Southwest Development Laboratory in Austin, is already far behind the Anglo child when they enter the first grade.

The program is bilingual — Mexican-American children are taught Spanish.

A Kiwanian of the Year will be named and there will be special presentations by Jerry Davis of the Downtown Club and Ab Conway of the Top O' Texas Kiwanis Club.

Nixon Cancels Airport Plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon has canceled an appearance Saturday at the dedication of a new Dallas-Fort Worth, Tex. airport.

The White House said Tuesday that Nixon had planned to appear on the same platform with former Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who recently switched his party affiliation to become a Republican.

A spokesman said that Nixon decided against the trip because of "scheduling problems."

Peron Expects Election Win For President

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Juan Peron's own opinion poll predicts the former Argentine leader will get nearly two-thirds of the vote next Sunday in special elections for the presidency.

The poll published Tuesday said voters would give Peron 64.5 per cent of the vote and 33 per cent would go to three other candidates. It said 25 per cent of those asked had not made up their mind.

The poll was conducted by the Justicial Doctrine Institute, a branch of Peron's political movement, and was based on interviews with 427,789 people.

One of Peron's presidential opponents, however, said Monday he expected the election to end without a decisive majority, forcing a runoff.

"I believe there is a notable cross-over of voters which will mean the need for a second round," said Ricardo Balbin, head of the Radical party.

Peron's poll, however, reinforced predictions of most political observers, who viewed Peron's return to power as a near certainty.

Peron, 77, who served as president from 1946 until being ousted in a 1955 military coup, ended 18 years of exile in Spain last July and returned to Argentina.

From his home in exile outside Madrid, Peron engineered Hector J. Campora's victorious presidential race last March against the same opponents running in Sunday's special vote.

Campora resigned during the summer, saying he wanted Peron to run the government, and interim President Raul Lastiri called the new election.

Peron has not left his villa for the campaign trail, saying, "What are we going to campaign for if everything is going so well?"

His third wife, Isabel, Peron's vice presidential candidate and a former nightclub dancer, has barnstormed through the provinces and Buenos Aires in the last few weeks.

Woman Colonel To Gain Army Command Position

WUERZBURG, Germany (UPI) — Hey, sarge, the colonel is a lady. How'd ya like that?

"I think that's just great," Sgt. James Adams of Harlan, Ky., says. "I'm all for equal rights and it's time women get command of a post they are capable of commanding."

That's another. Then there's another: "I'd be willing to make a statement about one month after she's been here." Sgt. John A. Colcleasure of Comanche, Tex., says.

It's more than the eyes of Texas that will be sizing up Lt. Col. Nancy Hopfenspiger, 47, of Delmar, N.Y., when she takes command of the Wuerzburg U.S. Army Support District in a week.

Adams, an auto mechanic, and Colcleasure, an administrative specialist, are just two of the many men the colonel will lead in her Bavarian command.

The others include butchers, bakers, "happy-hour" cocktail makers, gruff motor pool sergeants and businesslike German staff assistants.

Col. Hopfenspiger's men run commissaries, post exchanges, servicemen's clubs and special services recreation activities, sports, motor pools and housing offices for a major portion of the U.S. Army troops in northern Bavaria.

"It's a pretty big job for anybody," said Col. Harry A. Heath, assistant chief of public affairs at the U.S. Army headquarters in Heidelberg.

"She's going to be one busy woman."

According to Washington reports of Col. Hopfenspiger's appointment, she will become the first woman to hold such a major Army command overseas. But she won't be the first female commander of men within the Army in West Germany.

Capt. Reba C. Taylor won that distinction when she assumed command of the 48th Postal Detachment in Mannheim, a much smaller command, earlier this year.

Col. Hopfenspiger will be based at Leighton Barracks in Wuerzburg with command of support facilities also in Wertheim and Kitzingen, spokesmen said. She is scheduled to arrive Sept. 26 and take command Sept. 27.

One Of Sextuplets Dies, Two Others Still Fighting

DENVER (UPI) — Julie Stanek, a 2-pound, 15-ounce infant sextuplet who vainly battled blood and breathing problems, died Tuesday night of a disease common to premature babies. The condition of her only sister and a brother worsened today but the health of the three other boys appeared improved.

Dr. Tibol Engel, the family obstetrician, said the parents were "saddened but very calm. Both have taken the news with calm and dignity."

Julia died of hyaline membrane disease, an inflammation of the membrane that lines the lungs and filters air into the bloodstream. The disease is the most common killer of children born prematurely. The child born to President and Mrs. John F. Kennedy while he was in the White House died of hyaline membrane disease.

Dr. Darrell Miller said Julia's sister, Catherine, was in fair to poor condition. She was placed in a respirator late Tuesday night. The only child with no name, a boy, also was in fair to poor condition and was receiving 100 per cent oxygen through a breathing apparatus.

Miller said John and Jeff are in good condition, "in fact, very fine. They are breathing on their own and receiving some of their mother's milk."

The fourth boy, Stephen, was in fair condition but improving, Miller said. "His oxygen requirement is decreasing."

Stephen, Catherine and the fourth boy also have hyaline membrane disease.

Julia's death ended the possibility, once considered excellent, that the Stanek sextuplets would be the first born in this century to survive. A hospital spokesman said the child's mother "seemed stoic" but attending physicians "were pretty shook up."

Julia's health began deteriorating around noon Tuesday and she died seven and a half hours later.

At 1 p.m., Dr. James Strain, the infant's pediatrician, announced the child's vital signs had become unsteady and a blood ailment had developed. She was given transfusions. She developed a severe breathing problem and had to be placed in a respirator, without which she was not able to breathe.

Senate Debates Pensions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate appeared near agreement today on a bill to protect pensions of average workers. But it was in disagreement on pensions of high-income doctors and lawyers.

No significant opposition developed in Tuesday's opening debate to the thrust of a pension reform bill. The measure would establish minimum federal standards for 200,000 company-operated pension plans which cover 38 million workers and require companies over the next 30 years to accumulate enough funds to meet pension obligations.

But Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., and a handful of liberals promised to fight a provision which they said creates a new tax loophole for the wealthy.

Existing law permits professional corporations, such as those set up by doctors and lawyers, to set aside any amount of tax-deductible income for pensions.

In retirement, when he is in a lower income tax bracket, the professional man who has incorporated himself then draws out the income, paying taxes on it then.

The bill would put a limit for the first time on how much these professional corporations can receive in tax-deductible funds. The limit is enough to finance pensions of no more than $75,000 a year for the retired professional.

Nelson said he would seek to limit the professionals' pensions to $45,000, denouncing the $75,000 level as "unconscionable."

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said he would oppose Nelson. He argued the wealthy are entitled to pensions which as a proportion of their income are no larger than the pensions of middle and low-income workers.

"Her blood oxygen level steadily decreased," Dr. Miller said. "The blood would not clot due to the low oxygen content and the poor flow through her body. One blood transfusion exchange was done early in the afternoon. A second was done later. Her heart rate steadily decreased and all resuscitation efforts were unsuccessful."

Residents Seek School Merger

ALANREED — Petitions have been presented and certified calling for the consolidation of the school district which includes Alanreed and a larger district which includes McLean.

A group of Donley County residents, whose children have been attending school in Alanreed, are attempting to move into the Clarendon school district.

A date for the election has not been set. A similar election held a year ago was narrowly defeated by the segment of Alanreed voters in Donley County.

This new attempt to consolidate the districts moved some of those in Donley County to investigate the possibility of getting into the Clarendon system.

If the proposal wins approval, the consolidated district will include parts of Gray, Wheeler and Collingsworth as well as the small part of Donley county.

If the portion of Donley is to be annexed by the Clarendon system, the county school boards in Gray and Donley will have to give their approval.

Science Today

By THOMAS G. BELDEN
UPI Space Writer
HOUSTON (UPI) — Two tiny spiders that stole the show aboard Skylab have demonstrated to scientists that animals may have little trouble working and living in space.

In an experiment proposed by a 17-year-old high school girl, the common cross spiders named Arabella and Anita built webs in the 15-inch square, three-inch deep glass cage in which they lived for weeks aboard the space station. Anita died Sunday, apparently because all she had to eat was bits of raw beefsteak that the astronauts fed her. The spiders had been fed a fly before launch July 28, and they had not been meant to live until splashdown. A show of public interest, however, prompted the astronauts to feed her what they felt was closest to their natural food. Arabella was doing fine.

Arabella was put into the cage first, and after a day of adapting, showed weightlessness wasn't going to stand in the way of doing what comes naturally to her. She spun a very regular looking web thereafter.

Anita got her chance a few weeks later, and after just two days of adapting to the strange new environment, also built a web she would have been proud of back home on Earth.

"One of the big questions was, would they be able to adapt to zero gravity," Dr. Raymond Gause, the experiment coordinator at the Marshall Space Flight Center, Huntsville, Ala., said in an interview. "I think they have demonstrated spiders are quite adaptable. This is really extremely significant because in one-g (gravity) a spider relies on gravity to a great extent."

Gause said some scientists were skeptical about Arabella and Anita being able to build the initial framework, part of the web that spiders don't destroy each night. Arabella showed they could.

"From an animal behavior and animal adaptability viewpoint, we have answered a big question," he said. "As far as I'm concerned, the experiment is what you would call a success right now. It was my contention if she could establish that framework and the first few radials, the rest of it would be duck soup for her."

Girl's Idea
Sending Arabella and Anita on the two-month Skylab mission was the idea of Judith Miles of Lexington, Mass. She has been studying spiders to learn more about animal behavior for several years, aided by researchers at the North Carolina Department of Mental Health.

Skylab science pilot Owen Garriott has been in charge of the experiment in orbit and he has had high praise for Judith's idea.

"She is to be congratulated for a very outstanding concept, a very interesting idea and one that might very well have some application in studies of how animals and even man think and behave when placed in a brand new environment," he told Mission Control.

Flunks Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A jet engine designed for the Air Force's new F15 fighter broke down after 13 hours and 16 minutes of a 150-hour endurance test, the Air Force said. But the test was resumed after replacement of a broken turbine blade.

It was the third attempt to put the Pratt Whitney Corp. engine through the required endurance test. Deputy Defense Secretary William Clements has set a Sept. 30 deadline for completion.

Failure to meet the deadline could mean problems for the entire F15 program. The plane is in production, and the Air Force has no other engine for it.

"CROCODILE TAMER" Yao Chareonsuk, 50, handles that 200-pounder quite casually at the Samut Prakan Crocodile and Alligator Farm 18 miles from Bangkok, Thailand capital. There are about 15,000 of the reptiles there, raised for leather. The farm is one of the world's largest.

Reporter Finds Physical Exercise 'Not So Easy'

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Physical fitness isn't all it's cracked up to be.

Especially if you're on the downhill side of 35, overweight, spend about eight hours a day punching a typewriter and aren't accustomed to lifting anything heavier than that bothersome paunch that materialized around your midsection over the years.

"This has got to end," I told myself. "There's no sense in being in this poor shape. If I don't do something, I'll never see 40."

My choices were (1) to cut down on my eating; or (2) to increase my exercise.

Recalling my penchant for food, especially the fattening kind, I mistakenly chose exercise. That proved to be a pain in the neck—and knee, and legs, and shoulders...

For two weeks, I got up at the crack of dawn, pulled on some jogging shorts, and drove a few blocks to a nearby high school track to begin the regimen of becoming a truly fine physical specimen.

By the end of the first week, the soreness in the leg muscles was about gone. But the spring that I remembered from a few years back—it was really almost 20 years now that I count it up—still wasn't there. In fact, slamming around the track on my heels—I never learned to run on my toes—produced some sharp pains in my upper hip, that just didn't go away.

So I came up with the perfect solution to get exercise without pain—a bicycle! One of those classy, 10-speed foreign jobs. Bike riding was always fun, and like they say, once you learn how you never forget it.

So on Saturday, I rolled the shiny $100 jewel into the garage, and announced to a somewhat skeptical wife that cycling had now replaced jogging. She said I should have used the money to buy some bookshelves she wanted for the house.

Even the neighborhood kids, who hadn't really shown a sadistic streak before, chortled at the prospect of seeing a faddish, bearded man climbing the neighborhood hills on a bike.

I turned it out of the garage for my first ride, and there they were. Lined up cavalry style, all mounted on bicycles, were eight boys from 8 to 15 years old, whispering "Here he comes, get ready!" and other such unkind remarks. They were waiting to escort me in their typical noisy fashion on my maiden voyage.

I couldn't take it.

I adjusted the seat on my machine, tested the brakes, and stalled, hoping they would get tired of their little game and I could slip away unnoticed.

They finally decided I was chicken, and turned their attention to something else and

I rode away with only a slight fanfare from the boys.

I toured several blocks in fine fashion, and made it back home without incident.

Then came the second day. I straddled that impossibly hard and pointed seat that 10-speed bikes are cursed with, pushed off down the hill of my front lawn toward the driveway. Instant humiliation.

My front wheel hit the edge of the driveway and turned crossways, spilling me and the bike down the rough concrete drive.

Right in front of my son and another laughing kid, I had crashed. I mean bad. Not only did it break my glasses, skin my knees and hands, and bruise a shoulder—it bent the wheel on my new exercise machine.

"Boy you shouldn't have done that," said my 11-year-old son, showing wisdom he could only have inherited from his father. I couldn't have agreed more.

The bike repairman, who wouldn't weigh 120 pounds soaking wet and couldn't possibly understand the tribulations of middle age, managed to straighten out the bent parts on the bicycle with hardly a smirk.

So now I can again peddle through the neighborhood. And this time the kids aren't so eager to spend their time chasing the old man around.

The shot put ball is made of iron and weighs 16 pounds.

By BRUCE MEYER
United Press International
Jim Seals and Dash Crofts are mellow country boys who have been playing music—country, rock 'n' roll, even jazz—since before Elvis Presley became a household word.

They have known each other for 21 years and have gone through a lot of changes since meeting at a college dance in Cisco, Tex.

"They were used to country western but they wanted it with a beat," says Seals. "We called it rock 'n' roll, but it was actually rockabilly—a cross between country and rock. Dash's band and the band that I was working with were both booked on the same night."

Seals and Crofts have been together just about ever since, playing just about every kind of popular music imaginable. But in the late '60s, the most important changes of all took place. They took up Baha'i faith—and they became a duo.

"We decided we didn't want to do it for money any more," says Seals, "just for enjoyment. So we sat down and started picking out our little mini-tunes in a back room in Los Angeles."

It didn't take long for them to be "discovered." Those mini-tunes were the beginnings of some of the best, happiest and most broadly-based music to appear in the '70s.

Gentle rockers
Seals and Crofts' singles are gentle rockers—"Hummingbird," "Summer Breeze," "Diamond Girl"—or, more accurately, a sort of cross between the urban folk sound and rock. You might call it "rockafolkie." The albums are far more diversified—with the country and jazz influences more apparent.

As for Baha'—it's a faith, a religion, but hardly a church in the traditional sense. And it has caused the most fundamental changes of all for Seals and Crofts.

Dash Crofts: "It (Baha') is what caused the melodic turn in our music, because we felt we could express words better in a melodic vehicle—melodic as opposed to hard rock. The faith gave us concepts to write about."

Although some of SC's tunes deal directly with Baha' themes ("Hummingbird," for example, which Seals describes as a "symbolic story about the prophet of the faith, Baha'u'llah"), their religious beliefs affect their music in a more subtle fashion. They do not want to be musical evangelists.

"I just consider us plain ordinary people who have come across something that we see is working," says Crofts. "We're doing our best not to make it appear that we're preaching."

Jim Seals and Dash Crofts are family men, both are married, both have infant children. And they seem far more at peace with themselves and their world than any other rock "stars" I have encountered. Yet they unquestionably produce some of the most innovative and polished music being made in 1973. Their most recent album, "Diamond Girl" (Warners BS2699), is a perfect example. What's more, they seem just to be hitting their stride.

Seals and Crofts are living proof that—sometimes, at least—nice guys finish first.

Dear Abby

Answers and advice for 'Empty Arms'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Empty Arms" moved me. [She was the mother who gave up her illegitimate child for adoption, and wondered if the ache would ever go away.]

My husband and I were childless until some incredibly kind and unselfish mother gave up her newborn baby, who an agency placed in our home. My husband and I are bursting with joy, and plan to raise this beautiful little girl in a home filled with love and happiness. When she starts to ask questions, I shall tell her about her wonderful, generous "other mother" who loved her so much she gave her up.

I only wish I could tell our "other mother" that I would have given anything in the world to have shared her burden during the pregnancy and the birth, and how eternally grateful I am for her enormous sacrifice.

Abby, please tell "Empty Arms" that, anonymous though she is, I love her with all my heart, and pray that her arms, like mine, will soon be overflowing. OVERFLOWING

DEAR ABBY: I, too, had "Empty Arms" when I gave up my fatherless child 13 years ago. But every year the ache grows more bearable.

I was only 16 then. But I kept my self-respect, went back to school, and worked my way thru college as a waitress.

I am now married to a prominent man in public life, and we have a wonderful family of our own. [Yes, he knew all about me, and it made no difference.] Every year on my first-born's birthday I suffer just a little, but I have no regrets because, in my heart, I know I made the right decision. Time heals. And so does love. BEEN THERE

DEAR ABBY: That "Empty Arms" letter hit me right between the eyes. How I envy her courage and good sense. When I was young and foolish, I thought I was in love and gave myself to a man who skipped town as soon as I told him I was pregnant.

In those days only the rich could afford abortions, so I had to bear a child I didn't want. I felt my baby would be better off if I gave him to a couple who really wanted a child, but my mother talked me out of it. She said God would punish me for giving up my own flesh and blood.

I had to work two jobs to make ends meet, so my mother, who was a widow, raised my son. He didn't turn out very good. In fact, he's serving time right now for armed robbery, but it's not all his fault. He never had a father's love and guidance.

I want to congratulate "Empty Arms" for doing what she did. I'm sorry I didn't give my son a better break in life. TOO LATE

DEAR ABBY: Tell "Empty Arms" for me that she can get over the ache of having given up her child, but it will take a lot of self-discipline.

I could have written that letter myself 15 years ago, and I confess, I read it thru tear-dimmed eyes. For the first few years, on "his" birthday I used to get smashed. Then with the help of my local Mental Health Clinic [which charged me only what I could afford to pay—and that wasn't much] I learned to forgive myself. I had a lot of growing up to do. But thank God, I made it, and "Empty Arms" can make it too, if she tries. God bless her!

ME, TOO

FESTIVAL LYE — Shown stirring a batch of old fashioned lye soap, which will be offered for sale at the Seventh Annual Arts and Crafts Festival, Oct. 13, 14, is Mrs. Audie Ragsdale. The event will be held in the M.K. Brown Civic Auditorium and is sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association.

Soap Making Will Be Featured At Festival

Audie Ragsdale has made old fashioned lye soap which she will offer for sale at the Seventh Annual Arts and Crafts Festival to be held Oct. 13, 14, in the Heritage Room of the M.K. Brown Civic Auditorium, under the sponsorship of the Pampa Fine Arts Association.

Soap making is becoming a very in - thing with ecology minded women of the Texas Panhandle. She saves bacon drippings, which she carefully strains and washes before beginning the actual process of soap making.

She uses the kitchen range instead of the old boiling pot in the back yard that pioneer Texas women used, but the results are the same, beautiful white soap that gets her granddaughter, Amy's, clothes spanking clean.

Mrs. Ragsdale, who will also have stuffed toys for sale, resides at 801 N. Dwight with her pharmacist husband, R.B. Ragsdale.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By United Press International

All home-canned low-acid foods should be brought quickly to a boil and boiled hard for 15 minutes before you even taste them. This method destroys any botulism toxin that may be present and unrecognizable.

Darkening of food at the top of a jar can be caused by oxidation due to air in the jars or by too little heating or processing to destroy enzymes. If pears, apples and peaches turn pink and blue, it's probably a chemical change in the fruits' coloring.

To retard oxidation — color changes — in canned fruit or vegetables, add ¼ teaspoon of powdered ascorbic acid, or Vitamin C, per quart before processing. Or use a commercial ascorbic acid mixture, following the manufacturer's directions.

DEADLINE FOR WEDDINGS — ENGAGEMENTS — Due to the number of summer weddings, the following deadlines and procedure on wedding stories is being announced. For a wedding story to appear in a Sunday edition, the information and picture must be turned in to the women's editor by 5 p.m. on the Monday BEFORE the wedding. All wedding stories submitted after that time will appear during the week. Engagement announcements must be submitted by 12 noon Wednesday to appear in Sunday's edition.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, SEPT. 20

Your birthday today: Providence, both divine and your own, characterizes your life thru this coming year. With prayerful meditation, you can remain calmly busy gathering in your rewards despite generally adverse circumstances and noisy times of dramatic events. Today's natives are gifted with personal industry, strong aptitudes for anticipating the future. Rare individuals use this vision for extremes of folly; most follow constructive courses.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Whatever your working base of operations, get on with a general housecleaning, the repairs and maintenance you've been putting off. Bring negotiations to conclusions.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Be positive, and be sure to keep the story simple. Give no more information on your plans than necessary. Even your critics are helpful, if only to see what you're up to!

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Business should be done early, laid aside as soon as possible. Accent is on social and romantic pursuits. Waste no time on people who mean little to you.

Cancer [June 21-July 21]: Your prospects improve with the passage of the hours. Reminders of past are numerous. The social scene is full of crosscurrents, everybody in pursuit of his own schemes.

Leo [July 22-Aug. 22]: Seek obscure or hidden business information. In family life, strive to have everything in the open for better understanding, cooperation. Later hours are for sharing good entertainment.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Be wary of stirring up legal affairs, official formalities. Invitations of rare sorts are possible; accept anything reasonable as learning opportunity. Social activities favored.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Settle for what you can get today; close out any losing operations; collect what is due you. Add something to your reserves or savings.

Later hours offer intellectual stimulus.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Be businesslike, thorough. Take on the most difficult chores first, tidy up in the later hours. Overtime is justified by the scope of opportunity to get things done.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Exploit old advantages, long-term contacts. Sell off possessions which have lost their place in your daily living. Dipping into savings should be a last resort.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Your opinions are not necessarily welcome, particularly where you have not been asked. Sports, travel for pleasure are heartily recommended. Business activities slow down.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Ordinary day-to-day dealings drag; remain good natured and patient. Sign nothing without full understanding of details. Social, romantic urges run stronger.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Temptation is to take things too easy today and let preparations lag. Be up and out early; clear off hanging routines. Get sound technical advice before signing agreements.

'NO NEED TO DISARM PEOPLE'

Retired Game Warden Believes In Gun Safety

By MICHAEL O. WESTER
NORMANGEE, Tex. (UPI)—In his 30 years as a Texas game warden, Seth Taylor has learned a lot about guns and the people who use them.
 "I'm all for gun safety, and believe it should be promoted," he said. "I don't think we should arm the public, but neither can we legislate guns away from the people."
 Taylor, 71, retired from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in 1967 after 30 years as a game warden—all spent in the Normangee area of south-central Texas. He worked for the state prison system as a guard for two years before moving to Normangee in 1935.

 "I never carried a gun on the streets during my 32 years of service, but I always had one when I was working in the field," he said. "I never had a serious accident, and I think the laws on guns are pretty good just like they are."

Handle A Gun
 Taylor, who was presented with a new pickup when he retired by land owners and hunters in his territory, said people should be taught how to handle a gun before being given one.
 "A man should be taught gun safety just like he is taught driver's education before he gets a driver's license," he said. "There is no need to disarm the people, and I don't believe we ever will in America—it has always been too much a part of our way of life from the early American frontier to the present."
 of life from the early American frontier to the present.
 Taylor said if guns were outlawed it would be just like the national prohibition era of the 1920s. He said when you tell people they cannot have something they are going to get it one way or another.
 "I have three shotguns, three rifles and three pistols," Taylor said. "I have had three or four other guns, but sold or traded them off. I certainly wouldn't want to give them up now."

Bill's heart belongs to his video co-star

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Bill Hayes, who plays the flashy singer in the soap opera "Days of Our Lives," is an unflashy vocalist off-screen with a new album on the market, "Bill Hayes, The Look of Love."
 The title is fitting for a couple of reasons.
 Hayes is more than somewhat agog over one of the show's co-stars, Susan Seaforth. He's also a loving father of five offspring, aged 17-25.
 For years Hayes was thought of as a singer, starring as vocalist on the old Sid Caesar "Show of Shows" for almost five years. He also earned a gold record for his rendition of "The Ballad of Davy Crockett."
 Now he has settled down to dramatic acting on the daytime show playing a man who is an ex-convict and smooth ladies' man. Bill lives in a six-bedroom house on a pleasant, unpretentious street in the San Fernando Valley. He knows little about decorations and furnished the place with the aid of Miss Seaforth and his daughter, Margaret, 17.
 He and his wife were divorced more than four years ago, after which Hayes moved from New York to Hollywood and purchased his present home.
 At the time most of his youngsters were living with him. Now there is only Margaret who attends a local high school. Son Tom is an undergraduate at DePauw University in Indiana where Bill was graduated. Two of his other offspring, Carrie, now 25 and married, and Bill Jr. also attended their father's alma mater. Another daughter, Kathy, lives in Michigan.
 There is always plenty of space for the Hayes children when they come to California. For that reason Bill maintains the large house.
 Heavy demands
 The demands of a daytime soap opera are heavy on the performers. Bill arises at 5:15 a.m. to prepare a sparse breakfast. It is about a 10-minute drive to NBC where rehearsals begin at 7 a.m.
 The cameras and tape machine roll early in the afternoon, and by 3 o'clock the cast is free for the rest of the day. But for Bill Hayes it means returning home to pore over the script and memorize dozens of lines of dialogue.
 Dinner is generally prepared by Margaret who has diligently applied herself to becoming a good cook after surviving several years of pizzas, frozen dinners and take-home chicken joints. On occasion, Bill broils steaks and bakes potatoes.
 Hayes has little enough time for sports or hobbies. On weekends, more often than not recently, he devotes himself to arranging music for his recordings and performances on the show.
 He relieves the work monotony by attending the theater—usually with "Miss Seaforth"—and going to motion pictures.

On the rare weekend when he can get away Bill is off to Tucson, Ariz., to visit his parents. Otherwise he concentrates on the painful task of committing his script to memory.
 One of the most enjoyable facets of his role in the series is buying the flamboyant wardrobe favored by the character he portrays. Bill's closets bulge with bright sports shirts, slacks and fancy leather and suede jackets.
 "My clothes represent a sizeable investment," Bill says, "and I have to pay for them. But I spent so many years wearing dark suits back east that I don't mind the bright colors. I love the change."
 Next summer Hayes will take his entire family to Europe for a vacation—and Miss Seaforth may go along too.

WAXING ELOQUENT, over tempting look-alikes a visitor to a San Francisco art gallery obviously has more than fine art in mind as she surveys a display of wax food sculpture. The fake ham, at the H. P. Corwith Gallery, is priced at $45, with the cheeses going for about $15—almost, but not quite, competitive with the real thing.

A Happy Pig

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—Meet Peter the Pig, the super swine who sold for $58.66 a pound and will shortly embark on a short, happy life as a breeder hog in Japan.
 The 375-pound pig sold for $22,000—and that wasn't even the record at the auction where Peter was proclaimed reserve champion boar last week in Austin, Minn.

An Iowa farmer sold his boar for $30,000 to a Japanese hog raiser.
 Peter will, if all goes well, sire about 24,000 piglets over the next five years.
 His previous owner, Michigan State University (MSU), is proud of Peter. He also is a success in another way. His sire, Mr. Real Repeater, sold for only $365.

Caribbean island is a bit of France

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor
FORT-DE-FRANCE, Martinique (UPI)—It's not true that when you've seen one Caribbean island you've seen them all.

There are differences. Take Martinique. This exotic island in the sun is as French as it could possibly be while separated by more than 4,000 miles from its mother country on the European continent.

There's good reason. The French tricolor has flown over the island — which was discovered in 1502 by Columbus — since 1635 except for three brief periods when it was ruled by Britain.

French is the official language although English is spoken in tourist spots and the islanders converse mainly in a Creole patois. The famed haute cuisine of France shares honors with delectable island dishes and modern miniskirts are as common as the traditional ankle-length petticoated gowns.

Most of the islanders are descended from French settlers, African slaves and East Indians brought in as indentured servants by plantation owners when slavery was abolished in the 1840s.

Empress Josephine, wife of Napoleon I, was born in Martinique and the women of the island still have a reputation for beauty.

I made my first visit in about five years to Martinique during the maiden Caribbean cruise of the Norwegian America Line's superb new liner M/S Vistafjord with other American travel writers and guests.

Gains

A late starter in the tourist competition, Martinique is making gains. New hotels, resorts and other facilities have been constructed to accommodate the increasing flow of visitors by air and sea.

There now are more than 30 hotels, inns and guest houses of various categories which can accommodate about 2,000 overnight guests. They include the 140-room Martinique Hilton, the 99-room Bakoua Beach and smaller hotels such as Le Lido, Anse Miton and Calalou.

Martinique is the site also of two resort villages different in ambience from each other: the 90-room family-style Latitude-Martiniue and the Club Mediterranee's Buccaneer's Club for swingers which can accommodate 600 persons.

We stopped at Bakoua Beach for a cold drink (it is reputed to have the finest dining on the island) and lunches at the Buccaneer's Club (an excellent buffet with all the wine you can drink) during a bus tour of the southern part of Martinique.

The tour also included a visit to the birthplace of Josephine at Trois-Islets across the bay from Fort-de-France. There's a ferry service. Only ruins of the de la Faguse family home remain but there is a small interesting museum which houses many mementos — including love letters, paintings, her childhood bed and a death mask of Napoleon.

Lack of time — the women wanted to shop — ruled out a revisit to St. Pierre, the "Pompeii of the New World," about 25 miles north of here.

It was the thriving capital of the island until Sunday, May 8, 1902 when Mt. Pelée erupted without warning. The entire city was destroyed and about 30,000 persons killed in three minutes.

A new city has risen on the ruins of the old but there's a museum which displays remnants of the day of death and destruction.

The shops and boutiques in Fort-de-France offer wide selections of the finest perfumes, crystal, china, wines, and other luxury goods from France and other countries.

For native handicrafts, including multi-colored embroidered tapestries, fancily-dressed dolls and other island specialties, try the Art Center on the waterfront.

Research Group Offers House Recommendations

AUSTIN (UPI) — A private research group hired to study ways to improve operations of the Texas House of Representatives proposed today sweeping changes in House procedures, including annual legislative sessions and higher pay for lawmakers.

The most significant of the 81 recommendations listed by the Citizens Conference on State Legislatures were items that cannot be enacted by the House — such as annual sessions, higher pay, authorizing the legislature to call itself into special sessions, and automatic "veto sessions" to consider bills vetoed by the governor.

All those items would require amendments to the state constitution and approval of Texas voters.

Would Boost Pay

The study recommended annual salaries for legislators be raised from $4,800 to $15,000 to $20,000. It also recommended that the 140-day time limit on legislative sessions be removed.

The conference proposed a complete rewriting and simplification of House rules, new rules outting news reporters from the House chamber during legislative sessions, more efficient use of electronic data processing for bill drafting, and revision of the House committee structure to give each member fewer committee assignments.

Larry Margolis, executive director of the Citizens Conference said the Texas House has already begun strengthening its operations under Speaker Price Daniel Jr.

"By removing the limitations which impede our legislature's effectiveness and changing established rules and procedures which are no longer suited for contemporary needs, legislative reform can be realized," Margolis said.

Seeks Top Coverage

He said the Citizens Conference studied methods for improving news media coverage of the House because "openness with the press and the public are at the heart of this extensive public education and information program."

PERSONAL FINANCE

Share the ride but not for profit

By Carlton Smith

Can a car pool be an insurance hazard, exposing drivers to liabilities not covered by their regular insurance?

The return of the school year has reactivated car pools by the thousands across the country. They can be great time and money savers, plus cutting down on air pollution by autos. And this year the gas shortages provide an added incentive to pool cars.

But can all these advantages be outweighed by the possibility of a crushing $10,000 or $50,000 personal injury lawsuit, uncovered by insurance?

That's a fear which makes many people reluctant to become involved in car pools. The Insurance Institute concedes — but the hazards can be eliminated by following a couple of simple rules.

The hazards, such as they are, and the rules to be followed apply equally, by the way, to car pools for school children and for commuting workers.

The driver of a privately owned car, used in a pool, is fully covered by the driver's (or owner's) regular auto insurance, says the Institute, except in one circumstance.

That's when the driver is making a profit on carrying pool riders. The catch is that a driver may be "operating a vehicle for profit" without even realize it.

If everyone contributes equally to providing the car of the day, and shares equally in the driving chores, there's no problem. There can be one, though, when one or more members of the pool don't drive, but pay a regular fee to those who do.

To avoid having your insurance invalidated because you were operating a vehicle for profit, you have to make certain that the fees received don't exceed your actual costs.

Cost, essentially, means gas and oil and general depreciation. That doesn't amount to much for a short trip of a mile or two, and a 50-cent fee could well throw you into the profit-making category — and throw your insurance out the window, if somebody wanted to get technical about it.

Trying to figure out precise operating costs for each car in the pool (no two alike, probably) can get pretty involved. "A simpler way for the non-sharing passengers to reimburse the pool members," suggests the Insurance Information Institute, "is to give a gift some time during the year to the drivers."

"This divorces the concept of 'fee' from the privilege of riding in a car pool, and leaves the insurance protection intact."

There is one other legitimate concern for a car pool driver, the institute adds. That's the amount of personal injury coverage that he or she has.

Liability coverage consists of two kinds. One protects you against court judgments (or insurance company settlements) resulting from personal injuries. The other gives you the same kind of protection in case of property damage caused by your car.

Having four or five passengers with you is not likely to increase the amount of property damage done, if you're involved in that kind of accident. But when personal injuries occur, your financial exposure can be multiplied by the number of passengers.

Envision, for example, jury awards of $50,000 to each of four passengers in your car. Would you be covered?

Increasing the limits of your liability coverage costs relatively little, and you might want to consider the institute's suggestion of $300,000-$500,000 for car pool drivers. That gives you coverage up to $300,000 for injuries suffered by any person, and $500,000 per accident — that is, for all passengers injured in one accident.

If you're not certain you know how to read and understand your auto policy, ask your agent what your "bodily injury" coverage is, and how much it would cost to increase it.

Steel Firms, Officials Plead No Contest

HOUSTON (UPI) — Four steel firms and three high-ranking officials have pleaded no contest to federal charges of conspiring to fix prices on steel reinforcing bars in the Houston area.

The pleas were entered in Judge James Noel's U.S. district court by Austin Steel Co., Inc. of Dallas and Royal Alexander, assistant vice president in sales; the Confederate Steel Corp. and Whitlow Steel Co., Inc., both of Houston and Ivan B. Nevill Jr., Whitlow vice president of fabricated sales; and Peden Industries Inc. of Reno, Nev., and Lewis Tubb, vice president, reinforcing steel division.

Noel ordered a presentencing investigation and set an Oct. 11 arraignment date for nine other steel firms and officers charged with price-fixing and conspiracy to monopolize trade.

Dripping faucet easy to fix

By Mr. Fix

Water that drips from a faucet unless the handle is turned tightly indicates a worn washer.

A rumbling, banging noise when you turn on a particular faucet indicates a loose or worn washer.

Water that oozes out from around the stem back of the handle indicates worn packing.

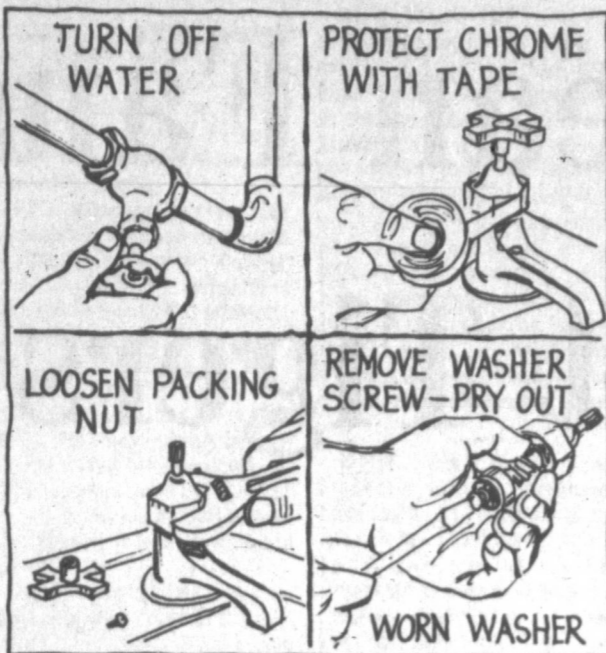

Taking care of these problems is not difficult. Call a plumber for the complicated plumbing problems. Washer and packing replacement are chores you can learn to handle yourself.

The tools are those you probably have around the house right now — adjustable wrench, screwdriver, possibly a pair of pliers. Replacement washers are inexpensive and you should keep spares on hand.

Don't wait until uncontrollable dripping starts before you replace a worn washer. Just as soon as it takes an unusual amount of pressure to close a faucet without having it drip is the time to make repairs. The tight closing and the worn washer will combine to make the faucet seat (the brass rim against which the washer closes) becomes rough and worn.

Washers are made of hard rubber or neoprene or similar materials. You can purchase a variety pack that has the most popular sizes plus a couple of brass screws. This is O.K. for starters. Once you know what size washer each faucet requires, buy them by size and have a few extra in each size.

Before you can begin any plumbing repairs you must turn off the water supply. Newer homes have a shutoff valve for every faucet. These will be below the faucet to be repaired or on the line leading to the faucet with the valve located in the basement.

Sometimes one valve will control several faucets. Lacking these you must turn off the main valve, which you will find where the main water line enters the house.

Most faucets are the compression type. They may look a little different from each other but they work the same.

A typical compression faucet is taken apart by loosening the cap nut with an adjustable wrench. This is done after first removing the handle which may be held on with a machine screw. With the nut off, twist out the long stem or spindle — to get a grip, put the handle back on without the screw. The washer is on the end of the spindle, held in place with a brass screw. Remove the screw and pry out the washer.

If the washer is beveled, install with the beveled side out. Replace the screw and tighten.

Faucets may look more complicated due to decoration. An ornamental chrome cap may have to be removed. Protect the cap with tape before putting a wrench on it.

That nut you removed is a packing nut. Examine it and you will see how it holds packing on the stem, often against another nut. If this is worn, replace. Packing comes in string form and is wrapped around the stem.

If dripping continues with a new washer, the brass seat is worn. An inexpensive tool, called a valve seat grinder, is used for smoothing the seat. This is set in the faucet and twisted gently against the seat to smooth it.

Court Decides IBM Conducted Antitrust Plans

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — For the first time, a smaller computer company has been successful in an antitrust suit filed against IBM, and computer analysts believe the long term effects of the decision could stagger the monolith of the industry.

"If IBM doesn't win its appeal this matter could be damn serious," Stover Babcock of the Dreyfus Fund said.

The immediate effects of Monday's $352.5 million decision in favor of Telex Corp., an Oklahoma-based computer company, was to send IBM's stock down $26 a share to $272 on the New York Stock Exchange. Telex shares nearly doubled, rising $3.38 to $7.63 a share.

U.S. District Court Judge A. Sherman Christensen, in a 217-page decision, granted a $352.5 million award to Telex and ordered IBM to halt its unit price tactics, which competitors claim forces customers to accept systems comprised entirely of IBM components.

IBM's unit price practices, Telex said, effectively shut out the market for their compatible units which can be used with IBM systems.

The loss was the first in court against IBM and industry spokesmen said the outcome could bring a deluge of similar suits by smaller peripheral data processing firms. But nothing will be known until the appeals are settled.

Susan Tyrrell complicates 'Zandy's Bride'

By DICK KLEINER

BIG SUR, Calif. — (NEA) — "Zandy's Bride," shooting on location here, is a love story set in the 1870s. There has to be complications to any love story and this one has several. One of them is Susan Tyrrell.

She plays a semi-Spanish girl who temporarily comes between Gene Hackman and Liv Ullmann. Susan is the brilliant young actress who won an Academy Award nomination last year as the blowy barfly in John Huston's "Fat City."

This isn't a big part but she wanted it. She wanted, mostly, to work with director Jan Troell. She says she saw his great film, "The Emigrants," and immediately sat down and wrote him a letter.

"It was the first letter like that I ever wrote," Susan says. "I said I'd lie down on the railroad tracks for him. A couple of weeks later I met him in Los Angeles. He'd seen 'Fat City' and said he'd like to work with me, too."

So it came to pass. She's playing a tramp here as she did in "Fat City," and that's the only thing she doesn't like.

"I don't want to be a tramp the rest of my life," she says. "I don't want to go to Europe. I don't want to make any more American films. They do heavier stuff there, a better level of awareness, especially for women."

SUSAN TYRRELL is a semi-Spanish complication for Liv Ullmann and Gene Hackman.

"I hate playing something less than I am. It's humiliating to play someone who is below me. I want to play someone who has a lot of colors to her."

There is much more to Susan Tyrrell than meets the eye — and there's plenty that meets the eye — and probably a lot more to her than meets the eye, too. She's a complicated woman, full of unexpected twists and turns.

You think you have her pegged as an ultrasophisticated, up-to-the-second sort.

"Drugs have shown us a lot of things," she says. "I think we're in a state of shock right now from what we did to ourselves — overdosing, hurting ourselves. But there's no doubt in my mind that the religious, the spiritual and the visual doors that they opened are there and you have to treat them with extraordinary respect."

"Drugs magnify where you are. If your head is a garbage can that's what gets magnified."

But there's the old-fashioned girl in her, too. She has a boat. She says she is happiest when she's on the water — "the land makes me sad."

And she talks about Disney and animation.

"I was a Walt Disney baby," she says. "All of us, the acid generation, were. I used to cry every time I'd see Dumbo. I believed everything. My father was an agent and he got all the drawings. I had 65 from 'Fantasia' in my room."

Now she writes songs. She sculpts. She acts. And, mostly, she lives.

McGovern Security Adviser Says He Was Paid As 'Spy'

MIAMI, Fla. (UPI) — A security adviser for Sen. George McGovern was paid by the Committee to Re-elect the President to spy on McGovern at his Miami Beach headquarters during the 1972 Democratic convention, the Miami News reported Tuesday.

The newspaper said that Michael B. McMinoway, a 27-year-old Republican, now working as an insurance agent in Louisville, Ky., admitted in a telephone interview he had worked as a double agent during the campaigns of Senators Edmund Muskie and Hubert Humphrey before he came to work in the McGovern camp.

McMinoway, who said he received as much as $6,000 including travel and other expenses from the Republican committee, has turned over information about his activities to the Senate Watergate committee and to special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, the News said.

McMinoway told the News he worked for the re-election committee from mid-March, 1972 through July 13, 1972, when the Democratic National Convention ended in Miami Beach.

Based on the trust and confidence developed toward him in the McGovern camp, McMinoway said he had complete access to secret strategy sessions in McGovern headquarters at the Doral Beach Hotel, according to the News.

Explaining that he left the reelection committee when he became suspicious that some of his contacts were involved in the Watergate affair, McMinoway said he never used any electronic equipment.

"I didn't need to," the paper quoted him as saying. "In most instances, I was privy to any information I needed... If I couldn't hear the information, I could ask for it and I'd get it."

The Dade County state attorney's office said it is investigating whether any illegal activity took place as part of the Doral spy operations.

The Woman's View

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — A cleaner air is up to you and me. There's plenty of legislation on the books to make the air safe to breathe—if the laws are enforced. But ultimately enforcement comes down to the matter of citizens as activists.

One summary of recent advances in the campaign for cleaner air says that if present laws are implemented fully and the deadline for compliances are met, the air should be safe—but hardly pristine—by the target dates of 1975-77.

Enforcement means changes in our lifestyles and values, higher prices for cars with auto emission controls, a few cents more per month for electricity, restrictions on what has been our almost unlimited right to drive wherever and whenever we wish, possible ban of private cars in city centers, and so on.

"What price are we willing to pay for the public good, for communities no longer cloaked in a shroud of pollutants, for our own health?" asks Marvin Zeldin, a Washington-based environmental consultant.

Zeldin is the author of "The Campaign for Cleaner Air", a new publication of the Public Affairs Committee, a New York-based nonprofit educational organization.

Zeldin says that the best available evidence shows that the cost of controlling air pollution is less than the cost of not controlling it, although "precise figures do not exist and perhaps never will."

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) estimates that air pollution takes $6.1 billion a year toll on human health in the form of sickness, lost time, medical bills, and premature death.

EPA also estimates that damage to crops and vegetation is $100 million a year; damage to materials at $4.7 billion, and damage to residential property, $5.2 billion yearly. The staggering total: around $16.1 billion a year.

Zeldin says that EPA and other research groups believe the estimates are conservative. Other studies have put the cost of air pollution at $200 a year per person in heavily polluted areas.

Projections indicate that if air pollution is not controlled, it will inflict direct costs of $25 billion a year by 1977 in damage to health, property, materials and vegetation.

But, says Zeldin, investing $10.85 billion a year to control air pollution will eliminate that $16.1 billion caused by it...we stand to gain financially as well as in other areas, in other words.

The writer says the federal Clean Air Act amendments of 1970 provided the "tools to reduce air pollution to levels considered safe for people and their environment." It also provides the machinery to cope with "emergencies" so that, for instance, another Donora, Pa., tragedy cannot occur.

It was in 1948 that Donora, with a population of 14,000, was wrapped for four days in a thick, black smog. Before the air was cleared by wind and rain, 20 persons were dead, and more than 5,900 had become ill.

What can we as individuals and groups do? Concerned citizens can participate in state hearings and action suits," says Zeldin.

He cites one specific organization in the Pittsburgh area — GASP. GASP stands for Group Against Smog and Pollution. GASP acts as a public watchdog, "campaigning for adequate funding to attract competent staff for air pollution control agencies, checking the control agency's operations and keeping the public informed of the success or failure of pollution control programs.

For as Zeldin points out, "ultimately, only we the people make the decisions."

WORRY CLINIC

Eileen's sex problem is more deep-seated than she realizes. Her husband claims it is her snoring! But that's a symptom of a more basic erotic dilemma. Once she solves that, he will be glad to leave the guest bedroom and come back to her.

CASE Y-521: Eileen G., aged 37, has a widespread sex problem.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "my husband has moved out of our bedroom and now sleeps in the guest room.

"For he says my snoring keeps him awake!

"But I didn't even know I snored!

"Yet he claims I sleep on my back and start buzzing loudly within 10 minutes after I go to bed.

"He is a nervous, jittery type, so he claims I am the main cause of his insomnia.

"Dr. Crane, I want him back in our double bed, so what can I do to stop my snoring?"

BOUDOIR PROBLEMS

Snoring is not likely to occur unless you are sleeping flat on your back.

So one quick remedy is to see that such buzz saw sleepers lie on their side or on their tummies.

But this is often difficult for obese people.

And Eileen is quite plump, having borne 4 babies each of which left her with almost 10 pounds extra weight.

"Eileen," I asked, "how much did you weigh when you reached the end of your first pregnancy?"

And she told me her original bridal weight of 125 pounds had zoomed to 145 by the time the first baby was born.

Now, even though she wasn't pregnant, her weight was 165. As a result, her bulging abdomen made it difficult for her to sleep on either side, since the extra blubber pulled on her internal organs and produced pain.

Obviously, too, she couldn't sleep face down, for that 40-pound protrusion felt as if she were lying across a big watermelon.

As a result, Eileen (and most people who are obese) tend to lie flat on their backs.

This permits the lower jaw to sag, so they breathe simultaneously through both their mouths and nostrils.

As a result, the soft palate (uvula) flaps back and forth when they inhale, thus making that buzz saw sound.

One ideal way to stop snoring is thus to diet till you can sleep on your abdomen or on either side.

Meanwhile, any elastic band that goes under your chin and over the top of your head will keep your lower jaw from sagging.

Pioneer New Englanders even sewed a prickly knot of wood on the back of their nightshirt, so when they started to roll over on their back, it would prick them painfully and warn them to sleep on either side.

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market is continuing to extend a base that has been forming since the sharp decline in the first half of the year. Standard & Poor's Outlook newsletter said. The Outlook, describing the decline last week as reaction to a temporarily overbought condition, placed significance on what it called little evidence of selling pressure in response to further tightening of monetary policy by the government and the hint of possible tax increases.

NEW YORK (UPI) — All evidence points to continued base building in the market, the Alexander Hamilton Institute, Inc., said in its weekly investment trends newsletter. "Higher stock prices (are) not too far down the line," the newsletter said. It attributed last week's market decline primarily to profit taking.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Dines Letter said its indicators "strongly suggest" the market will be down for the rest of September with little relief until October. The letter said the Dow Jones industrial average may probe the 800 level before Oct. 8.

U.S.S.R.'s Harsh Line Hurts Conference Aims

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst
The Soviet Union's harsh suppression of personal freedoms threatens the success of the European Security conference and creates problems for both the United States and Soviet governments.

The 35-nation security conference resumed work in Geneva Tuesday with new importance attached to Western demands that the Soviets lift the iron curtain against a freer flow of people and ideas.

The official hard-line Soviet attitude had been sounded in advance in the magazine Soviet Weekly. "The Soviet Union," it said, "favors contacts, exchanges, travel and dissemination of information, but on condition they are conducted in keeping with the national legislation, customs and tradition of the countries concerned."

Stops Jamming Voice
Only on this basis, it added, can accord be reached with the West.

Other events suggested the Kremlin had been surprised by the West's sharp reaction to the secret trial and conviction of two prominent Soviet dissidents and the unusually harsh press campaign it had organized against two others, author Alexander Solzhenitsyn and physicist Andrei D. Sakharov.

The sudden cessation of attacks against the latter two suggested that the Kremlin once more was going through a policy review.

Without explanation the Kremlin ceased jamming Voice of America broadcasts intended for listeners within the Soviet Union.

Washington also was having its problems. Weinberger Scolds Scientists
Administration silence suggested it regarded Soviet action against the dissidents as clearly an internal affair not to be related to attempts by both governments to move toward closer relations economically and culturally.

It went ahead with plans to have Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz lead a high-level delegation to Moscow in October to discuss new steps to widen trade relations between the two countries.

Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Caspar W.

Weinberger scolded American scientists for threatening to upset the scientific exchange program.

It did not, however, stop the flood of protests nor did it satisfy members of Congress who have it in their power to prevent the favored nation treatment necessary to increased sale of Russian goods in the United States.

Henry A. Kissinger, secretary of state-designate, rejected a suggestion that the United States had allowed the Soviets to believe it did not object to acts of repression. "We have signaled them exactly the opposite," he declared.

West European reaction was sharper.

West German foreign ministry officials openly suggested possible failure of the security conference. Sharp criticism came from the governments of Austria and Sweden. West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, with his sozialpolitik policies at stake, noted his own sympathy for "those who find themselves endangered because of their conviction."

NY Hoping For Another Miracle Year

UPI Sports Writer
The New York Mets may be dead, as even many of their best friends think, but they are refusing to lie down.

Still 2½ games out of first place in the National League Eastern Division race after Tuesday night's 6-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Mets are thinking in terms of their "Miracle Victory" of 1969.

And small wonder. Tuesday night they rallied for a great and possibly season-saving victory despite the fact that Manager Yogi Berra made two huge gambles. First, he brought in a rookie making his first big league appearance to protect a 6-4 lead in the ninth inning and, second, he challenged one of baseball's fundamental rules by walking the winning run onto base.

Berra got away with both gambles and the Mets are still in the race and dreaming that they can reproduce that miracle of 1969.

Trailing 4-1 going into the ninth, the Mets scored five runs with Don Hahn delivering a two-run single for the climactic blow. Then Berra, in an audacious move, brought in rookie Bob Apodaca to protect the lead. The rookie walked the first two batters in the ninth and Tug McGraw and Buzz Capra came on to relieve.

Stargell Key Hitter
Willie Stargell was the key hitter, stepping to the plate as the potential winning run if he homered, and Berra took another gamble that would have exposed him to the second guess: He ordered Willie intentionally walked, putting the winning run on base. Richie Zisk walked, filling the bases, before Manny Sanguillen flied out to end the game.

St. Louis defeated Montreal, 7-4. Chicago beat Philadelphia, 3-2, after a 5-2 loss. Cincinnati nipped Houston, 1-0. Los Angeles topped San Francisco, 3-1, and San Diego dined Atlanta, 9-4, in other National League games.

American League scores were Oakland 5 California 4, Texas 7 Chicago 2, Kansas City

4 Minnesota 3, Cleveland 6 Milwaukee 5 and Boston 4 New York 2.

Asked why he took a chance on the rookie from Tidewater, Berra answered, "Why shouldn't I use him... he saved 11 games in Tidewater."

Luis Melendez' three-run home off Balor Moore in the third inning paced the Cardinals over the Expos. Ted Sizemore started the third inning with a single and Ted Simmons also singled before Melendez hit his second homer of the season. Ken Singleton drove in his 98th run for the Expos.

Pitcher Tommy John's disputed single highlighted a three-run rally in the seventh inning that carried the Dodgers over San Francisco. The win kept the Dodgers 5½ games behind division-leading Cincinnati while San Francisco dropped to four games back of Los Angeles.

Bill Bonham pitched a four-hitter for his sixth win for the Cubs after the Phillies won the first game with the help of Greg Luzinski's 22nd homer.

Don Gullett pitched a four-hitter for his 10th straight win and raised his record to 18-8 for the Reds, whose magic number for clinching the NL West was reduced to six. Andy Kosco drove in the only run of the game with an eighth-inning single as Gullett fanned 11. Jerry Reuss was the hardluck loser.

Steve Arlin limited the Braves to five hits, including a single by Hank Aaron, to notch his 11th win for the Padres with the help of Clarence Gaston's 14th homer. Dusty Baker homered for the Braves in the ninth as Roric Harrison suffered his sixth loss against 10 wins. Aaron now has nine games in which to hit the three homers he needs to tie Babe Ruth's all-time career mark of 714.

defense and a late-starting offense, handed Coach Owens one of the most embarrassing defeats in his 16 seasons at the Huskie helm.

But a glowing Holmes called it "the biggest win ever for me."

A native of Wenatchee, Wash., Holmes was a coaching legend in high school and small college ranks of the Pacific Northwest before assuming command of the U.H. football program five years ago.

"This has to be the biggest win ever for me," Holmes said. "One of the biggest factors was the Huskies' inexperience. I'm glad we were able to meet them in their first game."

Owners Discussing Moving San Diego

CHICAGO (UPI) — National League club owners today discuss and perhaps vote on a proposal to sell the San Diego Padres to interests who would transfer the team to Washington for the 1974 season.

But a late show of interest by a group which would like to buy the team and move it to Seattle may have an influence which would prevent even a vote on the sale.

The Seattle group, headed by David Cohn, disclosed Tuesday that it had proposed to league President Chub Feeney it was interested in buying the Padres — should the league turn down the move to Washington.

Earlier it had been expected the sale to the Washington syndicate headed by Joe Danzansky, owner of a chain of food stores, would receive almost automatic approval.

But since some owners were known to be uncertain about returning major league baseball to Washington and some were interested in retaining the Padres on the West Coast, an expression of interest could be enough to kill quick approval.

Feeney confirmed that he had received a letter from the Seattle group and said that he would see all owners were aware of the Seattle interest before any vote was taken on sale and transfer to Washington.

"I don't know what our timetable is," he said, "but the owners will be aware of all facts before they vote. I've got a letter from the Seattle group to show the people."

Feeney said the league "has done our homework on the financial aspects of selling to the Danzansky group."

He also said a request by the city of San Diego for an injunction to prevent the move had been dismissed but that a suit for damages still is pending against the Padres and the league.

Match Loser Not To Be Pitied

HOUSTON (UPI) — Billie Jean King rested, Bobby Riggs rested and promoter Jerry Perenchio talked about money Tuesday.

"Don't feel sorry for the loser," Perenchio said, as if anybody had planned to in the first place. "The loser gets $100,000 in (film-television) rights. The winner will get $200,000."

All of that money will be also happens to be Riggs' business partner.

"He's not going to be Mark Spitz," said Perenchio of the 55-year-old Riggs in a bit of an understatement. "Spitz made about $5 million in endorsements after the Olympics. But if Bobby wins the match it will be worth about $2.5 million."

Perenchio talked about money Tuesday.

"Don't feel sorry for the loser," Perenchio said, as if anybody had planned to in the first place. "The loser gets $100,000 in (film-television) rights. The winner will get $200,000."

All of that money will be heaped on Riggs and King after they have at each other across the tennis net in a best of five set extravaganza Thursday night.

For the record $100,000 goes to the winner of the affair, set for 7 p.m. CDT in the Astrodom with 30,000 persons watching in person and quite a few more watching on national television.

And aside from the loot dragged in from the televising and filming of the match, there are all those juicy endorsements to be cashed in.

Owners Discussing Moving San Diego
CHICAGO (UPI) — National League club owners today discuss and perhaps vote on a proposal to sell the San Diego Padres to interests who would transfer the team to Washington for the 1974 season.

But a late show of interest by a group which would like to buy the team and move it to Seattle may have an influence which would prevent even a vote on the sale.

The Seattle group, headed by David Cohn, disclosed Tuesday that it had proposed to league President Chub Feeney it was interested in buying the Padres — should the league turn down the move to Washington.

Earlier it had been expected the sale to the Washington syndicate headed by Joe Danzansky, owner of a chain of food stores, would receive almost automatic approval.

But since some owners were known to be uncertain about returning major league baseball to Washington and some were interested in retaining the Padres on the West Coast, an expression of interest could be enough to kill quick approval.

Feeney confirmed that he had received a letter from the Seattle group and said that he would see all owners were aware of the Seattle interest before any vote was taken on sale and transfer to Washington.

"I don't know what our timetable is," he said, "but the owners will be aware of all facts before they vote. I've got a letter from the Seattle group to show the people."

Feeney said the league "has done our homework on the financial aspects of selling to the Danzansky group."

He also said a request by the city of San Diego for an injunction to prevent the move had been dismissed but that a suit for damages still is pending against the Padres and the league.

Acupuncture 'Works'

The mysteries of the ancient Oriental art of acupuncture are beginning to yield to pragmatic Occidental science.

Rather than involving the manipulation of some invisible "Qi energy" in the body beyond the ken of Western philosophy, or requiring a complicated "gate" theory of pain perception, acupuncture may really be another case of the well-known power of mind over matter — the power of suggestion.

Acupuncture "works." Too many competent observers have been to China to leave any doubt about that. According to two research psychologists, however, it may not be the insertion of the needles into the skin of the patient that relieves pain.

In an article in Human Behavior magazine, Drs. John F. Chaves and Theodore X. Barber of the Medfield Foundation in Medfield, Mass., say there are at least six other factors "that may offer a more realistic explanation of why acupuncture seems to work" than those heretofore advanced.

(1) Patients who are anxious, tense or frightened are not given acupuncture but a general anesthesia. Chinese surgeons screen out all but those patients who believe firmly in Mao's teachings.

(2) Patients picked for acupuncture receive several days of preoperative indoctrination. Emergency operations are usually done under conventional spinal techniques.

(3) In addition to the preoperative conditioning, the patient's belief that acupuncture will mitigate pain during surgery is continually bolstered by direct and indirect suggestions even during the operation itself.

(4) The acupuncture needles themselves often produce pain in the patient at the point of insertion and tend to distract him from the operation.

(5) Although popular accounts often neglect to state it, narcotic analgesics, local anesthetics and sedatives are often used when patients undergo surgery with acupuncture.

(6) The pain ordinarily ascribed in the West to major surgical operations may not be as great as is usually supposed. If a patient is relaxed and not anxious and if he can tolerate the initial incision through the skin, say Chaves and Barber, it appears that many major surgical procedures can be accomplished without much additional pain.

"It appears to us," they conclude, "that speculations about the physiological basis for acupuncture may be premature."

In other words, the "Chinese emperor" may not be wearing any clothes.

Traffic Safer, But Not Safe

The National Safety Council reports that the U.S. traffic death rate reached the lowest point in the nation's history during May, June and July.

NSC figures projected to the end of 1973 show a rate of 4.4 traffic deaths for every 100 million vehicle miles traveled. By comparison, the 1947 rate was 8.82 and the 1938 rate was 12.92 deaths per 100 million miles.

Yet here's the paradox: Because of the increase in the number of motor vehicles on the highways and the number of miles they are driven, even as the death rate goes down the absolute number of deaths continues to go up.

Traffic fatalities for the first six months of 1973 totaled 26,500 — the highest number ever recorded for the first half of any year in the history of the United States, says the council.

There's some bright news, however. During July, the last month for which figures are available, traffic deaths were 4 per cent below the July, 1972 figure.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The U.S. Bureau of the Census lists 267 Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas (SMSA's) which includes all urban areas with more than 50,000 persons. There are 34 SMSA's listed with more than 1,000,000 population, of which 15 had more than 2,000,000 persons. The World Almanac notes. The 1960 Census showed only 24 metropolitan areas with more than 1,000,000 persons.

"Hey, Judge Sirica, anytime you want to hear OUR tapes, just stop in."

Crossroads Report

Dear Editor:

I see where the Ervin Inquisitors and other get-Nixon people think it would expedite their crucifixion plans to get the tapes of the President's huddles with his "aides".

Which is par for the avid witch-hunters, who probably don't make tapes of their own strategy-hatching sessions.

And it shows how desperate they are for supporting dirt, that they would even hope Mr. Nixon was ever stupid enough to tape any talks that could embarrass him if they got into enemy hands.

I see where the U.S. Congress's tricky scheme to get pay raises for its members without them having to go on record as voting for same is triggering again.

This time their raise is only about 25 percent but their pay scale is getting so high it looks like we might save money by letting these jobs to the lowest bidders.

This would save considerable money, with no risk of getting poorer performance, which is already such that the only way it can get is better.

I see where another Senate Investigation is starting. This one is similar to the Ervin-chaired Watergate hunt for something to vaguely justify the verdict it has already found.

Chairman Jackson has already publicly condemned the people his committee is investigating, who he says made a profit out of the Russian wheat deal.

Judges and Senate investigators could save the country a lot of time and money if they would just announce their verdicts instead of messing around with witnesses and due process.

I see where there is still talk of amnesty for deserters and draft dodgers flushed out of the country by the Vietnam War.

And amnesty seems reasonable. These born chickens really should be thanked for running away before they got any buddies killed by turning tail during a battle.

Men born with physical defects like a clubfoot or a short leg are excused from military service, and so should a man born with some other physical defect such as a wet noodle spine.

My petulant postal patron neighbor says he notes that in some ways the post office folks handle the mail just as fast as they ever did.

Like bills, which the postaleers obviously rush through the works and get to him as speedily as ever, in spite of rain, snow, heat, etc.

But checks seem to take a little longer. Like a week or two. And enduring the dillyment and dalliment with his parcel post in recent years has been sort of like waiting for Congress to act, or Spring to come.

Considerable government personnel and money is used for checking up on whether business people are making false claims in their pitches for their products.

But there is no comparably dedicated and financed bureau to report on false advertising of their services by politicians.

We have a pretty good system by which car manufacturers, for example, can be made to recall and fix a faulty product, but faulty congressmen can do a lot of damage before they can be recalled.

BRUCE BIOSSAT Riches: a blessing and our handicap

By Bruce BioSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A score of times I've been away from mainland America, and nowadays I seldom return without feeling acutely that some intangible deficiency of spirit afflicts many Americans.

Probably everything I could say in the way of particulars has already been said, and some of it many times. Somehow it almost never gets put together in a fashion that helps explain Americans to themselves. I won't pretend more than a groping toward that goal.

This country's spaciousness and richness of resource have been both blessing and handicap. They have permitted wide, free movement of people and things, generally at living levels unmatched anywhere.

The luxurious mobility of an expanding frontier spelled fresh opportunity and an escape from discontents. Today that "frontier" lies in clustered suburban nebulae that seem to have incredible gravitational force.

Indeed, we've always had a "pull" so strong that, as long as we chose to allow it, millions streamed here from other lands to escape poverty, persecution, social and political rigidity.

Yet the handicap, for many, is that mobility fosters irresponsibility, and a sense of unaccountability. Today's stories of neglect of the poor and of intolerable conditions in prisons, welfare institutions and hospitals are new only in their details. In the headlong rush for the shifting main chance, many have not thought to care about those held immobile by hard circumstances or unadventurous spirit.

As varied immigrant strains struggled for a place in a social fabric stiffer than they had imagined, they viewed later newcomers with hostility and indifference. Many who fled "uncaring" societies in Europe came here and learned their own ways of not caring.

Freedom never has meant equality of circumstance, though its roots in our Constitution bear the oft-ignored brand "equality of opportunity." What we have found, however, is that our special kind of wide-swinging affluence has always graded too easily into selfish profligacy.

What I feel when I come back after an offshore visit is that I have returned to the land of the spoiled brat. In this land of openhearted people, often astonishingly generous, there are still too many of mean spirit who can never seem to get enough of anything.

They act as their homes should be warehouses of material goods. Helped by the sellers of things, they have taught the starving poor that affluence is not a balanced diet but a color television set.

In a nation founded in revulsion against extremes, we talk and practice extremity and overlook. We make politics into war, as Watergate shows dramatically. We assassinate leaders on soil dedicated to accommodation of purposes.

Monotony always has flawed

H. L. Hunt Writes

A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

The recent United States Supreme Court ruling on pornography is a step in the right direction, away from the moral permissiveness which has encouraged the widespread distribution of obscene material in our society.

The 5-4 decision has two important aspects which citizens should bear in mind in order to help put the ruling into effect in their own communities.

The justices overturned a 1957 ruling that material must be "utterly without redeeming social value" in order to be declared obscene. In practice this ruling meant that almost nothing could be outlawed. The new decision, instead, declares that the material may be ruled obscene if "taken as a whole," it "does not have serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value."

In addition, the Court ruled that material should be judged by local community standards of decency. In the past, the justices had held that national standards should be applied. This meant that if something was accepted anywhere in the country, then it could be sold even in areas where the community would emphatically reject it. This aspect of the ruling rightly gives more weight to the judgments of individual communities throughout the United States, where common sense, decency and moral values still prevail.

Chief Justice Burger pointed out that those who wanted no controls on pornography demeaned the First Amendment by equating "the free and robust exchange of ideas and political debate with commercial exploitation of obscene material." "Hunt" will pornographers be able so easily to hide behind the Constitution. Citizens throughout the country will welcome this decision.

Your Health

When A Smoker Quits

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Is it true when you give up smoking your metabolism changes and your weight increases automatically?

After almost 30 years of two packs a day, health forced me to stop smoking. I find my weight has been increasing while my food intake has not. Is this possible?

Dear Reader — There are some changes in metabolism when people quit smoking. The amount of change depends on how heavy a smoker they have been. Nicotine is a poison. Just stopping the poison means that the body functions more efficiently.

The change in weight associated with the change in the metabolism after stopping smoking is minimal. More often people gain weight because they start eating more; the eating replaces their smoking habit.

The other reason for gaining weight is simply a lack of physical activity. In some people nicotine stimulates a certain amount of nervous energy and this contributes to activity. This may not be noticeable at first. The hands are constantly moving and multiple small movements go on all day long using enormous amounts of energy. The quieter person will have relaxed muscles and use less energy.

In general I think it is wise for a person who stops smoking to make an effort not to gain weight. This means be extra careful about calories, avoid too much rich food, and at the same time start increasing the physical activity some to counteract the expected gain.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Can you answer my question? A person gets down on his hands and knees and starts breathing rapidly and heavily, perhaps 20 to 30 times. Then he stands up quickly while taking a deep breath and holds it as long as he can while another person grabs him around the chest and squeezes until the person passes out. The person then twitches like he was cold or nervous, and it takes him at least 10 seconds to wake up. When the person wakes up he sometimes does not know where he is and does not know how long he was out.

I would like to know how he gets knocked out and what effects this might have on a person. Is it dangerous?

Dear Reader — You are describing the "fainting lark." It is a childhood prank, but it is not safe. I have studied this problem extensively and found, to my surprise, that breath-holding can cause the heart to stop markedly or even stop. Powerful reflexes associated with breath-holding slow or stop the heart's normal beating mechanism.

When a person faints after this maneuver it's because the brain is not getting any blood. This can happen because the heart stops or because the squeezing on the chest during deep inspiration prevents blood from returning to the heart.

Inside Washington

Agency Raking Fat Fees For Watergate Committee

By Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — There is a distinct self-serving aspect to those zealous avowals by Senate Watergate investigators of the "people's right to know."

It's paying off handsomely for them — politically and financially.

Monetarily, they are raking in big fees on the lecture circuit — with a prominent agent busily drumming up engagements for them.

He is Harry Walker of New York who has a large stable of "distinguished platform personalities." Foremost among them are Watergate probes — notably Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., chairman, and Howard Baker, R-Tenn., vice chairman.

Also under Walker's "exclusive management" are chief counsel Samuel Dash and chief minority counsel Fred Thompson.

In a recent widely circulated solicitation, Walker glowingly spouts:

"I had a most exciting dinner meeting with Sen. Howard Baker in Washington the other day, and of all the world-renowned people I represent, I found him to be the most unusual, articulate and charming individual, and I am proud to have him under exclusive management."

"Although Sen. Baker is extremely limited in availability, I am happy that he has taken on quite a few important engagements between now and the first of the year, including the American Society of Association Executives."

"We are also in a position to offer you Sen. Sam Ervin, Sen. Edward Gurney, Sen. Daniel Inouye, and we have been assured by Sen. Lowell Weicker that he will be available as well."

"In addition, we are proud to inform you that Samuel Dash, chief counsel, and Fred Thompson, chief minority counsel of the Senate Select Committee on the Watergate case, are under our exclusive management."

"The entire Watergate hearings have opened up so many controversial and explosive subjects which the American people want to hear about that we are sure your association will want to engage one of these speakers in order for you to be assured of a capacity turnout for your meetings."

"Please call me collect as soon as you are ready to discuss booking one of these speakers for your next meeting. I look forward to hearing from you."

No fees are mentioned by Walker. Reputedly, the minimum "going rate" is $2,500.

The Wind-Up

Although the investigation is still far from completed, the seven committee members and their staffs already are pondering the thorny problem of reporting their findings.

This is supposed to be done by next Feb. 1.

Still to be decided is whether there will be one overall report, or a series of reports on the various aspects of the probe.

Tentatively, one agreement has been reached: hopefully, the report or reports will be bipartisan.

Whether this goal will survive the personal and political strains and stresses of the coming months, only time will tell.

So far, there have only been a few backstage clashes — all minor.

In one instance, Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., voiced sharp disapproval of the brusque manner in which Terry Lenzer, assistant Democratic counsel, grilled a witness. Talmadge maintained Lenzer's harshness was unnecessary — and was supported on that by another committee member.

Actual writing of the committee's findings will be done by the staff, under the supervision of Dash and Thompson. It would be quite a feat if a document could be compiled acceptable to all of the seven committee members.

Slapdown

As long-time chairman of the prestigious Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., takes himself very seriously. A Rhodes scholar and one-time college president, he speaks often and sonorously about international and related affairs.

This pose goes over big in some quarters — particularly among Eastern leftist editorial writers, whom he assiduously cultivates.

But significantly, Fulbright's colleagues are decidedly not impressed.

For some time, they have been slapping him down sharply and occasionally jarringly. Latest instance of this was the little-noticed rough spanking he got in trying to scuttle the bill to authorize continued federal financing of the Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty programs.

Testily, Fulbright assailed the measure as "simply a remnant of the cold war." He contended the two programs should be made part of the Voice of America.

In two roll-call votes, the Senate smartingly rebuffed him.

Fulbright's motion to recommit the bill to the Foreign Relations Committee drew caustic fire from Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who in effect charged Fulbright with talking through his hat.

"Anyone who says there is no broadcast coming from the Soviet Union or from iron-curtain countries," snapped Goldwater, "just doesn't understand the subject. The iron-curtain countries pretty well dominate the frequency conventions that are held at various times, one of which we fear is soon to come up. The Communists control the allocation of frequencies, and the plain fact is we are losing in this field."

"For this body to arbitrarily give up a powerful weapon against slavery is impossible for me to understand. I listen to Radio Moscow and to broadcasts from other iron-curtain countries, and I can tell you that they are not only urging the oil-producing countries not to do business with us, but they are denying freedom of communications to the people in their own country."

"I certainly hope we defeat this motion."

The Senate promptly and decisively did just that — rejecting Fulbright's move 69 to 17.

The daughter of a friend just started driving and it's really a thrill to see her park the fine family car in the carport. Of course, before she started driving it was a garage!

Good news
NEW YORK (UPI)— Fifty-one colleges and universities in comparative sampling used in a special study each year reports a total of $476 million in gifts and grants for 1971-72. The figure does not include bequests.
Brakley, John Price Jones Inc., fund-raising counsel, made the report. The agency said the figure is up 10.7 percent from the previous year. Including bequests, the schools in the sampling received $587 million. That is the second highest total ever recorded for the institutions, but it was 1.8 percent less than last year. Bequests show wide fluctuations from year to year, according to the agency.

NEW YORK (UPI)— Are you a flabby American who's too busy to exercise? If so, why not try out some short cuts from Dr. Margaret Kenrick, chairman of the physical medicine and rehabilitation department at Georgetown University.
Her shortcuts include: walking up steps instead of taking the elevator, parking your car farther away from entrances, walking rapidly to offices instead of using the intercom, taking longer sweeps with the vacuum cleaner, and while sitting at your desk, stretching your neck and legs.

Great Thaw
During the Ice Age, the greatest advance of ice sheets covered one-tenth of the earth's surface, or about 19.6 million square miles. Ice sheets now cover about 6 million square miles.

Busing Debates Founded On Ignorance, Ambiguity

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
WASHINGTON (UPI)—With another school year started and more children than ever being bused to achieve desegregation, renewed public and congressional debate has been kindled over this controversial subject.

Much of the debate comes within a framework of public ignorance and academic ambiguity. Pollsters have frequently measured the public's opinions about busing. The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights has attempted to find out something else—how much knowledge lay behind opinions.

Marvin Wall of the commission says the 35-page report on the survey represents "the most comprehensive poll yet conducted on explosive and sometimes complex busing issues."

Public Not Informed
Both the knowledge and views of 2,006 American adults were collected. Six true and false questions were asked about important aspects of the issue and then matched up with opinions about busing.

Writing in The Civil Rights Digest, Wall said the poll showed 41 per cent of the public is so poorly informed that it missed all of the questions or got only one right. About the same ratio (42 per cent) got only two or three correct. Only 16 per cent "were well enough informed to answer more than half the questions correctly."

The questions dealt with the number of children being bused, educational impact of desegregation, busing over school district lines, safety of busing as opposed to walking, costs of busing and whether the Supreme Court ordered busing "in spite of evidence" that it would harm a child's ability to learn.

According to the survey, the public's worst score was on the question of the cost of busing: "By a whopping 6 to 1 margin, those answering thought that busing to desegregate causes a jump of one fourth or more in a school district's budget."

Safety Score High
(On a nationwide scale, the costs of all forms of pupil transportation was 3.5 per cent of school budgets for the 1969-70 school year.)

The best score came on the question of safety, in part because of people in rural areas with a long history of riding the yellow school bus knew that busing was safer than walking.

Thirty-five per cent of those interviewed recognized as false the assertion that white students' test scores had fallen sharply in desegregated schools. "Although many white parents believe that desegregation adversely affects the scholastic achievement of their children, study after study has established that no such damage occurs," Wall said.

Gary Orfield, scholar in residence at the commission, wrote in the same issue of the Digest that "the most basic problem" with social science academic research on busing and education is "its narrow focus on the short-term impact of desegregation on cognitive achievement" for the black or minority pupil entering the desegregated learning situation.

Noting that proponents of desegregation hoped after the 1954 school desegregation decision that achievement differences between black and white pupils would be ended, Orfield wrote:

"We know now that substantial differences remain between middle class white children and poor white, black, Chicano and Indian children, even when they learn in integrated classrooms. The gaps in test scores remain large and serious."

The Almanac

By United Press International
Today is Wednesday, Sept. 19, the 262nd day of 1973 with 103 to follow:

The moon is in its last quarter.

The morning stars are Mars and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Virgo.

English illustrator and watercolorist Arthur Rackham was born Sept. 19, 1867.

On this day in history:

In 1777, American soldiers won the first battle of Saratoga, N.Y., in the Revolutionary War.

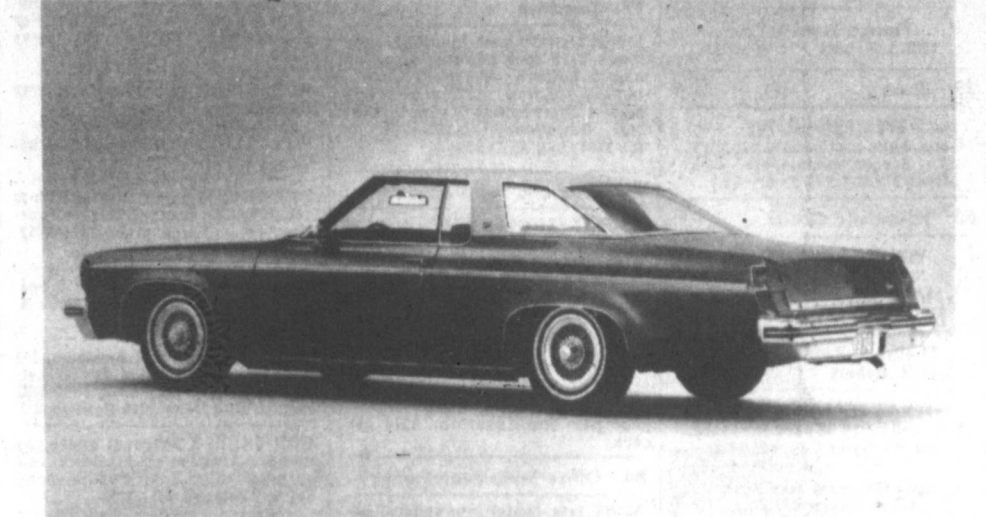

In 1863, Union and Confederate soldiers met in the battle of Chickamauga, Ga., during the Civil War. The rebels won the following day.

In 1960, Cuban Premier Fidel Castro and his staff were ousted from a New York City hotel because they had been discovered plucking chickens to be cooked in their rooms. The Cubans were in New York to attend a United Nations meeting.

Homes Plan afoot to make lawn care a cinch

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS
NEW YORK (UPI) — If ever you've threatened to pave your lawn with green cement, hold off! By 1980, you may be able to put your lawn mower in mothballs and hang up your pruning shears as a thing of the past.

Research programs now under way indicate that by the end of the decade, homeowners will be planting new varieties of grass that will grow only to a specified height and then stop — thus eliminating the need for mowing, says Joseph P. Sullivan, president of Estech, Inc., the chemicals and industrial products division of Esmark, Inc., Chicago.

Along with limited growth grass, Sullivan says, there are other developments in the offing that will make caring for a lawn much easier and less time consuming. Among them: — Ornamental and shrub growth retardants that will eliminate the need for constant trimming.

— Grass seed and fertilizer combined in pellets to make the planting of a new lawn or the reseeded of an existing yard a one-step job.

— Sprinkler systems that automatically dispense fertilizer and weed killers as needed during an entire spring and summer growing season.

— Long-lasting fertilizers that will work for two years or longer once they are placed on a lawn.

— Special packages that will be used to dispense grass seed and fertilizer and then discarded, doing away with the need for a spreader.

The outlook
The outlook for change in the home gardening field is underscored, Sullivan said, by growing concern for the environment and the increasing amount of leisure time. More and more, he said, reports indicate the "green thumb" pastime is catching on as a form of relaxation.

The burgeoning demand for more efficient land use and rising costs will result in many cases in smaller home grounds and lawns, but homeowners will want to use what land is available to the fullest extent. For the lawn of the future, Sullivan said, several universities are experimenting with a new product developed by Estech to solve some of the problems of proper and regular lawn fertilization.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — It turns out the pessimists who were lamenting that most of the steam had gone out of the drive for social reform in this country couldn't have been more wrong.

Last Sunday, in this and certain other cities, we saw dramatic proof that the American system can still respond with corrective action when injustices appear.

We saw the kindly hand of Uncle Sam reaching out and lifting the yoke of television blackouts from the necks of oppressed fans unable to get tickets to National Football League home games.

Enactment of the antiblackout legislation was more than a signal victory for the downtrodden masses of ticketless rooters. It was a cause for rejoicing for citizens everywhere who cherish civil rights.

One Must Understand
To appreciate its significance one must understand that season tickets in cities where NFL games were sellouts had become symbolic of the class struggle in America.

You could see the poor devils on any given Sunday when the Washington Redskins were playing at home—miserable wretches huddled outside the gates of RFK Stadium, begging to buy extra tickets.

They were a pitiable sight for they had nothing to offer for the tickets except huge sums of devalued American currency. It was pathetic.

Pathetic and also disturbing to anyone willing to consider the broader implications. As Lincoln warned in another context, no nation can long endure half with tickets and half without.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle refused to recognize that revolt was fomenting. Told that some of the people were unable to buy tickets, Rozelle replied: "Well, let them watch volleyball."

Congress, fortunately, was more compassionate and lifted the blackout before the mobs began forming.

Attendance Would Drop
Rozelle claimed that telecasting home games would cause stadium attendance to drop. His explanation being that many fans prefer to watch football on the tube.

It is more likely, however, that attendance will drop for another reason, namely the loss of the aura of exclusiveness that comes with belonging to the ticketed elite.

By enabling the ticketless rabble to see home games on television, Congress has stripped pro football of much of its status symbolism and snob appeal.

"The biggest thrill in going to the games was the realization that you were part of a privileged few who could get seats," one ticket-holder told me.

"Now that just anyone can see a Redskins home game by merely turning on the TV, football isn't fun any longer."

I guess you can't blame season ticket-holders for being ticketed off about the sudden depreciation of their possessions. But in class warfare, someone always gets hurt.

Highway Patrol Gives Figures For Accidents

The Texas Highway Patrol investigated 25 accidents on rural highways in Gray County during the month of August according to Sergeant Dave Womack, Highway Patrol supervisor of this area.

These crashes resulted in no persons killed and 15 persons injured.

The rural traffic accident summary for this county during the first eight months of 1973 shows a total of 155 accidents resulting in 12 persons killed and 83 persons injured.

The rural traffic accident summary for the 60 counties of the Lubbock Department of Public Safety Region for August, 1973 shows a total of 586 accidents resulting in 24 persons killed and 328 persons injured as compared to August, 1972, with 593 accidents resulting in 28 persons killed and 359 persons injured.

This was seven less accidents, four less fatalities and 31 less injured in 1973 at the same period of time.

The 24 traffic deaths for the month of August, 1973, occurred in the following counties: Montague, four; Armstrong, Castro, Dallam, Swisher, Baylor, Clay, Wise counties, two each; and Deaf Smith, Donley, Parmer, Haskell, Lubbock and Lynn counties, one each.

In certain situations the suit preference signal is likely to be effective when a shift to the higher suit is desired.

West opens the king of diamonds against South's four-spade contract.

East sees that if West shifts to a heart at trick two, then eventually East will be able to give him a heart ruff for the fourth defensive trick.

He plays his queen of diamonds! Normally this would ask partner to continue diamonds

Come see the '74 Oldsmobiles.

"But dad, all you said was that Cutlass Salon had reclining seats. You didn't say it came in a new coupe, too."

Last year Cutlass Salon was a new kind of American car—a sedan built for its roadability. This year there's a Salon two-door coupe. Like the sedan, it has a new, lower steering ratio for quicker response. Steel-belted radial tires to grip the road. Special suspension for tight cornering.

Contoured seats that recline. And you can even order a Landau roof. Cutlass Salon. Built in the Grand Touring Tradition.

"Look Walter! Now we can get an air conditioner that filters smells."

Not only does Tempmatic regulate temperature inside your car to a preset level, it also charcoal filters the air. The filter acts to reduce many offensive odors from the air entering the car. It's available on all full-size Oldsmobiles. The '74 Delta 88 coupe has a brand new roofline. Hydraulic bumper systems, front and rear. And underneath—a suspension system that's as tough as ever. Olds Delta 88. It's really put together. More than just another pretty car.

"Hey! I didn't know we could get these new little windows in the Toronado."

Order a Toronado with an opera roof and you get opera windows and a padded canopy of ozen-grain vinyl. You can also order a new interior with rich velour upholstery, a high-energy ignition system, and True-Track braking. The 1974 Toronado has a new instrument panel with a message center that lights up to warn you when certain things such as your gas, oil pressure, seat belts, etc., require your attention; there's even an exceptionally accurate digital clock, with quartz-crystal controlled movement. Front-wheel drive Toronado. Engineering can be beautiful.
