should There's something endearing about a patient listener. Give me a man who'll listen to me talk about Megan, and you can have the sort of man who'll jump in an icy creek to save your life, or give you a push when your car is stalled.

Best of all — a man to clasp to your bosom and hold close — "is the one who not only listens, bu who now and then drops in leading questions that enable you go on and on. And who says, "Ise me see those pictures again. They're about the cutest things ever saw.

At the opposite end of the Polis the man who not only interrups your talk of your baby, but tops yours with stories of his own boy

If your baby crawled at fou months, his was scooting all over the place at three months. If ours said "Da-da" at six; his was putting whole sentences together together at five. If yours has curls, his has so many curls they keep springing his cap right of

It's amazing how thoroughly you this type. You feel amost like swatting him on the jaw and say ing, "Shut up, you braggart. I've heard enough about your wonder

I wish I had a parrot to talk ! about Megan. I'd teach him to "Tell me more! Tell me that the parrot would reach under his feathers and pull out a picture of a fledgling in a cage and say "You ain't seen nothin' yet. Said 'crackers' when he was two days
