It reminded me very much of the ideologies of Herbert Spencer in "Man Versus State" and Albert J. Knox's book on "Our

This is ing their caps in the air, simply budget this time, why does he the way Elenjimittam expresses because President Eisenhower an- hedge his bet by urging a renewed it:

> "A little reflection on the revolutions of modern times, notably the Russian, Chinese, Fascist, Nazi and Falangist revolutions, will convince anyone that the concentrated power of states is the result of corresponding depletion in social values and social achievements. A State whether capitalist or communist, can only thrive at the expense of society. State power and social values today stand at antipodes. State and society today stand at daggers drawn. Victory of statism means defeat of society; victory of society means defeat of statism.

"Society produces wealth; the State exploits it, robs it, exprobest advantage of the state officials and their proteges and cliques. Society produces wealth th ough sheer dint of labor, literally through the sweat of its brow. But the State takes all its wealth through a mere taxation policy or legislative act. The State gets all it wants through a mellifluous speech in the parliament or by signing of a decree on paper. But the citizen, the social man, owns nothing which he himself has not produced through his industry, labour or intelligence.

"It is productivity that gives power to society. But it is money raised through taxation that gives power to the state. Society is natural to man. Social order flows logically and naturally from the very make-up of man who, biologically, psychologically and ethically finds his fulfilment in association with fellow-humans. But the State, at its best, is nothing but a badge of man's lost innocence, a necessary evil tolerated for the sole purpose of securing freedom and security to the common man. The State has no power except what the Society has given it. A limited government of the State, in the fallen nature of man, seems necessary.

"There is economic strangulation going on in modern states, making society bleed to death. If a poor man opens a tea shop, the State must be informed, complicated forms filled in, and government dues to be paid. Even a simple charitable work of helping the destitute must give dividends to the government. Government is not the State; but the government bosses and officials often fancy and act as though they were the State. The saying of Louis XIV, 'I' etat e' est moi-'I am the State,' is borne out today even in professedly and nominally republican and democratic governments. The Republic is a mere name; it is monocracy that prevails in the place of old monarchy and hereditary feudal rule. Governments become a kind of personal property of the big bosses. The heads of governments, through the means of the machinery of propaganda and advertisements, can depict as white what is objectively black, and as good what is fast becoming an intolerable burden, reducing citizens into slaves of the state, reducing society into a tool of the state to gain enough money and power for the realizations of their machinations. As James every contingency into a resource for accumulating force for the government.' Poverty, misfortunes and ills of society are all capitalizen by state governments to tax the people to the extreme limits. The State grows stronger, but society grows paler, weaker and

Looking Sideways

By WHITNE" BOLTON

NEW YORK-The other night a new musical comedy called "Redhead" opened at the 46th Street Theater adjacent to Broadway and it proved once and for all that a gleaming, talent-laden young woman named Gwen Verdon is without doubt not only the brightest star that has come along in years but also the most indestructible. The show is about three hours long, a charged, frantic, fast-paced Verdon is on stage in it for all but about three minutes and ten seconds. She sings, dances, acts, fortlessness and when the final gains. curtain starts to fall she seems as fresh and bouncy as when it all began three hours earlier.

The next night, in a restaurant next door to this theater, three wearied old chromos named George Solotaire, Joe DiMaggio and Your Reporter were slowly and deliberately going about the dual business of having a quiet dinner and low pulse-rate conversation when Miss Verdon, a matinee just behind her and an evening performance yet to give, sailed in. Instead of creeping in as steady and eyes open and alert.

"As an athlete for some time," the people's right to know. said Giuseppi DiMaggio, the San Francisco Flash, "I can say that I don't believe any human being can do what she does and if she does, can keep it up for more than a week. It just isn't in the cards - or the muscles."

"I am sorry to hear you speak this way," said Georgie S., "because this show not only has an exactly one million dollar advance sale, but is booked solid for about 47 weeks ahead, which means that with window sales 'Redhead' will be going for almost two years. This means that for one year and fifty-one weeks to come a lot of people are going to be disappointed. Bitterly, Also, although I cannot argue with a demonstrated athlete of enormous prowess, I think this girl will still be in there kicking the premises to pieces two years from now. I have talked to her about this exhaustion bit and she doesn't seem ever to have heard the word."

They both looked at me and I said, "Boys, I'm not the doctor. But I have long since discovered that if a dedicated actress wants to do something, nothing but noth-

Mr. Solotaire told her how tremendous had been her impact, Mr. DiMaggio told her it had been the greatest experience of his life and Your Reporter told her she was only great, real great, nothing more. Most actresses would have preened and simpered over this kind of shower bath, but not Miss V. She thanked us quietmodestly, without pinking or bridling, and went her way.

After she had gone back to the theater to gird herself for another three hours of combustion and turmoil, we dawdled over coffee and finally I said: "We'd best get underway. Curtain will be up at 'The Rivalry' in 15 minutes. We can walk the three blocks without haste that way." "Walk! Three blocks!" they
